NARROW ESCAPE

C. Swartz, butter maker at the Maple City Creamery, had a narrow escape from being seriously injured this morning. He and W. Lister were repairing the butter worker, when the belt, which had been left attached to the machine, caught on the churn pulley and wrenched the worker from the floor. Mr. Swartz was near the worker at the time and had it not been for the presence of mind shown by Mr. Lister in holding the machine, he would have been seriously injured. Fortunately, no serious damage was done.

GOOD WORK BY THE BOARD

Public Library Representatives Arranging All Details for the New Building.

Busy Session Held Last Evening—The Members Decline Having Names Engraved.

Much discussion took place at the regular monthly meeting of the Public Library Board held last evening. The reports which were received relative to the new building were very encouraging, and showed that everything in connection with the building is progressing very rapidly and very satisfactorily. The contracts have been signed by Messrs. Robertson & McKie, the council have decided to issue debentures for the purchase of the lot, and already steps have been taken towards the erection of the building. The Board are indeed to be greatly commended on the manner in which they have handled the whole transaction. It has been something out of the ordinary for them, and every step they have taken has been characterized by judgment and discretion. They themselves have great reason to feel a certain amount of self satisfaction in the way they have looked after the business which has come up before them during the past few months. It is understood that the laying of the corner stone of the new library will take place in about three weeks. The Chairman, Secretary, and Mr. Seidlard have been appointed a committee to prepare something special for that event in the way of arranging for speeches, etc.

Chairman Thibodeau, Secretary Davis and Messrs. Dr. Charteris, S. M. Smith, T. Seidlard, W. J. Twomey, A. Sheldrick, and J. W. Humphrey were present at last night's meeting. A communication was read from the Office Specialty Company, of Toronto, advising the Board to insert metal racks for the books in the new library instead of wooden ones. This communication was referred to the building committee.

William Briggs, publisher, Toronto, sent an invoice of some books which have been received for inspection. Referred to the library committee.

The following accounts were passed:

Book Supply Co., $75.15.
G. W. Sultan, $5.60, referred.
Gas Company, $3.40.
E. Lailey, 60c.
Archt. Wilson, on account $25.
J. W. Shackleton, $3.25.
The Librarian reported—
New borrowers, 17.
Books given, out, 1336.
Received for—
Fines, $2.34.
Catalogues, 60c.
Graphic, 75c.
Papers, 5c.
Total, $7.59.

The June, July and August publications of the Century Magazine have been missed. Harper's Bazaar for July and August are also missing.

The report was adopted. It was decided to purchase the edition of Morang's Annual Register, a reference book.

Harper's Bazaar and Punch were renewed for six months.

Mr. Davis intimated that Mr. Wilson had suggested that two tablets be placed in the entrance to the new library, one bearing the names of the present members of the board and the other acknowledging that Mr. Carnegie had provided the funds for the building.

The majority of the Board, however, exhibited their extreme modesty and declined to have their names held up in this manner, while they thought it only proper that Mr. Carnegie's name should be placed somewhere in the building.

The Library Committee were empowered to bind into files the accumulating copies of the local papers. An entirely new system of registering and numbering books will be used in the new library—a system which is used in the libraries of London, Toronto and other large cities. The Librarian will be given an opportunity of going to London to master the new system, which is far more satisfactory and simple than the one now in use.

The Treasurer was instructed to open up a separate account in the Chatham Loan & Savings Co., to be used as a building fund.

The secretary was instructed to issue an order on the city treasurer in favor of the library treasurer for $100.

The salaries were also ordered paid. This concluded the business of the evening.

THE INEVITABLE END OF A NOTORIOUS OUTLAW

Tracy Falls at Last by His Own Hand—Little Lad Gave the Alarm and Poses Were Aroused—A Bloody Record.

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 6.—Harry Tracy, the notorious outlaw, whose escapades have occupied public attention for the past 60 days, lies dead in Davenport, the county seat of Lincoln county. Sheriff's posse and others are disputing the ownership of his body. Sheriff Cuddehe of Seattle, who came across the state to take up the long and baffling chase, positively identified the outlaw at the inquest to-day.

The death was intensely tragic. For two days Tracy had terrorized the occupants of the Eddy ranch, out in the Lake creek country, three miles from the little siding of Fellows, on the Central Washington railroad. Then five determined citizens of Creston, hearing of his presence there, took their rifles and revolvers and went after him. They knew their business and did it without flinching. Sighting the men and securing his rifle, Tracy sought cover behind a hay stack, escaping several rifle bullets. The posse then found cover behind a large rock and for a while it looked like a siege.

Then Tracy broke for a large boulder on the edge of a small wheat field, and this dash was his undoing, for just as he came to the rock, he fell forward, a rifle bullet having broken one leg. He plunged into the wheat and his bloody trail there showed the savage determination of the man, for, after receiving the wound, he crawled 75 yards on his hands and knees in order to reach a spot that would command the posse and enable him to pour a merciless rifle fire upon them.

BULLET THROUGH HIS BRAIN.
But once only was he able to fire from this vantage point. Then, weakened by loss of blood, he tried to slouch his wound, failed, and with his revolver sent a bullet through his brain.

By this time dusk had fallen, and the posse, unaware of the seriousness of his wound, and fearing that his silence was intended to lure them into a deadly ambush, posted themselves to prevent his escape, and patiently waited for the dawn. During the night others came to the scene and joined in the cordon. At daylight they found the outlaw's dead body.

None of the posse were wounded, though all of them had narrow escapes. When they were firing from the cover of their rock, they had to lift their heads above the cover and every time this was done Tracy's rifle rang out and a bullet chipped the rock.

The story of the exploits of the famous bandit at the Eddy ranch are given by the boy, who was his servant for over a day. It was Sunday that Goldfinch was riding a horse on the prairie not far from the Eddy farm. He noticed a strange man camped not far from where he passed.

MADE HIMSELF KNOWN.

To all appearances the stranger was just having his supper, but young Goldfinch paid no attention to him, not seeing anything unusual in his actions. Just as the boy was going by the camper called out, asking him to have some supper. With the reply that he had finished his supper, Goldfinch did not even slacken the pace of his horse, and passed the stranger. It was then that an imperative command brought Goldfinch to a sudden stop. He was ordered to come back. This order the boy obeyed. With his usual ceremony he soon made himself known. He inquired the way to the nearest farm and was directed to the Eddy place. Tracy at this time still had two horses. One he rode, the other, the boy says, was loaded with groceries, meat, sugar, coffee and bedding.

"You go ahead and tell them I am coming," commanded the outlaw.

Goldfinch readily complied and started ahead to announce the coming of the guest. Tracy, however, kept close on the heels of the lad, evidently not intending to give him a chance to give warning.

On the way to the house Tracy noticed a rope trailing from his pack against a "hat" leaving a bad mark. He said the outlaw, and stopped to gather in the training coils. He then went on his way to the Eddy ranch. Arriving there, Goldfinch performed the service allotted to him and soon told the family who the visitor was. In the morning Tracy first made his toilet. A bath and a shave were included in his morning makeup, the farmer and the man having provided soap, towels and water. When the men started for their work Tracy discovered they were constructing an overhead rack in the barn for the fall crop.

The outlaw decided to make himself useful and divesting himself of his Winchester and one of his revolvers, labored with the other men during most of the morning. He kept one revolver, however, in the holster by his side, ready for instant use. During the day the outlaw wanted his

FROM VENICE

This morning The Planet received a communication from Miss Lillian Pratt, the Maple City's accomplished musician, who is now touring the old world. Miss Pratt is now in Venice, where she arrived on July 26, and writes from the Hotel Milan, Venezia. So far she has been unable to find time to inaugurate her interesting correspondence to The Planet and its readers but says she has already filled a small book with notes and jottings of the reform.

Of Venice Miss Pratt writes:—

"Am having a grand trip Venice alone is worth coming to Europe for. It is 'heavenly' Italian opera, moonlight nights, grand canals, beautiful women, millions of lights—what more could any one want?"

uties at Sluice Creek and gained the fastness of impenetrable woods.

Two days later hunger drove him from the shelter of the trees, and he appeared at Fort Madison, where he secured clothing and provisions. He impressed a man named Anderson into his service, and forced the latter to row a boat to expedite his flight. At Renton he tied Anderson to a tree and left him in order to shake off the pursuers who were again close upon heels.

