

HESPELER MUNITIONS PLANT IS BURNED

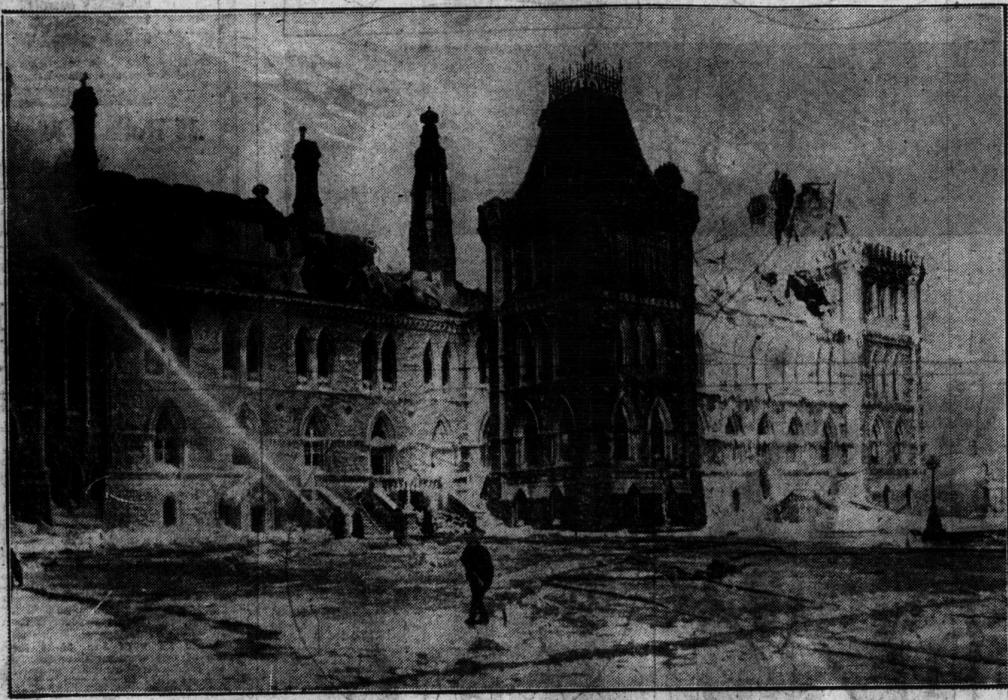

AUSTRIAN PLACED UNDER ARREST IN CONNECTION WITH FIRE

HESPELER MUNITION PLANT BURNED BY INCENDIARY

Fire Broke Out in Shell Factory Few Minutes After Employees Left and John Schmidt, an Austrian, is Arrested.

By a Staff Reporter.
HESPELER, Ont., Feb. 5.—Fire, believed to be of an incendiary origin, broke out in the munitions department, of the E. B. Jardine & Co.'s tool and shell plant at 12.30 today, and completely destroyed the shell department before it was extinguished.
John Schmidt, an Austrian, who has been a resident of the town at different times during the last few years, was arrested at the fire by Chief Wilson, and is being held pending an investigation. The chief states that he has had the Austrian under observation for some time, but that so far as he knows now he was not in the plant. He had not been working there.
The last man left the plant at 12.30 except the watchman, who was in another part of the building eating his lunch when the fire broke out. There was a celebration in town and a detachment of visiting soldiers were there in connection with a recruiting campaign, and the meeting had just opened at the city hall a few minutes before the alarm was given. The firemen were quickly on the scene and succeeded in confining the flames to the shell department, the other portions of the building being untouched. There was nothing of an inflammable nature in the shell department which would be liable to cause a fire thru spontaneous combustion and the only explanation that the management is able to give is that it must have been started by an alien enemy.

The part of the works in which the fire broke out was recently fitted up with $35,000 worth of machinery for the manufacture of shells, and this is a total loss. The entire loss is estimated at $70,000.
Ask For Militia.
OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 5.—The militia department has been notified of a fire in the Jardine Munition Plant at Hespeler, and asked for permission to call out the militia to guard the plant.

THE SENATE CHAMBER GUTTED AND ICE-COVERED THE DAY AFTER THE FIRE

OTTAWA FIRE LIST OF DEAD IS UNCHANGED

Fatalities So Far as at Present Known Remain at Seven

LAST BODY FOUND

That of J. B. R. Laplante Discovered Saturday Morning in Deputy Speaker's Rooms

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 5.—The bodies of Mesdames Morin and Bray were taken to Quebec to the bereaved husbands, who came to the city immediately on receipt of news of the tragedy which brought the house party of Madame Sevigny to an abrupt and tragic termination.
While there is a possibility that there may be yet others who lost their lives in the conflagration, the list of known dead remains at seven. These are: Mesdames Morin and Bray of Quebec, whose bodies were recovered during the time the fire burned; the two Desjardins, uncle and nephew; B. B. Law, M.P., and J. B. R. Laplante and Randolph W. Hamms, a postoffice employe.
The body of J. B. R. Laplante, assistant clerk of the commons, was found this morning in the rooms of Deputy Speaker Rhodes.
From these rooms, Walter Hill, steward for the deputy speaker, escaped by dropping from a window, being severely hurt in doing so. The deputy speaker's rooms were a small suite opening from the main corridor on the second floor and looking into the courtyard adjoining the reading room, where the fire started. The suite contained a bedroom, bathroom, sitting room and small pantry.
Steward Hill was in the rooms when the fire broke out but knew nothing about it for nearly an hour, although within fifty feet of where the fire began.
How Laplante Died.
The door on the corridor was closed, and the fire did not get up into that corridor until after a considerable time. The walls were massive, and the double heavy curtains and portieres shutting out light or sound from the courtyard. The fire started at 9 o'clock. At nearly 10 o'clock Hill was still reading a newspaper in the sitting-room unaware of any disturbance. Suddenly he heard a strange roar. He rushed to the door and opened it. A black smoke poured in. A man was staggering in the corridor and lurched into the room. A moment later a blast of flame came. Hill closed the door. In the smoke, and not knowing Mr. Laplante very well, he is not positive who the man was, but thinks it was Mr. Laplante, and this supposition is strengthened by the fact that Mr. Laplante had a room next to the suite of the deputy speaker.

Slid Down Curtains.
Hill rushed to the windows, and throwing open the curtains, realized that the whole place was going. He tore down two heavy portieres, tied them together, and smashing a window, he attached his improvised rope

PEEL CONSERVATIVES HAVE CHOSEN FALLIS

Candidate Who Resigned Again Selected to Sit in Legislature

MAY MEAN ELECTION

Liberals Have Intimated They Would Not Consent to Unopposed Return.

By a Staff Reporter.
BRAMPTON, Ont., Feb. 5.—J. R. Fallis, who recently resigned from his seat in the Ontario Legislature, following the finding of the Royal Commission criticizing his actions in connection with the purchase of horses for the government was unanimously renominated by the Peel County Liberal Conservative Association today amid great enthusiasm.
Eleven names were placed in nomination and five withdrew and on the first ballot Mr. Fallis received 84 out of 123 votes and the convention decided to make it unanimous.
The nomination of Mr. Fallis may result in a bye-election as the Liberals have intimated that they would consent to permitting any other candidate but him go in by acclamation but would contest his election.

SAW-EDGED BAYONET ON GERMAN PRISONER

Under Officer Also Had a Number of Soft-Nosed Bullets on Him When Taken, Declares Canadian Eye-witness in Weekly Report.

OTTAWA, Feb. 5.—The following weekly communique is from Sir Max Aitken, at present serving with the Canadian corps in France:
"During the week of Jan. 27-Feb. 2, more than six successful minor operations were carried out by the troops under Sir Douglas Haig, one of the most successful being by parties of our northwest and Vancouver battalions on the night of Jan. 30-31.
"Wire cutting parties cut lanes thru the enemy wire opposite two of the strongest fortified places in this section of the enemy's front line. After sunset it was found that the enemy had succeeded in blocking the gaps with fresh entanglements. Sergeant Turner and Corporal Conlan and Lieut. L. A. Wilcot, Sergt. Kirkland, Privates W. R. Taylor and R. W. Lombard proceeded to reopen the lanes up to the German parapet. With enemy listening posts in vicinity and enemy trenches filled with men, it took both parties approximately five hours to complete the dangerous work. Reports from each battalion show that the road was reached by the first party, practically simultaneously at his post in the front trenches. Punctually at 2.30 a.m., about 30 men from each battalion went forward to the German lines. In both cases the enemy was taken completely by surprise.
"The party was under command of Lieut. L. A. Wilcot, who had cut the wire. With him were Lieutenants N. E. O'bryan and G. L. Gwyce. The party reached the enemy parapet unobserved. Two German sentries were patrolling up and down the trench. They met and exchanged greetings. As they turned our men jumped down on them and in the struggle both sentries were killed.
"Bombed and Bayoneted.
"Our party then moved on and bayoneted its way down the German trench. The enemy was in considerable force but offered very little resistance. About 20 Germans were killed and a machine gun and its emplacement destroyed by our bombers.
"After seven minutes in the German trenches our party withdrew, taking with them as prisoners an under officer, a sergeant and a private. The under officer, who was captured by Sergt. Tyford, was wearing the iron cross and was armed with a saw-edged bayonet and a revolver with flat-nosed bullets. Our casualties were Lieut. Wilcot and two men slightly wounded.
"Fires Fought Erased.
"The battalion party was under command of Capt. E. McIntyre and Capt. K. C. Taylor, bombing officer of the 1st Infantry brigade. Capt. McIntyre took the lead and was the first to jump over the enemy parapets. The trench was found crowded with Germans, and a fierce fight ensued. In the course of which about 30 of the enemy were killed or wounded. A machine gun in an exceedingly strong emplacement was put out of action and three prisoners were taken. Our party remained about eight minutes in the German trenches, during which withdrawal two of the prisoners were killed.

FIRM MEMBERS BELIEVE BOMB STARTED FIRE

This is Opinion Expressed in Ottawa's Second Mysterious Blaze

HAD WAR CONTRACTS

Think Enemy Agents Placed Explosive in Sample Room.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 5.—The second mystery fire in as many days, in which incendiarism on the part of German agents or sympathizers is suspected, destroyed the manufacturing plant of Grant, Holden & Graham at an early hour today, and a loss of about $123,000 largely made up of war contract goods, resulted.
Nine persons, eight of them employees working night shift in the factory, and the other, the night watchman, had narrow escapes with their lives, having to flee down the fire escape on the west side of the building to save themselves from suffocation.
Valuable War Contracts.
Grant, Holden and Graham up to last night had half a million dollars' worth of war contracts, and a large quantity of shirts were stored in the upper floor of the building. The firm was recently urged to complete an order for the 77th Battalion, and much work was in progress. Over $50,000 worth of military shirts also were stored. Members of the firm are self-declared that the fire which wiped out their plant was the work of alien agents or sympathizers, and in some respects, it is very similar to the circumstances connected with the start of the parliament fire on Thursday night.
"Did Bomb Start It?"
One member of the firm gave voice to an opinion that reflected the thought that an incendiary bomb with a time fuse had been placed in a closet in the plant, where the fire started, and in a trice had spread to the roof above, and in two minutes over three floors of the building.
"Another opinion of one member of the firm is that an incendiary bomb had been deposited in the sample room by some one. Half an hour before the blaze burst thru the second floor, the night watchman had passed thru the sample room and had noticed no sign of fire.

BRIDGE SAVED FROM ATTEMPT OF A WRECKER

Guards Caught Him Approaching the Structure Over the Ice

TRIED GAME TWICE

Altho Detected Both Times, He Succeeded in Getting Away.

MONTREAL, Feb. 5.—An attempt to dynamite Victoria Bridge, the militia authorities think, was made last night.
About midnight a man was noticed by the guards to be approaching the structure on the ice. He was picked out by the searchlights and when challenged retired without answering.
About four o'clock this morning a man was seen again making his way towards the bridge on the ice. He was again challenged, and when he did not reply was fired at. He succeeded, however, in getting away.
The militia authorities have made an investigation and while they found nothing which would indicate that the man, whoever he was, had actually started to blow up the bridge they have little doubt that such was his intention.
The Victoria Bridge crosses the St. Lawrence and is used by the Grand Trunk Railway and the Delaware and Hudson Railway. It is a mile and a half in length.
It has been carefully guarded by a company of soldiers since the outbreak of war.
The police have learned that a man answering to the description of the suspect who was seen on the ice approaching the bridge got off a train at St. Lambert's, on the south side of the river. He stayed in a shack until turned out by the police, and then tried to get on the bridge. Suspicious, the guard turned him back. It was after this that he was noticed on the ice.
May Be Drowned.
An investigation made of the ice in the neighborhood of the bridge this morning disclosed footprints leading to and from the structure, those leading away ending at a pool of open water. The militia authorities think it possible that the man seen by the guards fell into the water in his hurry to get away.

WAR SUMMARY

THE WEEK'S EVENTS REVIEWED

BY W. H. STEWART.

GENERAL tameness has ruled in the operations in the various fields of the war in the past seven days. Beyond the raids of Count Zeppelin's airships on Paris and on several English counties, beyond the checking of a German commerce raider at sea by the arrival of the British passenger liner, Appam, in an American port, little beyond the usual monotonous incidents of a mid-winter campaign have been brought to light by the rumors, despatches and official communiques of the various belligerent war offices. Some exception to the usual dullness which accompanies winter operations has occurred in the Caucasus region and in Persia where the Russians have won another victory over the Turks south of Erzerum, and where they have dispersed a force of the enemy in the region of Kermanshah, on the communications between Bagdad and the east.

After winning considerable successes in Bessarabia, Bukovina and Eastern Galicia, the Russians have halted operations owing to the nature of the ground prohibiting an active advance. An extensive thaw has taken up the work of destruction that the elements have forced the Russians to suspend. It has released pent-up waters from the many rivers which have deluged trenches and embogged the heavy artillery of the enemy at many points. The Russians occupy higher ground and so they are in a more advantageous position to resist the assaults of nature. The Pripiet marshes have become flooded and the Germans who encamped amid their ices and frozen bogs for the winter have suffered severely from being flooded out of their trenches and marooned on higher levels of ground.

The air is filled with rumors of another imminent offensive of the Germans. Some persons believe that it will be undertaken against the Russians in the Riga sector, while other persons insist that it will be launched against the British and French positions in Flanders in an attempt to blast a way to the English channel and the northern parts of France. If the Germans plan to do this, they are vastly ignorant of the effects of sea power, for the British navy would proceed to blow away the waterfront. The Germans, it is true,

NOT TO FOLLOW FRANCE IN PURCHASE OF WHEAT

LONDON, Feb. 5.—A statement issued tonight regarding the government's operations in wheat says that the British and French governments in December bought 200,000 tons from Australia, of which Great Britain took 100,000. British firms in Argentina have been informed that the amount of Argentine wheat to be purchased by the government will not exceed 250,000 quarters.
The statement indicates the government will not adopt the proposal to take over the entire home crop at a fixed price, as France has done.

HON. FRANK COCHRANE ARRIVES ON BALTIC

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—The White Star liner Baltic arrived here today with only 25 passengers in her steerage and 153 in the first and second cabins.
Among the first-class passengers was Hon. Francis Cochrane, Canadian minister of railways and canals.

MRS. MOHR NOT GUILTY.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Feb. 5.—Mrs. Elizabeth F. Mohr today was acquitted of the charge of having instigated the murder of her husband, Dr. C. Franklin Mohr.
C. Victor Brown and Henry H. Suelman, accused of the actual killing, were found guilty. The penalty is life imprisonment.

KING GEORGE APPEARED IN PUBLIC SATURDAY

World Kitting Rooms.

The World knitting-room is open daily from 12 till 5 p.m. and there are expert knitters on hand, who will give you any required assistance. Musical programs are furnished every day for the entertainment of those who are serving their time towards this splendid project. Bring six ounces of 4-ply fingering and have your sox set up at once. Start the week well by becoming a "Sox Day" booster. If you cannot knit and are anxious to help in some other way, buy sox or wool and send them in without further delay. Address all donations to Miss H. M. Bell, "Sox Day" convener, World Building, 40 West Richmond street. For any information about sox, phone the convener of Main 3308, or Parkdale 4971. Don't forget! The need for sox is urgent, and it is the duty of those at home to supply the necessities to the men fighting in the trenches. "Sox or wool" now, tomorrow or any day up till Tuesday, Feb. 15.

Canadian Eye-Witness Says He Also Had Soft-Nosed Revolver Bullets in His Possession

SAW-EDGED BAYONET FOUND ON A GERMAN

A BRILLIANT EXPLOIT

Canadians Cut Barbed Wire Entanglements and Rush Trenches of the Enemy.

ers were killed in the enemy trench by German bombs, and the third died as he was being hauled over the parapet. Articles of clothing valuable for identification purposes were removed from their bodies and brought back. Our casualties were one officer, Capt. Taylor, wounded; one man killed, two men died of wounds, and three men slightly wounded.

Capt. Taylor was wounded in the leg by the explosion of the enemy trench. In subsequent fighting he killed at least five of the enemy with his revolver, and when his ammunition was exhausted threw his revolver at another German and stunned him. He then seized the bayonet of a dead German and killed another one with it.

During the fight he received a bullet wound in the shoulder and several bomb wounds in the back. Altogether Capt. Taylor was wounded in eight places, but in spite of this he walked back unaided to our lines.

Wire cutting was done chiefly by hand. Both parties carried telephones into the German trenches and touch was maintained with battalion headquarters thruout. In each case the signal for artillery fire was given by the last man to leave the German trenches, and within a few seconds heavy artillery and trench mortar fire was opened on the enemy lines.

A number of the enemy were coming up from support trenches when our parties retired and our artillery fire probably caused numerous casualties.

The enemy's artillery retaliation was not heavy. Brig.-Gen. Ketchen received a message of congratulation on the success of this enterprise from the general commanding the army.

Some Heavy Fighting.

As a result of the German offensive action, some heavy fighting has occurred during the week at various points on the western front. Opposite the Canadian area the situation has remained normal. Enemy artillery and aircraft have been active. On several occasions our artillery has carried out organized bombardments of the enemy's strong points and trenches with excellent results. The enemy's parapets have been breached, his dugouts and shelters exposed and lanes cut thru his entanglements. Direct hits have been obtained on more than one of his machine gun emplacements and a building from which a German field gun had been firing was partially demolished by our shells.

Our patrols and scouts have displayed their customary enterprise and vigilance while out between the trenches with three battalion scouts, Lieut. S. H. Owen, British Columbia Battalion, encountered a patrol of 15 Germans and immediately gave fight.

Lieut. Owen Killed.

Bombs were thrown and revolvers freely used. Four of the enemy were seen to fall. When all the bombs carried by our scouts had been thrown, Lieut. Owen, British Columbia Battalion, said, "I am coming right after you," and remained firing his revolver at the

On Sunday, Jan. 30, Right Hon. Bonar Law, M.P., colonial secretary, visited the Canadian corps headquarters of three Canadian divisions. In the absence of Lieut. General Sir Edwin Alderson, K.C.B., he was received by Major-General E. W. Turner, V.C., C.B., commanding the second Canadian division, and witnessed a review of our Alberta battalion. After the march past the colonial secretary addressed the battalion in a few well-chosen words and an order of the day was read by General Turner, recounting the gallant act of Pte. A. H. Jackson, who, as recorded in last week's communiqué, had thrown himself on a live trench mortar shell and wrenched from it the burning base fuse, thus saving the lives of several comrades.

On Jan. 28 a party of six foreign journalists, four French and two Italian, visited our area. On the following day a detachment of four officers and 25 men of the royal navy visited the lines of our second division.

The weather during the period has been fine and cold. The health of the Canadian troops continues very good. No cases of trench fever have occurred during the week.

Baby Afflicted With Eczema

Dr. Chase's Ointment Cured

The Family Doctor Tried in Vain to Heal the Sores—Another Tribute to This Great Healing Ointment.

It may be interesting to note that Dr. Chase's Ointment was originally compounded to cure a case of eczema on a child. The disease had spread almost over the entire body and defied all the regular treatments for such trouble. The doctor was perplexed, but finally tried the formula of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and, as many say, "it worked like a charm," healing up the nasty sores and leaving the skin soft and smooth.

That was a good many years ago, and since then thousands of cases of eczema, both in children and adults, have been cured, until today Dr. Chase's Ointment is recognized as the standard cure for itching skin diseases.

Dr. Geo. McNair, River Charles, N.B., writes as follows: "We use Dr. Chase's Ointment in our home, and would not wish for anything better for cuts, burns and bruises. A few years ago a friend of mine, whose baby was terribly afflicted with eczema, had her child treated by their own family physician, but the little one got no better. They tried all remedies, but they all proved useless in this case. Upon the advice of neighbor they got Dr. Chase's Ointment, and before the first box was used the child was completely cured.

"I can also recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to suffering friends, who I know will be glad to learn of someone having conducted an engraving business here for the past forty-one years. He was a familiar figure at all horse shows, and one of the best judges of horses in Canada, also an expert driver.

He was born at Plymouth, England, Feb. 28th, 1854; came to Canada forty-five years ago, and has been a resident of Toronto ever since. He was a member of Governor Lodge, I.O.O.F. He is survived by one son (Frank), and a daughter (Florence, Mrs. Dr. H. S. Holmes) of this city.

But Mr. LaPlante, if it was he, a man of 60 years of age, half choked with smoke and evidently bewildered, fell on his knees, crying and praying. There was no time to lose, as the fire was coming in at the door, so with a last call to the other, Hill got out of the window and slid down the portieres as far as he could. At the end there was still a drop of 15 to 20 feet, on the cobblestones of the courtyard. By the fall Hill's back and leg were badly injured, but his calls caught attention, and he was picked up and taken to the Water Street Hospital.

