Aubrey's Revenge.

CHAPTER XXXV.

"When they sent him away, the poor fellow looked so distressed I ran down to the side door and asked him if I could do anything for him, and he gave me the note to be delivered to you. He was a tall man, with dark hair and brown eyes."
"He was Tom," said Kelpie. "Do you know why they sent him away?"
"Mrs. van Cortlandt doesn't care to have callers from New Castle Light, I believe," answered Aubrey, dryly.
Kelpie stood silent a moment, her eyes flashing fire, then turning to Aubrey she held out her hand.
"You have done me a great kindness," she said simply; "if there should ever come a time when I can help you in any way, I hope you won't hesitate to let me know."

Putting aside Kelpie's proffered hand, Aubrey turned and left the room without a word.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

Left to herself, Kelpie went to her private dressing room and locked herself in.

The room was large and gorgeously appointed, and there were immense wardrobes on three sides filled with all sorts of feminine finery, from a tailor-made suit in russet brown, to a ball dress all in a shimmer of satin and lace.

Kelpie paused for a moment in the centre of the room and glanced about her. The array that met her eyes was a dazzling one.

"Dear me," she said at last, with a half-amused laugh. "If fine feathers make fine birds, I certainly ought to be replete for Mrs. van Cortlandt, in the kindness of her heart, has supplied me with plumage unlimited, and how I gloried in it all once, and now I wouldn't give two straws for the whole lot. I've been halting between two opinions for some time, but at last I've made up my mind."

"Good-by, Miss van Cortlandt, of Van Cortlandt Place, and heiress of three millions in your own right," she went on, making a sweeping bow to her own pretty reflection in the long mirror. "You are going to step down and out. Your reign is over. Kelpie Stonestreet has acted the part of a fool long enough. She's going to be a sensible little woman for the rest of her life."

Having finished this little speech, Kelpie hunted the well-filled wardrobe until she found a black skirt and jacket, which she proceeded to put on; then she fastened a bit of fur about her throat, and putting a heavy

Smothering Of Asthma Stops Quick—Thousands Cured By "Cattarrhozone"

Count Ten—Then Relief Comes From Chronic Asthma.

Nothing yet discovered can compare with Cattarrhozone in bed, ugly cases of Asthma.

Cattarrhozone is the one remedy that can be sent quickly and direct to all parts of the breathing apparatus. The effect from Cattarrhozone is a quick one—you feel better in no time—keep up the good work, use Cattarrhozone as directed and you get well.

If your case is curable, if anything on earth can rid you permanently of Asthma, it will be Cattarrhozone. It contains that strangely soothing and powerful antiseptic found in the Blue veil about her trim walking hat, her toilet was complete.

"This is the Kelpie of days gone by," she said, nodding to herself in the mirror. "She doesn't look one bit like Miss van Cortlandt, the heiress. I wonder if Carroll Fitzhugh would recognize me if we should happen to meet? Well, does it matter whether he would or not? Carroll and I will be two people to-morrow."

"Yes, I've made up my mind at last to go back to New Castle Light. I don't think I was born to be a grand lady. I'm tired of trying to be one, anyhow, and I intend to give it up. I was happy enough when I had nothing to do but put on my pretty finery, and dance and chatter and be admired, but getting married is another thing."

"The moment I consented to become engaged to Carroll Fitzhugh, I came to my senses and realized what a mistake I had made. He's a nice fellow, too, and I fancied myself in love with him at one time—the romance of the whole affair was wonderful, too. It seems a pity not to make it a reality, but it can't be helped. It's no use for me to promise to marry Carroll, for I should be certain to run away on my wedding day."

"So I might as well go now. Daddy will be glad enough to have me back. I'm sure of that."

"But I shan't go with Tom to-night, not even if he asks me. I'm mad at Tom for writing me that letter. If he hadn't advised me to marry Carroll Fitzhugh, I should never have consented to be engaged to him, and the whole thing has made me so tired, so tired; I wish I was in my own little bed to-night, close to dear old daddy, with the sound of the sea in my ears."

She glanced at the clock and found that it lacked but a few minutes of nine, and at the same moment there came a tap on the door.

"Who's there?" demanded Kelpie.

"It's I, Aubrey. I came to see if you had forgotten your appointment."

"No, I have not forgotten it," answered Kelpie, unlocking the door.

Aubrey stood without, wrapped in a long cloak, with a hood on her head.

"I thought you might be afraid to go out alone," she whispered. "I'll go with you, if you want me."

"You are very kind," said Kelpie. "I shall be glad of your company."

"Are you ready?"

"Quite ready."

"Come on, then. The coast is clear."

She led the way, and Kelpie followed her down the stairs and out into the darkness.

The distance to the corner of Myrtle Avenue was but short, and although the night was dark, and a bitter wind blowing, the two girls soon reached their destination.

"Well, here we are," said Aubrey, in a somewhat elevated voice, and on the instant a tall man in a rough overcoat stepped forward and joined them.

"Has Kelpie come?" he asked.

"Yes, here she is," answered Aubrey.

It was very dark, the wind was noisy, and Kelpie's heart was in a flutter of delight, so she took but little heed of the man's voice.

"Oh, Tom, is it really you?" She held out both her hands as she spoke, and the man caught them—in a friendly grasp, but in a grip like steel, and the terrified girl was clasped so closely for an instant as to quite deprive her of breath.

"Help!" she cried, but a strong hand pressing a handkerchief to her mouth stifled the cry before it escaped, and in another moment the unfortunate girl was rendered unconscious.

"She's all right now," said the man, and taking his helpless victim in his strong arms, he bore her to a vehicle that was waiting near by, put her in the seat, leaped in and took the place beside her, and an instant later the carriage was driven rapidly away.

Aubrey, who had watched this proceeding with gleaming eyes, turned swiftly and sped away with an exultant laugh on her lips.

Dinner was over at Van Cortlandt Place, and despairing of seeing her future daughter-in-law that evening, Mrs. Fitzhugh and her daughter left their loving regrets, and took their departure; but with the persistence of a man very much in love, Carroll refused to be dissuaded.

"The dear child is quite out of sorts to-night. I left her with a bad headache," explained Mrs. van Cortlandt. "I'm certain she won't consent to see you, Carroll."

"Only for a moment," the young man insisted. "I've got a set of jewels I want her to see. I'll wait for her answer, anyhow."

"I'm certain she won't see you," repeated Mrs. van Cortlandt, but she went up to her daughter's room.

Kelpie was not within. The fond mother went on to the dressing room, but found no sign of her daughter.

The young lady's boudoir and her private sitting room were both visited with the same result. Then Mrs. van Cortlandt rang for her maid.

"Snapdragon, where is Miss van Cortlandt?"

"Haven't set eyes on her to-night, ma'am."

A few moments later the mansion was in confusion, servants rushing hither and thither, and lights flashing in every room.

As Carroll Fitzhugh rushed head-long downstairs, Aubrey confronted him, her strange eyes glowing with excitement.

"You can't find your pretty sweetheart," she said, with a mocking laugh. "My dear Carroll, shall I tell you where she is?"

"Yes, if you know, tell me at once, or I'll murder you," said Carroll, half beside himself.

"She's run away with her old lover," said Aubrey. "and gone back to New Castle Light."

CHAPTER XXXVII.

Kelpie regained her senses by slow degrees as one rouses from the horrible oppression of a nightmare. She became dimly conscious at first, her breath coming in gasps, her pulse fluttering feebly.

Her first consciousness was a sense of motion; she realized that she was moving at a rapid rate, and a little later she recognized the sound of wheels on a rough road.

Wondering vaguely where she was, she made an effort, and opening her eyes, found herself in total darkness. She raised herself on her elbow and listened intently.

Where could she be?

Her brain worked feebly at first, but after a little while a thought took shape in her mind. She was at home in her little room in the lighthouse, and the noise she heard was the sound of the sea.

Her heart leaped for joy.

"Daddy, daddy, are you asleep?" she cried out.