On July 15 the dead body of David

Merrill, Tracy's former companion, was found in the woods near Chehalis, Ore., a bullet hole in the back corroborating Tracy's previous story of his death. Tracy said afterwards he had assisted Merrill to escape from the sole purpose of killing him at his leisure, Merrill being partially responsible for his conviction and imprisonment.

On July 17 Tracy was located in a cabin near Covington, Wash., but quietly slipped away. During the next two weeks he kept pretty well out of sight, but Aug. 5—he was reported near Odessa in the Crab Creek country, Wash. Sheriff Cuddehe, Debolt, Douset and Gardiner again took up the pursuit, which had been abandoned as hopeless. In shooting himself when surrounded in a swamp Tracy fulfilled his promise to die with his boots on and never be taken alive.

That new neighbor of ours must be a very wasteful woman, he commented.

Why? she asked.

Because, she replied, she's throwing that voice of hers all about the neighborhood instead of saving it up for use as a file.

THE INNOCENTS ABROAD.

This is the way the Toronto World puts it:

If indulgence in wine, beer and strong drink would make the Alliance people the same as the rest of us we would honestly recommend them to take to the bottle at once.

There really are worse things in this world than the drinking of alcoholic beverages, or even than getting drunk. When a man takes a load on he merely gets dull and goes to sleep. That is practically all there is to the average case of intoxication.

Intoxication is a much less serious failing than many other human weaknesses, say hypocrisy, for instance. Hypocrisy is indicative of a radical defect in the moral constitution of the individual. The man who drinks may be perfectly trustworthy and honorable. But who can trust a man that is playing a double role? When an individual comes out squarely in favor of prohibition and at the same time votes for Hon. G. W. Ross as a standard bearer in the cause, what can you think of him? Every one knows that Ross has deceived the Alliance people, and yet they make him a vice-president of this organization.

The Alliance cannot hope to win the sympathy of self-respecting, conscientious people for their cause when they themselves eternally damn it by electing a hypocrite and a humbug as their leader. There is only one possible extenuating circumstance in connection with the elevation of Hon. G. W. Ross to the leadership of the prohibition movement. We have said the Alliance people are playing the part of hypocrites. It is just possible this charge is not altogether tenable. They may have been merely gold-bricked by the Hon. Mr. Ross, that is, the hypocrisy and double-dealing may all have been on the side of the Premier. If this is so, it would let the Alliance people out of the more serious charge of hypocrisy and convict them of mere imbecility, which is not in itself a moral crime. As between these two hypotheses of hypocrisy and imbecility we are inclined as much in favor of the latter as the former, perhaps more so. And for this among other reasons: Concurrently with the election of Hon. Mr. Ross as vice-president of the Alliance we notice the passage of a resolution of condolence in the death of Major E. L. Bond of Montreal. How refreshingly innocent these Alliance people really are to pass such a resolution! It is altogether likely that they are still unaware that, in doing so, they have made themselves the laughing-stock of the country. People who go occasionally into the saloon, or who frequent the clubs are well aware of the absurdity of condoling with the dead major. The dense ignorance of the Alliance people as to what is transpiring under their own nose tallies with the theory that they are the victims of the gold-brickers and flimble-riggers, rather than that they are innate hypocrites. At any rate we prefer to let them off on the plea of general imbecility rather than find them guilty of unpardonable hypocrisy. Whichever view may be correct we trust the Alliance people will try and raise themselves to a higher standard of intelligence, even if they have to take a drink occasionally like the rest of us.

A FINAL RESPONSIBILITY.

"Get out of your khaki and into your overalls" is the Huron Signal's advice to the Canadian troops returning from the war. And the advice is sound. Within the past ten days twenty-five hundred young Canadians have returned from South Africa and are putting in a few days of well-earned leisure greeting and being greeted by their friends. But the danger lies in the days of leisure being protracted into weeks of idleness resulting from a young man's habits being unsettled by the excitement of even a brief period of military service in the field. One of the most important phases in the new method of evolving armies from the civilian population of the empire will be the subsequent re-absorption of these armies into industrial and business life after the necessity which created them has disappeared.

It is now apparent that in all future wars of any magnitude in which the empire may engage, the bulk of the army will be recruited from the civil population and the colonies will be expected, and no doubt be as eager as in the past war, to furnish a substantial proportion. As the colonies have no standing armies practically the whole of their quota will be called from civilian pursuits to take up arms. Actuated by a combined spirit of patriotism and desire for adventure there will be no difficulty in filling the ranks, but the process of subsequently reabsorbing the army back into civil life may be less easy. It is a process demanding even a higher order of patriotic spirit than the mere volunteering for war, and one in which the co-operation of non-combatants as well as combatants will be demanded. The new methods of warfare facilitate the utilizing of the services of irregular troops. The value of barrack-yard accuracy of movement has diminished with the adoption of extended formation. The machine made soldier has to a large extent given place to the man capable of intelligent initiative who can shoot and who is imbued with inherent qualities of patriotism and personal courage. It is a fortunate evolution of conditions for the empire because Anglo-Saxon peoples never have and never will tolerate the maintenance of large standing armies such as are part of the body politic of continental nations. The new conditions of warfare give an immense advantage to the nation that has "got the men and got the money too" as compared with the conditions which prevailed in the days of smoky powder and fighting in mass. While other nations may have to keep up standing armies that mount up into seven figures, the British empire can rely upon the patriotism and martial spirit of its peoples to supply abundant material of adequate quality to swell its ranks when they are needed.

But the one important consideration which may or may not amount to a real drawback in connection with this fortunate condition of affairs is the dispersion and absorption of an army so created at the conclusion of a war. The consideration constitutes a problem which calls for the exercise of an intelligent patriotism on the part of the people generally as well as of the soldiers themselves to solve. Bearing in mind the fact that the system saves them from the burden of permanently maintaining a large armed force the public should be prepared even at the cost of temporary sacrifices to facilitate the process of absorption. With us in Canada in connection with the war just ended the problem is but a small one, yet it should call for the ready recognition of the measure of responsibility which exists on the part of the people towards the returning soldiers. Every employer should feel it to be a duty he owes his country to assist in providing remunerative positions for the young men who have been in the field. And every returning trooper should feel that the duty of citizenship is equal in importance to his country with the loyalty and patriotism which actuated him in risking his life for that country in the hour of need. The recognition of this dual responsibility should make the process of reabsorption very simple. It is a reproach of old standing that:

When war clouds lower and danger's nigh
"God and the soldier" is the people's cry.

But in these days of great armies under the new system of warfare it would not be well for the future success of the new order of things in the British Empire were the truth of the allegation to be established that when war is done and the danger past:
God is forgotten and the soldier slighted.—Ottawa Citizen.

A MOSAIC OF MISFITS.

Central Canadian.

The machine in Ontario politics produced a large body of men with misfit memories and wrecked consciences. It was a strong ally of the Enemy of the Church and Society, and yet was so deftly linked with them as to enjoy a free and happy course. Mr. Ross comes heavily on this sweet entanglement.

TENACIOUS REAL ESTATE.

St. Mary's Journal.

"These city newspaper fellows," said a Blanshard township farmer to the Journal the other day, "are all the time writing articles advising the farmer's sons to stick to the farm. Just now the farms are sticking to the farmers' sons. There has been more mud this season than we have had in twenty years."

The Passing of the Horse.

Very early in the development of electric traction it was predicted that the horse would ultimately disappear. Electric traction has now, however, been brought to a high degree of perfection, and yet the horse is still with us. Notwithstanding this, statistics show we are assured editorially by the "Electrical Review" (April 19), that the horse is going—slowly, perhaps, but none the less surely. Says this paper:

"Some interesting statistics lately published by our lively French contemporary, 'La Locomotion Automobile,' show that in Europe the horse is rapidly disappearing. In the various large cities, for example, in Paris the total number of horses in 1901, according to a municipal census of these animals, was 96,695, while this year it is only 90,796, a falling-off of about six per cent. In London, in the same period, the equine population has decreased ten per cent., while in Berlin, Vienna, and even in St. Petersburg, the same falling-off exhibits itself. This is and very largely to the numerous and continual increase in the number of automobiles used both for pleasure and business."

"In this country the supersession of the horse by the trolley-car has been absolutely astonishing in its extent. Probably to-day in New York there are not more than two-thirds as many horses employed as were used twenty years ago. So far, the automobile appears to have made no great inroads into the horse business, and it is likely that the extension of the use of automobiles will have to wait upon the growth of more scientific ideas regarding street-paving and road-making. However, the decadence of the horse is upon us, and his disappearance may be looked for sooner or later."

