CHAPTER XIII
"OH, HEAVEN! IT IS TRUE!"

This beautiful place, this Knighton, with its wide acres and farms and woods, it was hers no longer. How was it? As the question rose to her mind, a crimson glow poured over her face.

Mr. Barrington had said that if the will could not be found, all—everything, house, and lands, and money—would go to Heron Coverdale. Heron Coverdale—the man whose life she had saved, the man whom she had met and spoken with, and whose face and voice still haunted her!

It was his now, and he would be master here. He would know that the girl he had spoken with was herself—know the story of her shame!

Strange as it may seem, this was the hardest thought of all! That he, who had treated her with such respect and reverence, should know that she was without a name, and under a cloud of shame, was unendurable!

What would he say—think? He was lord of Knighton now, and he would perhaps want to offer her money. This thought stung her like the out of a whip, and she sprang to her feet and fell to pacing the room, wringing her hands.

The door opened, and Felice entered. She stood looking at the beautiful girl in her agony for a moment in silence; then she stretched out her hands humbly and pleadingly.

"Forgive me, Miss Iris!" she murmured. Iris turned and confronted her with a wild gaze.

"Is it you? Forgive you! For what? What wrong have you done me? You were forced to speak the truth! It was time. I have been a living lie too long—too long! But—and her hands worked together—"why did you not tell me before—why was I kept in ignorance? Oh, Heaven, if I could only die!"

Felice's lips quivered. "You would never have known but for that man!" she said, in a quick panting way. "I had sworn not to tell you. If my master had left a will, as he said he would, all would have been well! Where is the will?"

Iris looked at her in a dazed, troubled way. "Will! Will! What does that matter? Would it have given me back my name, my honor, my place in the world? Not my father!" she winced and trembled.

"Felice!" she said, "Felice has said so! She would rather have died than admit it, but I forced her. Oh, it is true—true—true!"

Mr. Barrington frowned. "I say nothing is true until it is proved," he said, solemnly. "And I want you to wait, and—keep up your heart, until I have made inquiries into this strange story. This man, Ricardo, has been arrested on a criminal charge. What reliance can be placed on his account of the affair? None! As your legal adviser, I say that I have every right to treat his story with contempt!"

Iris raised her pale face and looked at him. "Why have you not found the marriage certificate?" she said, in a hollow voice. "Why did my father never mention my mother to me? Her name never passed his lips! Why did he turn pale and tremble when this man, Ricardo, came here, and why did he want me not to listen to him? And Felice! She is my mother's sister! And she says that—that what this man told you was true!"

at the word—"he was right! Why should I, who have no name, take this house and the place where an honorable race has lived for centuries? No, he was right—right, right! I am a nameless outcast."

Iris fell to pacing to and fro again for a few minutes, then stopped. "Where is this man Ricardo? Bring him to me! I want to know everything—everything!"

Felice's eyes shot fire, and her teeth clicked. "Ricardo!" she said, with a kind of hiss in her voice. "He will not trouble you for some years to come, signorina! He is in the hands of the police! It was I who gave them the information. I warned him! He will not trouble you, Miss Iris. Oh, be calm, and—"

and don't break my heart!" and she threw herself on her knees at Iris' feet. Iris looked down at her with a dull frown. "My heart is broken already!" she said, in a cold voice. "Broken, broken!" she said, in a cold voice. "Broken, broken!" and she trembled from head to foot.

"But not to me! It is my duty to discredit everything to your disadvantage, Miss Knighton; and I shall set about taking steps to prove that this man's story is false."

If he had stayed for an hour, there was no more to be said, and he went quietly out. As he did so Clarence Montacute passed in. He came in so quietly that Iris did not hear him, and, thinking herself alone, had thrown herself upon the couch, her head buried in the cushion, and, when he approached her, and gently spoke her name, she started and exclaimed:

"You, Lord Montacute?" "Yes, it is I!" said Clarence. "Forgive me, Miss Iris, but I felt that I must come!"

She sat with her white face averted from him, her hands clasped in her lap. "Why have you come?" she asked, in a hard, constrained voice. "I should have thought that all honorable men—and women, too—would have shunned me now."

Poor Clarence's face crimsoned, and his knees trembled. "Oh, how little you know me!" he said, eagerly, andly. "I shun you! Miss Iris, if you knew! But I didn't come to speak of myself! I came to ask you to come home with me to my mother."

He stopped, for Iris had turned her eyes upon him with a look of despair and bitterness. "To your mother?" she repeated. "Do you think Lady Montacute would permit me, knowing who and what I am, to cross her threshold?"

His face grew pale. "I think, and I know my mother too well not to feel sure that she would feel honored by your becoming her guest!" he said; then he went on in a tone of deep feeling, from which not even his slurred "rs" and thick "ws" could detract. "Oh, Miss Iris, you know that I don't believe in this stupid story! You know that I shouldn't believe it even if it came with proof, hard to disprove; and this only comes from a vile scoundrel. But if it were proved to be true, do you think it would make any difference to me in my feelings toward you? No! Miss Iris, this is not the time to speak of myself and all I have felt toward you, but I think I have loved you, that I love you most dearly and truly—"

Iris made a gesture as if to silence him, but he went on: (To be continued)

A SURE RELIEF FOR WOMEN'S DISORDERS
10 DAYS' TREATMENT FREE
Orange Lily is a certain relief for all disorders of women. It is applied locally and is absorbed into the suffering tissue. The dead waste matter in the congested region is expelled, giving immediate mental and physical relief; the blood vessels and nerves are toned and strengthened, and the circulation is rendered normal. As this treatment is based on strictly scientific principles and acts on the actual location of the disease, it cannot help but do good in all forms of female troubles, including delayed and painful menstruation, leucorrhoea, falling of the womb, etc. Price $2.00 per box, which is sufficient for one month's treatment. A free trial treatment, enough for 10 days, worth 75c, will be sent free to any suffering woman who will send me her address. Enclose three stamps and address: Mrs. Lydia W. Ladd, Windsor, Ont.

Fishermen! Here's the Boot for You-"Excel"!

"EXCEL"
Made 'All in One Piece'

"EXCEL"

The Fishermen's Friend

All fishermen know from experience what happens to ordinary boots when used in fishing. You've seen how salt water seems to take the life out of rubber and how the uppers crack and the soles wear through in a surprisingly short time.

The "EXCEL" is a different and better kind of boot. It has been made especially to stand up under the unusually hard use a fisherman's boot gets.

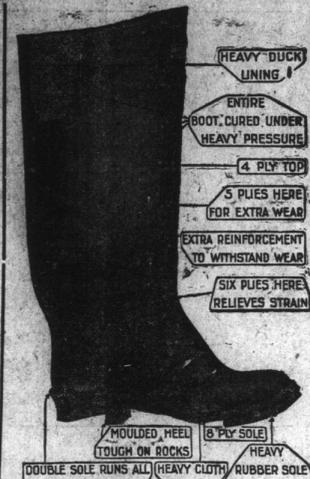

The rubber and fabric in "EXCEL" boots are of the very highest quality. But it is the special method of curing, under tremendous pressure, that makes the "EXCEL" so wear-resisting. The pressure forces the layers of rubber and fabric together so that they are actually "one-piece", without losing the least bit of the life or resiliency of the rubber. Salt water has practically no effect on "EXCEL" boots. The UPPERS remain pliable and weatherproof, and resist the drying-out action of sun, heat and extreme cold far longer than other boots. Consequently they don't crack anywhere near so quickly. The SOLES are almost wear-proof, because they are made like an Auto Tire, with 8 plies of rubber and fabric welded by tremendous pressure into a "tire-tread" sole that rivals an automobile tire for toughness and durability.

strain. There is not a single feature but what has been proved necessary and desirable by tests of severest use. Your own experience will tell you that a boot with these features simply must be a better boot.

Study this picture. Learn these features. Remember them when you compare "EXCEL" boots with ordinary boots. And remember, too, that very important point which the picture cannot show, namely, that "EXCEL" boots are cured under tremendous pressure, which leaves the rubber pliable, weatherproof and wear-resisting. It is only by the use of this tremendous pressure combined with highest quality materials that the best results are obtained.

Pliable Uppers. Weatherproof and Wear Resisting. Tough Tire Tread Soles. Made "All in One Piece."

"EXCEL" Boots are sold by all reliable dealers from Coast to Coast.

Better Than Work.

A young mill hand, having some slight mental trouble, was sent to an asylum. After he had been there for a few weeks a fellow-worker visited him. "Hallo, Henry!" he asked. "How are you gettin' on?" "I'm gettin' on fine," said the patient. "Glad to hear it. I suppose you'll be 'min' back to the mill soon?" "What?" exclaimed Henry, with a look of great surprise. "Do you think I leave a big fine ho use like this and grand garden to come back to work in a mill? You must think I am wrong in my head!"

Lighting a Blast Furnace

To the economical housekeeping mind accustomed to lighting the kitchen fire with half a bundle of sticks, it comes as a revelation that the cost of lighting a big blast furnace is in the neighbourhood of three thousand pounds and sometimes more. To grasp it one has to realize that the blast furnace is from eighty to ninety feet high, with a diameter of about twenty feet. It is built of steel plates, and lined inside with a skin of special fire bricks several feet thick, and this skin plays a large part in the process. The furnace is filled with coke to the top, and kept filled. But even then, when the greater part of the furnace is a roaring mass of fire, it is by no means ready to melt iron ore and limestone into pig-iron and slag. It takes many days before the brick lining of the furnace has stored up sufficient heat for the smelters' purpose.

It roars away day and night at the rate of 200 tons of coke per day, and gradually the rock-like substance which iron ore consists of is tipped in from the top, with alternate layers of limestone. Slowly the temperature inside this enormous "stove" rises, but it goes on eating up coke at this rate for perhaps three weeks, or even more, before there is any commercial return.

The first tappings of molten iron are useless, because the heat is not great enough, and are merely broken up for scrap. And all this has to be reckoned in the cost of lighting the fire, together with the wages of the men engaged in tending the furnace, bringing up ore, limestone, and fuel, tapping and removing the waste iron and slag, and so on.

Burning "Pigs." Day and night the furnace is kept roaring away with its blast at full pressure. The blast is provided by great gas engines, fed by gas produced by the furnace itself in the process of smelting. As the contents sink, more ore is tipped in from the top, with layers of limestone. The limestone acts as a flux for the slag. From thirty to eighty per cent. of the ore consists of earthy matter, and this will not melt sufficiently without the addition of limestone, which thus it so that it runs like oil, when it is known as slag.

