The Mystery of Rutledge Hall OR
"The Cloud With a Silver Lining"

CHAPTER X.

Moving unsteadily across the room, she threw open the window, admitting a rush of cold air and thick snow; then she began pacing up and down the room with feeble tottering steps. Stephen watched her in silence and unspeakable pain, longing to take her to his arms and comfort her, to see the white lids close over the wide-open turning eyes, the little restless hands still and peaceful once more. Once or twice her lips moved, and the word "Horrible!" was spoken and repeated in a voice so low as to be almost inaudible; but the restless perambulations never ceased until a loud peal sounded at the hall-door bell and a strange voice was heard in the hall. Then she paused suddenly, and, but for Stephen's instant support, she would have fallen. As he caught her on his arm, she looked up at him in mute entreaty, and tried to speak; but no sound came from the white parched lips.

"Stephen put her gently into a chair. "Wait here, dear," he said. "I will see him and tell you."

"The truth?" she murmured, faintly. "Yes, all the truth, Sidney."

He hurried out into the passage, where his own room, who had been waiting at the Rutledge Arms to bring him news of the verdict, stood, the snow lying heavily upon his shoulders.

"Well," Stephen said, eagerly, "is the inquest over or adjourned?"

"It is over, sir," the man answered, still somewhat breathless from the haste with which he had ridden—"quite over. Dr. Arnold desired me to give you this, sir."

With unsteady hands Stephen took the slip of paper and opened it. It contained these words written hastily and unevenly:

"Willful murder against Frank Greville the younger."

It was so much worse than Stephen had anticipated that the young man staggered back as he read it, uttering an exclamation of surprise and pain.

"Murder? There is some mistake," he said; "surely it is manslaughter, not murder!"

"Murder, sir," the groom answered "The evidence was very strong, people said; and some folks say—I can't say for certain, as I was not there myself—that Mr. Greville said the jury was quite right, and swore that if he could give his son up to justice, he would do it."

"How will she hear it?" broke from Stephen's pale lips, as he turned away. "How can I tell her?"

But there was no need to tell her, for she had followed him, and stood leaning against the wall, white and still, as if turned to stone; then, before he could reach her, she slid downward and lay at his feet, white, cold, and motionless, as one dead.

CHAPTER XI.

"If I had heard it from any lips but your own, I should have disbelieved it. I can hardly believe it now. Sidney, it is not true; tell me that it is not true!"

Christine Greville spoke with a force and passion which shook her slender frame with terrible violence. Sidney, standing, a slender, drooping figure, by the window of the morning-room at the Gray House, looked over at her with wistful, sorrowful eyes, and said gently:

"It is quite true, Christie."

"True that you, whom I believed so true and steadfast, are going to break your pledged word, to be false and faithless? It is not true! I will not believe it. Sidney, have you forgotten that you promised to be Frank's wife, that you went on more calmly, that he has never released you from that promise, that to betray him now, when he is desolate and in trouble, would be a thousand times blacker treachery than to betray him while he was here and able to defend himself? Sidney, you will not desert Frank now?"

"Is it not Frank who has deserted me?" Sidney Arnold asked, brokenly, a faint, bitter smile parting the sweet lips which had taken such a sorrowful droop during the past twelve months.

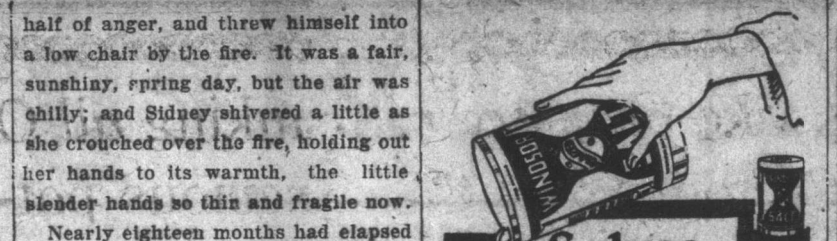

"Deserted you!" Christie Greville cried passionately. "How can you be so cruel, Sidney? How can he return here to his death? Ah, if his innocence could be proved!"

"Ah, if it could!" Sidney echoed, bitterly. "But as it is—"

"Yet you swore to do all you could to prove it," Frank's sister said, almost wildly; "and yet not two years have passed, and you, Frank's promised wife, are the first to desert him!"

"The first! Nay, since I believe in his innocence still, while your father—Christie, don't taunt me, or you will make me say what I shall be sorry for afterward!"

She turned from the window as she spoke, with a gesture half of pain,

Mountain Saves City as Tornado Tears Way Across Country-side

(Montreal Star)

Gray-green storm clouds careened and tossed down the Ottawa Valley and across the Lake of the Two Mountains at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, dipped in churning fury over the Riviere des Prairies, aimed a long, twisting, funnel-like finger at Mount Royal, where it tore a pathway through the trees and then, rising again into the thundering mass livid with lightning, leaped across Montreal to the south shore of the St. Lawrence to once more descend and rip its way through the countryside.

It was the first experience on record of a tornado in this city and its vicinity.

So far as is known to-day but one life was lost and less than a handful of persons constitute the toll of casualties on the human side.

As yet it is not possible to estimate the property damage, though one figure, suggested on the basis of scattered reports, thus far received, places the likely loss at upward of $1,000,000.

Thousands of trees are torn from their roots, acres of orchards and fields of other unharvested crops are despoiled of their treasure, scores of buildings are destroyed and damaged, and telegraph and telephone properties in the country districts are broken, tangled and useless for miles.

Miraculously, some of the City of Montreal was saved from catastrophe by its mountain, which stood like a Gibraltar against the ferocity of the venomous cloud that leaped down and searched about like the tang of some great supernatural monster. Two or three times it was seen to sink itself in the fringed rearward slope of the mountain, near the summit, with a roaring, hissing sound. Several large edifices and a dozen palatial homes were spared by a matter of but a few yards in some instances. Gogged crevices in the treeed hillside tell the story here.

Lifted Over the City.

Then the cloud swirled up into the air like a huge whip-lash and snapped downward toward the roof-tops of the city. But it fell short. The mountain had served the elements as its snow-covered "take-off" in winter serves the dare-devil ski-jumper. As though in disappointment at being cheated of its greater prey, the writhing tongue of destruction seemed to coil up and to disappear within the billowing folds of the lightning-torn vapor above.

But Montreal was not unscathed, with hurricane force the storm-driven wind, rain and electricity, amid the crashing of thunder that made streets and buildings tremble from one end of the city to the other, gripped the metropolis in a ten-minute frenzy, tying up traffic and transportation, and telephone and lighting systems, smashing and uprooting trees, shattering windows and bowling over chimneys and sign-boards.

One man was killed, Alphees Plamondon, 26, of 94 Harmony Street, fell on his head when he jumped from the motor truck he was driving when he sought to escape the flashing end of a live wire dangling to the pavement of the corner of St. Ambrose and St. Philippe Streets. He died a few minutes later at the Royal Victoria Hospital.

At the Country Club, St. Lambert, in the wake of the vortex of the storm, which again, a few miles further on, dipped its lashing weapon to earth, the only persons so far reported hurt were Mrs. Stella Coyverton, Miss Anne Strachan, M. Palmer and Charles Phipps the latter a caddy. They were standing beneath a shelter on the golf course, when a huge tree crashed up on them. Phipps, the more seriously injured, is suffering from concussion of the brain; Mrs. Coyverton, badly shaken up and bruised, is suffering from shock, and the others are less badly hurt, both being bruised and shaken up.

If there are school children in your home, have a drawer in the kitchen cabinet given over to lunchbox accessories.

Games Your Boy Should Play

By B. J. T. ROSANQUET, the Famous Cricketer.

From time to time enthusiasts wrangle about the merits of different games, and many parents and heads of the great public schools are still uncertain as to whether this game or that should be forbidden or encouraged.

To my mind the great majority miss the point. It is not a question of whether one game is as good, or as pleasant, or as beneficial to health as another, but what qualities it requires and whether those qualities will help to build character.

Seen in this light, the question of what games a man should play is of very little importance—he has probably other and more important interests in his life and his games are merely recreations. But the question of what games our boys are to play, if they are to grow up strong and manly, is of the utmost importance.

To do so, surely they must play many games, and by many games I mean games in which mere mastery of technique is not sufficient without physical courage.

We have all known boys and men who should have been magnificent footballers or cricketers, but failed because they would not face a heavy charge, a forward rush, or a fast bowler on a bumpy wicket. To many these things present no fears—they have other lessons to learn; but for

PAINS IN LEFT SIDE AND BACK

Other Troubles Women Often Have Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Lachine, Quebec.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because I suffered with pains in my left side and back, and with weakness and other troubles woman so often have. I was this way about six months. I saw the Vegetable Compound advertised in the 'Montreal Standard' and I have taken four bottles of it. I was a very sick woman and I feel so much better I would not be without it. I also use Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. I recommend the medicine to my friends and I am willing for you to use my letter as a testimonial."—Mrs. M. W. Rose, 580 Notre Dame Street, Lachine, Quebec.

Doctor Said An Operation

Provost, Alberta.—"Perhaps you will remember sending me one of your books a year ago. I was in a bad condition and would suffer awful pains at times and could not do anything. The doctor said I could not have children unless I went under an operation. I read testimonials of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the papers and a friend recommended me to take it. After taking three bottles I became much better and now have a bonny baby girl four months old. I do my housework and help a little with the chores. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to my friends and am willing for you to use this testimonial letter."—Mrs. A. A. Adams, Box 54, Provost, Alberta, C.

Peaceful Nights for Baby and You

Mothers everywhere are finding in Woodward's Gripe Water a perfect remedy for babies' stomach and teething pains and disorders, and are anxious to pass on the good news.

Mrs. S. L. Marsh, 83, Littleton Street, Earlsfield, London, S.W. 18, writes—"Please find enclosed a photograph of my youngest son, age one year and nine months. . . . The reason why I am sending it to you is because I cannot speak too highly of Woodward's Gripe Water. My son has got all his teeth and we have never had one restless night with him, thanks to Woodward's Gripe Water."

Woodward's Gripe Water gives almost instant relief from griping, stomachache and teething pains, wards off convulsions and diarrhoea and allows baby to enjoy sound sleep. It is also a valuable remedy for colic and stomach disorders in children and adults. It is free from opiates and pleasant to take.

Native Forces Deserting to French Army--Japanese Parliamentary Buildings Destroyed by Fire--Newfoundland Makes Record Time from St. John's to Halifax

SPANIARDS EFFECT A LANDING

FEZ, Sept. 17.—The Spaniards are reported to have effected a landing on Alhucemas Bay, occupying a strip nearly two miles deep and flanking the positions formerly occupied on the Morro Nueva Peninsula.

PRINCE STILL IN CHILE

VAPARAISSO, Chile, Sept. 18.—The Prince of Wales, still more or less a willing sojourner in Chile, has returned to Valparaiso from his futile attempt to cross the Andes. It has been raining steadily, which means heavy snow falls in the mountains. From present indications the Prince will be obliged to remain here for some days.

"NEWFOUNDLAND" MAKES A RECORD RUN

HALIFAX, Sept. 1.—The Furness liner Newfoundland, which left St. John's yesterday morning at seven o'clock, arrived here this afternoon at five o'clock, making the run in 34 hours, which is believed to be a record. The vessel averaged 15.8 knots. The Newfoundland is from Liverpool for Boston via St. John's and Halifax, and had on board the Newfoundland Parliamentarians en route to the session of the Inter-Parliamentary Union at Washington next month. They included Premier W. S. Monroe, Hon. P. C. Alderdice, Hon. K. K. Bishop, Hon. A. B. Morine, and Hon. W. J. Higgins.

LABOUR'S POLICY IN CANADA

SUPERTWIST was conceived, perfected and named by Goodyear, and is used only in Goodyear Tyres.

STRENGTH—or ELASTICITY ?

SUPERTWIST Results Furnish the Answer

Goodyear Lorry Tyres cushion better and wear longer.

SUPERTWIST is the extra-elastic, extra-durable cord material developed by Goodyear expressly for the balloon tyre.

Like the new-type tyre itself SUPERTWIST is made to absorb the shocks through a stout springiness, rather than to resist it purely through strength.

When a Goodyear Tyre made of SUPERTWIST strikes a stone, the elastic cords give to the impact—yield, stretch and recover—like rubber bands.

Elastic, easy riding and easy steering, to-day's Goodyear Tyres made with SUPERTWIST are also a marvel of endurance and economy.

And Goodyears are the only tyres made with SUPERTWIST.

Delegates' Story of the Dole

(I.C.M.)