"As certainly as anything can be predicted the progress of engineering advance will totally extinguish the horse as a beast of burden. We may look forward with certainty and satisfaction to the day when cities at least will be horseless and when we will be removed from the tyranny of this animal, which has imposed upon us stone-paved streets, unending dirt, and, curiously enough, the horse-fly—an insect dependent upon the existence of stables for its birth and breeding. What the future of the horse will be is hard to say. It is likely that horses will continue for centuries to come to be used as instruments of sport and pleasure, but the day of their emancipation from hard labor in the streets and roads is not far distant."

Earthquakes and Causes.

One of the most disastrous earthquakes of recent times is that reported from Russian Transcaucasia. The town of Shamakha has been practically destroyed, only a dozen houses being left standing, while a population of 25,000 has been rendered homeless. The number of fatalities is as yet unknown. Over 200 bodies had been recovered at the latest accounts.

To the student of seismic phenomena, the interesting and suggestive feature in the Shamakha earthquake is that it has occurred in the neighborhood of the Baku oil district—the most productive field in the world, not excepting that of Beaumont, in Texas. It is, furthermore, a section of the world which has hitherto been exempt from these phenomena. The scientific enquirer will naturally search for a cause, for cause and effect go together in the scientific analysis of all phenomena. Is there a natural oil reservoir tapped by the oil wells of Baku, on the shores of the Caspian Sea, located under the site of Shamakha, and has the tremendous drain of mineral oil from the same caused a void and a subsequent shrinkage in the earth's crust in that neighborhood? The enquiry is not far-fetched. It is usually assumed that the water taken from the oil withdrawn from the measures, filling the vacuum created by the latter's withdrawal, but if the water, being more tenuous, should find an independent vent elsewhere, the vacuum created by the draining of the mineral oil would remain, and a shrinkage of the unsupported crust of the earth would naturally follow sooner or later.

It has been suggested that the tapping of the oil measures in the southern part of California has relieved the pressure of the gas created in them, and that the consequent gas explosions produced by excessive pressure, and thus removed one of the supposed causes of earthquakes in that section. There may be nothing in the theory, but it has been observed that the Los Angeles district has been notably exempt from seismic disturbances since the oil measures were tapped and vent given to the gases generated in them. Likewise the theory that the Shamakha earthquake was due to the drain on the petroleum reservoirs in the Caucasus by the Baku wells may be entirely at fault. But the two phenomena seem to invite the attention of the scientist, and open a new field for the study of seismic disturbances.

Bees in War!

We do not know that bees have ever been recognized as among the accessories of war, but there is an old story current in the Southern States of a party who were out scouting or foraging, probably both, one morning, and saw a much larger party of the enemy's cavalry riding down on them. It was useless to retreat across an open plain, for the horses could go faster than they, while to surrender meant a fate but little better or perhaps a fate worse than death. They gathered behind a wall or embankment, resolved to sell their lives as dearly as possible, when one of their number spied a stand of beehives a little way behind them. Quickly he communicated his idea to his comrades, and enough ran back to each to seize a hive and throw it over the wall in front of them. Very quickly the bees were set at work as busily as the men had been sworn into the service, and while the riders might have faced them, the horses would not, but were soon in full retreat a half mile away. Some of the boys got stung in trying to send missiles gone powerful than bee stings after the enemy, but they all reached camp again soon without needing the surgeon's care.

The Boy and the Farm.

How often we hear parents discourage the boys who wish to stay on the farm! They refer to farm work as drudgery and that which tends to make them slaves to work rather than independent men. The biggest boys are educated for professional men and in many instances excel, but the vast majority of those, with a good practical education such as can be gained in our schools of agriculture, would become wealthy, progressive farmers, with fine farms and beautiful homes, if they had been encouraged and advised to stay by the old farm and make it a success.

PAMPHLETS FOR TOURISTS

Grand Trunk Issues New Summer Resort Publications.

Two new publications have just been issued by the publicity department of the Grand Trunk Railway System. One of them is descriptive of the charming summer resorts on the east coast of Lake Huron, including Southampton, Port Elgin, Kincardine, Goderich and Sarnia Ontario and the beaches that are reached through Port Huron, Mich. The publication is enhanced by direct reproductions in half-tone from photographs and is printed in the Luxotype process. In addition to a description of that part of the country there is information for the lover of food and gun, lists of hotels, with accommodation and rates, and a great deal of other data that is of interest to those who are looking for a summer play ground.

The other new publication is a description written in a story-like form most interesting, and dealing with that vast wilderness embracing the region around French River, the descriptive matter takes the tourist over the northern division of the Grand Trunk to North Bay and from there across Lake Nipissing to Chaudiere Falls on the French River, which is as far as navigation by steamer can be enjoyed. The rest of the journey is made by canoes, several portages being necessary; but the scenery is so grand and so magnificent that anyone is well repaid for a visit to this charming locality.

The hunting and fishing in this comparatively virgin district is unequalled—black bass, muskies and pickerel being the most numerous of the finny tribe found here, the big fellows of the muskies species running from 20 to 30 pounds are a frequent catch. The charms of this wonderful country beyond Lake Nipissing are not all confined to the summer season—it is beautiful in August and September, and it is gorgeous in October and November.

During the first two weeks of November the deer-hunting is good, and in duck-hunting season a full bag is obtainable at any time. The Waters of the streams tributary to the French river are literally alive with gamey fish of all varieties and sizes. This interesting booklet just issued by the Grand Trunk includes all information how to reach the locality, and other particulars looked for by the sportsman or tourist. Copies sent free on application to G. T. Bell, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, Montreal.

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK.

This famous national park offers to the tourist and sightseer more novelties and curiosities than perhaps any other spot on earth. The stage ride from Monida is through scenery hardly inferior to the park itself, and this ride is one of the very many enjoyments of the trip.

The new route to the Yellowstone is via the Union Pacific and Oregon Short Line Railroads to Monida, Montana, thence daily by palatial Concord coaches of the Monida & Yellowstone Stage Company to all points in the Yellowstone National Park. Full information cheerfully furnished on application to G. G. HERRING, G. A. 126 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich.

Gallop—Circus Life—Rees.
God save the King.

STREET SIGNS
The streets will be labelled and in future when a stranger seeks to find a street he can tell where he is at by the signs. The Board of Works have awarded the contract for putting up the street name signs to John Tilt. Tenders were asked for from Albert Trato, Frank Jackson, John Tilt and E. J. Willard. The three former tendered, and Tilt's tender at 10 cents a sign, put up, was accepted. The street names will be painted in white letters on neat, beveled edge boards. The ground work will be black. The signs will be tacked to the houses where permission can be secured, otherwise they will be fastened to trees and posts.
There are some facts of interest gleaned from this good act on the part of the Board of Works. In getting the names of the streets, Mr. Tilt found there were 109 streets in Chatham. It will require 871 signs to cover the city and the cost of the name boards put up will be $87.10.

BOSTON BLOOMERS
The original Boston Bloomers, Ladies' Champion Base Ball Club, who are making an extensive tour of this country, travelling in their own special private car, will play the most novel, interesting and exciting game of ball with the Wagon Works that has ever been witnessed in this town.
This club of lady ball players has caused thousands to applaud and marvel at their wonderful playing. The Boston Bloomers Girls are without doubt the greatest club of lady base ball players ever organized, and are in no way connected with any other so-called Bloomer club. The Boston Bloomers, under the management of W. P. Needham, has been successful for the past nine seasons, touring the Northern and Western countries. Their remarkable success during the short time they have been in this part of the country is only a continuation of the former success they have met with everywhere they have visited. Ladies can attend this game without any fear of being offended, as nothing will be said or done that would shock the most fastidious. The grounds will be situated at Athletic Park, and will be enclosed with a large canvas fence, including plenty of seats. Game, 3 p. m. Admission to grounds, 25 cents.

