of country 15 miles long by four miles wide rent with gaping fissures and dotted ing Wednesday night as if by magic, a village in rains and hundreds of people leeing for their lives, are the results of Wednesday night's seismic disturbnce in the valley of Los Alamos, in the northern part of Santa Barbara country. During the last four days that section of the country has been shaken by a series of earthquakes that is without precedent in the history or tradition of the Pacific coast, and the continuance of the disturbances and the increas-ing severity of the shocks have so terrorized the inhabitants that they are leaving for other ports as rapidly as possible, and even now the village is almost entirely

The disturbances began Sunday evening with a shock which caused several thousand dollars' worth of damage to property in the village and the surrounding country, being more severe and disastrous in the vicinity of the Western Union Oil Company's oil wells on the Carriga ranch. This shock was followed by a number of disturbances less severe and less disastrous, continuing through the remainder of Sunday night and Monday.

The most severe shock of the entire ries occurred Thursday. Hills we shaken and twisted to their foundations, and the valleys trembled and rolled like the surface of the ocean. Great fissures were run deep in the earth, hills and knolls appeared in level valleys, springs of water appeared in places that had been dry and the general topography of the alley was greatly changed in many respects. The disturbance had no general lirection, but was what is known as a

With the first warning of the sound o the approaching disaster the terror-strick en people rushed into the streets and sought places of safety in vacant lots and roads, while many fled toward the neighporing bills.

The earth trembled and rolled and twisted until it was impossible for people o stand erect, and the terror-stricken inhabitants crouched together in the darkness fearful that the earth beneath might open and swallow them.

When the most serious shocks had passed and the rambling noises had died away the people gathered in groups about the rains. In the darkness of the night it was impossile to determine the full extent of damage wrought, but with the dawn of day the stricken village had the appearance of the ruies of a city long eserted. A church had been levelled to the ground and not one brick building was left standing. Chimneys had toppled over, frame buildings had been wrenched apart and thrown from their foundations, telegraph and telephone wires had been broken and there was not a building in town that had not been damaged more or less seriously. A conservative estimate of the loss to property in the village is $30,000 and his amount will probably be greatly increased by the damage in the surroundof the disturbance is 11 miles long by

The Cuban Government has already begun to retaliate by forestalling what is considered the United States' desire to establish a naval station at the arsenal grounds in Havana by renting that property. Plans were laid in that direction, but President Roosevelt expressed the opinion that it would be good policy not to proceed with negotiations for concessions for coaling or naval stations until the United States had discharged, in part at least, its pledges to Cuba. Complaint was made to the State Department. General Bragg admitted the statement, and the case was sent to the President for action. It is conceded that General Bragg's usefulness as a Consular officer is past, but he has not yet been recalled, a fact which has greatly nettled the public and press of Havana, and which doubtless increases the distrust of the United States.

In the closing hours of Congress, Senator Elkins tried to force the passage of his Cuban annexation bill. This has infused in the Cuban mind the idea that strong influences in both Houses of Congress have been insincere in the reciprocity effort, and regard it as only a matter of time until the United States will annex

IMPROVING THEIR OPPORTUNITIES.

The Capadian ministers in London are evidently very busy men. Besides accepting the numerous hospitalities extended to them they are also trying to do some important business for their country. E. K. TODD. (Number three.)