At intervals of every few hours the molten iron is run off from a tap-hole at the bottom into moulds formed in the sand-bed outside the furnace, where it sets into "pigs." The slag, or earthy matter, always floats on top of the iron, and is run off at a higher level.

Most other industrial works stop at some time or other, but the blast furnaces go on day and night, month after month, year after year. Once heated they remain hot, and they are kept always full.

They run for years without going out, and with only minor repairs. But once out they are expensive to start, which is why the iron-masters are not anxious to light their fires again until they see a reasonable prospect of being able to run them without a loss. This is governed by the price of furnace coke, which in its turn is governed by the price of coal.

The Dream of the Blind.

A man blind from birth, speaking of the mental pictures which unfortunately like himself have of external things, said:

"We get some idea of shape, more than we do of size. Of colour, we have an idea of black and white, and of red, but I think few, if any, of us can comprehend any other hue. We picture the sun as an immense mass, with red rays shooting about it, and daylight as a million white shafts floating above the earth.

"When a blind man dreams, his dreams are not like those of other people, but consist almost entirely of sensations of sound. He cannot dream of scenes and places, for he has never seen them. For instance, when he dreams of hearing of our friends we dream of hearing their voices.

"The separation of sound and motion take the place in the dreams of the blind of the objects which appear in the visions of the sight to those who can see. I speak of those who have been blind always, for, of course, with those who once could see, their dreams may be filled with visions of people and places which their waking eyes cannot now behold, but may appear vividly to them in sleep. But one who has been blind always cannot dream of seeing."

Bible City Found.

What is regarded by many scholars as the most valuable discovery which has yet been made by the archaeologist in Palestine is the location of the site of the city of Capernaum. Among its ruins have been found the remains of a synagogue believed to be the very one wherein our Saviour preached.

For over nineteen hundred years the very site of such an important Bible city as Capernaum has been in dispute. It was thought that it stood at the northern end of the Sea of Galilee at a place called Tell Hum, where there are extensive ruins.

A systematic examination of these, and the discovery of ancient documents, now make it clear that this, indeed, was ancient Capernaum.

The ruins of a Jewish synagogue have been brought to light. Explorers say this temple stood there in the days of Christ, and is the very building referred to in the Gospel. The position of the stones would indicate that it was destroyed by an earthquake. It is the belief of the excavators that the whole edifice can be reconstructed.

Vestry Meet Rector.

On Thursday evening last the first meeting of the Select Vestry of St. Thomas's Church under the new Rectorship was held in Canon Wood Hall. Rev. Mr. Earp, as chairman, expressed his pleasure at meeting the governing body of the Church, and said how greatly touched he and his wife were at the warmth of their reception in the Parish, the pleasant memory of which would remain with them all their lives. He looked forward to many years of happy work in their midst. On behalf of the Vestry, Hon. R. Watson, People's Warden, replied expressing the pleasure it was to once again have a Rector in the chair. He said that the Rector and Mrs. Earp had already won their esteem, and he pledged the hearty co-operation of the Vestry in all work for the good of the Parish. During the session, which lasted two hours, considerable business was transacted and it was decided to have the portrait of Rev. Dr. Jones added to the Portrait Gallery in Canon Wood Hall, and also to hang a photograph of Mrs. Arthur C. F. Wood, wife of the late Canon Wood, and the founder of the Women's Association, in the room of the Association.

Wedding Bells.

LAKE-O'LEARY.

At St. Patrick's Church, on Thursday morning, Mr. Jack O'Leary, formerly of St. John's, but for the past seven years a resident of South Boston, led to the altar Miss Mary Lake, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lake, head of Pleasant Street, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Dr. Kitchin. The bride was given away by her father, while Mr. William Dunn, brother-in-law of the groom acted as best man; Miss Gertrude Lake was bridesmaid, with Mr. Wm. Dunn Jr., as bridesboy. The bride wore a dress of white duchesse satin and georgette trimmed with pearls, and was further adorned with a wreath of orange-blossoms and a pearl necklace. The bridesmaid wore cream georgette and hat to match. After the marriage ceremony, the bridal pair motored to the home of the bride's parents, where the wedding breakfast was in order. The bride received many useful and costly presents from her numerous friends. At 1 o'clock Mr. and Mrs. O'Leary left by train en route to their future home in South Boston. Felicitations.

Last Night's Storm.

WINTER BEGINNING EARLY.
A considerable amount of damage was done by the storm which raged all last night and through the early morning. It was the worst snow storm experienced so early in the season, for many years. A heavy wind turned what otherwise would have been a light snowfall, into a blinding blizzard, and when several street lights were extinguished, darkness did not lend enchantment to the view. During the height of the storm several telegraph poles were broken, and several people narrowly escaped contact with live wires upon which the police kept a careful watch and saw they were reported promptly. On Pennywell road several fences were blown down by the force of the storm and shipping in the harbor was in danger for a time.

Successful Newfoundland.

At the Autumn Convocation of Queen's University, Kingston, Ont., held in that city on October 19th, amongst the list of graduates was an old Bonavista boy, Wilson Powell, who received the degree of Bachelor of Arts. Mr. Powell taught school at Bay Roberts and later at Twillingate. He served with the Canadian forces overseas and after the armistice returned to Queen's and is now in his junior year in medicine, having recently completed the work entitling him to this degree in arts. Mr. Powell is a son of the late Frederick and Sophie Powell of Bonavista and a younger cousin of Rev. Dr. Powell the author of "Steps to Success."

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28. A definite decision to hold the first session of the Conference on limitation of armaments on the morning of Saturday, Nov. 12, instead of Armistice Day, Nov. 11, was announced today at the State Department.

NEW YORK CAPTULATES.
NEW YORK, Oct. 28. New York surrendered to Marshal Poch to-day without striking a blow. Not since the Armistice has there been a demonstration on Broadway to compare in spontaneity of numbers with the reception accorded this afternoon to the conqueror of the German armies. From the Battery, where he was greeted by Governor Miller of New York State, to the City Hall, where he was welcomed by Mayor Hylan, the great little man, in horizon blue, moved in triumphal procession of many thousands. By his side rode General Pershing.

A WINNIPEG LAWYER'S OPINION.
WINNIPEG, Oct. 28. The contention that Newfoundland can have any claim upon Labrador was disputed to-night by Bram Thompson, Barrister of Regina and Editor of the Canadian Law Times. Mr. Thompson stated that Newfoundland had never been given any rights of ownership to any part of Labrador, but was "a matter of administrative expediency given administrative control of the country." "He further stated that the whole Labrador rightly belongs to Quebec. The question will shortly come up before the Privy Council. Sir P. T. McGrath, Newfoundland statesman, is at present in the city looking into the archives of Hudson's

Dance Carnival to Be Repeated.

By numerous requests the C.C.C. Band have decided to run a second Dance Carnival in the Prince's Rink on Wednesday, November 9th. This one will out-class their first effort in every way, because quite a number refrained from going to the first because they were of the opinion that it would not be a success; others remained away on account of the bad weather, but the 1,700 people present on such a stormy night were well satisfied with the Band's first effort. The Rink was beautifully decorated, the floor was in splendid condition, the selections, both Dance and Concert numbers were good, and the masquerade present thoroughly enjoyed the night. It is predicted that there will be at least 500 masqueraders at the next one, and on this occasion four prizes will be given, one each for the lady and gentleman with the most original costume, and one each for the lady and gentleman with the prettiest costume. The decorations will be more elaborate; special music has been ordered from New York for the occasion, and everything points to a most enjoyable evening both for masqueraders and spectators. The prizes will be the $100.00, numbered Reserved Seats 20c.; numbered Reserved Seats 30c. You now have 12 days to get your costume, therefore do not have any regrets this time. The proceeds of both Carnivals go towards reducing the debt on the C.C.C. Hall and the Band hopes to be entirely out of debt by the end of the year, possible, and they feel that the general public are behind them in their effort.

Will be Replaced.

The disputed football game between the Methodist College and Bishop Field College teams will be replayed. That is the decision of the Intercollegiate League. The dispute arose over a goal scored from a corner kick a fraction of a second after the whistle had blown for full time. As a result of this game should have a considerable bearing on the championship and it will be therefore awaited with great interest by all concerned.

Schooners in Collision.

Yesterday evening the schooner Norman L., after entering the Narrows, got beached near Hay Cove. Shortly after the schooner Gordon S., under full sail, rounded the Heads and, before she could be brought up, fouled the Norman L., splitting the latter's mainmast from gaff to boom. Both vessels had to be towed to anchorage by the tug.

Of German Origin.

It is learned that the German fish appearing on the Oporto stock list was caught by German fishermen on the North Coast of Germany. It is also learned that the catch was not very large, and that competition from this quarter will not be very great, at least for this season.

Where the Lime Juice Comes From.

Nearly all the lime juice used in the world comes from the tiny island of Montserrat, in the British West Indies. The lime grows wild in many West Indian islands, but only in Montserrat it is used commercially. That island is one vast garden of lime trees, and nowhere in the world is there a finer sight than the fruit of the lime or fragrant with its blossom. The fruit is gathered by negro women, who carry it down the hills to the shipping port in big baskets on their heads. Like all West Indians, they are remarkable for their ability to carry heavy weights in this manner. On one occasion the company which controls the lime juice industry sought to lighten the burden of its labourers by introducing wheelbarrows. The negroes filled the wheelbarrows readily enough, and then carried them on their heads as they had been used to carry the baskets. Many a negro woman will carry a hundredweight of limes on her head for a distance of a mile or more.

Foreign Shipping Competition.

Newfoundland owners of vessels under register in other British ports than the home port, have already begun to feel the disastrous effects of foreign competition in shipping. They now find that local sail of large cargo capacity is not in demand, exporters favoring small foreign vessels and big tonnage steamers for taking fish to Europe, the latter also flying flags distinctly not British. The danger in chartering ships not of British register and employing them in the trade of the country is twofold. Such engagements necessarily put out of commission local shipping, and prevent thereby the employment of the crews that man it. Therefore there is a valuable fleet of vessels lying at anchor in the harbor, accumulating a choice collection of barnacles on their underbodies, and hundreds of men who formerly went to make up their crews are forced to seek other avenues of labor either in or out of the country. Thus both vessels and men (in the latter case) fail as revenue producers for either owners and employers or country, for when shipping rots at its moorings and mariners are thrown out of the employment of their normal calling, stagnation is inevitable, and the results are fatal: for a maritime country must depend on its own shipping and its own seamen. Where would Newfoundland have been during the war but for the courage and self-sacrifice of its merchant sailors. Had we to depend on foreign shipping from the years 1914-1918 to take our produce to market, it would have been a vain hope for the success which during that difficult period attended trading ventures.

