Gin Pills

FOR THE KIDNEYS

What They Have Done

"I suffered a great many years with kidney trouble; tried several remedies, and also doctors' medicine, with no result. Two years ago I read an ad. in a newspaper of 'GIN PILLS FOR THE KIDNEYS,' and sent for two boxes. They did me more good than all the medicine I had ever taken. After I used the first two I sent for two more boxes, and I am satisfied, and also know, that Gin Pills are the best kidney remedy made. I used to have to rise three or four times in the night; now I can sleep and don't have to get up at all, thanks to GIN PILLS. Am seventy-two years old. "ECHOES of the Past;

The Recompense of Love!"

CHAPTER XXXI.

"No, dearest," she said, and she spoke the sweet word unhesitatingly; for with death so near there was no longer any need to conceal their love, and heart to heart could speak freely. The police-boat had passed up the river; I heard the two men with Koshki say so; and if you called out loud enough to be heard, the men might come back. I think they have left us because they thought we were dead or in too deep a swoon to call for help. Oh, it is bitter to lie here, and to know you are losing your life for my sake! And such a life! So great so good, of such value to the whole country, people!"

Clive laughed almost mockingly, almost derisively. "Put that thought away from you, Mina," he said; "don't harbor it for a moment. My life! It is I who have fooled it away, I who have juggled with my happiness, and yours, yours! Lying here, like a helpless idiot, I see what a fool, what an imbecile I've been. 'But no more of that; self-reproach is useless. I can only ask you to forgive me, Mina, to tell you that I love you, have never ceased to love you since love sprang in my bosom for you. I had all unwittingly compromised Lady Edith. Thinking you did not care for me, I was in honor bound to ask her to be my wife; and then when the truth of her birth broke upon me, the chains which I would have sundered were bound more closely round me."

"I know, Clive," she said. "Do not let us think of her, of anything but our love. Are you in pain, dearest? I fear, I fear they have treated you cruelly."

He heard the sobs she tried to stifle and he answered earnestly: "I am in no pain whatever. If they got at me, I gave them as good as they gave. Why didn't I kill them when I had the chance? Fool again!"

"No; you would not do that, Clive," she said. "You could not." There was a pause, then she said: "Will it be long?"

He answered her in the spirit worthy of her. "Not long, darling. It is a spring tide and rising quickly."

"Yes; I can feel it rising," she said very quietly. "We shall float out to the river, I suppose. Perhaps we shall be near each other, quite close!"

"Oh, Mina, Mina!" broke from his parched lips. "Ah, don't!" she breathed. "Don't give way, Clive. I can bear anything but that. Let us face it together as you would face it if you were alone and were not grieving about me."

"There is no woman in the world like you, Mina," he said. "So brave, so noble, and yet so loving. Yes, you set me an example, and I'll try to follow it, dear. If I could only kiss you, if I could only touch your hand!" She sighed deeply. "That would make death sweet, dearest," she said.

"Hush! Some one is coming!"

Clive listened, but the heavy throbbing of his heart for a time prevented his hearing the sound; then he said: "Mina, be calm! I hear it. It is a woman's step. Mina, we are saved!" He heard her gasp, then a sigh of disappointment, despair, followed.

"It is the woman—the Hindu woman! Lady Edith's servant. She came to me— Oh, I wish I had told you! She's threatened me and you. It is she who has planned this with Koshki and helped them. She is coming to finish her work."

Clive ground his teeth. "Keep quite still, let her think you are dead, still in a faint," he whispered.

He, himself, closed his eyes by an almost superhuman effort, and kept his limbs motionless. It was Sara. She came slowly, walking something like a cat or a leopard over the rotting timber and the slimy stones.

She lifted the lantern which, in their haste, the scoundrels had left behind them, and approaching Mina bent and examined her. Clive watched her with a turmoil of emotions which his poor pen cannot set down. He saw her take an Indian knife from under the folds of her long cloak, and raise it; and an actually physical sickness assailed him.

The knife was poised for a moment or two; then, as if satisfied that her victim was dead, and, probably reflecting that the stab would be not only unnecessary but risky, she replaced the knife in her girdle and went over to Clive. His pulse was so faint, his appearance so like that of death, that it was little wonder she was so deceived. To Clive's unspeakable relief—not on his own account, but on Mina's, for he knew that she was watching and that she would not have been able to see the knife uplifted over him without crying out—Sara did not take out the knife. She seated herself on a bank beside him, and folding her arms looked down at him with glittering eyes in which shone the vindictive malice, the cruel gloating triumph which one might picture in the eyes of a fiend from the nethermost pit.

"Lie there, my pretty fool-pig," she crooned. "Sara has come to see you, to see that you sleep soundly, to sing you a little lullaby, the little son we Hindu women sing to the badmash—the thief, the traitor, when the man with the big sword is waiting for him. Yes; you are a thief; you stole my mistress's heart, the heart of my sunshine, my lily-flower; and you betrayed her for that trash there. Poor little fool! Sara warned her; but she would not hearken, would not take heed. And so she lies there like dead carrion on the banks of the sacred Ganges. And in a little time the river will wash her away with all the other dirt. And you, too, will go with her, my pretty sahib. I wish you weren't dead!"

She kicked him with her foot, and laughed with an evil gret.

"I'd like you to hear, to see, how Sara has avenged the child of her bosom. The pigs have done their work too well; they should have kept just enough life in you to give Sara the joy of seeing you die! Never mind, fool-man; she can watch you—watch you drifting away down the dark river. And she will not have to wait long," she added, as she drew her robe away from the rising tide and shifted higher up.

Clive kept his teeth clenched, drove back the cry that threatened to burst from him; for he knew that Mina heard every word the woman uttered in her mad and savage hate, and the knowledge added to his anguish. If he could be free for only one moment—to save Mina first, and then to deal out the justice of an outraged Heaven to this pitiless fiend in woman form!

Sara was silent for a time—it seemed years to the two victims—and the water rose higher, rapidly now. Presently Sara, whose eyes had been wandering from the dark river to the two bound figures, began to laugh, mockingly, triumphantly.

"It comes, it comes!" she crooned. "It comes to do Sara's bidding, to complete her vengeance. Welcome good river! Sara will help you!"

She picked her way to Mina and, placing her skinny hand on the girl's shoulder, pushed her into the tide. She would have heard the deep sob that broke from Mina's lips, but as her victim floated Sara uttered a shrill laugh. Then she went back to Clive. He would have spoken then, would have essayed prayers, entreaties—for Mina's life, but the counterfeit of a swoon had passed into reality and he was unconscious.