It has been said about the dole in the past few years has been a story of the unemployed classes. Such things there was, of considerable misunderstanding about the dole, and opposing parties; it is their purpose to place upon it just such misconceptions as they can find to suit their own particular views. Such is the way of opposing parties; it is their purpose to place upon it just such misconceptions as they can find to suit their own particular views. Such is the way of opposing parties; it is their purpose to place upon it just such misconceptions as they can find to suit their own particular views.

desirable, and shows how had the times in England really are. It is this poverty that alarms the leaders, and it is to prevent it that the Labour Party seek power. If it can be prevented then the sooner the better, and if the Labour Party can accomplish the task, they are worthy of a trial. It ought not to be necessary for such a large proportion of the population of the British Isles to receive relief. The strain is too great upon the producers, and can only result in defeat. A nation cannot flourish under such conditions.

As therefore will be seen, the Delegates' definition of the much-talked-of dole is very instructive, and in a few words they have cleared the atmosphere of the mists which beclouded it. Some of us at least were under the misapprehension that the whole amount was a charity and hence a dole.

Admitting then the fact that one million people are idle in Britain, and are being paid weekly amounts, does it not seem strange, yes! does it not seem stupid, that some return be not demanded from them in the shape of labour? It is understood that housing is in demand, and that thousands of families are quartered in cramped tenements. This is not the mere story of the delegates; it is the story of the British press. The blame for this is placed upon the trade unions, who in their blinded zeal and unfair policy tie up industry. There are not union men enough to supply the demand, and there are sufficient outside the unions to do so. It should be enough for the unions that they get first place in the labour market, and that all their members be employed; but to hinder others from being employed simply because they wish to exercise their personal right, is unfair, and is contrary to the principles of British fair play. While we agree that trade unions have done good, we at the same time must regret that in their zeal they have gone to such extremes as to defeat their own ends, and to frustrate their real object, and thereby engender ill-will among the working classes; but what we have said has equal application to unskilled labour.

Prizes for Trade

SCHEME TO PUSH EMPIRE COMMERCE. Suggestions for remedying the industrial depression and for developing the export trade of the country have been received by Mr. Stanley Machin, President of the Association of British Chambers of Commerce, in response to his recent invitation to members of Chambers of Commerce. Among the number is a scheme by Mr. F. H. Robertson, of the Jamaica Chamber of Commerce, which has been decided to bring to the notice of the Council and of Chambers of Commerce throughout the country, with a view to securing their opinion on it.

The Too-Popular Dollar Bill

The dollar is a great worry to Uncle Sam, just as it is to most private citizens, because it does not last long enough. The dollar bills are wearing out so quickly that the printing-machines can not keep up with the demand. The economists in Washington tell us that the printing bills for turning out so much new paper money are becoming a real drain on the taxpayer. Last year, according to a writer for the New York Times, the Government made five new one-dollar bills for every man, woman, and child in the country, at a total expense of $4,000,000. A while ago, the Treasury experts began to use silver "cart-wheel" dollars so as to save the wear and tear on the dollar bills. This campaign, according to all newspaper reports, was a flat failure. Now comes the appeal to use more two-dollar bills and fewer ones. We now have in circulation only 8 two-dollar bills for every 100 one-dollar bills. If we were to raise the proportion to 26 twos for each 100 ones, it would save the Government, if we may trust the mathematicians of the Times writer, a round million dollars per annum. We are now using seven times as many dollar bills as we did seven years ago, and our population has not increased in any such proportion. An explanation is offered by the Indianapolis Star:

"The war developed the cash-and-carry principle in the merchandising; with more demand for ready cash. The automobile probably ranks as the most influential contributing factor toward a greater demand for dollar currency. The city motorist uses it in his dealings with the filling station, and the long-distance tourist must have it in the less populous districts, where he sometimes has difficulty in getting the larger bills changed. The increased population and the larger per capita earning capacity, with a more liberal margin of daily spending money, require more cash."

So people have acquired the habit of carrying a large number of ones, instead of fewer bills of higher denominations. The United States Bureau of Efficiency issues a public statement declaring that "the foolish superstition that the two-dollar bill is unlucky should be brushed aside in the interest of money efficiency." Everybody is asked to use the least possible of bills in making change, in order to—

STREET DECORATED FOR MURDERER'S REPRIEVE.
Remarkable scenes were witnessed at Sheffield when the news came that Arthur Gleave, the young Hillsborough plate-layer, who was under sentence of death at Armlay Gaol, Leeds, for the murder of his wife, had been reprieved. The sentence was commuted to penal servitude for life. Streamers were festooned across the streets in the neighbourhood of his home, and his friends were overjoyed. No fewer than 25,000 signatures had been appended to a petition on his behalf. Many of them were obtained in Sheffield, and a great number came from Stockport, Gleave's native place. Gleave was naturally delighted when the news was communicated to him, but he remarked that it was not unexpected. The plea of insanity was set up at his trial and again in the Appeal Court. The defence was that Gleave lost his head through what he considered to be the baneful influence of his mother-in-law and his wife.

Walking Centenarian
TWIN BROTHER WHO HAS LIVED TO BE 100.
Not one single day's illness has been experienced by Mr. John Large, of Hampton-in-Arden, who celebrated his hundredth birthday recently. He has one recipe for longevity. "With me," he confesses, "it's just happened, and I don't know how. May be it is because I never learned to smoke. Maybe, it's because I've always made it a rule never to drink more than one glass of beer at once." Mr. Large is one of twins, his brother living until he was 79. He started work at fourteen in London, whither he travelled by coach, and has been many things in his time, including stationmaster and farmer. Eight of his nine children are living, the eldest being 72 and the youngest 53. He says he can still "walk some of his youngsters off their legs."

The Prince's Cash Values
There is an interesting comment on the Prince of Wales' visit to South America by Mr. Thomas Brewer, editor of the South American Journal, quotes the Star, "who says that last December there was 500 millions of British money invested in Argentina, Chile, and Uruguay."
"We have compiled statistics relating to £233,963,212 of this, or nearly one-half, and we find that between June 20 and this week's Stock Exchange settlement the appreciation has amounted to no less than £12,059,073."
"We know of nothing that has happened during the last two months to justify the rise except the sentimental one of the Prince's visit."
"The Railways are doing well, but neither better nor worse than at June last, and dividend and other prospects have not changed, so that one can attribute the big increment in values to the attention which the visit of H.R.H. has drawn to their merits."

FORTUNES PAID IN INCOME TAX IN UNITED STATES.
Some idea of the enormous wealth possessed by the leading business and professional men of the United States may be gathered from the Federal Income-tax returns, which are now made public. The decision to disclose these returns a year ago was received with mixed feelings, for not only were the wealthy embarrassed, but those who exaggerated their incomes for various reasons were liable to exposure by anyone who wished to pry into their affairs. This year the Ford Motor Company heads the list with a payment of $2,298,632, which is $400,000 more than last year in spite of the decreased rate, and it indicates a net income of $28,000,000. Mr.

Henry Ford paid $521,761, indicating a personal income of approximately $1,000,000. Mr. Edsel Ford's contribution was $431,611, while Mr. J. D. Rockefeller's amounted to $1,055,539. Other payments by "big-business" interests were: Mr. J. P. Morgan, $194,875; Mr. F. W. Woolworth, $257,389; Mr. Otto Kahn, the banker, $273,355; United States Steel Corporation, $2,201,043; and Mr. Andrew Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury, $376,521. Film celebrities contributed heavily, Douglas Fairbanks paying $36,430; Gloria Swanson, $11,415; Mary Pickford, $2,815. Charlie Chaplin, however, paid the surprisingly low amount of $63. This is due to "business activities, which have consumed his capital."

STANDARD OIL OF N.J. Business and assets of the Standard Oil of New Jersey were more than tripled from 1912, the year following dissolution, to 1923, according to A. C. Bedford, chairman of the board of directors, in an address to the trading class for employees conducted by the company. "As an illustration of the progress made by this company," he said, "let me give you a comparison of the business done in 1912 and 1923. In 1912 the total business was approximately 38,000,000 barrels of 50 gallons each and the net assets were something like $300,000,000. In 1923 the total business was over 116,000,000 barrels and the net assets were $944,000,000. "In other words, the company has increased its business as well as its net assets three times since 1912, thereby keeping pace with the great growth of the industry, and at the same time has made itself a complete and balanced entity. There is equal opportunity, if not greater, for our assets to increase and I think you will see as great a change in years to come as in the early history of the industry."

WILLYS-OVERLAND Willys-Overland has issued its detailed consolidated statement for six months ended June 30, 1925. Net profit after depreciation, interest expenses of new models, federal taxes, etc., was $9,148,634 equal to $41.49 a share earned on 220,490 shares of 7 p.c. preferred stock and after regular 3 1/2 p.c. semi-annual preferred dividend requirements to $3.70 a share (par $5) earned on 2,284,644 shares of outstanding common stock. This compares with $2,781,692 after charges, but before federal taxes, or $12.61 a share on preferred and 88 cents a share on common in first half of 1924. Accumulated dividends on preferred stock amounted to $6,559,728 on June 30, 1925.

SEAMAN ILL.—A seaman of S. S. Newfoundland, named Herbert Lambton, was taken seriously ill shortly before the ship sailed and had to be conveyed to hospital. He is suffering from appendicitis but is expected to be well enough to join his ship when she returns from Boston.

STEWART-WARNER Stewart-Walker Speedometer corporation's radio department is meeting with success beyond expectations, according to President Smith, who states the next two weeks probably will see enough orders on the books to keep the radio department operating at capacity for the remainder of 1925. Capacity of the department was substantially increased about a month ago to meet demand. Success in radio, with unusual activity in automobile accessory lines, leads to predictions from officials that 1925 will be a banner year in the company's history.

PAIGE-DETROIT. Net income of Paige-Detroit Motor Car company (including branches) for seven months ended July 31, 1925, was $2,433,854 after interest and depreciation but before federal taxes. July net income was $231,280 before federal taxes although plants were closed over half the month while making factory changes preparatory to bringing out new models. Cash resources on August 23 totaled $4,832,000. August production approximated 4,500 Paige and Jewett cars, practically double the output of August, 1924. Although operations are back to normal, company is still far behind on orders.

BEST EXCEPT DURING WAR: MARRIAGE SLUMP. The fact that the birth rate for the third quarter of this year was not more than that of the corresponding quarter of last year, which was the lowest recorded in any second quarter during the war years 1919-1921, is revealed by the Registrar-General's report relating to England and Wales, issued as a White Paper. It is also disclosed that there was a further decline in the number of marriages during the first quarter. The number of persons married during the period referred to was 92,143, a decrease of 63,746 over the preceding quarter, and of 1,629 over the corresponding quarter of 1924. This corresponds to an annual rate of 8.7 per thousand as compared with an average for the first quarter of the past 10 years of 12.7. The figures correspond to an annual rate of 18.4, as compared with the past 10 years' average of approximately 21 for both the first and the second quarters.

PACIFIC OIL.

Reports Net Equal to $2.52 a Share
 In Half Year—Gross Earnings 43.5 p.c. Above Corresponding Period of 1924—Net Was $8,122,901 After Charges, Against $5,506,907 Last Year.

Pacific Oil net profits in the first six months of 1925 were the largest for a first half year's operations in the company's history with the exception of the first half of 1921. Net earnings in this period were about equally spread over each quarter. Gross, however, was slightly larger in the second quarter of 1925 than in the first. The company in the June quarter reported gross at $5,080,124, as contrasted with $5,635,902 in the corresponding period of 1924, an increase of $2,444,222, or 43.4 p.c. After expenses, depreciation and depletion and reserve for Federal taxes, net was $4,073,702, an increase of $1,153,968, or 41 p.c.

Gross earnings for the half year amounted to $15,987,347, an increase of $4,834,878 over the corresponding period of last year. Here the increase was 43.5 p.c. After all charges, including depreciation, depletion and taxes, net for the half year was $8,122,901.

In the first six months of 1924 net was $5,806,807, while the first half of 1923 showed $4,535,189, and the first six months of 1922 produced net of $6,806,451. In the first six months of 1921 Pacific Oil reported net earnings at $9,985,193.

Earned $2.52 a Share.
 June quarter earnings were equivalent to $1.16 a share on the 3,500,000 shares of no par value outstanding, or exactly the amount shown in the first three months of this year. Thus net for the half year was equivalent to $2.32 a share. In the June quarter of 1924 the company earned 82 cents a share, and reported $1.66 in the first half. Net in the first half of 1923 was equivalent to $1.29 a share, $1.95 was shown in the first six months of 1922 and $2.85 in the six months ended June 30, 1921. Compared with the full year earnings in 1924 and 1925, surplus in the first half of 1925 makes a very favorable showing. In the full twelve months of 1924 Pacific Oil earned $3.40 a share, while $2.52 was reported in 1923.

