The Ottawa Child-Torture Case.

Our telegraphic columns on Saturday contained the announcement that Mrs. Bell, of Ottawa city, had been sentenced to imprisonment for life for the cruel treatment of her grandchildren. Without some knowledge of the crimes proved against this woman, one might believe that Judge Robertson was unduly severe in his punishment of the prisoner. But the evidence against her was everwhelmingly strong, and the accusations proved of so revolting a The Cattle Embargo Bill May be Shelved character as to suggest that the accused was more fiend than woman. Charged with the care of her two grandchildren-a boy aged less than 14 and a girl of 10-no outrage short of murder seems to have been regarded by this misguided woman as too cruel to mete out to these children.

It was proved that Percy Short, the grandson, was hung from the ceiling by corsets while he was in a nude condition. His grandmother made him pull hair out that grew under his arms, and she singed him with a candle. Not contented with that punishment, on a cold day in January last she took him to the garret, compelled him to strip naked, then put on him a wet shirt, and tying him hand and foot to a chair, left him for an hour at an open window. From this exposure, ulcers grew on his legs, and his feet were so badly frozen that his toes had to be amputated. On the revelations made by the boy after he was taken to the hospital, criminal proceedings were taken against the torturer.

Nor was the granddaughter Oneita treated with less cruelty. When the child appeared in court, she exhibited to the jury a bald spot on her head from which her grandmother had torn the hair. As a punishment for a slight offense, the woman put turpentine in the girl's eyes; but the most revolting room and lick Percy's sores. The girl eign cattle from British ports, a perbegan to cry, whereupon the prisoner took the child away, and when she came back she could not answer a question because her tongue was tied. Mrs. Bell said she had tied the tongue Oneita had tasted Percy's ing at the sight. At that time, Mrs. Bell said the child had poisoned her tongue by putting some of the salve from Percy's foot on it.

It was further proved that the woman was in the habit of sending the children down into the cellar in the dark, keeping them prisoners there. By making strange noises she pretended that evil spirits were after them. In the coldest days, they were made to run around the house with their feet bare, and when Mrs. Bell was remonstrated with she said that children had warmer blood than grown people, and would not catch cold. Perhaps this was her excuse for making the boy sleep in a cold garret cubboard and his sister on the floor downstairs, with only a thin covering, though there were several beds in the house. During all the time they were in Ottawa under the charge of their grandthey had never been allowed to play with other children. They were often that authority from their mother to beat forms. The Cabinet will meet street, corner Dufferin avenue, 10 rooms, not to kill them, odern conveniences. Apply Fraser & not worth hanging.

The prisoner seems to have been afraid that she would get into trouble through her cruelties, as she compelled the boy to write a series of "confessions" at her dictation, exonerating and claiming that he had been a very wicked and disobedient boy, and that cause of his disobedience and of his 66 00 on a slate by the woman, and subsequently copied out by the boy, who was afraid to refuse.

It is almost impossible to conceive that a woman presumably intelligent, well-educated, and making some pretense to religious convictions could be guilty of such atrocities as, according to the verdict of the jury, after several days of earnest investigation, were regarded as vindictive punishment, dition to dren that society will not tolerate the

To teach these cadets the college had fiften professors and assistants, costing $28,981 a year, and 21 servants, sergeants, gunners, etc., costing $8, 104 a year-a total for the staff of $36,-000, according to the Auditor-General's report. Mr. Mulock called attention ever, the committee decided to rise. to the fact that the Board of Visitors had asked that the commandant be changed every few years, and concluded by asserting that the institution was far too costly.

Mr. Dickey, in reply, said he was instructed by the Minister of Militia that the Deputy Adjutant-General, Col. Otter, had made certain recommendations in this case, one being that it would be in the best interests of this regiment that Col. Hamilton should resign the command; otherwise the disruption of the regiment might be the result. Gen. Gascoigne had dealt with the case, and he had placed the alternative clearly before Col. As to the military college, the recommendations of the visitors would receive consideration.

