Meeting of Dawson Residents
Today Irrespective of Nationally

TO GIVE EXPRESSION OF FEELING

Regarding Attempted Assassination of President McKinley.

WIRE TO SECY OF STATE

Was Sent Bearing Signatures of U. S.
Consul McCook and Legal Advisor Congdon.

The meeting called by U. S. Consul McCook to frame a resolution of sympathy to President McKinley and family upon the attempted assassination, news of which was received in Dawson last evening, met in the Board of Trade rooms at 12 o'clock today. Representatives of all the departments of the government and many citizens both of the United States and Canada, were present.

Justice Dugas, at the request of U. S. Consul McCook, presided and in a brief address on calling the meeting to order said: "News of one of those sad events which fill the world with horror and of painful sentiments reached us last night. The president of the United States was on the 6th inst. the victim of a cowardly attack at the hands of an assassin. Whether the mischievous deed has proven or will prove to be fatal we do not know; let us hope and pray God that it has not or will not. Of him I will say nothing except that he is the honored chief of a great nation chosen to preside over its destiny and loved and honored by his supporters and intimate friends as well as respected by his adversaries.

"Words are inadequate to express sufficient reprobation for such heinous crimes and the whole human family joins heart to heart in the feelings of honor which they inspire; and those should be echoed from all parts of the world as expressing such reprobation which exist against whoever entertains and promulgates such ideas as those which apparently have prompted the assassin in his action. It is with this in view, gentlemen, that we are together, and further to express our profoundest sympathy and regret to the honored victim and his family as well as to the great country to which he belongs."

After the address of Justice Dugas a committee was appointed, consisting of Justice C. A. Dugas, J. C. McCook and F. T. Congdon to draft the resolutions and after deliberations, read the following:

"The citizens of Dawson having just learned of the attempt upon the life of the president of the United States, in meeting assembled desire to convey their profound sympathy with the president and family and the people of the United States, and to deplore the despicable act of the assailant and express their heartfelt prayer that it will fall of its object, and that the president may soon recover."

The resolution was unanimously adopted and was wired to the secretary of state at Washington this afternoon.

WAS MIXED AGGREGATION

That Faced Police Magistrate
McCaughey This Morning.

It was a motley crowd that was present this morning when Magistrate McCaughey opened the police court. The first case up for disposal was that of Thos. Clotiere, an unfortunate man who is very much demented. As he can not speak or understand the English language a French speaking constable acted as interpreter. On the evidence of Police Surgeon Thompson the man was remanded for care and treatment.

Annie Kelly was the next person in the prisoner's box. Like the hillside at present, Annie is beginning to show the sere, a veritable last rose of summer from which the petals have mostly fallen. On yesterday she had filled up on the compound fluid extract of rye and had gone out on the street to effervesce where an officer saw and marched her off to the barracks. Less than a year ago Annie was given two months in the pants patching department of the barracks for robbing a guest at her cabin. A fine of $5 and costs or 20 days at work was imposed; also a warning given that if she comes before the court again it will go hard with her. A friend paid the fine.

Wm. McLean had likewise looked upon the decoction when it stood aright in the glass. His was the brand that causes a man to stand on the sidewalk and give vent and expression to just yells. He declined to discuss his condition of yesterday, having no recollections of it further than the deductions he was able to draw from his dark brown tunic of this morning. William was assessed $10 and costs or 30 days in the reduction works. A friend in need and indeed produced the wherewithal and William departed a sadder but wiser man.

DETAILS OF THE SHOOTING

Of President William McKinley by Polish Anarchist

PRESIDENT WILLIAM MCKINLEY.

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 7, via Skagway, Sept. 12.—More minute details of the shooting of President Garfield by Guilean on July 2, 1881, has such deep feeling been expressed over an outrage. It is stated that a partial confession was obtained from the assassin in the jail to which place he was hurried shortly after the shooting. He gave his name as Leon Czolgosse, but denied that he is a member of any anarchistic society. He said he attempted to kill the president for the reason that he believes the present form of government is unjust. He denies that he was the instrument in any plot or that he had any accomplices in the crime. He is from Detroit, Mich., and a disciple of Emma Goldman, the enthusiastic woman anarchist of New York.