It is rather a favorable commentary on the management that close to 50 p.c. of the increase in gross in the half year was conserved for surplus available for the stock. Thus while gross gained $4,834,878 over last year surplus after all charges and reserves increased $2,217,085. The company paid $5,280,000 in dividends in the half year, or $1.50 a share, and carried nearly $3,000,000 to surplus.

Pacific Oil stock selling at 53 1/2, paying a $3 dividend, yields approximately 5 1/2 p.c. Like other oils it is now near the year's low, 52 1/2 on March 30, and is off 1 1/4 points from this year's high recorded on January 31.

The company was formed in late 1920 for the purpose of acquiring the oil interests of the Southern Pacific railroad comprising 258,000 acres of land in California and 200,800 shares of Associated Oil company stock, representing a controlling interest in that company.

Sculptor as Waiter

PROMISING CAREER SPOILED BY THE WAR.

The vicissitudes of fortune have been experienced in a remarkable manner by "Mac," the handy man of the Robin Hood Inn, Kingston Vale. "Mac" is really Mr. J. Crossland McClure, to whom, 19 years ago, King George gave sittings in Buckingham Palace for a statue in Coronation robes, that was subsequently erected at Madras. His reputation as a sculptor was first made, however, by the beautiful South African war memorial at Leicester. Other of his works adorn Whiteley's Stores in London and Usher's Hall, Edinburgh. Six years ago, following a series of misfortunes, Mr. McClure became "Mac" of the Robin Hood. His professional work gradually disappeared with the war and, rejected as unfit for military service, he entered a munition factory in Kingston, Vale, near the Robin Hood. After the Armistice Mr. McClure became an "out-of-work" with no capital to resume his career as a sculptor. He found work as a gardener, and later as assistant to a sculptor friend. When the friend left for Australia at the end of 1919 Mr. McClure was again unemployed. Soon afterwards he became handyman and waiter at the inn. Although over 50, Mr. McClure hopes that fortune may yet restore him to the sculptor's studio. But for that considerable capital would be required.

Montreal's Growth

Greater Montreal has reached a population of 1,028,000, so we may claim to be a great city, if cities are measured on the population basis. Fortunately, Montreal has other matters of which to be proud, though population is a good basis for pride. It is only necessary to look around the city to note the great strides which have been made since the close of the war. Throughout the city what would have been considered giant apartment houses previous to the war now rear their heads, and are a credit to the city. The streets are kept clean, thanks to a vigilant civic administration, and when we have built several subways, elevated the Canadian National railway tracks, built several incinerators, we will have no reason to feel that we are behind other big American cities.—The Review.

SLATTERY "KNOCKED DOWN" SIX TIMES BY BERLENBACH IN 10th AND 11th ROUNDS.

Winner Liberally Cheered, But Slattery Given Long Ovation.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—The world's light-heavyweight championship which has perched atop five heads in the last five years, withstood the challenge of youthful Jimmy Slattery, of Buffalo, N.Y., under the sturdy defence of Paul Berlenbach, rugged title holder, of Astoria, N.Y., before a throng of 35,000 at the New York American League Baseball Park last night.

The stout-hearted Irish boy from Buffalo, just 21 years old, went down in the eleventh round of a fifteen-round battle under the terrific punches of the champion after gamely fighting back under five heads in the last five rounds, but he refused to go down, and inspired by the tremendous applause of the audience, the challenger came back with a rally in the fourth, fifth and sixth which drove the champion to the defence.

Slattery was groggy at the end of both the second and third rounds, but he came back so strongly in the fifth that the crowd was in an uproar and straw hats came from all directions as the bell found Berlenbach on the defensive.

But the dogged Berlenbach was merely biding his time. Soon after the start of the tenth Slattery went down for the first time under a savage left. Berlenbach pursued his foe with a volley of lefts and rights, from which the fleeing Slattery could find no cover, and twice more he went down.

Slattery, fighting the first fifteen round bout of his career, sagged to the floor under a terrific left at the start of the eleventh. He was no sooner on his feet than Berlenbach floored him again with a pile-driving left. The Buffalo youth, taking a count of nine, was barely able to rise. He reeled into the ropes near Berlenbach's corner, and the champion smothered him with gloves as he sagged on the ropes. Then the fight ended, one minute and twenty-eight seconds after the start of the round.

Berlenbach left the ring with liberal applause, but it was nothing to the loudest ovation for Slattery, who, weighing only 161 1/2 to the champion's 172, had measured up to the expectations of a flinty throng.

Frankie Schoell, (149) Buffalo, won a judges' verdict over Harry Galfrud (152), Brooklyn, in a 12-round semi-final. Tommy Loughran (169), won a judges' verdict over Young Marullo (170), in a fast 8-rounder.

Reforming Turkey's Police
 THE COPS IN CONSTANTINOPLE HAVE TO LOSE THEIR WHISKERS.

Turkey is certainly slow in making changes, but she is coming into line. Ordinary women there may now go about without veils up to their eyes while on the streets, and European clothes are more general. But the most radical change of all has just been ordered. The Police of Constantinople are to lose their whiskers. The order has gone forth that they must chop them off. There is to be a paid and uniformed police force and the men are to have clean faces or mustaches at most. The long staffs are to be replaced with batons and the men must no more go about rapping on the sidewalks to let everyone know that they are coming. That has been the custom hitherto in Turkey. The watchman in any old costume that he cared to wear, came along at night rapping with his staff and making a clatter. This let the good folks in bed know that the watch was on his job, but it also gave warning to the rogues, who would beat a hasty retreat with their feet before the whiskers came round the corner. Whiskers are all right, but hardly on a policeman's must. There used to be a policeman on the St. Lawrence street from Ontario street down to the market many years ago, and he had the red whiskers which he was very proud of. He would finger them at odd ruminative moments, and they lent majesty to his presence. But one day he tried to arrest a female Tartar at the St. Lawrence Market and she caught him by the whiskers and held on like grim death. It took about half an hour to pry her loose from the whiskers, and after that the constable tucked his whiskers under his coat when on duty. The late Chief Hughes, once gave an order that all the long whiskers on the force should be trimmed, which was generally obeyed. One well-known officer, with a long flowing beard, would not part with his cherished pelt, however, and when he went down to the City Hall to report, the whiskers were tucked away under his vest. He did not need to wear a necktie. There are no whiskers on the force to-day, and even Turkey is getting into the doubtful style.

SPEAKING OF THAT FALL WARDROBE.

The only real failure, someone has said, is to make the same mistake twice. Just imagine being wise enough to stop at twice!

I think I would change that to, "The only real success is to gradually come to recognize your own mistakes and cut down the number of them."

I have just gotten rid of one of my unbelieved mistakes. It was emblazoned in a dress. I handed it on to someone to whom I hope it will not be a mistake. For in frocks, as every woman knows, one person's mistake may be another person's success.

The Power of the Written Word.

I am a great believer in the power of the written word to fix a thing in your mind. If you write a thing down once you do more to engrave it on your mind than if it slipped in and out of your thoughts a dozen times.

And so I wrote down a warning against this mistake, and while at it passed on to a few more. Maybe they won't touch your case at all and maybe they will. Anyway they may suggest some of your own self warnings to you, so here they are:

Don't ever buy a dress if you are in the least doubtful about the neckline. Nothing is more disappointing than an unbecoming neckline or a collar that won't lie properly. Don't fool yourself into thinking you can get it fixed. You may fuss with it indefinitely but it is very doubtful if you ever get it to suit.

No Color Is Becoming.

Don't ever lose sight of the fact that no color is becoming to you, only some particular shade or tint of that color, and that you might as well get the most unbecoming color you can think of as the wrong shade of your favorite color. And that goes for white, too. White wool or a creamy white silk is much easier to wear than white cotton.

A thoroughly good street dress is more important than anything else. If you can't have but one gown have it a good smart cloth dress and you will get more out of it than anything else. If you have several gowns, reduce the number and have that cloth gown better than usual. But be sure it's a becoming shade. Now we wear so few white collars it is absolutely fatal to get an unbecoming dark color.

Not Much Summer After All.

If you live in a temperate climate don't lose sight of the fact that summer isn't anything very lasting. The season called summer is short anyway and even in the months we call summer there are few days when one wears really thin clothes compared to the many when a light weight wool or a heavier cotton is comfortable.

Don't forget that what are now known as sport and semi sport clothes can be used on a great many more occasions than dress up frocks.

Don't forget the vital importance of hats. Hats and necklines together frame a face and get more attention than all the rest of your clothes combined.

wood that fresh beetles are prevented from working their way in."

James Watt's Workshop

Great interest is being taken in a reproduction at the Science Museum at South Kensington of James Watt's garret workshop.

Through a plate-glass window the contents of the room are seen practically as they were left at the time of the great engineer's death in 1819. Copying machines, a lathe, and busts are among the larger objects, and there are many personal things, such as Watt's leather apron, his towel, clothes brush, cooking utensils, coal-scuttle, and the coal that was left in it.

In a glass case outside the room are typical examples of the thousands of objects that are in the boxes and drawers, including the dinner and dessert plates on which Watt took his meals in the workshop whenever he wished to remain uninterrupted. Here, too, is a beam compass, with his name inscribed on it, a wax impression of his seal, and a packet of copying powder for making ink for the press copying process he patented in 1779.

The contents of the workshop have been presented to the nation by Major J. M. Gibson-Watt, the present head of the family.

bane printings a number of errors occur, such as double overprints, overprint reading upwards, or sideways.

From 1907 onwards the stamps were printed in Melbourne by lithography, and in these issues all sorts of varieties of perforation occur. The 2d. and 4d. stamps, with a compound perforation (11 by 12½) are of great rarity, as apparently only one trial sheet of each was so perforated.

Prior to 1901 Queensland stamps were used in Papua, and these can be distinguished by the postmark "N.G." or "B.N.G." These are now scarce.

German New Guinea.

In October, 1914, Australian troops captured German New Guinea and the German stamps in use were overprinted "G.R." and the currency changed to British values. These German stamps were of the well-known general type for the German colonies, and showed a picture of the Kaiser's yacht "Hohenzollern," and the denominations ranged from 3 pence to 5 marks. The 5 marks stamps surcharged 5 shillings are now quite valuable. As there was a shortage of stamps various devices were resorted to, including the overprinting of registration labels.

After the war the captured German portion was mandated to Australia, and the whole is now known as the "Territory of New Guinea."

The Decline of British Fisheries

At first glance the average man in the street may not feel much concerned; he may think it is a matter primarily affecting fishermen and fishermen. He may not realize that it is one in which he himself is directly concerned, or that the position of the fishing industry is, for many reasons, of vital importance to the very existence of this country and of the Empire.

In the present sea power implies air power. The air power is now essential to sea power, may be freshly recognized without going to discuss whether or how far the former may in course of time supersede the latter. Air power is, however, only a recent and single element of sea power. A feeding fleet as well as a fighting fleet and a productive national maritime population, of which the sea fisheries are the nurseries, have always been so necessary to sea power that for centuries the fishermen have been the backbone of our naval supremacy—Gervais Rentoul, M.P. in the London Nineteenth Century.

Stamps of New Guinea

Before the war the island of New Guinea was divided between Britain, Holland and Germany. From 1901, when the first stamps were issued, until 1906 the British part was known as British New Guinea; in 1906 this portion of the island was put under the authority of Australia and the name changed to Papua.

The design of the stamps, however, has remained the same from 1901 until the present day being a picture of a "lakatol," or native canoe, which is a curious punt-shaped craft with two huge sails fashioned in the shape of lobster claws and made of coconut matting. In all denominations of the earlier issues the central picture is in black, while the border which shows the name and value is in color. The stamps are of large size and extremely attractive. The name of the island on the earlier issues is printed as British New Guinea, while on the later issues it is Papua.

While the original design has been used there are numerous varieties of printing and paper that collectors make a specialty of including in their albums. The early engraved issues occur on both thick and thin paper, and there are two variations of watermark, thus making four collectible sets of each issue. When the name of the territory was changed in 1906 from British New Guinea to Papua, supplies were overprinted with the new name both at Port Moresby and at Brisbane. The type used in the two places differed considerably, and the two prints are easily distinguishable. In the British

Death Knell of the Death Watch

"I had a talk at the Imperial College of Science and Technology with an assistant of Professor Lefroy, who has just devised a solution expected to put an end to the ravages of the 'death watch' beetle," says the London correspondent of the Yorkshire Post.

"This little creature, only a quarter of an inch long, spends its life burrowing about in old wood-work, until the infected wood becomes riddled and rotten. Its familiar ticking sound is produced by a small club-shaped extension of the antennae, with which it knocks on any surrounding woodwork in order to call its mate.

"Many old buildings embodying wooden beams and rafters have been

WHAT IS CHIROPRACTIC?