A laugh answered her, a horrible, mocking laugh, sounding in her very ears.

MOTHERS! DO YOU KNOW—

That when you put a salve onto your child's skin, it passes through the pores and enters the blood, just as surely as if you put it into the child's stomach?

You would not put a coarse mass of animal fat, colored by various mineral poisons (such as many crude salves are) into your child's blood by way of the stomach? Then why do so by way of the pores?

Take no risk. Use always the pure herbal essence provided in Zam-Buk. Zam-Buk contains no trace of any animal oil or fat, and no poisonous mineral coloring matter. From start to finish it is purely herbal.

It will heal sores, ulcers, abscesses, eruptions, varicose ulcers, cuts, burns and bruises more quickly than any other known preparation. It is antiseptic, quickly stops the smarting of a sore or cut, cures piles, inflamed sores and blood-poisoning. It is a combination of healing power and scientific purity. Ask those who have proved it.

What was the matter? Had she been buried alive?

The thought was so horrible that the poor girl threw out her hands with a piteous cry.

Her right hand came in contact with a human face, and then a second laugh, more horrible and blood-curdling than the first, answered her.

Frantic with terror, she sprang to her feet and threw herself against the door of the vehicle, but it was securely fastened and would not yield.

"Stop! stop! Let me get out; let me get out!" the poor girl cried, quite beside herself for the moment.

Again the horrible, mocking laughter answered her, and straining her eyes to pierce the darkness, she saw, for the first time, a dark figure in the opposite corner of the carriage, and realized that she was not alone.

Kelpie was no coward, as has already been shown; on the other hand, she was both reckless and daring, but the situation in which she found herself was an unusual one, and, weakened and unnerved as she was from the effects of the drug she had inhaled, the shock of it all threatened to prove too much for her.

She sank down in a corner, panting for breath and quivering with terror.

The horrible laughter had ceased, and but for the continuous roll of the wheels and the thud of the horse's feet there would have been dead silence.

Kelpie scarcely dared breathe lest the dark object in the corner should move or attempt to approach her.

"What could it be?" she wondered, in a dazed sort of way.

Was her captor a human being or was she dreaming, going mad, perhaps?

The poor girl actually pinched herself to be sure she was awake and not the victim of a horrible nightmare.

A single instant seemed like an eternity while she sat with her hands clutched together and her eyes fastened on the dark object with a fascinated gaze, while she waited, dreading lest the terrible laughter should break forth again.

Lake Simcoe Held Up.

On her way to Pernambuco from this port in the early part of the winter, the barq. Lake Simcoe, which arrived here yesterday afternoon from the Brazilian port, was held up by H.M.S. Highflyer which was accompanied by two cruisers. The vessel was ordered to stop which she did and was boarded by two officers, who after perusing the Simcoe's papers and getting the desired information, allowed the vessel to proceed to her destination.

SAYS CROWN IS ABLE TO REQUISITION ANY NEUTRAL SHIP.

London, April 1.—In presenting his argument before the Prize Court yesterday in favor of requisitioning the cargo of foodstuffs of the American steamer Wilhelmmina, the Crown solicitor introduced a hitherto unpublished order-in-council providing that the Crown may requisition any neutral ship.

This order came as a complete surprise to the counsel for the owners of the Wilhelmmina's cargo. It revises Rule 23 of the Prize Court, which now reads:

"Where it is made to appear to the judge, on the application of the proper officer of the court, that it is desired to requisition, on behalf of His Majesty, a ship in respect of which no final decree of condemnation has been made, he shall order that the ship shall be appraised and that, upon an undertaking being given in accordance with Rule 5 of this order, this ship shall be released and delivered to the Crown."

Upon the motion of counsel for the owners of the cargo the Court adjourned to April 13, when counsel will renew his former motion to have a date for the trial set, in an effort to get a decision as to whether the foodstuffs destined for the German civilians were absolute contraband when the Wilhelmmina sailed from the United States.

To whom it may concern: This is to certify that I have used MINARD'S LINIMENT myself as well as prescribed it in my practice where a liniment was required and have never failed to get the desired effect.

Great Dramatic Sketch

AS IT WAS IN THE BEGINNING. The Great Ballard Brown and Miss Madge Locke have a new act to-night entitled, "As It Was in the Beginning." This is one of the finest dramatic plays in one act ever seen here. Last night everybody was delighted with these clever artists; they are without a doubt the best ever seen here. They have one of the most refined and high-class entertainments to present to-night. Everybody that can should see "As It Was in the Beginning" presented by Mr. Ballard Brown and Madge Locke. The orchestra is the best in town. Mr. Resley has been complimented again and again for giving the people of St. John's so great a treat. The pictures, too, are beautiful and the Theatre is a credit to Mr. Clem. Murphy did the decorating.

QUEEN MARY'S HELPERS
A great many people who have been presented at Court, come into frequent personal contact with the Queen in these seven years of war, owing to the direct and constant interest which Her Majesty takes in the work of the relief organizations. The Queen's interest is confined to the work, but extends to the persons engaged in carrying it on. It is true that she has created an acquaintance with a host of secretaries and admirals, such an acquaintance involves talking with them in fashion about their own country. The impression which the Queen leaves with them may perhaps be defined as that of a homely, sensible Queen Mary has always been very much in the background making rare public appearances, the homeliness has been in fact from this as well as from the fact of it that not all the stiff stateliness of public ceremonies could be added friendship to their loyalty.

QUEEN MARY'S HELPERS.

A great many people who have never been presented at Court, have come into frequent personal contact with the Queen in these seven months of war, owing to the direct and constant interest which Her Majesty has taken in the work of the relief organizations. The Queen's interest is not confined to the work, but extends to the persons engaged in carrying it on. It is true that she has cultivated an acquaintance with a small host of secretaries and administrators, such an acquaintance as involves talking with them in friendly fashion about their own concerns. The impression which the Queen leaves with them may perhaps best be defined as that of a homely personality. Queen Mary has always kept herself very much in the background, making rare public appearances, and the homeliness has been inferred from this as well as from the signs of it that not all the stiff stateliness of public ceremonies could conceal. A good many loyal subjects have now added friendship to their loyalty.

BRITISH HOUSEHOLDS IN FRANCE.

Soldiers are famous people for falling in love, and there have already been romantic weddings in this country which would never have taken place if there had been no war. I hear that in the north of France a number of British soldiers have fallen victims to the charms of Belgian and French ladies so completely as to get married to them. That such intimate ties should have been formed is probably due—apart from romance—to the fact that the armies have remained for so long in the same region. There is some suggestion that the war may result in small colonies of Britons settling in France. It seems much more likely that the United Kingdom may benefit by the addition of a number of French housewives. But if little British colonies were to be formed they would be no new thing in France. Before the war there were odd industrial groups of English people settled here and there. Englishmen who visited Compiegne were occasionally surprised by the sound of the Lancashire dialect in the streets. A number of Lancashire hatters were settled in the town. There was, also, I believe, a colony of industrial workers at Courtrai, which is at present part of the battle ground. Most of these colonies were a consequence of the French tariff, which was in many cases a bar to the import into France of finished articles, but allowed the unfinished to go in much more freely. The British workmen were finishers.

THE POLICY OF GREECE.

The Cabinet crisis in Greece may delay Greek intervention in the war for a little while, but the view here is that it is bound to come. The forcing of the Dardanelles makes this inevitable. It is possible to attach too much importance to the relationship by marriage of the Greek and German royal houses. The King of Greece, after all, so far as he is not a Greek, is a Dane, and Danish sympathies would not naturally tend to pro-Germanism. But even if there were a real breach between the Crown and M. Venizelos's Government, it would be very difficult for the Crown to maintain its opposition indefinitely. Greece is a very democratic country, and M. Venizelos is the maker of modern Greece, and has the greatest political prestige in the Balkans. It seems most likely that the Cabinet crisis is a diplomatic cover for the policy which is inevitable. It provides for a demonstration of Greek national sentiment by which, as all the world must see, the King is bound to be guided. It is just conceivable that even if the King himself were in favor of coming in on the side of the Allies, this might be the best way of introducing it. Certainly Greece even at the cost of revolution, would not stand out of a campaign the issue of which will determine the fate of the Dardanelles and Constantinople. Material as well as sentimental interests urge her to earn a voice in the settlement.