INCREASE SCHOOL AGE PROPOSAL IN HAMILTON HAMILTON, Ont., Feb. 5.—When the board of education takes up Chemical Dr. Carr's suggestion to raise the school age from 14 to 16 years, to encourage parents to take advantage of the technical and commercial courses, it may take summary action in the matter. Dr. Merchant, one of the provincial education department inspectors, yesterday stated that the law now exists that allows a local board of education to increase the school age to as high as 17 years. The machinery required is a bylaw passed by the board, and if, within thirty days after the passage of a bylaw setting the age, ten per cent. or more of the people do not petition against its adoption, it goes into force. There is a possibility that the age will be increased to 16 or 18 years for next term as a trial.

PLAYERS' SALARIES WILL BE CUT TO PAY BASEBALL WAR LOSSES

The player pays: The baseball magnates lost thousands of dollars because of their fight against the Federal League, and now that peace reigns once more they are going to try and recoup their losses thru cutting the salaries of players. As pitchers are usually the highest priced diamond artists the players in the other positions will undoubtedly be working under contracts that have not yet expired.

START ON THE LAST LEG OF THE JOURNEY

Good Race in "A" League at Athenaeum Club—The Week's Doings.

The boys in the Athenaeum A League started on the last leg of their three series schedule last week, and every team is out to make it a battle. The Firestones, after winning the first series, fell away in the second, and the Gliddens, Varnish and Vodon Cleaners were the strong contenders. The Gliddens boys are one game up on the Cleaners, but have one game yet to play with the Imperials. The Cleaners and Swift Canadians opened on Monday night and captain Bill's team showed their class by winning all three games. Hayward was the big hitter, with a six count.

SENSATIONAL ROLLING IN THE BEACH LEAGUE

The Balm Beach Fivepin League established two city records at the Toronto Athletic Club during the past week when the Kids rolled a grand total of 2580, including high game of 849. It's needless to remark the Kids had little trouble in disposing of their opponents, Luxon, in all three games, and as a result they took all three games from Rogers in the Grand and Toy Fivepin League. The Rogers Coal Fivepin League Black Diamonds moved to the top when they took all three games from Rogers. First, while Scrantons, in fourth position, Al Hard, in second place, hand-ling out the same medicine to Quality. In three games from the Rogers Coal and still in the race, made it two out of three games from Anthracite. Wellingtons were dethroned when they lost all three games to the Rogers Coal and Wm. Davies Co. B bang up should keep the race to the forefront. League standing:

FEDERALS SHOWING WAY IN THE CENTRAL

Have the Second Series Cinched—Hayward Rolls Big Game—Averages.

The Federals look to have the second series of the Central Handicap League settled to the point. The Federals were the contenders in the first series, going with Brunswicka only to lose in the roll off. The Federals had the Brunswicka for opponents last week and with the advantage of one game lead they increased it to three by winning the odd game. The "Outlaw" had 41 pins hand-icap, but did not need the allowance in the two games they won. The "Feds" totaled 250 without the handicap, while the Brunswicka counted 332. A new individual game record was hung up and looks like it will stand for the season when Capt. Hayward of Peds, rolled the made in the initial game for a 277 count. He opened up with two apices and then followed with ten strikes for the new high single game. Soldier Stewart had his eye on the pocket, the opener, putting in a 243 count. Gillis took his turn by rolling one ball in the second game, averaged a 246 total. Hayward was high for the night with 836, closely followed by Gillis with 623, Stewart, 597, and Carver with 592. Caletoras won all three games from Norris' Lambs with a 61 pin handicap. Capt. Bingham showed a complete reversal of form when he put in a 566 count for the night. The Strollers averaged 246 for the winners with 540. Following is the standing:

SAUNDERS' FIVEPIN LEAGUE

The second lap in Saunders' Fivepin League was ripped off during the past week. So far it looks as if Capt. Patterson, of the Photo Arts, has as clever and as well-balanced a team as has been seen on these alleys, and have yet to taste defeat, for on Wednesday night they, for the second time, annexed all three games. Their victims on this occasion was the supposedly strong cashiers from the American Watch Case Co., who made the en-

STOPS FALLING HAIR

This Home-Made Mixture Stops Dandruff and Falling Hair and Aids Its Growth.

To a half pint of water add:
Bay Rum 1 oz.
Orlex Compound a small box
Glycerine 1/2 oz.
These are all the ingredients that you can buy from any druggist at very little cost, and mix them yourself. Apply to the scalp once a day for two weeks, then once every other week until all the mixture is used. A half pint should be enough to rid the head of dandruff and kill the dandruff germs. It stops the hair from falling out, and relieves itching and scalp diseases.

Although it is not a dye, it acts upon the hair roots and will darken streaked, faded, gray hair in ten or fifteen days. It promotes the growth of the hair and makes harsh hair soft and glossy.

CURRENT COMMENT

A BODY of women who are doing a number of things quietly, but with results which tell, are the members of the Suffragists' War Auxiliary. A short time ago they took up as a specialty the matter of Serbian relief, and so well have they worked in the interval that by different ways they have collected the sum of $3000 in addition to rousing much interest and spreading thru different channels a good deal of information as to the position of the Serbian people.

The coming of the great suffrage leader—for no matter what one's idea on suffrage it must be admitted that its leader is in many respects far out of the ordinary—has always been treated with a good deal of sensational interest, and until one knew her how different was the reality to what one was led to expect. Just a little woman, a "wee" one, humanly, unassuming and unaggressive in ordinary life, one who if judged at first sight would be more inclined to shrink from publicity than what yet this is the lady who could go thru so much and so perseveringly for a cause in which she believes.

As a speaker, if she has preserved her charm and gift, Mrs. Pankhurst stands as the top of the women of the old country who have qualities different to those which mark the speakers on this side of the line either American or Canadian. She speaks with a full soft voice that has great carrying power. Then, too, she has knowledge that seems the result of long association rather than a hurried assimilation of the subjects of which she treats. Politics are something which she knows from Alpha to Omega, and the logical way in which she handles the matter of her address is a treat for the time being, even the later one might endeavor to collect material to refute the statements. All this is what memory has stored away, and there is no doubt that if Mrs. Pankhurst comes to tell us about the Serbians she will bring the condition of those now poor but brave people home to us in a way that will rouse practical sympathy and assistance, and be an aid of much value to the women of Toronto who are working in their behalf.

The following letter came among others in response to the cases of Christmas stockings sent by the Women's Patriotic League, to the Hospital of St. John, Holmesdale, Hastings: Mrs. Stern Hicks, Dear Madam—A letter has already been written to you on behalf of all the nurses to thank you and all the members of the W.P.L. of Toronto, for your kind thought of us this Christmas, but as I was on night duty on Christmas Eve, I must really write and tell you about it. There were two of us on duty together that night, and, thanks to the stockings, it was the most enjoyable night that we have ever had. Can you not imagine the fun we had, creeping round only one was awake to see us, because he, poor boy, was in too much pain to sleep, but I am sure that it did his heart good, too. Then, very early Christmas morning, over a cup of tea, we opened our own, and our hearts warmed to our kind sisters across the ocean, as we dipped into the stockings in turn, and thought of those who had tied up the little parcels so beautifully, and packed them in with such loving care, and with such attention as to what nurses most appreciate.

At the annual meeting of the Local Council of Women, one of the speakers was Mr. Swift, librarian of the Canadian Institute for the Blind, who made an appeal for the blind in Canada, who up to the present, have it seems, had no very special attention in the direction of making them self-supporting, or of having anything done in their behalf, which might make their less burdensome than it is now, on account of their special affliction. Among the statements made by Mr. Swift, was one which seemed somewhat surprising. It was that as far as he knew there is only one blind woman in the Dominion who is self-supporting thru working in a factory, no training having been given any others to enable them to help themselves along any industrial line.

Remembering the exhibits shown annually at the Exhibition, exhibits in basketry, underwear and fancy-work, if we remember aright, all said to have been done by the girls at the Institute for the Blind at Brantford, one cannot help wondering if these lines could not be developed so that they might have some marketable value. Then, too, one recollects the sweet, correct playing of a little blind girl, Mary Cunio, whose home is in Toronto and who is receiving her training at Brantford. Why could such talent not be applied to professional business music? There are always openings for such players, and the correct time of the blind should make them extremely arduous to typists. Then as typists, Mr. Swift declared they are sometimes even more correct than those who have the assistance of sight. Is there no way in which this talent might be developed so that they might be generally than at present? It does seem that if only sufficient interest were aroused to give the matter serious attention many things might be done to throw some little light on the lives of those whose path under the most kindly circumstances can never be other than dark. Meantime Mr. Swift is anxious for assistance to enable his department to send more of these girls to increase the amount of their distribution enormously. The depot at Furness continues to keep up its daily meals to the three hundred children and to increase the amount of clothing to be distributed amongst the poor. Coal is always a great difficulty and for a time they were completely out of it, and had all sorts of trouble gathering sufficient sticks to cook with—and heating the hut was out of the question. The supply of household necessities warm clothing is very necessary. They are also starting a little dispensary and I am sending over a supply of household necessities. There are so many small illnesses and accidents among the children. The only doctor is the military doctor and he is naturally not always available. I sent him over a few instruments by request "for accouchements," and am now hoping that I sent the right things.

As assistants at the point of distribution of supplies two other Toronto women, Mrs. Innes-Taylor and Miss Margaret Saunders are each doing their "bit" in assisting Mrs. Adamson, by personal service to the children of Belgian refugees in France.

OFFICERS LIKE DANCING
May Be Seen at Cafe Royal Enjoying Light Fantastic Almost Every Night.

WHERE TO DINE AT NOON
Business men in Toronto have often asked the question where they could secure a really good wholesome lunch or dinner at midday at reasonable cost, so many downtown restaurants having closed in recent years, practically leaving only expensive hotels or chair lunches. The Cafe Royal exactly fills this need. The menu at $50 or $100 is unquestionably the best in the city for the money, being in fact, a four-course one. Orchestral and vocal music adds a charm which is not to be under-estimated. Patronage is steadily increasing, and those who haven't visited the Cafe Royal should not fail to do so as soon as possible.

Piano Club

It costs only $5 to join and $1.25 per week. You secure a $360 Ennis Piano for $267.50, get all the special club privileges and pay no interest, Club limited to 150. Over sixty have joined.

Seven years ago the Williams Piano Club was first introduced to the public of Toronto. It was new, novel, attractive, and appealing. From the first day it was a phenomenal success, despite the fact that it had never actually proven its worth. Today, after seven years, it is more popular than ever. Despite the war; despite the fact that some piano firms have suffered heavily—the seventh Williams Piano Club, to date, is a greater success—there are more memberships taken—than any year in its history, except the boom year of 1913.

No testimonial, no letter, no words could possibly emphasize the remarkable value of the club so eloquently as these facts.

The reason for such phenomenal success lies in the plain sincerity, the self-evident value of the club offer. There is no piano event in Canada that can approach the Williams Club for value given.

Over 1000 Members

Over 1000 members have joined this club during the past six years. They are the cause of its continued success, 1000 families all telling their friends of the big value they get.

That is why the club is almost half full after only one week. That is why you had better call early Monday and select your piano on the club plan and secure the savings, privileges and advantages offered below. It costs only $5 for the first payment. Don't delay; you may be too late.

FAIL TO KEEP OPEN N. PORT OF ARCHANGEL

Ice-Breakers Unable to Cope With Situation and Traffic Will Be Stopped.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—Efforts of the Russian authorities to keep open the northern port of Archangel through the winter have failed, according to advices reaching the department of commerce. Despite the operation of ice breakers many steamers will be forced to winter at the port. Ice breakers in use off the north American coast were purchased last year by the Russians to keep the northern harbor free of ice. Now the port will be closed, it is said, with the entrance of one more big steamer lying at the Bay of Alex. and awaiting the breaking of a channel thru the ice.

DESERTED TO JOIN ANOTHER.
Eager to join his brother at the front, 16-year-old James C. Chaney deserted the Canadian navy authorities at St. John, came to Toronto and en-

He was arraigned in police court Saturday morning, wearing the Queen's Own uniform, and Lieut.-Colonel Levesque, O.C. of that battalion, asked that the case be remanded a week so that he might arrange to keep Chaney in his battalion.

TO GO OVER PROPOSAL CAREFULLY ON MONDAY

President Wilson and Secretary Lansing Will Discuss Lusitania Negotiations.
WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—President Wilson and Secretary Lansing will not begin discussion of Germany's latest offer in the Lusitania negotiations before Monday. It was said the president has the proposal from Berlin before him, and wants to go over it carefully before he begins conferences with the secretary of state. It was pointed out that the situation was not one which calls for haste. Officials in touch with the negotiations reiterated their statement that the situation was unchanged. There was an undertone of expectation that the two governments would be able to find a common ground for agreement in official declarations that the Berlin reply has not made the situation any more serious.

PTE. WM. A. RICHARDS KILLED IN ACTION

Message From Ottawa Reached Toronto Saturday Morning—Friends Mourn Loss.
Pte. William Antil Richards of the 19th Battalion, third Canadian contingent has been killed in action, according to a message from Ottawa which reached his mother, Mrs. S. A. Richards, 419 Pape avenue on Saturday morning. Pte. Richards was a member of the Q.O.R. for three years and at the time of enlisting was an employe of the National Cash Register Company.
He has been at the front since September 20, 1915, and went thru all the engagements in which his battalion participated without a scratch, except for a slight gassing which he considered very unimportant. The late soldier was well known in Toronto and had a large circle of friends who deeply mourn his death.
He was of a particularly jovial nature and wrote most cheerful and interesting letters on his experiences on the firing line and behind it. A letter came only recently in which he acknowledged a package sent by Toronto women to the boys at the front. He said the presents were greatly appreciated, more so in fact, than anyone on this side could tell. It was the opinion of many that because of his fighting qualities and resourcefulness, he would come home unscathed "and a strange coincidence is that his wife, Miss W. A. Richards, is a brother is serving with the 33rd stationed at the Riverdale Barracks. He is Sergt. P. A. Richards.

SEVERAL GLUES INDICATE FIRE WAS INCENDIARY

Chemical in Extinguishers in Parliament Buildings Was Changed by Someone

WAS IT GASOLINE?
 Way Fire Spread When it Was Applied Indicates it Was.

OTTAWA, Feb. 5.—Further evidence goes to show that the Ottawa conflagration was the work of incendiarism.

Charles Stewart, Dominion Policeman Moore and Dominion Policeman Helmer, who were the first who discovered the fire in the reading-room of the commons on Thursday, and who tried to quench it with extinguishers, unite in testimony which indicates that the fire protection apparatus of the parliament buildings had been tampered with. They say that they were at the scene of the blaze soon enough to have extinguished it if the substance expelled from the hand-extinguishers had acted in the normal way. However, they unite in saying that as soon as they turned on a stream from an extinguisher upon a blaze, instead of dying down, the flames sprang forth with renewed fury.

Chemicals Changed.
 Chief Graham of the fire department, after hearing the testimony of these men, expressed the belief that the extinguishers had been tampered with, and that the extinguishing liquid had been replaced by an inflammable substance; or that in some way the extinguishers which were hung about the parliament building had been replaced by others which were charged with gasoline or some similar fuel.

There was a regular system of inspection for the extinguishers, and at regular intervals they were recharged to ensure their proper working in emergency.

"The Spotless Dairy Bathed in Sunshine"
Any Nurse Will Tell You--

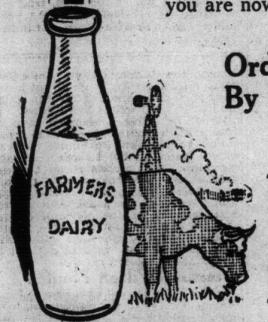

That the richer the milk is in cream the better it is for your children. The city authorities have a standard for butter fat—cream, 3.25%. Our Records show that milk from the Farmers' Dairy always contains one-tenth more cream than this city standard. If you are not getting milk as rich in food as this you are cheating yourself. Farmers' Dairy costs just the same as ordinary milk.

The Purest, Richest, Freshest Milk

You are always sure of the quality of our milk—it comes from carefully inspected farms; rich to begin with, because the cows are well tended and fed; shipped to the dairy in sterilized cans; is scientifically pasteurized in the spotless wonder dairy; never exposed in bottling. Are you sure the milk you are now getting is as carefully handled?

What One Mother Says
"Though I have tried milk from different dairies I certainly am sure that no milk has given me more satisfaction than that from the Farmers' Dairy. My three boys have been brought up on it and they make it their daily food. They are pictures of health, and I know that is because they get plenty of very rich pure milk to drink and fresh air for their lungs."

JUST ONE MORE NAIL IN GERMANY'S COFFIN

That is How The Ottawa Journal Reviews Destruction of Parliament Buildings.

OTTAWA, Feb. 5.—The Ottawa Journal today says: "Strong suspicion exists that the fire in the parliament buildings was due to incendiarism. Undoubtedly much ground exists for such a suspicion. No ordinary explanation of the extraordinary rapidity of the start of the conflagration seems easy. Evidence is strong that there were explosions of an unusual nature, and strong circumstantial evidence must be admitted for the theory that the fire was German business. And as most will believe so, whether justly or not, and their hearts hardened proportionately the event is one more nail in the German coffin, a nail as Canada is concerned. That's the effect such things have—things which the Germans dream help them."

REFUSED TO SHOW PASS SHOT IN ARM BY GUARD

Tony Kystoki Wounded Because He Did Not Halt When Ordered Investigation On.

HAMILTON, Feb. 5.—Because he did not stop when requested to by a Canadian Mounted Rifle guard at the Steel Company of Canada's plant here last night, Kystoki, 34 Arthur street, is in the general hospital suffering from a bullet wound in his arm. The guard said Tony attempted to enter the premises without showing his pass. He was ordered to halt on three occasions but continued toward the factory.

He was given a final order with a threat to shoot but marched on until stopped by a bullet. He then showed his pass and went to work. The incident occurred at 6.30 o'clock last evening and the man did not report his injury to his foreman until six hours later, when he was taken to the hospital. Col. W. C. Brooks, the commanding officer of the C.M.R., is making a full investigation of the case to report to divisional headquarters.

How You May Throw Away Your Goggles

The statement is made that thousands wear eyeglasses who do not really need them. If you are one of these unfortunate, then these glasses may be ruining your eyes instead of helping them. Thousands who wear these "windows" may prove for themselves that they can dispense with glasses if they get the following prescription first at once they receive active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets; fill a two-ounce bottle with warm water and drop in one Bon-Opto tablet. With this harmless liquid solution bathe the eyes two to four times daily, and you are likely to be astonished at the results right from the start. Many who have been told that they have astigmatism, eye-strain, cataract, sore eyelids, weak eyes, conjunctivitis and other eye disorders, report wonderful benefits from the use of this prescription. Get this prescription filled and use it; you may as strengthen your eyes that glasses will not be necessary. Thousands who are blind, or nearly so, or who wear glasses might never have required them if they had cared for their eyes in time. Save your eyes before it is too late! Do not become one of these victims of neglect. Eyeglasses are only like crutches and every few years they must be changed, so better see if you can, like many other things, get rid of them. BAR SUSPECTED SHIPS FROM DANISH PORTS

Action of German Warship in Seizing Kiev Given as Reason.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—For some time past British authorities have been allowing vessels carrying goods suspected of German destination to proceed to Danish ports under a guarantee to return suspected parts of their cargo later. This arrangement has now been stopped, according to Copenhagen despatches, owing to the fact that the steamship Kiev, which was permitted to continue her voyage under these conditions, was seized by a German warship and taken to Swinemunde, where she was compelled to discharge shipments of coffee, cocoa and figs destined for Germany.

WAR SUMMARY

THE WEEK'S EVENTS REVIEWED

BY W. H. STEWART.

gained some advantages from Zeebrugge, but it is situated inland on a canal and they got it by stealing a march on the Allies. They cannot steal such a march again.

If the Germans should attempt an offensive in the west, they are after bigger game than the mere occupation of Calais or Boulogne. What they would be attempting is either the driving of the Allies entirely from Belgian soil for the sake of its political effect on London, or the envelopment of the French and British armies to compass the destruction of France. But in case the position of the British and French was rendered untenable, they could retreat south of Paris, and send reinforcements to the French coast to attack the German lines of communication. At present the strip of coast of Belgium occupied by the Germans is only 20 or 25 miles in extent, and the landing of a sufficient force to turn the German flank would be a matter of difficulty, but let the line of coast occupied by the Germans be extended to a hundred miles, requiring three or four hundred thousand men to guard it, and the feat of turning the German flank could be accomplished with comparative ease.

Situation in West
Nothing very new is noted in the operations in France and Belgium. The Germans at the end of last week attempted to advance against the right and left flanks of the French army, holding the ridge of Artois in the past week, but after possessing the ground occupied by French trenches which had been obliterated by heavy artillery, their infantry came under the range of the French guns, and was lost. They made gains of the first trenches of the first line of the front of two or three miles at the extreme of both French wings. This fighting was preceded by heavy rain and deluges on the night of Feb. 2. Later in the week the French had ample revenge by exploding eight mines in one man miller and trenches.

Italian Situation
Events on the Italian front bear a similarity to events on the Franco-British front, with this difference, that there are more clashes between detachments. The Italians have recently captured their army on the Isonzo front which previously had been maintained at 550,000 by considerable fresh forces. It was estimated at the beginning of the war that Italy could put in the field an active army of a million and a half men, but so far she has been content with maintaining half that number at the front. The almost immediate expulsion of Austrians from positions which they had long occupied on the Isonzo front, is one more proof of the growing inability of the Austrians to hang on to positions which they have captured. The Austrians are using the best troops that they can muster against the Italians, and are making great exertions to maintain their present positions in the belief, it is said, that the war will be over in three or four months.

Move in Albania

Having overrun Montenegro and driven her remaining fighting men from their country, the Austrians are pursuing their advance in rugged, roadless, inhospitable Albania, marching on Durazzo, which has been captured by Italian and Serbian detachments, and creeping down the coast towards Avlona, so as to be ready to strike at it as soon as the Germans and Bulgarians advance on Saloniki. Many premature stories of German advances on this Greek port have been published. One was published in the London press of nearly three weeks ago that the Germans had already begun to bombardment of this town, but their aeroplanes have not yet moved from their quarters at Monastir, where they established themselves in the middle of December. It is now said that they will begin to move upon Saloniki by Feb. 15, and the Germans have begun to include the Balkan theatre in their official communications. The latest report from Berlin said that numerous fires had been reported by German aviators in the Vardar valley.