Yet with the inclusion of peace the foreign vessel again came in evidence and its advent was heartily hailed by certain exporters because of the cheaper charter rates that these craft run under. But their employment meant scant encouragement to the enterprise of the men who during the years of conflict, increased the marine register of Newfoundland; it meant a throw down to the heroic men who crewed our ships and dared the perils of submarine warfare against unarmed merchantmen, that our fish should get to market. And with all this we prate of patriotism and loyalty. Because a Norwegian or a Swede or a Dane will charter his vessel at a lower rate per quintal than local tonnage can accept, a rush is made for foreign bottoms, and the Newfoundland marine is left in the lurch. Is this patriotism? Is it loyalty? Above all is it fair play or a square deal? We say nothing here concerning the danger of congesting foreign markets, and thus lowering the price of fish, by the shipping of huge cargoes by foreign—or any—steamers. That fact should be obvious. What we do wish to say, and in no uncertain way, is that it is distinctly unfair to local owners and local seamen, and is a clear discrimination against ships flying the Red Ensign, to engage foreigners because they come cheaper. What doth it profit to save one dollar per quintal on freight, and lose three or four or more dollars per quintal on the market. If Spanish, or Portuguese or Italian vessels were chartered, it would not perhaps, be so bad, because these are the countries that take our fish, but to charter our competitors,—the Scandinavians—shipping, is a mighty poor policy. If ever there was an opportunity for the Government to retrieve some of its errors of the past, here is one, and we put it straightly to the Prime Minister, whom we believe is ever desirous of advancing the interests of Newfoundland, whether at home or abroad, to introduce legislation at the re-opening of the House in December, having for its object the imposition of heavy dues—whether export, harbor or light—on all foreign vessels under charter to take Newfoundland fish to market to the detriment and eventual disappearance of our own local fleet.

New Railway Management.

R. C. MORGAN'S EXACT POSITION.
It is now understood that Mr. R. C. Morgan, who has been in the city for several weeks in constant conference with the Government, has accepted the position of general manager of Reid Railway operations in the capacity of Chairman of the Reid Railway Management Committee. The committee will consist of Mr. Morgan and Messrs. R. G. Reid and John Forbes, C.E. Mr. Morgan was formerly in the employ of the C. P. R. at Winnipeg. He came out here some time ago and occupied the position of General Manager of the Railway for a few days, from which position he made a sensational resignation. He returned to Newfoundland a few weeks ago with the Prime Minister and for a time was acting in an advisory capacity to the Government on railway matters.

The Premier's Tour.

The Prime Minister, Sir Richard A. Squires, left town yesterday by motor car for a tour of Bay de Verde and part of Trinity Bay where he will study existing conditions for the purpose of determining the amount and kind of relief work which may be necessary in these districts. Sir Richard was accompanied by Mr. W. H. Cave, Minister of Shipping and Hon. W. W. Haultyard, Minister of Posts and Telegraphs. We understand that Sir Richard will be in town on Monday night so there does not seem to be any truth in the rumour that he is proceeding to Port Union to interview our local Brutes—Hon. W. F. Coaker.

Wires Down.

The telegraph wires are down all through the country as a result of yesterday's storm and no reports from the various coastal boats could be received. There is no cause for anxiety in this direction, however, as they have probably all made nearby ports where they could shelter until the storm abated. It is hoped that by this evening all the lines will be working.

Price 45 cents a bottle.
The Empire Soother is a jolly-filled one, and is a very nice soother as well as a cheap one. Price 15 cents.

Meigs Reported From Holton.

Captain Burgess of S.S. Meigs reported to the Reid Newfoundland Co. yesterday as having arrived at Holton at 1.15 p.m. There has been considerable anxiety about the ship, as the last heard of her was that she had anchored in Makovik Bay on Tuesday the 18th inst. Yesterday's report says there have been continuous sales from S.R. and N.W. Hazy snow falling past several days. All news off the coast north of here except Herby's.

Destruction by Storm.

OUTER SETTLEMENTS SWEEP.

The storm of last night whilst blowing down some fences, trees and telephone and light poles, did not do a great deal of costly damage in the city. The higher levels caught the force of the wind, and the fence around St. George's Field and around the Christian Brothers place was partly destroyed. A brick chimney on Mr. Brock Bradshaw's house, Military Road, was blown down and considerable damage was done to the roof and also the house of Mrs. Osborne adjoining. Along the waterfront a heavy undertow broke up some of the piers and entered the stores, but there was not a great deal of damage from the water, except at an eastern premises, where some flour and hay were stored. The inner portion of Neal's wharf was lifted up by the force of the sea, and the water entered one of the stores, but fortunately the proprietor had everything removed in anticipation, a rule which he carries out every fall. The tug Heve was moored at the wharf, but during the night broke adrift, and but for the crew of a schooner would have done considerable damage. At Job's the sea entered a motor garage, but did not do much damage beyond smashing up a motor boat moored in the cove. At the Lower Battery considerable destruction was done to fishing stages and boats, several of the latter being sunk. At Quidi Vidi the storm did extensive damage. One man named Bray lost a large quantity of fish, which was carried away along with his flake. Several stages were also destroyed. At Flatrock the damage was not so heavy, most of the boats being pulled up, and beyond the force of the sea. In Middle Cove some 5 or 6 stages are gone, and some of the fishermen lost a considerable amount of twine and fish. At Torbay the storm was the worst in the remembrance of the oldest inhabitants. The Government Bridge was carried away and wreckage is strewn everywhere. Jas. Martin lost his stage, boat and 10 quintals fish. Wm. Codner, Jas. Goss, Thos. Barron, Patrick Crowe, Wm. Crowe, Wm. Gosse and others lost their flakes with a large quantity of fish, and some boats were also lost. At Fouch Cove it is reported that the shore was swept and the damage done could not be repaired for from five to seven thousand dollars. Baulline was also swept and everything within reach of the sea is gone. At Broad Cove the new public wharf was badly damaged and a breakwater was also partly destroyed. The sea here was very rough and many boats were badly smashed. In several cases the safety poles were well up to the safety poles were found this morning some 70 yards beyond. At Petty Harbor there was considerable damage to private property and the large public wharf was partly destroyed, and to replace it would cost in the neighborhood of $10,000. A large quantity of fish was also lost from the various stages. The extent of the damage done at other points has not yet been ascertained, owing to lack of communication, but it is assumed that last night's hurricane will be responsible for more damage than any other in recent years.

WILL VISIT OUTER COVE.

His Grace the Archbishop will visit Outer Cove to-morrow (Sunday) to administer the Sacrament of Confirmation, and to dedicate the new church there. All concerned are hoping for a fine day, and are expecting a large gathering from the city and nearby settlements. The people of this new parish (comprising Logy Bay, Outer Cove and Middle Cove) are a progressive people, and have erected a splendid church by their own efforts and ingenuity—a church that will compare favourably with any in Newfoundland. Should the cold weather of the past few days be in evidence to-morrow, all who visit Outer Cove will find the church warm and comfortable as it is heated by an up-to-date steam heating system. Notwithstanding the inclement weather recently elaborate preparations have been made to welcome the Archbishop with a genuine "dead mille failthe" a whole-souled and spontaneous hundred thousand welcomes.

Through an error, in this Company's advertisement in our issue of October 24th, the wrong table of premiums was inserted. In to-day's issue their advertisement, "The Ordinary Life Plan," appears with the correct table, and is well worth your attention.

Curates Re-Appointed.

At the Vestry meeting of St. Thomas's Parish last night, the Rector announced that he had re-appointed Revs. A. Clayton and C. A. Moulton as his Curates, and appointments were duly confirmed by the Vestry.

STEAMERS REPORTED.—The Minister of Shipping has been advised that the S.S. Lobelia arrived at Carbonear at 5 p.m. yesterday and also that the S.S. Prospero was at Trinity. The S.S. Prospero also reports being delayed at Groslet owing to the storm.

Serious Washouts.

ALL TRAINS HELD UP.

Washouts occurred on various parts of the railway line last night and all local trains have been held up as a consequence. The incoming express with mails and forty-five passengers for St. John's was held at Brigus Junction, but proceeded as far as Avondale this morning, where it will have to remain until repairs can be effected to the line. The mails will probably be brought on here by motor car and those passengers who can obtain cars will also come by road. The shortest time in which repairs can be effected is two days but it is not certain if they can be completed in that time. Naturally, until the line is completely repaired no trains can leave or come into St. John's.

The washout is one of the most serious that has ever occurred on the railway and extends from Foxtrap to Holyrood on the main line. The rails along the beaches at Foxtrap, Kelligrews, Lance Cove and Indian Pond are gone, in some cases, to the distance of 10 telegraph poles. The line west of Holyrood to Joy's Point is also washed out. At Kelligrews the sea not only broke over the breakwater, on to the rails, but went over into the pond on the other side. Between Clarke's Beach and Spaniard's Bay about 500 feet of line have been washed out, and on the South Side of Carbonear considerable damage was done. Men are working on the various sections now clearing away the wreckage and putting in a new road bed. By this afternoon about 200 men will be at work and they will continue in shifts until repairs are completed. Gangs will be working throughout the night. Work will be rushed on the main line and the branch lines will be attended to afterwards. Wires are down all along the line and first messages were received through the Postal Telegraphs. All stations report that the seas were tremendous and were the worst seen in many years. The train which left Carbonear this morning could not get any further than Spaniard's Bay and had to return.

A Policy That Pays.