THE POSITION OF ITALY.

Italy must also be deeply moved by the operations in the Dardanelles. She is naturally interested in the balance of power in Europe and the future strength of Austria. Hitherto all calculations of whether she would not come into the struggle have been based on that interest. But it is, I believe, the fact that Germany and Austria had given satisfactory pledges (if Germany can give satisfactory pledges to anyone) to Italy as the price of her neutrality. Now, however, the future of the Dardanelles raises an even bigger question for Italy than the balance of power in Europe—the question of the balance of power in the Mediterranean. Politically and commercially Italy is a Mediterranean island, and in that situation she is vitally interested in the future of the Dardanelles, which are potentially a great and impressive naval base. In the hands of any great Power Constantinople could dominate the communications of the Mediterranean. Italy also, therefore, cannot easily refrain now from entering the struggle on the side of the Allies in order to earn a voice in settling the future of Constantinople. Italy's interest, like that of Greece, would be satisfied by the internationalisation of Constantinople, or perhaps still better by a federation of Balkan States with Constantinople as its capital. Such a federation would not be rich enough or strong enough to use the Dardanelles aggressively or to dominate Asia Minor, and it would settle for ever the Near Eastern question, which has cursed Europe so long.

THE WAR MEDAL.

It is rumored that the War Office proposes almost immediately to call for designs for the war medal for the present campaign. This is rather an unusual step to take with the end of the struggle not in sight, but it is desired to issue the medal to all who are permanently invalided from the Navy or the Army, through wounds or other injuries, with as little loss of time as possible. In the past men often died before they could receive the medal they had earned, and it is desired that this shall not be the case now. Owing to the extremely large number of medals it will ultimately be necessary to provide, it is proposed that it shall be of bronze, in place of the customary silver, and while the question of the ribbon to be attached is under consideration, it is expected to embody the colors of all the Allies. It is regarded as probable that these medals will be earliest issued on the first anniversary of the outbreak of hostilities.

OFFICERS' NEW SLANG.

The new army slang is gradually broadening down from precedent to precedent in many odd ways. In the South African War a battle was always called "a show." In the present war the term is still kept for ordinary engagements, but for the big events the term is a "picture show." You hear the phrase sometimes "Oh, you were in the picture show at Ypres." This means the famous engagement there, when the Prussian Guards tried to break through. To be captured is to be "scuttled," and to be wounded is to be "washed out." There are many phrases about being killed. One sounds particularly brutal, but indicates very clearly the dauntless spirit with which our soldiers face death. It is called "to be put in a bag." Another phrase used is "To be scuppered."

WAR AND THE SECOND-HAND BOOKSELLERS.

The second-hand bookshops have found it harder to adapt themselves to war conditions than sellers of some other wares. It was all very well for the first-hand shops to put novels on the back shelves and fill the windows with cheap and hurried compilations on the war, but dealing in second-hand books was in its essence out of date. In the first months the shops suffered a great deal from the general slump in literature, but the recovery has come, and the attraction of the jumbled stalls draws the same keen crowd as before. The booksellers have given a typical spice to their collections by hunting out from the inner darkness any old book which has the most shadowy connection with war. Every shop displays literary relics of the last great German war. The literature of the South African war is not much seen. Anything German has a fancy price upon it, and one of the special "lines" is the voluminous Bismarck literature. The recollections and reminiscences are out of print, and can only be bought second-hand. The shops that specialise in French books are doing well, for nowadays everyone reads French, and London is full of Belgian refugees and French visitors. There seems to be no want of second-hand German novels; probably the result of forced sales by Germans who have gone or been taken away. The staple of books in the shops is the usual rather frivolous miscellany, and if it were true last autumn it is no longer true that literature has lost its charms as an antidote. One of the most curious war reprints is a cheap issue of the chapters on the Huns and Goths from the "Decline and Fall." It might well be followed now by a reprint of the magnificent account of Gibbons' last volume of the fall of Constantinople. Now that the huge guns of the Queen Elizabeth are smashing down the Dardanelles forts it is interesting to read again of the mighty gun which Mahomet II. brought to make a breach in the walls. This gun was as much a wonder and a terror to the Greeks in 1453 as our 15-inchers are at this hour to the successors of the conquering Turks.

THE RETURN OF THE VEIL.

Veils have been out of fashion in London so long that it seemed as though we had forgotten them, and that to be seen in a veil was the hallmark of a slight tendency to frumpishness. Now all this is to be changed, and the veil manufacturers are to be given another chance. With the spring weather we are to veil our faces, drape our hats, and generally invest in yards of Russian and other nets. From being non-existent, veils will now go to the other extreme, and be an outstanding feature of our dress. They will be small, large, restrained, flowing—in a word, all sorts and descriptions. There will be the tiny "nose" veil reaching just below the tip of the nose, and used chiefly for keeping in place the little artificial curls worn over the ears, and that require holding neatly in place. Then there will be the veil proper descending to the edge of the chin. Those will be favored by the moderates in dress. But the chief novelty is the long flowing veil, almost like that of a bride's. Some of the latest have a queer curve at the ends, rather suggesting the enveloping draperies of Eastern women.

Nest Egg Gone!

There was an air of general depression about the Government and its supporters yesterday in the Legislature. In spite of the brave attempt to give an air of optimism to the Assembly Chamber by the display of flags, which in itself was proper and patriotic, in view of the Great War, in which we as well as the rest of the Empire are engaged, the parts of the Governor's Speech relating to finance before the War and the grave admission by the Premier that $200,000 of the Cash Reserve had already been taken to clear off the shortage of the revenue to meet the expenditure up to June 30th last came as a shock, if not as a surprise, to many present. They naturally thought if that was the financial condition of the Government before there was any thought of War, what must it be now after eight months of war and what will it be at the end of next June. The attempt of the Prime Minister to carry off the depressing news by words of optimism failed to galvanize buoyancy into his party or those present, and the occasional cheers by a few of his supporters in the gallery served only to accentuate the general depression. It was idle to expect confidence from those who had voted for the extraordinary increases in taxation at the last regular session of the Assembly. The additions to the tariff had been so great that with normal imports of dutiable goods, the new taxation was calculated to bring in an extra $20,000 a year, and should have given an extra $240,000 for the four months of the year preceding June 30th. More than above the provision made regularly and at the usual time for the revenue of that year. Yet in spite of the attempt after the General Elections to bolster up the pre-election budget by an extra call of $240,000 for that year, the Prime Minister admitted yesterday their financial calculations were so much astray that there was a deficit of $300,000 on June 30th last, and that $300,000 had been taken from the nest egg of $500,000 to clear up the deficiency of last year. More than this, the statement put in the mouth of the Governor that the balance of $300,000 will have to be put on to clear away the balance of a deficit, and that extra taxation must be put on to clear away the balance, and whether are we tending? Can there be a doubt?

Important Judgment.

Parker Webb & Co. vs. A. A. Telegraph Co.
The other day an important judgment was given in this case for the plaintiffs, represented by Winter & Winter, and against the defendants, represented by Mr. Furlong, K.C. This case was brought for damage resulting to plaintiffs from an error in the transmission of a telegram. Defendant Co. pleaded that the plaintiffs' agents, R. G. Ash & Co. had signed a form by which they agreed to the conditions endorsed on the telegram. These conditions absolved the Telegraph Co. from liability for such errors, however arising. Plaintiffs contended that the conditions were unreasonable and therefore void, amounting in effect to a refusal to send telegrams except on conditions unjust and onerous to the senders. Judgment of Horwood, J., and Johnson J., for the Plaintiffs; Emerson J., dissenting.