IT IS NOT MEDICINE NOT SURGERY
NOT OSTEOPATHY

It is a scientific method of adjusting the cause of Disease without drugs or instruments, based on a correct knowledge of Anatomy, and especially the nervous system. The Chiropractic idea is that the cause of disease is in the person afflicted, and the adjustment in correcting the wrong that is producing it. The function of every organ in the body is controlled by mental impulses from the brain, which it transmits through the nerves. Any impingement of these nerves interfering with the transmission of mental impulses, (life force) which flows from the brain, results in an abnormal function called Disease. This interference is produced by a subluxated or Displaced vertebrae pressing upon the nerves as they pass out from the spinal cord.

The Trained Adjuster is able to locate the point of obstruction or interference and, by means of adjusting the subluxated vertebrae, corrects the cause, and normal conditions, or health, is the result. Investigation costs nothing, and means health and happiness. Chiropractic has gained its success by helping those cases that are regarded as incurable. So always

VICEROY ON INDIAN PROBLEMS.

Highly important statements were contained in the speech with which the Earl of Reading, Viceroy of India, opened the new session of the All-India Legislature. The speech was the more interesting, because Lord Reading has only just arrived in India from England, where, as our readers are aware, he discussed with Ministers the problems which are agitating the vast Empire committed to his care as representative of the King's Emperor. His Excellency's review of Indian affairs was in the main hopeful. The Viceroy dealt with satisfaction on the settlement of the Sikh controversy, on the progress of agriculture, on the works of the various commissions. He explained the Government's policy with regard to a central co-ordination organization for agricultural development. He announced the appointment of a Royal Commission on Indian Currency and Finance. Dealing with his conversations in London, Lord Reading declared the Earl of Birkenhead's statement on India in the House of Lords had not been fully appreciated in India as a message of sympathetic arrangement. It indicated the complete adherence of British political opinion to the policy embodied in the Reforms Act.

British statesmen were, however, determined not to yield to pressure and make premature concessions, and through friendly co-operation alone could India advance to her goal.

The time for the revision of the Constitution had not yet arrived, but the time was certainly opportune for working the machinery of the reforms, the Government of India having accepted the view of the Muddiman report that the Constitution should be amended where necessary, in order to remove defects in its working, on the lines recommended by the majority of the Committee. The Opposition further should remember that, if the British Government were persuaded that there had been genuine co-operation by responsible Indian politicians, the re-examination of the Constitution need not necessarily be postponed to 1929. Was it not worth while, he asked, to make a real attempt to test the system at present established in a suitable passage of his speech, Lord Birkenhead disclaimed on behalf of the British Parliament, any monopoly in the art of framing Constitutions, and he invited Indians to contribute, if they could do so, their own solution. He gave an assurance that such a contribution would be most carefully examined. Lord Reading mentioned that recruitment by the Secretary of State for the Indian Educational Service, Indian Agricultural Service, Indian Veterinary Service, the buildings and roads branch of the Indian Service, and in Bombay and Burma for the Indian Forest Service, had ceased. In these important branches of administration Ministers would be authorized to start building up by new recruitment their own Provincial services, subject only to such restrictions as experience had shown to be necessary for safeguarding the integrity, independence, and efficiency of the public services. Concluding on a personal note, Lord Reading said his term of office was approaching an end, and he pleaded for good will and co-operation, which offered the only path to the Promised Land.—News of the World.

Suicide and Age

Suicide, in the wage-earning group of the American and Canadian populations, is approximately two and one-half times as frequent among men as among women. We are told by The Statistical Bulletin of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. (New York). This is shown, we are told, by what has happened among the more than 16,000,000 industrial policyholders of the company. We read:

"The above ratio relates to all ages combined. When the suicide data are studied by age periods, it is shown that the ratio of deaths of males to those of females varies greatly at different periods of life, and that the preponderance of self-murder among males increases perceptibly with advancing age.
"Suicide does not assume much numerical importance until age 20 is reached. Between 20 and 24, the death-rate for males approximates one and one-half times that for females. Between ages 25 and 34, the ratio is a little more than two to one; during each of the next 10-year periods, it is about four to one; at 35 to 44 years, it approximates five to one; and after age 45, there are about seven times as many suicides among men as among women.
"One age period, namely, 15 to 19 years, stands out in bold relief from all the rest. This is the only time of life in which suicide is more common among females. In 1923, the suicide rate of young women of these ages insured in the Metropolitan's Industrial Department was 4.3 per 100,000—or nearly two and one-half times that for males (1.7).
"The above data relates to white policyholders only. Suicide is much less frequent among colored persons."

Bishop Gore on Public Spirit

"You know the immense place which to-day is held by what are called social questions. You know how possible it is in a spirit of cynicism to isolate ourselves, and, instead of being public-spirited, and taking, according to our measure and capacity, an active part in the causes of human welfare, to isolate ourselves," says Bishop Gore in a sermon reported in the Church Times.
"You know what the Housing question means. You know what the care of Motherhood means. You know what the prevention of Infant Mortality means.
"You know what education, and the after-care of those who, unhappily, at this moment in such vast numbers are unable to find work when they are dismissed from school—you know what that means. You know what the relation of classes—of Capital and Labour—means.
"There are people who are very energetic in these causes; and there are vast numbers of people who are not public-spirited at all. We criticize, we utter our cynical maxims; we do nothing in fact.
"Revolution is a disastrous thing; but at least as disastrous, nay, more disastrous, is acquiescence in things as they are. They have got to be altered. We have got to carry on the struggle to change the world, till the spirit of brotherhood is recognized in all the relations of class to class, of race to race, of colour to colour.
"And the people who are to do it are the ordinary people, who are possessed with the spirit of Christianity, which is the spirit of brotherhood."

The Man on the Job

(Canada) It's near the job or its wages. That determines the worth of a man. It's the faith and the courage he uses in doing the best that he can. It's the vision that carries him onward. To success with a heart all a thro'. For the man who is winning the honors. Is the man who is making the job. For no one will carry him upward. He must climb to the top by himself. If he falters or strays from a purpose He is apt to be left on the shelf. Though the job may be humble or menial. Irksome, distasteful, or lone. There's always some chap who can use it For an upward stepping stone. And though the way may be weary And rewards seem uncertain and slow, Demo Fortune is ready and waiting. For the chap full of hustle and go. Who bends to the task in dead earnest With a courage that no one can rob. For the job doesn't count in the struggle As much as the man on the job. So whether we toil for a living At a desk or a lathe or a loom, In the fields that are ripe for a harvest Or deep in a mine's leaden gloom, And whether we draw out ten thousand Or a paltry and mean forty bob, There's a job for the man who can make it: It's always the man,—not the job. —B.L.L.

Abolishing the Death Penalty

In the face of the greatest crime wars ever experienced by a civilized country, the U.S. League for the Abolition of Capital Punishment goes serenely on its way with its campaign. The plan is to introduce bills in the various legislatures, carrying the campaign into every state where either a gallows or an electric chair is now utilized. It is interesting to note that there are eight States where capital punishment has been abolished, while in four other States it had been abolished, but has since been re-established. It strikes one that these anti-capital punishment people are beginning at the wrong end. What they should do is to insist that these gunmen mend their ways. The evident difficulty in the United States is that the gunman kills and gets away with it, while in some other countries, notably England and Canada, the law gets away with the gunman. Quick trials and convictions, where guilty, without endless technicalities, is unquestionably the secret which makes for law and order in the British Isles and in Canada. Such glaring instances of a miscarriage of justice as the recent Scott case in Chicago would not be possible in either country mentioned. In the United States there is too much sobbing over the predicament in which the murderer finds himself and too little over the family of the victim. Money and flowers and such things poured in on R. T. Scott, but we did not hear that anybody paid any attention to the family of the drug clerk who he murdered in order that he might rob him.—Saturday night.

Flat or Fort?

CHINESE APARTMENT IN MONTREAL DEFENDED BY TRIPLE DOORS WITH STEEL BARS. MONTREAL, Sept. 11.—Triple doors of sturdy oak, reinforced with steel bars and huge bolts, barred the entrance of Royal Canadian Mounted Policemen who raided a Chinese flat here early to-day. When they had broken through a brick wall they found the flat deserted, but evidences of opium smoking were everywhere. Perched precariously on a ledge under the roof were four Chinese who finally consented to return to the flat when one mounted policeman asked them: "Coming down—or going down?" The Chinese are held at $500 bail each on charges of possessing opium smoking devices. A woman's purse was found in the flat and it is believed that the establishment was frequented by white addicts as well as Orientals. Add a heaping cupful of shredded coconut to cream caramels after taking them from the fire.

Communist Mutiny On French Cruiser.

A court-martial has pronounced sentence on four sailors of the cruiser Combarbe who were found guilty of having conspired against the authority of the commander. One of the accused was sentenced to four years' imprisonment, another to three years, and the other two to one year. The ship was on her way from Toulon to Naples, when the hands complained of the bad quality of the food. On arrival at Naples the principal grumblers were refused shore leave. The engine-room hands held a meeting and sent a deputation to the ward-room officer to ask the reason. The answer given was that only men whose conduct was good would be allowed to land. Thereon the meeting unanimously decided to refuse to get up steam when the ship was due to sail for Oran. Marines armed with rifles promptly surrounded the mutineers, who, yielding to the threat of force, finally went below. The ring-leaders were arrested and the ship sailed. The Communist organ, Humanite, printed a story of the incident at the time, which was promptly denied by the Ministry of Marine. A Communist origin of the revolt is strongly suspected. Similar cases of two seamen of the battleship Paris are shortly coming before a court-martial.—Reuter.

Should We Convert the Heathen?

(By ALFRED B. COOPER)

In connection with the serious difficulties in China, the influence of the missionaries of foreign missionary work has been much discussed recently, and a little straightened on this obviously important subject is therefore not out of place.
To those who take the Bible for their guide in all the affairs of life, the answer to the query "Are foreign missions a mistake?" is a foregone conclusion. They simply point to the words of Christ to His disciples: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."

Making Modern Europe.
They further point to the historical fact that, in the first century of our era, Paul the Apostle and his co-workers and successors interpreted that command so literally that they crossed the whole Roman Empire, from end to end, and from side to side, and thereby laid the foundation of modern Europe.

But such arguments, based upon the great Christian ideal, would not necessarily appeal to everyone. Many would still continue to say: "Why waste money, lives, energy on foreign missions, whilst the masses of our own country are still largely unevangelized? Would it not be better to centre all our energies on the redemption of the virtual heathenism to be found at our own doors, rather than upon remote countries like China and Central Africa?" This question appeals to many of us as highly reasonable, and it deserves a studied and careful answer.

If They Had Stayed at Home.
It will not be denied that the Jews had exactly this idea of their national duty. Some time elapsed before the Apostles realized that the gospel was for the world, and not only for themselves and the nation to which they belonged. Now, supposing the original spirit of exclusiveness had prevailed, what would have been the result?

We are apt to regard ourselves as disciples of a Christian nation. The descriptions on our very coins and stamps testify to this root idea. Our laws are mainly based upon Christian principles; our Sovereign is crowned with Christian rites; the basis of our Constitution is Christian. None can deny this. Yet it was not always so. The early Britons were probably nature worshippers; the Saxons and the Danes were worshippers of Odin and Thor. They were all pagans in the accepted sense of that word.

What was it that wrought the change, and evolved civilization out of barbarism? Surely missionaries from foreign countries. Had the early missionaries to the Britons, the later missionaries to the Saxons and Angles, stayed at home, had they considered it their paramount duty to work only for the good of their own land, where to-day would be the English-speaking world?

Pathfinders All!
To the absolutely selfish man altruism is a word which does not appear. But it is a word that appeals strongly to many men who are not Christians in the ecclesiastical sense. It means a spirit of universal brotherhood and helpfulness, and if the Christianity of the gospel does not advocate that, it advocates nothing.

Well, then, all men, according to the Christian ideal, being brothers, is it not my plain duty to give my "brothers" who are on a lower plane of thought, experience, hope, knowledge—yes, and morality—the benefit of those higher planes of thought and aspiration to which I myself have had access all my life?

But is it true that the missionaries achieve any such results? Quite recently the Prince of Wales journeyed through the region of the Niger. The first white man to explore that great river was Mungo Park, himself a missionary traveller, about a century ago. He found nothing but internecine warfare, cruelty unspeakable, and eventually lost his life.

Charles Darwin could hardly be suspected of missionary leanings, and in his "Journey of the Beagle" he described the natives of Tierra del Fuego as the most degraded specimens of humanity on earth, and wholly incapable of any human culture. He lived to confess his mistake. Several missionaries died at their hands, but eventually the miracle Darwin deemed utterly impossible was wrought, and Darwin himself saw and mar-velled at the result.