Five minutes—less—after Clive had dashed off, Tibby realized the mistake he had made, the awful mistake, in not giving her the address of the place to which he had gone. With a cry she rushed out of the room and down the stairs. But Clive had started, and the boys, who still hung about, could give her no information and only jeered at her distress. She ran out into the street in search of a policeman then; not finding one, and scarcely knowing what she was doing, she ran back to the house. She saw she heard some one coming up the stairs two at a time, the door was flung open and Quilton entered.

Though he had come so hurriedly, he was outwardly quite calm and he spoke even more slowly and impassively than usual.

"Am I in time, Tibby? Ah, apparently not!" As Tibby flung herself upon him crying: "She's gone! Mina is lost—carried away! And he has followed her. And I don't know where they are. I'm wuss that a wretched idiot—let 'm go without askin' 'm! Oh, they'll be murdered!"

He took her by the shoulders and shook her none too gently; it was the best thing he could have done, for soothing words and phrases would have been lost on Tibby in her frantic condition.

"Hold up! Pull yourself together, Tibby," he said. "You've got a chance of redeeming your character for shrewdness, my child, girl—whatever you are. You and I have got to keep our heads straight. I guessed she had gone, I knew he'd followed her, when they told me at my place that you had been to his rooms yelling at him like a wildcat. You don't know where they've gone? That's bad! But there's just a chance for us. I saw Koshki early in the evening; he was in a little frowsy pub he and some gentlemen of his kindney. I watched him go out with two individuals it would be a gross flattery to call men. They went eastward. And that's where Mina is, and Clive Harvey, too. Now, we'll go round to that pub, Tibby, and see whether we can hear anything of the gentry. Go and put your head under that tap, while I load this revolver which I caught up out of a drawer as I was leaving."

Tibby set her teeth, tore off her grotesque hat, turned on the tap over the sink, and held her head under the cold stream of water.

"You've got some sense, Mr. Quilton," she said, as she came up gasping and began to scrub her face and head with a jack-towel. "That's put me stride. And now if you've got one of those barkers for me—" Quilton shook his head as he slipped the revolver in his pocket. "One's enough, Tibby," he said. "There's six chambers, and I've got an awkward knack of never missing. Come on! I demonstrate my sense of your cuteness, you observe, Tibby, by requesting your company; and I beg you will not disappoint me by screaming or squealing or otherwise giving way to that universal curse of woman—the nerves."

She looked up at him, with her eyes flashing, her lips drawn straight.

"If there was time, I'd teach you to sauce me, you—you waxwork show,"

Stomach Acts Fine! No Indigestion, Gas, Heartburn, Acidity

"Pape's Diapepsin" fixes sick, sour, upset stomachs in five minutes.

You don't want a slow remedy when your stomach is bad—or an uncertain one—or a harmful one—your stomach is too valuable; you mustn't injure it with drastic drugs.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in giving relief; its harmlessness; its certain, unfailing action in regulating sick, sour, gassy stomachs. Its millions of cures in indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis and other stomach trouble has made it famous the world over.

Keep this perfect stomach doctor in your home—keep it handy—get a large fifty-cent case from any drug store and then if anyone should eat something which doesn't agree with them, if what they eat lays like lead, ferments and sours and forms gas; causes headache, dizziness and nausea; eructations of acid and undigested food—remember as soon as Pape's Diapepsin comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. Its promptness, certainty and ease in overcoming the worst stomach disorders is a revelation to those who try it.

she panted. "But you just save Mina and Mr. Clive and I'll let you off."

He nodded, and they went quickly down-stairs, but more slowly when they reached the street, quickening their pace again as they left the Rents behind them. Quilton led the way down a hideous alley, rich with the ripe fruit of the galleons, and threading their way through the groups of drunken men and frowsy women, they reached a low-browed, villainous public. As they did so, and Quilton peered through the half-open doorway, Tibby touched his arm. A dirty, disreputable-looking four-wheeler had drawn up a few yards away, and two men got out. One was Koshki, his battered face half-hidden by a blood-stained bandage.

They lifted out a third man, who appeared to dead or unconscious, and carried him as quickly as they could, for Koshki staggered as if he were too weak with the loss of blood, into the public house. Quilton, who had drawn Tibby aside into the dark and evil shadows, ran to the cab and giving the man a sovereign, told him to wait. Then he went back to Tibby. "There's some dangerous work before us, Tibby," he whispered impressively. "Will you go back?"

For answer she gave him a glance of furious scorn, and he nodded. The potman, a burly ruffian, whose nightly task it was to flog out the majority of the customers, came out of the vile public house to air himself, and Quilton went up to him and said, quite softly:

"Ask Mr. Koshki to step out to speak to one of the brotherhood, will you?"

The man glared at him ferociously, but Quilton made a sign; the man started and stared, muttered something, and went in. Koshki came out almost immediately. At sight of Quilton he drew back with an oath. Quilton, who had his right hand in his jacket pocket, smiled.

"I've got you covered, Koshki," he said, "and, by God, I'll shoot you like a dog if you offer to go back." He stepped up to him and whispered in his ear, and as Koshki started and swore again, Quilton said almost sweetly: "Oh, yes; I know all about that affair. It was murder; and I'll hang if you don't do what I want. Come this way; we are attracting too much attention for a modest man."

"As he spoke, he took his hand out of his pocket, as if he were sure of his man, and Koshki followed. When they reached the cab, Quilton said quite pleasantly:

"Tell the man to drive us where they are. The horse is quite fresh, I see— Who's this?" as Koshki stared at Tibby. "The sister. Yes; she is going with us. Sharp, now! I'm an impatient man, though you wouldn't think it, and I've an itch on me to shoot you, which is almost irresistible. See!"

The Eastern Trust Company.

A few reasons why an estate can be better administered by the Eastern Trust Company than by a personal executor or administrator:—

1. The Company affords the estate absolute security; it has a paid-up capital of $931,000.00, and a reserve fund of $229,300.00.
2. It has a long experience in the work of administering estates; it is incorporated for this business of acting as a trustee, and, unlike many other trust companies, it does no other.
3. Its existence is perpetual. Your estate, in the event of the death of a personal executor or administrator, must look around for a substitute, and the work of administration is impeded during that time, and the new executor is unfamiliar with the policy of his predecessor, and confusion results. This company's existence is perpetual, and there is a continuity of policy in its administration that the death of its officers does not break.
4. It possesses the confidence of governments, universities and prominent charities, and administers their funds.
5. A number of other advantages which will appear in due course.