Parliament Opened Yesterday Afternoon.

At 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon the third session of the twenty-third General Assembly was formally opened by His Excellency the Governor, Sir Walter E. Davidson. A large concourse of people assembled in the grounds while both Chambers of the Legislature were well filled by prominent ladies and gentlemen. Lining the grounds were the usual detachments from the Constabulary and Naval Reserve, but a feature of yesterday's occasion was the presence of a squad from the N.M.D. Regiment, forming a guard of honor. The City Band was also in attendance and on arrival of His Excellency rendered the National Anthem while the guard presented arms. After the reading of the Speech from the Throne by His Excellency, Messrs. Coaker and Morine, the new members for Twillingate and Bonavista, respectively, who had been previously sworn in, were introduced to the Speaker by Messrs. Kent and Stone. The mover and second of the Address in Reply was Messrs. J. F. Downey and E. Parsons and in the Upper Chamber, Hons. J. Harvey and P. T. McGrath.

IN THE ASSEMBLY.
Mr. Downey in moving for the appointment of a committee to draft the Address in Reply, dwelt upon the horrors of the great war and deplored the calamity which was wantonly precipitated by Germany; congratulated the fathers and mothers of families in Newfoundland whose sons have volunteered; sympathized with the families of those who lost their lives while doing duty for the Empire, and predicted generous support for the dependents of them. In connection with the seal-fishery he thought a close season for a year or so was necessary so that a poor catch this year would be a good way to preserve the seals. He dilated a great deal on our food-stuffs and said there was room for great improvement. He referred to the negotiations going on between the Government and Mr. Wilson, of Montreal, with a view to establishing a large industry in Newfoundland. Mr. Downey said this industry would give an exceptionally large amount of labor and he predicted wonderful possibilities for it, and that it would cost over ten millions of dollars. Another industry he was much interested in was the Cold Storage plant proposed to be established for the exporting to America of our annual fish catch.

Submarine Crews.

Countess's Plea for Pirates.
The Countess Selborne, in a letter to the "Times" says a certain poor widow who had lost her husband in the Good Hope was told that his death was avenged in the action of the Falkland Islands, and that the ships which had destroyed the Good Hope had themselves been sunk. She answered, "That only means more sorrow elsewhere." This is a finer temper than that of your correspondents who are calling for vengeance on the crews of the German submarines who have been captured. What do they do but obey their officers? And what could these do but obey their Admiralty? Let the responsibility rest on the men who ordered these things and not on the men who do their duty according to their lights in obeying their chiefs. Surely enough blood in being shed to satisfy the most ferocious professor. We need not add to it.

Legislative Council.

Hon. John Harvey in moving the Address in Reply to the Speech from the Throne, said that the House met in September last to provide emergency measures to enable the Government to obtain Legislative sanction for their actions both past and future, and more or less in a state of uncertainty, as at that time the rush of the German forces had not been turned back and we were wondering what the extent of that rush would be. Since then events have developed and have rendered the whole British people, the Empire and her allies more determined and more full of confidence and hope for a triumphant end of the gigantic struggle at present raging throughout Europe. He referred at considerable length to the war, of which he gave an able and comprehensive review, pointing out what led up to it. It was not a mere conflict of material interests, but of two great issues between Great Britain and her Allies on the one hand, and aggressive fighting for the Rule of Might. These issues are of so vital and far-reaching a character that Civilization itself demands that Britain and her Allies must fight until victory is won and German aggression is decisively crushed. It will be a long and arduous struggle, but we must win. Continuing, the speaker commented on the character of the German military campaign, pointing out that the Germans had gone from step to step in violating the canons of international law which should govern warfare. Undeclared towns had been bombarded and resulted in the slaughter of innocent women and children. The destruction of mercantile shipping by submarines was a violation of the rules of the Prize Court, which did not contemplate the destruction of their ships, but only their capture, and the right of which had to be passed on by the Prize Court before even a captured ship could be considered. The struggle has brought out in strong relief the unity of the Empire. Newfoundland had already sent forth 1,000 soldiers and 1,000 sailors, and quite a number of the latter had lost their lives in doing their duty. These would be long remembered as Newfoundland heroes who gave their all for their country. As he had stated last September, the Opposition would offer no obstruction to measures brought in by responsible Ministers for the purpose of the war. In regard to other matters, the Opposition would attempt to be fair and reasonable in criticism, but the Opposition had a duty to perform to the country and to the districts which they represented, and they would do so in the Government side. He did not intend to deal with the paragraphs of the Speech of the Governor, which those who knew the policy of the Government, but he could not refrain from referring to the financial situation, so far as was disclosed in the Speech. The Government admitted a deficit on June 30th last and intimated that they expected a bigger deficit next June. Last September, according to his recollection, the Government had given the deficit of June last as $238,000. It is clear then that if the shortage of the greater this year, the situation is serious, in view of the conditions brought about by the War, and it behooves the country to work to get their house in order to meet the emergency. This deficit had come about in spite of the great increase in taxation a year ago, and in spite of the increases in September another and a larger deficit is expected. The grave condition of the country was disclosed when it was admitted that the half million cash reserve, so carefully looked after by Sir Robert Howe in the last session, and that other means would have to be resorted to as well in the attempt to meet the deficit. The outlook was none too promising. The sealing voyage looked like a failure and if this should be the fact it would have a material influence in lessening imports and in keeping down the revenue. The Colony was fortunate in being able to carry on its overseas trade owing to the British fleet's success on the sea, and he hoped that the products of our other industries would continue to fetch remunerative prices. The War would cast upon special obligations which we were bound to meet such as providing for those who were disabled by the war and for dependents of breadwinners who may fall in the war. We must prepare to fit ourselves to meet these obligations. In conclusion he hoped that on the opening day of the session next year, they would be able to congratulate themselves and the country on the successful close of the tremendous struggle in which they with so many other nations were engaged.

offer no obstruction to measures brought in by responsible Ministers for the purpose of the war. In regard to other matters, the Opposition would attempt to be fair and reasonable in criticism, but the Opposition had a duty to perform to the country and to the districts which they represented, and they would do so in the Government side. He did not intend to deal with the paragraphs of the Speech of the Governor, which those who knew the policy of the Government, but he could not refrain from referring to the financial situation, so far as was disclosed in the Speech. The Government admitted a deficit on June 30th last and intimated that they expected a bigger deficit next June. Last September, according to his recollection, the Government had given the deficit of June last as $238,000. It is clear then that if the shortage of the greater this year, the situation is serious, in view of the conditions brought about by the War, and it behooves the country to work to get their house in order to meet the emergency. This deficit had come about in spite of the great increase in taxation a year ago, and in spite of the increases in September another and a larger deficit is expected. The grave condition of the country was disclosed when it was admitted that the half million cash reserve, so carefully looked after by Sir Robert Howe in the last session, and that other means would have to be resorted to as well in the attempt to meet the deficit. The outlook was none too promising. The sealing voyage looked like a failure and if this should be the fact it would have a material influence in lessening imports and in keeping down the revenue. The Colony was fortunate in being able to carry on its overseas trade owing to the British fleet's success on the sea, and he hoped that the products of our other industries would continue to fetch remunerative prices. The War would cast upon special obligations which we were bound to meet such as providing for those who were disabled by the war and for dependents of breadwinners who may fall in the war. We must prepare to fit ourselves to meet these obligations. In conclusion he hoped that on the opening day of the session next year, they would be able to congratulate themselves and the country on the successful close of the tremendous struggle in which they with so many other nations were engaged.

The Prime Minister congratulated Mr. Downey and Parsons and endorsed in every particular, he said, the learned speech made by the talented Leader of the Opposition and welcomed Mr. Morine. He was optimistic about the situation of the country, though there was a deficit last year and another this year. These, he said, were unforeseen and the Government was fortunate in having the liquid asset of a half million dollars to fall back on to meet last year's shortage $300,000, and to help to meet the deficit of the present year. What the shortage this year will be, depends largely on trade importations, the consumption and the purchasing power of the people. From 1909 to 1912, he said, the Government had a surplus of nearly $800,000 over expenditure and that this surplus was given back to the people in the shape of branch rail-ways, etc. He believed there was a silver lining to the cloud of overhauling the Empire and that conditions brought about by the war would strengthen the Empire and give peace world soon be established.