Destroying Railways

This would indicate that the British and French forces have begun the destruction of the railway line from the Greek frontier to Saloniki, by the burning of ties and culverts, and the destruction of bridges, so as to hamper the German advance as much as possible. By these precautionary measures perhaps two weeks' grace would be gained by the Allies to perfect their arrangements for defence. It may also be true that something in the nature of a surprise is being prepared for the Germans. The flanks of the Allies' defences are said to rest on the sea, and the lines are reputed to be strong in every way. It is improbable that a big naval siege craft has been supplied for use against the German guns, and the line of coast from Saloniki has probably been swept as bare as possible of cover for use by an attacking force in approaching the defences of the town. If Saloniki can be held as Riga or Verdun was held, the Germans will sustain one of the severest checks that they have yet sustained in the war. Field Marshal von Mackensen is said to have been given command of the besieging armies. Contrary to a supposition that is prevalent in some quarters Mackensen is not a Scotch descent.

Egyptian Situation

Altho it seems certain that the Germans and Turks are making preparations for an attack on Egypt, nothing definite as to their progress in the design has come from the east for the past week. It may be that disasters elsewhere have diverted the attention of the enemy from this enterprise. But for the purpose he has constructed a branch railway from Jerusalem to Beersheva, and he is projecting a line to the Egyptian frontier. The most serious problem that an invader of Egypt would have to face is the provision of an adequate water supply for his troops. From one-third to one-half a million men would be sent on the expedition, but existing wells are inadequate to furnish water for more than a few hundreds or thousands at most. It is said that the enemy plans the construction of a pipeline some hundreds of miles in length to follow the route of the railway for the provision of water to his army, but, obviously, many dangers lurk in the course of procedure from the destruction of part of this line from accident or design. On top of this danger, large quantities of water would have to be provided at intervals

SHARP ATTACK REPELSED

Dangerous Condition Relieved Just in Time by "Fruit-a-tives."

MR. F. J. CAVEEN, 832 Gerrard St. East, Toronto.

For two years I was a victim of Acute Indigestion and Gas in the Stomach. It afterwards attacked my Heart, and I had pains all over the body to which I could hardly make around. I tried all kinds of medicines but none of them did me any good. At last, acting on the advice of a friend, I decided to try "Fruit-a-tives." I bought the first box last June, and now I am well, after using only three boxes. I recommend "Fruit-a-tives" to anyone suffering from Indigestion, no matter how acute or how long it has lasted.

Simple Indigestion often leads to Heart Attacks, Catarrh of the Stomach and constant distress of mind and body. If you are bothered with any Stomach Trouble, and especially if Constipation troubles you, take "Fruit-a-tives."

50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25 cents. At all dealers or sent post-paid by Fruit-a-tives, Limited, Ottawa.

Unless, the Germans have bombarded Paris and several English counties from their Zeppelin ships, it is hard to believe that they have landed over 180 persons were killed or injured, including a number of children. The material damage was done, churches and workmen's residences being the chief targets of the dirigibles. It is probable that this expedition was undertaken with the object of cheering up the German people who have been downcast over the recent inaction of the German armies and the apparent stagnation of the war. The Germans may have also intended this raid as a hint to Roumania to remain neutral.

Persian Operations
The Russians continue the prosecution of vigorous operations in Persia. The latest word received from that theatre is the defeat of the Turks in two directions, from the east and the south. In Lower Persia the Russians have approached a pass that is forty miles from back on Meshan, and have established contact with the British in Lower Mesopotamia by way of the Shat-el-Arab River and its eastern tributaries.

Advance in Caucasus
The Russians have been vigorously following up their victory in the Caucasus the whole week and they have taken many prisoners and captured great quantities of Turkish stores of food and munitions. They have penetrated south of Erzerum and an unconfirmed report says that the Turks are retreating from positions which they long held in Armenia. East of Erzerum, the Russians have driven the Turks on a forty mile front back on Meshan, and they have come down from the frigid zone of the mountains into the temperate zone of the lower country, where they are finding excellent camping ground for their troops till spring. It is hoped in some quarters that the successes won in the Caucasus will deter the Turks from embarking on their proposed expedition against Egypt.

Siege Warfare in Russia
In Russia the situation has degenerated into siege warfare. After making a successful advance at the rate of two miles a day, the Russians were overtaken by a thaw which held up the moving forward of heavy shells which depends upon good roads for its transportation.

NINE GERMAN RAIDERS TO PREY ON COMMERCE

Another Which Escaped From Kiel Preys on British Shipping.

PRIVATEER NEW SHIP
Moewe Said to Be Extremely Fast Vessel With Large Coal Bunkers.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—Nine sea raiders of the type of the Moewe have been fitted out by the Germans, and one of them, which escaped from Kiel on New Year's Day, is said to have been since busy preying on British commerce with such success as the Appam's captor, according to a story told here tonight by Mrs. Francis Fuller, wife of the British Governor-General of Aphanti. Mrs. Fuller was one of 97 passengers of the Appam, who arrived here from Norfolk, Va., on board the Old Dominion steamer Jefferson.

Mrs. Fuller declared one of the German officers who came aboard the Appam was authorized for the statement that the Germans had equipped the nine raiders at Kiel.

The British officers and seamen all agreed that the raider was apparently a new vessel of about 6000 tons gross. Her coal bunkers, they said, were unusually large.

M. C. Watson, also a passenger on the Appam, told of a plot to overcome the German who composed the prize crew of the Appam.

Watson, who said he volunteered as third officer on the Appam, has since been preying on British commerce with such success as the Appam's captor, according to a story told here tonight by Mrs. Francis Fuller, wife of the British Governor-General of Aphanti. Mrs. Fuller was one of 97 passengers of the Appam, who arrived here from Norfolk, Va., on board the Old Dominion steamer Jefferson.

The Germans, added Watson, "were fearful of us, and ignored many insults that were hurled at them."

Alfred Osborne, a miner from the Gold Coast, also told of the plot to overcome the Germans.

FELL FROM CAR.
Stepping off a southbound Queen car on Rensselaers avenue Friday night, Mrs. Guzey, 137 Indian road, was thrown to the pavement and sustained a badly injured knee. She was taken to her home in the police ambulance.

TEARING OF TISSUES BY WOUNDS IN WAR

Injuries Much More Severe in European Struggle Than the South African Conflict.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—Sir Anthony Bowley, surgeon-in-ordinary to King George, has been drawing some interesting comparisons between the present campaign and the one in South Africa.

In the South African war wounds were not so severe, and there was less smashing than in the present campaign. There, bullets had frequently travelled more than half a mile and lost much of their velocity, whereas in the present war the bullet only travelled a few yards.

The ordinary bullet wound of the South African war was quite small, as the it had been made with a broadsword. In the present war there was much more tearing of the tissues, and one thing that has struck Sir Anthony is the extreme rapidity with which wounds become infected.

How You May Reduce Your Weight
Overweightness is a very unpleasant condition, especially in the present day, when slender figures are so fashionable, and every reader of this paper has noticed the tendency of some people to put on an excessive amount of fat. If you happen to be one of those whose weight is more than it should be, don't try to starve yourself, eat all you want to eat, but go to your druggist and get all of orlene in capsule form and take one with each meal. Oil of orlene increases the oxygen-carrying power of the blood and dissolves the fatty tissues in many cases when slender figures are so fashionable. Be sure to get oil of orlene in capsule form. It is sold only in its original sealed packages. Any good druggist has it, or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00. Address D. Little Drug Co., Box 1240, Montreal, Can.

obediently. The Frenchwoman has discarded all her pre-war ornaments except her pearls, and these she has two good reasons for not abjuring.
First and foremost, pearls are beautiful in their becomingness, and, secondly, to retain their lustre and tone pearls must be worn.

For the rest she favors ornaments fresh from the battlefield, rings made of pieces of a German shell, or charms from the same source. And these are being acquired also, and it is safe to say that there is hardly a woman in all France who has not her bit of the battlefield, so set that she can wear it as an ornament.

Mme. Poincaré's only ring of the moment is a broad band of dull metal.
Mme. Joffre's thumb shows one also;
Mme. Sorel, the famous actress; Mme.
Sarah Bernhardt, and thousands of others display the battle symbol.

Of course, to be really interesting,
the ring should be a gift from a soldier, but the shops have laid in a supply of them, so now it is possible to buy what may not have been given.

The "bomb charms" are merely small pieces of the shell set in a silver or gold frame. Not really ornamental or beautiful, but full of luck one way or another, and in any case fine harbin-gers of superstition, for many a pen-sant already believes if she loses her bit of shell or forgets to hang it round her neck her "man" will suffer at the hands of the Germans.

Regimental pins, and badges worn some time ago, and now the anulet and talisman stage is here, and these are so attractive that the one may not have any faith in their occult power, they are tempted to buy all the same.

The Zodiac stones are used, and are beautifully set, and there are whole necklaces composed of these semi-precious stones, if one wishes to go in heavily for superstition, but as a matter of fact a pin or brooch, with an occult sign is enough for most people in these times when economy is, or ought to be, the chief consideration.

The tiny crystal balls came first.
They are exact imitations of the larger ones thru which the gazers into the unknown see so much.

They are worn as charms on watch chains or necklaces. The more expensive are mounted in gold or platinum, but others have merely a silver band about them. However, if one looks hard enough they may see the face, in miniature, of "the man who has all your thoughts," at least so they will tell you when they try to sell you the crystal charm.

SOME GOOD ONES IN NEW OLD-TIME FROCKS

Quaintness is Keynote of Present
Afternoon's Latest Gown as Well as Evening Wear.

Quaintness is the keynote of the present afternoon frock, as well as of those for informal evening wear, to re-echo our grandmothers is now the fashion.

The wise woman will be sure to add one of the charming cross-barred mat-terials to her list of new spring fabrics, for these are more lovely than ever.

In the cross-bar all sorts of materials appear; even the silks are showing the effect. The bars are narrower than the checks and plaids, rivaling the wonderful designs in stripes which are coming over from France.

Many of the dainty muslins and voiles have within each little square a tiny mossy or rose spray, or perhaps an embroidered dot. These, when trimmed with the delicate pinks and blues in which the French always delight, will make the daintiest of gowns. Another combination, in harmony with past times, is the use of narrow black velvet ribbons, with some sprays of pink roses or conventional little bows.

Judging from the displays in the shops this is to be a year of much white and of gay flowered costumes, retaining the plain surface materials for the street and sport clothes.

TABLE COVERINGS CAN BE MADE OF CAMBRIC

Dressers, Lamps and Mantels Can Also Be Shielded From Dust.

The necessity of covering dressers, sideboards, bro-a-bac, lamps and beds on sweeping day has always sent the maid scurrying about for old aprons, sheets, towels and anything else she could lay her hands on to use for the purpose. One housekeeper has solved the difficulty in this way: She purchased a quantity of gray cambric and made from it a large sheet with which to cover the beds and sideboards; smaller covers for dressers and toilet tables were made, and still others, in suitable shapes were designed to put over lamps, mantels and the like. She also made from the cambric a bag to keep the covers in; this was hung in the broom closet. While light, the cambric formed a perfect protection against dust, and a simple shaking when the sweeping was finished freed the covers from all dust that had settled upon them, so that they required washing but once a month. The use of these dust covers saved much valuable time and extra work. The cost of such a set is moderate and it does not take long to make them.

Washing Knitted Shawls

To wash knitted or crocheted shawls fold them as flat as possible and lay carefully in a pillow case, run thru at intervals with basting thread to keep flat. Then they should be handled like other flannel or woolen goods.

If washed separately, observe the usual precautions for woolen goods, squeezing thru the hands and keeping the suds and rinsing water of the same lukewarm temperature. Take out of pillowcase, but do not hang knitted goods up to dry. Put in the oven on a big platter, shaking and turning occasionally, or lay on a clean cloth in the sunshine.

ADVANCED SPRING HAT STYLES TRIUMPH OF ART AND RIBBONS

Paris Shops Show Beautiful Designs in Close-Fitting Straw Toques and High Hats Smothered in Ribbon.

PARIS, France—The Paris modistes are holding their advanced spring openings, and very lovely are the hats that are being shown and carried away by the many buyers who have arrived for the spring purchases. Almost without exception, the hats are small and quantities of ribbons are used for trimmings. Also tulle is popular, and, of course, flowers. Generally speaking, the crowns of both the toques and hats are high and rounded, many somewhat resembling the new French helmets in shape. These rounded crowns in many cases are used as the foundations for profusion of ribbons or tulle trimmings which quite change the form of the crowns.

Among the beautiful models seen at Camille Roger, on the rue de la Paix, were the two hats shown in the accompanying sketch. The top one is a quite new straw, resembling lace. The hat is black and fits closely over the head, the top and right side rounding to the shape of the head, while the left side mounts and flares very high behind, with a graceful curve to the extreme point. This flaring piece is transparent, the lace design becoming finer and more open towards the edge and quite solid at the base. A wreath of tiny blue flowers encircles the hat, and, at the point where the flare starts, on the left side, a single pink rose with its green leaves is placed. Never is a French hat made without some little touch that is as coquettish as it is unexpected, something that lifts it from the commonplace. In this case the touch is seen in two very natural-looking grapes grouped with the pink rose. Who but a French modiste would have achieved that color effect, added to a single pink rose!

A Triumph of Art

The other hat shown in the sketch is one of the new very high ones. It is of fine blue straw, soft and pliable, falling into graceful curves as it is plaited into shape at the extreme top, where the high loops of ribbon are attached. This ribbon is a pale silver gray satin, with moiré facing. The combination of blue and gray is exquisite, and the hat is a triumph of art. This ribbon is a pale silver gray satin, with moiré facing. The combination of blue and gray is exquisite, and the hat is a triumph of art. This ribbon is a pale silver gray satin, with moiré facing. The combination of blue and gray is exquisite, and the hat is a triumph of art.

Let women differ as to their requirements, hence as charming models are shown by Camille Roger that are not at all exaggerated in height. In fact, there was one that was not too high, a change from the comfortable toques referred to above. It was a round, or rather, an oblong toque of a beautiful bronze straw, the brim of which mounted slightly and flared decidedly on each side at the back, turning over and looking for all the world like the wings of an aeroplane. All the top, including the upper part of the flaring wings, was of changeable taffetas. For trimming, ivy leaves were arranged flat against the brim all around, and two small pink roses, one light and one dark, were tucked in among the ivy, their pale green leaves contrasting effectively with the dark green of the ivy.

Ribbon Trimming Popular

But the hats that will be the most popular for the coming season are sure to be those trimmed with ribbon. Camille Roger is showing two that are "ideal," and it is easy to predict their success. The first is made of navy blue taffetas, and is a simple round hat with a narrow drooping brim all covered with the taffetas. The crown is domed-shaped, but its shape is entirely lost under the rows of taffetas ruffles that encircle it. These ruffles, or more properly flounces (for they are laid in little box plaits), are made of navy blue taffetas ribbon, not quite two inches in width, all edged with one-quarter-inch wide black ribbon. The flounces are put on in spiral form, that is to say, the ribbon is uncut. Starting at the middle of the top of the crown, it is put on following the curve of the crown and round the crown until five overlapping flounces cover the entire crown. There is, however, an upward movement toward the left side of the top of these encircling flounces, which makes all the difference in the "chic" of the hat. The same model was made entirely of black net ruffles on a black taffetas hat, with a red camellia ornamenting the left side, tucked in among the ruffles.

Another model made on these lines is less high and a bit wider. This is of crown straw, with the same narrow drooping brim, but the crown rather lower. Also wider ribbon is used, and therefore the result is a lower and wider hat, flatter and more spreading than the blue one just described. The ribbon is a changeable brown and blue taffetas, which, with the brown straw, is very pretty. The crown is made of gris fumee straw. It is shaped higher in front than at the sides and back, and the ribbon is slanted back from the face. The top of the hat and is entirely covered with row upon row of main ribbon of the same color as the straw. The ribbon is also arranged in spirals, but in this case it is not gathered or ruffled, but laid flat, the rows overlapping, it has the effect of making the hat look narrow. At the edge the ribbon extends straight out beyond the brim; and in the front, towards the right side, is arranged a row of many loops with one end placed flatly against the brim at the top. In the spring, as can be seen, the demand in Paris will be for ribbon ribbon, and yet more ribbon. The thrifty shopper will provide herself with whole pieces, not with remnants, for short lengths that cannot be matched will not be in demand. Probably the demand will be greatest for narrow taffetas, and those with plait edges are being used extensively, in plain rather than in fancy ribbons.

TWO OF THE LATEST SPRING MODELS FROM PARIS.

A PLEA FOR KNITTERS

(By a Sock-Fiend)

When my work in the office is over,
With a feeling related to glee,
I pick up my desk and wend homewards,
Where mother is waiting for me,
And then when our supper is over,
Beside the grate-fire we sit,
Each busy with wool and with needles,
And we knit and we knit and we knit.

The play has for me no attractions,
And how can I trip thru the dance,
When my thoughts are so constantly flying,
To my brave laddie "Somewhere in France"?
And I fancy I hear his voice calling,
"Mid the booming of murderous guns;
"Little girl, keep the home-fires burning,
For the chaps who are facing the Huns."

Sometimes folks come over to our house,
And my hobby displeases them so,
That it's, "Do stop that tiresome knitting—
It gets on my nerves, don't you know?"
But not till the boys in the trenches
Have no longer reason to fight,
Will I give up my hobby of knitting—
Now, won't you agree I am right?

Embroidery's all right on occasion,
And crochet-work quite a fine art;
But in times of such imminent peril,
For that stuff I haven't the heart.
And there's many a girl in Toronto
(Who I don't want to give any knocks),
Who is spoiling good eyesight on dollies,
When she ought to be knitting warm socks.

Mothers, wives, sisters and sweethearts,
If you don't want the Huns to hold sway,
Forget the pink teas and receptions,
They can bide a less perilous day.
Forget "bridge" was ever invented—
Get busy and learn how to knit—
And we'll all earn a share in the vict'ry,
By faithfully doing our bit.

Stewed Pears.

Twelve small pears, one and a half pounds loaf sugar, one-half pint of water, the rind and juice of three lemons. Cut thick four pieces of whole ginger, bruised; two drops cochineal; a little powdered cinnamon, and a few cloves. Stew the pears very gently for 10 hours.

Anchovy Paste.

Take the yolks of ten eggs, boiled hard, and two tablespoons of essence of anchovy, one half pound butter, mace, nutmeg and pepper to taste. No salt. The whole should be well pounded in a mortar. The eggs must be cold before using.

LEATHER AND PELTRY DEMAND JUST NOW

For Trimmings on Costumes to Be Worn for Fashionable Outdoor Skating.

WHITE CLOTH FAVORED

The Most Popular Material is a Lovely Quality of Broadcloth.

BY H. M. BALL.

THE establishment of ice skating as a pastime is responsible for a new surge in the mystifying trend of fashion! Exquisitely made leather and cloth costumes are being whirled out from the exclusive couturiers in order to meet the ever-increasing demand for both indoor and outdoor skating enthusiasts. There is a slight distinction between the two types of costumes, representing the two forms of skating, but this is chiefly in the cut of the model and the choice of fabric and trimmings. Indoor skating, which implies the execution of intricate dance steps and carnival exhibitions by those who have made a study of this beautiful and healthful exercise, claims the more elaborate creations of dame fashion's dictate—but not necessarily the more becoming models.

White Is Favored

Altho there are few restrictions that must be adhered to in the choice of the skating costume, the devotees seem to have established several of their own—for, in choosing her attire for the covered rink, white is universally favored, and the popular material is a very lovely quality of broadcloth. Full ripple lines mark the exclusive models, and the use of sleeve collars and hems, and the seeming reckless use of exquisite peltry are also outstanding features of the 1916 model. Only do wide trimming bands of fur appear wherever possible to finish the lines of the costumes, but chic little sets of toque, muff, and scarf in fur are worn in great numbers. Nor is the fur which is employed to trim the skirt destined to remain close to the perforated tops of the fancy kid skating boots. Graduating bands are applied on some of the best models reaching to within five inches of the normal waistline—and rarely is the normal or patch pocket of the costume complete without its outline of fur reinforced with narrow silk braid.

Unique Leather Designs

Chief among the new innovations in all the sporting togs of the present season is the usage of leather. At first it was modestly introduced in straps, belts, lapels and buttons, then cleverly used as a contrast in a number of stunning creations, and now with unrivaled success the most unique designs are being launched in which the entire coat portion of the sport costume is leather and the skirt a daring lush velvet, suede, velveteen, or chamois.

A Good Example

In the accompanying illustration may be seen an absolutely up-to-the-minute expression of the leather and peltry in a fashionable skating costume. It is hip length and fashioned of dull white leather. The belt is quite normal, waistline and effecting a smart flare in the skirt portion. The coat is double-breasted and ornamented with diagonal slash pockets and leather buttons. The collar can be made to assume three distinct outlines and is underfaced with white chamois velvet skirt in a dainty wide black and white stripe. The boots are of white buck with black buttons and the summing little toque of ornamented black and white set the costume off to perfection.

LABOR-SAVING DEVICES WOMEN SHOULD LEARN

Useful Hints for Cleaning Silverware, and for Lessening Drug-gery for Housewives.

Every woman likes to have all of her silver displayed and in use, but keeping it bright and shining requires considerable attention on her part, so that rather than have tarnished and discolored silver in her home, very of-ten it is stored away. There is a silver cleaning pan that is truly marvelous, in that no rubbing or polishing is necessary; one simply adds a teaspoon of baking soda and a tablespoon of salt to the warm water in the pan, which is of a certain composition that loosens the tarnish and discoloration in a few minutes and out comes the silver as shining and clean as if hours of rubbing and polishing had been spent on it.

These pans come in all sizes, costing the modest sum of $1.25 and upward for the very large ones and are guaranteed to last for years.