WATER RIGHTS INVIOATE.
Springs and Wells in Palestine Are Protected by Severe Laws.
Water is the most precious thing in Palestine, and the laws which protect springs and wells are very severe. Most of the wells are artificial. Rich men at very great expense have chiseled basins and reservoirs out of the rocks to receive the flow from springs, and in many places where no springs could be found they have drilled and sometimes twice that distance to the artesian basin.
None but very rich sheiks can afford such an expenditure. Nevertheless, they have not only been the greatest benefactors of their fellow men, but those who have sunk wells and built fountains have erected monuments to their fame more enduring than palaces or temples or shafts of granite.
The temple of Solomon has vanished forever, but the pools which he walled up with masonry and filled with water still remain. The wells that Abraham and Jacob drilled in the rock as acts of piety as well as power are as important as their names and will live forever as long as men feel thirst.
According to a just custom of the Arabs, water rights could never be forfeited. No man who owned a well might refuse his neighbor water for his family or his flocks, but the lord of the spring was inviolate. No creditor or enemy could take his water rights away from him. To injure or fill up a well was an unpardonable crime. When the Philistines threw earth and stones into the well of Abraham, they intended to challenge him to a war of extermination. These customs and regulations remain to-day.

THE ARABS OF YEMEN.
A Story Which Throws a Strong Light on Their Character.
The Times of India tells the following story to show the character of the Arabs of Yemen. A man of Zarakus who several times cut the telegraph lines and who was punished more than once was caught on one occasion by an Arab sheik in charge of the lines. The sheik intended to send him to Meedy for imprisonment, but the wife of the accused came in and stood as a guarantee for his future good behavior. The sheik accepted the bail and released him, but shortly afterward he again resorted to his old practice of cutting the wires and bolted away to another village at a distance of a day's march, where he had another wife. The sheik then sent for his first wife, who stood security for him, and told her he would disgrace her among the Arabs if she failed to bring in her husband.
The woman asked the sheik not to "spread the black sheet" (a custom of the country when any one commits a breach of trust) until the following day. She started that night, taking a sharp dagger concealed under her clothes, to the village where her husband was staying. She found him asleep in his shade and stabbed him, cut his throat and carried his head back to her home. The next morning she went to the sheik and presented the head of her husband, saying: "Here is your criminal, and I am freed from the bail. Please do not affix the black sheet."—London Telegraph.

High Temperature.
Tommy had had pneumonia, so had been for some time in hospital, where they treated him so well that he was much averse to the prospect of being discharged as "cured."
One day the doctor in charge was taking his temperature, and while Tommy had the thermometer in his mouth the doctor moved on and happened to turn his back. Tommy saw his chance. He pulled the thermometer out of his mouth and popped it into a cup of hot tea, replacing it at the first sign of the medico turning.
When that worthy examined the thermometer, he looked first at Tommy, then back to the thermometer and gasped:
"Well, my man, you're not dead, but you ought to be!"

The House of the Kindergarten.

The Japanese have the most perfect kindergarten system in the world. In fact, they originated this method of instructing by entertainment instead of by punishment inflicted. Their play apparatus for such purpose is elaborate, but all of it is adapted to the infant mind, which it is designed to once to amuse and to inform. The little ones of Japan even become somewhat interested in mathematics by seeing and feeling what a pretty thing a cone, a sphere or a cylinder is when cut out of wood with a lathe. They make outlines of solid figures out of straw, with green peas to hold the joints together, and for the instruction of the blind flat blocks are provided with the Japanese characters raised upon them.

Insomnia Remedies.

However hopeless you may consider your case, be slow to fly to drugs for relief from insomnia. A rubber bag full of broken ice applied to the back of the neck and a hot water bag at the feet are highly recommended as a remedy for insomnia even in obstinate cases. The circulation is equalized by this treatment.

The secret of hot milk cure also recommended for sufferers from insomnia lies in sipping the beverage. The act of slowly swallowing the liquid is soothing in its effect and generally produces the much desired drowsy feeling which leads to the sleep.

"Yis. She cud hev hod Murphy, that wurruks on the top story iv that same skroscaper."

Putting It Gently.

"But is she pretty?"

"Well, I don't believe in talking about a girl's looks behind her back. Her father's worth about $20,000,000, and they've taken her to Europe twice without bringing back any titles, so you can form your own opinion."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Even if a boy is always whistling "I Want to Be an Angel" it is just as well to keep the raspberry jam and cheese cakes on the top shelf of the pantry.

The Cause of Nervous Headache.

This most distressing and common malady doubtless has its origin in some unbalanced condition of the nervous system. Probably the simplest and most efficient remedy is Poison's Nervine. Twenty drops in sweetened water gives immediate relief, and this treatment should be supplemented by bathing the region of pain with Nervine. To say it acts quickly fails to express the result. Sold everywhere in large 25c. bottles.

NEW CHURCH AT TUPPERVILLE

Proceedings at the Laying of the Corner Stone Yesterday—Many Present.

Many Eminent Visitors Took Part—Rev. T. T. George and Dr. Thornton Spoke.

Special to The Planet.

Dresden, Aug. 7.—A fine day, good roads, and the fact that no work could be done in the harvest field, — all these conducive to the success of the laying of the corner stones of the Methodist Church at Tupperville yesterday.

A little after the time announced, 2 o'clock, the Rev. S. Bond, of Dresden, Chairman of the District, opened the afternoon's proceedings.

The pastor of the church, Rev. E. F. Armstrong, gave out the opening hymn, No. 669. Rev. T. T. George, of Victoria Ave. Methodist Church, Chatham, led in prayer, and the Rev. Dr. Cook, of Wallaceburg, read the Scripture lesson.

Rev. Mr. Bond gave the opening address, welcoming the people and congratulating them on the erection of so fine a building and assuring them that they were doing a work the result of which would be felt for years to come.

D. A. Gordon in a neat speech offered his good wishes for the success of the undertaking, and was presented by Miss Lottie DeWolf with a beautifully engraved trowel, after which he laid the south-west corner stone.

The stone at the south-east corner was laid by County Commissioner J. N. McCoy. Mr. McCoy was also presented with a silver trowel by Mr. Will Holmes, of Tupperville.

Both gentlemen, it is understood, contributed very materially to the building fund of the church.

A selection by the Tupperville Band, which is led by George Wickens.

Mr. Livingstone, a returned soldier from South Africa, made a brief address and, in the smart uniform of a "Soldier of the King," was a feature of the occasion.

Always a favorite in Tupperville, James Clancy, M. P., lost none of his prestige. Happy and fluent, courteous and easy of manner, no man in Kent can put an audience in better humor than Jas. Clancy, M. P.

Tea, from 6 to 8 in Archer Hall's shed, was liberally patronized, and the tables were abundantly supplied with the best in the land.

Dr. Geo. Mitchell, of Wallaceburg, made a brief, pithy speech, reminding the people of the great blessings, material and spiritual, that were accruing to the people of Tupperville.

Councillor R. A. Tompkins, of Chatham township, curtailed his speech because of the approaching storm.

County Commissioner J. N. McCoy

thanked the people for their kindness in inviting him to be present.

As a commissioner from this district Mr. McCoy has earned the lasting thanks of the community for the interest he has manifested in securing a bridge over the river at Tupperville.

Rev. T. T. George made a brief, pointed address, and, as Mr. George is known personally to most of the people, his remarks were listened to very attentively.

Dr. Cook, of Wallaceburg, made a brief, congratulatory address in his usual happy way.

Rev. A. E. Jones, of Port Lambton, once a junior pastor on this field, was given a good hearing, as he gave an address of good, sound sense. Mr. Jones was very popular in Tupperville and the people were glad to see and hear him.

Rev. Charles Clarke, of Baldoon, spoke only for a few minutes, and his remarks were certainly appreciated.

Rev. Arthur Barker, of Wilkesport, in well chosen words went over the list of heroes and martyrs whose lives have been a blessing to the world.

Rev. Mr. Stevens, of the Baptist Church, Dresden, brought the congratulations of the Baptists of his congregation, and kept the people in good humor without condescending to buffoonery or anything of that sort.

The doxology brought this part of the program to a close.

In the evening a well attended entertainment was given in Zion church. Taken altogether the day was an unqualified success, and well deserved praise was given without stint to those who were chiefly responsible for the proceedings of the day.

I bought a horse with a supposedly incurable ringbone for $30.00, cured him with $1.00 worth of MINARD'S LINIMENT, and sold him in four months for $85.00. Profit on Liniment, $54.00.

Charming Summer Resort

Two interesting little books of the illustrated folder type have been issued by the Grand Trunk Railway.

One being entitled "Songs of the Nipissing," and the other "The Eastern Coast of Lake Huron." The illustrations are very numerous, are of all sizes, and are scattered through the pages to elucidate the text and appear to the eye just as the story told in the letter press does to the mind.

The prevailing note in these little works, upon which a profitable half hour may be spent by the reader, is the craving for change, and there can be no doubt that men and women who live in the stress and strain of to-day, and feel the throbs of advanced and advancing civilization, do require change—complete change for mind and body.