Mr. Morine thanked Mr. Coaker for making a speech that the people of Bonavista for his seat and the Premier for his support of the fishing industry and was glad to see the Prime Minister getting conservative as he grew older and was leading the old Tory party. He was glad to see the House and the Premier were the oldest politicians and that, judged by his speech, Sir Edward was continuing to sing the same old song that he sang 30 years ago when first he knew him. He congratulated him on the success of his speech and was glad to see himself in real to the country.

The Newfoundland Quarterly.

The Premier, Leader of the Opposition and several other gentlemen gave notice of questions.
The House adjourned until 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Legislative Council.

Hon. John Harvey in moving the Address in Reply to the Speech from the Throne, said that the House met in September last to provide emergency measures to enable the Government to obtain Legislative sanction for their actions both past and future, and more or less in a state of uncertainty, as at that time the rush of the German forces had not been turned back and we were wondering what the extent of that rush would be. Since then events have developed and have rendered the whole British people, the Empire and her allies more determined and more full of confidence and hope for a triumphant end of the gigantic struggle at present raging throughout Europe. He referred at considerable length to the war, of which he gave an able and comprehensive review, pointing out what led up to it. It was not a mere conflict of material interests, but of two great issues between Great Britain and her Allies on the one hand, and aggressive fighting for the Rule of Might. These issues are of so vital and far-reaching a character that Civilization itself demands that Britain and her Allies must fight until victory is won and German aggression is decisively crushed. It will be a long and arduous struggle, but we must win. Continuing, the speaker commented on the character of the German military campaign, pointing out that the Germans had gone from step to step in violating the canons of international law which should govern warfare. Undeclared towns had been bombarded and resulted in the slaughter of innocent women and children. The destruction of mercantile shipping by submarines was a violation of the rules of the Prize Court, which did not contemplate the destruction of their ships, but only their capture, and the right of which had to be passed on by the Prize Court before even a captured ship could be considered. The struggle has brought out in strong relief the unity of the Empire. Newfoundland had already sent forth 1,000 soldiers and 1,000 sailors, and quite a number of the latter had lost their lives in doing their duty. These would be long remembered as Newfoundland heroes who gave their all for their country. As he had stated last September, the Opposition would offer no obstruction to measures brought in by responsible Ministers for the purpose of the war. In regard to other matters, the Opposition would attempt to be fair and reasonable in criticism, but the Opposition had a duty to perform to the country and to the districts which they represented, and they would do so in the Government side. He did not intend to deal with the paragraphs of the Speech of the Governor, which those who knew the policy of the Government, but he could not refrain from referring to the financial situation, so far as was disclosed in the Speech. In conclusion he hoped that on the opening day of the session next year, they would be able to congratulate themselves and the country on the successful close of the tremendous struggle in which they with so many other nations were engaged.

With reference to the fish market he felt that the value of our fish must come down and that it was better to recognize the fact as soon as possible. The conditions are bad, and are likely to become worse, and the rate of exchange is steadily dropping.
Mr. Harvey emphasized the absolute necessity of rigid economy on the part of the Government, and asked the question of the intelligent industry and economy for the people of Newfoundland. Such expenditures as the destruction of the cable, the operation of the Plover, and others that he felt were not giving sufficient value, should be either wiped out or materially reduced. Agricultural exhibitions, new roads, extra trips of coastal steamers should also be done away with. He also spoke of the increasing sense of the importance of Confederation. As a Newfoundlander he was most emphatic in saying that he felt that Confederation would be most favourable to our interests.
Speaking of the great war, Mr. Harvey referred to the noble part played

OFFICIAL.

LONDON, April 7.
The Governor, Newfoundland:
Union troops occupied Warmbad, in German South West Africa, without opposition, on April 2nd.
The Russian Government reports the Russian advance continued on the 4th, with success on the whole front, from the northern region in the direction of Barfeld as far as Uszok inclusive.
The French Government reports appreciable progress on April 6th.
HARCOURT.

HEAVY CASUALTIES.

LONDON, April 7.
The largest total casualties yet recorded in any official lists were shown in a statement given out to-night dated March 22nd. This list is believed to cover the losses sustained in part of the sanguinary fighting which resulted in the capture of Neuve Chapelle last month. The list includes the names of 1,843 non-commissioned officers in the seventy regiments mentioned of whom 573 were killed and 1,107 wounded.

BOTHAS PROGRESS.

CAPE TOWN, April 7.
It was announced officially here to-day that troops of the Union of South Africa have occupied, without opposition, the railway station at Kalkfontein and Kanus in German South West Africa. This follows the capture of Warmbad, twenty miles north of Orange River, announced yesterday.

AWAITING HER DOOM.

NEWPORT NEWS, April 7.
Shortly before three o'clock the Prinz Eitel Friedrich hoisted a line of signal flags, and blew her whistle. One blast was sounded, the smoke pouring forth from both funnels. At dusk to-night she was still at her dock and there had been no change in the situation.

PRINZ EITEL FRIEDRICH.

WASHINGTON, April 7.
The commander of the German cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich informed the Collector of Customs at Newport News to-night, that he desired to intern his ship in America during the war.

ADMITS LOSS OF SUBMARINE.

BERLIN, April 7.
The German Admiralty has given out an official statement in which the loss of submarine U-29 is accepted. The text of the communication follows: "Submarine U-29 has not returned from its last cruise. According to a report of the British Admiralty on March 26th, this vessel with her crew has been sent to the bottom. She therefore, must be regarded as lost."

WILLARD AND MORAN.

LONDON, April 7.
A London syndicate offered $20,000 for a fight between Willard and Frank Moran, of Pittsburgh. Willard will be offered one thousand dollars travelling expenses. Moran was defeated by Johnson in twenty rounds on points, in Paris, on June 27th last year.

United States Has Done the Same.

The following is from a letter published recently in the Boston Transcript:
"The intrinsic right of Great Britain and her allies to cut off food from Germany, as a military measure has been questioned.
"The American papers have during the last three years contained accounts of what was happening from day to day and from week to week fifty years ago in the civil war.
"In these papers are very many accounts of the policy systematically pursued by the American Federal Government of cleaning up the food supplies of the South without distinction as to possible civil or military use, in order to end the power of the Southern States to carry on the war.
"The enclosed clipping showing the successful results of this policy is but one example of this evidence.
"Starvation is not a nice thing to inflict on a population, but it probably saved many good lives, and is no more inhuman than killing. In fact few things in war are attractive in themselves.
"The United States Government certainly could not object to such a policy on its merits, since it has deliberately pursued similar policy with successful results."

Russia's Fine Work.

(From the Boston Transcript)
Early in the war it was pointed out in this column that Russia would prove a surprise to many. Having followed very carefully the campaign in Manchuria during the war with Japan and having seen Russia organize an army of exceeding half a million men 3,000 miles from her main base of supplies with only a single track railroad with which to work and knowing further that it was this army under old Lincolitch that forced Japan to ask for peace, greater things were expected of Russia's new army than German and local "experts" were willing to allow. So it is pleasant to hear that Professor Vogt, a well-known German authority on Russian affairs, warns the Germans in the Voerwarts that "it will take a long time, great energy and patience and many victories to gain headway against this new Russia." Professor Vogt says further, "Russia's offensive powers have hardly been touched. Her staying powers are enormous. Her army has done magnificent work, while the Russian financial and economic position has seldom been better."

CONDEMNNS SINKING OF FRYE.