Mr. Edgar spoke very strongly in favor of Col. Hamilton, who he considered had been most unjustly treated. Col. Hamilton had been threatened with dismissal and disgrace without any reasons being given. When he had asked for reasons, they had been refused to him. The investigation held by Colonel Otter was a hole and corner affair. That officer had condescended to look for complaints against the nmanding officer of the regiment by Inquiring of the sergeants, some of whom had been reprimanded for un-military conduct. If the political proclivities of Col. Hamilton had been different to what they were, he was satisfied that, instead of his going out, some of his officers would have been court-martialled.

Col. O'Briend held that the Department of Militia was not justified in its action against Col. Hamilton. Referring to the vacant office of ad-Jutant-general, he declared that it was candalous that the Administration which could act so promptly in the cases of Cols. Strathy, and Hamilton could not make the appointment of an djutant-general. Just at this time too, when the country was purchasing new arms and the annual drill was coming on it was of the utmost importance that if Col. Powell was to be superannuated, his successor should be appointed. And just at this time, too. there was put over the head of the partment a Minister who knew nothing about it from top to bottom and seemed to care nothing about it, either. The result was the demoralization of the administration of the department. There is no use in making recommendations, said Col. O'Brien, in a tone of dispuragement, since there is no Minister of Militia here to listen to them.

Mr Richard Cartwright spoke in very friendly terms of the military college, and said the objects for which it was counded are good. But he quoted celine, O.

Rather Lively Meeting-No Licenses Issued Yet.

Warm Discussion Between Mr. Scatcherd and Mr. Bowman.

The license commissioners for East Middlesex met in the office of Inspector John Durand on Saturday afternoon to consider applications for licenses for the year beginning May 1. Mr. Joseph McDougall, of Westminster, was the chairman, and Messrs. John Kennedy, of Ilderton, and Alfred Bailey were the remaining commissioners.

Thirty-three licenses are to be granted for the year, and besides those already holding licenses there are four applicants. Robert Orr, of Denfield, and Peter Young, of Crumlin, are asking for licenses for new houses, while Thomas Jeffries, city, and E. J. Sale, of London township, are applying for licenses for the places at present conducted by W. G. Deary, in London West, and Mrs. Carrie Mahon, on the Sarnia road. The complete list of applicants is as follows: Westminster township-Geo. Byers, Nilestown; C. N. Harris, Pipe Line road; John Charles, Belmont; Jane

Dr. Arnott read a letter he had recently received from Dr. Bucke, medical superintendent of the asylum, in regard to the above-mentioned hotels. Dr. Bucke gave it as his opinion that the hotels were of no use to the publargest concerns have already signified lic, and were a source of constant temptation and danger to the employes and also the patients at the asylum who were allowed out on parole. "If you could see your way to refusing have been abused. licenses to these hotels, I believe you would be conferring a benefit on the public and doing an injury to no one,' the doctor concluded. Dr. Arnott added that he knew of three cases where persons would be sent to the asylum or treatment but for the fact that when out on parole they would get to the hotels. In private conversation Dr. Bucke stated that the conduct of men at the two hotels was simply horrible. He saw more drunken people on the road between the asylum and the city than he did in any other place. It was dangerous for ladies and girls to travel the road. On Sundays the amount of drinking was disgraceful, and Dr. Arnott contended that if there were any place where licenses should be refused it was at Pottersburg, if only on account of the asylum river at a point about fourteen miles attendants. He had no reflections to make on hotel-keepers. They were engaged in the business, and no doubt there were many who would not give a man a glass of liquor after he had sufficient. They were not all built that way, however, as was evidenced by the statement of Dr. Bucke. Mr. D. C. Macdonald, who appeared in support of a London West application, asked Dr. Arnott if this was the same Dr. Bucke who gave evidence at the Shortis and Barrie murder trials and was not believed by the jury. "I don't think they are in the neighborhood of the asylum," continued Mr. Bowman, who further thanked the commissioners for fixing the closing at 10:30 p.m. He expressed regret at having to refer to the unfortunate Warwick affair which happened down the river last summer. Mr. Fowler then announced his theme as the power and adaptability of the Gospel, and based his remarks on Romans i., 16: "I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every man that believeth it." The speaker was given the closest attention of his large audience as he dwelt for some time of the power of the word, stamped as it was with the authority of a divine and risen Lord; its power in its adaptability to the wants and necessities of man, and its power because of its simplicity. "Let us not be entangled in the yoke of bondage," continued Mr. Fowler, as he again referred to the question of liberty. "I believe that we need to teach our children just a little more patriotism. Some may talk as they like about it, but I would love to teach our children, so that when they looked upon the old Union Jack it would mean to them something. It would mean that mighty men died for that old flag, and I would instil it into their hearts, and I would make them loyal men and women.