From the Trenches.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—I enclose herewith some extracts from my son's letters received from France recently. He had just come through all the fighting and looks and when writing was resting in billets. His letters were written upon paper captured from the German trenches and made a much prized souvenir.

On Oct. 30th I received a cable to say he had spent 12 days in the trenches and was back again. He has found a friend, yes, another father, in the person of the European manager of the C. P. R. Mr. Brown, London, who sends me all Edgar's field postals and letters to him and cables after the battles when he hears from him.

Edgar is a Lieutenant in the London Rifles Brigade, 8th Battalion. If you care to publish those extracts you may do so.

Yours very truly,
W. F. PENNEY.

Carbonear, Nov. 3, 1915.

EXTRACTS.

Somewhere in France.

Oct. 2, '15.

You have already heard how I fared in the recent battles and I shall endeavour to have you hear each week by the same means (cables from the European manager of the C. P. R., Mr. Brown). But the missing of a week-end need not worry you, as if I am foolish enough to stop a German bullet you will hear of it more quickly than anything else. Also, the people out here have the habit of stopping all mails when they fancy such a thing will be of military advantage, and from my own experience I believe it necessary. Now, I left a small mining village before the big fight and marched to another ruined village somewhere near the trenches. We were delayed practically all night by transports which crowded all the roads, and we eventually took our position about 2.30 a.m. We were now within half a mile of the Boches, and everything seemed as cheerful and peaceful as if I were home trying to make myself comfortable in the cellar or in one of the dog drains. The show was begun at 4 a.m. but was delayed until 6. Then whiz, bang! and heavy stuff seemed to fall near us. However, we weathered the stuff O.K. and moved up a bit nearer, as we were in support. Here we remained for the rest of the day and at night we moved across to the original first line of the German trenches. Then I managed to capture this paper. I am now writing upon, and we were now as comfortable as bugs in a rug. The remainder of the night and next day we merely sat tight and improved our firing positions in case of an attack. That night and the succeeding night we did outpost duty on a large pile of slack coal on our right. Here we had nothing at all exciting and it was indeed bitterly cold, colder in fact than one would realize from such a country as France. The next night we moved up into the second German trench, which here is our particular front line. Here of course were no dugouts or shelters and it simply poured from the heavens. At the beginning of the scrap I lost my water-proof, and I now miss it. However, one of the chaps managed to raise one from Heaven knows where and I paraded the trench until morning. After three days and two nights in this rotten position we were relieved and nearly shouted for joy, as we had tackled the main position for the British Army and had had a rotten time. We won the thanks of Sir John French and are now ready for another scrap.

When relieved we moved back to a ruined village, one of the many one finds around in the war zone, and here we remained until the next day. From these places the inhabitants have entirely departed and nobody remains but swarms of troops of all kinds. We had a billet in an imposing shack which some loquacious bird had named "Vermin Villa." It was situated in "Quality Street" and proved quite welcome in spite of the fact that our bed was wet, the floor a hopeless litter, the doors, windows and some of the walls missing; but we were tired. I slept like a top and had my boots off for the first time in 8 days. The next day we started to march and at 7.30 we reached this spot, and except that 4 am here and there are troops galore around, we would not know that a war was on. I have now slept for two nights upon a real bed and hope for the same luxury to-night, and perhaps a fourth. You must arrange for me to have at the rate of two pairs of socks a week, and have them thick and loose. As for anything else, it is better not to try and get them for me. I know you are worrying, but don't. It is to keep away from you all what I have seen over here that I am fighting. It is because it was my duty to come that I voluntarily came over, and of one thing you can rest assured "I had rather die in France than stay at home and be always harassed with the thought that someone else had to come and fight for me, and that another fellow fought for all I hold dear." I could not feel happy at work or having a good time while a "man's work" was being done for me, and judging from what I have seen already, many of the loafers will be needed before this thing is through and thoroughly done.

Short evening dresses are apt to have the odd narrow sash trains.

"The Little Gray Mother."

There's a little grey mother who waits all alone
In a chill dreary spot that was once a Home Sweet Home,
While Generals are saying "this war must be won,"
She's sadly praying "please send back my son."

"When the battles are over and peace once more is made,
When the cost of the lost will be known,
Will Kings give a thought to the hearshes they've brought
To that little grey mother alone."

Hear Mr. Delmar sing "The Little Gray Mother" at the Crescent Picture Palace to-day. "The New Magdalen," Wilkie Collins' great story, will be shown with other feature pictures; don't miss the Crescent Show to-day, it's a great one.

AT THE R. C. CATHEDRAL.—At the R. C. Cathedral last night Rev. Fr. Ryan preached an impressive and instructive sermon from the Gospel of the day. Rev. Fr. Carter imparted Benediction.

Buried With Naval Honors.

The funeral of the late Timothy O'Sullivan, stoker of the Royal Navy, took place from H.M.S. Calypso yesterday afternoon and was largely attended. The body, which was enclosed in a beautiful casket prepared by Undertaker Carroll, was drawn on a gun carriage by a squad of reservists, under Petty Officer Collier, and the funeral procession was made up of a firing party from H.M.S. Calypso, which preceded the hearse, while following were the C.C.C. band, a squad of reservists and shipmates of the deceased. A squad of volunteers under Sergt. Williamson, and detachments from the Catholic Cadet Corps and Legion of Frontiersmen. At the R. C. Cathedral the prayers for the dead were recited by Rev. Fr. Ryan, and interment took place at Mount Carmel Cemetery. As the body was lowered in the grave Bugler Madden of the C.C.C. sounded the Last Post, and three volleys were fired by a party of reservists.

Ladies' Costumes Fall---1915---Styles.

Was there ever a more fickle lady than Dame Fashion? She is always making changes, and this season has surely surpassed herself.

There is a more decided change in this Fall's styles than has been known for many seasons. While materials are similar, Serges, Gabardines, Tweeds, Cord, etc., the designs are absolutely unlike any of their predecessors. Coats are of many styles, chiefly a la militaire, with high collars, snug-fitting sleeves, and the entire coat in some instances is beautifully braided. Skirts are much fuller, both pleated and gored, and are worn very short.