New Haven, Conn., March 31.—When asked his opinion as to whether the captain of the German auxiliary cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich was justified in sinking the American sailing ship William P. Frye, Prof. Gordon Sherman, Yale's authority on questions of international law, made the following statement:
"The question involved should be adjusted irrespective of the Declaration of London, which has not been internationally ratified.
"The German Government would appear to be wholly responsible for the action taken by the commander of the German cruiser in destroying the Frye, since by not bringing ship and cargo before a prize court the wheat could be treated as absolute contraband, lacking the support of a prize decision. Whether in fact the wheat was property held to be contraband is an assumption, needing proof.
"As it stands to-day the available evidence does not sustain the German commander in having sunk the Frye, which was at best a neutral prize and not a prize belonging to the enemy."

Unashamed!

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

The other evening I went calling and found my hostess in her living room engaged in ironing one of her husband's shirts on an ironing board balanced on two chairs. It was not a position in which one would choose to be found by an evening caller, especially one as little known as I. Most women would have made themselves and me thoroughly uncomfortable with a flood of excuses and apologies.

Taking the Sting Out of a Trying Situation.

Not so my hostess. She put her iron down, came forward with a cordial greeting and seated me, before she uttered a word of explanation. Then she simply called her little boy to remove the ironing board and put the chairs in place, saying pleasantly and without a trace of embarrassment, "I've just finished ironing a shirt for my husband. The laundry didn't come for some reason and he discovered to-night he had none. This is the only room where I can have a place to attach my electric iron and still have a light."

Then she changed the subject. She wasn't ashamed. She evidently had no sense of being caught, and by her unembarrassed manner she took the sting of awkwardness out of the situation and left me without any feeling of having come at an inopportune time.

"I Cannot Afford That."

There are few qualities I admire more than this poise, this freedom

Inspector General Decorated.

Yesterday afternoon before the opening of the Legislature, Inspector General John Sullivan was presented with the King's Police Medal by His Excellency the Governor. In making the presentation, His Excellency congratulated Mr. Sullivan on his long and valuable service to the King, and in wishing him many years to wear the medal, felt that he was but voicing the sentiments of the whole public. The Inspector General has been in the Constabulary for 45 years and though now in his 70th year is still hale and hearty and takes an active interest in every detail of police work. We congratulate the Inspector General on the honor conferred on him, and hope he will be spared many years to enjoy the well merited decoration. We understand that the only other recipient of this decoration in British North America is Mr. Power, retired Chief of the Halifax Constabulary.

St. Mary's Y. M. A.

Under the auspices of the St. Mary's Young Men's Association, a very enjoyable entertainment was held at St. Mary's Hall, Southside, last evening. Rev. H. Uphill, the Rector, presided and at the opening thanked the large gathering present for their attendance.

The programme included vocal and instrumental selections, dialogues, recitations, club singing, and a screaming farce entitled "Paddy and the Ghost." The following are those who took part:—Messrs Whitten, Cook, Vasey, Ebsary, Messrs. French, Ford, Colton, Saunders, Gallege, Crossman, Stone, Collier, Noseworthy, Cullen and Rev. Mr. Uphill who contributed a choice patriotic song which was thoroughly enjoyed. During the evening refreshments and candy were on sale and the proceeds were quite substantial. After the concert, dancing was indulged in until an early hour this morning.

HARRY LAUDER'S SALMON.
An interesting incident in connection with the visit of Mr. Harry Lauder to Aberdeen occurred at His Majesty's Theatre, Aberdeen, where he is fulfilling an engagement. Fishing on the Dee, near Banchory, on the previous day, Mr. Lauder was successful in landing a couple of salmon, and these were put up to auction, on the Dutch system, in the course of the performance on Wednesday night, the proceeds in the one case going to the National Relief Fund and in the other to Mr. Duncan Davidson's hospital at Inchmarlo. The first salmon realized a sum of £8 10s. and the other £7, one of the bidders for the latter being Mr. Lauder himself, who kept up a running fire of humorous comment while the auctions were in progress.

Statement of the Newfoundland Patriotic

The Patriotic Fund is to take the place of which it is understood provided by the State for defenders who pay total disablement, or for other dependents of those who lose their lives while in the service.

The object of the Fund, as stated in the original public, is "that it should primarily in making independent relatives of the country and the Empire, sea, and afterwards to subjects connected therewith deemed desirable."

It having been represented would be well if this state objects of the Fund were that there might be no loss as to the purpose of money was to be utilized Association referred to of such an amplified form, presented it to the Trustees having presented it was approved, and official authority, in the terms:—

The objects of the Newfoundland Patriotic Fund are:—

1. To augment, if possible, the success of the family and Reservists who have been unable to adequately secure employment, or to make provision for themselves or otherwise.
2. To assist, if possible, in securing employment, or to make provision for themselves or otherwise.
3. To assist, if possible, other dependents of those who have lost their lives while in the service, until they become the legislative enactment.
4. To afford help, if possible, in cases as do not come under legislative enactment, and have a moral claim upon the public.

As more detailed statement of the effects of these objects of value in making clear the fund what is intended, this document has been prepared with respect to it, and it elaborates thus:—

With respect to the first above set out, help is being furnished by families in this course the Newfoundland Patriotic Fund is pursuing the same.

Statement of the Newfoundland Patriotic Fund.

The Patriotic Fund is not designed to take the place of the pensions which it is understood will be provided by the State for those of our defenders who may suffer partial or total disablement, or for the widows or other dependents of those who may lose their lives while on active service.

The object of the Patriotic Fund, as stated in the original appeal to the public, is "that it will be applied primarily in making provision for the dependent relatives of those who undertake to fight the battles of the country and the Empire by land and sea, and afterwards to such other objects connected therewith as may be deemed desirable."

It having been represented that it would be well if this statement of the objects of the Fund were amplified so that there might be no misunderstanding as to the purposes for which the money was to be utilized the Patriotic Association referred to the Trustees of the Patriotic Fund the framing of such an amplified statement; and the Trustees having prepared a draft form, presented it to the Association at its meeting on March 30th, when it was approved, and thus given official authority, in the following terms:

The objects of the Newfoundland Patriotic Fund are:

1. To augment, if possible, the resources of the families of Volunteers and Reservists who have gone on active service, where such families are unable to adequately maintain themselves without such aid.

2. To assist, if possible, men invalided from active service until they can secure employment, or until the State makes provision for them by pension or otherwise.

3. To assist, if possible, widows and other dependents of those who lose their lives while on active service, until they become the beneficiaries of legislative enactment.

4. To afford help, if possible, in such cases as do not come within the scope of legislative enactment, but which have a moral claim upon the generosity of the public.

As a more detailed statement of the precise effects of these clauses may be of value in making clear to the public what is intended, this memorandum has been prepared with that object in view, and it elaborates them thus:

With respect to the first clause above set out, help is being given to families of Volunteers and Reservists where such families are in need. In this course the Newfoundland Patriotic Fund is pursuing the same policy

CRITICAL TIME OF WOMAN'S LIFE

From 40 to 50 Years of Age. How It May Be Passed in Safety.

So, Wellington, B. C. — "For a year during the Change of Life I was all run down. I was really too weak to walk and was very despondent and thought I was going to die, but after taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound my health and strength returned. I am very thankful to you and I highly praise your medicine. I have advised several women who suffered as I did to try your remedies. You may publish this if you wish." — Mrs. DAVID R. MORRIS, South Wellington, Vancouver Island, B. C.