The Fredericton post office is centrally located and so far as visitors can judge it's internal arrangements are all that could be desired; but there are some few features of your postal facilities which I think are capable of improvement. For instance, a little more courtesy would not be out of place. One morning, being on my way to the train, I saw a letter in my prother's letter box. Not having the key. I :apped on the window to attract the attention of the clerk. After rapping two or three times I heard a voice say in a low tone "He seems to be in a hurry," and shortly a face appeared at the delivery window. I asked him if he would kindly tell me if the letter in box 226 was for E. K. Todd. Very curtly he replied "po." On urging him, be said it was against the rules; that the owner of the box controlled it and he could not meddle with it. I did not ask him to give me the letter, but eimply to inform me if it was for me. If that is the rule it should be amended, if it is not the rule he was evidently vexed at being summoned, and hid behind the subterfuge. I hope the former was the true state of the case. Another defect is in the few letter boxes, and the infrequent service thereat. Twice a day is scarcely sufficient to meet the demands of the several mails made up during that time. Then the lack of a free local delivery must strike visitors unfavorably. Now the United States post office authorities are establishing free deliveries thoroghout all rural dis tricts, it would seem the capital city of New Brunswick might be as liberally treated in its poetal facilities. For one cent you can mail a city letter, have it collected and stamped, but the receiver must travel to the post office for it, or pay two cents to have it delivered. Another lack is that no attention is paid to the delivery window while the mails are being sorted. That might do for Oromocto or Maugerville, but Fredericton deserves better treatment. Another remarkable feature of Frederic ton is the lack of any system of sewerage. I am informed that there are difficulties to overcome which are apparently insurmountable, owing to danger of defiling the water supply; but I can not concede that with so splended a river running so rapidly past the town, no sewerage system is possible. It would seem that so vast a volume of water, flowing so steadily over could carry it to the vicinity of the water works. I am not an engineer, and would not hazard an opinion as to the possibility Sanford McKeen, while returning of sewerage, yet all the same, the problem dou! tless shall be ere long. Two daily papers, or less frequent periodicity, attest to the sionally there is a little letting down of the editorial dignity and an indulgence in unseemly personalities, but you will soon outgrow that, and content yourselves with attacking parties and principles. leaving unkind personalities to the rural I will only ask space for one more let-

THE MARSTEN INQUEST.

Several Witnesses Examined at the Recent Session and an Adjournment. Woodstock, R. B., July 31.—The Meductic mystery is as mysterous as ever. The coroner's court has had four adjournments. A large pass of evidence has been taken, but the evidence of the analyst is yet forthcoming. The next and almost certainly the last session will be begun at 10 o'clock of the 12th of August. As the matter stands now the most important testimony is that of the doctors who made the post mortem.

They are not able to account for death from anything they saw or found. Harold T. Mareten it will be remembered. at a previous session testified that the day before George Marsten died, be had one of his spells, or rather, he had two spells. He gave him something which he thought might do him good. There was some evidence of deceased and Peter Marsten, who lived about the botel, baving had a row, and of deceased threatening to shoot the whole outfi', and of bis securing a gun for the purpose, but evidently relented.

In the testimony given on the 29th, good many questions were asked about strychnine having been found over a door that Peter Marsten had told him last summer that he had found a bottle of etrychnine over the door in the house; he thought George put it there; maybe he calculated to put him out of the way that way instead of using a gun. This witness also said that he had heard of the house having a very moral reputation.

Arthur Higgin said that be overheard a conversation between his mother and Mrs. Marsten before George's death. Mrs Marston told his mother that she found strychnine over the door in the house. Mrs. Higgins corroborated the previous witness, Mrs. Marsten told her strychine was found. Mir. Cit zens' Committee Divided on the Subject.

LAST NIGHT'S MEETING WAS SLIMLY ATTENDED (

And Adjourned to Monday Afternoon Without Arriving at a Decision.

Mayor Crocket presided at a meeting of the coronation celebration committee at the city council chamber last evening. There was a fairly good attendance and plenty of speech making, but the meeting adjourned until Monday afternoon without accomplishing very much. The list of gentlemen present included C. A. Sami son, Col. Wadmore, Ald. Stockford, Ald. Farrell, Capt. H. F. McLeod, W. S. Hooper, Ald. Ross, Ald. Moore, H. C. Rutter, A. D. Thomas, James Roberts, R. S. Barker, George Y. Dibblee, Ald. Van wart, D. E. Crowe, A. W. Eugecombe and representatives of the daily press. The Mayor explained that Saturday, August 9th, had been proclaimed a public boliday by the Dominion Government, and that pursuant to instructions from the committee he had called the meeting to take steps towards arranging a local celebration. He would like to have an expression of orinion on the subject from

Mr. Dibblee said that it seemed to him that under the circumstances it was going to be a hard matter to get up a celebration. It was quite evident from the size of the meeting that the enthusiasm had in a great measure died out. He thought it would be next to impossible to get the merchants to close their stores on Saturday at this season of the year, and that being so, it might be well to limit the celebration to a display of fireworks and a torchlight procession in the evening.

Mr. Sampeon thought it advisable before taking action to bave reports from the several committees as to how far guests at the Queen today. their arrangements were advanced. In conjunction with Mesers. A. D. Thomas real, are guests at the Barker. and Sheriff Sterling he had arranged to have a parade of school children for June | the guests at the Queen today. 26th. It would have been much easier to have assembled the children on that occasion than it would now, as the holidays were on and many of the children were out of the city. If the celebration was held he thought it important that the children should take some part in it.