Buffalo, Sept. 7.—5 m.—The president has passed the first 24 hours after being wounded very comfortably and is resting easily. The attending physicians are hopeful that he will withstand the shock and that his powerful constitution will enable him to pull through. The second ball has not yet been located but probably will be tomorrow by the aid of the X-ray.

Telegrams of condolence to the president are pouring in from not only all points in the United States, but from the entire civilized world.

(William McKinley was born at Niles, Ohio, January 29, 1847; enlisted in the United States army in May, 1864, as a private soldier in the 23d Ohio volunteer infantry, and was mustered out as captain of the same regiment and brevet major in September, 1865; was prosecuting attorney of Stark county, Ohio, 1869-71; was elected to the 45th congress (1877), and sat continuously until 1891, becoming one of the leaders of the Republican party and its chief advocate of protection. In the 51st congress he was chairman of the committee on ways and means, and in 1890 introduced the tariff measure, adopted and since known as the McKinley bill. He was defeated for reelection in 1890, but was elected governor of Ohio in 1891. He was re-elected in 1893 by a plurality of 80,995

Victoria, Sept. 7, via Skagway, Sept. 12.—The Colonist prints a confirmation of the report of Hawkins' resignation from the position of general superintendent of the White Pass railroad and in a long comment gives the history of his connection with the road, praising his ability and showing why he should have been if possible retained by the company. The Colonist says it will not be long before Hawkins will probably be connected with some other western transportation enterprise.

"Jimmie Puzler," Chief Stewart's horse which was recently purchased by Wm. Welsh has been matched against Chas. R. McCloud's "Harry N" for a half mile race for a purse of $250 a side. The race will take place on the new Hunter drive way just above the Ogilvie bridge on Saturday afternoon at 2:30.

Both of the horses are pedigreed animals and have figured conspicuously on the track not only in Dawson but on the outside.

"Jimmie Puzler" carried off the prize in every race he entered on the 24th of May. "Harry N" did not arrive in Dawson until sometime in June but he was entered in the races on the Fourth of July and the jagers between the two noble animals on that day were about evenly divided.

The race scheduled for Saturday is creating a great deal of interest and considerable money is being put up on the result.

NARROW ESCAPE

BY PASSENGER TRAIN FROM NORTH

Which Barely Missed Dropping
Several Hundred Feet

AFTER LEAVING THE TRACK

On the High Trestle Just South of Tunnel on Mountain Side Above
White Pass City.

Skagway, Sept. 12.—A very narrow escape from what would have been a terrible catastrophe occurred yesterday on the White Pass railroad as the train from Whitehorse was coming from the summit to Skagway. It had just passed through the tunnel and was on the high trestle at its south end when the rear coach jumped the track and after bumping over the ties for a few yards, turned over on its side on the natural stone pier which separates the two divisions of the trestle. There the overturned car balanced on the narrow ledge, being held in its position by the coupling which connected it with the car in front, the rear trucks of which was also off the track. The coupling was all that prevented the overturned car from slipping from the narrow ledge into the gulch down a straight descent of fully 1000 feet.

There were 200 passengers on the train, not one of whom, eyes of those occupying the overturned car, was injured in the least. They all scrambled out instantaneously and lined up along the upper side of the track where the women and children stood while the train crew and male passengers, with the aid of jacks and hoists, managed to put the upset car further on the ledge before it was safe to break the coupling.

THE PRESIDENT SHOT.

Yesterday evening the news was flashed over the wire that President McKinley had been shot by an assassin to whom he was in the act of extending his hand in friendly greeting. The cowardly act was perpetrated during the progress of a reception and although the president was surrounded by agents of the secret service, the hand of the assassin was too quick, and his aim too sure. McKinley has been shot and in all human probability has received a mortal wound—and for what reason? Simply because the government which eighty millions of people consider is best suited to their requirements is distasteful to an individual. The assassin, whose name itself proclaims his foreign origin, is dissatisfied with republican institutions as represented in the government of the United States, and consequently he aims a bullet at the president.

He foolishly imagines that in removing the president he destroys the government—a mistake self-evident to any one who is at all familiar with the foundations upon which the great republic has been reared.

But no matter what the motive may be which prompted the deed, the fact remains, President McKinley has been shot and at this time may be dead.