"In the past winter, during the great financial depression, you have been doing great deeds of charity. Five hundred dollars have been distributed by your society. We need such work. "The Gospel of Jesus Christ is powerful in its universality. It knows no bounds, and in its sweep it is adapted to take in all mankind. And I might say, as English-speaking people and descendants of those who have epoken the old Anglo-Saxon language, that we are to be the people to take the lead and front in this great work of evangelizing the world. And we know that in heathen lands, where the Union Jack floats on the breeze, our missionaries are protected, and in no country there is none so safe as he who stands under the old Union Jack. That is the flag today that is floating over the great country-the southern part of Egypt and the Soudan-where our brethren are giving their lives for the love of those in that country. The same thing exists in the southern part of Africa. I say there goes the flag which opens up nations and gives protection to those who preach the Gospel of the Savior. May the old flag ever wave, and those nations be brought to a knowledge of Jesus Christ, and love, mercy and liberty sweep over the world. Long may St. George's Society continue to disburse that which needed for the poor, and long may its members stand as sons of Welshmen and Englishmen to do duty for God and man.' PRESIDENT KRUGER'S COMMIS-SIONER. President Kruger has sent Jonkherr Von Boeschorten, a high state official, to England on a mission connected with the charges that the Transvaal has violated the provisions of the convention of 1884, forbidding the Transvaal to grant preferential rates to any power against British imports. President Kruger dodges this provision by allowing a large rebate on the duties collected on goods imported from Germany by lowering railway rates on shipments for the Transvaal by way of Delagoa Bay, which is the route followed by German goods, and by other methods, all of which result in a benefit to imports from Germany and disastrously affects British trade with RUSSIAN INFLUENCE IN ABYS-SINIA. The interest of Russia in Abyssinia is arousing the curiosity of Europe, and there is a great deal of ironical comment here regarding the Russian Red Cross expedition, fitted out by popular subscription, to proceed to Massowah and thence inland to attend the wounded Abyssinians. The present Russian expedition recalls the former so-called scientific and religious misolitical links. The present expedition explorer of Abyssinia; Lieut. Some Lord Salisbury means to deal with the Soudan matter first. It depends upon the Boers whether they will allow the British to wait for an opportunity to deal with them. TROOPS FOR THE CAPE.

In the Commons Mr. Chamberlain, replying to a question on the subject, said the Government had decided Natal and Cape Town. Therefore a battalion of line and a body of mounted infantry would be dispatched to those places as soon as possible. This movement, he added, was connected with the decision of the Government to permanently increase the strength of the garrison of Cape Colony, a step which had been urged by the military authorities, who were of the opinion the present garrison of Capetown was inadequate for the defense of the dockyard and ceal depots.

This announcement of Mr. Chamberlain was greeted with loud cheers, and was looked upon as meaning that the Government had finally decided to send Dyer, who was arrested at Reading South Africa. Mr. Chamberlain added.