As descriptions are quite impossible, we can only say that we carry the largest and smartest line of Ladies' Costumes in the city.

MONDAY, November 8, 1915.

The Suppression of the "Globe."

The London evening newspaper, the Globe, which has been suppressed by the British authorities, is said in the message to be controlled by Mr. Cecil Harmsworth. This is somewhat singular as the latter has been a Liberal member of Parliament and a supporter of Prime Minister Asquith. He had a distinguished scholastic career at Trinity College, Dublin, and contested Drottwich in 1900 and N. E. Lanchester in 1901. He was elected as Liberal M. P. for Drottwich in 1906, and represented this constituency until 1910. In 1911 he was elected as Liberal member for South Bedford, and became Private Parliamentary Secretary to Mr. Rusciman, the President of the Board of Agriculture in the Asquith Liberal Ministry, and afterward in 1914 President of the Board of Trade.

It will be seen from this that Mr. Cecil Harmsworth's political associations are such that it would be little expected that a newspaper controlled by him should become such an assailant of the military policy of the Asquith Government as would lead to its suppression. We believe, however, that he ceased to hold this minor parliamentary office when the Coalition Government was formed. The irony of the situation is that the formation of the Coalition Government was effected after a prolonged agitation in the Times and Daily Mail, which are controlled by Lord Northcliffe, his eldest brother, whose political leanings are Conservative. Lord Rotheme, another brother, is a strong Liberal, who is said to have used all the influence he could bring to bear on his brother, Lord Northcliffe, to induce him to modify the hostility he has shown to the Coalition Ministry.

Hot Water and Happiness.

Hot baths are necessary for health, in summer as in winter. But in households where hot water supply is dependent on the kitchen range, a hot bath cannot be secured during the summer months without turning the kitchen and its neighbourhood into a miniature inferno.

No wonder, then, that cook complains bitterly when nurse demands to have the fire made up, and that relations between the members of the household staff reveal a state of strain extending almost to breaking point.

It is here that the gas industry steps in to keep peace by means of its water-heating inventions, all of any of which, being entirely independent of the coal range, can give unlimited hot water at any moment without causing the least inconvenience.

Of all the boons and blessings that the twentieth century brain has devised, the gas water-heater is by no means the least.

Days Past—311 To Come—53
JOHN MILTON died 1674, aged 66, England's greatest epic poet. Milton's mind combined all the elements of power with every attribute of beauty and benignity. In his youth he was remarkable for his beauty. His eyes even in their darkness were clear, bright, and expressive, with no appearance of blindness. His later years were employed in the composition of Paradise Lost and Paradise Regained. A tomb was erected to his memory in Westminster Abbey in 1737.

LORD LYTTON (Owen Meredith) born 1831. English poet and statesman, was the son of Lord Lytton, the famous novelist. His works were published mostly under the name of "Owen Meredith."

LORD ROTHSCHILD born 1840. The family of Rothschild was founded in 1803 when they lent a great sum of money to the Danish Government and thus started the business of international financiers.

Amusements.

THE CLOSING CHAPTER THE "TREY O' HEARTS."
Don't miss the Nickel Theatre today as the final picture of "The Trey O'Hearts" will be shown. The closing chapter is by far the most exciting of the whole story and it will delight all. How will it end? Many think Allan and Rose will marry; others that Judith and the sailor boy will be united in matrimony. The secret will be disclosed at the Nickel today. The other subjects for today are also the best. "In the Switch Tower" is a powerful railroad drama. The Selig players present a charming social dramatic offering in two parts entitled: "The Poetic Justice of Omar Khan." This is a new style and is certain to please. "Cupid's Column" is the comedy, in which Sidney Drew hands out the fun in his usual clever manner. "Exploits of Elaine" are to begin this week. This is the best serial ever given by the Nickel and patrons are assured something good. Arnold Daly is seen in his best character. Every one should attend the Nickel today.

BRITISH THEATRE.

This popular house continues to afford pleasure and entertainment to its many patrons. The programme to-night will be a very varied one and sure to please, as Mr. C. E. rendering of the "Four Leaf Clover" will be a strong feature in itself. Philip Longera in the two-part "Thanhous" or "The Varsity Rays" portrays a lively story of college life. The Elixir of Love is presented by a genuine comedy artist. Then there is the two-reel subject of absorbing interest from the facile pen of Lucille Chatterton, entitled The tragedy of the Orient, in which the life and customs of the Japanese are strikingly shown. A very interesting Indian drama in two parts "The Cheyennes love for the Sioux" completes the programme of six reels which is interesting and various enough to please the most fastidious and as the programme this popular house a large share of public patronage.

CARROL AND ELLOR GREAT IRISH COMEDY ARTISTS.

To-night at Rossley's the famous Carroll and Ellor, Irish singing, dancing and sketch artists will appear. This wonderful couple have the most gorgeous wardrobe in the business. Mr. and Mrs. Rossley worked years ago in Europe with those clever performers and for a long time Mr. Rossley has tried to secure them. They are no new comers in the business but like the Rossleys have been through the theatrical mill. Their sketches will be a source of real pleasure while for costumes nothing like them has ever been seen before in this city. The ladies must all see these people. They will give lots of changes of act, every act different. Their first act is "The Troubles of Mrs. Dooley." You will forget your troubles in Mrs. Dooley's Troubles. The full show on the second house will be given same as the first to enable the store people to enjoy a good laugh before they go home after a long day. The pictures are the finest ever shown, every one a feature.

Here and There.

REACHED LAMALINE.—The schr. A. M. Fox, arrived at Lamaline to-day from Cadiz with a cargo of salt.

FOREIGN MAIL ARRIVES.—An accommodation train from Port aux Basques with over 70 packages of foreign mail arrived in the city at 11 a.m. to-day.

DISEASE INCREASING.—A boy of Circular Road was reported at the Health Office this morning to be suffering from diphtheria. This disease seems to be on the increase in the city.

INTERESTING LECTURE.—There was a crowded audience at the Grenfell Hall last evening to hear Mr. W. H. Jones lecture on "Scenes in Many Lands." For upwards of an hour he brought his listeners through all the European countries and Egypt. The discourse, which was nicely illustrated, proved very interesting.

The S. A. Corps of St. John's will unite at No. 2 Corps, Livingstone Street, on Monday, Nov. 8th, at 8 p.m., for a great Salvation Meeting, led by Colonel Smeeton, accompanied by our new leaders, Colonel and Mrs. Otway. All are cordially invited.—nov8,1i

Police Court.