The knowledge of the dastardly affair has cast a gloom over Dawson only equalled by the sorrow caused by the receipt of the news of the Queen's death. The sympathy which American citizens extended to their British brethren when Victoria died is now returned. Beyond question McKinley has been the most popular president since Lincoln. He has held the affection of his countrymen and the respect of foreign nations as few of his predecessors have been able to do. An earnest prayer will go up from the heart of united Christendom that the president may be spared. His death would be a just cause for sorrow and mourning wherever the principles of representative government are held in respect, and wherever true manhood is admired.

As for the perpetrator of the foul crime, the law may safely be relied upon to punish him. Although in the opinion of the great mass of humanity, no punishment, now recognized, is adequate to the enormity of the crime.

PROBABLY A TOOL.

The attempted assassination of President McKinley recalls the fact that the United States has long been the Mecca of anarchists and other undesirable characters from foreign lands. They have flocked to the large cities of the States and have increased in numbers until they represent a possible source of danger to the safety of the country. Societies for the extermination of the rulers of this earth have been organized and have flourished in spite of every effort to root them out. Anarchistic theories have been preached and spread abroad without hindrance owing to the freedom and liberality of the laws.

In all probability the assassin who has made the attempt upon McKinley's life is a member of some oath-bound association and in attempting to kill the president, was carrying out a task imposed upon him by lot. His statement that he was acting entirely upon individual impulse does not look plausible. It would naturally be a part of his oath to conceal in every manner possible the identity of his associates. If it should eventually turn out that the would-be murderer is the tool of some such society, there will be a general clearing out of anarchists and similar vermin such as the States has never yet witnessed.

There is little doubt left that Manager Hawkins has severed, or shortly will sever, his connection with the White Pass company. A confirmatory wire to that effect has been received again today and it certainly appears that where there is such an abundance of smoke there must of necessity be some small amount of fire.

Missourians Walk Out.

Northport, Sept. 3.—Forty-five of the sixty-two Missourians brought here yesterday to take the places of strikers at the Lo Roi smelter, walked out today, asserting that conditions had not been misrepresented to them. A purse of $100 was raised among citizens to send them to Marcus and other points, where employment was promised on railroad construction. The union contributed the remainder of the required sum.

Sheriff Ledgerwood went to the smelter this morning and arrested Deputy United States Marshal Guiton on a charge of pointing a gun at one of the strikers yesterday when the Missouri men were being taken there. Guiton waived examination and was released on $3000 bonds.

Nothing has yet been done with regard to the shooting affray yesterday between Deputy Marshal Guiton and Deputy Sheriff Anderson, in which several harmless shots were exchanged. There is still considerable ill-feeling, but nothing like the excitement that existed last night.

First Stake Driven.

St. Louis, Sept. 3.—Just four months from the date of the organization of the exposition company the first stake of the World's fair to be held in 1903, to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the Louisiana purchase, was driven today on the site at Forest park. Officers and directors of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition Company, municipal officials and others assembled this forenoon on the site near the structural center of the grounds and there the stake was driven by William H. Thompson, president of the National Bank of Commerce, in his official capacity of chairman of the committee on grounds and buildings.

President David R. Francis, of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition Company; C. P. Wabridge, representing the committee on ceremonies, and President Hiram Phillips, of the board of public improvements, made addresses.

According to the plans adopted the principal buildings—agricultural, mines and minerals, fisheries, transportation and fine arts—will be built on foundation lines radiating from the point where the first stake was driven.

Very Strange Experience.

"Talking about dreams," said Mrs. Smith as we sat around the parlor, "I once had a very strange experience. I dreamed that I was just stepping out of my house for a walk when a funeral passed by. A man with a cap marked nine and a red scar running across his forehead jumped from the hearse and, approaching me, asked, 'Are you ready?' 'No,' I replied, and with that I awoke.

"A few months later I was stopping in Chicago. I was on the top floor of one of the big houses and just about to step into the elevator when I remembered another thing I wanted to buy. I stopped and looked through my notebook. 'Down!' exclaimed the elevator boy, and then asked me, 'Are you ready?' 'No,' I answered, and the door closed.

"The next instant a great crash was heard, and the occupants of the elevator were dashed to an untimely death. 'The cap of the boy bore the figure 9 and he had a red scar running across his brow.'—San Francisco Chronicle.