The haunts described here minister to the physical health of jaded dwellers in cities. The physical exercises that can be obtained among the woods and waters of the province, and the fresh air and pure water, make a perfectly sound bodily condition to be found, stimulates the intellectual faculties and prompt inquiry and investigation into nature's ways as they are revealed in her flora and fauna. The maps which are in these pamphlets enable the visitor to the wilds, to realize his bearings at what- ever part he may be, and the general information given enables him to economize his time and spend it to the best advantage.

Copies may be had on application to W. E. Rispin, 115 King street, Chatham.

A Matter of Principle.

"Why is it," says the girl, "that in giving an account of an accident they always give the age of the person injured? I can see the sense of their talking about blonds and brunettes, a mustache or full beard if it is a man or a red, green or blue gown if it is a woman, for that is a means of identification for acquaintances and friends who may be interested. They don't even put the age in the death notices now, but if you meet with an accident out it comes in all the papers in town. But they will never publish mine. I have it on my mind every time I cross the street, and when there is a particularly bad crowd I say to myself, 'Now, remember, if you are run over here, no matter how badly hurt, you are to remember never to tell your age. It's a matter of principle.'"

Rejected Fortunes.

Professor Bell had a strenuous time over his invention of the telephone. He took the first working model of his instrument to John A. Logan and offered him a half interest for $2,500, saying that it would do away with the telegraph and that there would be millions in it. Logan replied: "I dare say your machine works perfectly, but why would you want to talk through such a thing as that, anyway? I advise you to save your money, young man." Bell then offered a tenth interest to an examiner in the patent office for $100 in cash. It was refused. That tenth interest was worth $1,500,000 in fifteen years.—Pearson's.

Rather Airy.

"There is an acquaintance of mine," remarked the doctor, "who gives himself airs because he was given up to die thirty years ago and has kept himself alive till now by taking oxygen."

"How old is he now?" asked the professor.

"Over eighty."

"He's what you would call an oxygenarian, is he?" said the professor, looking at him with half shut eyes.

An Appropriate Name.

"It is a pretty name," the impressionable traveler murmured, "but tell me why do they call you Manita?"

There was an arch smile on the savage maiden's face.

"Evidently," she said as she signaled to her brothers, who were concealed in the brush with clubs, "you do not know our favorite food."

Suspected It.

Cashier—I can't honor that check, madam. Your husband's account is overdrawn.

Woman—Huh! Overdrawn, is it? I suspected something was wrong when he signed this check without waiting for me to get the hysteresis.

Mortgages.

Did it ever occur to you how much harder it is to lift a mortgage than it is to raise one?—Boston Transcript.

Ever notice that when you particularly try to be entertaining you gossip more?—Acheson Globe.

DIMINISHED VITALITY.

Some people talk very flippantly about diminished vitality.

They don't stop to think that vitality is the principle of life—that it is that little understood something on which every function of their bodies depends.

Diminished vitality is early indicated by loss of appetite, strength and endurance, and Hood's Sarsaparilla is the greatest vitalizer.

A GIRL OF THE PEOPLE

By Mrs. C. N. Williamson

"What were you going to say before Mrs. Jennett came in?" I curiously enquired, as he held out his hand for farewell.

He looked at me intently, in a characteristic way he had, that always quickened my blood a little. "Do you really want to know?"

"Very much, or I wouldn't have asked."

"And I very much want to tell you. But it's something too important to be told in a hurry. If you were offended I should not have time now to try and make my case good."

"Am I likely to be offended?"

"I can't tell. I hope not, more than I ever hoped anything."

"Dear me! And I must wait till tomorrow!"

"I had meant not to speak of this matter until you were out of this house and in those rooms of your own to which you seem so eagerly looking forward. But I'm not a very patient man, I'm afraid, where my own interests are at stake; and now that the subject has been broached—"

"To-morrow, then?" I broke in. "At half-past ten. It's an appointment."

"Yes," he said, slowly. "You shall hear what I have to say for myself."

All this time he had been holding my hand, and I had forgotten to draw it away, for the conversation had been very absorbing. Now I remembered, and gently pulled away my fingers. One more quick, strong pressure he gave them, and then, with an abrupt "Good-bye until to-morrow," he turned, and was gone without looking back.

"What can it be that he wants to say to me?" I thought. "Something so important that he is anxious about it—something he hopes may not offend me?"

That speech was puzzling, for it seemed that, if the mysterious "something" were the one thing I dared to hope it might just possibly be, there could be no idea of "offence." Still, the expression of his face more than the spoken words, perhaps, gave me a hope that went thrilling through my veins.

And when his tall, alert figure had passed out of sight I lifted the hand that he had pressed and kissed it.

Then, ashamed of what I had done, I hurried back to the typewriter, and began to work as if driven by a merciless taskmaster.

For half an hour there was no sound in the room except the tapping of the keys, the sharp "ping" of the bell which warned me when I reached the end of a line, and the rustle of the paper as I changed the sheet. I had just found out that absent-mindedness had caused me to make some odd mistakes, when I heard a ringing at the front door; but this was nothing to me, and I did not pause until voices in the passage outside the study sent the blood flying to my face.

"He's out, really, your ladyship," Mrs. Jennett was protesting, almost imploring. "He won't be back to-day, I do assure you."

"I am sorry," followed silver accents, which in the fraction of a second carried me back to another world. "I will write a note and leave it, if you will kindly let me go into the study, where I waited once before."

I sprang up from the table where I had been typing, and my heart was thumping against my side. Unless Mrs. Jennett somehow prevented her, in a moment more Lady Feo Ringwood would be in the room. She would see me, what would she think?

"What does it matter?" I said, angrily, to myself. "I'm Mr. Bourke's secretary. I'd rather this hadn't happened, but—there's nothing to be ashamed of. Anyhow, it's too late now. I can't run away."

There was only one door leading into the study, and my imagination pictured Lady Feo just outside.

"Oh, your ladyship," Mrs. Jennett was saying, "you don't need to trouble about writing a note. I'll give Mr. Bourke any message you may like to leave."

Her voice sounded troubled, and its note of distress added to my confusion. If she were so anxious to prevent Lady Feo Ringwood from seeing me, perhaps there were reasons stronger than I knew for concealment of my presence.

My face grew burning hot, and my hands trembled. I looked round the room, but no hiding-place offered, even if I could have humiliated myself to seek one. Mrs. Jennett was the arbiter of my fate. If she failed to keep Lady Feo out of the study I must be brave and make the best of it.

"I would really rather write, thank you. It is no trouble," said the visitor, every word coming distinctly to my ears. Then the handle of the door turned, and Lady Feo Ringwood swept silently into the room. I faced her, standing, my eyes unflinching, but my cheeks scarlet.

She started, and her beautiful face went from white to red. For an awkward instant no one spoke. Then Mrs. Jennett, quivering in the background, stepped into the breach. "Your ladyship, this is Miss Harland, Mr. Bourke's secretary."

"Ah, indeed?" said Lady Feo. "I believe I have met Miss Harland" (she spoke the name slowly and with emphasis) "before. Do you remember, Miss Harland?"

"Yes, I remember you very well, Lady Feo," I answered, and though I tried only to keep my tone steady, it sounded defiant.

"It is interesting to meet you again—here." She turned to Mrs. Jennett with a smile, looking a very great lady, as indeed she was. "I will write my note, and perhaps, as Miss Harland is here, she will take charge of it, so I need not trouble you. I am in no hurry, and if she doesn't mind, I would like a little talk with her. We have, I think, some friends in common."

"If you are not too busy, miss?" the poor old woman said, anxiously, to me. Her eyes added, "Do forgive me. I did my best. I hope this won't vex you very much."

I sent a glance to reassure her. My spirit was roused, and I did not wish the visitor to go without some explanation; though I had arranged no formal talk with Lady Feo Ringwood, I returned.

Mrs. Jennett disappeared, closing the door.

"Will you sit down?" I said.

Although the medicine business should, above all, be carried on with the utmost conscientiousness and sense of responsibility, the unfortunate fact is that in no other is there so much humbug and deception. The anxieties of the sick and their relatives are traded upon in the most shameful manner; impossible cures are promised; many preparations are also utterly worthless, and some are positively dangerous to health.

As a consequence, all proprietary remedies are regarded with suspicion by many people, and the good suffer for the bad.