Another worth-while invention is a dishwasher, into which all the dishes used during a meal are placed and hot soapy water poured over them. The actual washing is done by a propeller in the bottom, which rotates, which dashes the water in a swirling effect over all the dishes, perfectly cleaning them, and hot rinsing water poured in. The dishes can be left to dry in the machine, while the dirt-water is put in order and crumbs swept up.

Chicken Sausage.

This is an old recipe, said to have been popular in 1752. Perhaps it may prove popular enough to be added to the modern cook book.

Take two spring chickens, weighing two pounds each, and chop the meat fine. Add to it an equal amount of fat, pure lard, and mix thoroughly, adding a cup of fine dry bread crumbs, the yolks of three eggs, pepper, salt, a little summer savory, sage, and enough sweet milk to bind the mass, to be held in by the fat. Shape into little sausages. Heat and grease the frying-pan and fry the sausages in the usual way.

DINNER GOWN AND SPORT COSTUME

Embroidered georgette crepe over white taffeta constitutes the tunic over this velvet dinner gown. Black and white chamois-velvet skirt worn with a white leather coat. A fetching sport costume.

Hoop Skirts Minus Hoops Are Coming Into Fashion

Visible and Invisible Distenders Will Be Used to Give Necessary Effect—Sleeves, Also, Are Receiving Attention—Larger Hats Coming.

BY H. M. BALL.

EVEN fashion's realm is not free from the possibility of invasion, and for every day new situations are presenting themselves which were scarcely anticipated the day before, but which, for this very reason, provide interest and amusement for the devotee. However, it may be criticized, the time devoted to the study of dress by the modern woman is far from being wasted. The study of modern dress, at once enthralling and of ancient dress, and with it the knowledge of the customs, pleasures and pursuits of other women in other periods. Practically all style is an echo of the past, cleverly adapted to the present with a few deft touches by the famous French designers.

Present tendencies point to a decidedly interesting spring season in which the skirt and the sleeve will prove the topics of greatest importance. Now that the first blazes of the military influence, which so seriously effected the modes of 1914 and 1915, has been toned down and perfected, the field is again open for pretty new styles in which Spanish, Norwegian and Russian influences are strongly expressed.

Hoop Skirts Minus Hoops

Quite a stir has been made by the introduction of the hoop skirt, minus the hoop. This achievement marks the opening of the new season, and the slightly lengthened skirt with the greatest fullness at the hip line. In this way the "beehive" and the "bell" contour is achieved, and the graceful full flowing skirt of the Spanish dancer is taken from behind the footlights and placed in the sacred precincts of milady's faultless wardrobe. Very attractive, too, is the season's tendency to combine the skirt with a lightly fitted bodice chosen from the early Victorian era. With the aid of trimming bands mostly, is the new skirt contour effected. Except for a slight flattening in the centre front the new silhouette flares equally all about the figure, and the application of a shirred ruffle about five inches below the hips, is one of the most attractive means of securing the desired buoyancy. Perhaps the method which will be most generally employed is that of the graduating and wide encircling trimming bands of fur, silk or chiffon which have already secured for the newly launched models a very wide popularity. Two of the very new, as shown, illustrate this feature, and prophesy its continued favor.

An Unusual Effect

The charming little frock to the left is a delicate, yellow-tinted chiffon poised over a flounced tulle petticoat in the same shade. A very unusual and pretty effect is obtained by the treatment of the bodice which is ornamented with crown chiffon-edged ruffles and a narrow band of sable finishing the pretty neckline. Four of the flounces achieve the distended proportion of the skirt, all the advance modes for skirts. Note the gradual adjustment of the sleeve fullness towards the wrist which is then suddenly drawn into a snug little cuff topped with a rim of the fur. Maise-colored kid shoes and silk hose, embroidered in brown are in dainty harmony with this charming little frock.

GRACEFUL FEATURES

Jeweled Bands Pass Over the Shoulders and Support Low Corsage.

BY H. M. BALL.

THREPE is still one type of frock which apparently defies the hundred little spasmodic changes wrought by the vagaries of Dame Fashion during her active in one season and out the next. This is the dinner gown, so pronouncedly the attire of the woman of slender form and beautiful face. This season, as in previous, the artistic lines out from first place the styles of the moment, and classic draperies, figure clinging designs, and odd, whimsical arrangements, with a considerable share in the honors, with just a very few ultra-fashionable creations to lend the desired variety. In the dinner gown illustrated are shown some of the very prettiest and most graceful features developed this season. Altho it has been venturously for street wear in spring, the designers do not taboo it from the department of formal wear, and in this beautiful gown, black velvet constitutes the foundation which extends into a round train. Jeweled bands confined under one large ornament pass over the shoulders and support the low corsage of black tulle and white embroidered crepe. The tunic is of the crepe mounted over stiff white taffeta and is also paneled with jeweled trimming, a broad hem of subtle odds gorgonousness from the under portion of the skirt, which in contrast clings about the ankles. A butterfly bow between the shoulders, is another hint of the Parisian designers' unmistakable touch. High black beaded slippers, with pearl crossing over the instep are worn with this gown.

EVOLUTION OF SHOES SHOWS MANY CHANGES

Thruout History Nations Have Continually Changed Style of Footgear

FASHIONS AND UTILITY Highly Decorated Shoes Were Most Worn by Society of Elizabethan Era.

How would you like to live in a country where shoes are never old-fashioned? There are peoples whose shoes have not changed in style for centuries. The Japanese, Chinese, Turks, Arabs and Indians, for instance, look with wonder and disdain at our sudden leaps from one style to another and question whether we have the right to call ourselves civilized. They, too, would wonder there any good reason, but they will not do it merely for the sake of changing.

In China a new style in women's shoes has recently become necessary. The ancient custom of binding having been abolished, the natural feet now demand larger shoes.

The first shoes were sandals, designed merely to protect the soles of the feet from stones and thorns; they were strapped over the instep and between the toes. The ancients wore their sandals and mother earth has begun to realize how much more comfortable their children's feet are in shoes than in their primitive boots that have been so long worn.

From sandals grew the buskin, when the Moors in Spain discovered the art of tanning certain skins into a leather soft and pliable enough to slip over the foot.

Other Nations' Footwear.

The moccasins of Indians, an ancient form of footwear, ideal for life in a wilderness, and their style is the same as it is always has been. They were cut and embroidered in beads and grasses in many different designs, which varied with the tribe that made them.

Many of the first shoes were crude, having leather uppers and heavy wooden soles. In the fourteenth century, patterns occupied the place of the modern rubbers or goloshes. They were made of aspen wood, so as to be light, and had clumsy springs in the heel, and were fastened to the inner shoes as their owners clattered along the streets, raised by iron rings above the mud.

In 1588, the Duke of Anjou introduced Polish shoes into England. They were fastened on by elaborate cords of silver, gold and silk, so shaped that they gave great width across the toes; the dandified duke wore them to dance in.

In the reign of Henry VIII, shoes became very large, so that in the reign of Queen Mary, parliament passed a law limiting them to six inches across the top of the toes.

In Queen Elizabeth's time slippers made their appearance in England, and ruffled were first worn. It was at this time that the high boot, laced on the side, came into prominence; it was called the "startup." This is the type of shoe that is much worn on the streets today. No there is no history telling us where his sister shoe, laced up the back, originated.

During the reign of William and Mary, shoe buckles of silver and gold appeared in England. In the early part of the eighteenth century, high heels and silken linings were introduced into France, and later into England. Women of those days had to learn to keep their balance after years of shuffling along on pointed toes.

In the days of armor, military boots were big, specially designed to support the elaborate armor which every warrior had to win by some brave deed. In the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, the fashion of wearing chippies, turks, and other shoes, was introduced into Italy. These are still worn in Cairo, Italy. They were very elaborate, made of wood laid with from five to six inches of wool, and were from five to six inches high, according to the rank of the wearer. The feet were strapped securely to them.

HOW TO GROW SWEET PEAS SUCCESSFULLY

If we except the rose, the sweet pea is easily the most popular of all flowers. This is not to be wondered at when we consider the comparatively easy culture, delicious fragrance and the immense quantity of flowers which may be culled from quite short rows, while in favorable locations the vines will continue blooming for at least three months.

The late Henry Eckford of England may be called the father of the sweet pea, as previous to his time the plants were short and bushy. It was in 1870 that he started his life-work on the sweet pea, and the development since that date has been one of the wonders of the floral world. It is said that some scientific botanists believe that certain races of plants have rare periods which may occur once in every few hundred years when they develop all sort of eccentricities; and if this be so, the year 1901 marks one of these rare periods in the history of the sweet pea, as it was in the summer of that year that a new type of sweet pea was found in at least three gardens, one of these being in Northamptonshire, one in Somersetshire, and the other in Cambridgeshire, England. All these evolutions or sports are said to have been found in that fine old pink grandiflora variety, Prima Donna. This new variety was of very large size, the standard and wings being beautifully waved and crimped, and thus the new and glorious Spencer race of sweet peas was born.

Countess Spencer First.

The first of this new type to be exhibited was one found by Mr. Cole, gardener to Earl Spencer, at North Park, Northampton, and under the name of Countess Spencer, the name of the flower being a rich rose pink; and its appearance at the annual exhibition of the National Sweet Pea Society's show in London created great excitement and admiration among the enthusiasts. This new variety was offered to the public in 1904 and now Countess Spencer has many hundred offspring, embracing all colors previously found in this family and others of quite new shades. In fact, it might be said that only two colors still buff the sweet pea hybridize these being a pure yellow and a rich full deep blue, such as it found in Salvia Patens.

Although the sweet pea was first introduced from Sicily about 1600, practically ninety per cent. of all the sweet peas used throughout the world is now grown in California, it being estimated that 200 million are raised there every year. As one acre will, in an average season, produce from 500 to 1000 pounds of seed, it will be at once apparent that the sweet pea eventually pass into the hands of thousands, many millions of amateur and professional growers. I ought to state, however, that the best Spencer varieties do not, as a rule, produce more than 200 to 300 pounds of seed to the acre. Although in this section the sweet pea vines are raised in not more than four to five feet except in exceptional seasons and locations, in Canada the plants attain a height of from ten to twelve feet, and bloom from June until frost.

Follow Simple Rules.

There is no royal road to success in growing the sweet pea. The amateur and small grower is quite as likely to make a success of his culture as the professional gardener, provided a few simple rules are followed. The ground must be thoroughly cultivated and deep-ploughed, and the seed should be sown as early as possible. Of course, the ordinary cultivation as extended to the vegetable plot will give fair results, but for those who are anxious to have flowers the "best ever" and far surpassing those of their neighbors, more extra labor must necessarily be expended in preparing the soil. If it is intended to grow the peas in rows, a trench should be made two feet wide and two foot spadings deep. In removing the soil, throw the top layer on one side and the bottom or sub-soil on the other side of the trench with fork, or should it be too hard, take a pick, breaking it up well, and mix with plenty of old garden refuse or rough stable litter, on top of which put a two or three-inch layer of decayed stable or cow manure, and replace the top part of the soil, mixing this again with well-rotted manure and a little bone meal; then fill up with the top soil and any old garden refuse or rough stable manure, bone meal, and a little sulphate of potash. If this could be done in the late fall so much the

BLACK-RED GAMES ARE GOOD FIGHTERS

Breeding for Show Purposes Has Not Dullied Their Fiery Tempers.

RECORDS show that game fowls existed in India for centuries before the Christian era. History refers to cock fights as one of the Roman pleasures, and cocking mains have been popular all thru English history.

The original Black-Breasted Red Game was of the Pit Game, or fighting type, which is commonly known as the Old English Black Red Game. The latter still exists in one of the most varied varieties of Pit Games, but the exhibition type is plainly the result of careful selection and breeding by fanciers.

The exhibition Black Red Games have lost little of the fiery game temper, and if two of the males get together they will fight until one of the contestants is killed.

The exhibition Black Breasted Red Game is a variety whose utility qualities are very limited, and it is bred chiefly by a number of fanciers who admire its extreme height and beautiful coloring. It is bred more extensively in England than in America, and in the former country competition among the breeders is very keen.

Games are notable for the width of shoulders, laid heavily on the neck, long legs and neck, short tapering tail and general shortness and hardness of feathers. For show purposes it is necessary to cut their comb and wattles for the males, a process known as "dubbing."

The Black Red male is beautifully colored. His head, neck, back top of wings and secondary flight feathers are red, and the breast, body, tail and wing bow a glossy greenish black. The female is clothed in soft and modest shades of brown. Her neck is golden yellow, with a dark stripe down the center of each feather. Her breast is salmon, blending into the soft shades of brown. Her neck, thighs and body are brown, finely pencilled with a darker shade of the same color.

Black Red Games are not easily handled. They are very pugnacious, which prevents keeping more than one male in the flock. They are, however, really tame, being very docile and short wings, which prevents them from flying easily. They make excellent table fowls. The eggs are light and they enjoy the reputation of possessing a particularly rich flavor.

He would be a bold man indeed to name arbitrarily as being the very best. However, I feel certain that the following includes the finest varieties now in cultivation either for general use or for special exhibition purposes, and all are true Spencers.

Head the list with Yarrowa, a beautiful large rose-pink with lighter wings. It is the only early flowering variety in my set, and worthy of a place in all gardens, as it comes into flower at least two weeks earlier than any of the following.

King White, easily the best pure white self.

Princess Spencer, rich cream self.

Hercules, rich pink self—an improved and larger Countess Spencer.

Elfrida Pearson, blue-pink, somewhat similar to Lady Evelyn Byre.

Mrs. Routzhan, cream-pink, suffused amber.

Doris Usher, lovely salmon-pink.

Fargaret, rich, rich apricot-pink on cream ground.

George Herbert, large rosy-cerise self.

King Edward Spencer, rich crimson.

Illuminator, rose on salmon.

Royal Purple, a large clear purple self.

Princess Spencer, white, edged rose.

Margaret Madison, blue-blue self.

Wedgwood, clear blue self.

Orchid, pure lavender self.

King Matzoel, deep blackish-maroon.

Thomas Stevenson, orange-scarlet self, this will be superseded by the new variety, The President, which is very much larger and altogether a better fowler.

Fleury Cross, scorching fire-red, a great and decided advance.

Robert Sydenham, rich orange-salmon.

Mrs. W. J. Unwin, white, flaked, orange-red.

Best Sweet Peas.

In choosing varieties, much naturally depends on individual taste as to colors, and there are now so many fine sorts on the market that

ONLY THE WELL-HENS LAY EGGS IN WINTER

Flock Must Be Kept in Good Health in Order to Profit in the Off Season.

PROPER FEEDING NEEDED

Regularity, Pure Water and Good Grain Are Essential to Get Results.

BY REESE V. HICKS.

WINTER eggs are the goal of the poultry raiser, no matter whether he be an amateur or a professional, for it is the winter eggs that bring the high prices and mean profit to the man who makes his living raising poultry and economy to the one who raises chickens for eggs for his own use.

It is a common saying that everybody's hens lay eggs in the spring, when eggs are plentiful and low in price, but winter eggs are only for the few wise ones who give their hens proper care.

The first step toward procuring them is to consider the history of the hen herself. Her own record for health must be good, preferably with never a sick day against her from the time she was hatched. She should have been hatched in the early spring, so that she has finished her growth and is fully matured before the cold weather of fall sets in. She should be kept in a clean, dry, well-ventilated house, and her food should be of the best of last minute care to a lot of fowls that have had little or no attention all spring, summer and fall. Better dispose of all sickly and dwarfed cock and hen, and do not let show birds and are fully matured.

When the hens are confined the floor area should be not less than four feet per hen where the house is fifty or more feet wide. If the house is not so large as the average floor space per hen must be increased in proportion to the width of the house. The floor should be covered with a layer of straw or other material, and the house should be well ventilated. The light should be bright, and the house should be kept clean and free from all things, dry, especially over the roosting quarters.

The best way to ventilate a house is to alterate cloth or burlap curtains and glass windows; the latter will provide light and fresh air, but the curtains must be closed. The cloth windows should be left open on sunny days, and on cloudy days they should be closed. They should also be opened at night, preferably those in the centre of the house.

Dry Houses Needed

Hens that must live in damp sheds or in the trees cannot be made even to pay for their feed in winter, simply because their entire energy will be required to keep warm in such quarters. They will not lay, and their health will be ruined. The ideal henhouse should be well ventilated and well protected from draughts and above all things, dry, especially over the roosting quarters.

Room For Hens

When the hens are confined the floor area should be not less than four feet per hen where the house is fifty or more feet wide. If the house is not so large as the average floor space per hen must be increased in proportion to the width of the house. The floor should be covered with a layer of straw or other material, and the house should be well ventilated. The light should be bright, and the house should be kept clean and free from all things, dry, especially over the roosting quarters.

Regular Feeding

At no point will the care of fowls pay better than in the matter of feeding, and this consideration is regularly. They should be fed at the same hour each day as nearly as possible. They should be fed in the morning, and in the morning as it is light enough for them to get off the roosts and see to dig for their food. The feed at night should be fed as late as they can see to pick out of the troughs in which it is fed. This light feeding should be at least one-half corn if the weather is cold, and fed in troughs, so the hens can eat it easily, and thus go to bed with well-filled crops. The other grain feeds should be scattered into the litter, so that the hens will work to dig it out. Three or even four small feedings of this scratch grain will pay in eggs, but care must be exercised to see the hens are not fed too much at one time, but just enough to keep them slightly hungry.

At the given time they should be given all they will clean up. If wet manure is fed, the hens should be taken to prevent the manure from being scattered into the litter, and then refusing to work for their grain they will be inclined to sit around on the roosts instead of being down in the litter it is in. This light feeding should be at least one time, and the next feeding should be decreased or left off entirely. It is well to explain to your fanner just how much water or milk, and an occasional feeding of cooked vegetables, such as potatoes, cabbage, etc., as a substitute for other the grain or the mash will be much relished by the fowls.

FASHION'S DEMANDS IN SHADES OF SILK

White Is Staple, and Flesh Pink and Pearl Grey Are Probably Next in the Lust of Popular Shades.

FROM silk centres comes the information that silk in light colors is in such demand that it is impossible to fill orders. The two leading colors are flesh pink and pearl grey. White remains staple, but on account of the dark silks used navy blue has been very popular. In view of the fact that white is to be used so much for spring suits white will predominate except for the mink, for whom flesh pink, grey and maize will be used.

Laces do not figure prominently on the newest fashions, except when a part of a three piece suit. Instead of lace, stockings on Georgette crepe and henriette brouse. Rows of machine stitching are executed with a long stitch and coarse cord are used for the heavier quality of crepe de chine.

A trimming feature is bouillons of every variety, and bouillon of cotton material are used for silk waist. All sleeves have a wide band of lace, and many ancient modes being revived with the "col manton" in the back and the "col manton" in the back and the "col manton" in the back.

CARE SHOULD BE TAKEN WITH BEDROOM PAPERS

Bright Colored or Flowing Chintz Should Never Be Used.

When a bedroom or small dressing room is papered with anything but a plain or neutral paper, bright colored or flowing chintz should never be used, but often a little color is needed to add tone to the room. In a case of this kind one of the new bedspreads which are so pretty and easily made is just the thing to give the necessary color. Select a plain white spread of good quality and cover the dressing table and bureau in each corner, with a large one of the new bedspreads which are so pretty and easily made is just the thing to give the necessary color. Select a plain white spread of good quality and cover the dressing table and bureau in each corner, with a large one of the new bedspreads which are so pretty and easily made is just the thing to give the necessary color.

Collecting Pitchers.

Modern manufacturers of china and pottery are making charming little pitchers exact replicas of the large ones of olden times. The little pitchers, known to the trade as "manufacturer's samples," are sold to collectors at an attractive price. The pitcher is a very old and useful article, and it is easy to make a collection. Perhaps the little pitcher ones are the prettiest they appear in all the quaint old shapes, such as the year pitcher, the milk pitcher and the old-time milk pitcher.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I am a girl of 22, and am engaged to a young man seven years my senior. We love each other dearly, but often we have quarrels about which I wish your advice. Please advise me if I am right or not.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I am a young man of 22 and came from Canada three years ago. A month ago I met a young lady of 18, and since that time I call at her home every Saturday. I dearly love her and don't know in what way to express myself, so please advise me if I am right or not.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE: I love her with all your heart, and if you are in a position to marry, don't worry about the mystery of how to express yourself. All you need do is simply to tell her that you love her, and to ask her if she loves you and will be your wife.

SWEET MAIRIE: Like many other things in life, the question of whether a fiance should or should not dance with any other girl is not one that is either "right" or "wrong." It depends entirely upon the two people. Merely as a question, there is no reason why an engaged girl or an engaged man should not dance with other guests at a dance where they have many friends. Simply because a man or a girl are engaged does not mean that they cannot enjoy the common social pleasures.

TROUBLED: I'm sorry you've had the sorrow you have—take heart and begin over again. Japan has demonstrated to the world that she is capable of great things in world politics, economics and industry. One of her greatest industrial accomplishments has been the development of tea growing. The tea business is now one of the greatest industries of that land.

Japan Tea occupies a unique position in the Tea Mats of the world. It is unequalled for delicacy of flavor, exquisite bouquet and stimulating qualities—hence it is preferred by connoisseurs.

WENT TO HEADQUARTERS FOR HIS INFORMATION

WHILE making an address the other night, Senator Porter T. McCumber of North Dakota, remarked on how easily some people can slide thru an embarrassing situation, and told this story as an example: Some time ago a party named Brown had an appointment with a man in a distant city, and when the business was transacted he was urged to accompany the other to a reception. Brown consented.

"Say, Jim," he remarked on reaching the house where the reception was held, and glancing around the room, "who is that painted party stacked up against the paper-mache palm who looks like a cross between an Egyptian mummy and a circus clown?"

"That," replied Jim, with a rapidly chilling expression, "is my wife."

"Get 'im!" was the hoarse rejoinder of Brown. "I went straight to headquarters for information, didn't I?"

Chinese Embroidery Strips.