THE YUKON WOOD CHOPPER

Won a Sovereign From the Great W. E. Gladstone

And at the Same Time Won the Esteem and Friendship of That Great Statesman.

A rare bit of experience which we prize more than anything else we can think of just now is how we once won a sovereign from the world renowned Premier Wm. E. Gladstone. It is now close on thirty years ago, that I made the trip to the mother country. And one of the incidents I best remember is making a trip to North Wales in company with a Lancashire cousin. Taking the mail packet at Liverpool we made a quick run to Llandudno, a fine resort on the north coast of Wales. The old city of Conway and the renowned Conway castle, about four miles in the rear of Llandudno are quaint old places, and have a wonderful and fascinating history.

In company with our Lancashire cousin and a jovial Frenchman from Derby, we started early one bright morning to explore the coast road from Conway to Bangor, Maenai bridge and other points. The scenery was most enchanting, and the atmosphere exhilarating, and the distance we travelled about would to an American have been quite staggering. In our journey we visited Hawarden Hall, the famous park and surroundings of the Gladstone country seat.

Gladstone at that time had achieved fame as a wood chopper. Hearing the ringing stroke of an ax in the woods, we concluded to see who the woodchopper was, and what sort of a job he was doing. He was a man apparently 55 years of age; straight and active looking, without any hat on; in his shirt sleeves, giving lusty blows to a large birch tree. We didn't know who he was, but having lived in America long enough to think that we were pretty smart, we exclaimed in rather a loud voice:

"Hello, Johnny Bull, you're making a rather sorry job of cutting down that tree."

The woodchopper rested on his ax, and turning slowly towards us—a fine handsome face full of good nature and smiling, he exclaimed: "Look here, my little man, 'for I had been the spokesman, 'maybe you are conceited enough to think you can do a better job. Would you like to try it?"

I asked how long it would take him to fall the tree. The great premier looked the tree over carefully and then said, that he thought it would take him at least an hour. Quick as a flash I replied:

"I'll bet you a dollar that I can chop down that tree in twenty minutes."

The premier looked at me good naturedly and said: "You're a little man physically, but large in conceit. I'm not much of a betting man." continued the immortal Gladstone in a clear ringing voice, "but I'll tell you what I'll do, my little man. I'll give you a sovereign if you can chop down that tree in twenty minutes, and if you don't do it in that time you are to cut it down for nothing."

"Agreed," said I, and I flung my coat at my Lancashire cousin, and my hat at the Frenchman, and went at it in true Yankee style.

In just 17 and 30 seconds I had felled the tree, and Gladstone looked on with much interest and surprise in his honest countenance. No sooner was the job done, than out came the sovereign. "Surely," said he, "you're a regular Yankee, and you've got the right kind of grit."

I told him that I was English born, but had lived in America and served in the great civil war, and had become a real American.

"But," said I, as I pocketed the sovereign, "who are you, and what's your name. You know a Yankee always likes to ask questions."

"Well," said the great premier—a wide grin expressing his fine features, "my name? Gladstone and I live at the hall yonder. Come with me to the hall and we'll have a bit of lunch." The great chancellor took me by the arm, and the Lancashire cousin and the Frenchman followed on behind. We were introduced by the great man to the lady of Hawarden hall, Mrs. Gladstone.

And such a lunch as we had! Good sweet milk, home-made bread and cold roast mutton; good enough for a king. After being shown the family library and other matters of interest, we left our card at Hawarden, with a standing invitation to call and see the great statesman either at Hawarden or London any time.

Ten or twelve years later I stopped at the Downing street residence of the premier of England, and sent up my card—simply, Richard Dobson, Niles, Mich., U. S. A.

I was soon ushered into the private room of the renowned Gladstone. "Ah," said he, "my little woodchopper from Michigan."

I showed the premier the sovereign that I had won from him for which I wouldn't take a Kentucky farm, and he told me that it was well earned, and that he had got the worth of his money, for he had had that same tree made into furniture, and the most of it now, was at Hawarden hall.

A HUSBAND'S REVENGE

Lands in Jail the Man Who Eloped With His Wife.