Robert Louis Stevenson went to the South Seas with the strongest prejudice against missionaries, but he also lived to retract. He met Chalmers and Brown, and wrote to his mother:
"I have become quite a missionary man these days."

In Westminster Abbey
The story of Fiji is a missionary epic, as are also the stories of Tonga, of the New Hebrides, of Kalavao, of Uganda, and of the outcasts of India, Livingstone and Moffat, were the makers of modern Africa, and tolled the death-knell of the slave trade, and their great work was continued by such men as Hannington, and Studd, the famous cricketer.

The biographies of such men, who were pioneers of civilization in the dark places of the earth, form a mass of evidence of the beneficent effect of missionary work which no jury on earth could ignore.

Always the missionaries have been the pathfinders, though unfortunately the paths they have made have been used by other and far different specimens of the white races. It is not the missionaries who make the trouble. It is the men who follow in their track, and do all they can to render their unselfish labours of no effect, who must bear the blame of subsequent trouble. Go into the nave of Westminster Abbey and read the inscription on the grave of David Livingstone. It is an answer to the flippant and often ignorant fibres against the missionary.

"Number One" Over Again
That there are hypocritical "converts," black, brown, yellow, and red, must be admitted. No missionary would deny it. There are a fair number of hypocrites with white skins as well. But no one who has ever judicially examined the educational and civilizing and industrial work of missionaries, its cumulative effect, its transforming power, has ever joined the flippant chorus of dis-parage. The evidence for the defence is unassailable.

Let us in conclusion, use Old Elisha's method of "reductio ad absurdum."
The proposition is this, then:
There are lots of heathens at home.
Stay at home and attend to them, since charity begins at home." Now let us see how it is reduced to an absurdity: "Do not waste time, money, energy upon foreign countries, but upon your own; not upon your country but your county; not upon your county but your town; not upon your town but your own street; not upon your street but upon your family; not upon your family but upon yourself."

It is the Gospel of Number One over again, and when the Christian churches take this view, they will instantly cease to be Christian. Conversely, the more the missionary spirit pulsates through the veins of the churches the more surely will their influence prevail and prosper both at home and abroad. Remember, Christianity is not a philosophy but a passion, not a theory but a loyalty. That is why missionary work will go on, whatever the difficulties to be overcome.

ON THE WATERS.

If bread is on the waters cast, some day it will return, and you,
who wish to break your fast, will then have loaves to burn.
No kindly action goes to waste, no
good is ever lost;
so help your neighbor if you'd taste the joy that waters do bring.

YAT-MAN
Wears a front. It is a joy serene, and high the human being knows, who strives to help the other guy as down the world he goes. You give a tramp a coddish ball, when he is sick and sore; and when he leaves your stately hall you may see him no more. He may not cross your path again in all the years to come, to ask you for some iron men, for prunes or chewing gum.
But providence will note the debt and pay she will accord; you never did a kindness yet that brought you no reward. Some day perchance you'll need a friend to help you change a tire, and lo, some delegate will lend the aid you much desire. Some man you've never seen before will cheerily arrive, and do the work that makes you sore, and barks your fingers five.
You drive away and you recall how you have given aid; that tramp who ate the coddish ball has now full payment made. He may be dead and in his grave, or haply he's in jail, but he returns the help you gave, his friendly thoughts prevail. The man who comforts those who weep in grief and pain and dole, will never lack a hand to help when he is in the hole.

Plan to brighten your house this winter with colorful new cushions, new draperies, or just bright bows for fruit.

Pompeian FOR BEAUTY

Aids to Beauty

The Pompeian Beauty Toilette has long been the choice of the loveliest women in every clime to accentuate their charms.

The use of Pompeian Beauty Powder will not change your looks but will greatly enhance those you already have.

If your skin lacks clearness or velvety smoothness, Beauty Powder will modify these faults—if it is naturally lovely then the correct shade of Pompeian will make you even more attractive.

To attain a creamy skin suffused with that delicate-glowing color which lends charm and bespeaks youthful beauty, you must choose the right shade of Powder and Rouge. Study your skin and select the tone that will harmonize with your natural coloring.

The best results are obtained by first using Pompeian Day Cream (vanishing) which forms an excellent base for Beauty Powder, causing it to adhere for hours.

Fish Age Facts

How long do fish live? Major F. S. Fowler, in a lecture before the London Zoological Society, gave some interesting data on a special study he has conducted on this subject.

An electric eel in the London Zoo, it was reported, lived twelve years. A European catfish in the private aquarium of the Duke of Bedford is fifty years old and shows little indication of weakness.

Other fish age figures given by Major Fowler (says a writer in 'Science') were: Carp, thirteen years; goldfish, twelve years; herring, four years; salmon, three years; bull frog, fifteen years; tree frog, fourteen years; female Spanish newt, eighteen years; and giant salamander, fifty-two years.

Sea Life Abounds

AMID CANADIAN ARCTIC ISLANDS.

Knowledge concerning Canada's Arctic regions increases each year, and it is of value to learn from competent observers that the picture of life there that rises to the mind's eye of outsiders is usually too sombre. Life, it is true, is strenuous, but the natural resources of the land and sea provide a living in return for hard work. The natives of the Far North are the wards of the nation and, in its efforts to protect the Eskimo from any adverse effects of advancing civilization, such as the depletion of wild life, the Department of the Interior through its North West Territories and Yukon Branch, sends out officers from time to time to investigate and report on conditions. One of these officers, Major L. T. Burwash, exploratory engineer and water-farer, and that the Eskimo of Baffin Island and the following account of sea life in the Arctic is taken from one of his reports.

Arctic waters do not differ greatly from those of more southern latitudes as the low temperatures affect little more than the surface and there is an abundance of life in most of the forms in which it appears in more promising surroundings.

The sea mammals are the mainstay of the country. Without the various types of seal, the white whale, narwhal and walrus, even the Eskimo could not hope to exist. At many points along the coast line these animals are found in sufficient numbers to guarantee a living for the native, while in a number of areas they exist far in excess of present day needs.

Of these the seal is by far the most important. From it the native secures a large part of his meat supply, summer clothing, boots, kayak and topek covers, dog harness, cordage and numerous other requirements, not the least of which is oil for fuel. Types of seal found are the jar (Phoca hispida), square flipper (Erignathus barbatus), harp (Phocoenoides), grey or fresh-water (Halichoerus grypus), and hood (Cistophora cristata). The jar seal is found in much greater numbers than the other types. This is fortunate because it supplies choicer meat, better light skins for clothing and better oil for fuel than do the others. The square flipper is generally associated with the herds of jar seal and is a very necessary feature in native life, for it supplies cordage and heavy leather for boots and kayaks. The harp seal is fairly plentiful in the more southerly waters and, if need be, could replace the square flipper in supplying Eskimo needs.

As the fresh-water seal is scarce it is considered somewhat of a luxury, supplying as it does, as skin much sought after for ornate clothing. The hood is also somewhat rare. It is used for the same purposes as the square flipper. Where seals are plentiful the Eskimo is not greatly concerned about walrus, white whale or narwhal. Owing to their great size, the latter animal can be made to supply large quantities of meat for winter use while the skins of the white whale and the narwhal are considered a delicacy and often form the "piece de resistance" in Eskimo hospitality. Years ago the walrus was a necessity on account of the ivory secured from its tusks from which were made many of the native hunting implements and other tools. The coming of the white trader, however, with his supply of iron and steel tools has made the walrus, in a sense, less necessary to Eskimo existence. Nevertheless it cannot be questioned that the sea mammals are the backbone of Eskimo life.

Mussels, clams, shrimps and sea crabs are all found in Arctic waters. With the exception of the crab they are all somewhat under-developed, due perhaps to the darkness of the long Arctic night, when they are more or less dormant. They are found in large quantities and form an important part of the food of the sea mammals and are used largely by the natives. The crabs when full grown measure as much as 11 inches over all.

Fish are not so abundant. It is true that a variety of salmon or Arctic trout is taken during the summer season in sufficient quantities to supply the seasonal needs of the natives and that cod is known to frequent at least

It is interesting to note that German and French textiles are offered freely in the London shops, while it is just as easy to buy a sweater made in Vienna as one made in Bradford or any other British centre. Of course the obvious thing to do, according to our free traders, is to buy the Austrian sweater or the French or the French and German textiles. Why should we worry about the Yorkshire towns that are without work, and therefore without buying power themselves?

Nobody in Bradford or any other town in Yorkshire has had even the temerity to suggest that the workmen in that district are being paid an excessive wage. On the contrary, it is contended that wages are too low, but at the same time there is a demand by the mill owners for a reduction of pay in order to meet cheap foreign competition. Up to date the mill hands have refused to accept the reduction, and the mills are at a standstill and the people workless.

The answer seems obvious. Yorkshire workmen and Yorkshire mills are admittedly turning out as good material as their competitors in France and Germany. There can be no complaint on that score. The difference in the selling price is based upon the difference in the wage. So it is that Yorkshire workmen will be obliged either to take less for their work—approximating the starvation basis now applying on the Continent or else lose the market right at their doors. That is unless the British Government apply some system of protecting their home market against the pauper wages of France.

England is finding that free trade in theory is one thing and in practice quite another.

It is interesting to note that German and French textiles are offered freely in the London shops, while it is just as easy to buy a sweater made in Vienna as one made in Bradford or any other British centre. Of course the obvious thing to do, according to our free traders, is to buy the Austrian sweater or the French or the French and German textiles. Why should we worry about the Yorkshire towns that are without work, and therefore without buying power themselves?

Household Notes

For supper on Sunday night, serve rabbit pie, toasted English muffins, marmalade and tea.

one area in the waters around Baffin Island, but the seas as a whole cannot be looked upon as fishing grounds of more than very local importance.

Plant life is found in profusion and a complete description of it is beyond the bounds of a short article such as this. It may be said, however, that it supplies part of the food of all the sea mammals and water-fowl and that forms of kelp or diatoms are used by the Eskimo to vary their diet.

CONFEDERATION LIFE.—aug17,3mos

When Royalty Eats

By "Epicure."

The writer of the following article is a famous chef who has had the privilege of preparing meals for all the members of the Royal Family and many visiting foreign Royalties.

The Argentines are great eaters, and make some of the most exquisite dishes in the world. But they cannot persuade the Prince of Wales to do more than just sample, out of politeness to his hosts, a few of the starchy national dishes they serve at banquets in his honor.

All hosts who have entertained the Prince have found this disappointing, and yet admirable, thing about him. Unlike his great grandfather, King Edward, he carefully abstains from the alluring pleasures of the table. He is practically a one-meal a day man.

A snack for breakfast—a bit of toast, a cup of tea, a rasher of lean bacon or one boiled egg, or merely fruit; a two-course lunch and very little to the courses—often enough he misses lunch altogether; a cup of tea in the afternoon, but never a cake with it; and at night a moderate three or four course dinner; this is his normal diet. Sometimes he succumbs to bacon and eggs, or a marrow bone snack, if he has been dancing late, for supper, with a whiskey and soda; and if he is hunting he will take a substantial sandwich midday.

How different from King Edward. That monarch was an epicure and something of a gourmet. He loved good things to eat. When he stayed at the house of some privileged subject and friend, a substantial "snack," in the shape of cold chicken and ham, a solid wedge of cold game pie or a good pile of foie gras sandwiches, would be placed on a plate in the Royal bedroom. In case His Majesty felt peckish on retiring; and the servants generally found little left in the morning to clear away.

King George is not a gourmet, but is something of an epicure. He is fond of caviare, cold salmon, grilled lamb cutlets, peas, a mixed green salad, and such tasty dishes as caneton fourree a la gelée. He seldom takes a sweet, but never misses the cheese course. In short, he likes things with a decided yet dainty taste, but little of each. With his lunch he likes a glass of ale—Scotch ale for preference. Champagne he is not fond of.

During his Scottish holiday the King eats game and fish, which have fallen to his gun, and roe. Queen Mary has even simpler tastes than King George. She prefers a plain table water to wine, and likes old-fashioned English dishes of the plainest sort. She knows a great deal about cooking, and has her own book of recipes. Roast lamb has always been a favourite dish of Princess Mary's—her Royal brothers used to twist her about her partiality of this old English favorite. Lord Lascelles is something of an epicure and seems never to tire of cold salmon—a taste which soon passes on most palates. Hock is Lord Lascelles' favorite wine, and he is a judge of the port.

Neither the Duke of York nor Prince Henry take very much interest in the good things of the table. They always have healthy appetites, but no favourites and no food fads. Prince George is the only member of the Royal family who is keen on sweet things.