(Before Mr. Morris, K.C.)
One drunk was let go without fine. A fisherman of Broad Cove, who was arrested Saturday night, was charged with (1) drunk and disorderly conduct, and (2) assaulting and wounding a man named Neville. He was remanded for 8 days, though later was released on $100 bond to appear when called upon.

Two undesirables next presented themselves. One is a cripple and a degenerate of the worst type. He got an order from the court to quarter himself at the Lakeside Inn for the next four months.

The other undesirable is a notorious eyesore to the police and has the habit of terrorizing his relatives. He was fined $20 or 10 days in jail. He went down.

An assault case was withdrawn. A 12-year-old girl was summoned for throwing a bucket of water over a woman. The defendant swore that the plaintiff called her an improper name. The Judge did not uphold her plea and fined her $2 or 5 days.

Reids' Boats.

The Argyle is due at Placentia this afternoon from the Red Island route. The Clyde arrived at Lewisporte at 2.30 a.m. to-day.

The Dundee sailed from Port Blandford at 9.15 a.m. to-day.

The Ethie arrived at Clarendville at 6.30 a.m. yesterday, sailed again at 9.15 a.m. to-day.

The Glencoe leaves Port aux Basques this afternoon.

The Home left Humbermouth at 6.15 a.m. yesterday.

The Kyle leaves Port aux Basques for North Sydney to-night.

The Meigle is at Port aux Basques.

The Sagona sails for Labrador port on Thursday next.

PIT PROF. CARGO.—The S.S. Carraford China left Lewisporte this morning for Barry, England, with 1,608 cords of pit props, and the S. S. Prina left Clarendville for Glasgow with a load of pit props.

LAST TRIP NORTH.—The sailing of the S.S. Sagona scheduled to sail for Labrador ports at 6 o'clock this evening has been postponed until 10 o'clock on Thursday morning next. This will be the Sagona's last trip north for the season, and she will go as far north as Holton.

S.S. OTHAR DISABLED.—Mr. H. W. McMurrer, Deputy Minister of Customs, received word to-day stating that the s.s. Othar, which plies in Conception Bay ports, was at the public wharf at Cupids with a hole in her side, seven inches under the water line opposite the bunkers. No further information was received.

FOGOTA BACK.—The S.S. Fogota, Capt. Dalton, arrived in port from the Fogota mail service yesterday morning, bringing a full freight and the following passengers in saloon:—Rev. J. W. Parsons, Rev. G. Wilkinson, T. A. Hall, J. Critch, James Brown, D. Cohen, Edward Emberly, M. Gray, D. Parsons, S. C. Goodyear, Mrs. Job Kean, Miss S. Wright, Master Wright and 48 in steerage.

The steamers Bonaventure, Bellaventure and Adventure are now due from Sydney with cargoes of coal. The Bellaventure and Adventure are returning from Hudson Bay, having finished their season's work in that region. Immediately on arrival the work of unloading them will be carried on with them utmost despatch, as they will be examined by the Russian representatives who are now negotiating for the purchase of each ship.

THE SUPPRESSION OF THE GLOBE.

LONDON, Nov. 7th. The printing plant of the London Globe together with copies issued yesterday and to-day were seized by the police this afternoon. The authorities acted presumably because the article appearing in the Globe to-day contained a bitter attack on Lord Haldane, and declared Kitchener had offered his resignation which was declined. The Globe said the appointment of Lord Haldane to succeed Lord Kitchener would jeopardize the life of the Government. The Globe has been chiefly noted for its violent attack on public men during the administration of the Liberal Government. It has been one of the Government's bitterest opponents and since the war attacked virtually all members of the Government. On Friday it bitterly attacked Sir Frederick E. Smith, the new Attorney-General, who it had heretofore supported, and who the evening before had defended Premier Asquith against what he described as discreditable personal attacks. The Globe also published a report of the resignation of Lord Kitchener, this being based chiefly on the fact that the War Secretary had been received in audience by the King on Thursday night and a brief announcement in the morning papers that a change of the utmost importance was about to take place in the conduct of the war. The Globe is edited by Charles Palmer who for many years was its parliamentary reporter. The announcement that Lord Kitchener was to visit the East did not come as a surprise, it was generally believed when it became known he was about to undertake a mission to the Balkans, to be his destination for there is no man in the British Empire better equipped with knowledge of the Near Eastern affairs, military and political, than he. It is thought his activities will not be confined to this theatre of war however, but that he will visit Egypt, inspect the defenses of the Suez Canal against a possible German or Turkish attack, and Mesopotamia where a British expedition is doing bigger things than was expected of it, and the Dardanelles where steps are being taken to push operations to a conclusion. Besides this it is understood his duties will include efforts to co-ordinate the work of the general staff of the Allied armies. It is considered impossible for Premier Asquith to hold both offices of Prime Minister and Minister of War for any length of time. Earl Derby, director of recruiting, has been mentioned as a possible incumbent during Earl Kitchener's absence.

BLEEDING GERMANY WHITE.

NEW YORK, To-Day. Germany's enormous losses in fighting chiefly on the Russian front toward the close of September, losses since doubled, if not trebled, by the offensive on the western front, and in the campaign against Serbia, are the subject of comment in a letter published yesterday from Horace Green, special correspondent of the Evening Post, written from Berlin Oct. 3. Green writes to-day: Germany is like a feverish patient to whom the leech has been applied and whose blood has been drained. I worked for some time trying to get the proper figures of this blood-letting; I find the answer in walls and corridors and the written files of the War Office. German casualties for a single week ending Oct. 1st were 61,955; in other words, 61,955 German citizens, or more than 8,560 a day had been killed, wounded or taken prisoners during the last seven days of Russian warfare. Since it takes a week or more to compile reports from the front, these figures can have no connection with the great fight of this week along the western front, where with the renewed English and French offensive it is said that the losses were three times greater than at any similar period of the war.

St. Pierre Bulletin.

ST. PIERRE, Nov. 7. An official report from the Serbian Legation, Paris, dated midnight, Nov. 6th, says: Serbian troops, with the help of French infantry and British cavalry, have secured a great victory over the Bulgarians at Iver. The Bulgarians were completely mown down and are retreating in disorder. Bulgarian losses up to now are estimated at 100,000. Recruiting has taken another spurt in England, and if it continues at the same rate there will be less talk of conscription. The murder of Miss Cavell, it is reported, has added ten thousand to the British army.