It is understood that the House of Commons committee appointed to inquire into the adulteration of food have virtually agreed upon a report which will cause much stir in the trading world. The majority propose the appointment of a Government board of chemists to establish and maintain a standard of purity for articles of food, home raised and imported, and that adulterators, on their second conviction, will be sent to prison, as in ancient days. Certain parts of the report are directed against American foodstuffs, including lard, and customs officers will be authorized to take samples at the port of entry. NOT A SUCCESS. Berlin, April 18.-In well-informed circles there is an impression that the visit of Emperor William to Vienna was not such a success in strengthening the friendship between Austria and Germany as expected. It is asserted that Emperor Francis Joseph and his Cabinet are piqued at the length of Emperor William's stay in Italy and the mutual effusion displayed there during the pourparlers. question of the future German support of the Austrian-Balkan policy was repeatedly broached without eliciting satisfactory German assurances and a thorough understanding on the subject between Count Badeni and Prince Hohenlohe was not affected. The Austrian Minister for Foreign Affairs, Count Goluchowski, and all the minor Austrian officials received a German decoration, but Count Badeni, the Premier, did not.

Another question left unadjusted is that of the British-German relations. The German press has had an outburst of temper owing to an article in the Morning Post of London, which is considered offensive to Germany, and the Government, it is said, in spite of Austria's wishes, is determined to pursue a policy in South Africa dictated by its own interests entirely until Great Britain is brought to her senses. Herr Herff, the German representative, has received minute instructions in view of the latest development in South Africa.

OPPOSITION TO DUELLING. The immense sensation which resulted from the pistol duel between Count von Kotze and Baron von Schrader, resulting in the death of the latter, and to replace the troops withdrawn from a number of other recent encounters seems to promise an early abolition of the duello in Germany. The Diet refused to pass the measure in this shape, and adopted a modified form by which a penalty is only applied to the betrayal of business secrets, during term of service and with intent to injure the employers or compete with them. The Diet also declined to accept the paragraph by which editors of newspapers were to be held responsible for fraudulent or deceptive advertisements, and passed the clause exempting editors from penalty unless it is proved that they were aware that the advertisements were desceptive.

Lively Discussion at a Meeting of the Ministerial Association.

Exception Taken to the Course Pursued by Rev. George Fowler,

And That Gentleman Vigorously De. fends Himself-Joint Meeting With the Anglican Clerical Association Arranged For,

The Ministerial Association had a lively discussion on the Sunday church parade matter at its regular meeting this morning. Rev. Walter Rigsby, president, was in the chair, and there were also present: Rev. Geo. Fowler, (secretary), Rev. E. B. Lanceley, Rev. Robert Johnston, Rev. T. S. Johnson, Rev. A. G. Harris, Rev. R. L. Holden, Rev. T. W. Charlesworth, Rev. J. W. 9 Pedley, Rev. J. G. Stuart, Rev. A. Stewart, Rev. W. J. Clark, Rev. A. L. Russell, Rev. Benjamin Clement, Rev.

Dr. Daniel and Rev. Wm. M. Walker. Rev. W. J. Clark introduced Mr. Peter Scott, the student, who is in charge of the Waterloo Street South Mission, and Mr. Scott was invited to participate in the meetings of the body while he remains in the city.

Rev. A. G. Harris reported on behalf of a special committee re services in hospital and other public institutions. He said that the ladies in charge of the matter complained that the ministers did not keep their appointments, and that they didn't come at the proper time even while the ladies

Later Mr. Clark jokingly asserted that if there was $10 in any of these services they would not be forgotten, and Rev. Mr. Russell took exception to this remark by telling how he had once forgotten a marriage engagement in which there was $5. (Laughter.) Mr. J. Beardsall, secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance, addressed the association in regard to the appointment of delegates to a mass meeting of the Lord's Day Alliance on April 28 or some other date. Rev. Robert Johnston moved that the Ministerial Association co-operate with the Lord's Day Alliance in this matter. The motion carried, and the president, Rev. Walter Rigsby, was appointed the representative of the association.