From a little mining camp situated near the shores of Douglas island, Alaska, comes a story of friendship, affection, betrayal and elopement, the sequel of which was the arrest yesterday of Frank Stoker, who lies in the city jail awaiting the pleasure of an irate husband, who vows that he will invoke the law in an effort to punish him for eloping with his wife.

Stoker, who is a machinist, until recently engaged in a mining camp on Douglas island, was intimate in the family of W. Forrest, who was also employed in the camp as a miner. On arriving home one evening not long ago Forrest discovered that Stoker and Mrs. Forrest had eloped, taking the steamer City of Seattle, presumably for this port. The irate husband took passage on the next steamer, which was the Al-Ki. He arrived here Saturday and related his troubles to the police. Detective Philbrick was assigned to the case and ascertained that a portion of Mrs. Forrest's baggage had arrived on the Al-Ki. With this crew the officer stationed himself on the wharf and was yesterday morning rewarded by the appearance of Stoker, who came to claim the baggage. He was placed under arrest.

At the station Stoker had on his per-

AGRICULTURE IN ALASKA

Exhaustive Report Submitted by Walter E. Clark.

Possibilities of the Country Are Very Great for Purposes of Stock and Cereal Raising.

Washington, Aug. 24.—Although Alaska would seem to be an unpromising field for agriculture, the agricultural department has maintained for some time that farming is feasible even in that far-northern territory, and now the census bureau has contributed some official statistics, gathered last year, which show that some success has attended such efforts as have been made to till the Alaska soil.

In 1906, for the first time, statistics of the agricultural interests of the territory were collected by the census bureau. The facts and figures given by the bureau are extremely unsatisfactory on account of their incompleteness. It is frankly admitted by the officials that the examination of the subject was not exhaustive, and that some of the most interesting regions were not visited at all by the agents of the census. Moreover, it will be stated in the bulletins about to be issued on this subject, that the statistics available do not represent one-half of the farms or of the productions of the tilled soil.

According to the census bureau's figures, the value of agricultural products was but 12.7 cents for each inhabitant of the territory, and 24.4 cents for each inhabitant of the southern district, in which all the farms are located. It is to be noted, however, that the great bulk of the population of Alaska last year was there in the interests of mining and prospecting, and that the inhabitants would not have cultivated the soil had the promise of returns been ever so good.

The area of 12 farms reported in Alaska in 1906 is 159 acres, of which 104 acres are devoted to the cultivation of vegetables and hay, and the remainder is used for pasturage. The total farm products were valued at $8046. These farms are all south of the Kuskokwim river, in southeastern Alaska, and along the southern coast, including the Aleutian islands. In this section there are two centers of agricultural activity, one on the southeastern coast in the vicinity of Juneau and Sitka, and the other in the southwest region about Cook inlet and Kodiak island. The United States department of agriculture maintains experiment stations at Sitka, and at Kenai on Cook inlet, but no reports were secured of the land or live stock owned.

North of the sixty-second parallel agricultural operations are generally confined to small vegetable gardens, from which sales are rarely made. A small farm operated in connection with the Holy Cross mission, on the lower Yukon, and a few gardens near Circle City produce small vegetables for market occasionally. Other small gardens are found in most of the villages of the Yukon valley.

The absurdity of stating the number of farms as twelve is virtually admitted by the census officials in one paragraph of the report in which it is stated that no investigations were made among the Indians, "many of whom," to quote the forthcoming report, "have made substantial advancement in cultivating the soil."

The five farms reporting less than three acres are all small market gardens. Four are devoted exclusively to the cultivation of vegetables, and on the other farm poultry is raised. The value of the products of these farms in 1899 was $627, of which $534 were from vegetables and $95 from poultry and eggs.

Vegetables are the chief source of income of the three farms containing from three to nine acres each. In 1899 these farms, with thirteen acres of land under cultivation, yielded $3070 worth of produce. Of that amount, vegetables contributed $2655; poultry and eggs, $195; hay, $160.

The other four farms contain from twenty to forty-nine acres each, and have a total area of 147 acres of improved land. The operators devote small areas to vegetables, and, in addition, cut considerable quantities of grass. The value of the products raised in 1899 were as follows: Vegetables, $2378; hay and ensilage, $1180; live animals sold, $310; dairy products, $292; poultry and eggs, $249—a total of $4409. The principal source of income of two of these farms was vegetables, while that of the other two was hay and ensilage. The United States experiment station at Sitka in 1899 cleared six acres, and the one at Kenai had three acres under cultivation.

