"Dear, dear," she said pityingly, of course she must have one. You say she has fever? What kind?"

others it is laborlously acquired, but it invariably grows by exercise.

Talk of things, and not of people; gossip is not conversation.

Never talk much of yourself nor eff your own affairs; it is in bad forms and generally it bores your hearer.

Avoid also unkind and censorious observations about other people, and never, if you can help it, make personal remarks unless they are in the nature of a delicate and sincere compliment.

ATTRACTING SUCCESS.

The truth in Christian Science, mixed up with a deal of crude philosophy and broken-backed logic, is that in this world things have a way of harmonizing with mental attitudes. If you are blue, despondent and hopeless you will be apt to find that the happenings of your life accord with that mood, and accentrate it; while, on the other hand if you are cheerful, confimood, and accentrate it; while, on the other hand if you are cheerful, confident and optimistic, you will find that circumstances, through some mysterious law of association, chime in with that mood. Successful men almost always have a dash of the sanguine temperament. They attract good fortune as the bright, gold-tipped rod attracts the electricity. Things come their way. Their habitual mental mood has made a channel for blessings. Instead of cursing your luck, and growistead of cursing your luck, and growling that everything is against you, go inside your own soul and readjust your mental operations to success and

DON'T BE AFRAID TO WORK. down is their lear of work. Iney aim to find genteel occupations, so they can dress well, and not soil their clothes, and handle things with ine tips of their fingers. They do not like to get their shoulders under the wheel

—I have often wondered why helpful souls are taken away by death. I do not wonder any more. I leave sehool when I am usfit for this world; the ministrant souls leave sehool when they are fit for Thy world; they are the ripest fruit of the garden and they are ripened by fire. The front flowers are Thy Gethsemane flowers—Thy Passion flowers. My place in the New Jerssalem will be determined by my conquers of exclusiveness and nothing conquers exclusiveness and nothing conquers exclusiveness like pain. They who have passed through the furnace of earth come out to Thee unbound. They are freed from the shackles of all caste; therefore they are the primeministers of Thy kingdom.

THE SECRETS REVEALED.

(Montreal Witness) instructive and entertain reading would be given to the world if the British government should consent to the publication of the documents and conndential reports, giving a complete history of Mr. Krugers relations with foreign powers. lately handed over to the British by the curator of the former Boer government. It is probable, if they include compromising papers, the making public of which might put a strain on foreign relations that these archives will eign relations, that these archives wi be held as secret state papers, till the events, governments and persons in-volved have passed into history. An-other generation will then enjoy what is denied to this. It would be highly satisfactory, however, to know just how and to what extent Mr. Kruger was led to believe he would have the support of foreign powers. That he was firmly convinced some one or more of them would intervene in his favor is beyond doubt. He must have had strong grounds for that convic-tion, and these documents must surely reveal them. Their value to the Brit-ish government, however, must be greater as a secret possession than if they were published. From them the Foreign office will learn how and to what extent the Boers were encouraged make war, and what reasons they had for prolonging the struggle with the hope they frequently expressed of intervention by the powers of Europe. That intervention was contemplated at one time appears certain but Lord Salisbury's reply to President McKin-ley was an open intimation to all the powers that interference would not be dropped and the Boers were left to fight their battles alone. But if it be really true that Mr. Kruger was led to believe he would be helped by intervention, and left in the lurch when war was declared, the governments which acted so were both treacherous and cowardly. Anyway they all know now that the secret of their conduct is in the possession of the British government.

OUR NEW ALLY A COMPETITOR.

(St. John Telegraoh.) The latest statistics of the military strength of Japan, presented in the Telegraph this week, are interesting to Britishers for more reasons than one. The principal point is, of course the strength of our new ally from an army and navy point of view, but coincidental with this development there are inferences, which further information likewise corroborates that Japan's merchant marine and other business at home is being extensively expanded as a result of the recent treaty with is not so pleasing to British ship-owners who formerly enjoyed the benefit of Japanese trade under their own as in 1870 Japan had only 46 vessels of deep sea fashion, aggregating some 17,000 tons, which in 1882 had increase ed to 614 vessels of 209,000 tons, and in 1801 to 7,614 vessels of 664,000 tons the government has now taken the fur ther expansion of Japanese shipping to heart by the subsidizing of no fewto heart by the subsidizing of no fewer than sixteen native steamship lines and is encouraging still further abilities for the winning of such subsidies. Eleven years ago only 14,000,000 yen worth of Japans total foreign trade of 142,000,000 yen were carried in Japanese bottoms, but in 1891 Japanese ships carried no less than 148,000,000 yen worth of a total foreign trade of 500,000,000 yen. It is this expansion and practical development of the Japanese mercantile marine, of course at and practical development of the Sap-anese mercantile marine, of course at the expense of the British, which has been making some English newspapers give utterance to questions of doubt as to whether the alliance was a thoroughly good move from a commercia-

The gentlemen who came over from Digby Fridey to interview the local board of trade with regard to the steamship business went home Saturday with the exception of A. J. S. Copp, M. P. Saturday morning, Mr. Copp met the council of the board. He asked the co-operation of the board of trade in an endeavor to have the winter port steamers call at Digby once a month during the winter. The delegation claims that if a steamer will call at Digby they can obtain as freight 250,000, to 300,000 barrels of apples a year at present shipped from Halifax. The Sissiboo pulp mills are now producing 16,000 tons of mule per annum and if reasonable steamship freight were given from Digby this would also be shipped from that port.