King Alfonso of Spain has a bon viveur's interest in the table. Although he is so lean, he eats a good meal, and doesn't like to miss one. When the Prince of Wales goes hunting or motoring he takes only a snack with him, but arrangements for a substantial meal are always made for the Spanish monarch.

selected a lunch for the man, chose cantaloup, lamb cutlets and peas, and a peach Melba, and the King of Denmark, served with cauliflower, cold soup, cold salmon, and cucumber, chicken done in a casserole, and petite glace mon desire with petits fours, did full justice to this excellent meal. He passed over the wine and drank cider cup.

But the plainest meal on record served to Royalty was a lunch served to the King of Italy, when he visited England last. He chose a steak and cabbage, and plain cheddar cheese and biscuits. The most meagre I know was the Prince of Wales' on the occasion of a City Banquet. He sent away all the courses, and had a dry Martini cocktail and three dry biscuits.

Scientists and Little Animals.

"What advantages have a big animal compared with a small one?" Haldane asked at the annual meeting of the British Association. The spider and daddy-long-legs could get on very happily with their thin legs. In other ways the small animal had the advantage. A mouse could fall down a coal mine, shake itself at the bottom, and run off. A rat would kill itself, while a man would simply make a splash.

The Fly in the Water.

On the other hand, large animals had the advantage in water. A man coming out of his bath carried one pound of water with him. A mouse coming out would carry its own weight, while a fly in similar circumstances would be loaded with 50 times its weight.

Small animals had to have more food because the heart had to do relatively more work. A mouse thus ate one-third of its own weight every day.

Dr. Bercott created much laughter when he said that if he wanted to find a very short man or a very tall man, a saint or a sinner, he would get look among his audience. Another point of his that created much laughter was: "To be an insect you have got to have a certain amount of completion." A curious point was that there was no insect so small that it could not be seen with the naked eye. He would like to know what limited their smallness.

The Elephant's Eye.

One point by Dr. J. H. S. Haldane was that if the elephant had an eye as big in proportion as that of a mouse it would be able to see microscopical objects, and there would be no need for Mr. F. E. Barnard to devise special microscopes. He could breed elephants with huge eyes instead.

Idiots and Geniuses.

In the psychology section, Professor C. Spearman, the section president, dealt with "the theory of G." That theory, briefly, is that the measure of every different ability of any person can be resolved into two factors, one of which is always the same, but the other always independent.

"Every normal man, woman, and child is a genius at something as well as an idiot at something," he said. It remained to discover at what, at any rate, in respect of the genius. Even every member of an unemployed profession could do something that would make him a treasure in some great industrial concern. Every one of them was a genius at something. Discover what that something was, and there was no reason why some of those unemployed should not even become famous dancers, jockeys, or players of popular games.

Professor W. A. Parks, dealing with geology, pointed out that while the earth as a whole acted as a rigid body, its outer envelope was by no means rigid. If it ever became so it would be a tremendous calamity. In that sense earthquakes were not unmitigated calamities; they were evidence that the fatal rigidity had not yet been attained.

If rigidity came the universal deluge was within sight, and with it the end of the present order.

The Polar regions, he remarked, had been temperate, almost tropical, and ice sheets had extended over sub-equatorial regions. A given climatic condition was not necessarily of long duration. It was highly probable that variation in climate would greatly affect the activity of the human race within a measurable number of years, and it was not improbable that the sites of our present centres of population would be buried under glaciers and that a new civilisation would occupy under a genial climate, the present inhospitable regions around the Poles.

In the engineering section Sir Archibald Denny, in his presidential address, outlined fifty years' evolution in naval architecture and marine engineering, starting from the time in 1876 when, as an apprentice joiner, he made dining saloon settees for passenger vessels.

He remarked that fifty years ago there were trade unions, but they were controlled by men with different aims from the present. Now professional agitators and politicians had largely destroyed the spirit of the works.

FRIENDSHIP.

Earth holds no greater glory or delight than friendship. Were this boon denied And all the pomp of fame and wealth supplied, The life of man would be as dark as night. As horrible and desolate as night: A prison house, where wardens food provide. But honest laughter never rings inside. And life eternal still a gloomier plight. That we are loved and love makes heaven hope And earth a place where man is glad to stay. God know this; friendless, none with little would cope Or bear with courage all the days of care. And who, to heaven would struggle to ascend To spend eternity without a friend!

Will Battleships be Abolished?

The arresting suggestion comes from the United States that, when the next Disarmament Conference meets, the delegates should consider whether the building of battleships should not be forbidden. The proposal is that the 10,000-ton cruiser should be regarded as the capital ship of the future.

It is reported in the United States, on what authority we do not know, that the British and Japanese naval authorities favour the idea of permitting the battleship to die a natural death, but are opposed to the idea of applying the ratio to cruisers and other auxiliary craft. The time has not come when these opposing points of view can be usefully discussed. But it does not follow that the scheme for the further scrapping of battleships by international agreement must necessarily be regarded as impractical.

Firm of Day and Martin Passes Away

More than a touch of sentiment is aroused at the passing of the ancient firm of Day & Martin, makers of shoe polish, or blacking, as it is commonly known. The stock holders have just resolved on a voluntary winding-up. They all "get-out" very well, and the good will, etc., of the old house is taken over by another firm.

Day & Martin got into difficulties some years ago, and it was admitted openly that the falling behind in the race for public favor was almost entirely due to the failure to adequately advertise their goods. How long the firm has existed it is impossible to state with accuracy.

Readers of the Pickwick Papers will remember that Sam Weller was using Day and Martin's blacking on Mr. Jingle's boots when Mr. Pickwick first made his acquaintance at the White Hart in the Borough. We know, too, that before the Pickwick papers appeared, Charles Day, founder of the firm, had died—leaving what was then the large fortune of £400,000—a quarter of which he bequeathed for the relief of those, who, like himself, were blind.

And the firm has another claim on the admirers of Dickens, for it absorbed the still older business of Jonathan Warren, in whose "crazy, broken-down old house, abutting on the river and swarming with rats," at Old Hungerford Stairs, where the District Railway Station at Charing Cross now stands, Dickens himself worked as a lad of eleven. Probably it was the recollection of his bitter experiences at Warren's blacking factory which led Dickens to give Day & Martin such a handsome free "ad." in the Pickwick papers.

Invention Due to Bible

"In connection with the preparation of Acheson graphite, it is remarkable that the inventor found the key to the method in the Bible, where we read that the Egyptians used straw in the process of making bricks," writes Dr. A. C. Brown, of the Royal Technical College, in the Glasgow Herald. "While reading the account of the trials of the Israelites, of how they complained bitterly that bricks could not be made without straw, it is difficult to realize that they were faced with a problem in colloid chemistry. Such, however, was the case. "It was the practice to soak straw in water for some time, and to use this liquid in working up the clay, because the resultant mass was found by experience to be much more plastic and easily worked than if water alone had been used. "Straw contains tannin, and it was the presence of this tannin in the straw infusion which brought about the increased plasticity. It is still the practice to add tannin to clay when an increase in plasticity is desired."

New Business over 60 Million Dollars

When The Manufacturers Life commenced business in 1887 it was the eleventh Canadian Company to enter the life insurance field. The total business transacted in Canada in 1897 was THIRTY-EIGHT MILLION DOLLARS, divided among eleven Canadian, ten British, and eight American Companies. In 1924, The Manufacturers Life issued policies in excess of SIXTY MILLION DOLLARS, nearly 60% more than the total of all Companies the first year of its history.

The tremendous growth of life insurance is due to an ever increasing appreciation of its practicability, not only as an insurance method of creating an estate or providing a comfortable future for dependent years, but also as a means of establishing a sinking fund to retire a Bond issue at maturity. It also guarantees immediate funds for Succession Duties. It is a safeguard to a business or corporation to offset the death of an executive or valued employee. You should know what life insurance will do for you.

Borden's PURITY BRAND CONDENSED MILK

Pasteurization Destroys the Bacteria in Milk

ADDRESS BY DR. D. A. CRAIG BEFORE COMMERCIAL CLUB, HALIFAX.

(Halifax Morning Chronicle)

"Pasteurization of milk is one of the essential factors in the protection of the public and particularly for the preservation of child life. The communities which neglect to enforce such proven features for the protection of their citizens should be held criminally responsible," declared Dr. D. A. Craig, Associate Director American College of Surgeons, and at one time associated in Red Cross work in Halifax, when speaking before the Commercial Club in the Green, Lantern yesterday.

Find Out Authorities.

During the course of his address Dr. Craig took occasion to refer to the recent campaign in Halifax for the pasteurization of milk. "There were authorities quoted by those opposing pasteurization," said Dr. Craig, "and I advise you to find out who those authorities were, what they know about this subject, or if such authorities were not misquoted."

There were pictures used in the campaign by those opposing the pasteurization of milk, he said, which were supposed to show children suffering from rickets caused by the use of pasteurized milk. These pictures, it was said, were taken from a book published by Dr. J. K. Kellogg, of Battle Creek, Michigan. But reference to Dr. Kellogg's book would show the same pictures under the caption, "Rickets, the result of wrong feeding," with no reference to pasteurized milk. Dr. Kellogg gives credit for this picture to Dr. L. Emmett Holt, of New York, and from the same book of Dr. Holt, published in 1897, from which Dr. Kellogg takes the picture, the eminent New York authority on children's diseases says: "No sufficient evidence has yet been adduced to establish the fact that milk so heated (pasteurized) has lost any of its essential nutritive qualities, or that children fed exclusively upon it exhibit signs of either of the two most marked disorders of nutrition, rickets or scurvy."

Dr. Craig's Address

Dr. Craig said in part: "There was no mystery or superstition about scientific medicine. It was based on truth and facts and not upon theories and opinions." We know absolutely that a large number of our diseases are caused by bacteria; no one except a misguided fanatic can deny this for the proof is absolute. For many years scientific medicine has been attempting to find not only the cause of disease but also the measures that might be used for the protection of the human race, whether it be through methods of cure or methods of prevention."

One of the most important developments has been the destruction of bacterial or germ life by means of heating, the most striking example of which is to be found in a large way in pasteurized milk. Pasteurizing does not mean boiling milk, but rather heating it to a temperature which is destructive of bacterial life. Milk is a very receptive medium for the growth of bacteria and the richer it is in butter-fat, the better growth of septic bacteria will be produced, once they get into it, said Dr. Craig. "Who can tell when the careless milkster in a dairy is going to expectorate on his hands as he milks, or sneeze or cough and thus scatter a spray with millions of bacteria from his mouth and nose directly into the milk-pail? We would require to have an inspector by the side of every cow and even then we could never be sure that the milk in the dairy was not a contaminated product. Perhaps we would have to have another inspector to watch the inspector."

Dr. Craig then cited instances which had come under his personal knowledge.

In one of our large western cities quite recently there was an epidemic of septic sore throat. There were some 360 cases and 22 deaths. This epidemic was directly and unquestionably traced to two of the leading dairies supplying milk to the city. The milk from these dairies was not pasteurized. Shortly after the first epidemic an outbreak of typhoid occurred, in which there were 25 cases and five deaths. This was also traced to dairies supplying unpasteurized milk to the citizens of that city. Twenty-seven citizens of a progressive city are today lying in their graves, because of the fact that they were not protected by pasteurization.

"Very recently in a certain city of my intimate acquaintance there was a slight automobile accident. One of the men who was shaken up in the accident was examined by a well known surgeon immediately afterward. In the course of the examination the surgeon noticed that the man had a large discharging abscess on the palm of his hand. The abscess was opened and dressed. The man said that his hand felt very much better after the dressing and that he felt he could go to work the next morning. When the doctor asked him what he did, he said that he was a milkster in a dairy. Need one say any more to an intelligent people?" asked Dr. Craig. "Can you imagine the condition of the milk coming from the dairy where that employee was milking? That milk was going into the homes and being largely consumed by children."

"I have no patience whatsoever with those who for political, fanatical, personal or financial reasons, would stand in the way of those methods which can be used for the protection and the preservation of the lives of our citizens," declared the speaker.

"Pasteurization of milk, however, must not be made and excuse for carelessness in other respects; but it was one of the essential factors in the protection of the public and particularly for the preservation of child life. "Communities which neglect to enforce such proven measures for the protection of their citizens should be held criminally responsible."

The Milk Problem

"If this city were to leave open a drain in the street and you and I were to fall into that drain and become injured we could justly collect damages from the municipality," continues Dr. Craig making a local application of his theme. "Should not the city which leaves open sources of infection, sources of communicable diseases—whether it be in a contaminated milk supply or in a contaminated water supply—to be held equally responsible?"

There are a great many details that could be entered into—the establishment of a municipal pasteurization station and other questions—but the whole problem of whether or not milk should be pasteurized was a problem which has long been settled by the most outstanding health authorities of the world. "It is one concerning which there should be no controversy in any well regulated and up-to-date community. There is scarcely a city of any size on this whole continent of America where there is not provision for the proper care and pasteurization of the milk supply."