The Chinese embroidered silk strips, so beautiful in color and design, are being much used to trim the Russian silk blouses which are worn with velvet skirts. The blouses are in shades of green, brown, deep red or old blue, and the richly colored embroidery forms the collar, cuffs and the neck. The strips of the blouses have narrow strips of fur as a finish, and sometimes this is headed with a band of the embroidery. One has to be certain just how much is needed for the trimming, so as to select a pattern that is long enough. The strips are only from a yard to a yard and a quarter long, and it is often hard to collect enough pieces embroidered silk.

DORKING IS PRODUCT OF ROMAN INVASION

Five Toed Fowl Are Big Birds and Hens Lay Big Eggs.

ONE of the oldest breeds of fowls is the Dorking. The Dorking is thought to have been brought into England by the Romans, and in England it has reached its highest state of perfection. It is peculiar in that it has five toes, which are found only in five other fowls, the Japanese Silky, Sultan Fowl of Turkey and the Honnans variety of one of the Chinese breeds.

The males weigh from seven to eight pounds, and the females five and a half to six pounds. As a table fowl it has long been the favorite of England, and it would probably be more widely bred in this country but for some features which are not suited to American markets: large combs and wattles, the fifth toe, and what is more important, light colored legs and skin. The latter is probably the real reason for its lack of popularity, facing our markets demand a yellow legged and yellow skinned fowl. Not that this actually affects the quality of the flesh, for no fowl carries finer grained nor more meat than the Dorking. They lay large white eggs, and the chicks, under favorable conditions, make rapid growth, and the fowls are docile and easily tamed.

The Dorkings do well as a home flock. They will furnish plenty of large eggs; the hens will get broody and rear the chicks well, and if you can overcome your preference for yellow skin and legs no other breed of poultry will give better satisfaction as table fowls than the Dorking.

The male is black and white, the white being pure and snowy and the black glossy and greenish. His comb, white large, must be evenly serrated and carried upright.

The female has a silver white neck with a dark stripe down each feather. Her breast is of a silvery white, fading into the silver gray of the balance of the plumage. Her comb is fairly large and droops slightly to one side.

ING IS PRODUCT OF ROMAN INVASION

Red Fowl Are Big Birds and Hens Lay Big Eggs.

Of the oldest breeds of fowls in the world, the Dorking is thought to have been brought into the country by the Romans, and in England it has reached its highest state of development. It is a large, heavy, light-colored bird, with a comb that is fairly large and thickly to one side.

It weighs from seven to eight pounds, and the females lay from one to two large eggs a day. The eggs are white, and the yolks are bright yellow.

The Dorking is a very hardy bird, and is well adapted to the conditions of the Dominion. It is a good layer, and its eggs are of a high quality.

Manufacturers of china and glassware are making charming little exact replicas of the attractive dainty ware, known to the trade as "collectors' samples," and are selling them at an attractive price. The pitcher offered in such a wide variety is easy to make a collection of. They appear in all the shapes, such as the yearling pitcher and the old-fashioned pitcher.

CONCERNING OUR CHILDREN

By ELINOR MURRAY.

THE MAN or the woman who first started the notion that measles "amount to nothing"; that "all children must have them" (measles, incidentally, is a singular noun when used in this sense), and "the sooner they have them the better," has much to answer for. Most of us know better now, but the cruel wrong done to children by exposing one child of a family to the measles if another child has it still lingers. The truth has not yet got to the mothers that a child is not "thru" with measles with one attack; he may have the measles five or six times, and thus the barbarous method of purposely exposing him to suffering is self-evident. Nor are the serious after-effects of measles understood; that the eyelids are often affected for life; that the lungs may be weakened; and that, again, the high fever may affect the brain cells. Instead of measles "amounting to nothing," it is one of the serious maladies of childhood, and one to be particularly watched for its after-effects. And certainly the practice of deliberately exposing a child to it should become a hideous memory of the past. Measles must be accepted as a serious children's disease.

TELLING the absolute truth is very difficult for a child in his earlier years. When you know exactly what the truth is, and have no desire to wish it anything else, it is easy to speak it. Not infrequently, however, circumstances are such that a child has not a clear impression of what has happened. He is confused to start with. Then the confusion is increased when he is confronted with a question. The likelihood in nine cases out of ten is that he will speak the first thing that enters his mind in reply, and having once spoken, he feels under obligation to maintain his position, and is flounders hopelessly on a highly-sensitive and imaginative child has difficulty in distinguishing the real from the unreal. Once an impression is received, the image remains in his mind as something very real, and frequently a child will speak with only these imaginings as a basis for his opinion. A parent will doubtless find that a child who is telling an untruth, but is simply unable to speak with accuracy. Instead of punishing him, she should remember these conditions, and try to help him distinguish between the real and unreal facts. A threatened child will make but little progress, but a well-sympathetically understood child learns the meaning of truth and honor, and will carefully avoid misrepresentation. Let us get away, however, from the notion that a child who tells a truth by a child is a vice, and that the child should be punished for it. It is loving correction and helpful guidance that the child needs—not punishment.

DO we sufficiently realize that health is largely a matter of determination; that it is very largely a question of will? Many women trail their life half ill all the time, ignorant, uninterested, struggling over every effort, never knowing the joy of vigorous life, who, if they only had courage and determination, could be abundantly blessed with life and vigor. There are, of course, cases of women who have to work so desperately for mere existence that health must in a measure be neglected; but for the majority of women, health is within their grasp. Benjamin Franklin's prescription for good health has never been surpassed. "Early to bed" is the first essential; simple food at regular hours, and exercise every day with not less than twenty-five deep breaths a day, and four glasses of water, complete the prescription, which will bring renewed health and energy to any one who tries it and sticks to it. But it is in the last part we find the difficulty. The prescription sounds easy; its simplicity and lack of originality are almost laughable, yet a goodly amount of will power is needed to stick to it and carry it out. Try for a month to be in bed every night at ten, to sleep with all your windows wide open, to exercise every day, to breathe deeply and drink the required glasses of water, and see if the world is not a different place to you. We have had so much for ourselves if we would but realize it.

OH the adorable thing!" said the woman as she seized an eight-month-old baby. The poor baby struggled and kicked and cried, and it took the mother the best part of half an hour to quiet the distressed child. When will it be borne upon women without self-control to respect the rights of another woman's baby and keep hands off? Every mother likes to have her baby admired and she enjoys the appreciation of other women, but what possible right has any woman to put her hand upon the child? The fact that a baby is "cute" or "adorable" does not take away one iota of his right to the sacredness of his person. Mothers who suffer constantly from this thoughtlessness of other women, and what is worse, the babies suffer more. Many a mother's watch-

NEW WALKING DRESSES FOR SOUTHERN WEAR

Cotton Uncut Velvet is Material in Vogue Which Presents Artistic Effect.

A new material has been introduced for the walking dresses to be worn in the south. It is called cotton uncut velvet, and at a distance it looks like real uncut velvet, with a white sheen over its surface. The dresses are made with full-skirted flaring coats, like the winter models, with black or white leather collars, cuffs, buttons and ties. The hats worn with these suits are broad-brimmed Milan straws, the color of the dresses. They have eight-quartered cap crowns of leather with bows falling from the tops, the leather matching the trimming of the suits in color.

Guernsey cloth, or knitted cloth suits, especially recommended for southern traveling suits, also appear with leather trimmings. These cloths are excellent as they do not wrinkle. The skirts of these suits are made with deep laid plaits, front and back, stitched to below the hip line, and a plain panel, facing a little at the bottom, finishes either side. The coats are hip length, in a belted but unapplied Norfolk model. Worn with these suits are the new straw turbans that fit the head closely and are very tall. The ribbon trimming is folded flatly around the crown and finished directly in front, or at one side, with tall slender buckles of jet, plain steel, or frosted gilt, and hats are trying in appearance, but very smart.

NOVEL SUGGESTIONS FOR THE NEEDLEWOMAN

"Things to Make" for Spring Wear for Women and Children.

"Things to make" are usually of interest to the woman with a gift for needlework or decorative art. For either of these lines, unbleached muslin offers possibilities. It may be made into pillows, scarfs, porch table covers or other pieces and stenciled or embroidered with coarse threads in simple designs. Just a square of the muslin bound in linen of a dark or vivid tint is attractive, and the patterns may be of chintz, cut out and appliqued either on the border or on the inner square.

When fashioned into a smock-chintz with nursery rhyme pictures and a delightful play-time rock for the little child. Smocks of chintz for youthful gardeners or those who play out of doors on spring days, may have a pillow made to match the frock, covered on one side with the chintz and on the other with oil-cloth, so that the child may place them on ground to sit on. It is necessary to fill the pillows with feathers; straw or hay will answer. For the outdoor smocks, choose flower pattern chintz.

Vells may be adorned with a tiny band of flat gilt braid where they rest against the crown of the hat, and a thread of gold may be worked in as a border at the lower edge.

LETTERS, STORIES AND POEMS FROM OUR SMALL READERS

I PROMISE TO DO MY VERY BEST TO MAKE THIS SAD WORLD BRIGHTER.

I suppose you think that I have forgotten all about them; No, indeed, I have not.

When I remember that they were cast away on a desert island, and were such nice men too, how could I do that?

One morning Foxy sprang out of bed with such a spring that he found himself sitting outside the door of the hut before he knew where he was.

"Say, boys!" cried he, "I have an idea!" at these words both Fatty and Pinley sprang up, too, because, as they had learned the hard way, Foxy was always very bright. "You know the wild geese we caught the other day," cried Foxy.

"Yes," said Fatty and Pinley in one and the same breath.

"You know he's not eaten yet, and is therefore alive," exclaimed Foxy.

"Yes," answered Fatty and Pinley in one and the same breath once more.

"Well," I propose that we make a carrier pigeon of him," said Foxy, sticking his thumbs in his vest arm holes, and wagging his fingers round and about. "Fine! Fine!" exclaimed Fatty.

"How can you turn a goose into a pigeon?" asked Pinley.

"Ba!" said Foxy, "all you do is tie a letter to his left leg, train it to carry the letter to a ship, then, when the captain reads the letter, he will come and rescue us." "Fine! FINE!" cried Fatty once more, but Pinley said as he folded his hands one across the other, "Where shall we get the ship to 'train it' on?"

In a short time, I cannot tell you just how it was done, but anyway, in a short time the wild geese seemed to have learned the business of carrying a carrier pigeon quite well, and one day Foxy said, "Now is the time to send him away, and Fatty, who was the best writer of the three, wrote a nice little note which Foxy tied to the goose's leg.

There was a honk! a whirr of wings and away sailed the goose, and three men (nice men they were too), gazed up after him with staring eyes.

One day passed—two—three—four—and at last on the fifth day, on the fifth day, Foxy, who was up on top of a tree, called out, "A small what ho! A SALL!"

The other two came rushing out the door of the hut, and I don't imagine it was more than half a second before they too were up alongside of Foxy.

"Look!" cried Foxy, "there's his finger due north-east, what do you make of that?"

And sure enough something was coming towards them, breathing such a hot air as to be felt, and having a long line of foam in its wake.

Rushing to the shore our three heroes stood, with beating hearts, giving a look at the lovely oyster steved Fatty had left cooking on the stove.

Nearer, nearer, and still nearer it came, till finally Pinley who was nearest the water turned round to the other two, and folding his hands said: "What did I tell you?"

Sure enough Pinley was right, and I feel really sad to tell you that it was only a LARGE FLOATING LOG. But, as they looked at it, they discovered their carrier pigeon, or I suppose I should say, wild geese, perched on top of it as much as to say "Well, I have done the best I could."

"They welcomed their good with open arms, and gave him a good dinner of vegetables, little Foxy, Fatty and Pinley sat down to the oyster stew which tasted VERY good after such excitement, even if it was a trifle scorching.

C. A. MacPhee.

As they looked harder they discovered their carrier pigeon.

Wishes, they are but little things, Less than a bit with tiny wings, Yet we are wishing all the day; We wish the rain would go away; We wish the way were not so long; We wish the feeble ones were strong; That they no more might suffer pain; We wish that we were grown to men; That we could make our wishes true; What would you wish that you might do?

One wish that's good there is, I know, That we may better, kinder grow; Doing each day what good we can, As child, and when we're grown to man.

And just this wish we too may frame, That every one will do the same.

PROBLEM FACING CANADA WHEN EUROPE'S WAR ENDS

Sir Donald Mann Predicts a Keen Competition in the Securing of Settlers For the Fertile Agricultural Areas of the Dominion at the End of the European Struggle.

BY SIR DONALD MANN. WE HAVE just passed thru an era of great activity in railway building, and the years which span this era were equally memorable in immigration.

Table with columns: RAILWAY MILEAGE CONSTRUCTED, IMMIGRATION, and TOTAL. Rows list years from 1897 to 1913 with corresponding values.

RAILWAY MILEAGE AND IMMIGRATION 1897 TO 1913

National Revolution Faith in the outstanding, enduring wealth of the country, and a desire to see progress counted in decades rather than in centuries, led to a decision.

Who can glance over this diagram without realizing that there is, as I said at the commencement, a very real relationship between railways and immigration?

the homestead entries, and land brought under settlement, were in proportion to immigration. As a result of this railway construction, and the consequent tide of immigration, a new spirit took hold of the country.

There is an almost irresistible temptation to tell of the marvellous increase in grain production, and the growth in the output of "Made in Canada" commodities.

There Was a Lull

Just before the war, there was a lull in Canadian development. Immigration fell away, production declined, and the spirit of confidence was shaken.

The Main Element

At the risk of being considered over-insistent, may I repeat that the main element in the marvellous development experienced in the past fifteen years was the railway mileage which was first extended out into the virgin lands of the prairies.

His investigations seem to establish the fact that it is exceedingly rare for a genius to have red hair. The only poet he was able to find whose locks were of this color was Swinbourne.

STRUCKEN SERBIA STILL STRONG IN FAITH AND HOPE FOR FUTURE

Cheddo Myelovitch, Noted Serbian Diplomat, Formerly Secretary of State For Foreign Affairs and Late Ambassador to the Court of St. James, Tells of Country's Devastation.

OUR FRIENDS speak of our national tragedy," says Cheddo Myelovitch, former Serbian state secretary for foreign affairs, and noted Serbian diplomat.

"The Serbs of Shoomadia (the central part of the Danubian Serbia), arose in national insurrection against the Turks in 1804. They were the first to demand the Balkans to take such a step. They fought alone, unaided, and succeeded in obtaining autonomy from the Sultan in 1817.

"The first thought of autonomous Serbia was to effect a liberation of all other Serbs living under the direct rule (not to say yoke) of Turkey and Austria. It was quite natural that the Serbs of Turkey and the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes of Austria should look up to free Serbia. Even the Teutonic nations of Slavonia began to aspire toward political affiliation with Serbia.

HOW AMERICAN EYES SEE ENGLAND AND FRANCE

Both Countries Are So Deeply Absorbed With Patriotic Devotion That the Better Side of Men's Natures Has Gained Supremacy For the Time Being, at Least.

HAVING felt for some time a great desire to secure for myself an impression of conditions which exist in England and France at this time," says Walter W. Price, in Commerce and Finance. "I left New York some five weeks ago to make my first trip abroad since the beginning of the war. I was advised before I left, by people who thought they knew, that my idea in taking the trip was a mistaken one, and that Americans were not wanted either in England or France at this time.

"So far as my experience is concerned this expression was erroneous. It has been my good fortune to travel to and from Europe for many years, and never have I been the recipient of greater courtesy or more consideration, both in England and France—and especially in England—than it was my privilege to enjoy during this trip.

Patriotic Devotion

"In every walk of life both the English and French are so deeply absorbed in patriotic devotion that they have little time in which to give expression to a prejudice of feeling, which doubtless has reasonable justification. In that courtesy which is characteristic of the English people, I was struck with their disinclination to bring up the somewhat embarrassing question as to the position which America has taken. At the outset of the war, in both England and France, there was a distinct inclination to regard in the most favorable way any request made by the United States Government, and to adjust, if possible, their viewpoint to our own. But I do not think I am overstating the fact when I say that the feeling in both England and France today concerning our attitude toward the allies is one of sadness and disappointment, rather than one of resentfulness.

"One cannot be in England and France at this time without being impressed with the one great underlying fact that exists here at every turn, namely: that the finer side of men's natures has gained the supremacy for the time being, and by the evidences with which one comes constantly in contact of devotion to the country and to the flag, and there is a dignity of demeanor and an air of self-respect which inspires feelings that are difficult to analyze.

"While the response in France in the initial stages of the war was prompt and magnificent, insofar as the answer to the call of the flag was concerned, and while at the outset in England the demonstrations were most impressive, the subsequent fifteen months, which have brought with them the varying fortunes of war and which have left many regrets on the part of both England and France at advantages gained by the opening of new opportunities lost in the conduct of the campaigns which have been waged by the allies, have afforded opportunity for the crystallization of patriotic sentiment which is very striking to a traveler from America, for while the main incidents of the war, we are absolutely out of touch with the atmosphere, the spirit, the point of view and the high spirits which pervade the warring countries.

The French Loan

"It was my privilege to attend two sessions in the house of commons, to hear Lloyd George render his account of his administration as the head of the munitions bureau; to hear Mr. Asquith speak regarding 'Lord Derby's Group Plan,' his pledge to the married men, and incidentally express his views with regard to conscription. I further happened to be in Paris and in the chamber of deputies on the occasion of the announcement of the success of the $500,000,000 French loan, and the enthusiasm which characterized the latter incident presented a picture replete with dramatic interest. In the house of commons and in the house of lords there prevails an atmosphere of the greatest seriousness. The complexity of problems with which the ministers daily deal has had its effect upon them, but there is nevertheless a certain amount of cheerfulness and determination that is characteristic of the English people, which is impressive indeed to an outsider who looks on from the front.

"It was also my privilege to meet, not only a number of leaders in the administration of the government, but also officers and privates who had come from the front on furlough in both England and France. All of them bore the same story regarding the morale of the troops, the confidence and the training camps there is displayed a degree of enthusiastic confidence that inspires the officers who are in command upon the line and who are inking the armies that are later to reinforce them. It can be said without fear of contradiction—albeit I heard the contrary to be the case in this country—that there is but one thought on the part of the convalescents who have been sent from the front to recuperate, and that is their eagerness to return to the units on the fighting line of which they are a part.

"There has been so much talk in this country about 'muddling' upon the part of England that, in my opinion, a wholly false impression has been created. When one stops, however, to contemplate the enormity of the task which daily confronts her in carrying on a war that covers an area of territory of such enormous expanse, to the transport troops and supplies some 10,000 miles to the eastward and from the shores of the Pacific in Canada to Russia; to finance not only her own needs, but to supply the financial needs of the French, the Russians, the Belgians, the Servians and her own colonies; to say nothing of the mighty problem in connection with the vast financial operations with the United Kingdom, it represents a task which is Herculean in its proportions.

England's Task

"When these facts have been stated, they do not begin to record the limitations of her responsibility, for, in addition to carrying on these extended operations, she has been compelled to wage a war against trade unionism in her own country, that for a time curtailed her supply of ammunition and other material necessary in warfare, to a point well-nigh embarrassing. "Despite the discouraging news which we have received from time to time concerning the progress of the war, the fact nevertheless stands out that thus far, altho she has her soldiers fighting on the shores of invaded France, until recently upon the Gallipoli Peninsula, and now throught the borders of the Balkan states, not one foot of her own territory has been invaded; that her ships have traversed the seas at will, and that the one complete and patent victory of the war has been absolutely hers, holding in check of the German navy and the consequent paralysis of German shipping and commerce throught the world.

"Germany has as yet won no signal victory from England, whereas England has stripped Germany of her colonies throught the world; has with her navy held the much-vaunted German admiralty in absolute check; has frustrated completely the terrors of the submarine warfare in the waters contiguous to the British Isles, and at the same time has called into being the power of a sympathy between the mother country and the colonies scattered around the world that has demonstrated the unassailable strength of an empire which seemed bound together by such a slender thread.

"When one stops to realize that this is the actual status of conditions today, and is afforded the opportunity of noting the quiet demeanor of the English people, with the dogged determination which unquestionably points to victory in the end, he is bound to accept the truth recently uttered by an eminent English writer that 'The strength of the fighter is the strength of his faith,' and the faith of the English people in their system of government, and in their country, is today greater, in my opinion, than it has ever been before.

War's Calamities

"Everywhere in England and in France one comes daily in contact with the evidences of the calamities which war brings. In the restaurants and on the streets of both Paris and London, the French, the Belgian and the English soldiers are present in overwhelming numbers. They make their way about, in many instances, on crutches. The slings over their shoulders show the extent of the ravages of the diabolical instruments of modern warfare. The bandages around their heads and the shields which cover their eyes, all bear evidence to the wonderful sacrifice for country and for flag which is daily being made.

"The extent to which England's race of splendid men have enrolled themselves in their country's service is particularly emphasized by a visit similar to that which I made to both Cambridge and Oxford. Those academic centres, which ordinarily are teeming with life, present the appearance of a vacant period. The only evidence of the existence of a college session is found in the entrances to the various colleges where are posted the lists of those who are at the front and those who constitute the roll of honor by the sacrifice of their lives upon the field of battle. Only here and there are students to be seen, and they represent a type who, by age limitations or imperfect physical makeup, are restricted from participation in the conflict which his going on.

"The striking thing about it all is that there is no effusive demonstration similar to that which we saw in our country at the time of the Spanish-American war, when a soldier attracted attention, and when the dramatic features of the situation were emphasized by a display of emotionality that does not exist today either in France or England.