Letter From the Front.

Received by W. C. Baird, Nagle's Hill, October 5th, 1915. Dear Parents, Just a few lines to let you know that I am well and in the best of health, hoping that you are the same. I haven't much news to tell you, because we are not allowed to tell much, and when a fellow cannot say much it's very hard to write letters. Everything is alive out here. Let me spare me any life, after the war is over and I get back home, I will have lots of news to tell you. I haven't got the cakes or stuff you sent me yet. It would be all right if I had some of it. I haven't received a letter from you for a long time. I received one from Lucy and two from Olive. I wrote uncle Bob some time ago, but no answer to either. I wrote where we were in Cairo, Egypt. I suppose you got them. Olive told me on her letter that she was sending a lot of things, but I never got anything since I left. I think I have told you all for this time. I will write again soon. Remember me to all. From your loving son, HERBERT BAIRD.

PUNCH'S APPEAL FOR THE RED CROSS.

Ye that have gentle hearts and fair To succor men in need, There is no voice so kindly in vain, With such a cause to plead— The cause of those that in your care, Who know the debt to honor due, Confide the wounds they proudly wear The wounds they took for you.

Out of the shock of shattering spears, Of screaming shell and shard, Snatch from the smoke that blinds and scars, They came with bodies scarred, And count the hours that idly toll, Restless until their hurts be healed, And they may fare, made strong and whole, To face another field.

And yonder, where the battle's waves Broke yesterday overhead, Where now the swift and shallow graves Cover our English dead: Think how your sisters play their part Who, in the face of a holy shrine, Tender of hand and brave of heart, Under the Red Cross sign.

Ah! by that symbol worshipped still, Of life-blood sacrificed, That lonely Cross on Calvary's hill, Red with the wounds of Christ; By that free gift to none denied, Let pity pierce you like a sword, And love go out to open wide— The gate of life restored.

STEEL HELMETS FOR BRITISH TROOPS ON BATTLE FRONT.

LONDON, Nov. 1.—On some parts of the Flanders battlefield the British army authorities have begun serving out to the men in the fire trenches steel helmets similar to those introduced by the French. The British helmet is perfectly plain and not decorated like the French, which has a grenade crest and a rigid crown. The British helmet exactly resembles a pudding basin. It is lined with soft leather and, while light, it is very warm. The men are said to be delighted with the new equipment, because of the added sense of security against splinters, bullets and the bomb fragments. One report says that in a small section of trenches, thirty men were saved from serious head wounds in the first four days of the experiment. The helmet lends a bizarre air to the troops, who wear it over the Balaklava wool helmet, giving them the appearance of Crusaders.

BERNSTORFF AND LANSING CONFERENCE.

Washington, Nov. 2.—Count von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, and Secretary Lansing had their first conversation to-day since the settlement of the Arabic case and took under consideration the questions growing out of the sinking of the Lusitania last May, with the loss of more than 100 American lives. The plan of reaching an agreement without the exchange of formal notes, but by informal conversations, worked so well in the handling of the Arabic case that it is now to be followed in an endeavor to solve the Lusitania problem. To-day's conversation was only an approach to the various issues involved in the controversy, and it was indicated that it would take some time to reach a common ground for basis for settlement.

There is no disposition at the State Department to hasten a settlement, but for a full and frank exchange of views. Although to-day was but the first of what probably will be a long series of parleys on the subject, there was a noticeable feeling of confidence that an agreement, ultimately would be reached, and that there would be no new crisis over the situation.

CONFERENCE AT LUCERNE.

Zurich, Switzerland, Nov. 2.—That official conference looking toward peace will be held to-day at Lucerne, it is asserted positively by several Swiss newspapers to-day despite all inspired denials. Prince Von Buelow, former German Chancellor, it was declared would be one of the diplomats present. The representatives of two other belligerent powers were reported to have arrived at Geneva, but it was impossible to confirm the rumor.

Only on Surface of Conspiracy, Official States

New York, Oct. 28.—That in the arrest of Robert Fay, Walter Scholz, Max Drehtung, Paul Daech and Doctor Herbert Klenzie, for alleged conspiracy to blow up trans-Atlantic munition ships the United States Government has dipped into only "the froth of the whole matter," was a statement made to the United States press to-day by a high Government official.

The arrest of the five men is the crystallization of several months' work by a "neutrality squad" of eighty-five picked men from the office of the collector of the port of New York, it was said. Under the direction of George Lamb, this squad has combed the water front, places where sea-faring men gather, and has collected a vast amount of information from which the Secret Service department was enabled to make the arrests.

"But," the official was asked, "why did the Government show its hand so early? Why did it not allow the men to go further and reveal the organization with various plots?"

"Because," was the reply "these men were getting so dangerous we could not take any more chances. Here they were making their tests out in the open. Fay himself has admitted that he attached one of his marine mines to a vessel for experimental purposes.

"Any day he might have attached one for other than experimental purposes. For weeks we watched, waiting, and hoped he would lead to the head, but he did not, and at last we had no other course than to arrest Fay and his accomplices before they blew up factories and ships."

That there is a fountain head to the alleged plot which has apparently unlimited resources is the belief of Federal officials. It was pointed out that Fay in his operations alone has expended approximately $30,000, aside from what his lieutenants have spent. This, it was declared, could hardly be the work of individual enterprise.

It was toward the fountain of ready cash and information that the Government investigators turned their efforts to-day.

Indictments against some of the ringleaders in the matter may be returned before November 4, according to H. Snowdon Marshall, United States Attorney, to-day. "The Government does not believe," said Mr. Marshall, "that it has arrested the biggest men in the conspiracy. Other arrests are likely."

That not only was Fay's efforts to be directed against outbound vessels, but also against the railroad which carried munitions to the seaboard was indicated to-day by the Lieutenant's further admissions.

May Resort to Arbitration.

In Connection With the Seizure of the American Steamer Hocking.

Washington, Nov. 2.—Seizure of the American steamship Hocking by a British cruiser off the Atlantic coast has brought to issue a question on which the positions of the United States and the Entente Allies are so far apart that some officials here believe arbitration ultimately will have to be resorted to for settlement.