For these reasons we announce that our proprietors are the principal shareholders in

"No!" Lady Feo ejaculated, her voice utterly changed in an instant. "No, I can't sit down."

Her tone was a challenge, and I looked up to meet it. Our eyes met.

"It's true, then?" she exclaimed. "I would never have believed it."

"What do you mean?" I asked, quickly. "Did you expect—were you told, that I was here?"

"Not that," she declared. "Not so bad as that. I was told that—someone was here."

"I don't understand you at all, Lady Feo," I said. "But, of course, it seems strange to you—"

"Strange?" It is incredible! It only appears so," I protested, hardly knowing whether I was supposed to be on the defensive or not. "I daresay you must have heard about it. I had a very great affliction, and, afterwards, misfortunes."

"Oh, I heard things, of course," she cried, with a kind of fierce impatience. "But nothing, nothing which led me to expect this."

"Yet you said a moment ago that you had heard—"

"I was not thinking of you then; I was thinking of Mr. Bourke."

I felt the blood which had burnt in my cheeks receding, to leave me pale. Still, I was at a loss to fathom her emotion. She had been on friendly terms with my adopted mother and me. The last time I had seen her she had been dining with us and some people Lady Feo had asked to the Savoy Hotel the Sunday night before my punishment. Did her excitement now mean surprise at meeting me again, and concern at seeing me so fallen in the world as to be earning my living as a typewriter, or was there something deeper than this, something which I should regard as offensive? I was only eighteen, and I did not feel sure of my ground.

"Mr. Bourke has been very kind to me," I said. "I am trying to help him as well as I can."

"Kind to you?" Lady Feo echoed, with a strange bitterness. "But what has he been to himself?"

"To himself?"

"For him this spells ruin. You talk of 'being kind'! Is it possible you are so blind as not to see that you are dragging him down—down to the pedestal his genius has given him?"

I stared at her in blank amazement, my lips apart.

"Don't look at me like that!" she cried, a sudden flame of anger leaping to her dark eyes. "I never thought that you were wicked or a fool, Sheila Cope. Now I believe you are both. Wicked for him. A fool for yourself."

"Lady Feo!" I exclaimed, indignant. "You are older than I am, but you must not speak to me like that."

She had been very pale under a faint pink tinge of rouge which I had not suspected her of before, but now her cheeks blazed and hid the hard line of artificial color. "Older than you!" she repeated, intolerantly. "Three or four years, perhaps. But after this thing that you have done you can no longer pose as a guileless child."

"I have done nothing," I answered, her, hotly. "Nothing, except to lose all my friends and all my money, and be obliged to work for my bread."

"You look like a hard-working bread-winner, in that Liberty tea-gown!" she sneered.

Before any answer had come to me, she went on. "At least, I see by your face that you have the grace to be ashamed of yourself. Then there may be some hope yet."

"I have nothing to be ashamed of," I did find voice to say at last. "I think that you and I, Lady Feo Ringwood, must be playing at cross purposes. Did you come here to insult me?"

"I came to save John Bourke—if I could."

"To save him—from what?"

"To speak frankly, from great danger of losing all the fruit of his ambition. His seat in Parliament; his chance of rising higher still, should the Liberal party come to power."

For a moment, in the shock of hearing that the man I loved was in peril of such a disaster, I forgot myself and the part allotted to me in this strange scene.

"Oh, he must not lose it!" I cried. "Lady Feo looked at me with a curious expression. 'It rests with you,' she said."

"With me? Impossible!"

"But it is true. Listen, and I will tell you how. Mr. Bourke has enemies, as all strong men must have. It has got about that—that—well, that a mysterious lady is living in his house. All sorts of stories are being told—"

"They are lies!" I broke in, furiously, understanding her at last.

"Wait—if you really care for him. Hear me to the end. I am his friend. I believe in him as I have never believed in any other man. I would do anything to save him from the storm that is gathering. If you have any real love for him in your heart, any womanly unselfishness born of love, you will do the only thing left for you to do for John Bourke. You will leave his house."

"It is not his house!" I cried, desperately, scarcely able to speak for the sobbing breath that came pantingly with the wild beating of my heart. "It is Mrs. Jennett's house. He is not living here. He has been at an hotel ever since I came—"

"Oh, what sophistry! Even if I believed it, what good would such a story do him, when he came to defend himself from the accusations which will be brought against him? Sheila Cope, tell me, as woman to woman, do you love him?"

"He is my employer, my friend," I stammered, "not my lover. Never has one word of—"

"Answer my question!"

"I will not answer. You have no right to ask."

"You have answered. But I say to you you do not love him or you would leave this house now—this hour!"

"I was going away in a day or two."

I said. "It is all arranged. My rooms are engaged. I have been ill, and—"

"I don't mean that sort of going away. You might as well stay here, for all the good you will do to Mr. Bourke my moving to rooms which he has taken for you—"

"Mrs. Jennett took them," I cut her short, obstinately, tears of shame and anger brimming over in my eyes.

"Oh, nonsense! It's all one. Don't play the child with me."

I adjured her with passion, "I swear to you by all I hold most sacred that you are cruelly wrong both me and the man you love!"

New Longfellow Pronounced "Hiawatha."

"Such a confusing variance in the pronunciation of 'Hiawatha' exists both in dictionaries and in the speech of educated men and women," writes Elizabeth A. Whitey, in the Ladies' Home Journal, "that I have asked Miss Longfellow how the word is pronounced by the poet's family. She says the pronunciation which she always heard from the poet himself, is 'Hi-a-wa-tha,' the 'i' pronounced as it is in 'machine' or 'pique,' the second 'a' pronounced as it is in 'far' or in 'father.'"

Slowly Dying From Catarrh

Thousands are in this terrible condition but don't realize their danger. If you have the slightest taint of Catarrh, would it not be wise to commence Catarrh treatment now and be perfectly cured in a short time? This pleasant remedy cures without the use of drugs, atomizers or snuffs. You inhale the medicated vapor which spreads to all parts of the breathing organs, kills the germs and heals the inflamed surfaces. Catarrh cures the throat and nose instantly, and never fails to cure the most obstinate Catarrh, lung and throat troubles. A trial will demonstrate the value of Catarrh, which sells for $1, small size 25c., at Drugists or Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

Rape for Swine.

The value of rape as a pasture for swine is a matter of controversy among farmers who have tried it. Some say that hogs do not like it and will only eat it when especially hungry for green feed. Professor Shaw urges farmers not to give it up; the hogs will become fonder of it, as time rolls round; that the same with sheep. "Those fresh from the ranges do not like rape at first, but gradually overcome this dislike, and afterward, are very fond of it."

Nervous Dyspepsia

How it shakes one up, invades sleep, destroys strength, adds a real misery to life. Not the stomach, but the nerves are affected. Starved nerves make the whole trouble. You need Ferrozone because it is a nerve food. It supplies the elements that are needed to make rich red blood. This is the savings bank of health. The richer the blood in red cells, the richer you're sure to be in health. Ferrozone quickly makes blood, strengthens the digestive system, strengthens the digestive organs and presto! the nervous disturbance disappears. Sold by McCall & Co.

Sometimes butter has white specks distributed through it. This is caused by over-sourness in the cream.

A hearty appetite does not always indicate a healthy condition. It is not the quantity of food which is eaten but the quantity which is assimilated, which determines the actual value of the food consumed. If the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition cannot convert the food into nourishment, and into blood, then the food is an injury instead of a benefit. For all disorders of the stomach and its allied organs of digestion and nutrition, there is a certain remedy in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It removes clogging obstructions. It strengthens the stomach, nourishes the nerves, enriches the blood and builds up the body. It is a flesh-forming, muscle-making preparation, making firm flesh instead of flabby fat. "Golden Medical Discovery" contains no alcohol, whiskey or intoxicant of any kind, and is equally free from opium, cocaine and all narcotics.

To obtain the best results in churning the cream should be only slightly sour.

MUST WAKE UP

London is Too Conservative to Keep Pace With March of Progress.

On ss. Numidian, July 18.—As at the time of sailing the date of the coronation was very problematic—it might be a matter of weeks or months—and the accident of Hon. Mr. Chamberlain had practically adjourned the coronation conference, pending his recovery, many Canadians and other colonials are winging their way homeward. On this steamer are Hon. Mr. Peters, premier of Newfoundland; Hon. Mr. Duff, finance minister of Quebec, and about 35 officers and men of the military coronation contingent had remained over. His Excellency, the Governor-General, is also booked to return with the Numidian. By the way, it is to be hoped that this more definite talk of a Canadian fast Atlantic service will result in something, because it is very humiliating to Canadian readers, who have to mark all their letters "via New York," and even to have to paragonize that route they are in a hurry, though we have the relatively shorter route of our own.