"That is one of the few changes of which I can say I approve of," said the elderly white-haired lady.
A discussion had arisen on the relative merits of present-day shopping as compared to shopping thirty years ago.
"Well, it is a big point gained," said a girlish voice, "if a conservative person like Grandma admits that we have changed from her younger days is for the better."
"There is a big difference between change and progress," retorted the old lady, "and I consider that the present arrangements in these big Water Street stores are an evidence of progress—which is, to my mind, only another word for improvement. I suppose," she added, with a smile, "that I have to thank my grand-daughter for bringing me out of what she is pleased to call my 'conservative shell!'"
"And how did it happen?" asked another member of the party.
"I'll tell you," said the younger lady. "Living in an outport, miles away from any really big store, we had, of course, to do much of our shopping by mail. Grandma had a long string of small stores to which she had sent for things all her life; she would write her for Boots and Shoes, for Hats, some somewhere else for Coats, Dresses, etc. Things used to come irregularly—some one day, some another, and you never really got what you wanted, because I don't believe the smaller stores had a large enough selection to choose from. At our Annual Garden Party this last summer I had to wear an old dress. The new dress that I had ordered especially for the occasion did not arrive until a week after it was all over. That decided me, and though I had some trouble to persuade Grandma, she did, at last, consent to try 'St. John's Big Economy Centre'—yes, the Royal Stores, and really, now, it is almost like living in the city. We get everything we want from there; what is more, we get what we ask for, and we get it promptly."
"But suppose," put in another lady, "you get something that is not quite what you expected it to be?"
"In that case we send it back and the Royal Stores either change it or send back the money. And we don't have to write a dozen letters about it either, do we, Grandmas?"
"Well, no, my dear; I must say the Royal Stores have simplified the drawbacks of life in the outports considerably. It is certainly more convenient buying all your things in the one place, and, as my grand-daughter remarked, the choice of articles is so great that you are almost certain of getting what you want. I like comfort in my old age, my dear, and I dislike disputes and dissatisfaction; so now I always send to the Royal Stores for everything."

INTERNATIONAL FISHERMEN'S RACES.

Second and Final Race, Monday, October 29th.

BLUENOSE of Lunenburg, Challenger; actual elapsed time: 5:19.49. ELISIE of Gloucester, Mass., Defender; actual elapsed time: 5:30.50. (Course No. 1, 39.55 Sea Miles).

BLUENOSE, having won two races, takes $1,000, trophy emblematic of this year's Championship of North Atlantic Fishing Fleets, and Skipper's Cup; Elsie takes second money, $1,000.

Canada handily captured the blue ribbon of the seas of Halifax Harbor yesterday, when the fishing schooner Bluenose, of Lunenburg, Captain Angus Walters, skipper for the second time defeated the fishing schooner Elsie, "The Pride of Gloucester," Capt. Marty Welch, by 9 minutes and 31 seconds in a race for the International championship, over a forty mile course in a 12 to 19 knot west-north-west wind and a smooth sea. It was a clear-cut, decisive victory, proving that "The Big Ark," as some jesting fishermen labeled the Bluenose when she was under construction last winter, is just as much a success on the wind in light weather as she was on Saturday when the stormy winds did blow.

Windward Work Told Tale. For, once again it was windward work that told the tale. Elsie, craftily headed by Capt. Welch, credited with being the clearest racing skipper sailing out of Gloucester, had much the better of the start and in the reaches of the first three legs of the course, a total of slightly more than twenty-seven miles, the Yankee schooner maintained the lead, though the Bluenose was close on her heels almost all the time. Some there were who predicted victory for the American, as the schooners raced for the "Outer Blower," the fourth mark of the course, preparatory to coming on the wind for the thirteen miles homeward. On board the U.S.S. Bushnell, crowded with race enthusiasts from Boston and Gloucester, hearts beat high when they saw Marty Welch, his schooner scudding with all sails set before the stiffening breeze, the Stars and Stripes fluttering bravely from the mainmast, pass the Bluenose seventeen seconds before the Canadian vessel and sheet in for the thrash to windward. Elsie, they said, would show more speed by the wind in this medium wind and mild sea, and in the long and short tacks up the harbor to the finish line, would surely win.

"There'll be a race to-morrow for the rubber," was the hopeful slogan. But they reckoned without the Bluenose and her skipper, Angus Walters, who had made a poor start and done nothing remarkable on the reaches out, but he retrieved all past errors at the Blower. Just before the Elsie passed this mark, a squall or two hit Bluenose, a few lengths astern, and the Canadian fairly jumped, so that her position in these swift scoots was almost on the Elsie's counter, sheaving the buoy until, as he says himself, he "almost took the whiskers off it." Angus drove his ship between Elsie and the mark.

the two vessels became apparent. Bluenose, longer, beamier and deeper, well able to cry all the sail that Angus could crowd on to her, ate into the wind like a schooner yacht, pointing higher than the defender. The schooners made a long tack inshore, to the eastward of the harbor entrance, Bluenose steadily making to weather, Marty, slightly advanced on the tack, but apparently half a mile to leeward, was the first to come about, shaping his course for the Inner Blower, the fourth mark. Angus, not wanting to overshoot the mark, did not bother about keeping Marty under his lee. With his rival a half mile behind, it was not necessary. He came about, too, held for the buoy, and made it nicely.

Bluenose in the Lead. There were still six miles to go for the finish line. Walters kept on for the western shore, holding in right under Chubucto Head he appeared to have run Bluenose out of the best wind of the day. The squalls had been topping 19 knots but, now the challenger was standing almost straight, while Elsie, though still well in the rear, was laying over to the puffs of the Inner Blower. "Looks bad for the Canadian," an old salt said. "He'll lose by that. There was no need to hold on that far, anyway."

But Angus was wise. He had gained his waning and coming about headed for the line, five and a half miles up the harbor. Marty did not hold on nearly so long, coming about soon after passing the mark. He, too, headed for the line. But the schooners, getting away from the western shore all the time, were headed by the wind, and Angus could make no better than the Lighthouse Cove, going in green water to make the most of the tack, while Marty had all he could do to clear Thrum Cap Shoal. Another hitch each and the schooners were at making for the line, Bluenose a mile in the lead. With everything drying the Canadian romping for the gun and when the flash came at 2:31.41, a terrific tooting of steamers' whistles' drowning the shouts of thousands lining the shore, greeted the winner of the 1921 International championship, Elsie getting the second gun at 2:31.12, was accorded a like welcome. She had sailed a plucky race but was outclassed. The schooners with less wind than on Saturday, had made slower time on the course. They carried full sail all the time very comfortably.

"The Bluenose won again to-day," said skipper Walters, captured on his schooner at Pickford and Black's wharf, just after the race, "because she was the faster boat. They'll have to build a faster schooner if they want to take the cup back to Gloucester, provided, of course, that Bluenose is still afloat. Elsie was a little ahead on the first legs of the wind. The trouble was we did not have much wind and not enough real windward work and that was what helped the Gloucester schooner. When we started I hoped to beat Elsie by at least half an hour, but nine and a half minutes was the best we could do. Marty Welch is a fine man, a clean sport, and he sailed a good race. He's the smartest man to get a vessel over the starting line that I have ever been up against and I hope he'll continue to be the smartest, because I don't want to have to stack up against anybody any other than he is. But crossing the starting line does not finish the race. If it did, Bluenose would not have won to-day."

Mayflower, the Boston flyer, barred from the right to contend for the International championship by the trustees of the North Atlantic Fishermen's Trophy, had made a spectacular appearance on the race course soon after the start, and under four lowers, her top sticks having been hauled in Boston, essayed to have a Joust with the racers. The low-lying, square-stemmed, rakish hulled schooner, looking mightily like a camouflaged yacht, at first appeared to be gaining on the legitimate contenders. Mayflower was off this coast on a haddocking trip and Capt. Larkin had just dropped in this fine morning to see what the Elsie and Bluenose were about. He soon saw. The three schooners were reaching for the second mark, Mayflower gaining slightly. The vessels were about four miles off shore and there was a gradually increasing top as they passed to leeward of Sambre Ledges. Mayflower, once in the rough sea, began to pitch heavily, shipping green water on board. With every plunge, she fell back from the fishing schooners. When the Boston boat finally abandoned the reach to avoid further comparison, Bluenose, which had been only a few lengths ahead of her was

Week-End Notes on Holiday Rambles.

(I.C.M.)

WE MEET SOME WORDY PEOPLE.

It is a common saying that it takes all sorts of people to make a world, hence the great variety of characters that one meets in daily life, and especially so in travelling. Not many people seem to study character, nor take note of the tendencies of their fellows. In this phase of life some are very difficult, and are as blind as bats; but those who 'look behind the scenes' gain such an insight into character as at once enables them to take their bearings, and judge their surroundings. To the writer men have always been a deep study, and in rambling round in strange places the variety of types, which he has met have afforded entertainment, as well as study. But among the many characteristics, none seem less desirable to meet than the wordy person—the person who knows it all, and who wants to assure you that he knows it. The person who, irrespective of time, patience, or necessity, holds you up. The persons who seem to have nothing to do, and never have learned about other people. The hasty man soon cools-down, the busy man sometimes finds leisure, and the fussy man sometimes takes a rest; but the wordy man is like Tennyson's river, "he goes on forever," and like the river is never able to empty himself, even though he bubbles all the day long.

Verbal Quake Placers.

Such people seem never to have learned the true value of words; and as words cost but little, they are poured out, and pelted at people like hot shot from a breech-loading rifle. This class of persons may have learned the value of figures, and may be able to add two and two together as quickly as anybody else, and can tell you that the total is four, and no more; but they reckon not the worth of their words. In conversation they "beat about the bush," and take as long to get ready to discuss a question as they should take to discuss the question itself. They are like the individual of ancient times, of whom the sacred writer asks, "who is this that darkened wisdom by words?" They seem to think that wordiness is conversation, and that empty terms pass for intelligence. To fall in with such people when on a holiday is indeed unpleasant, for they sometimes rob others of their bit of pleasure, and load them down with meaningless debate. In some cases these persons are faddists, and like all such people, they rejoice to find virgin soil into which they may sow, broadcast from mere theories. They tell their story glibly, and to make sure of being understood they tell it over twice, and then toggle it with logic enough to seal a national congress, or to finalize the councils of the League of Nations. They never seem to think that some other person may have a little to say, or that time is precious, or that "the fool uttereth his whole, but the wise man holdeth his speech." (Prov.) I have long ago called these people "round-about talkers," but some people call them "bores," and whether one encounters them in business or in pleasure, in law or in gospel, the impression is the same—they are wordy; hence tiresome.

There Are Others.