He did not think there was the same enthusiasm among the people as there was prior to June 26th. Saturday was not a good day for a celebration, as it would be bard to get the merchants to close their places of Lusiness. He thought it would be almost cruel to ask them to do so. If the stores and factories did not close the polymorphian procession would have to be

Chief Lipsett said the firemen were prepared to have their torchlight procession and put on the fireworks display in

The Mayor regretted that the meeting did not have a larger attendance. Mr. Dibblee thought it would be better to confine the celebration to the evening

Col. Wadmore said that it was a little difficult to say what the military would do in the absence of Col. Loggie. It was the intention of the R. C. R. to observe the day, however, regardless of what the citizens might do. They would hoist the royal standard and fire the gune, anyway, and the band would be at the service of the citizens for the day.

Capt. McLeod said he would like to see the celebration take place and be was of opinion that if all took hold it could be of his father-in-law Mr. Geo. N. Babbitt. made a grand soccess. He thought the 71st regiment would be prepared to do its part and could promise that the company returned to Boston by this afternoon's tail it. A'd. Moore thought the original program should be carried out as far as possible and made a motion to that effect, which was seconded by H. C. Rotter. Mr Sampson thought if the parades could not be held, they could at least have the evening celebration. Mr Thomas favored carrying out the whole program as originally arranged. In his opinion it would be discreditable to the capit leity of the province to not observe the day in a fitting manner.

Mr Rutter favored carrying out the original program in its enterity. He believed the citizens were already to go Queen. on with the celebration where they left off, and would be disappointed if the affair was abandoned.

Ald. Stockford was sure that the celebration could not be made a success unless the stores and factories closed. Mr. Dibblee thought it was just as mportant to have the factories close as it was the stores, therefore they should not lay all the blame at the doors of the summer and autumn passed - no came from him. The birds took flight to summer climes, the flowers withered, the leaves fell from the trees, the face of nature changed from gay to grave-winter came, and still no letter from him. Wyndham Carre was to return to India in February.

It was agreed to meet again at 4 o'clock n Monday afternoon, and to extend an invitation to all citizens to be present and give their views on the question of having a celebration.

At ten o'clock the meeting adjourned.

"You are anxious, I know, lews from America," he said to his relatives, "but it is long since I have seen an English Christmas; let me have one here at Croombe Abbey before I go."

And, though the Earl was unhappy, though his daughter's heart was almost breaking, they yielded to his Croombe Abbey was more respler dent than it had ever been before; the interior showed naught but lux ury and magnificence. The house was full of happy faces. Lord Carre had spared nothing to gratify his kinsman's wish for a Christmas. He had invited numer ous guests, and the old Abbey wall resounded with merriment.

The only sad face there was that of his daughter, Lady Ianthe. The weeks of cruel suspense had worn on, yet no news had come from her husband. He was not dead-of that every one seemed sure; but why did he not write? Once a horrible idea came to her. She found herself wondering whether he fancied that she would be sorry to hear that he still lived. On this snowy Christmas Eve this idea haunted her; she was haunted too, by the memory of the Christmas Eve, a few short years ago, when she was so happily uncon-scious of all care. The music distressed her, the Christmas greeting irritated her, the happy smiling faces grieved her. Where was he who ought to have been master here? She went out, away from the laughter and the song, away from the happy hearts that knew no care: they were not suitable companions her-she who had sent a noble soul to exile. She went away, and throwing a thick shawl round her, wandered to the conservatory near the morning room-the place where her husband had kissed her hand, and had bidden her farewell.

She stood there, gazing at the snow, watching the stars in the sky, thinking of him with unutterable longing and unutterable love. when Lord Carre suddenly entered. His manner was hurried and abrupt -he looked confused and unlike him

The unfortunate Major Andre, who fascinated so many Philadelphia girls during the Revolution, was something of a poet and something of an artist, as witness the little exhibition of his work in the Philadelphia library. An autograph poem, rather graceful in its form and rather fresh in its sentiment, is there, and beside it are a number of silhouettes that the young man cut. The poem is dedicated to a young woman, and, if the lines are true, she was a very beautiful person, though she has been dust for many years now. The silhouettes are of British army officers and seem to be as vigorous and full of character as that slight form of art admits. It was Major Andre, by the way, who painted the scenery and drop curtain of the old Southwark theatre in South street, below Fifth.-Philadelphia Record.