Secretary of State Lansing cabled Ambassador Page at London to-day to secure from the British Government an explanation of the facts connected with the seizure of the Hocking and the reasons therefor. When this information is forthcoming the State Department probably will protest immediately and demand the surrender of the ship. It is fully expected that following its usual course the British Foreign Office will claim the privilege of sending the Hocking to a prize court, and as the United States Government, where no question of human life was concerned, usually has consented, it is likely that no objection will be made to this procedure, though all rights will be reserved.

The British War Office has accepted the tender of Canadian packers for $2,250,000 pounds of canned beef.

Sir F. Bridge's Popular Song.

London, September 30. (By mail. — A year ago the whole British army marched to battle singing the Irish song, "It's a Long Way to Tipperary," the popularity of which has never waned. The recruiting bands of London still play it every day as they march through the streets. Now, a year later, the bands have taken up another new Irish song, "Michael O'Leary," by Frederick Bridge, which has been arranged by Percy E. Fletcher or as a march, entitled "The V. C. March," with a suggestion of that old inspiring Irish air, "The Minstrel Boy" thrown in.

"It is splendid," said King George, "and I will give it to my daughter to play over for me." This was at the close of a great Red Cross concert in the Albert Hall, when Sir Frederick presented to the King a copy of the song, which had just been sung for the first time in London by Ben Davis, famous Welsh tenor, amid tremendous enthusiasm.

The words of the song were composed by a well-known Irish author, John McGrath. It opens with a line from the well-known Irish-American poem, "The Fighting Race," and the first verse runs:

"Kelly and Burke and Shea, Flanagan, Doolin and Geary, Very good men in their day— But nothing to Michael O'Leary There was the black barricade, Germans all fixed with their rifles, Shells, and the grim cannonade; 'Tut!' says O'Leary, 'they're trifles' There is the barricade grim. Manned by the truculent German. What is the business of him. O'Leary?—to kill all the vermin! Forward, O'Leary! they're there; Don't you forget the old shelling! Mountains of Cork may be bare. Nothing but furze and good feeling, Yet you raise boys that are men Out on those mountains of Heather."

Up from the hill and the glen, Old Inchangeel and gather. Refrain: Michael O'Leary! they cry. Here's to the health of our brother; Raise his fame up to the sky. And the fame of his father and mother!

Sir Frederick Bridge, principal organist at Westminster Cathedral and composer of oratorios and cantatas, never before wrote a song of this character, but, captivated by the words and inspired by the bravery of the young Irish guardsman, he wrote this.

Fouler Than We Knew

No more stirring and powerful analysis of the Cavell case has been made than that by Jas. M. Beck which appears in the Times Sunday Magazine to-day. But its chief value is that, despite the emphasis it lays on the phase of the case recognized everywhere as most important—the horror of killing a woman for an admitted offense which fell short of espionage or high treason—it searches keenly into phases hitherto not so well recognized. The secret trial, concerning which we have only the testimony of Miss Cavell's judges, has left the world in ignorance of all they did not choose to tell us. This eminent lawyer examines what clues and shreds of evidence we have, holds the microscope over the contradictory and inadequate attempts of Germany at justification, and at the end there is a pale ray of light into that blackness which leaves the reader with the feeling that the judicial murder of Edith Cavell was even a grimmer deed than the world yet knows. —New York Times.

A Different Auto Ride.

By RUTH CAMERON.

"I had the loveliest auto ride last week," a friend of mine said to me recently. "So?" I inquired. "Where did you go?" She named a place only fifteen miles away. "I thought you had been there a good many times." "Not as I went last week." "What was the difference? The machine?" It was the driver that made it different. She laughed. "No, the driver. My dear, except through the outskirts of the city, where it isn't pretty, I don't believe we went more than fifteen miles an hour, once."

"It was Wilhelmina's car," she went on. "You know I've driven a great deal with various friends, but I never went with her before, and it was a revelation of how much pleasure you can get out of a drive, if you don't quite want to rush every minute."

"We went quite swiftly through the city, but the minute we got out on those lovely country roads we slowed down and enjoyed it. You wonder why I should enjoy a drive that I must have taken so many times. My dear, it didn't seem like the same road; it all looked so different when I really had a chance to see it. There's a lovely little house that's always just a white flash when we rush past it. Wilhelmina went particularly slow there because she knows I'm interested in houses like that, and I got several ideas for my little house of dreams."

They Actually Stopped The Car. "Then at a certain bend in the road there is as lovely a view as I ever saw at home or abroad. I always knew it was attractive, but I never had the faintest idea how much so before, because I've never had more than a 20 mile-an-hour glimpse of it. And what do you think, Wilhelmina actually stopped the car there! She says they always do, and just let the peace and beauty of it sink in."

"Most people have a perfect horror of stopping anywhere except at an inn or tea-room. They seem to think you are out to see how much happiness you can get, and if anyone in the machine wants to stop, she stops willingly. We stopped twice—once to look at a house someone was interested in, and once to pick some flowers. Just think of it!"

So Slow They Could Get The Franchise. "And, my dear, the most remarkable thing of all, we went so slowly that we could actually get the franchises. You know when you walk you often get the odors of the woods and fields, but you never do in a machine, or if you do they're gone before you can place them. There was the smell of ripe grapes, and the smell of a bonfire and the cidery smell of over-ripe apples. I loved it."

"My dear," she came to a sudden conscience-stricken pause, "how I have been running on! Perhaps you love to rush, and think I'm a crank. Do you?"

"Well," I answered in all truthfulness, "I'll tell you what I've been wishing, and you may judge for yourself."

"What?"

"That I knew Wilhelmina well enough to ask her to take me to ride some day."

CAPT. F. R. DESJARDIN, Schr. "Storke," St. Andre, Kamouraska.

Lieut. H. Rendell. From letters recently received in the city we learn that Lieut. H. Rendell, reported wounded amongst the early casualties received from the Dardanelles, was wounded on Sept. 27th. Lieut. Rendell was in charge of a party of men from a Worcester Regiment, having been called to replace a captain who had been killed by Turkish snipers while the party was acting as a covering party for a trench digging party. A lance-corporal of the Worcesters, who was beside Lieut. Rendell, was wounded at the same time.

Terrible Accident.

CHILD BURNED TO DEATH IN EAST END BY UPSETTING OF A LAMP.