We used to think that book agents and insurance agents were the only transgressors in this sense—but for these there is justification; and it is expected of them; but the lesson of life has taught us that many people have failed to learn the value of words. Though colleges have groomed some of them, and diplomas were granted to them, and money lavished upon them, and they seemed to know it all, yet in the common rules of life, and in the fitness of things, they displayed that lack of discretion, which when "put in the balance" was found wanting, and which at best rated them as wordy. Language is man's crowning gift, but like many other gifts it is greatly abused; and words are multiplied when the principle of "yea and nay" would suit the purpose. In public life, how much useless verbiage there is uttered, and what long-winded-oratory we hear and read of. A lot of this is meaningless, and is meant to be meaningless; and is interpreted by the people as being bluff, and nothing else. It is wordiness, and is meant for killing time; and some of it is far from either edification or instruction. Our schools and institutions of learning do not seem to give this matter as much attention as they should. They make experts at figures, but allow a useless and untutored vocabulary to go unchecked; hence so many wordy people who hold up meetings, and block progress in public life. It is said that "silence is golden," and the wise man of old said that "words fitly spoken are like apples of gold in pictures of silver." This is still true, and all authors of standard worth, have expressed the same idea; and they have shown by their writings, that language and diction, are very different from mere wordiness.

The Madcap Duchess.

There was no merrier madcap at the Court of our second George than Elizabeth Chudleigh, maid of honor to the Princess of Wales. As a child she often vowed that she would be a duchess, and at an early age she brought for her feet the Duke of Hamilton. A scheming aunt, however, who hated the Hamiltons, intercepted the Duke's letters, thereby causing misunderstandings, which ended the romance. Then the Hon. Augustus Hervey, second heir to the Earldom of Bristol, fell under her spell, and, smarting with resentment at the Duke's coldness, Elizabeth eloped with the Hon. Augustus, and was quietly married at dead of night, the ceremony being performed by the light of a taper concealed in the best man's hat. Hervey, being a naval lieutenant, was called away to Portsmouth immediately to rejoin his ship. Soon afterwards she was running over the Continent in search of distraction, leaving a train of broken hearts and languishing lovers behind her. At Berlin, she had the great Frederick himself at her knees; at the Dresden Court she shocked the ladies and bewitched the men; then back again to England to tear the page out of the marriage register recording her marriage. So she went on until nearly fifty years of age, her ambition to become a duchess still unquenched. She enslaved the aged Duke of Kingston, and by a lavish use of bribes and cajolery, obtained a sentence from the Ecclesiastical Court annulling her marriage with Hervey, she blossomed into "the most high and pious Princess, the Duchess of Kingston." When the aged duke died, she soon flung away her widow's weeds, and plunged into the vortex of London gaudy. When these palled she bought a yacht and sailed to Rome, where Pope and Cardinals did her honor. She was once saved from eloping with a titled swindler by his arrest and later suicide in prison. Her exchequer becoming empty, she presented herself before her banker; pistol in hand, and compelled him to provide funds for her return to London. Foote made her the object of universal ridicule by a comedy entitled "A Trip to Calais," but she cared little for this. A short time later, although forbidden to leave England, she returned to France, purchased a palace in Paris, and a castle in the country, with the idea of spending her last years in the luxury and licence to which she considered herself entitled. But her profligate career was drawing to its close in sudden tragedy. Hearing that a lawsuit had been decided against her, she broke out in a violent passion and burst a blood-vessel. In dying she was, she refused to remain in bed, and calling for wine, drained glass after glass of Madeira. She then fell into a sleep from which she never awoke. This was on October 30, 1784.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

WHAT MAKES CHARACTER JELLY FISH.

"I hate to make beds," I said to myself the other day as I surveyed my morning tasks. "I wish I didn't have to do anything I didn't like to do," my thought ran on. And then came the counter thought, "Look what happens to people who don't have to do anything they don't like to do. You know some of them. You know how spineless they get, how selfish, how lazy. You don't admire them. You don't want to be like them. Then why wish for the circumstances that would make you like them—unless you have a too strong character to spoil, which you certainly haven't? What you really need are more things you don't like to do instead of less."

Just As Glad I Wasn't the Boss. Of course I was glad that the half of me that talks to me like that couldn't go out and find me more tasks that I didn't want to do and make me do them. But just the same I knew that it was right in what it told me. Nothing in the world will make character more surely than doing things one doesn't like to do. Nothing weakens character like never having to do anything one doesn't like to do.

Nobody Loves the Jelly Fish. Too little doing what one doesn't like makes a character jelly fish. Nobody likes a character jelly fish. Nobody wants to be like them. Why then long for the conditions that make them?

Because we are poor weak human beings, I suppose, and half of us want what is bad for us. Come to think of it "half" is most inaccurate for in some folks it's three quarters or more and in others it's indefinitely less than half.

Doing what you don't want to do develops character, but there is something that develops character still more.

Doing Good Work.

Mr. Richard Power, Sewerage Inspector of the Municipal Council, under whose supervision a staff of men are now employed at pipe laying, is deserving of a word of praise for the lively way in which he oversees the work. In the early part of the present week the men began operations near the junction of Pennywell and Freshwater Roads, and are now advanced a considerable distance along the latter thoroughfare. Work of the same nature was done on Freshwater Road and on Mundy's Pond Road; work in the last named place have not yet been completed; while a "cut" was made in three days

How History Should Be Made.
The Traditions of the People Must Be Perpetuated.

(H. F. SHORTIS.)
(Concluded.)

Newfoundlanders are essentially a maritime people. We were this by force of circumstances, and it is the pursuit of our choice and habit. Nature made us a maritime people and for generations the sons of Newfoundland have been battling with the elements. The main wealth of the country was in the past, and will be in the future, drawn from the deep. Time will, no doubt, develop many more auxiliary industries, but we may not hope to have anything to come up to the fisheries as a source of national wealth. The people of this country are eminently qualified by all the means of their calling. They are endowed with courage, fortitude and perseverance. For generations they have been performing deeds of bravery, heroism and valor, that, if performed by any other civilized people, their names would be handed down in undying pages of history. It is to them that the historians of Newfoundland have overlooked the character and dispositions of her people! The reason is simply that they have confined themselves to a few old documents, easily accessible, and have neglected data together and published them to the world by the high-sounding name of history.

WEALTH OF MATERIAL.
In the people of Newfoundland there is to be found the material for making history—a history that would be of intense interest, as an example of that determined and self-sacrificing race of men can accomplish in the face of the greatest possible difficulties. The collector of data will answer: "This is a thing hard to accomplish, considering the absence of records." If the fathers of history had set about this task in this spirit, the world to-day would be indubitably richer in the knowledge they possess of nations and nation-builders. There is one source of knowledge which has never been tapped by our historians, and that is—tradition. It is absolutely futile to attempt the history of a new country, and, for that matter, of any country, without consulting the traditions of the people. No new country keeps a written record of its traditions. The struggle to live at first shores all their attention, and they have something else to do besides jotting down every event in their early life. Yet all information, even by the most remote stages of the settlement of Newfoundland, is easily accessible. It is a well-known fact that a people who are not capable or accustomed to noting down events, have a most retentive memory. This is owing to the fact that they depend solely on their memory as a guide to the past, and the result is the marvellous retentiveness of the minds of such a people.

A WELL DEVELOPED TRAIT.
The people of Newfoundland have this trait strongly developed within them, and as a consequence, they are possessed of a fund of the traditions of their country. The writer of Newfoundland history, to be a success, must consult the traditions of her people, without that all efforts in any other direction will be absolutely useless. As I before remarked, if the fathers of history had consulted themselves to documentary evidence only how impoverished would be the history of nations. The rise and fall of the empires of the West were not witnessed by the historians who related these events. They had to consult the traditions of the people of whom they wrote, and there is no getting over the he could recommend a good man, who would be capable of taking charge at the sealery. The old skipper turned round, and pointing to the man with the bag of bread on his back, unhesitatingly replied: "There is your man!" The merchant having full confidence in the old skipper's judgment, immediately sent for the man and engaged him on the spot. The result of his first voyage fully justified the confidence the old skipper placed in him, as he brought in nearly 6,000—was the first to arrive, and was afterwards a most successful sealing master. This is only one instance of many I could relate of the sound judgment and keen perception of Newfoundland fishermen of those days. They were close students of character, and it was almost impossible to deceive them when making an estimate of the moral and physical abilities of their fellow-man.

EFFICIENCY FIRST.
A man who is observant, going on board a sealing vessel, cannot but admire the tact and discrimination displayed in selecting the men for responsible trust. Every man fits into his place with mathematical precision. In every case the master-watchers, the bridge-man, the barrel-man, are found to be selected with a view to perfect efficiency. In every case these men are tried, trained, implicitly trusted, and the result and file are aware of all this, and get under the deputies as they would under the man in supreme command.

I do not wish it to be supposed that I am finding fault with history written from documents. I contend that such history is incomplete, without embodying the characteristics of the people of the country under review. Their growth and progress from an insignificant Colony to the dignified position of a factor in the Empire—the vicissitudes and difficulties of a nation in evolving itself from the embryo—are not matters of record. At such a period the struggle to survive engages all their attention. Where then are we to look for material to write our history? My answer is from the traditions of the people themselves. Having made a life-long study of our countrymen, and possessing, as I flatter myself I do, a thorough knowledge of them, I feel perfectly satisfied that the story of our country has to be evolved from the storehouse of the sanctious memory and tradition-loving habits of our people.

THE HOPEFUL VIEW.
Things are looking pretty black, trouble everywhere we see, and we're prone to cry "Alack," and to murmur, "Hully Gully!" But there's comfort in the thought that they've looked that way before, and the passing seasons brought all things right side up once more. Now we weep and wring our hands, and denounce the doggone luck, for the people of all lands seemingly have 'run amuck. Statesmen do their little stunt in a rattled, loosed way, but the problems they confront will be solved some pleasant day. Crime and license seem to rule, seem to thrive in every town; let us keep our foreheads cool—everything will settle down. But there's nothing new in sight, nothing new in any clime; everything comes out all right if we only give it time. After every three-year war, every routine thing expires, and the evils we abhor were confronted by our sires. And our fathers doubtless said, as their sons remark to-day, that all righteousness was dead, and the turles were at play. But they lived to see the dawn of a good and wholesome time, when the bogies all were gone, with the seething wave of crime. And our troubles too will cease as the seasons run their course, and we'll boast the dove of peace till our larynxes are hoarse.

The Mysteries Of Yucatan.
 AN AMERICAN DOCTOR'S EXPERIENCE.