The animals reported, except one horse, were found upon the four farms containing from twenty to forty-nine acres each. The work animals comprised five horses, valued at $465; four oxen, valued at $450; and three Eskimo dogs, value, at $150. The dogs were in use experimentally on a farm near Juneau. The relatively higher valuation of oxen than horses is explained by the statement that they are better adapted to farm work in Alaska, as they can be kept at less expense and are less susceptible to cold. The native grasses furnish abundant pasturage in the summer, and roots and ensilage take the place of natural forage in winter.

A herd of ten swine was found on a farm at Juneau, but no sales were reported in 1899. The lack of grain is an obstacle to success in this branch of stock raising, though it is partially overcome by the substitution of root crops.

No enumeration was made of cows, reindeer, pack dogs, and other live stock owned by the Indians, or kept in towns and villages. On many of the small islands along the coast of the Alaskan peninsula, and notably on Sanak and Shumagin islands, cattle are very successfully raised. No detailed report was obtained of the number of cattle kept on these islands nor of those on Douglas island, near Juneau, where a number of cows are kept for dairy purposes. The record presents a very incomplete summary, as the enumerated stock exceeds in number and value the stock reported.

"The cultivation of vegetables," the bulletin will say, "occupies the most important place in the agriculture of Alaska. This is the result of natural conditions. The mean annual temperature is too low, and the season between killing frosts too short to permit the successful cultivation of cereals. The long periods of daylight, the comparative high temperature, and the abundant rainfall, which mark the brief growing season, are highly favorable to the rapid growth and early maturity of nearly all kinds of vegetables, for which there is an active demand and ready market in the large towns and mining camps. Turnips, including rutabagas, in 1899, returned the largest revenue; potatoes and carrots were also quite remunerative. Onions and peas were successful under favorable circumstances only. The Moravian missionaries grow vegetables in different parts of the territory, their gardens in Kuskokwim, and at Carmel, in the Nushagak district, being especially prosperous, but no report was secured."

The number of acres under cultivation for vegetables was twenty-six, and the value of the product was placed at $5565. Continuing, the bulletin will say: "Next to vegetables, grass cut for hay and ensilage is the most important agricultural product. Upon six farms seven-eighth acres of grass were mowed, yielding a product of 113 tons. Very little of it can properly be called hay. Experience has shown that the uncertain climate renders impracticable any attempt to cure the heavy native grasses in the ordinary manner. This difficulty has been met by the construction of silos, of which in 1899 there were four, having a total capacity of 130 tons. Very little, if any, 'tame grass' is grown, and the silos are filled with beach or other native grasses, several varieties of which grow in abundance, both on the coast and in the interior.

"From the standpoint of income upon capital invested, poultry raising in 1899 was relatively the most profitable branch of Alaskan agriculture. The stock on hand June 1, 1900, consists of 176 fowls, valued at $166. The total income was $539 in 1899. Of this sum $360 were derived from eggs and $179 from the sale of chickens. Eggs found a ready market at an average price of 43 cents per dozen, while the average amount received for fowls was $1.07 each.

"At Tyonek, in a recent favorable year, over 300 bushels of potatoes were raised. Some barley was grown on Kodiak island from seed furnished by the agricultural experiment stations. With that exception, no cereals have been successfully grown. Enough hay is usually gathered to feed the domestic animals through the winter. The wild grass is cut with sickles and hung on trees or poles to cure.

"Near some villages, contact with white men has taught the natives the use of improved farm utensils, but in other localities they till the land with staves and other crude implements. The missionaries are introducing modern tools among the Indians, and are instructing them in improved methods of agriculture. The establishment of agricultural experiment stations has been very beneficial, and gives promise of accomplishing still greater results."

PACIFIC COAST CO.

Has in Contemplation Scheme for Peopling Alaska.

The Pacific Coast company has in contemplation a scheme which, if carried out and the proper changes are made in the land laws of the United States, will result in peopling of Alaska by Norwegians, Finns and Swedes and the entire country will be made self-sustaining. This scheme provides for the opening up of the millions of acres of low land along the southeastern coast, and in the interior of Alaska, and permitting homeseekers to occupy them and develop the agricultural resources. Given the proper legislation this company, in common with several other large transportation companies, will send photographers into Alaska, and later competent lecturers equipped with stereopticon views made from these photographs will be sent to European countries and a vast tide of immigration will be turned Alaskawards and the country will be transformed.