ADVENTURES OF CUPE Visit to the Country Seat of a Rich Friend.

The lace curtain was limp with rain. the windows of the house opposite refected the clouds, and Little Cupe's own window sill was blistered with little backs of rain on which floated tobacco atoms. Little Cupe felt much as the day looked. "Go anyway," encouraged the medical students.

By F. W. ARNOLD, Jr.

The day before Little Cupe had seen Eb (all the medical students knew Eb for he had been one of the more distinguished men in college), and Cupe had told his medical mates that Eb had invited him to spend Sunday at his home in the country. The medical student knew that Eb had colored carriages and when at college had dined with the most exclusive families They said he was "a darned bright man" and always talked earnestly and bravely when they met him. Eb was now a lawyer in his first year's practice "and doing darned well." they had wisely agreed. Little Cupe had begun the recital of his invitation as if "it was nothin". but had grinned with delight before he had ended it, and had dilated that a lot of girls from the neighboring houses would be there with a young

The fact that Eb had once given a theater party was the basis of Cupe's belief that he always entertained. But now Little Cupe wasn't sure if he had been invited. Possibly Eb had said, "Drop in some time, and we'll go | ••••••••••••••• how you're doing. Drop in some Saturday, and we'll go out Sunday." "Go on, Cupe!" the medical students

"Sure you can. Eb and the girls will Eb sat in his own "box." his desk topped by two rows of fresh leather books and a black tin box, "Re Moulton." The senior offices opened through the sunny doorways back of him. With business precision he was deciding that he would not stay in town that night, but would go to his home for a nine hours' sleep and in the morning drive to a friend's for the day. With a business chirography that had made Little Cupe when he had seen it predict for him a trust presidency he started to write to his friend to said effect (see above). But he noticed the door. "Come in." said Eb. For thirty seconds a shadow had been hovering over its gray glass. Little Cupe was outside trying to muster courage to knock. At Eb's voice he couldn't go down the elevator, so he pretended he had not heard him and made the glass shiver.

"Come in!" again called Eb. With a frightened little grin Cupe entered. His hands felt cold. He shut the door so that it would not disturb anybody. He held behind him his birthday dress suit case. "How are you, Cupe?" Eb was always glad to see his friends. "Sit down. I'll be with you in a minute." And he handed him a fragrant box of cigars. "Have one."

Cupe took one and held his dress suit case in his lap, but he didn't smoke, for he had no matches. Those cigars had always impressed him, and he had often told his medical students that he occasionally dropped into Eb's office and smoked his cigars.

Eb continued writing to his friend that he would be there tomorrow and. handing the note to a messenger who came from the main office-Cupe was greatly impressed-said, "Special delivery," and then, leaning back, added: "Well, Cupe, what can I do for you?" as if surveying a client.

The stone faces through the window grinned flendishly. "Nothin'," answered Cupe. "I was bringin' this empty dress suit case from a store"-he pointed indefinitely out toward the street-"and just stopped in. I'm goin' right along; got to go now." He arose meekly and held out his hand, which felt as if its veins pulsed with mist. When he said "empty" dress suit case, the two white shirts, seven separate cuffs, six collars and two changes of other clothes weighed heavy with guilt. "Can't you come out to dinner?" thought Cupe would enjoy that more than his boarding house. "Haven't any dress suit." Eb assured him it made no difference, not the least. He believed all Little Cupe had said. Cupe, after deliberating a proper while whether he could get away whiskers and a strange dress suit and who had been very polite. When the man had bent to lift Cupe's dress suit case, Cupe had said, "No, no, no, thanks." and told him and Eb and the The number of persons born blind chatty housekeeper, who were also in the hall, that he would carry it up stairs himself, for he needed the exer-

> His unfolded dress suit case surged with his two white shirts, seven separate cuffs, six collars and the two changes of other clothes. Then he heard girlish voices in the hall; they must be the dinner guests chaperoned by some young wife from across the hedges. They were really the two maidservants.

"Knuckle, knuckle," deferentially on the door. "Come in," said Cupe. In poked the side whiskered head of the butler or porter. "Will you have a cocktail, Cupe's own head was full of dress suits, so he thought the butler said, "Will you have a coattail?" "Yes, please," answered Cupe, and while waiting for the dress suit to come began deciding between his two white shirts in the case. "Knuckle, knuckle," again on the door. Cupe hoped the suit would fit. But it was Eb who entered.