An interview with Dr. Richard B. Wetherill recently appeared in the "Lafayette Journal and Courier" of Lafayette, Ind., U.S.A., in which that well known archaeologist tells of his research work in Yucatan, which brought to light many hitherto unknown facts. Dr. Wetherill, it will be remembered, was in Newfoundland during July and August of the present year, in company with Col. Lathcop of Alabama, and when leaving he expressed himself as delighted with our country and our hospitality and hoped to visit us again. Whilst in St. John's he was a frequent visitor to the Camp of the C.L.B. Cadets at Topsail, in which he manifested great interest. The interview which follows is by Helen O. Mahin. Does a globe-trotter never exhaust the possibilities of interest on the face of the earth?—the home-keeper wonders enviously. If he ever does, he can go beneath it, as long as the life of past ages lies in buried cities ready to be uncovered and revealed there will be thrill and fascination for the most seasoned traveller and profit to the world from his travels.

Dr. Richard B. Wetherill has visited every corner of the world that a civilized man can visit, and some that he cannot so very easily, with the one exception of equatorial Africa; and there he contemplates going next winter, to study the black races. He has traveled by ox-cart and camel, crude boat and raft, into the strongholds of ancient civilization and the back-wash of human life, studying languages and history and tribal life, piecing together traces of the stories of living and dead races.

He carried on these researches through the years of a very busy practice; and since he retired from practice in 1919 to devote practically all of his time to travel, he has been particularly interested—among other particular interests—in the early civilizations of Mexico and Central and South America.

Experience in Yucatan.
 In January of 1920 Dr. Wetherill went to Yucatan.

Yucatan is that large knob of land east of Mexico and west of the Isthmus of Panama that reaches up toward Florida, partly shutting in the Gulf of Mexico. Shut your eyes and you will see it, just as it used to stand out on the map in the geography. If you don't shut your eyes the name will probably mean to you no more than some little country down toward South America—or in South America, you're not quite sure which. You have a very clear idea of South America, you feel; it is a big triangle, with the Amazon river in the north, the Andes mountains in the west, and cattle grazing among pampas grasses over the rest of it. It is a new country, we are sure; far, far behind us in all matters of development and civilization in general. That about represents the geographical and historical knowledge of the most of us, doesn't it?

Our picture of Central America is even more sketchy, but that knob of land reaching up toward Florida stands out quite distinctly. And that is one of the countries the excavations whose ancient cities Dr. Wetherill has recently, and for years past as well, been visiting and studying.

For, as to those slow young backward countries, there are civilizations in Mexico and in Central and to any special work that could be done. Last year they went together to the ruins of Chichan-Itza, one of the ancient cities of Northern Yucatan that Professor Thompson has excavated. There are three ruins of this kind in Yucatan—Chichan-Itza, Uxmal, and Mayapan. Of these most is known of Uxmal, but Chichan-Itza, by all accounts, is much older. They are all cities of the Mayan, probably the most ancient of the Central and South American Indians.

Far back in the mists of past ages, scientists tell us, the floor of the Pacific was much higher than to-day in a long line reaching west of South America some 9,000 miles, a line marked now by the archipelagoes of the Polynesian islands; and then the Polynesians, a beautiful brown race, made their way in boats across the much shorter stretches of water and finally reached the west coast of South America. From there they turned north and south; those who turned to the north went into Yucatan, and became the ancestors of the Maya Indians, some of whom, traveling around into what is now Mexico, long after founded the Toltec race and cities, which in turn, in the course of cycles, founded the Aztecs.

In the Maya and Aztec Indians of to-day are to be found many of the characteristics of the Polynesians—the same rather handsome brown faces, refined into great beauty in some of the women, and traces of the same religious customs that are kept by their neighbors across so many miles of Pacific breakers. Whatever their ancestry, they all worshipped the sun and the serpent—the same serpent god of the Hawaiians and the Chinese, Quetzicoatl, the feathered serpent of the Aztecs, Cuculkan of the Mayas, the deity that is still found in the old religions of Hawaii and China. It was his figure that lay the height of the great pyramid in Chichan-Itza, at the top of which stood the temple of the serpent where lovely little Noh Ek dwell among the vestals.

With the Aztecs and Mayas, too, feathers were held to be a mark of nobility. The feathered mantle was the supreme garb of royalty, and all dignitaries were endowed with feathers.

South America that were beginning to be old when the Christian era was new. Those cities are long since buried under the silt and soil of ages; in their day they were cut off from all the world as we know it in history; but they carried on life as varied, as bright, as full of thrilling interest as any of the eastern hemisphere.

Archaeological Study.
 Their cities were built in imperishable stone and archaeologists, those men who unweave for us the storied mysteries of the past, have been uncovering them for years—long years to us, but a bare moment in the light of the ages that went into the making of those cities. One of the most distinguished of these in Prof. Edward H. Thompson, who was sent thirty years ago by the Peabody Museum to excavate the ruins of Yucatan and has ever since been uncovering tales of those far days. Dr. Wetherill has frequently visited him personally, exchanged for the information gathered here the result of his own researches among the Aztecs on the other side of the world, and given financial support

The Dr. Chase Plan of Health
Confidence in Dr. Chase

Time was when the family physician was the most prominent character in the community.

A man of intelligence and ability, he commanded confidence and respect, and sacrificed his time, strength and pleasure for those who needed his care and skill.

These were the conditions when, after graduating from the University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor, Dr. A. W. Chase settled down to practise his profession in that well-known college town.

Every Man His Own Physician

But the doctor soon got the idea that people should know how to look after their own common ills, and set about in a large way to supply them with the necessary information.

By means of his Receipt Book, the circulation of which has since run into millions, and his well-known "Almanac and Guide" of many kinds, Dr. Chase has spread throughout the civilized world the gospel of "Every Man His Own Physician."

This plan enabled the doctor to devote his attention to more serious cases, and he soon became known far and wide as a specialist in the treatment of diseases of the kidneys, the liver, the heart and other vital organs of the human system.

Home Medicines

With these time-tried medicines at hand, you can feel that you are protected against the common ills of life by the most effective treatment which Dr. Chase was able to discover during a long life of diligent study and research.

Free Samples

After long experience with Dr. Chase's Medicines, we have found that people who try them are soon convinced of their exceptional merits.

We have published thousands of letters to give you an idea of the benefits others have obtained by their use; but if you are still sceptical we shall be glad to send you our Free Combination Package.

History in Stone.
 The story of the Maya cities has to be read in the cities, the architecture, and the implements that are found, and in the stories still told by the Maya Indians, the descendants of that far race—stories that have been handed by word of mouth from parent to child through long generations. There are hieroglyphic records in plenty, but no key has yet been found to decipher them, beyond the identification of places named. For when the Spanish missionaries made Christian of the Indians they taught them that everything having to do with the past life of their race was of the devil; consequently those who could read the hieroglyphics, either afraid or ashamed of their knowledge, made haste to conceal and forget it.

But the city of Chichan-Itza itself, the City of the Sacred Well, tells its own story. There is the palace with its courts, and the nunnery, and the tennis court. Strange tennis they played, a game that called for all of the skill and self-control of our tennis and basketball and football together. We know something of its rules from a similar game that is played in Central America to-day. On the inner sides of two parallel stone walls, 20 feet from the ground, were fixed two stone rings some 3 feet in diameter, forming diagonally posed goals. The ball, which had to be thrown through the ring of the opposing side, could not be touched with the hand, but must be struck with arm, shoulder, knee, or even head. And the contest did not end with the winning of the game, for the winning side were entitled to everything that their opponents wore, raiment and jewels—if they could get it. But, as the losing team took to their heels the instant the ball flew through their ring, it is doubtful whether the victors always obtained the spoils.

Pyramids not Tombs.
 And there are the sacred well with its storied sacrifice and the pyramids, which are nearly always crowned with temples and are never, like those of Egypt, specklers. The temple of the serpent stands upon the great pyramid, 200 feet high and built of rubble faced with stone. Up the wide stairway extended the body of Cuculkan, his head—5 feet high—at the foot, where it still lies; his body, long since broken and fallen, undulating with the steps; his tail guarding the temple.

In the city of the Sacred Well, that great silent place of ruins, stands a lofty pyramid crowned by a massive stone-built temple.

Within the temple chamber, on the panelled surface of a square stone pillar, and clad in the rich regalia of a warrior-noble, is carved the majestic figure of a man.

So runs the description of Professor Thompson, who gave Dr. Wetherill the legend to explain the presence of a warrior's statue in a place so strange for the commemoration of a warrior. The legend he heard from the lips of a Maya Indian, perhaps a descendant of one of those who stood at the foot of the pyramid when the dead young Ah May was carried up to the Morning Star, the story that had come across the thousands of years since that far day.

(This beautiful Indian legend will be published Monday.)

HOW GIRLS PLAY BRIDGE.

I have already written two articles on Bridge with more or less success. I am now venturing on a third, and may say that all these articles (those that may follow if I am not tired or lazy, Editor) are guided by personal observation.

Few things are more amusing than a girl's Bridge party. The one thing that is really missing is a girl and in when a girl is invited to come and play Bridge she knows that she is going to a conversation. Four girls sit round a table. Cards are dealt in the same one remarks. "Have you heard about Jack Jones' latest crush?"

The dealer looks at her hand "one heart," she says, "who is it this time?" Next in hand says two diamonds and "You'll never guess who she's married to?"

"Two hearts. Do tell us who she is," says number three. And so it goes. At last the bidding is over and play begins. After hesitating for several minutes whilst she discusses the last bit of scandal, the maker of the hand plays saying "Do you know, I'm knitting a pink jumper."

Now lovely says next in hand "as I casually drops a card on the table, so the hand is played out, with a few minutes of small talk from darning up the hole in the stocking."

"Do you know," says the girl who has with the help of her partner, and dummy's computation, managed to put her opponent down three. "You should not have led that trump. And, 'this gushy' have you heard that Dolly Dimas is engaged?"

"Oh, I don't know, I think I was quite right in leading trumps. Who she is engaged to this I do not know." Another breaks "I think she did quite right in leading trumps. But who has Dolly caught?"

At this juncture tea is served and a momentary lull ensues. Following tea another hand is played in a similar fashion to the first. "How thoughtless of me to fess up when I should have known you had the king," says a player, following it up with "I've learnt a topping new dance."

"Then, looking at her wrist watch, 'Goodness, it's nearly six. Must be home to dress for the dance,' and they take their leave, the other saying to the hostess, "What a delightful game. Thank you so much."

And that is the way girls play Bridge. And is there one can fail to see it was a famous victory.

Information Wanted.—Miss (to new maid)—"Above all things Jane, you must be reticent."
Jane—"Yes, mum—but what is there to be reticent about?"—The Bystander.