Looking back over a necessarily brief and busy visit to Great Britain, and Paris it may not be uninteresting to Canadian readers, who have not been abroad to consider in a comparative way the social and commercial conditions of Canada and the old world as it no doubt strikes the average traveler. Comparisons may be declared, but after all, they are really the only means by which we can measure ourselves and our country, and determine approximately where we stand as a people and a prospective nation. In making these comparisons I desire to throw out flank guards by admitting first of all that they are not the result of research or careful and extensive study of conditions, but only the impressions of a traveler who knows his own country fairly well and sees as much as he can in a given time of the population centers which at present the highest standards of civilization, wealth and luxury in the world. Until you have seen the best and the worst, the highest and the lowest, of any given thing you are not in a position to bracket and docket the intermediate. First of all, and without any desire to blow our own horn (for we ever were a modest people north of the Great Lakes), I do not think that the Dominion or its cities suffer in comparison with the old world. On the contrary, I do not believe there is one Canadian who will not come back better satisfied with his own country. That this is not mere patriotic prejudice and is based on the fact that a warm friend of mine, an old countryman himself, but who has lived ten years or so in Canada, shares the feeling equally with us native born, even to his own surprise, for he has many pleasant ties both in England and Scotland that should make the old land dear to him.

The ordered beauty of British agricultural landscape is oppressive to the colonial who is used to lots of room and freedom of movement; the lack of individuality, the very dogmatism, the uniformed conventionalism of the millions of human beings who are marshaled like "traffic" from the cradle to the grave through lines of directing and paternal "boards" flaring them what they must and must not do, pull on the man from the partially surveyed portions of the earth—after he has got through adorning his "bobble" and his "collar" with which the driver of the penny bus steers his way through the Mississippi, of vehicles flowing down the great thoroughfares.

The colonial officers' mess room at Alexandria, Egypt, and the first time I feel the pulse of public opinion of an evening, when a hundred or so men from all over the world discussed what they had seen and compared notes. It goes without saying that they were friendly critics, and the unanimous decision of that jury was that, in its commercial and business methods, London, is much behind the colonies and the United States, and must shake off that combination of stolidity and conceit fondly termed "conservatism," and become more wide awake and enterprising, or the progression is going to move on and leave them in the rear.

In looking about for a concrete instance that will most swiftly illustrate this "conservatism," I cannot think of anything more illuminative than the action of the same admirable police force already mentioned in protesting against having the use of the telephone thrust upon them for the good and sufficient reason that they had always got on very well without it, and they appeared to detect a slight on their efficiency as compared with a dozen generations of Scotland Yards and Bow Streeters in the mere proposal. That spirit appears to permeate the commercial official and even laboring classes of Britain to-day and to-morrow.

We have all heard a good deal about the comparative cheapness of living in Great Britain, but my experience and observation did not bear out expectations. Of course in coronation times everything might reasonably be expected to be dearer in London, and this should not have been applied to Glasgow, Edinburgh, Liverpool and other provincial cities. Hotel accommodation was as high and usually higher than the same class of accommodation with us, but I was not prepared to find the casual prices of observing prices in shop windows and what little shopping I did that miscellaneous articles are nearly, if not quite, the same prices as with us. An exception to this is the men's clothing, especially in Scotland, but in Regent street and Oxford street, London, the prices equal those of New York tailors. On the other hand food supplies and restaurant prices appeared to be as cheap or cheaper than with us, or at least of better quality for the same money—something I was also not prepared for. You could get a much better dinner for three and six in a London restaurant than you can get in most Canadian or American cities for a dollar and I must say that as a rule the food was much better cooked and better served. The same remark applies in a greater degree to Paris. Your bill for a dinner at a French restaurant, till your eyes rest on the total, because they change in centimes (one-fifth of a cent) for everything from the waiter's smile to "the little breath of air from the north," which is the Paris gentleman's name for fan when you see "poulet roti, 1.25," "salade, .50," and so on, extending down a page you prepare to go into bankruptcy until you realize that 50 centimes is 10 cents and 25 is five cents (25 cents) and 25 centimes 5 cents.

The tipping system in England is an unqualified nuisance to the stranger not on account of the expense, but from the difficulty of discounting it, and how often and how much you tip. The English blame the Americans for spoiling the servants by over tipping, but the real trouble is that unless you elaborately investigate the system the easiest way is to tip everybody in sight to the limit of your purse and then you will be sure to avoid unpleasant controversies. In Paris it is much easier because the simple rule applies that you tip everybody they look at you unpleasantly, but the tips are small. One penny and two pennies appeared to be the popular amounts. You pay your cabby and then you give him his "poulet" of two pennies—and it doesn't matter how much you pay him, if the "poulet" is not forthcoming he will splutter the sky with language. He is a barber shop—you pay for shave and then the barber tips a penny and the tip is a penny. One difficulty in England is that you can never tell how high up the social scale the tips go. People, who on the west side of the water would be sure to know exactly how much to tip, would be sure to know exactly how much to tip, would be sure to know exactly how much to tip, would be sure to know exactly how much to tip.

I shrink from drawing comparisons between the girls of the several races, but it seemed to me that the most striking charms of the English girl are her complexion and her hair together with a certain debonaire, that gives her a certain something, which the Scotch girl is more graceful than her Saxon sister when walking, her complexion approximates strawberries and cream rather than peaches and cream, and she has such of the neatness and grace of the Parisian besides being prettier, and just the least taste in life of the Doric accent lends an additional charm to her remarkably sweet voice. The Irish girl I did not properly see enough of to hazard a generalization, but those I did see, while not so demure, rather resemble their Scotch cousins, and the American nearer home is permissible I should say that the Canadian girl rather combines the best points of all the other girls and lends to the ensemble an individuality that is all her own. (This is on the square.) She walks better than the English girl, is nearly as neat about the feet as the French, and more stylish than the Scotch, and they wear no such style as the Parisian; nearly as vivacious as the Irish girl and with less color than the Scotch, and withal fresh, wholesome and sprightly with a deliciously independent air of being able to take care of herself, thank you!

Talking of the ladies reminds me that cigar smoking has become quite a society fad in London. Every fashionable ladies' club has a smoking room. Unfortunately I missed an opportunity of visiting one of these Adames Edens—not entirely Adames, however, for the mere Man is allowed to come in and take tea there at four in the afternoon, and some of the most exclusive Man clubs are reciprocating by opening their doors to the ladies between four and six. On the Sunday afternoon before the coronation I went with a party to one of these clubs, on Pall Mall I think it was, and we climbed out on to the seats in front erected to view the procession and spent an hour devouring muffins and tea and watching the crowd in the street below, that being one of the recognized coronation recreations.

I regret to say that when in England I failed to learn the English language. I don't mean the Cockney dialect particularly, but the ordinary language of commerce, and they did not appear to understand Canadian or American much better. This may seem strange, but it's a fact. I have gone into a store or spoken to a bus conductor, and had to make them repeat what they said twice or more before I caught the meaning. One morning a newsboy came through our camp shouting "Dyly Moll!" and after giving him a penny to say it over a few times I detected his intention of saying "Daily Mail," whereupon the small Briton became indignant and exclaimed "Blyme hif 'e don't blyve we can't apyke Hinglish!"

I may be premature in sounding the alarm, but I honestly believe that in the not entirely distant future here is looming up the danger of a tremendous dual language problem.

It has nothing to do with the case, but I am just reminded of the very pretty bit of wit to the credit of that clever newspaper writer who signs herself Lally Bernard. It is too good to keep out of print. The lady's place at table on the Parisian going over was between Principal Peterson, of McGill College, and Principal Parkyn, of Upper Canada. One evening she received an invitation to a seat at what was known as "the press" table, and without a moment's hesitation she sent her regrets, together with the explanation that she "could not possibly forsake her Principals, even for the honor of dining with pressmen."