When an attempt is made to quote authorities as opposed to pasteurization, it would be well to enquire as to whether the information quoted was reliable. "Every outstanding health authority or health organization to-day is strongly in favor of pasteurization. Dr. Charles J. Hastings, Medical Health Officer of Toronto, a man of long experience and excellent judgment, has said—"It is inconceivable, in the light of modern knowledge how any intelligent individual can be opposed to the pasteurization of milk."

Alarmed at War Debt Settlement

BRITISH ECONOMIST DECLARES 62 PER CENT. REDUCTION REPRESENTED.

Sixty-two per cent. reduction of the French debt to Britain is represented by the provisional funding agreement reached by Joseph Caillaux and Winston Churchill, according to Lord Bradbury, formerly principal British representative on the reparations commission, who attacks the proposed Anglo-French settlement.

The United States, Lord Bradbury implies, now will be compelled to grant France easier terms than would have been the case if the Franco-British agreement had not been reached. He is convinced that the Anglo-French agreement binds Caillaux to offer the same terms to the United States.

His Lordship is one of Britain's foremost economists, and throughout the war was connected with the British Treasury.

"I am alarmed at the British proposals to France," Lord Bradbury said in an interview Thursday.

"Britain ought not to accept less than 62 annuities of $100,000,000 each, and even that would represent a 40 per cent. abatement, while our debt arrangement with the United States only gave 20 per cent."

(The British proposal for funding the French debt provides for 62 annual payments to average approximately $62,500,000 each.)

"There is no doubt that the present arrangement binds France to offer the same terms to the United States, and it makes it difficult for America to insist on harder terms."

Lord Bradbury doubts if the United States would have granted France better terms than were granted Britain, but for the Anglo-French agreement. After declaring that even a 40 per cent abatement would have been invaluable for Caillaux as a starting point in the American negotiations, Lord Bradbury says:

"Apparently Caillaux got a 62 per cent abatement. He has every reason to congratulate himself."

If France can get terms from the United States as lenient as those obtained in London, Lord Bradbury believes she would be able to pay all her war debts from what she receives from Germany.

Little Jack Rabbit

by David Cory

"Look who's here," laughed the big Circus Elephant, pointing to Little Jack Rabbit and the Yellow Dog Tramp. For a minute the baby elephant bashfully sucked the end of his trunk; but only for a minute, for quick as a wink the bunny boy handed him a lollipop!

"We've brought all the things you asked for in your letter," cried the little rabbit.

"That's very kind of you," said the Circus Elephant.

"Here's the Ginger Pop," barked the Yellow Dog Tramp, placing the packages on the doorstep.

Opening his knapsack, the little rabbit took out, first, the lovely Angel Cake that Lady Love had baked; then the 12 bags of peanuts, and last, but not least, for I think there were 40, the rainbow colored lollipops.

"It's the baby elephant's birthday," explained the Circus Elephant. "What a feast we'll have. I will put a little pink candle on the angel cake; he's just a year old to-day."

"If you have a spare bone in the cupboard, put it on my plate," sighed the Yellow Dog Tramp. He had no appetite for lollipops and peanuts. No, sir, he would have eaten a dog biscuit; but not circus food.

Picking up the peanuts, lollipops and bottles of ginger pop, the old elephant walked into the log cabin to make ready for the birthday party, leaving the little rabbit and the Yellow Dog Tramp to play with the baby elephant who by this time had become very friendly.

"Have you learned any tricks?" asked the little rabbit.

"I can stand on my head," answered the baby elephant. "Sure enough, he was telling the truth, for the next minute up went his hind legs."

"Put my red cap on the tip of my tail," he begged. "It will make the Yellow Dog Tramp laugh." Well, it does it did. That old dog, rolled over, angel cake, with its little candle twinkling above the frosting, the big elephant lifted the baby elephant. Goodness me, wasn't he surprised! Well, I guess he was. So surprised that he didn't know what to do until the kind old Circus Elephant handed him a knife and said: "Cut the cake, baby boy." And in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

and over on the grass, holding his sides with his front paws and wagging his tail.

"Don't you think the children will like my trick?" asked the baby elephant, when once more on his four feet. "The Circus Elephant has promised to take me to the next show."

"Uncle Lucky will be tickled to death," laughed the little rabbit. "Just wait till I tell him. You should have your picture taken upside down with the little red cap on the tip of your tail."

"All ready for the birthday party," suddenly shouted the old elephant from the open door. "Come, Baby Elephant," he added, pinching the little elephant's ear, "come to your first party."

Of course the baby elephant didn't know what it was all about; he'd never

Our Dumb Animals

REPORT OF CHIEF AGENT WEEK ENDING SEPTEMBER 18.

Attended two sales of cattle at the Abattoir Company's premises. There is quite a bit of trouble getting cattle through the streets owing to the congested condition of the streets. Shot a dog in a street in St. John's West which had been an annoyance to the neighbourhood; also a dog on Stewart Avenue which was diseased, and another which had been run over by a motor on LeMarchant Road. A very valuable horse owned by Bowring

Bros. broke its leg and had to be put to death. I understand that it bolted from the shunting engine near the bridge. Another horse owned by Gus Voisey, Hamilton Street, was also put to death. This is the old blind horse that so many people have been speaking about. Rather than sell it, Mr. Voisey had it put to death and sent to the fox farm. A horse owned by Hon. W. J. Ellis was also put to death and sent to the fox farm. On behalf of the Society I wish to thank Mr. Voisey and Hon. Mr. Ellis for the humane treatment of their horses. I received a letter about an old horse owned by a Water Street firm and sold for $25. I understand that it had done twenty years' work for that employ, and has changed hands within a month and is now for sale again. I would be very glad if the firm would buy it again and have it sent to the fox farm. I also received a report from an outport of dogs being muzzled and lodged. The Society's Solicitor is looking into the matter. Head Constable Noseworthy had a man summoned for riding on a loaded cart. The man was fined $2. I have been doing my best to keep cases out of court and warning drivers, but in the future they will have to take the consequences. The complaint about boys under age driving horses is not mentioned in the "Cruelty to Animals Act." I think it comes under the Police Department. I am thankful to all who take such a great interest in the work. Of the cattle landed out of the Sable I, two were chafed by the head rope. They were examined by Dr. Bishop and Mr. Courtney, who saw that there wasn't very much to complain of. One fell on the wharf (as the wharf was wet and slippery), but was not hurt. As far as I know all complaints have been attended to during the week.

C. of E. Picnic at Lamaline

The annual C. of E. Sunday School Picnic was held on Tuesday, August 26th. The day being delightfully warm and pleasant, long before the appointed hour the children were seen around the school grounds with flags flying anxiously awaiting the events of the day. At 10 o'clock the Teachers and scholars of Lamaline East School paraded in order to Lamaline West School, where they were met by the Teachers and scholars of the latter. At the church a short service consisting of Prayer and Hymn was conducted by Rev. H. Kirby, Rector of the Parish. Then the scholars accompanied by the Rector and Teachers returned to Lamaline East to the field where the little ones at once began to enjoy themselves until the call to dinner came. Dinner was served by the Teachers assisted by Mrs. Emma Hiller and several other friends who had come to help make the children's day a happy one. After dinner was served games were again indulged in. Amongst the guests of the evening were Mrs. H. Kirby also Mrs. J. B. Brett and Mrs. Thos. Dunn from Allan's Island.

At 8 o'clock two motor boats were kindly provided by E. J. Bonnell and J. B. Brett to take the children for a trip around the Harbour. With flags flying and music playing, two runs were made around the Harbour and were much enjoyed. At 4.30 all were landed again at Mr. Harris's wharf and proceeded to the field, where the races at once commenced. After the races and distribution of prizes tea was served. Then the Rector called all the children together and cheers were given for all those who helped make their day a happy one. The day closed by the singing of the National Anthem.—COM.

Rude Forefathers of 100 Years Ago

The humor and ingenuity of the forefathers is revealed in the "Rude Forefathers" of 100 years ago, where in ye editor says: "Several of our readers positively deny the statement made in our last issue that the ladies always pull off the left stocking last, declaring too, that we are very impertinent for giving currency to such a report. But we are sure that on reflection the ladies will admit this is a fact. It is very simple. When one stocking is pulled off first, there is another left on, and pulling this off, is taking the left stocking off last."

Judgement of the Storm

Big Super-Special At The Majestic On Monday.

It is an old saying that only "Seeing is Believing," and one must go to the Majestic Theatre Monday and witness "Judgement of the Storm," the Palmer Photo-play Corporation's initial screen production.

The whole dramatic climax of this powerful story, written by Mrs. Ethel Styles Middleton, is staged in a terrible blizzard of the sort described, in emphasizing the thrill and realism of the storm, however, one must not overlook the fact that it is only one point of interest in a picture filled with startling contrasts, gripping situations and spectacular effects, superimposed upon the foundation of a powerfully dramatic story.

Do you like love stories? One of the most beautiful and most sweetly thrilling of them all is a vital element in "Judgement of the Storm." And does strong emotional drama to your taste or mood? "Judgement of the Storm" is full of it. Do you like powerful, but deliciously human realism in your shadowstage bill of fare? "Judgement of the Storm" is that! And imagine for your love hero, Lloyd Hughes, the screen's newest matinee idol, with charming Lucille Hicken, another "rising star" of screendom, opposite! Add George Hackathorn, Myrtle Stedman, and Phil McCollough as principals of the supporting cast, and Bruce Gordon, Claire McDowell, Little Fay MacKenzie and Little Frankie Darro in important roles, and a fair idea is gained of the most important elements of the first Palmer screen play.

Powerful stories have become associated with the "homespun" variety of production of late, because of the success of several pictures of this type, but "Judgement of the Storm," with its contrasting lavishness of ultra-metropolitan life and its spectacular snowstorm balancing the farm scenes, proves conclusively that a powerful story is a powerful story, and it technically how you will. It was directed by Del Andrews, and photographed by Max Du Pont.

Laid to Rest

The funeral of the late Ernest Connolly, which took place from his mother's residence, Water Street, yesterday afternoon, was largely attended. The casket was covered with floral tributes, many of which came from New York with the body. At the R.C. Cathedral the last prayers were recited by Rev. Fr. Sullivan, and interment was at Belvedere Cemetery.

—the runaway horse and the lost children in a raging blizzard!
—the thrilling rescue amid the hurricanes and snow-slides of the high Sierras!
—happiness wrested from despair after brave hero has given up hope!

The Economics of the Great White Way

Broadway burns a million electric lamps in its great advertising section—an aggregation of lights, we are told, not duplicated anywhere else in the world. They give out 25 million candle-power and cost many million dollars to install. The rental value of some of the roofs in this section exceeds that of the whole building below. That such a "white way" has a psychological effect, that is beneficial on those who live near it is asserted by Arthur Williams, vice-president of the New York Edison Company. In an address given to the public through broadcast station WJZ, New York, and also distributed as a press bulletin, he gives the following historical and descriptive sketch of the modern electric-sign development in the city. We read:

"Thirty years ago New Yorkers were pleasantly surprised one night when the first large electric sign, erected on the present site of the Flatiron Building at Twenty-third Street and Broadway, flashed its message upon their attention—Manhattan Beach Swept by Ocean Breezes." No one—not even the designers, the architects or the owners of this first sign—could have foreseen the Great White Way, the living "Avenue of Light," the largest and most effective thing of its kind, and so appropriately in keeping with this great city.

"THE POWER WITHIN" If You Should Break Your Arm

Health turns the Clock Backward

DEFINITION
The "practice of Chiropractic" consists of the adjustment, with the hands, of the movable segments of the spinal column to normal position, for the purpose of releasing the imprisoned impulse.

It teaches that this power performs these physical functions by means of impulses sent over the nerves, and that when a nerve is impaired the impulses are interfered with and the result is called disease.

To cure disease the tissue interfering with the nerve must be adjusted to normal.

This is what MacPherson does in his practice.

Information for any person wishing to take up the study of Chiropractic.

est and most effective thing of its kind, and so appropriately in keeping with this great city.
"To-day no complete book of travel is without reference to the man-made aurora of light which blazes forth each night over the mid-town section centering on Broadway. Probably no visitor ever leaves Manhattan without seeing this spectacle. Few New Yorkers can walk along Broadway at night without marveling at this wonder of the century or noting every new message written against the sky, every new color scheme, every new sign-creation of the artist, architect, engineer, and advertising man.
"No record exists of the exact number of lamps in the first sign, but it is estimated that there were approximately two hundred. To-day there are more than a million lamps in the signs on Broadway alone, with hundreds of thousands additional on streets to the east and west of Broadway. The cost of the first sign was less than two hundred dollars. To-day many millions of dollars are invested in the construction of electric signs and in the rental of the roofs or the fronts of the buildings upon which they appear, and the designing of signs has become a profession comparable with that of the architect, artist, or engineer. Competent engineers estimate the aggregate candle-power meeting one's vision at this point to be fully 25 millions. There is, of course, no such aggregate of light anywhere else in the world. Were one viewing the earth from some distant planet—Mars, perhaps—this would undoubtedly be the first spot upon which his eye would rest, and he would, no doubt, wonder whether we were not trying to signal Mars, as we have often wondered whether Mars was not trying to signal us.