James G. Woodworth, traffic manager of the Pacific Coast company, has had the matter in hand for some time. Upon the general conditions prevailing and the wonderful future possibilities of Alaska, Mr. Woodworth says: "The United States owes its remarkable development, prosperity and extension of its territory to the pertinacity of the homeseeker and for his benefit many laws have been passed by the authorities at Washington, under the protection of which he is enabled to occupy and eventually become possessed of certain parcels of government land."

"The United States has been ably assisted in this matter by the various transportation companies, and now it has developed that Alaska, a country but a few years ago considered as worthless except from the standpoint of the fur trader, and during the past few years only looked upon as a country of vast mineral resources, is worthy of more consideration, and that with the advent of the homeseeker, it is possible to open up a country the agricultural resources of which will rival those of the Northern European countries."

HELD UP THE TRAIN

Robbers Steal the Engine From Arkansas Passenger Train.

Texarkana, Ark., Sept. 4.—No. 1 Cotton Belt passenger train, leaving Texarkana at 9:25 p. m., in charge of Conductor Armstrong, was held up and robbed near Elyan, four miles south of Texarkana, last night.

The train was flagged by one of the robbers, who forced the fireman to go back and cut off the mail and baggage cars, and, returning, forced the engineer to give up the management of his engine. One of the robbers, who, it appears, is an expert engineer, ran the engine, mail and express cars about a mile from the point where the first stop was made, and forced the express messenger to open his car. The robbers then blew open the safe with dynamite, securing, it is said, a very large amount of booty. The exact amount is withheld by the railroad company and the express people, but it is known that a very large shipment was made tonight on this train.

The robbers, after securing the loot, cut off the engine from the mail and express cars, and, forcing the engineer to get off, they took the engine, in charge of the robber engineer, and went south at full speed. At 1:30 o'clock this morning the engine had not been found.

No passengers were molested. They were, however, badly frightened, and hid their valuables. The robbers were evidently in possession of all the facts concerning this particular shipment of money, together with a schedule of the train, as their scheme was successful in every respect.

A suspicious character was seen to board the head end of the train leaving Texarkana. Railroad employes here seem to be confident that the robbery was committed by railroad men, from the manner in which they superintended the cutting off of the cars and the handling of the engine.

The spot selected for the robbery was well adapted for this kind of work, as it is very wild and heavily timbered. The conductor and several passengers walked back to Texarkana, a distance of four miles. The sheriff and posse have been summoned to go in pursuit of the robbers. At this hour the passenger train stands in two pieces, with the engine's whereabouts unknown. So far as known no one was injured. There were five men in the gang.

OVERTURES OF STRIKERS

Were Rejected by Tacoma Owners and Operators.

Tacoma, Sept. 3.—The striking machinists here have embodied overtures to the Metal Trades Association in a resolution passed by the local union last evening, and which was submitted to the local shop owners this morning. Under the terms laid down, the machinists announce they are willing to go to work, but have met with the absolute rejection of a portion of their terms by the shermen. The resolution passed is as follows:

"Whereas, The members of Cascade lodge 297, now on a strike for a nine-hour workday, have come to the conclusion that such can be obtained or brought about by the following conditions:

"Resolved, First, that all members of this organization return to work who can get the 55-hour week, or better, with a rate of not less than 35 cents per hour. That all men who formerly received less than 32 1/2 cents per hour shall receive the same proportional increase in wages as did the 32 1/2 cents per hour men.

"Second, that no member of this association shall work with an unfair or scab workman.

"Third, that this lodge shall hold full jurisdiction over all its members returning to work under these resolutions.

"Fourth, that all old employees be given preference to return to their old positions first."

The shermen emphatically reject the third stipulation of the machinists and declare their intention of standing by non-union men who have been working in their shops during the strike. The machinists apparently feel indifferent regarding the action taken upon their proposition by the shop owners, and assert that the resolution was passed at the instance of a representative of one of the large shops of Tacoma who desires to see an end of the strike.