Reverting to the general topic, and in summing up I may say that every Canadian who went to England this summer came back better pleased than when he left his own country. Our cities are not so large, but they make up for it in cleanliness and comfort and the blessing of easy access to fresh air and country districts free from brook-bottle-topper, and withal No Trestling signs; our agricultural districts are not so garden-like, but their beauty is that of nature and there is plenty of elbow room in them and a refreshing absence from the scenery of the overcrowded congested population. We may not be so wealthy and the volume of our commerce may be as naught in comparison, but I believe we are better business people and there is a commercial alertness about us that is not so apparent in the older countries. In the individuals there is much more scope under our social conditions for initiative, originality and the cultivation of independence of action than in the thickly populated countries. These are not my own views merely, but I believe they are the views of the body of Canadians of many classes and conditions of life, the largest and most representative body, in fact, that has in any one year visited the old lands. And it appears to me a good thing to be generally known among ourselves.

The Cause of Nervous Headache

This most distressing and common malady doubtless has its origin in some unbalanced condition of the nervous system. Probably the simplest, safest and most efficient remedy is Polson's Nervine. Twenty drops in sweetened water gives immediate relief, and this treatment should be continued by bathing the region of the forehead with Nervine. To say it acts quickly fails to express the result. Sold everywhere in large 25c. bottles.

Diminished Vitality.

Some people talk very flippantly about diminished vitality. They don't stop to think that vitality is the principle of life—that it is that little understood something on which every function of their bodies depends. Diminished vitality is early indicated by loss of appetite, strength and endurance, and Hood's Sarsaparilla is the greatest vitality.

There is a limit to the work that can be got out of a human body, or a human brain, and he is a wise man who expends no energy on pursuits for which he is not fitted.

ROYAL MUSKOKA NOW OPEN

Guests Are Arriving Daily at the New Summer Resort.

The opening of the new Royal Muskoka Hotel on Lake Rosseau, Muskoka Lakes district, for the season of 1902, has been a source of satisfaction to the proprietors, and the reservations that have been made up to the present for accommodation at this resort assures the success of the venture. Guests are arriving daily, and by next week, hundreds of people will be enjoying the beauties of Muskoka with the advantage of sojourning in one of the best summer hotels in America.

Among the guests at the hotel now are prominent people from Buffalo, Chicago, New York, and other American cities, as well as many Canadians. The Ontario Government, in conjunction with the Grand Trunk Railway, is continuing the policy inaugurated last year of restocking the Muskoka lakes with parent bass. The first carload was deposited in Lake Rosseau, June 20, and a finer lot of bass have seldom been seen. Last year 10,000 fish were transplanted into the Northern Lakes with much success. The fishing this year in the Muskoka Lakes is good, some excellent catches having been made, the best weighing from two to four pounds, and pickerel from two to eight pounds.

Some people never cast their bread upon the water until it is too stale for their own use.

BASEBALL

The Aberdeens made their debut on the baseball diamond on Tecumseh Park last evening against the Bankers in a five innings game. They were defeated by a score of 7 to 4 through almost inexcusable errors in the first and second innings. Robert, who was in the box for the Aberdeens in the first innings, is suffering from a sore arm and had to quit in the middle of the innings. McGuire took his place and was very effective, allowing only two hits and striking out two men in the remaining four innings, altogether he issued five passes.

Hamilton, the Bankers' manager and twirler, was steady at all times, allowing only a few scattered hits. With the exception of the few errors the game was a good one. James, the Bankers' centre fielder, took in all chances capturing two of Roberts' long drives. In the second innings Benson handled a hot grounder and a double play was imminent, but Avichouser muffed the ball at second and it was all off.

SWEATING OF THE FEET

"Foot Elm" Checks the Excessive Perspiration and Destroys the Disagreeable Odors.

A good many people suffer from excessive perspiration of the feet, armpits and other parts of the body. Not only is the perspiration an inconvenience in itself, but on account of the "fusty" and sour odor that results, it is a source of great distress and discomfort.

"Foot Elm" dusted in the shoes or wherever the perspiration is troublesome, always the excessive activity of the sweat glands, prevents disagreeable odors, cools, soothes and sweetens.

GETTING AWAY FROM HOME

The Spirit of Restlessness and the Judging by a good deal of the conversation of the present day, there are a large number of people who have a positive horror of home. This curious revulsion of feeling is taken by many persons as a sign of social deterioration. For our own part we find it difficult to take it quite seriously or to see in it anything more than a passing whim.

Nobody nowadays likes monotony. Change is what people desire—not perhaps any great change, but lots of small change; not necessarily for the better, but for its own sake. Now, there is a great sameness about one's own four walls, be they ever so handsome. We all feel at times an overpowering desire to be at something else. We cannot change the patterns or the pictures on the home furniture ever seems to alter in expression.

Again, there is a terrible sameness about one's own cook. Experience enables us to foretell the taste of everything at home, from the soup to the savory if we are rich and from the nut-ton to the cheese if we are poor; whereas if we dine at a restaurant everything down to the salt is different, and the restaurant is refurnished daily with new faces.

Then, again, the music and stir going on around one avoid the necessity for much conversation, and conversation in the home circle is sometimes difficult and sometimes dull. It does not do always just to say what one thinks, it is such bad practice for dining out, and, this being the case, it is not easy sometimes to think what to say.

Nowadays we get, socially speaking, tired of our friends and even of our acquaintances. We want them to pass continually before us like a street procession. Instead of that they rather resemble a stage crowd and keep coming up again. There is a limit to those we know, a limit even to those we should like or should be likely to know even by sight, and at a restaurant this latter limit is disregarded. The barrier of good manners which forbids that those who are acquainted with one another should speak is sufficient to protect our station or our dignity, but it is not a very high fence, and it is one which it is amusing to look over.—London Spectator.

Everything for Summer Wear

From crown to toe—everything a civilized man wears is here except shoes.

Most garments sold in the store are made in our own factory. Well made they must be, or the factory would not have grown so steadily from a small beginning—would not be able to pay the best wages, and provide spacious, airy workrooms for its employees—but these things go with good work as naturally as growth goes with sunshine.

Other lines of garments and furnishings we buy, but our own ideas—and yours—are often worked into them. When you think of it, it takes about as much technical knowledge to buy right as to make the article yourself.

Between making and buying this store has gathered for you the finest all-round collection of summer wear that Chatham men have ever been invited to choose from. If a thing is seasonable, sensible and stylish we're showing it. Test us.

HONOR BADGE

Presented by Court Hope to Returning Trooper Kendall—Mr. Benson's Address.

Court Hope, No. 6244, A. O. F., met last evening, when a fair attendance of the brethren were present. Considerable business was transacted and one application for membership received. At the conclusion of the regular business the Chief Ranger, Bro. Wm. A. Conibear, called upon Bro. Jas. Kendall to come forward, when Bro. W. H. Benson, H. C. S. D., presented him with a badge, in the shape of a Maltese cross with a Maple Leaf at each corner, the Canadian coat of arms in the centre and a beaver surmounting the whole, the badge being of silver. Bro. Benson congratulated Bro. Kendall on his behaviour in the late war, and welcomed him back on behalf of the court. He attached the emblem to his coat and then read the following:

ADDRESS:

To Bro. Jas. Kendall:

Dear Sir and Bro.—We are assembled here this evening for the purpose of offering our congratulations to you on your safe return from service in South Africa during the late war. We can assure you that during your absence from Chatham you have always been remembered by us, and our earnest prayers have been that He who is the Ruler over all would ever keep a watchful eye over you and protect you from all danger. We cannot let this event pass without giving you a small token in recognition of your willingness to serve your King and country when called upon to do so. You have passed through serious dangers, chief among which was the battle of Hart's River, where you were captured by the enemy, but eventually liberated to find your way back to your comrades. You have also resisted the danger of which that country is effected, the fever, and spared to be brought back home in good health and strength.

We ask you to accept this emblem, which is symbolic of your King and country, not for its intrinsic value, but as a memento to you from us, and we wish that in wearing it you will be long spared, and should you be called upon at any future time to serve your King, the same spirit will infuse you which did on this occasion.

Wishing you every success in life, we remain, your brothers of Court Hope of Ontario, No. 6244, A. O. F.

W. H. BENSON, Secretary.

On behalf of Court Hope, No. 6244, A. O. F.

Bro. Kendall was taken by surprise, but thanked the brethren for their gift, and said he would always be proud to wear it, and would be a constant reminder of the brothers of Court Hope.

The badge was gotten up by A. H. VonGuten, and is certainly a neat affair. On the back is the inscription—"Presented to Private Bro. J. A. Kendall, on his return from South Africa, by Court Hope, A. O. F., No. 6244, Chatham, 1902."

The badge will be on exhibition in VonGuten Bros' window to-day.