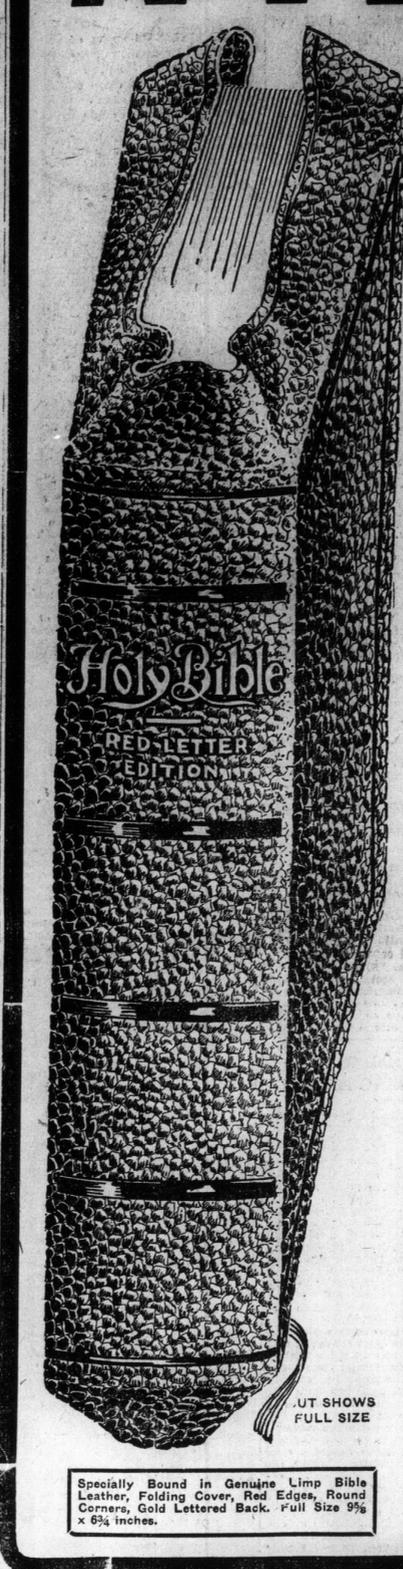

Ominous Prophecies

"Ever since the last Zeppelin raid on London there have been ominous prophecies as to what Germany was prepared to do, and many people have attributed the postponement of the fulfillment of the promises made by Germany to the looking forward to a further invasion of a more perfected kind; but as one watches the searchlights which permeate the dark atmosphere of London between the hours of 6 and 7 at night in every quarter of the city, converging at the points of vantage upon which guns are mounted are connected up by a vast telephone and telegraph system; when the knowledge is leaked out that a range-finder, effective in character, has been developed to meet the aerial raids, the impression grows that the invasion has been postponed rather as a result of preparation on the part of the English to meet the situation than from the lack of preparation on the part of Germany.

"The darkness of both Paris and London has been most ingeniously arranged for. There are comparatively few street lamps lit—only such as are absolutely necessary. Over the tops of these are shields, and the glass surrounding them is painted down to about two inches from the base of light, and inasmuch as the Zeppelins are now compelled to invade the cities from a great altitude, it is, indeed, difficult to conjecture how, except on a moonlight night, which is rather unusual in England at this season, a raid can be carried out with a view of locating those sections of the city which are essentially to be discovered if a successful achievement is to be accomplished. And yet with the shop windows darkened and the streets almost black, there has been preserved in Paris and in London a certain order and regard for law which is in striking contrast to that which prevails here in the piping times of peace.

Absorbing Features

"There was no feature of interest that was more absorbing, nor more calculated to arouse one's emotions than a visit at the hotel in Paris where the soldiers who have been blinded in battle are being cared for. There one witnesses these splendid types in clean uniforms and with cleanly shaven faces, hopelessly handicapped for life, and yet filled with sufficient courage to attempt, under the kindly tutelage of interested men and women, to see light thru the sense of touch, and to prepare to take up the burdens of their existence in the face of the most fearful handicaps that can be imposed upon a human being.

"I saw at this hotel men of distinction, officers who had been engineers, officers who, prior to the war, had achieved honor in the various lines of their professions, such as architecture, law, sculpture or military, being taught the rudimentary principles of gaining knowledge and sight thru the sense of feeling of their hands. As I watched them learning to typewrite, learning to cane chairs, to mold bowls, to read thru the agency of raised letters, and noted the magnificent bravery of their demeanor under the crushing blow they had received in the service of their country, I could not help but think of Henley's wonderful poem:

Out of the night that covers me,
Black as the pit from pole to pole,
I thank whatever gods may be
For my unconquerable soul.

In the fell clutch of circumstance
I have not winced nor cried aloud.
Under the bludgeoning of chance
My head is bloody but unbowed,
Under the beating of惨 fate,
I am the master of my fate,
I am the captain of my soul.

Personal Effort

The Bible As Literature

(For Young Men and Young Women!)

It is not sacrilege to study the Bible as literature. On the contrary, only when we first learn to appreciate it as the greatest literary treasure this world possesses, do we begin to understand its true religious value.

It is not theory but fact that the Bible is the chief book of civilization. In its moral teachings—its ethical standards—its unswerving adherence to the one Only First Cause—it is immeasurably above and beyond any other book that forms a basis of religion.

But it is as a literary work that we first learn to love it and study it from childhood. Its rhythm, its wonderful construction, its homely metaphor—heart-gripping because homely—its message of hope to the down-trodden, its depth of insight into all the windy ways of man, its breadth of vision as to the inscrutable ways of God—all these seize the imagination and lay hold of the mind of humanity as no other book ever did or ever will.

The greatest names in literary history have paid lasting tribute to the Bible. It has exalted and enriched their genius, and given them their lordly dominion over language. In poetry, in sublime eloquence, in philosophy—we can reach no higher elevation. The entire literature of civilization has drawn upon the Bible for its inspiration. It is the one Book that has made other books in their tens of thousands.

To the young men and women of today—and their name is legion—who seek to understand literature, or who seek to make it—who have ambition to become writers or orators—we say: "Go to the Bible, the one source of all that is best and worthiest in literature or oratory! Read it—study it—absorb it—and you cannot fail to write your name somewhere—sometime—somehow, right worthily—upon the scroll of Fame!"

Your Call

LIST: the guns in Flanders call, Heroes to the Empire's cause. Wee betide the cowards all; Men must go without a pause.

Told our fathers and their sires, For the harvest which we reap; Fed them then our altar fires; 'Their' debts we must keep.

They have wrought for us in deeds, Heritage right fair to see; Left us thus to plan, the seeds, Of our souls' prosperity.

Hark! Our brothers nobly stand, For the honor we hold dear; Ask ye nothing for this land; Are you wrapt in abject fear?

Must our brothers who have fought Ask why you cringe down behind Someone's skirts, as the you sought, Like the ostrich, to be blind?

Nay, then, brother, stand upright, With your loved ones proud of you; Prove a man with a man's might, For Canada, strong and true.

Mothers, bid your sons go now; Gird them with your honor's blade; Urge them to uphold the vow Which our noble King has made.

Wives and sweethearts, sisters, all Urge your loved ones to enlist; Let them from your heart-love fall, Hidden in dishonor's mist.

Brother, now the call's for you, Canada with trumpet blast; Asks if you be men and true, Wake! Arise and answer fast.

ONE YEAR AFTER.

Young man (over the counter)—If I should want to exchange this engagement ring for something else, it will be all right, won't it?

Jeweler—Oh, certainly; with pleasure. We are always glad to accommodate patrons.

Same young man (over the counter, one year later)—I believe you told me when I bought this ring I could exchange it for something else, will you have?

Young man—Well, I'd like to exchange it for a barrel of flour, a bushel of potatoes, a ham and a loaf of coal.

HOW THEY LOVE IT.

"Do you believe with Heine that every German deep down in his heart has a secret love for France?" asked Billkin.

"I do, indeed," said Jingleberry. "They love it as a small boy loves a pumpkin pie that he'd gobble up at a gulp if he could."

Seed Cake Recipe.

...coming diplomat, count, to cases. What will you do with the bundle she held. She fixed, there, on the rocky front of the shack. Under me to her with a rush. So was true! Todd Drew had to surf on to negotiate with her agent for the sale of two war-engine plans! TORONTO SUNDAY MORNING 1916

PRICE FIVE CENTS

FROM MUFTI TO KING'S KHAKI IN COURSE OF HALF HOUR

Recruiting Sergeants in Toronto Work With Lightning-Like Rapidity, and in the Course of Their Day's Labor Meet With Many Experiences That Are Exciting, Amusing and Interesting.

BY WALTER G. FESSEY. AY-COLORED ribbon cockades distinguishing recruiting sergeants from others, arouse a great deal of curiosity among strangers, especially those from the United States.

What's that soldier wearing those pretty colored ribbons on his hat for, mother? asked a little boy as a visiting mother and child were passing up Yonge street.

That's a recruiting sergeant, said the mother, evidently enjoying her boy's delighted interest.

Why, he's getting more men to go to the war to fight the Germans.

Done in Half Hour. One of the revelations and developments of recruiting in Toronto has been the high speed attained for transforming a civilian into a khaki-uniformed soldier.

How would you like to sign up? This is the favorite form of question used by the recruiting sergeants when accosting strangers who look as if their King and country needed them.

If the stranger answers "No, thank you" or just plain "No," the sergeants are always quick to ask, "Why?" This puts the prospective recruit on the defensive and sometimes most amusing reasons are offered.

One that has just caused a great deal of merriment in Toronto recruiting circles was given by a strapping young fellow of 21 years of age.

Why don't you enlist? queried the sergeant in making his attack.

Because I think I'm doing "my bit" already, he replied.

How do you figure that out? asked the sergeant, with surprise.

Because I've got two sons already at the front," was the 21-year-old's astonishing answer.

You don't look old enough to have any sons of military age, remarked the sergeant.

Perhaps I don't, but these are my "Step-Sons."

His country shall needs him. Vary With Seasons.

The humors of recruiting vary with the seasons. In the late summer on a balmy evening a recruiting rally was being held in a crowded park with a scarcity of young men listening to the open-air patriotic oratory.

The secret of this was revealed by the excitement of a bright but mischievous newsboy who was attempting to take liberties with the recruiting sergeant's swag bag.

When the "non-com" made a pass at the boy with his stick the "newsie" came back with "Aw, mister, the boy's yer's lookin' at tonight."

During the coming summer the recruiting is to be "lively" right at the east and west lake shores and at the Island.

Having looked and landed his recruiting sergeant brings him to the examining rooms of one of the recruiting depots. The candidate for the colors is first questioned by a depot sergeant.

Facing the doctors for the medical examination is the next ordeal. At this point they always have a very grave, anxious and questioning look.

Had Artificial Leg. The greatest piece of nerve by a candidate for enlistment was that displayed by a Toronto man with an artificial leg.

After the medical examiners can in many cases examine, pass or reject a man a minute. This is a margin in the half hour or the quarter.

There is a sharp contrast between the recruiting systems now used with the elaborate plans compared with the old method of regimental recruiting at the Armories practically as in times of peace, but with a little more energy put in.

What's that soldier wearing those pretty colored ribbons on his hat for, mother? asked a little boy as a visiting mother and child were passing up Yonge street.

That's a recruiting sergeant, said the mother, evidently enjoying her boy's delighted interest.

Why, he's getting more men to go to the war to fight the Germans.

DIG CAMPING IN THE TOPMOST ROOM IN HOUSE ACCESSIBLE TO RECRUITING SERGEANT.

Even Topmost Room in House Accessible to Recruiting Sergeant. DIFFICULT TO RESIST

There's no place like home these days, and even there, in the far recesses of the topmost room, a man is hardly safe.

Recruiting sergeants, recruiting privates, recruiting officers are everywhere.

A man steps off the car in the morning, and is met with a cheery "Hi, man, you know you ought to be wearing clothes like mine."

He manages to make his way into the factory, dodging by ubiquitous men in uniform, and in no more than a slip into a restaurant for lunch, and there he gets reasons why he should enlist, between every course, served by a smiling, rosy-cheeked waitress.

Who says he'd like just such a chap as a tent fellow.

And, making his way homeward, even retired to the side streets does not secure immunity.

Man On Every Corner. Plea to Enlist Meets Fit Corner.

Wherever a Toronto man turns nowadays he cannot escape the fact that he is one of the army of 500,000 that Canada is sending to France.

Khaki in Church. On Sunday he wends his way to church, and is met by a man in uniform, a non-com, or maybe a private, take the pupil right after the parson's sermon, and with logical reasoning, deduced from a lofty place, give the message that if a man will not fight for his home or his women or country's honor, he should fight for his God.

Wherever a Toronto man turns nowadays he cannot escape the fact that he is one of the army of 500,000 that Canada is sending to France.

Stirred Up Interest. During the record fortnight no other battalion used new methods to recruit men, so all the credit for causing an anti-street Toronto mob to go to Col. Wright and his energetic staff in the Pearl Street Armories and depot.

Many mothers (and fathers, too) have echoed the thought, "If only I had such opportunities when I was young as the children of today, what a vast difference it would have made to my whole life."

THE DIFFERENCE. A young girl who had been born and brought up in a boarding-house atmosphere was suddenly transplanted into a wealthy home. After she had been there a month a friend of her father's said: "I expect you notice a great difference between your present and your former surroundings, don't you?"

JUST LIKE HOME. "Don't you think I run a nice, homelike little hotel?" asked the proud landlord.

"Indeed I do," said Jiggers. "It's bold and draughty, and the service is awful, and as for your cook—well, really, Mr. Dampsett, when I ate that fierce breakfast this morning I actually thought I was home for a minute."

TORONTO'S MELTING POT MANUFACTURING PATRIOTS

A Glimpse at Pupils of Every Age and Nationality, Who As They Eagerly Grasp the Fragments of Knowledge at the Hester Howe School, Which Will Eventually Guide Their Steps to Good Citizenship.

BY CLARK E. LOCKE. DID you ever stand, rod in hand, on the banks of a running stream of a bright windy morning, and watch the young trout leap like tigers after their swirling fly? There is about this experience a rest which cannot be surpassed in the catalog of recreation.

The fly floats lazily an inch above an inviting ripple. Quick as a wink the fry swims vigorously after it, the reel sings briskly, and the sport is on. It has, for instance, one young fellow who was moved by an address in the factory in which he worked, hopped into the waiting motor car and was signed on in an hour.

THE NIGHT SCHOOL. Did you ever witness a night school in action where those from the ends of the earth strive to grasp the rudiments of the English tongue? Such an occasion claims as much nerve and zest as any trout stream may afford.

BEACON OF HOPE. People in general are perhaps unaware that there is a great school building engulfed by the downtown district, where windows blaze forth nightly a beacon of hope to all the foreign peoples gathering beneath the Canadian roof-tree. It is not generally recognized, moreover, that instructive towards the education of these illiterate newcomers in the language and ideals of British folk.

COMES FROM RUSSIA. "Ivan Petrosky, Russia," he answered for name and birthplace. "How long in this country?" "Six months." The instructor looked up. "Tell me we want to know only for friendship's sake," the boy was instructed, and a smile like sunrise appeared over the face of the stranger.

READY! ACTION! GO! START CAMERA'S WORK

Do you know that in "Ready! Action! Go!" the trite "commands of filmdom, given by the director before each scene, is contained the secret, or key-note, of the entire motion picture industry? "Ready" is the culmination of labor, mental and physical, and often the expenditure of thousands of dollars calling all the dependent elements to stand prepared for the supreme effort. "Action" starts the camera and wheels revolving. "Go!" calls the camera into play recording immutably the efforts of a highly trained eager staff, to give to the public another moment's entertainment. In "Ready! Action! Go!" are typified the pulsations, the hopes, the very being of a vast army of serious minded, alert men and women.

Louise Huff in "The Old Homestead" at the Madison Theatre the first half of this week.

MADISON THEATRE

For next week the Madison Theatre will present two more specially selected dramas of the highest grade. The initial half of the week, beginning Monday, will be devoted to the wonderful picturization of Denman Thompson's "The Old Homestead," a Famous Players production in which Frank Lacey is seen in the immortal role of "Joshua Whitcomb." On the screen this play is an even greater success than it was on the stage, and still new in Toronto, its reputation alone attracts capacity audiences.

"The Old Homestead" gives way to a new Lasky picture, Mr. Grex of Monte Carlo, for the latter half of the week. This is a screen version of E. Phillips Oppenheim's famous Saturday Evening Post story, and the noted screen stars, Theodore Roberts, enact the leading role in it. The melodramatic features revolve around the work of an English secret service operative.

For Film Fans

MARY MELBS MINTER now has a pet turkey, which appeared with her in "Dimples," a Metro feature picture, when the company was making some scenes in Savannah recently.

Clara Kimball Young, the World Film Corporation's star, is set for Cuba, where the big scenes of the new spectacular Clara Kimball Young feature "The Feast of Life" will be made.

Cleo Madison and her company of Universallites are west in San Francisco, where they went to make a number of both interior and exterior scenes along the "Barbary Coast," in the production of a five-reel feature, entitled, "A Soul's Crucible."

Following her screen debut in "The Tongue of Moses" at the Metro photoplay recently released on the Paramount program, Constance Collier has commenced work on her second production for the company, "The Code of Marcia Gray," especially written for her by Frank Lloyd.

Francis X. Bushman, the famous Metro star, who has created a sensation in "Man and His Soul," and other Metro pictures, is wearing a large emerald ring on the little finger of his right hand, no matter what role he is playing.

William Farnum, whose next picture under the William Fox banner will be "Fighting Blood," began his stage career playing a cornet solo at Emory Hall, Bucksport, Maine, when he was nine years old. "Fighting Blood" was inspired in part by the song "My Old Kentucky Home."

Valli Valli, the Metro star, appeared before His Majesty, the King Edward, by royal command, on several occasions when she was a young girl.

In "Dimples," a forthcoming Metro feature production in which Mary Melbs Minter has the stellar role, the character of Mrs. Riley, her mother, is played by Charlotte Shelby, who in real life is none other than Miss Minter's mother. Mrs. Shelby was formerly a well known actress, but has not appeared professionally for several years.

Marguerite Clark, the Famous Players-Paramount star, whose ubiquitous appearance in "The Prince and the Pauper" has mystified many who are not familiar with the intricacies of motion picture photography, abandons the regalia of the royal small boy for the frills and frothiness of the dainty little lady of 1847 in "Mice and Men."

Bianche Sweet, the beautiful Lasky-Paramount star, is having the time of her life as the young anarchist in "The Blacklist," now being produced under the direction of Wm. C. De Mille. Miss Sweet, in this production, is seen in a role entirely different from anything she has heretofore attempted.

Theda Bara, starred in "Gold and the Woman," a William Fox production, fainted during the making of one of the scenes in that picture. The scene was that of a raid on the home of a wealthy Mexican landowner. Miss Bara was ordered to stand still in the middle of a set while bullets were shot past her at the windows in back. The tension proved too great and she collapsed.

Mary Fuller, the Universal star, is starting on another great picture, called "The Girl Who Peared Daylight." Miss Fuller is of the opinion that this is a play in which she will be given an opportunity to show her ability and versatility.

Annette Kellermann, who is being starred in a one million dollar photoplay being made in Kingston, Jamaica, is recovering from injuries sustained during the making of one of the water scenes. Miss Kellermann was swept against a rock by a huge wave and severely bruised. Work on the picture was delayed pending her recovery.

BERNHARDT WONDERFUL DESPITE LOSS OF LIMB

"Divine Sarah's" Emotional Power Unimpaired in Blue Bird Film, "Jeanne Dore."

SOON TO BE SEEN HERE

Able Direction of Picture Overcomes Physical and Age Handicaps.

When Sarah Bernhardt, the "Divine Sarah" that it was possible for her limb amputated, the whole world mourned the thought that never again would they have an opportunity to see the wonderful actress on the stage and witness her brilliant histrionic efforts. However, they mourned too soon, for a clever director persuaded her that it was possible for her to complete her contract and produce the Blue Bird Photoplay, "Jeanne Dore" as per schedule, and minus the limb.

She agreed, and accordingly there was filmed one of the most wonderful and undoubtedly one of the finest photoplays the world has ever seen. She is seldom seen standing or moving about, but so vivid is her personality that she carries the whole scene with her, and the mind refuses to notice the absence of locomotion on the part of the star. Of course, the able direction is largely responsible for this effect and her supporting company all work to produce the effect of action, which, with the natural dominance of the Bernhardt, serves to entirely obliterate the loss of her limb.

As a story of the supreme mother sacrifice, "Jeanne Dore" is exquisite, beautiful and complete. Very few view this play without a rise of the tender emotions that bring unhidden tears of real sympathy to the eyes. Blue Bird photoplays are being shown in Canada by the Canadian National Company, Toronto and Montreal.

Sara Bernhardt, in "Jeanne Dore" is soon to be announced as a feature attraction at one of the biggest of the local playhouses.

GLOBE THEATRE

"The best of the season's screen productions" was the verdict of the critics on the famous five-act, Pathe feature, "The Tramp," which has been secured by the management of the Globe Theatre for the first half of this week. Florence Reed, the popular show very first to produce the leading role, and has never been seen to better advantage. She is a wonderful impetuous creature, rushing headlong into an abyss, where she is brought to bay. A two-reel, side-splitting comedy, "The Tramp," and the latest Pathe war news completes a great bill.

For the last half of the week, the headliner will be Fannie Ward, in the great Lasky production, "The Cheat," which is an extravagant young society leader. She has ample opportunity to introduce a number of the latest Parisian gowns. These gowns show very short skirts with pantalettes underneath. That they will be interesting to the feminine observer goes without saying. In addition to the striking gowns, Miss Ward is given an opportunity to display her wonderful collection of jewels, including the famous Louisa blue diamond, valued at twenty-five thousand dollars.

A special official war picture, "Trench to Trench," and a Charlie Chaplin comedy are also shown. "Piano Bill," the rag-time fiend, performs every afternoon and evening.

BLOOR PALACE

The plays for the week at the Bloor Palace will be: Monday and Tuesday, "The Guy at the Crank," which, as a novel and play, created one of the greatest sensations of the present; Wednesday and Thursday, "The Guy at the Crank," which, as a novel and play, created one of the greatest sensations of the present; Friday and Saturday, "The Guy at the Crank," which, as a novel and play, created one of the greatest sensations of the present.

BRONCHO BILLY HAS CREATED NEW CHARACTER

Best Known Player of Cowboy Roles Tries New Field.