GOES ON MERRILY

Steamer Rate War Shows No Signs of Abating.

The merry war in passenger rates between here and Whitehorse still continues notwithstanding the solemn assurance made by the News a few evenings ago that all differences were at an end. Day before yesterday Manager Calderhead dropped some hot shot into camp by announcing a cut to $30 and $15 on the next trip of the Flora which will be in this afternoon in time to leave tonight at 8 o'clock. Her accommodations have been sold out solidly since yesterday afternoon. The Yukoner, which arrived last night, was thought might make a still further slash in the rates, but Agent Rogers has announced that for this trip tickets will be sold at the old schedule, $30 and $20 to Whitehorse and $50 and $40 to Skagway. The Clifford Sifton will likewise sail on her next trip at the old rates of $30 and $20 to Whitehorse. Those in a position to know have ventured the opinion that with but approximately 30 days more of open river a readjustment of rates is liable to occur any day. As the season advances, rates heretofore have invariably stiffened, as a greater length of time is required in which to make a round trip and the operating expenses are consequently increased in proportion. Whether a further reduction is made or not will make but little difference, as each of the steamers concerned in the war leave port with every inch of space occupied.

MAY WEST FROM ST. MICHAEL

Arrived This Morning After an Eighteen Days' Trip.

She Brought No Freight to This Point But Had Several Passengers From Lower River Country.

The staunch little steamer May West arrived in Dawson at 10:30 this morning from St. Michael making the trip in 18 days. This boat which has been out of service for two years was purchased this spring by Mr. Geo. Wilson and was overhauled and repaired preparatory to making the trip. Mr. Wilson made the trip up as purser of the boat and Capt. Jas. H. Sanford was in command.

The steamer W. H. Isom, whose arrival has been so long expected in Dawson, was passed at the mouth of the river just as she was getting her last barge. It was expected she would start shortly afterwards on her trip up. The Louise was passed just below Eagle making her way back to the Seventymile river after one of her barges. She is expected to arrive within a couple of days with three barges.

The May West left St. Michael with 35 tons of freight, 25 of which was for Circle City and 10 for points along the river. The following is the passenger list:

C. H. Wentzel, Mrs. C. H. Wentzel, Mrs. Geo. Baveley, Mrs. Kittie Hall, Mrs. S. Leuders, Miss Annie Leuders, Mrs. P. M. Madote, Geo. Keller, H. W. Bracken, A. Mentzel, Rudolf Alm, Alfred Alm, A. J. Dr. Naylor of the Church of England officiating.

HER HAND CRUSHED

Mrs. Percival Meets With Misfortune at Cascade Laundry.

An unfortunate accident happened at the Cascade laundry yesterday evening shortly before 6 o'clock, which may result in the loss of one or more fingers to the victim. Mrs. Percival, an operator on the mangle in her anxiety to finish her work before the whistle blew neglected the usual caution necessary, and in some manner which she herself is unable to explain her right hand was caught in the steam heated rolls. Almost instantly a fellow operator threw off the belt stopping the machine, but not before the hand was badly burned and mangled. Mrs. Percival was tenderly carried to her home, Dr. Cassels being called in attendance. The bones of the fingers upon examination were found to be "badly crushed" and both the back and palm of the hand frightfully burned. Their condition is such that it will be impossible to tell at present whether or not the injured members can be saved.

Jewish Services.

The congregation Ahava Sholem will conduct divine services commemorative of Rosh A Shonah and Yom Kippur in Pioneer hall. The Rosh A Shonah services will begin on Friday evening, September 13, at 6 o'clock sharp. Those for Yom Kippur on Monday, September 22, at 4 p. m. The committee will be appointed on Sunday, September 15, by the congregation.

Deadwood, S. D., Sept. 3.—Mrs. Myra Priest, a waitress in a restaurant in this city, is under arrest for attempted murder. She has a daughter about 12 years of age, who had been adopted by a woman named Vener, who lives near Whitewood. Mrs. Vener is well off financially and had promised to leave to the little girl all her property. To hasten this end it is alleged the mother of the girl sent a box of candy with strychnine to the little girl with instructions not to eat any of it herself, but to give it to Mrs. Vener, which was done. The woman ate of the candy and was immediately taken sick. Her life was saved by a physician.