"Knuckle." The butler entered with the cocktail. "And the coattail?" inquired Little Cupe. He said this partly to Eb. He would let him upbraid his own servaut. Eb stared: the butler stared: the house seemed to sigh to Little Cupe. There had been no relieving feature to the situation. Eb thought Cupe might have meant to say some indefinite jokes; the butler or porter probably thought so too. Cupe was now at the dining room table with his napkin fallen to his feet, where he was unable to pick it up. He had entered the dining room very erect, for he had expected to find the invited girls there and wanted them to be favorably imand so guessed ne could go; he'd be Eb's house hid in a park and was dwelt in by two maidservants, one manservant and a chatty housekeeper. There was but little entertaining, though Eb occasionally brought home some friend for the night.

The room in which Little Cupe now stood was pink with flowered wall paper, flowered chairs and a flowered quilt on the hed. He had been shown into this bower by a man with side pressed and whisper to each other, but he learned he was to be alone with Eb and his only conquest the courses, He didn't know how to take all of them out of the platters, but that same porter or butler was a valuable man and did it for him.

After the dinner Little Cupe felt much relieved. He discussed the paintings, for he had taken a course in "fine arts" once as a "snap" and smoked many cigars. He didn't know when to stop smoking, and Eb marveled. That's about all that happened to Little Cupe. Eb, who at last realized that Cupe bad expected to stay over Sunday, if not a week, explained to him that be himself, unfortunately, had to be away for the day, but urged Cupe to remain and have at his disposal the house and horses. "No, thanks; no," said Cupe. promised the fellows I would be back

This latter tale was unfortunate, for Cupe had to rise in the morning earlier than he would have otherwise. He felt much like this story, which started with graphic enthusiasm and then wilted away like a bashful schoolboy. But you should have heard the reasons he gave the medical students why he didn't stay over Sunday. Nice Little Cupe! - New York Commercial Advertiser.

A Confidence

A Story of One Who Misjudged

His Wife. "Twenty years! I am notched and grizzled. You are only mellowed, ripened." My friend smiled and lighted a fresh cigarette. He puzzled me. Rumor had led me to expect to find him, after my long absence, a disappointed if not soured man. I had sought him here in the retreat where he and his said, like a pair of hermits. Arriving sent, I thought myself fortunate and prepared to probe the unhappiness of one whose affection in early youth had left a very sunny spot on my memory. I was, in fact, ready to give him all the pity and sympathy which a bachelor of experience can feel for the irremediable mistake of a married friend.

"Have you been hearing tales about me?" he asked. "Shall I tell you the story of my wedded life?" "If it does not pain you." "Do you know that I have been a

"I have heard something of it." "The wealth of an ancient relative poured in on me after his death. How the golden wave came and went is a story by itself. For five gilded years I was transfigured in the eyes of the world, and it was during that period I met and fell in love with my wife." I had heard all this and more, and I felt sorry. I looked steadily at the opposite wall lest my pity should daunt him. I knew the story of the worldly mother and daughter who had forced him into a loveless marriage for greed of the fortune which had proved so elusive. He went on: "It was not I alone who thought her supremely beautiful. The world had already bestowed on her a queenship before the June day when I first saw her at an open air fcte, all in white, pale, cold, severe and sweet, like a goddess in marble. Her mother walked beside her, a woman of a different type. As I gazed after her in what you would call romantic enthusiasm a friend laughed and bade me veil my admiration, as those women were known to be in quest of a golden million. If it be the case that what everybody says must be true, then true it was that the cold, exquisite daughter and the haughty, hawklike mother were adventuresses playing a game for fortune, beauty against a slender purse and a year or two of prime youth. Already beauty had over and over again dared to reject love, adoration and fortune considerable. 'Their figure has not yet been reached,' whispered my cynical friend. 'Your million will do it.' By this time I had proclaimed myself an open worshiper. I am bound to admit that all the encouragement I received was from the mother. The daughter remained icy. I persisted in my suit and in a short time was the accepted lover of the woman who held me in thrall." "She accepted you willingly?" "Tacitly so. The mother seized on me with effusion. My affianced wife appeared just to endure her new position with patience, nothing more. The mother assured me that her daughter had a most affectionate nature hidden under that chill exterior. She loved me, and she had never loved any other man. I tried to believe her. And so "After a time, when the excitement of my first pride and happiness had subsided, I began to feel reluctantly conscious that there was something want ing in our life together. My wife's behavior was perfect from every point of view, but there was a wall of reserve between us which nothing was able to break through. Wherever we went I was aware that people said I had been married without love for the sake of my million. How was I to feel sure that the verdict was not a true one? Had she given her heart to some worthy fellow who was millionless and reme at her mother's bidding? "I resolved to take things as they came and to make the best of the goods the gods had provided for me. We led a life of amusement and pleasure. Our house in town and our country house (not this house; something much grander) were as perfect as money could make them. My wife went everywhere dressed and bejeweled as the world expected to see her. We entertained the smart crowd known as society. I was proud beyond the pride of man when I saw the woman I had chosen receiving the admiration which no one could refuse her. I even thought she seemed glad of my pride in her, for once or twice as I looked at her across the shoulders of a crowd that to me, and the impassable barrier between us was complete. Do you apprehend the situation?" he asked.