G. M. Anderson, creator of the famous character of "Broncho Billy," of the Essanay photoplays, has brought into being a new character, entirely different, but destined to become as famous as the one representing the spirit of the west of cowboy life.

This character already has appeared in a few of his plays, and he is developing and working it out to appear in a new series, each of which photoplays are complete stories in themselves.

The character, while a conventional society man in many ways, has a certain marked difference, owing to Mr. Anderson's originality and creative genius.

In the few times the character has appeared, the role has met with marked approval and the photoplay with great success, the part having given exceptional pleasure to photoplay enthusiasts, long followers and admirers of Mr. Anderson in his other roles.

Mr. Anderson now is hard at work studying out his part to the minutest detail, giving the role a finish and putting into it all the realism of his usual work, which makes for artistic photoplays.

U-KUM THEATRE

Manager Stonge of the U-Kum Theatre, Dovercourt and College, is congratulating himself on the success of his offerings for last week and, encouraged by his success, he has booked another big series of offerings for this week. Many were the words of praise bestowed on Mr. Stonge for the manner in which last week's pictures were presented, one new patron going so far as to make the statement that the entertainment was the biggest dollar and a half's worth ever given for 10 cents.

Monday and Tuesday, the noted American actress, Ethel Barrymore, is to be seen in "Her Final Judgment," one of the strongest dramas yet presented this season. For Wednesday and Thursday, the management announces the first showing in Toronto of the great V-L-S-E melodrama, "The Sporting Duchess," with Rose Coghlan and Ethel Clayton starred. This is the famous picture which inaugurated motion pictures in the New York Hippodrome.

For Friday and Saturday, the thrilling Vitagraph production of "The Secret Seven," with Carolyn Birch and William Humphrey has been secured, together with a prize Essanay comedy-drama, "The Spy," Bud Duncan will also be seen in some good comedy. The special musical program will be a feature of all performances.

PARK THEATRE

"Still Waters," the story of canal-boats life and of the circus, in which Marguerite Clark is featured by the Famous Players Film Company on the Paramount Program at the Park Theatre this week, will prove of special interest.

A company of players spent three weeks on the banks of one of the great canals in order to get the scenes which show little Nestor (Marguerite Clark) and her old grandfather on the canal boat, which is their home. An entire circus was leased for the purpose of getting the action which transpires in and around the tent, when the ringmaster, having marked Nestor for his prey, attempts to force his attentions upon her.

In this remarkable combination of pastoral romance and gripping drama, Marguerite has the best opportunity yet afforded her of displaying her wonderful versatility.

For the scenes which transpire in and about the circus, an entire travelling show was leased by the Famous Players, and Harry La Flete, one of the most celebrated clowns that ever appeared at the New York Hippodrome, was especially engaged to play opposite Miss Clark.

In support of the diminutive star, there appear, beside Harry La Pearl, Robert Broderick, Robert Vaughn, Arthur Evers and other well-known stage and screen favorites.

Lady de Bath, better known as Mrs. Langtry, of "The Jersey Lily," has accepted the offer made to her by her former leading man, Tom Terriss to become a screen star. At the conclusion of her vaudeville engagement, she will be presented by Terriss in a motion picture version of a popular English novel, which has just reached its tenth edition.

The Guy at the Crank

BY ERNEST EADE.

Did you ever go to a picture show, And sit in the dark and stare, And wonder how in creation The picture got up there? It isn't the soft, slick manager Whom you have to thank; It's the half-baked, oily son-of-a-gun Who cusses and twists the crank.

He goes to his little two-by-four, Iron lined like a prison cell; He starts to make the film chase thru And soon it's hotter than—well You talk of the steamship stoker, And the heat of his fire's bank, But the stoker's dream is like ice cream To the chump that turns the crank.

To the picture show is where you go To sit in the dark and stare; You forget there's another world outside.

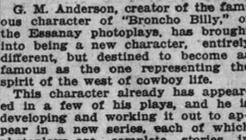

When you are snugly seated there; You watch the actors play their parts, To you it's all a dream, But it's very real to the guy at the crank.

Of the picture show machine.

Just where do operators go When they leave this vale of tears? Is there some cold place in celestial space Where they pass their after years? Or do they mingle with the throng Where sulphurous fumes are dank And hear Old Nick when the flames are thick, Shout: "Hey, there! twist the crank!"

The production is being made from Ford I. Beebe's scenario, taken from Otis Turner's story of that name. Maude George, Bertram Grassby, Harry Carter, Lois Wilson and Howard Holand complete the cast of players.

THE SINS OF THE MOTHERS AT STRAND

Anti-Gambling Play Will Be Shown for First Half of Week.

I saw the suave throng of fashion... in earnest groups of three... table, and on each table the rest-

Still again I saw a ring of fixed and impassioned faces—worsted brushing shoulders with silk in its eagerness to follow the mad flight of an ivory marble.

And then, as unexpectedly as it had come, this dissolving apparition vanished. I was almost ready to pronounce it an evil dream—but those large eyes would not have it so.

Later, I learned that those eyes belonged to the screen resemblance of Miss Anita Stewart, starring in the five-reel photoplay, "The Sins of the Mothers," which will be presented at the Strand Theatre on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday next.

'BLINDNESS OF VIRTUE' STRAND'S MID-WEEK BILL

Morality Play Will Present Edna Mayo and Bryant Washburn.

"The Blindness of Virtue" is human and true. The players are ideally cast for their parts. They appear as real living, breathing folks, like about 90 per cent. of the people of this country.

And that, he says, "is what made 'East Lynne,' and other great plays immortal."

With Harry Carey still occupying the centre of the stage, Richard Stanton is at work on the production of the ninth episode on the Universal serial feature, "Graft," as scenarized by Walter E. Wood.

Hereditary Crops Up Hereditary will sometimes crop up and spoil the best laid plans, but environment counts for a great deal, and while there are so many childless homes, where children are eagerly sought and into which they would be gladly adopted, there should be some definite placing-out system.

CURTAINS ENLISTMENT TO AMERICAN LEGION

This is One Probable Result of President Wilson's Preparedness Campaign.

Effect of the Wilson call will be to lessen the number of young Americans coming to Canada to enlist as they will naturally incline to joining their own new army.

Where Danger Lies

The danger is set forth in a communication received from the National Guards headquarters in which Major Arthur S. Honts, who is represented by former comrades here, says: "Every country in the world knows our military position and our resources as well, or better than we know it ourselves, but they know that to win they must be victorious in the first six months or else they are doomed to defeat."

Particulars received by American-born residents of Toronto of the way in which the preparedness movement is now keeping men from coming here to join the Canadian overseas forces situated a military training club movement is sweeping over the United States in advance of President Wilson's propaganda and that he is simply being carried along by it.

Not for one minute would the truly splendid work of the orphanages, which have taken years of care and thoughtful labor be decreed out cast overboard over your own children, and if you have little ones of your own, think of them. It is natural, it is wise, in this enlightened time, when there is a better way, to continue to build new asylums and homes for children? The development of such children is arrested to a great extent and they are seriously handicapped by comparison with others when the time comes for them to go into the world and there, you may see a bright one, some naturally brilliant little mortal, whose spirits have defied all bolts bars and gates (fast ten to one he will be described by the poor matron as the most troublesome inmate for discipline is a cherished word, and too much will almost a crime, where children have to be handled by the dozen or more.

UNIVERSAL FILM MEN BELIEVE IN CONTESTS

Five New Actresses Introduced to Screen By This Method.

The Universal Film Manufacturing Company believe in contests. Through their beauty contest last summer, five actresses were given to the screen. Two of these have already made names for themselves.

"PRINCE AND PAUPER" AT HIS MAJESTY'S

Marguerite Clark Starred in Mark Twain Comedy.

For the first three days of the week His Majesty's Theatre have secured the new Daniel Frohman release, the picturization of Mark Twain's beloved romance, "The Prince and the Pauper." The release is notable in that it is the first screen adaptation of a Mark Twain story, and also because it provides Marguerite Clark with splendid opportunities for her talents in the dual roles of Prince of Wales and Tom Canty, the Pauper.

Faithfully preserving the delicious satire, the thrilling romance, and the beautiful sentiment of the author, the production delineates with astonishing realism the adventures of the wearily little prince who longed to play beggar for a day, and of the ambitious little beggar who yearned to be a prince.

For Thursday and the remaining days of the week His Majesty's has secured the new Paramount release, "The Tongues of Men," which features Miss Constance Collier, the distinguished English player, who on many occasions has acted in Sir Herbert Tree's productions, as the star.

Hereditary Crops Up Hereditary will sometimes crop up and spoil the best laid plans, but environment counts for a great deal, and while there are so many childless homes, where children are eagerly sought and into which they would be gladly adopted, there should be some definite placing-out system.

CANADA IS NO LONGER GRAVEYARD OF FEATURES

N. A. Spitzer, Representative of Blue Bird Film Corporation, Hands Out Some Straight Talk to Fellow American Film Men.

"What do you think of Canada?" was asked of N. A. Spitzer, "Bluebird" representative, by the Sunday World. "I suppose you mean the exhibitor," was his answer. "Well, let me say in my opinion of him, socially, let me say he is one of the best fellows I have ever met with."

"I cannot understand where or how the prevailing idea in the States started, that the Canadian is a hard nut to crack. I do not think that the American film men who have visited Canada, have taken the trouble to analyze the conditions here. They simply went in with the idea that Canada was a big market, and when they found it was not, they were disappointed."

Malcolm Williams, popular idol of the legitimate stage, who here appeared in a countless number of successes, makes his first appearance in motion picture in "The Idol of the Stage."

On and Off the Screen

Lloyd Carleton this week began the production of another Bosworth-Universal five-reel feature. The story comes from the pen of Agnes Hayes and is being produced under the title, "Dr. Samson." Bosworth appears in the title role.

So far as can be learned, Roy Clements, producer of Joker comedies, for the Universal, is the first picture producer to use the marvellous stories told at the expense of the Ford auto in the production of a one-reel comedy. He has given his story the title, "Affording a Ford," and in it he has used many of the best-known of the current Ford jokes as a theme about which to weave his comedy.

Under the direction of the Smalleys, Tyrone Power is still at work in the stellar role of a Universal feature, "The Ill-Born," which is being staged at Universal City.

Ethel Barrymore, star of "The Final Judgment," a notable Metro picture, has joined the enthusiastic following in society, that has taken up the ice skating craze this season.

William Worthington and his company of "U" players are at work on the production of a two-reel comedy drama by James Dayton, entitled, "Mrs. Alston's Butler." It was in the production of this picture that the recently completed electric light studio at Universal City was first used.

Francis Ford is at work at Universal City on the making of a two-reel romance of an imaginary European drama by James Dayton, entitled, "Dick Turpin." Grace Cunard appears in the title role opposite Ford. They are supported by a cast including Peter Gerald, Jack Holt, Neil Hardin, Lew Short, B. Wilson and B. Murdoch.

"What Will People Say?" the next five-part feature picture which will be shown at the Hippodrome all this week promises to be the treat of the season. It is a Metro production, containing all the elements that have made Metro a leader in the motion picture world, with Mme. Petrova, the gifted dramatic actress, in the stellar role. It is a picturization of the famous novel of the same name, by Rupert Hughes, one of the foremost American dramatists and novelists. This combination goes to make "What Will People Say?" an offering of unusual interest to all the photoplay going public.

Mme. Petrova will be remembered for her notable work in the previous Metro masterpieces, "My Madonna," and "The Heart of a Painted Woman." Petrova was born and bred in the city of Moscow and received her early dramatic education while still a young child at the Imperial Theatre in that city. There she won an art of favor, and when she was called to Petrograd for an appearance before His Imperial Majesty the Czar Nicholas, and was then placed in the Imperial theatre organization at the Russian capital city, at first playing child's roles and then progressing to heavy emotional parts. Mme. Petrova soon became the ideal of the Russian people and now occupies in their affections a similar place to that which Mme. Sarah Bernhardt holds to the French Republic. After a series of successes in Russia, Mme. Petrova came to London, where she had a most successful starring season and learned to speak the English language. At the opening of the "Follies Bergere" in New York she was brought to America as the principal star, and since then a series of successes has made her ever popular with the American public. Now she has come into the ever-growing ranks of stage celebrities who devote their time to the art of the motion picture, and in it, too, she has proved herself mistress.

During the recent run of "My Madonna" in Toronto, her work attracted a real sensation, and local picture lovers are to have the treat of their lives when "What Will People Say?" is revealed this week.

The New Vitagraph studio at Brightwaters, Long Island, recently built for the use of Ralph Ince and his company of players, was officially opened last week by a house-warming in which Ince and his wife acted as host and hostess.

The new studio was formerly the Forsters' Lodge, two stories high and with floor space enough to permit deep sets. It is thoroughly equipped in every particular and a complete staff of workers make their home near-by.

CANADA IS NO LONGER GRAVEYARD OF FEATURES

N. A. Spitzer, Representative of Blue Bird Film Corporation, Hands Out Some Straight Talk to Fellow American Film Men.

"What do you think of Canada?" was asked of N. A. Spitzer, "Bluebird" representative, by the Sunday World. "I suppose you mean the exhibitor," was his answer. "Well, let me say in my opinion of him, socially, let me say he is one of the best fellows I have ever met with."

"I cannot understand where or how the prevailing idea in the States started, that the Canadian is a hard nut to crack. I do not think that the American film men who have visited Canada, have taken the trouble to analyze the conditions here. They simply went in with the idea that Canada was a big market, and when they found it was not, they were disappointed."

Malcolm Williams, popular idol of the legitimate stage, who here appeared in a countless number of successes, makes his first appearance in motion picture in "The Idol of the Stage."

On and Off the Screen

Lloyd Carleton this week began the production of another Bosworth-Universal five-reel feature. The story comes from the pen of Agnes Hayes and is being produced under the title, "Dr. Samson." Bosworth appears in the title role.

So far as can be learned, Roy Clements, producer of Joker comedies, for the Universal, is the first picture producer to use the marvellous stories told at the expense of the Ford auto in the production of a one-reel comedy. He has given his story the title, "Affording a Ford," and in it he has used many of the best-known of the current Ford jokes as a theme about which to weave his comedy.

Under the direction of the Smalleys, Tyrone Power is still at work in the stellar role of a Universal feature, "The Ill-Born," which is being staged at Universal City.

Ethel Barrymore, star of "The Final Judgment," a notable Metro picture, has joined the enthusiastic following in society, that has taken up the ice skating craze this season.

William Worthington and his company of "U" players are at work on the production of a two-reel comedy drama by James Dayton, entitled, "Mrs. Alston's Butler." It was in the production of this picture that the recently completed electric light studio at Universal City was first used.

Francis Ford is at work at Universal City on the making of a two-reel romance of an imaginary European drama by James Dayton, entitled, "Dick Turpin." Grace Cunard appears in the title role opposite Ford. They are supported by a cast including Peter Gerald, Jack Holt, Neil Hardin, Lew Short, B. Wilson and B. Murdoch.

"What Will People Say?" the next five-part feature picture which will be shown at the Hippodrome all this week promises to be the treat of the season. It is a Metro production, containing all the elements that have made Metro a leader in the motion picture world, with Mme. Petrova, the gifted dramatic actress, in the stellar role. It is a picturization of the famous novel of the same name, by Rupert Hughes, one of the foremost American dramatists and novelists. This combination goes to make "What Will People Say?" an offering of unusual interest to all the photoplay going public.

Mme. Petrova will be remembered for her notable work in the previous Metro masterpieces, "My Madonna," and "The Heart of a Painted Woman." Petrova was born and bred in the city of Moscow and received her early dramatic education while still a young child at the Imperial Theatre in that city. There she won an art of favor, and when she was called to Petrograd for an appearance before His Imperial Majesty the Czar Nicholas, and was then placed in the Imperial theatre organization at the Russian capital city, at first playing child's roles and then progressing to heavy emotional parts. Mme. Petrova soon became the ideal of the Russian people and now occupies in their affections a similar place to that which Mme. Sarah Bernhardt holds to the French Republic. After a series of successes in Russia, Mme. Petrova came to London, where she had a most successful starring season and learned to speak the English language. At the opening of the "Follies Bergere" in New York she was brought to America as the principal star, and since then a series of successes has made her ever popular with the American public. Now she has come into the ever-growing ranks of stage celebrities who devote their time to the art of the motion picture, and in it, too, she has proved herself mistress.

During the recent run of "My Madonna" in Toronto, her work attracted a real sensation, and local picture lovers are to have the treat of their lives when "What Will People Say?" is revealed this week.

Alexandra
"The Night Before"

Toronto, which has apparently never been able to have enough of Harry Lauder, will have ample opportunity this year. His first play, a comedy-drama of life in Scotland, begins a week's engagement at the Alexandra Theatre Monday night, with the customary matinees on Wednesday and Saturday. Not only does the dialogue of this play scintillate with Scottish humor, but interpolated in it will be found more than a half dozen typical Lauder songs, written especially for this play by Lauder himself. William Morris, who has directed all of Lauder's tours, is the manager of this play, the name of which is "The Night Before," or "The Heatin' of the Hoose."

Of the play's merit, however, it is only necessary to say that it has already been contracted for presentation in London by Sir Charles Wyndham, and that after its engagement here, it will be seen only in New York for the remainder of the season. Boston, where it has been playing for the past two weeks, has fallen completely in love with it, and its songs, among which are "Bonnie Sweet Beesie," "The L. O'Gowan Len," "Bonnie Scotland," and a half dozen others. The cast are all Scots people, and veteran players many of them having been head-liners. Among these are Jessie Villars, Carrie Glenn, Dawsey McNaughton, Marie Stuart, Harry Morgan, James Finlay, Stuart, Andrew Clyde, Harry Layden, Po-

Act of Hitting Sheriff Over the Head With Dinner Plate Gets Big Applause in Sketch Which He Presents This Week.

Comedians, on more often their press agents, delight to give vent to their phraseology. Even the phraseology has become stereotyped. Fred J. Ardath, who will be a feature of the bill at Shea's this week, is known as one of the best portrayers of rustic types in vaudeville, and he strikes out on somewhat original lines.

"Just what causes hearty laughter is a psychological puzzle that actors and playwrights can fathom," he says. "The lines between wit and satire are too finely drawn to differentiate. We giggle at wit, chuckle and nod at satire. The plot and lines try to avoid a burlesque characterization of this part, but the mere swatting of the majesty of law tickles the audience. What better demonstration that civilization is mere savagery, covered by a thin veneer of conventionalities?"

"If you wish to live one hundred years, begin today and each day laugh until your feet are warm. Society has labored laughter. That tickles the devil. He knows laughter would kill him out."

"Laughter will reduce your blood pressure."

"Laughter will reduce your arterial sclerosis."

"Laughter oils the wheels of the universe."

"Laughter drives little miseries away as the sun does bats."

"Laughter puts every enemy off his guard and you can send home your thrust."

Three big features, with the celebrated comedian, Harry Breen, topping them all will be shown in the bill at Loew's Yonge Street Theatre the coming week. This will be the first appearance of Breen at the Yonge street theatre. He is a big favorite in Toronto.

The second big feature on the bill will be E. Frederick Hawley with Freds Eight and Company, in the familiar drama, "The Bandit," another act which has played Toronto, but not the Yonge street theatre. This drama is particularly interesting at the time, when the United States is having trouble with bandits on the Mexican border.

The third feature will be Alexandra and Scott, another favorite act of higher priced houses, two men impersonating a woman, both in blackface, presenting a high-class singing act. The Royal Gascoignes, two wonderful Englishmen, will offer one of the most unusual juggling acts ever shown here. A funny little dog helps with the comedy.

One and Neville will offer a clever domestic drama, entitled, "The Master Move," showing how clever a man points her husband the path of rectitude. Chester, Kennedy and Franklin, the latest and most popular act, including a beautiful photoplay featuring Sarah Bernhardt.

Hippodrome

The charming Scottish comedienne, Jessie Sterling, and her clever company of Scotch lads and lassies, with their songs, dances, pipes, and the sayings of Old Scotland will headline the bill at the Hippodrome this week. A particularly interesting feature is a picture play, "The Royal Gascoignes," the foremost stage and screen actress of America today, will be featured next week in the latest release, "What Will People Say?" a picture of the novel by the same name by Rupert Hughes. The story deals with the problem of a young woman who is accustomed to every luxury, of choosing between the man of her heart and a man of wealth and affluence. John Leach, the oldest juggler on the American stage, has a brand new offering complete with mystifying feats of illusion and sleight-of-hand. Demarest and Vollette have a great little variety offering, "The Breezy Leroy," and his company, with Mlle. Leclair, the "Lucky Raffles," is acknowledged to be the peer of all hand-cuff kings. Leroy allows himself to be handcuffed and "ironed" and placed in a sack from which he makes his escape in front of a committee of spectators. Wood, Melville and Phillips are featured in vaudeville specialties. Knight Brothers and Saville, have a variety of-

"PLUMBER'S KNEES" WON PART FOR ACTOR IN LAUDER PLAY

Peter McArthur, Principal in Cast of Scotch Comedy at Alexandra, Possesses Unique Qualification, for Which He Plays Role.