Undesired.—Jimmy (tearfully) "Father, the d-donkey kicked me!"
Father—"Have you been annoying it?"
Jimmy—"No, I was only t-trying to carve my name on it!"—The Passing Show, London.

Surprising Intelligence.—Those keen Eastern business men learn something every day. A candy store operator who has been making a 300 per cent profit says he can cut prices in half and still make a profit.—Seattle Times.

Scientific Proof.—One day a teacher was having a first-grade class in physiology. She asked them if they knew that there was a burning fire in the body all of the time. One little girl spoke up and said: "Yes, my; when it is a cold day, I can see the smoke."—The Epworth Herald.

Purely Inspirational.—The archbishop had preached a fine sermon on the beauties of married life. Two old Irish women coming out of church were heard commenting upon his address.
"Tis a fine sermon his reverence would be after givin' us," said Bridget.
"It is indeed," replied Maggie, "and I wish I knew a little about the matter as he does."—Tit-Bits (London).

Pot and Kettle.—"You have such strange names for your towns," an Englishman remarked to one of his new American friends. "Weehawken, Hoboken, Poughkeepsie, and ever so many others."
"I suppose they do sound queer to English ears," said the American, thoughtfully. "Do you live in London all the time?"

"Oh, no," said the unsuspecting Briton, "I spend a part of my time at Chipping Norton, and then I've a place at Pokes-tog-on-the-Hike."—Harper's Magazine.

The Bristol Reform Bill Riots.

Of the many disgraceful riots throughout England attendant upon the rejection of the first Reform Bill by the House of Lords, the outbreak at Bristol was the most destructive. The pretext was supplied by the arrival, in the course of the duties, of Sir Charles Wetherell, the Recorder, who was prominent as an Anti-Reformer; but was due wholly to the incapacity of the magistrates and to the inexplicable inaction of the officer in command of the troops, Colonel Brereton, that the explosion was so formidable.

From Saturday, October 29, 1831, when the trouble began, until the morning of Tuesday, November 1, when troops from all quarters poured into the city and the neighbourhood, the mob worked its will, practically unchecked, and pillage, violence, and arson were suffered to rage. Most of Queen's Square, then the best residential part of Bristol, was burned down, only two houses on the west side escaping. The Custom house, the colleges, on the bridge leading to the quay, and the prisons were destroyed wholly or in part. The Bishop's Palace, on College Green, was gutted, although fortunately the Cathedral was no more than scorched in places. Yet a little show of salutary force at the outset would have averted the calamity, since it was impunity alone that emboldened the mob to wreak havoc. Certain it is that, as soon as force was employed with firmness, the riots collapsed, although not before some hundreds of them through their own excesses. Unquestionably the weak conduct and irresolution of Colonel Brereton were largely responsible; and he forestalled the verdict of a court-martial to that effect by committing suicide.

Physical Development.

And its Bearing on Health and Strength.

THE PASSIONS.
SYMPATHY.
The nature of Sympathy.—In man, the sight of suffering or danger to others is a direct excitant of interest; James believes, as an immediate stimulus, if no complication hinders, to acts of relief. Some forms of sympathy, that of mother and child for example, are instinctive and not due to the mother thinking of the board and lodging and other support to be reaped in old age. Danger to the child blindly and instinctively stimulates the mother to action of alarm or defence. Menace of harm to the adult beloved or friend excites us in a corresponding way, often against all dictates of prudence.

SOCIABILITY.
The Social Desire.—Man is excited by the absence of his kind. To be alone is one of the greatest evils for him. Solitary confinement is by many regarded as a mode of torture too cruel and unnatural for civilized countries to adopt. To one pent up on a desert island the sight of a human footprint or a human form in the distance would be the most tumultuously exciting of experiences, in the opinion of James. In diseased states of the

THE PASSION FOR HUNTING AND FIGHTING.
Hunting.—This passion is very general in boys who are brought up naturally, especially in the country. Everyone knows what pleasure a boy takes in the sight of a butterfly, fish, crab or other animal, or of a bird's nest. He has a strong passion for pulling apart, breaking, opening and destroying all complex objects.

FIGHTING.
Rocheffoucauld says that an apostle of peace will feel a certain vicious thrill run through him and enjoy a vicious brutality as he turns to the column in his newspaper at the top of which "Shocking Atrocity" stands printed in large capitals.

Consider the enormous annual sale of revolvers to persons, not one in a thousand of whom has any serious intention of using them, but of whom each one has his carnivorous self-consciousness tickled by the notion, as he clutches the handle of his weapon, that he will be rather a dangerous customer to meet. See the ignoble crew that escorts every great pugilist! The first blow at a prize-fight is apt to make a refined spectator sick, but the blood is soon up in favor of one party and it will then seem as if the other fellow could not be banged and bonneted and managed enough—the refined spectator would like to reinforce the blows himself.

THE PASSION FOR PLAY.
A boy cannot help running after another boy who runs provokingly near him. The sexes differ somewhat in their play. As Schmeidler says: "The little boy imitates soldiers, models clay into an oven, builds houses, makes a wagon out of chairs, rides on horse-back upon a stick, drives nails with

Makes a Family Supply of Cough Remedy
Really better than ready-made cough syrups and surest cure. Easily and quickly prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known ready-made cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex, pour it into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is 16 ounces of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made and save easily $2.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief! It loosens the mucus, stops the tickly throat, tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes so gently, and so easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break up colds.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2 1/2 ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

"Marry the Poor Girl."

Amusing Comedy Play at the Casino.
"Marry the Poor Girl," which was produced by the Gladys Klark Players at the Casino last night is a trace comedy. That is, a scampingly funny but plotless play. Jack Tanner who is a guest of the Paddingtons comes in drunk one night and unconsciously wanders into the room of Julia Paddington, the daughter of the house, where he falls asleep in a chair. The play opens at the time when Mrs. Paddington discovers Tanner in Julia's room and insists upon him marrying her daughter. Then the fun begins, nor does it end until the curtain drops for the last time. The amusing complications which ensue after the "marriage de convenience," when Tanner is assisted by his friends in getting grounds for a divorce, succeeded in keeping the audience in a constant fit of laughter. Mr. Louis Lytton, as Wallace Paddington, was splendid, and his dry wit delighted the audience, whilst Mr. LeRoy Kenneth made the best of a good character part, as Bradley Littlefield. Miss Gladys Klark's representation of Julia Paddington was well up to her usual standard, and Mr. LeRoy, H. Bayley and Miss Dot E. Jewell gave capable renderings of more or less difficult roles. The splendidly played selections of the G.L.B. Band under Capt. Morris, added greatly to the evening's enjoyment. At this afternoon's matinee "The Confession" will be put on. Monday and Tuesday nights "Jim's Girl" will be staged. Is this one worth seeing? Well, we should say so!

Art Exhibition Closing To-Day.

Large numbers of people have been drawn to the exhibition of his pictures which Mr. Wilfred Wood, of London is holding in the Empire Hall. The exhibition opened on Tuesday and will close this afternoon. A general review of the pictures exhibited has already appeared in the Telegram, but they are so good that it is almost impossible to resist another reference to them. The most attractive are perhaps, the pen and ink drawings which are tinted with water colors. In these drawings the wealth of detail which is not so discernible in water colors and pastels, is more apparent and Mr. Wood has drawn in this detail with infinite care and finesse. The water colors, particularly the local views, are excellent and in his sky and rock effects the artist seems to be especially happy. The moonlight views of Spain are also very striking, whilst a twilight sketch of Logy Bay drew forth much favorable criticism. There are but a few pastels and all of these are very well done. The view of a hay field in the Waterford Valley and that of Old Man's Pond, at Petty Harbor, are the best of these. In the latter the autumn tints are caught to a nicety and the scene is really a beautiful one. Nearly all the local views have already been sold, and this alone should be sufficient tribute to Mr. Wood's work.

Tea will be served this afternoon in aid of the S.P.C.A. Mr. Wood is leaving for England by the Sachem next month. He has thoroughly enjoyed his stay here, where he has been a guest of Mr. Jack McNeil, 'Grove Hill' and he hopes to come again to Newfoundland in the near future when he will do some sketching in the interior and on the West Coast.

Florida's Sponge Fisheries.

The sponge fisheries at Tarpon Springs, Fla., do more than a million dollars' worth of business annually. The industry was built up by a Philadelphia banker, who went to Florida on a real estate development proposition and quickly saw the possibilities of making Tarpon Springs, centrally located on the Gulf of Mexico and with railroad connections, the headquarters of the industry. This has resulted in the building of a beautiful little city with 4,000 inhabitants. In 1905 he revolutionized the business by bringing divers from Greece to operate in 30 to 130 feet of water, instead of the old-style method of "hooking" the sponges out of shallow water with a hook on a long pole.

Why We Feel Pain.

Considering how very largely pain enters into the lives of us all, and how much we are afraid of it, it is astonishing how little most of us really ever think about it.

To begin with, what is pain? Sometimes that hurts your body, you say? But are you sure?

I have a notion that if I blindfold you and made you think I am going to burn you arm with a red-hot poker, you would "feel" intense pain, even though I only touched you with a paper-knife!

And what is more, if you happen to be a particularly nervous sort of person, your arm would actually blister under the paper-knife!

Then, have you ever thought how much pain you could stand? We often read of the horrible and disgusting tortures to which men put each other in other ages. It may be a relief to some of us to know that most of this was only waste of time, for man is only able to "feel" a certain amount of pain, and with most of us the limit is reached with the extraction of a very bad tooth.

We can't live without pain. Just as a bucket of water will only hold a bucketful, so, if you go on pouring into it, you are only wasting time. But apart from all this, we literally couldn't live without pain, odd as it sounds.

Pain has two distinct uses to us; one as a teacher, disciplining our minds and tempers, and the other as a sentry. Nature has provided us with two sentries—fatigue and pain. Fatigue warns us against ourselves. If it wasn't for fatigue we should walk too far, work too long, do a hundred things which would injure us. In the same way, pain is our warning against outside things which would hurt us. Pain warns us of danger.

It is a curious thing that when pain ceases it is often a sign to the doctor that the injury is beyond repair. The sentry, finding his warnings useless and the enemy in possession of the castle, has gone "off duty."

The Brigade Week Journal to be published November 7th.

World's Biggest Beast.

There is a prevalent notion that the animals of past ages, whose bones are from time to time dug out of rocks and sand quarries, were many of them much bigger than any at present existing.