No small amount of alarm was created in the East End of the city Saturday night when the news spread that a child had been burned to death and under exceedingly sad circumstances. Unhappily the report was only too true and the victim proved to be James, the ten months old baby boy of Mr. and Mrs. James Wilcox, of Hoylestown. The facts, as told a Telegram representative, are that about eight o'clock Mrs. Wilcox left her home in company with her sister-in-law, to go up town to make her usual week end purchases, leaving in the house her husband and two children, Frank, 8 years old, and the infant, the latter being in its cot. All three were in the kitchen. A lighted lamp was on the table and the cot nearby. Mr. Wilcox, an upright and industrious man, who had been working hard during the week and who had only knocked off an hour or so previously, felt very tired and lay down on the couch. Meanwhile, fearing danger, he removed the cot away from alongside the table, beside the couch and rocked the child to sleep. Soon he fell into a slumber himself, leaving his son Frank to mind the baby in case he would wake.

THE LAMP UPSET.

Unfortunately, and unmindful of the consequent danger, Frank transferred the cot and its occupant to where it was at first and in the course of a few minutes he lay down and in turn went off to sleep. It was then about 9 o'clock that the child awoke and put its little hand up, upon which the lamp was standing, and it is supposed gave it a pull. The result was that the lamp came off the table and right into the cot. Almost instantly the cot was a mass of flame, the blanket and other clothing that covered the child being so inflammable. The screams of the baby aroused the father, who was horrified with the sight he saw and who rushed to save his child. He lost no time in removing the burning clothes, but not before his dear one was burnt very badly. An alarm was given and several neighbours responded and those who entered the house and saw the heart-broken father holding in his arms his dying infant, who must have been suffering most excruciating pain, will not soon forget the sad sight. Nurse Bush, who lives nearby, was one of the first to offer aid. She immediately applied remedies. A doctor could not be communicated with without delay, so the nurse, knowing the child's injuries were of a serious nature, had it taken to the General Hospital, where, after a few hours, it succumbed. This morning the body was removed home and prepared for burial.

Obituary.

JOHN LAKE.

With regret we record the passing of Mr. John Lake, formerly of P. B., whose death occurred at Branch last week. The deceased was of a quiet and retiring disposition and was always ready to assist the needy. He is survived by his widow and three children, to whom the Telegram extends sincere sympathy.

C. M. B. C.

The regular weekly session of the Cathedral Men's Bible Class took place at the Synod Hall yesterday afternoon and was largely attended. Rev. J. Brinton delivered a forceful and instructive address on "Responsibilities of the Faith." In eloquent language he emphasized the obligation resting on parents as regards the religious training of children and the responsibility of the latter in the development of character. The Chairman also made reference to the success of the Harbor Mission work.

THE MAYFLOWER.

I much admire that stately ship in which our fathers made the trip from England's stormy shore; unless I've badly crossed my wires, there must have been ten thousand sires upon its decks, or more. It must have been a rubber craft, so it would stretch, both fore and aft, to hold so many men; the pilgrim fathers were so thick the captain couldn't heave a brick, but he'd hit eight or ten. One hundred sailed, the record claims, and some were children, some were dames, one hundred made the trip; yet there are countless families whose bold ancestors crossed the seas, on that elastic ship. I've travelled east, I've travelled west, wherever I have been a guest, the host would proudly say, "My grand sire's grand sire's grand sire's dad sailed in the Mayflower, when a lad, to Massachusetts Bay." I've stopped at times in swell hotels, where all the haughty gents and belles looked on me as a wreck, because I am the only skate whose fathers didn't pile their freight upon the Mayflower's deck. My father's father's father's sire a passage tried to book by wire ere telegraphs were known; and thus he missed that famous ship, and didn't see the skipper skip, and I am left alone.

Torbay Extends a Hearty Welcome to His Grace

On Monday the Feast of All Saints His Grace the Most Rev. E. P. Roche, D.D., visited the parish of Torbay, and administered the Sacrament of Confirmation to some two hundred children. The episcopal party which arrived at 10 o'clock the same day accompanied in procession by the T. A. Band and the children to be confirmed from the foot of Piper Stock Hill to the Church where His Grace was received by the Rt. Rev. Pastor, Monsignor St. John amidst the acclamations of the parishioners.

That I should visit the parish officially for the first time on this important day is a coincidence. In the course of his address His Grace told the people that he was now their Chief Pastor and Bishop. He referred feelingly to the late Archbishop, who took a special interest in the parish, and being a familiar figure amongst the people of Torbay.

His Grace told his flock that the "Good Shepherd" was his model. He strove to imitate the Good Shepherd, as the people reminded him in their address the burthens are great and many but the expressions of love which proved the deepest Catholic Faith will be a great consolation to him.

His Grace and party were hospitably received and dined by the genial and courteous Pastor. The evening's entertainment which reflected wonderful credit on Rev. Mother and Sisters was most successful and illustrated clearly to what a state of perfection singing and dancing even children can be trained. The recitations were clearly and intellectually delivered.

In reply His Grace told the little ones that he loved children's addresses as their most pleasing feature was the absence of a suspicion of insincerity. He thanked them for their gift and assured the rising generation of Torbay that their entertainment compared favourably with the many other entertainments that were given in his honour.

At 7:30 the Convent and Church were brilliantly lit and there was a protecutic display on the Church grounds. We are all assured that His Grace will have happy recollections of this his first official visit to our parish.

His Grace said that as far as it had been possible he had visited widely and he was now there in his wish to meet as soon as possible the people in their own homes.

Fads and Fashions.

Most sports suits are belted. Cornered hats are on the increase. Veils may now fly free from the face. Flat envelope handbags are much liked. Silks that stand alone promise to return. Velvet hats have fascinating lace crowns. One-piece dresses are made of velveteen. Separate coats are built along loose lines. The Directorate collar is coming into favor. The popularity of the coat frock is very great. A few of the new garments have raglan sleeves. Buckles are now worn in the hair in the evening. Pale rose is a favorite color for evening gowns. Double box-pleated skirts are among the latest. The rich wool velours are admirable for fine coats. Hats for motoring are as usual very close and small. Vivid plaid ribbon is used to trim a dress of tulle. Mercerized lace is used on many of the newest blouses. Wash silk waists are always wanted for everyday wear. Nothing is prettier than a one-piece dress of green velvet. Square fur collars are seen on the chiffon and tulle blouses. The tall beaver hat of 1830 is very chic, worn by a beautiful girl. Novelty pockets are very much liked on both coats and skirts. Long redingotes continue to be worn by the smartest people. There are actually new umbrellas made of bright plaid material. Little folks are wearing turbans or horns as to speak, and showing forth, though young, the wisdom of mature age. This it was which dis-