Rev. Mr. Pedley said that the depu-.333 tation which waited on him re the St. .333 George's Society church parade, had informed him that there was a resolution on the books of the association prohibiting the preaching of such sermons. In view of that, he declined.

then, why was it published the other day?" asked Mr. Lanceley. "It was asked for by a reporter, I suppose," said Mr. Pedley.
Rev. T. S. Johnson commended Mr.

Pedley's action in deferring to the association. Rev. Mr. Russell explained that he felt bound to his promise to preach for the Oddfellows next Sunday, but after that he would be in strict harmony

The honorable, of Biddulph, died at his residence in straightforward action to be taken this village early on Thursday morning, after a short illness, at the advanced age of 76 years. The will leave here on Saturday at 11 a.m. for St. John's Cemetery.

A violent rain storm swept over this village on Friday afternoon, accompanied by much lightning and thunder. The awning in front of Mrs. Smith's grocery store was torn to fragments, and the small brick country school house to the south of the village was struck by lightning, tearing that portion of the chimney above the roof to pieces, and damaging other parts of the building slightly. Although the children were all at work inside, fortunately no one was injured.

Mr. Donald Stewart, of McGillivray, had his barns completely destroyed by lightning during the storm. Thirty tons of hay, 3,000 bushels of oats, and 500 bushels of wheat, were also destroyed. It looks very much as if we are to be treated to a home paper in the near future. Mr. H. J. Benner, our popular vilage printer, called on the chief business men of the place today, accompanied by his son-in-law, Mr. A. M. Bock, of Port Elgin, a practical printer, to see what the prospects might be for the establishment of a home paper. It is understood that Mr. Bock will take full charge of the business during the elec-tion campaign, and while Mr. Benner, who has a long experience in journalistic work, will no doubt devote to it a certain line of procedure was laid a portion of his time, it is hinted that down, in which he could not concur, he during the approaching contest he will would withdraw from the association be engaged in stumping the riding for and be free to act as he thought fit, the man of his choice. without violating the spirit of loyalty

Essex Free Press: Seven years ago a young girl named Cattanach, aged about 13 years, disappeared from her home at London, Ont., and all efforts to discover her whereabouts proved unavailing. A few days ago her sister, Mrs. Linius Doan, who lives in this town, was surprised to have a young lady walk into the house and announce herself as the long-lost sister. It seems she had run away from home because her father had refused to let her visit her sister, Mrs. Doan. She had has worked there ever since. Her mother, Mrs. Cattanach, who still

The work of the commissioner will be entirely educative in charge of vagrancy was preferred against the prisoners and they were remanded until Friday. Numerous complaints have shall collect in this country and in foreign countries such information as shall be available regarding what is shall be available regarding what is ment of highways. He will also prepare any literature which it may be considered desirable to distribute in reference to this subject. In addition of township, town and village councils with the view of discussing the best methods of improving the ordinary highways. It is also proposed that wherever an opportunity is afforded he shall superintend a section of a road as a sort of pattern or ideal toward which overseers may work. The Minister of Agriculture has always firmly refused to entertain the idea of making any radical changes in legis-lation as to the labor employed on the roads, or to give countenance to any scheme of taxation such as has been proposed by some who have discussed the matter. The theory of the Government is that we ought at present to work along the lines of educating the people as to how they may, through the present system, better utilize the labor now employed in road-making."

That afternoon Mr. Banker, who nad ecovered his breath and had collected his ideas, sent for the police magistrate and made a confession. He said he had been a member of a band of outlaws, but having grown disgusted He saw before him a lady handsomely with their evil deeds, had left them. He had become very poor, and having heard that the leader of the band had made a fortune by a successful piece of rascality, and had married a fine lady, and was then in Paris, he had . come to this city to meet him and to demand in the name of their old She had never seen the man before her. comradeship some assistance in his He was a tall, imposing gentleman, in need. It was less than a week after the ambling match in the street between Banker and Mok, and about 11 o'clock in the morning, when a brief note, written on a slip of paper and accompanied by a card, was brought to Edna from Mrs. Cliff. On the card was written the name of Capt. Philip Horn, and the note read thus: "He is here; he sent his card to me; of course, you will see him! Oh, Edna!