"It will perhaps surprise many to know that the roofs of numerous buildings along Broadway have a greater rental value than the ground floors, and, in some instances, this rental value is greater than that of the entire building. One company pays approximately $600,000 yearly for the rental of electric-sign space on Broadway. A small four-story building only feet deep, but strategically located, which is now being used, solely as a foundation for electric signs, yields a rental of approximately $90,000 yearly.
"What makes the 'Great White Way'?" asks Mr. Williams. There was a time, he says, when the theatres of New York were the principal users of electric signs. To-day, all more than 500 theatres and moving-picture signs blaze on or near Broadway, the theatres take seventh place in the great array of business enterprises contributing to this pageant of color and light. It is interesting that 59 churches in the heart of Manhattan use electric signs, a number of large and inspiring, illuminated crosses. He goes on:

"New York has both the highest electric sign in the world and the largest—the latter, which is on Broadway near Forty-second Street, is 200 feet long, as tall as a five-story building, and contains 19,000 lamps and 21 miles of electrical wiring.
"Probably the most striking demonstration of the important influence of New York's Great White Way, not only on this city but on the nation as a whole, was afforded during the World War when, in response to public sentiment, the electric signs of Broadway were darkened. The saving in coal was relatively infinitesimal, but the psychological effect was profound. New Yorkers realized that how dark—if not actually gloomy—this part of the city would be at night were it not for the Great White Way.
Broadway had been dark only two or three nights before requests that the lights be turned on again began to pour into the headquarters of the Fuel Administration and the Edison offices. Visitors as well as residents of the city were struck by the depressing effect of a city without electric signs, and a great change came—a great relief—when the rest White Way again came to life.
"Broadway is not, however, the only spot in New York enhanced by light. It may seem strange that the beauty of Manhattan at night can best be seen as one leaves the island. If one has not seen Manhattan at dusk or immediately after dark from the bridges, from a Staten Island ferry, or from a North River boat; if one has not stood on the hills on the other side of the Hudson and watched the sun slip out of sight and the lights of Manhattan gradually appear, there are in store many never-to-be-forgotten sights."

There is a "power within" the body that mends the broken bone. If you lacerate the flesh, there is a "power within" that heals the wound.
What is true of a broken bone or of a flesh wound, is also true of burns, scalds and bruises.
Nature teaches that this "power within" is the only power on earth that heals, cures or mends, and that what that power cannot or will not heal, cure or mend, is beyond the power of anything on earth.
Nature teaches that the power within moves the body, regulates the heat of the body, converts common food into living flesh and blood, develops the body from a single cell to an adult organism and reproduces the species.
It teaches that this power performs these physical functions by means of impulses sent over the nerves, and that when a nerve is impaired the impulses are interfered with and the result is called disease.
To cure disease the tissue interfering with the nerve must be adjusted to normal.
This is what MacPherson does in his practice.

Notes were reduced by £2,500,000, but Mr. Churchill, instead of decreasing them still more drastically, sanctioned a further increase of £6,500,000," says the Westminster Gazette.

"The Air Service may be justified in requiring over 21 millions, but the Fleet, which we are constantly told is becoming obsolete, costs over 64 millions this year, as against barely 61 millions when the German Navy was a real menace. These are the votes upon which any national campaign for retrenchment must mainly concentrate; but the Civil Service still offers a field for drastic economy."

Science Mines the Ocean

Tons of Gold, Sunken Treasure, Rich Minerals, Huge Food Stores, and Lakes of Oil Challenge Man—Neptune Beckons Hardy Venturers to the Greatest Test of Human Ingenuity in the World's History.

By EDGAR C. WHEELER.

Five-sevenths of the world's surface has never been explored. Hidden millions of mysteries have beckoned to man for centuries from this vast area covered by the waters of the oceans.

Now, however, spirited venturers in the fields of science are reading the secrets of the sea. They are finding, not only new methods of locating sunken treasure, but also how to prospect for new resources that can be turned to the use of mankind.

One scientist says he has found a way to sift pure gold from the salt waters. As an eager prospector would search among quartz hills, this scientist—Prof. Fritz Haber, of the University of Berlin—literally is following veins of gold, silver, and other precious metals running thru the oceans. And in this venture he is enlisting the cooperation of the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries.

Gold! Thousands of millions of tons of it carried in the foaming surf that pounds the beach; tossed about in mountainous waves of mid-ocean; hidden in miles of watery depths. No such staggering dream of wealth ever lured the hardy adventurers who staked their lives in the reckless gamble for fortune in the California hills or down the Yukon. It seems unreal, fantastic.

It has been found that water from the Atlantic Ocean contains from .015 to .267 part of gold to each million parts of liquid. Water from certain parts of the ocean contains nearly twice as much gold as the lowest grade land gold deposits profitable to operate.

Captain F. B. Bassett, hydrographer of the U. S. Navy, is authority for the recent statement that billions of tons of gold are dissolved in ocean waters in a concentration of from half a grain to one grain to every ton of water. This represents about $10 worth of gold in every 250 to 500 tons of ocean waters.

Will the day come when we shall see great ocean mines where men will dip into miles of sea and extract from vast volumes of its waters the gold it conceals?

No one can answer these questions with certainty to-day. Nevertheless, Professor Haber's claims give us some inkling of the fascinating chances of fortune in store for the modern prospector who, dies down into mysteries of the unknown deep.

The vast expanses of water are saturated with valuable salts and minerals. And they literally are swarming with living things, both plants and animals, far outnumbering the life of the land. Lying beneath these myriad forms of life are great mountain ranges, volcanoes, valleys, and plains that form the floor of the sea. Strewn over this uneven floor, buried in shifting sands and held in the slime of dead things from above, are countless carcasses of wrecked ships that have gone to their doom laden with rich cargoes.

Constant of these immense possibilities, Uncle Sam's Navy is embarking on a far-reaching program of ocean research. As a first step, the U. S. S. Rainbow is being fitted out for an expedition to the Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean Sea. The announced purposes are to chart the ocean floor and to discover and develop for immediate use some of the sea's hidden resources.

One of the most fascinating efforts of the expedition is toward the location of oil fields in the vast realm under the great blanket of water. The navy already has located and charted places in the Gulf of Mexico where oil spots constantly appear. With the oil fields of the land nearing exhaustion, the economic importance of such a potential discovery is obvious.

Scientists have determined by study of land oil fields that the presence of fossils of small shell-like animals, called "foraminifera," is a highly accurate indication of oil-bearing strata. The Rainbow is equipped to study the geological formation of the sea bottom and to bring up samples of the fossils below the bottom at spots indicated on the charts.

The resources sought by the Rainbow include, beside oil and the myriad living things, vast stores of inorganic matter—salts, minerals, chemical elements. Whether the extraction of gold from ocean water, by Professor Haber's process ever will prove commercially practical, there is no question that the sea is a tremendous potential commercial source of common salt, potassium, magnesium, and calcium salts, iodine, and bromine.

At this moment one of the strangest ships afloat, the Ethyl, is mining the ocean for bromine, an element used in medicine, in photography, and in the manufacture of motor fuel. The Ethyl pumps aboard 7000 gallons of sea water a minute, and from each 1700 gallons is extracted one pound of bromine. Other ships, it is reported, will be equipped similarly to mine this valuable element.

Truly, there are fortunes locked in Neptune's vaults and the number of modern prospectors of the sea is increasing daily. Probably never before in history was there a "gold rush" so feverish as that which now is luring adventure-loving men away from solid ground.

Fortunes are gambled and lives are risked in hazardous attempts to retrieve millions in gold and jewels from the hulks of sunken ships. Wealthy men are spending other fortunes equipping expeditions to study the teeming sea life and the luxuriant vegetation miles below the sea's surface. Still others are searching the waters of the Mediterranean for the riches of cities that we engulfed centuries ago.

Marvelous diving chambers have been devised to permit men to work and explore freely under the tremendous pressure in the deep caverns of the ocean. Undersea cameras now are available to record ocean wonders. Ingenious depth-finding apparatus is giving us accurate contour maps of the floor of the ocean. Radio is being employed in attempts to reveal the spots where sunken treasures are hidden.

With these elaborate tools, the ocean prospector is finding his field almost limitless. Just remember that five-sevenths of the earth is covered by the oceans and in the oceans are 302 millions of cubic miles of water!

In sunken ships alone fabulous rewards beckon the fortune-hunter. Recent inventions made this form of prospecting something more than a wild guess and a perilous lunge. Armored diving-suits and working chambers are making it possible to go down far beyond the 200-foot depth, formerly the limit of human endurance.

Improved deep-sea pumping apparatus also is making it possible to remove tons of sand with which Neptune holds many a treasure hulk in tight grip, and to wash this sand for bits of precious metal, such as miners wash the sands of streams for grains of gold.

Within the next 10 years it is predicted, more wealth will be recovered from sunken ships than in all the preceding ages in the world's history.

Perhaps the achievement that did as much as anything to encourage the present stampede of ocean prospectors was the spectacular success of divers in recovering the $30,000,000 cargo of gold from the wreck of the Laurentic, sunk by a submarine off the coast of Ireland in 1917. Other ships of comparatively recent sinking have given up much of their treasure because scuba has found ways to reach depths never before attempted. Thousands more await the salvager.

Along our own Atlantic Coast lie at least a dozen of these wrecks with strong-rooms full of gold waiting the first comers. At this moment four young Americans are exploring what is probably the richest of these prizes—the wreck of the Ward liner Merida, sunk in collision off the Virginia capes in 1911 with gold, silver, copper and jewels worth $2,000,000 to $5,000,000. Dragging mile-long iron sweeps along the floor of the ocean, the trawlers Foam and Spray located this prize several months ago. And now, using the most modern of armored undersea apparatus, divers are at work to recover the treasure.

Yet tremendous as is sunken wealth, it is actually small compared with the enormous natural resources of the sea in animal and vegetable life and in minerals. Scientists have counted more than 15,000 different varieties of fishes, some of which, like the menhaden and herring, are caught by the millions each year. Every year we haul millions of dollars' worth of products from the sea—foods, oils, fertilizers, pearls, leather, shells, glue. We have barely touched its natural riches, and we have just begun to discover its hidden wonders, packed in layers upon layers, one farm and feeding ground above another, each level with its own forms of plant and animal life. The immensity of such a vast storehouse staggers our imaginations.

Here again is a compelling challenge. And the challenge is being accepted by science in a manner which, for dramatic episodes and thrilling adventures, rivals any of the gripping tales of fiction. The most fascinating figure in this new drama is William Beebe, curator of ornithology of the New York Zoological Society. In previous issues of Popular Science Monthly you have read of his wonderful explorations on barren Galapagos Island—the "world's end"—and of his voyage of discovery into the Sargasso Sea, that ocean wilderness in the Atlantic. Now, having fished from the depths amazing creatures home to report his than on the continent. After all is found and to prepare for new adventures.

And for picturesque setting and lively romance, the new adventure promises to surpass anything in deep-sea mining. This is indicated in the recent announcement that Harrison Williams, New York financier, has purchased the palatial million-dollar yacht Vanadis (to be renamed the Warrior) and is transforming her into a wide-cruising laboratory from which scientists will plumb the undersea for fresh wonders.

Truly the sea still remains the great frontier of the world. On earth the spots that remain undiscovered can be counted on one hand. But the ocean is still mostly mystery—deep, dark, wonderful, rich.

Tuberculin Cures Gout and Rheumatism

Dr. Gustav Paul, Head of Vienna Institute, Announces Important Discovery.

VIENNA, Sept. 6.—After experiments extending over a period of four years, Dr. Gustav Paul, Director of the National Vaccination Institution of Vienna, announced in a report to the Medical Society yesterday that he was able to say that through cutaneous injections of tuberculin he had achieved remarkable success in the cure of every form of rheumatism and gout.

So convinced is he of the method, that he declared that while he could not imagine a world without tuberculosis he could foresee a future without rheumatism.

The assembled doctors listened attentively as Dr. Paul explained the composition of the tuberculin and told how he had treated six hundred cases. Dr. Paul assured his audience that it was immaterial whether the use was made of Dr. Koch's old tuberculin, with the graduated addition of tuber-