True, the mammoth and the mastodon were enormous creatures, but they were not bigger than their living representatives, the great elephants of Africa and India.

Actually the biggest extinct animal we know of is the gigantosaur, a huge semi-aquatic reptile, but even the biggest of them would have weighed, much less than a whale.

Stretched on the shore, resting on its belly as a crocodile does, the body, humped-shaped, of the gigantosaur would have been about twelve feet high and some fifty feet long, with its tail, like a huge serpent, extending eighty feet beyond it in one direction.

Ancient Secrets of Acoustics.

"Of interest to architects of public halls is a discovery made among the ruins of ancient churches in France destroyed by the Germans," says the Paris correspondent of the Manchester Guardian.

"In clearing away the wreckage of the largest of these a certain number of pottery vessels of great age were found. At first it was supposed that these had, in ages past, been hidden or lost in the crypts. But expert examination revealed that they were undoubtedly 'acoustic vases' set in the walls of the church by monkish architects to give resonance to the walls.

"Old records of this are extant and are well known to antiquaries, but never before had the complete destruction occurred which alone could bring to light exactly what they were. French architects hope that some lost secrets of ancient by-blow of the war may be recovered."

Chorus Girls' Arrest.

FILM DIRECTOR'S DEATH IN ORGY OF DRINK.

Some of the unsavoury features of the Arbuckle affair are recalled by the death at Los Angeles of a young cinema director, Mr. Al Stein. It was the climax to a drinking party similar to that staged in Arbuckle's rooms at San Francisco, which resulted in the death of Miss Virginia Rappe, the actress. In the present case the circumstances are reversed, and two chorus girls, 22 and 23 years of age, have been arrested on "suspicion of murder." According to statements furnished to the police, a liquor orgy took place in Stein's rooms, lasting well into the morning. Then two other men in the party, who with Stein were stated to be under the influence of drink, departed, leaving Stein alone with the two girls. At half-past five in the morning the police were called to the apartment by one of the girls. They found Stein lying dead on the floor of his room, his head supported by pillows. There were no marks of violence on the body, except a long scratch on the left cheek. The doctor who performed the autopsy reported that death was caused by acute alcoholism. Stein shared the apartment with Fred Fishback, who was one of those who attended the Arbuckle orgy. Among the papers found in the apartment was a telegram to Fishback from the Public Prosecutor of San Francisco summoning him to give evidence at the trial of the comedian.

Gallant Kentish Man.

EARL HAIG TELLS HOW BUFFS STOOD FAST.

Unveiling a memorial at Canterbury to Kentish men who fell in the war, Earl Haig declared that the Kent regiments had "maintained the reputation won so gloriously at Blenheim and Ramillies." It was, he added, the 7th East Kents and the 7th Royal West Kents who held the line at Venduill when the great storm of the supreme German attack burst upon the 5th and 3rd Armies. No finer feat of arms had been performed than was achieved by the 7th Buffs on that occasion. Throughout a long day of desperate fighting all attempts to overwhelm them were beaten off, and long after touch was lost with them the sounds of their opposition could be heard, though, unhappily, the reinforcements they required could not be spared. Earl Haig also opened the British Legion Club, and, at the Guildhall, received the honorary freedom of the City.

A Changed Signboard.

The Bishop of Stepney tells an amusing story of a colleague of his who was in the habit of spending his holidays in a north-country village, and always stayed at an old-fashioned inn called "The Cock."

Out of compliment to his lordship, the landlord substituted for this title that of "The Bishop."

When next the great church dignitary arrived at the place he was startled to find that the old sign had been scrapped, and a new one put up showing a figure in full episcopal robes.

Frowning slightly, he went up close to examine it in detail. His consternation may be imagined when he discovered that the picture was surmounted by the words "The Bishop of Blankshire," and underneath, "This is 'The Old Cock.'"

An Awful Cure.

"Nervous breakdown, debility; nothing much to worry about. Get in the country; long walks in the open air. No alcohol in any form, and—'The patient sighed. 'And one cigar a day.' 'Oh, doctor—not that!' 'One cigar a day!' reiterated the doctor inexorably.

Six weeks later the patient returned to town.

"How do you feel?" asked the doctor.

"Splendid! Fit as a fiddle!"

"And you liked it all?"

"Yes, everything except the one cigar."

The doctor smiled.

"The tobacco habit, my dear sir—'Isn't any joke," put in the patient ruefully. "It is hard for a man at my time of life to take up smoking!"

Fashion Plates.

A PRACTICAL GARMENT FOR HOUSE WEAR.

Pattern 3485 is illustrated in this style. It is cut in 4 Sizes: Small, 32-34; Medium, 36-38; Large, 40-42; Extra Large, 44-46 inches bust measure. A Medium size will require 7 1/4 yards of 27 inch material. The width of the skirt at lower edge is about 2 yards.

A SIMPLE ATTRACTIVE COSTUME.

For this design Waist Pattern 3732, and Skirt Pattern 3695 were combined. Crepe de chine, Canton crepe, gabardine, gingham, linen, serge, taffeta and satin are attractive for its development. It will require 6 1/2 yards of 36 inch material to make this dress for a 38 inch size. The width of the skirt at the foot with plait extended is 3 1/2 yards. The Waist Pattern is cut in 7 Sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust measure. The Skirt in 6 Sizes: 24, 26, 28, 30, 32 and 34 inches waist measure. QUALIFICATION OF VOTERS.
The attention of the public is called to the following sections of the St. John's Municipal Act, 1921:—
1. The right to vote for the Mayor and Councillors of the City shall be held by—
(a) all British subjects of the age of twenty-one years and upwards who have resided in the City for one year immediately preceding the election; and
(b) are owners, lessees, tenants, or occupiers of property rated on the assessment books of the City; or who are liable for the poll tax; and
(c) are not indebted to the St. John's Municipal Council for any arrears of taxes; and
(d) are duly enrolled on the Voters' List; and
(e) are not disqualified by mental incapacity.
By all bodies corporate, being British subjects, which are owners, lessees, tenants, or occupiers of property rated on the assessment books of the City, and which are not indebted to the said Council for any arrears of taxes, and which are duly enrolled on the said Voters' List.
Every such person and body corporate shall be deemed to be, and is hereby described as, a ratepayer.
Each ratepayer shall only be entitled one vote for the election of Mayor, and one for each of the Councillors.
Where property is assessed to a person or co-partnership, not being incorporated, each member of such firm or partnership at the time of such assessment shall be deemed to be assessed as a qualification for voting.
Any person who has a shop, office or business in the City, and who is a partner in such business, shall be deemed to be a ratepayer, notwithstanding that his name may be outside the City.
No member of a body corporate shall be entitled to vote individually in respect of property belonging to the body, but every body corporate shall be deemed to be a ratepayer and shall be entitled one vote, to be given by any of its members appointed in writing by the body for that purpose.
When property is held by an executor, administrator, trustee, or other person in trust for the use or benefit of others, the person beneficially entitled shall be held to be the ratepayer in respect of such property.

Harbor Grace Notes.

Within the past week or two several Labrador schooners have arrived home, among them being, Snowdrift, Capt. Jno. Parsons; Flower of Home, Capt. R. Noseworthy; Kestrel, Capt. W. Roach; Raleigh, Capt. W. T. Noel, and Dorothy, Capt. E. Pike.

The schooner "Aramis," which went ashore on the Bar on the 18th inst., was refloated on Saturday at noon by the assistance of the tug D. P. Ingraham, and was towed in the harbor. Since then she was submerged and the matter of refloating her is again being worked upon. Some more coal is still on board, and men yesterday and to-day have been endeavoring to remove it. Mr. P. Moore, who was in town on Monday regarding the salvage, has returned to the city.

Schr. Silver Star, William Day, master, arrived in port on Monday from St. John's.

S.S. Lobelia, Captain Taylor, arrived in port from Labrador on Monday and landed some crews and freight, etc. here, after which she proceeded to the other places of call in the Bay.

Schr. A. G. Blenor, Captain Nicholle, came off dock on Monday and discharged a small quantity of Anthracite coal. This schooner has since been awaiting favorable winds to sail for St. John's again, and will get away first opportunity.

Schr. Minnie Maud, Thos. Hart, master, is now ready to sail for Hoop Harbour and Englee, and is awaiting a favorable time to get off. She has on board provisions, etc., for these places mentioned from her owner, Mr. E. Simmons.

Rev. F. S. Coffin of St. Andrew's Church, after spending a vacation of some weeks with friends and relatives in Prince Edward Island, returned home again last week. His many friends here are pleased to have him with them again.

Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Morrissey of the "Riverhead," left town by Friday morning's train for St. John's to connect with the S.S. Rosalind, which sailed on Saturday. They intend spending the winter months with their daughter at Bronx, New York.

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Parsons were passengers from the city by Wednesday night's train, having spent a short time there.

Mrs. George Davis and her daughter, Miss Sophie Davis, of Woodville Road, went out by Thursday morning's train enroute for Glace Bay, N.S., where they intend to make their home in the future. Mrs. Davis has a son, Mr. Walter Davis, residing there. The best wishes of their friends follow them to their new home in Canada.

The first snow has appeared within the last few days, and the weather has taken quite a change, so that now winter seems to be drawing very near and will soon be settled with us. "Jack Frost" is here too and is quite noticeable in the early mornings.

A grand concert is being held in St. Patrick's Hall, Carbonar, to-night, under the management of Mrs. P. Lee. The programme consists of solos, duets, recitations and musical items by the leading talent of that town and, no doubt, a good time is in store for all who attend. The proceeds are in aid of St. Patrick's Church, and we hope a large amount will be realized. Very likely many of our townies will make it a point to take in that entertainment, as it promises to be something of note.

Miss L. M. Joy, who had been on a short trip to the U.S.A., arrived back to town again during the week.

Mr. L. H. Simmonds of Spruce Brook, paid a brief visit to town on Monday and returned again by Tuesday morning's train.

Starting a Rugby Club.
A movement is now on foot to start a Rugby Football Club here next spring. Rugby is a game which is not properly appreciated in Newfoundland and an attempt will be made to popularize it. There are a large number of people in the city who have played Rugby and it is hoped that all will join. If the club be formed, occasional games will be played, and there will always be a team ready to play any warship which may come here. Rugby is at present played only at the Methodist and Bishop Feild Colleges, and there is a challenge shield up for competition between these two schools. School rugby was instituted in Newfoundland in 1914.