Don't do anything foolish when you see him! Don't go and throw away everything worth living for in this world! Heaven help you! This note was hurriedly written, but Edna read it at a glance.

Bring the gentleman here," she said to the man.

Now, with all her heart, Edna blessed herself, and thanked herself, that, at least, she had been strong enough and brave enough to determine what she ought to do when she met the cap-That very morning, lying awake in her bed, she had determined that she would meet him in the same spirit as that in which he had written to her. of business. As she stood waiting, with her eyes upon his card, which lay upon the table, and Mrs. Cliff's note crumpled up in her hand, she saw the captain for some minutes before it was possible for him to reach her. She saw him on board the Castor, a tall, broad-shouldered sailor, with his hands in the pockets of his pea-jacket. She saw him by the caves in Peru, his flannel shirt and his belted trousers faded by the sun and water, torn and worn, and stained by the soil on which they so often sat, with his long hair and beard, and the battered felt hat, which was the last thing she saw as his boat faded away in the distance, when she stood watching it from the sandy beach. She saw him as she had imagined him after she had received his letter, toiling barefooted along the sands, carrying heavy loads upon his shoulders, living alone night and day, on a dreary, desert coast, weary, per-haps haggard, but still indomitable. She saw him in storm, in shipwreck. in battle, and, as she looked upon him thus with the eyes of her brain, there were footsteps outside her door. As Capt. Horn came through the long corridors and up the stairs, following the attendant, he saw the woman he was about to meet, and saw her before he met her. He saw her only in one respect, that of a tall, too thin, young woman, clad in a dark blue fiannel suit, unshapely, streaked and stained, her hair bound tightly round her head and covered by an old straw hat with a faded ribbon. This picture of her, as he had left her standing on the beach, at the close of that after-noon when his little boat pulled out into the Pacific, was as clear and distinct as when he had last seen it.

A door opened before him, and he entered Edna's salon. The Dominion Association's Fifth Annual Meeting.

Existing Quarantine Regulations Are Condemned,

Value of the American Market-British Authorities Criticised-Amalgamation of Canadian and United States Clydesdale Associations Discussed.

Toronto, April 18.-The fifth annual meeting of the Dominion Cattle Breed-ers' Association was held yesterday afternoon in Shaftesbury Hall, when, beside the election of officers and other routine business, matters of national importance were dealt with, such as the quarantine regulations existing between England and Canada and the United States. Those who took part in the discussion are among the bestknown, the most experienced and the most successful agriculturists on the continent, consequently the decisions arrived at should have some weight in shaping legislation on the subject. In the absence of Hon. Thomas Ballantyne, who is the president of the association, the chair was occupied by Mr. John I. Hobson, of Mossboro. The annual address of the president was not presented, but in lieu thereof an excellent paper on "The purposes and work of the association" was read by Prof. James Mins, of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph. In regard to the quarantine regulations existing between this country and the United States, the speaker considered that there was neither inlet nor outlet for thoroughbred cattle at present. Importers were deterred by the tuberculosis test at Quebec, and the export trade was ruined by the exclusion of live animals to the British market. He trusted that the committee having the subject in charge board the Castor and on the desert The grant of $1,500 to the association, made by the Provincial Government, was suitably acknowledged. which looked so steadfastly at him, Mr. Mills also considered the idea of urged the association not to rest from their labons until the herd and flock books were recognized in the United States, and until the quarantine regulations were changed, so as to facilitate the import and export of live stock in Canada. The secretary's report, presented by Mr. F. W. Hodgson, Guelph, showed that the finances of the association were $20 on the wrong side of the ledger, and he urged upon those present to do all in their power to increase the membership, GENERAL BUSINESS. A timely paper on "The transportation of live stock," prepared by Mr. A. Johnston, of Greenwood, was then read by Mr. Robert Miller, of Brougham, which evoked considerable discussion, among those taking part being Hon. John Dryden, Minister of Agriculture, and Messrs. J. C. Snell,