It mattered little that Peter MacArthur, operatic star, had a fine stage presence, histrionic ability and a splendid voice when it came to the matter of casting him for the part of "Jimmy Morrison" in Harry Lauder's new comedy, "The Night Before," which comes to the Alexandra Theatre next week. It was a Scotchman, because all members of the cast must be Scotch born in order to qualify. But—whisper—the real reason why the discriminating Lauder instantly picked MacArthur for the part was this:

He has plumber's knees. Plumber's knees, dear reader, the less famous than "house-maid's knee," are quite as genuine, and almost as common. They consist in a certain physiological distortion of the limbs, due to the constant kneeling of the plumber under kitchen sinks, wash bowls and other out-of-the-way places in the pursuit of his vocation. Therefore, since "Jimmy Morrison" is every inch of him a plumber, a man with plumber's knees had to be secured. And no sooner had MacArthur glanced at Peter MacArthur in his "underwear" than he exclaimed, "Ah, here's th' man I'm wantin'." For Mac-

Since "Oklahoma," the new American play by George Scarborough, which Charles Frohman-David Belasco will present this week at the Grand Opera House, is also an Indian play in that some of its principal characters are Indians and the scenes are laid at an Indian reservation. It is interesting to recount the Indian plays that have been presented at one time or another within the average theatregoer's memory. There was "Northern Lights," in which William Courtleigh, who will be seen as a "Big Chief" Indian in "Oklahoma," made his first appearance as a star at the old Bowden Square Theatre. We will call "Northern Lights" the Number One Indian play. Then came, the perhaps not in precisely this order, "The Round-Up," "The Great Divide," in which Henry Miller appeared, while he now is Daddy Long-Legs in the play of that name; "Strongheart," in which was shown the civilized and college-bred Indian, a crack football player, played by Robert Edson; "The Squaw Man," which William Faversham played be-

STRUTS AND FRETS

BY E. Y. WATSON

Sir Herbert Beerholm Tree announces that he will spare no pains to make his New York Shakespearean season everything that England would want to be. He has engaged Lynn Harding to play "King Henry VIII." in the play of that name with which he will open this season in March.

Sarn Bernard is back in vaudeville doing a monolog at the Palace Theatre, New York.

Eugene La Rue of New York, and Dorothy Fern French of this city, were married here on Monday, Jan. 24.

Phyllis Nelson-Terry, Shes headliner for the past week, and Marie Tanguet, are to be members of a remarkable cast with which Joseph Brooks will revive "The Idiot," the play by C. Haddon Chambers. Joanne Sagan, recently seen at the Grand, will be in it as well, and the first production on any stage is scheduled for Toronto on March 13.

Al Jolson will not Man Friday in the Shubert's production of Robinson Crusoe, Jr., forthcoming at the Winter Garden, New York.

Vernon Castle has promised to sail for England this week with the avowed object of enlisting with the Royal Flying Corps.

Writing to The New York Times Cyril Maude is out with a bitter protest against liquor restrictions in Regina, Sask., where he played recently. "There," he says, "I found no sign of a bar, or drinking saloon of any sort, nor was I allowed to drink a drop of any wine or spirit on Christmas Day even." He adds however, that there is a government liquor store, where one can buy as much as one wants.

The engagement of Sarah Bernhardt at the Coliseum in London has proved a great success. She is playing in "Les Cathedrales."

Ota Gygl, the violinist recently heard at Shea's, has given up his vaudeville tour and will enter the concert field.

Following her regrettable accident at Allentown, Pa., in which Juliet's balcony collapsed and she fell on her head, Percy Haaswell has decided to retire from the stage for a time.

Alexander Volinine, Anna Pawlowa's dancing partner, got in the way of a motor truck on Broadway and a wheel ran over his foot breaking two small bones in his toes.

Owing to the fact that Julia Marlowe has retired from the stage, and her husband, E. H. Sothorn is to retire, he says, after this season, the wardrobe used in seventy-one plays they have done is to be sold at auction, Feb. 7.

The new play written for Margaret Anglin by Rupert Hughes and Gertrude Atherton is called "The Vein of Gold," and is an adaptation of Mrs. Atherton's novel, "The Perch of the Devil."

THE BANDIT AT LOEW'S IS SENSATIONAL SKETCH

Frederick Hamley Enacts Role of Chieftain Who Attacks Girl.

Francis Haight in "The Bandit," Loew's.

"The Bandit," a thrilling drama of the Mexican border, will be the big feature at Loew's Yonge Street Theatre this week. This sketch, played by Frederick Hawley, Francis Haight and Company, is new, but added interest is attached to it at this time in view of the recent activities of the bandit tribes, some under the rule of Villa, in the yet unconquered part of Mexico.

Frederick Hawley is the bandit, in the play, and has for several years been a sensation wherever he has been seen. The act carries a special set of scenery showing the interior of an adobe house in Mexico, the headquarters of the bandit chieftain. Valuable blankets, real Mexican pottery, knives, saddles and bridles, all from Mexico, are scattered about, to lend local color. Into this house wanders an American girl from a nearby ranch. The bandit comes back unexpectedly, and then the girl starts her fight for her honor and her life, which she wins in a spectacular and utterly unexpected manner. There are few sketches in vaudeville more sensational, and few staged in a more painstaking manner. Five trunks of nothing but properties are carried with the act.

The engagement is announced in London of Pamela, Cynthia Maude, daughter of Cyril Maude, to Captain William La Touche Congreve of the Rifle Brigade.

LONDON STIRRED BY BERNHARDT'S RETURN

Tumultuous Crowd Greet Her in "Les Cathedrales" Dramatic Poem.

ARRAIGNS THE GERMANS

Bernhardt, the divine and indomitable, has answered the reports of her death by going to England and there playing to audiences more tumultuously enthusiastic than any she ever found awaiting her in the days of her highest powers.

The first performance of "Les Cathedrales," the dramatic poem which enables the crippled artist to remain seated through the interpretation, was a great occasion, with queens and princesses and other great folk out front, with an evergreen wreath tied with the tricolor going over the footlights, with the orchestra playing the French anthem, and the curtain rising and falling a dozen times to thunderous applause. Of the poem and its performance you may read this in the Telegraph: "Against a background of clouds you first see half a dozen draped figures seated in curiously carved armchairs, and representing the Cathedrales of Notre Dame de Paris, Rheims, Bourges, Arles, St. Pol de Leon, and Amiens. At their feet lies a wounded soldier. Before long the mists disperse, and the number of the ladies company is increased by Strassburg, also seated. The seven constitute a tribunal which, in the end, shall pronounce the doom of those who have ruthlessly, and with a savagery beyond all expression, transformed Europe into a horrible and sickening shambles. For more than forty years, walls Strassburg, I have borne my heavy cross; for forty years I have waited; but now at last the hour of liberation has come. Here follows a singularly thrilling description of the devastated land, of the tortured people, of Rheims Cathedral, a queen among its sisters, now like a martyr delivered into the hands of its executioners." Gradually the scene gathers strength, until at length it reaches the splendidly rhetorical arraignment of the German invaders, invested by Mme. Bernhardt with a force and a profundity of feeling rarely rivaled, it swept like a cyclone thru the audience.

torium, the final cry, 'Seigneur, void in grave! Juges-les!' strikes the most sluggish into appreciation by its magnetic intensity. "Like a sea undercurrent there comes the sound of the townspeople of Tlemont, Charlevot, Ypres, and other cities, chanting the 'Miserere,' filling the air with subdued lamentations. Now the climax is reached. It takes the form of a sensational struggle between Strassburg herself, armed with bow and arrow and the Prussian eagle, 'Oisat meurtrier,' ending with the downfall and death of the latter. "Figure, pleure, Allemagne, l'Alsace allemande est tombe dans le Rhin! You can imagine the majesty, the all-conquering sense of victory, the emotion-al fervor given to the lines by Mme. Bernhardt."

"THE DYNASTS" WILL BE GREAT STAGE SPECTACLE

In all probability the greatest stage spectacle ever attempted in Toronto will be the presentation at the Alexandra Theatre week commencing Monday, Feb. 14, of the customary matinees on Wednesday and Saturday, of Thomas Hardy's great historical epic drama, "The Dynasts." Its mammoth scenic investments composed of twenty-four individual and elaborate scenes, portraying Trafalgar, the Peninsula, and Waterloo, and give the most program moments of the customary shaming wars. The precaution taken against the landing of Bonaparte; the British ships sailing towards the Spanish shore to meet the combined squadrons of the French and Spanish navies; the raging sea battle that brought victory, but that sent gloom and sadness over England because of the death of Nelson; the British and their allies at Albuera, ranged under Beresford, charging up hills in a chaos of smoke, steel, sweat, curses and blood. In the prolog it emphasizes the fact that the war of over a hundred years ago was not with France but with Napoleon, the would-be prophet and demigod.

"GIVE-ME-CREDIT" REEVES WRITES BURLESQUE PARABLE

Explains the Origin of the Eternal Mystery, Why and How She Came Into Being—He Feels Like Adam Did Sometimes.

Al Reeves At the Gayety Theatre this week.

BY AL REEVES.
When creation was still young and the gods were looking at the worlds swinging in space, their special attention was called to the planet called earth, on which they had placed a solitary man. He looked so lonely that they thought he needed a companion; but they had employed all their materials—not a single element was left. Then the gods gathered in council and after much discussion the God of love said: "Let us take the roundness of the moon, the wisdom of the serpent, the entwinement of clinging vines, the trembling of the aspen tree, the slenderness of the rose bush and the velvet of its flowers, the gentleness of the falling leaf, the captivating glance of the fawn, the play of the sun's rays, the laughter of rippling waters, the constancy of the stars and the harmony of the pipes of pan, the inconstancy of the wind, the fickleness of the hare, the vanity of the butterfly, the courage of the lion, the mellowness of the honey, the cruelty of the tiger, the warmth of fire, the purity of fresh fallen snow and the cooling of the dove, and unite all these and form the most wonderful thing of all creation—a woman."
After the gods had formed this lovely creature, they introduced her to the lonely man. A few weeks later the man came to the garden of the gods and said: "This paradox you have given me disturbs me greatly. She chatters without rest and takes all my time. She laments for nothing at all and ever and anon she changes her mind, and when I inquire 'Why?' she says 'Because.' So the gods took the woman away for observation.
In a few days the man returned to the gods and said: "My life is solitary since I returned the woman thou gavest me. I remember how she danced before me and glanced at me from the corner of her eye. How she sang to me, tormented me, comforted me, played with me and clung to me. I do not understand her, but I am lonely. While I fear I cannot live with her, I am absolutely sure I cannot live without her. I do not understand her; but I want her to come back."
The observing gods did not understand her either, so they gave her

PLAY PRODUCTION BIGGEST OF GAMBLERS

Sometimes the manager's claim that play-production is the greatest of all gambles seems quite true. "Jobson's Choice" one of the season's greatest successes in New York, was voted, at a secret rehearsal for producers, a certain failure. "Within the Law" failed in Chicago before it was taken into New York. William A. Brady sold his interest in it for a pittance, and even Bayard Veiler, the author, disposed of his rights for virtually nothing.

Interesting Happenings In the Motorcycle World

DEALERS and manufacturers of motorcycles, bicycles, and accessories throughout Canada and the States are unanimous in the cheering report of "lots of business." MOTORISTS DRIVE WITH MORE CARE AND CONSIDERATION

Accidents Caused By Motor Car Have Decreased With Increase of Automobiles—Ratio Inverse.

DURING five years from 1909 to 1914 the number of automobiles in use increased more than twice as rapidly as the number of fatalities caused by them, a report issued by the United States Department of Commerce.

A comparison mortality figures given in a preliminary report by the census with figures showing the number of automobiles in use, the department of commerce shows that the number of automobiles registered increased from 200,000 in 1909 to 1,750,000 at the end of 1914.

Practical Pointers on Cold-Weather Care of Motor Cars

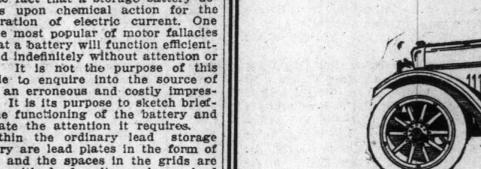

Hints on Starting in Zero Weather—How the Self-Starters Functions With Especial Reference to the Off-Neglected Battery—Its Use and Abuse.

STARTING a motor by hand, even when it has stood in a zero cold garage over night, need not, indeed should not, be a herculean task. Cranking a motor, either by hand or electric starter from now till doomsday, will avail not at all if an explosive mixture is not introduced into the combustion chambers.

Motorists are asked to test the gravity of the solution in the cells. This is done as a means of determining the state of charge of the battery, because when the battery is fully charged the solution has a specific gravity of between 1.280 and 1.300.

Probably ignorance of the functioning of storage batteries is responsible for the major part of the trouble to which they are subjected by many motorists.

charged and all is well; but if the cells read as low as 1.200 the battery should be recharged immediately. The nearer the gravity approaches the 1.300 mark the more efficient will be the service rendered by the battery.

Motorists who cannot have their battery charged at intervals during the winter should take the accumulator to the service station and store it until the car is put into service again. Dry storage is recommended, and the charge for this is quite small.

The World Window

AN UNFORTUNATE BIRD

Military Efficiency Depends Largely Upon Teeth

From lessons learned thru experiences in the struggle at present progressing in Europe it would seem that the old saying, "An army travels upon its stomach," would have to be replaced by, "The efficiency of an army depends upon the condition of the teeth of the individual soldiers."

Dentistry is playing a prominent part in caring for the wounded in the hospitals at the front and is in many cases quite as important as surgery.

While the care of the teeth has come to be recognized as essential for the preparation of a man for the firing line, it is but one of the many precautions taken to ensure the physical fitness of the troops who are going forth to fight the battles of the Empire.

Dentistry Important in Caring for Wounded

Training of Soldier a Building Up Process

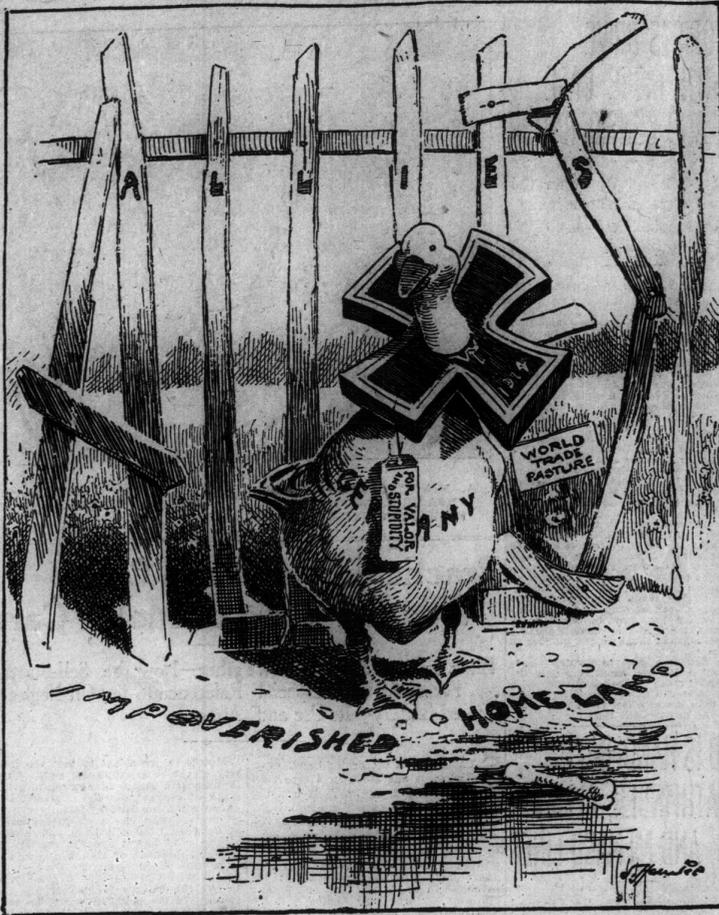

In no war in any period of the world's history has the importance of physical fitness been so thoroughly appreciated as it is in the present struggle. This does not mean that the recruit when first taken on is a perfect physical specimen; but it does mean that before he is sent to the front he is put into a condition to stand the hardships he is to endure.

Selection of Brandeis for U.S. Supreme Court

President Wilson's selection of Louis D. Brandeis for the seat on the United States supreme court bench, left vacant thru the death of Justice Lamar, has caused more than a flutter in the political circles of our neighbors to the south, and some predict that the appointment will never be ratified by congress.

Brandeis Appointment is Triumph for Public

That the president's selection of Mr. Brandeis is considered by the average man on the street in the United States as a triumph for the common people, is the view generally taken, and this is the view The Chicago Journal takes of it when pointing out that he is a rare and invaluable combination of a conservative radical, uniting a passion for human rights with a deep respect for the law.

Doing One's Bit Will Outlive the War

That the phrase, "I am doing my bit," which is one of the quaintest and most expressive semi-military phrases that has been born of the war will long outlive the struggle in Europe, is the opinion expressed by The Christian Science Monitor, and those who have an opportunity of realizing the true import of the phrase in the discharge of patriotic duty, whether it be at the front in Flanders, on guard in the lonely outposts of the Empire, making munitions to feed the guns, turning the furrow that food may be grown to supply the vast needs of the fighting forces and the civilian population, or knitting socks to send to the men in the trenches, will agree that this expresses their sentiments as well as any phrase in the English language could.

Germany Fears As Well As Hates

That the attitude of Germany towards Britain is one of fear as much as hate is indicated in a statement made to Milan correspondent by a noted engineer, who was once technical advisor to one of Germany's largest engineering undertakings. While the food question has become so acute as to demand an immediate solution, a much more serious cause for anxiety is England. After having accused Great Britain of seeking the war, the statesmen and the press are now seeking to place the blame on her for wanting to prolong it.

Japs Capturing India Trade

Recently published government reports of the exports and imports of India for the past ten years are interesting, showing that she has practically doubled her trading capacity in that time. In 1903-04 the imports were valued at approximately $308,840,000, and ten years later, at the outbreak of the war, they had advanced to $610,935,000. Exports advanced during the same period from approximately $508,775,000 in 1904 to $814,615,000 in 1914.

CRUSTS AND CRUMBS

By Albert Ernest Stafford

A CORRESPONDENT in Wingham asks for a fuller explanation of the position taken in Crusts and Crumbs on January 2, concerning war and the forces behind war. I am not sure that I can make it any clearer than I did a month ago and I would suggest that the first article be read over again in order to get the point of view. If one's point of view be wrong, all that follows may be wrong, also. This applies to those who object as well as to those who agree. We must try and rid ourselves of prejudice and face the facts. I took the facts to be that progress was the result of struggle of fight. This is true of spiritual progress, as of material progress.

comprehensive views of life, and perhaps does not quite realize what immortality means, or he would not jump to the conclusion that because war is going on we should all be soldiers. To begin with, at least of humanity are women and the rules exclude them from fighting, tho not from suffering. When they incarnate as men it will be time enough for them to take their place as soldiers. A large part of the remaining population is womanish and effeminate in character. They think more of their bodies and their comfort than the fundamental principles upon which civilization and human progress must rest. If they can find any excuse they will never fight. Some time or other they must learn to stand up for truth and honour and the high ideals of their souls, even to the death.

WAR CREATES HATRED between nations, asserts my correspondent. Germany fought Austria in 1866 and defeated her. They are allies. Great Britain fought France for centuries, and they are allies. Together they fought Russia sixty years ago. All three are allies. Bulgaria fought Turkey in 1877. They are allies. Nations are as fickle as lovers. They do not love and hate. They are only moved by desire at present. Very few people have learned to choose the better rather than the deceiver. And nations are made up of people. "The mystic poise and balance of life," for which I spoke, "between periods of strife and progress, which men call peace, do not carry the soul upward and onward." This sentence, my correspondent thinks, would warrant us all in going to be soldiers to conquer Germany and after that some other power. Strife consists of striving and there are other kinds of striving besides war, while progress may or may not result from military action. It is a commonplace of occult teaching that progress is only made by the soul while it is incarnated. Between earth-lives the purgatorial and heaven states serve for purification and assimilation of the results attained. It is only when the full chord of life is sounding in the union of body, soul, mind and spirit that the oneness or redemption could be possible. This is the real mystery of the incarnation and the Crucifixion of the Christos on the Cross of Matter. War is part of the Crucifixion, but it cannot destroy brotherhood, for brotherhood exists in the nature of things. It is merely that we have not discovered it yet, or learned to practice it. Disagreeable Karma is certainly created by revolution and conquest, but those who suffer soon incarnate in the race bodies of their conquerors and collect their debts in this direct and indisputable fashion.

IT HAS BEEN POINTED OUT to me that at the present rate and with three years' war, the many competent authorities think there will be more, the population in Europe in a generation will be less by 100,000,000. At that date the yellow race will number 600,000,000, and outnumber the white by about 200,000,000. It is easy to put these figures aside as mere arbitrary calculations, and this is how the peace-advocates are inclined to deal with all the data placed before them. For years before Germany broke loose those who knew gave warning of what was about to occur. No one believed them sufficiently to make adequate preparation. The peace people laughed the whole warning to scorn. Experts demonstrated that war was no longer possible. The sidereal year moved on. The month of Aquarius, a period of 2155, years opened a new era, and war befell just as naturally as snow in February. Another cosmic season will come around when war will be as untimely as snow in July. My correspondent does not take sufficiently

ANY SOCIETY OR BODY of men pledged against any other body or organization of historic importance may very safely be judged to consist of former victims of the system on the organization against which they are now banded. Most of our religious bitterness and rancour is not due to present injustices, but to the injustice born and engendered in past lives and now manifesting. This is the philosophy of the saying, "Love your enemies, bless them that persecute you." In a former life the quarrel which they are now trying to settle by an exchange of places. The idea of a millennium is certainly a delusion as long as people insist that they know everything and that all the truth is on their side. A millennium can only come from a realization of brotherhood and spiritual life, an understanding of the laws of incarnation and rebirth, and a determination on the part of all men to make the Christ life the sole aim of their existence. We are a long way from that when the Kaiser thinks he is the representative of God on earth and millions agree with him. All men are capable of representing God on earth, and do so to some infinitesimal extent, but until they do to the utmost of their ability they will not be in general agreement. Men who strive for such an ideal make great spiritual progress, and a man who values his life less than his principles wins the way to a higher level in life and a better body in his next birth. Hence it is said that soldiers dying in the war with the cause of liberty and humanity at heart will reincarnate in the new sub-race which is to be developed. My correspondent asks if Karma will not have something to do with this. Karma is merely another name for Providence, or for the law of justice, or for the book-keeping bureau of the universe. Everybody gets what he earns. Everybody gets what he sows. Modern version of Christianity Jesus stress on saving one's soul. Jesus Christ said that anyone who tried to save his soul would lose it, but who ever lost it would gain it eternally. This is the religion of war. We must kill out for ourselves and give our lives for others. Reincarnation will take care of our future.