POTATO BLIGHT.

POTATO BLIGHT.

Comparatively few of our farmers have yet realized the reason of their potato plants drying see early in the season. They take it as a matter of course and question themselves as to the reason whether or not it is the weather condition, etc., but not will is to believe it is a disease-fact which is yearly causing a great deal of loss to our farmers that very few of their potatoes reach full maturity that in many cases blight kills. sources and question themselves as the reason whether on not it is the venter condition, etc., but not willing to believe it is a disease. It is a fact which is yearly causing a great deal of loss to our farmers that very few of their potatoes reach full maturity, that in many cases blight kills the vines while the tubers are yet only partially grown. We all know that we grows, but during the period after the top can be kept green for a long time after blossoming, the potatoe grows very fast. If then the top can be kept green for a long time after blossoming the potatoes in the hill will be larger, riper and therefore more patatable and will keep better, not to mention its surer propagating powers. It was at first considered a girlish fashion, to be worn by girls, but it has been taken up by every one to whom it is becoming.

The multiplicity of combs in the hair remains. Four and five can be worn with ease by most women. They cannot manage three with the hair in the upturned plait; but those who wear the hair high simply stud the head with shell combs, says the Philadelphia Press.

The one touch of ornament is allowed in the back comb. They may be as gay as one wishes, provided the stones the metal or the enamel is real. The

REAL FISH CHOWDER.

The greasy, rank-with-onion liquid, with a few pieces of potato and with no signs of fish except skin and bones which is frequently served under the name of fish chowder, is wholly unlike name of fish chowder, is wholly unlike the dish as it is prepared after the formula of Daniel Webster, or that of the progressive housekeeper.

Use a whole small haddock, which weighs from four to six pounds. Remove the skin and bones and put them, with the head, on to boil in cold water to cover. Cut the fish into slices two inches square, peel and slice an equal quantity of potatoes, and scald and drain them. Fry out three slices of fat salt pork about two inches square, then add two small onions sliced and fry without browning. Strain out the pork scraps and on-white pepper, and let it simmer 10 minutes longer.

Make a pint of thick white sauce, with one pint of hot milk, two rounded tablespoonfuls each of butter and flour, and stir it into the chowder being careful not to stir it much, for that will break the dish. Turn out into a hot tureen and serve with wafers or butter crackers.

A fish soup, or puree, or cream of fish, is served by many as the beginning of a dinner; but a fish chowder when well made, has much more body and is really a combination of fish, vegetables, crackers and hot liquid. Therefore, it should form the substantial course of an every day family dinner, and only a simple salad or dessert should follow it.

Of course one would hardly plan a fish chowder as the main part of a formal dinner, unless it were at the seaside or for some friends to whom it would be a rare treat. when well made, has much more body

SHUTTERS OF VINES.

Shutters of living green is the conception of a clever woman to shut out the fierce rays of the afternoon sun from her dining room. This is chooting out its tendrils on to the gauze metting frames that were set in the open windows, she concieved the western end of her house, was of shooting out its tendrils on to the gauze netting frames that were set in the open windows, she concieved the idea last summer of making shutters of the gauze wire and allowing the ivy to grow over them. This the vine obligingly did at once, so that in a couple of months the wire was completely covered, while the stems were flexible enough to allow of the shutter being opened without breaking them. "All I did was to keep them from growing over the hinges and trim the ends when they get too long," she said.

—If a woman wants to retain her youthful appearance, she must mingle with other people, read good books and cultivate an optimistic temperament, says the Hartford Post. Nothing so destroys the youthful contour of the face as taking the cares of life too seriously. Housewives of the Martha type who "are troubled about many things" have a rigid set look that plainly reveals the loss of those qualities that make a woman lovable. When our characters lack cheerfulness and amiability our features will unconsciously lose those self-curves that are the outward sign of inward beauty are the outward sign of inward beauty of thought and feeling.

When I went down to the "shore cottage" I was to use one summer, I found the tea kettle, pots, gems, pan etc. a bed of rust. I tried everything I had ever heard of to make them clean enough for use, but with very poor success. One of the "natives" assured me that I needn't worry—her things were often so, and all I need do was to grease them thoroughly, set them on the stove and let it burn off, which I proceeded to do, and my utensils were soon as good as new.