F. W. Hobson, Herbert Wright and A. Johnston. It was finally decided, on motion of Mr. Russell: "That while this association desires to express their appreciation of urtery shown by the authorities of the two great railroad companies in acceding to the request of the breeders and others to return to the old estimated weights for animals shipped over their roads, we are of opinion that an estimated weight of 3,000 pounds for a bull be-

In introducing the subject of quarantine regulations, Mr. Hobson said that now that the removal of the restrictions imposed in Great Britain was hopeless there was no reason why Canada should continue to impose restrictions which were only put on to satisfy the English Government. If only matters could be arranged with the American Government, he believed matters could easily be arranged here for all were agreed that the cattle both in Canada and the United States were free from disease. The speaker would also remove the quarantine regulations in this country against Great Britain, whether that country allowed our cattle to be imported or not for with the restricted market in Canada, they could not hope to contimue the excellence of their herds unless they were continually getting fresh stock from other countries. Mr. J. C. Snell, Snellgrove, favored the abolition of quarantine, provided that evidence of a clean bill of health should be required from the place where the cattle came from. Mr. A. Johnston was in favor of an interchange with the United States. He felt sure that the Americans would buy largely from this country. HON, MR. DRYDEN. Hon. Mr. Dryden wanted to have the matter settled, so that they might know where they stood. He protested against the action of the motherland against her loyal colony. Some people did not understand why the Canadian breeders wanted access to the markets of the United States, but everyone present knew that they could not sell a purebred Shorthorn bull within ten miles of their homes, but that the American buyers would take all they had. If the quarantine was abolished it would be better for all concerned, that is so long as there was no disease. But he would retain the power to impose the quarantine should disease at any time break out.

Mr. Russell, Richmond Hill, was also strongly in favor of the abolition of the quarantine. The Americans, he said, wanted all the purebred Shorthorn cattle they had, and more. The Canadian breeders would be greatly benefited by an interchange of stock.

In addition to the above every speaker ridiculed the idea that pneumonia can exist either in Canada or the United States, and a motion moved by Mr. Arthur Johnston was unanimously carried protesting against the action of the British authorities in proclaiming that pleuro-pneumonia existed among Canadian cattle without first investigating.
SHEEP AND SWINE.

The next paper was on the question "How the quarantine regulations and railway rates affect the sheep and swine interest," and was adopted without discussion. It was presented by Mr. D. J. Hanmer, Mount Vernon, who The newest thing in Baby Carriages showed, first, the great increase in cost of shipping small lots through havand that the railway company would suffer no inconvenience. At this stage the Lieutenant-Governor entered the room and was re-ceived with applause. Addressing the assemblage, he said that he felt a great interest in the Cattle Breeders' Association, for he believed their labors had had a considerable influence in adding to the prosperity of the Do-minion. He complimented the Minister of Agriculture, Hon. Mr. Dryden, for the work he had done in educating the farmers of the Province.

At a meeting of the Ontario executive committee of the association, which was held at the Albion Hotel, deputation was appointed to go to Ot-tawa during the present week and ask the Government to prohibit the shipping of American horses for Europe from Canadian ports. The breeders say that the Canadian horses are free from disease, and that the horses found to be suffering from glanders were

A letter was read from Mr. Robert Miller, vice-president of the American Clydesdale Association, stating the terms on which that association were willing to amalgamate. After a good deal of discussion it was decided to thank the committee for the work already done, and to ask them to devise a more popular system of mem-bership than that proposed, and, if that could be arranged, the feeling of the meeting was favorable to a union on a satisfactory basis. It is proposed to keep up the Canadian association, but to join the American association in issuing pedigrees and publishing future volumes of the stud book. The meeting was called with the understanding that the president and secretary of the American association would be present. but they had been called to England