No other medicine for woman's ills has received such wide-spread and unequalled endorsement. We know of no other medicine which has such a record of success as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For more than 30 years it has been the standard remedy for woman's ills such as inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains and nervous prostration, and we believe it is unequalled for women during the period of change of life.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (Confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

as is being pursued in the Mother Country and in the Dominion of Canada. In Great Britain the Fund is known as the Prince of Wales Fund, and has already reached a total of nearly 5 million pounds (25 million dollars). Out of this sum there has been distributed, up to the first of March, according to cablegrams to the Canadian press, a sum of approximately $7,000,000 for the relief of distress among the families of soldiers and sailors, the total number of households relieved being 500,000 and grants being made through other channels to 7,000 widows, 11,000 children, and 3,000 other dependents of soldiers and sailors who have died. In Canada, as with us, the Fund is known as the Patriotic Fund, and an official statement supplied by the Hon. Secretary, Mr. H. B. Ames, states that in January some 10,000 families were being helped, and the outlay was at the rate of $6,000 per day. In Nova Scotia, last month, some 623 families were being relieved and in New Brunswick more than 400. In Newfoundland, so far, help has been given to nearly ninety families and almost 70 of these are in receipt of regular monthly allowances, while the applications are being received nearly every day.

Under the second clause, the work of the Fund will not become effective until men begin to be sent back to the Colony from the Regiment or the Naval Reserve, invalided home through illness or injury. Then, such men will be assisted during their period of recovery, and in cases where they may have to claim upon the State for pensions, the Fund will care for them until such pensions are provided.

Under the third clause, the Fund is already assisting dependents of some of the Naval Reservists who went down with the warships Vikron, Clan McNaughton and Bayano; and as further information regarding other families is received, relief will be afforded to them, this being continued until provision is made for pensions where such are allowed, and in other cases, as circumstances justify.

With respect to the fourth category, it is impossible to more than indicate some of the various classes of cases which will have to be considered, and which will require the activities of the Fund to be continued for many years. The outstanding ones are:

(a) Men who suffer in their eyesight, or hearing, or lose limbs in the war, may require artificial eyes, aids to hearing, or artificial limbs; and men with spinal trouble may require other mechanical aids; and the Patriotic Fund will have to consider the providing and possibly the renewing of these from time to time.

(b) Men who return from active service partially disabled may find their condition become such after some years that the pensions provided for them may have to be supplemented from the Patriotic Fund.

(c) Children who may be orphaned may have to be assisted in addition to such other provision as is made for them.

(d) Aged parents, or other relatives, or foster-mothers, or guardians, may require assistance where no other aid is available, or to supplement such.

Very many other contingencies, which it is impossible to set out in detail, are certain to arise here as they are arising in the Mother Country now and as they arose there after the South African War; and these can only be dealt with according to the circumstances of each case.

In Great Britain, there is in existence what is known as the Royal Patriotic Fund, whose operations have continued from the time of the South African war up to the present, in caring for wounded soldiers of that war, and dependents of others who died during that struggle or since; and the same condition of things will probably prevail in this country after the present war ends, and call for like treatment.

The Newfoundland Patriotic Fund totals thus far, roundly, $91,000 and in view of the many claims likely to be made upon it we trust that all who can see their way clear to contributing towards enlarging it will do so as generously as their circumstances will permit.

If you would see all kinds of wood all stand a rd brands of fear and gloom, just visit for an hour or so the painless dentist's waiting room. How tragic a re the faces there, how poignant drawn sighs! And you may see the heart's despair look bleakly forth from shrinking eyes. There heroes wilt and mop their brows, and mighty captains walk the floor, and frame a shop no more. A Cromwell, in the dentist's lair, looks not like one who could command; he wrings the moisture from his hair with quivering and nervous hand. And there, Napoleon, too, I think, would look absurdly cheap and small; and he would in the shadow slink, and wish he hadn't come at all. The gorgeous beauty of the stage, whom men adore, the old, old way, when at the dentist's looks her age, and that's the worst a man can say. Men drop their masks and cease to pose when in the waiting room so drear, and murmur, as each victim goes, "My turn is next, I sadly fear!"

St. Andrew's "At Home."

The "At Home" of St. Andrew's Society was held last night, and was attended by a large gathering of members and friends. Mr. John Browning, the President, occupied the chair, and announced the items of the concert programme which included selections from Misses Strang (2), Anderson (2), Mitchell; Mesdames Stranger and Sheriff; Messrs. McIntosh, Herschell, Evans, Ross, P. Cowan and Arthur Priestman Cameron. Mr. Hirst acted as accompanist. During the evening refreshments were served, and one of the most successful affairs of its kind was brought to a close at midnight.

"What Are You Doing for that Eczema?"

"Nothing; I've about given up trying to cure it."
"That is not wise. Do as I did and you will probably be cured in a short time. I used Zylex and Zylex Soap with it and my Eczema began to improve at once. A couple of boxes cured me. You can get Zylex at your druggist's."
Zylex, 50c. a box; Zylex Soap, 25c. a cake.

Wesley Bible Class.

The annual "At Home" of Wesley Bible Class took place at the Presbyterian Hall last night and was largely attended. Mr. A. Waterfield presided, and an enjoyable concert programme was given by the following:—Miss Hamlin, Messrs. H. Chaplin, Bussey, Gaulton and Maundrell. A pleasing event of the evening was the presentation of a set of cuff links to Mr. Edward White for good attendance during his eight years of membership in the Class, having missed only one Sunday, and then through illness. Following the presentation refreshments were served, and games indulged in until midnight when the gathering dispersed.

BOTH'S FORCES IN GERMAN TERRITORY.

LONDON, To-day. The expectation here in military circles is that a combined land and sea attack on the Dardanelles will begin shortly and that at the same time Russians will bombard Bosphorus. In Africa Both's forces continue the victorious march along the railways, but thus far they have been unable to overtake the main German army which it is thought here is trying to draw the old Boer General as far from the base as possible before making a stand.

CLOSING THE DEE AT NIGHT.

WASHINGTON, To-day. The River Dee and the Port of Chester have been closed to all navigation by night on the order of the British Admiralty. The State Department has just been informed from London. The message said no vessel is permitted to leave or enter either place between dark and daylight and that all navigation lights have been extinguished. No explanation of the order is offered.

AUSTRIA SAID TO BE SEEKING PEACE.

TURIN, To-day. The Gazette Del Popolo, declares the report that Austria contemplates concluding peace with Russia in order the better to defend herself against Italy, is not so visionary as the official communication issued at Vienna would indicate. The correspondent of a paper at the Austrian capital professes to have obtained reliable information to the effect that the Austrian Government already has opened semi-official pour-parlors with the two powers of the Triple entente, and he believes a dramatic surprise is possible.

KAISER THREATENS ITALY.

PARIS, To-day. What the Kaiser thinks about Italy is reflected in the following statement he recently made to officers attached to the Austrian Emperor's suite: "Even if we are crushed we shall never tire of telling our children in Austria as well as Germany that our downfall was due to Italy. If it takes us ten or even twenty years we will win back whatever we give Italy now, and also seize Venice as interest." This disclosure was made to a neutral newspaper man by an Austrian officer who heard the Kaiser's vow.

HEAVY FIGHTING AT NEUVE CHAPELLE.

LONDON, To-day. A despatch from Amsterdam says that fighting is still proceeding in the neighborhood of Neuve Chapelle. The Allies' artillery is bombarding the villages of Fecomelles and Herles. The Germans have delivered numerous counter-attacks, especially at night, but have been consistently unsuccessful. The artillery fighting in Fecomelles region is stated to have been particularly violent. The Germans attacked at this point in close formation and were supported by artillery, while four aeroplanes dropped bombs on the British positions. The German infantry is said to have sustained considerable losses. Strong German attacks near Armentieres, according to this despatch, have also failed. British warships continue to shell the Belgian coast, supporting the Allies' land operations. The Allies are delivering infantry attacks regularly.

Gruesome Find.

BODY OF MRS. EDWARD LANDY FOUND IN QUIDI VIDI LAKE THIS MORNING.