The news of what appeared to be total ruin reached me first in a telegram which I found waiting for me one night when I returned home from a dinner party alone, my wife having pleaded a headache and retired to her room early in the evening. I gathered up the letters which had come by the last post and carried them to my dressing room, where I sat down to read them. Imagine casting one's eyes on a bit of paper as the eyes of the owner of a million and raising them with the knowledge that one does not ow a penny in the world! I sat long im-movable, stunned with the suddeness of the blow. "How was I to tell my wife? How would she bear it, she who had married me for the splendors which she must relinquish, the woman whose beauty, whose gentle if cold companonship and perfect conduct toward me and the world I had bought with gold? If she could not love me before, how itterly would she turn from me now! "I had sat for two or three hours motionless as stone. The first gleam of dawn crept in at the edges of the blinds, and I stirred and writhed in my chair. The door opened, and my wife, in a white robe, appeared on the threshold in the gray light.

" 'What ails you?' she said gently. "Nothing that I can tell you at present,' I said. 'Go back to your rest.' "'Will you not tell me what is the natter?

SEASON OF 1902

Will make the Season of 1902 at my stable, Brunswick Street, Fredericton; $10 to insure. Not responsible for accidents, but the best of care taken of Mares sent to us.

Harry T: Wilkes, foaled 1892, was sired by Harry Wilkes, he by the great George Wilkes; his dam, Little Emily, was by Fitzpatrick's Colonel Taylor, he by Billy Denton, he by Rysdike Hambletonian. Second dam was by General Havelook, he by Dearfield Morgan, he by Justin Morgan. Third dam by imported Livingston.

Harry T. Wilkes is a handsome mahogany bay horse, sound and 'smcoth, with black points, mane and tail, and stands 16 hands high, weighs 1490 lbs.

Individually he is a horse of grand finish and plenty of substance, with a fine disposition, with deep strong shoulders, stout back, very strong loins and stifles, with good feet and legs. He possesses wonderful speed, great size and beautiful action; altogether a horse of great muscular power that needs only to be seen in order to be appreciated. No Stallion of his weight in New Brunswick or out of it, for that matter, has more speed, better action, nor more perfect conformation, His blood lines are of the best, as will be seen by his pedigree. His blood lines are of the best, as will be seen by his pedigree.

The dam of Harry T. was a great road mare, her staying qualities were wonderful, as she has often, without the least sign of fatigue, trotted 15 miles in an hour.

That Harry T, will beget speed and grand road qualities, there is no doubt, as he not only inherits but possesses these qualities in a marked degree.

His colts tell the story. They are all of good size, solid color and muscular, with good legs and hocks, free from curbs or blemishes. Farmers and breeders who have good, sizeable mares and are desirous of raising good drivers or a class of horses serviceable and saleable, fit for any purpose, cannot do better than patronize this large, well bred and speedy Stallion.

WHAT HORSEMEN SAY: "There is probably not a horse in New Brunswick that could be secured that will be the benefit to farmers and breeders in the section of the country in which he is to do stud duty as Harry T. Wilkes," affd they congratulate the farmers and breeders in this section of the country on having so valuable a sire within their reach, and the result should be mutually beneficial to those who patronize him. atronize him.