A solution to the mysterious disappearance of Mrs. Edward Landy, who has been missing for practically six months, was arrived at this morning when her body was found in the waters of Quidi Vidi Lake. Last evening, Mr. James Haines, driver of the motor launch "The Quidi Vidi," on his way home from town, was passing along by the N.E. section of the pond, near Pleasantville, when he observed in the pond, close to the shore, something of a human character. He stopped for a while but did not go to make enquiries. He proceeded home and told some of his friends, men and women, that he had seen a strange object. At daybreak this morning, Mr. Haines, accompanied by several people of the village, started out to investigate. Walking along the side of the Lake, just below what is known locally as "Peter's River," they were dumfounded to notice lying on the bottom in shallow water, about five feet from the shore, the body of a woman. The corpse was immediately taken ashore to await further instructions. Just then, milkman Martin, of the White Hills, came in sight with a team, and informed of the gruesome find. Martin drove off to the city and hurriedly quainted the East End Fire Hall guard, who in turn communicated with Mr. Gimes, Supt. of Police. The latter despatched Constable Woodford to look after the body while he engaged Undertaker Martin who conveyed the dead body to the morgue, where it remained for identification. Mr. Edward Brophy, of Colonial St., on learning of the matter, called at the morgue and identified the dead body to be that of his sister, Mrs. Landy, who left her home on Colonial Street at 6.30 on a Sunday evening, of October 19th last and never turned up afterwards. It is now supposed that she wandered towards the Lake, went into the pond and was drowned. When found her body was very little decomposed, being frozen and kept preserved by the icy cold water. Her features were easily recognized. Dr. Brehm examined the body and gave a permit for burial. At 2 p.m. to-day Undertaker Myrick removed the body to the cemetery and was followed by a widow, and is survived by three children, a father, brother and a large circle of friends and acquaintances, and to all of whom general and sincere sympathy will be extended.

THREE WIVES FOUND DROWNED IN BATH TUB.

London, March 23.—Charged with the murder of three women, George Joseph Smith, in the Bow Street Court to-day, heard Public Prosecutor Bodkin declare he had made away with three of his wives, the crime in each case being committed shortly after he had married them. Each of these women was found dead in her bath; consequently the case has come to be known as the "Brides in Bath" case.
Smith has described himself as a man of independent means. According to the evidence of Scotland Yard, which has been enquiring into the deaths of these women, Smith made use of various fictitious names in his matrimonial ventures. A few days after the ceremony, Verdicts of accidental death have been returned, but now certain of the bodies have been exhumed with the result that the charges of murder have been preferred.
The police prosecutor gave the names of the three women and the names of the alleged murders, as Beatrice Mundy, July, 1912; Alice Burnside, December, 1913; and Margaret Lofty, December, 1914.
Smith, according to the police, was born in London, the son of an insurance agent and is 45 years of age.
Prosecutor Bodkin said the accused had been married five times in all. His first wife was Caroline Beatrice Thornhill, whom he married in 1898, and who is now on her way to London from Canada.
The prisoner will now be charged with the murder of three of these five women," Mr. Bodkin continued. "The case is remarkable for the greed for wealth which was the dominant motive in the taking of those three lives. We shall show that at the death of two of them £2,800 ($14,000) was obtained and that the prisoner when arrested was in a fair way to obtain £700 ($3,500 more)."
The prosecutor related how Smith had ardently courted each woman and had obtained from each a will making him the sole legatee.
"In the death of these three women precisely similar circumstances existed," Mr. Bodkin went on. "Each was found in her bath; each died of drowning, and each was first discovered by the prisoner."
The prosecutor said he considered it remarkable that the prisoner had been able to face the coroner's juries untrapped after each death, and that he should only at the last have been brought to court on a technicality regarding the use of a false name in an application for a marriage license.

Sir John French's Counsel Saves Belgium's Army.

Paris, March 18.—(By mail to New York)—King Albert of Belgium is singing the praises of Sir John French, the British commander-in-chief. In the darkest day of all the dark days of the Belgians military career, Gen. French gave the King of the Belgians a bit of advice—which, really, was rather in the form of an order—that saved the Belgian army. It happened last November, when the Germans drove the Belgians back on the Yser—when the Belgians had fought with wild desperation, but finally gave way. Many of them were drowned in the river. The Belgian army was all but dispersed. Its remnants were scattered and many of the soldiers retreated as far south as Dunkirk. The King of the Belgians mortared over to Gen. French's headquarters with the news. He tried to tell the story of what the Germans had done to the Belgian army. "But I want to know, your Majesty," suggested French, in effect, "what the Belgians did to the Germans."

King Was Discouraged.
The King explained the battle as best he could, carefully answering the question of the British leader as to what effect the Belgian fighting seemed to have on the Germans. The King was discouraged. With his army broken up, it seemed to him that the Germans had only to continue their advance in order to take the last remaining inch of Belgian soil. But Gen. French kept to the theme of what the Belgians had done to the Germans. At last he said: "Your majesty, collect your army again and go back to the Yser. From what you have told me I am led to believe that the Germans have suffered so greatly that they will not be able to attack you again or try to continue their advance for at least two weeks."

The King did as Gen. French advised him. Within ten days he had collected his army and got them into trenches along the river. The Germans did not attack, as French had surmised. The British general, with his extraordinary knowledge of warfare, had measured the amount of fight the Germans would have remaining after the battle and his guess as to when they would regain their strength was exact, most to the day, for it was not until twelve days had passed that the Germans made another try at the Belgian lines. "That man is not a general," are the words which the King of the Belgians used later, speaking of Gen. French. "He is not a general, but a magician."

Rear-Admiral John M. De Robeck.

The startling combination found in the name of the present commander of the allied fleets at the Dardanelles is in no wise more startling than the position he occupies as contrasted with the career of his great grandfather, who came over to America under Rochambault to fight with the revolutionists against the British. For this he was given a pension by the American Government. He fell in love with a beautiful Irish girl at the end of the war, however, and emigrated to Ireland, where he married and became a naturalized British subject. Admiral De Robeck is a brother of the present Baron de Robeck. The title is Swedish. He entered the navy in 1875 and became Rear-Admiral in 1912, when a new post was created for him, that of admiral of patrols. His duty was to command four flotillas of destroyers of the home squadron. Recently, Vice-Admiral Carden, who was in command of the fleets attacking the Dardanelles forts, was taken ill. Rear-Admiral De Robeck was given the command and will probably see the venture through to its conclusion.

GERMANS HAVE BEEN SHELLING VERDUN POINTS.

Paris, March 31.—After seven months of continuous effort the Germans have finally got near enough to Verdun to bombard the forts defending the city. Fort Douaumont, five miles north-east of the city proper, has been violently shelled by heavy German howitzers, a dozen projectiles striking the works. This was officially stated to-day by the War Office. Fort Douaumont is one of a group of six forts and redoubts north of the Conflans road, defending Verdun on the northeast.

"How did your daughter pass her examination?" asked one mother of another. "Pass!" was the answer. "She didn't pass at all. Perhaps you wouldn't believe it, but they asked that girl about things that happened long before she was born."

Evening Gowns at Reduced Prices!

While many of the larger social functions are—on account of the war—conspicuous by their absence this season, there are never-the-less many smaller affairs which take place where a really smart gown is not only admissible, but really necessary.

We are offering a limited number only of Evening and At-home Gowns and Blouses, in combinations of Silk and Net, Satin and Lace, Charmeuse, Ninon, Voile, etc.—in very beautiful designs and in different sizes. These Gowns and Blouses are copies of French and American models, and, owing to the depression in trade, are to be sold at heavy reductions.

This week presents an excellent chance for you to purchase a dainty Evening Gown for the coming Easter festivities at actual cost.

NEPONSET
WALL BOARD
FOR WALLS AND CEILINGS

It was no trouble at all and took me a very short time. You see, anyone can apply it.

I simply gave my dealer the dimensions of the cottage and he sent me up enough bundles of this new material to cover the walls and ceilings—I did the rest with hammer, nails and saw.
It cost me a great deal less than lath and plaster, and there was no dirt and mess or delay of drying-out.
NEPONSET WALL BOARD comes in sheets, all decorated; 7 to 10 feet long, and to fit across standard studding. It is ideal for unfinished rooms in houses, camps, garages, and for partitions anywhere—makes wonderfully attractive interiors. Surfaces waterproofed.
