CHAPTER XXXII.

"Say Yes."

"No, oh, no!" replied Lady Mary promptly. "Indeed, you must not! Oh, how cold your hand is! Poor Charlie. Mind you don't fall!" for he held on with one hand and his feet, while he clung to her one little trembling hand on the sill. "How could you must be! Oh, dear oh, dear!"

"Never mind me, darling!" murmured Charlie, "I'm all right. Tell me about yourself. Have they gone? How long are they gone for? Are you sure I can't come in? Well, I may sit upon the window sill, I suppose?" And, without waiting for permission, he drew himself up. "There, now let me see you or feel you, darling! Oh, Polly, what a time it is since I saw you last. What brutes they must be—no, of course, I don't mean that. But to shut you up like this, as if I were some monster."

"Perhaps you are," murmured Lady Mary, shaking the monster's hand, and leaning her fair head against his broad bosom. "Isn't it a time, I thought I should never see you again; and, oh, Charlie, perhaps I never shall. You don't know what papa is and mamma, too. So pun—" "So obstinate," corrected Charlie—"and papa says he will keep me here all through next season if I do not say I will—"

"Go on."

"You know! Well, accept Lord St. Clare."

"I'll break that young cub's neck!" growled Charlie. "But they shan't do that, Polly; not if I can help it, and I think I can, rather! And I'll be bound you are quite pale—there mustn't be a light, I suppose?"

"Oh, no! they would see it from the stables and wonder what it was; no one uses this room, there are ghosts in it!" and she clung a little closer.

"I'm glad of it," said Charlie, grimly; "I wish there were always ghosts when we are together."

"Now, I'll go away!" she pouted. At which, of course, he pressed her closer, and held her tightly. "And now you must tell me all you've been doing, sir," she said, with a pretty air of command.

"Let's talk about you," said Charlie. "I've been doing nothing but roaming about and wishing myself dead! Polly, I'd no idea I cared so much for you! I'll be bound you don't think one-half so much of me! If you ever cared for me, you've never said so!"

Quick Help for Strains and Sprains
Wonderful Relief in One Hour

Rare Herb and Root Extracts in this Liniment Give it Marvelous Power.

RUB ON NERVILINE.

You'll be astonished at the rapid pain relieving action of "Nerviline." Its effectiveness is due to its remarkable penetrating power—it strikes deeply, sinks to the very core of the trouble.

Nerviline is stronger many times stronger than ordinary liniments, and it's not greasy, ill-smelling or disagreeable. Every drop rubs in, bringing comfort and healing wherever applied.

You would scarcely believe how it

"Oh, no, Mr. Merivale! Well, I can marry Lord St. Clare! You great stupid boy! You will make my hands so red, mamma will see it, her eyes are like hawks."

"She can't see that!" said Charlie drawing her down to him and kissing her.

Lady Mary drew back.

"Now, I will really go—if you do it again!" she murmured, severely.

"Well—I won't, not for the next five minutes," said the incorrigible Charlie. "What a dear little hand it is! and what's that—a flower? give it to me, Polly! I love everything you have touched. To-morrow night shall have to come, if it is only to kiss this old window sill; now, you wouldn't do so much for me."

"Indeed I wouldn't!" exclaimed Lady Mary, blushing—in the dark—as he pulled a penknife from his pocket, and pressed it to her lips; "nor anything half so foolish. But Charlie, tell me all there is to tell! I am dying to hear about them all! I've heard nothing since the day at Vering Wood—at least only scraps. They won't let me have any letters not even Kyra's, for mamma says that if it had not been for her, you—"

"Should never have seen and loved each other," finished Charlie.

"That's doing Kyra an injustice—for Fate would have brought us together," and Charlie nodded with the air of a philosopher. "But you'll get cold, darling."

"No, no, but you are, Charlie. You wicked boy, your hair is quite wet, rubbing her face, which really had no occasion to be wet. "What shall I do Charlie, I knew you would be, and—"

"She moved away and brought something out of the darkness.

"You must drink this—I stole it from the decanter at dinner-time. I knew it would be wet and cold, and I thought perhaps that you'd come."

"I can't see it—wine! What a girl you are! What a thoughtful wife I shall have—perhaps you won't carry then—yes, you will—for I'll make you love me all your life, Polly, my darling!"

"You've spilled the wine, you stupid boy—can't you see it?—there there!"—and with a little flush she held the glass to his lips.

Charlie sipped the wine, so that the cup-bearing might be repeated ad infinitum, and then kissed the hand that held it.

"And now," said Lady Mary, "tell me all about Lord Vering and Kyra, darling Kyra. How is she?—Where is she?—There, you are warmer."

"Warm and happy as a king," said Charlie, drawing her to his heart, where she nestled like a tired bird.

"Oh, I don't know where to begin; everything is at such sixes and sevens. You know the Wold is shut up? No? It is, and Percy is in it town. Poor fellow, I pity him; and yet some don't like to do so to his face, for Percy is not the fellow to stand much of that kind of thing."

"Then it is all true, and Kyra is really the daughter and heiress of the old Lord Vering?"

"Yes," said Charlie, "proved beyond a doubt, to the satisfaction even of the lawyers. Not that Percy ever doubted it or contested it. He gave up at the instant—the very day. Didn't we all hear him? Yes, as cool as a cucumber, just like him. And he was just as cool after you had gone, and Butterwick and the lawyers from London were going at it hammer and tongs. Butterwick, you know, wanted to keep things as they will relieve a sprain, how it takes out lameness, how it soothes and eases a bruise.

Thousands say no liniment is half so useful in the home. This must be so, because Nerviline is a safe remedy—you can rub it on even a child with fine results.

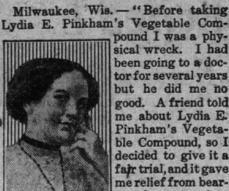

Just you keep Nerviline on hand—it's a panacea for the aches, pains and slight fits of the whole family. One bottle will keep the doctor's bill small, and can be depended on to cure rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago, sciatica, toothache, pleurisy strains or swelling. Wherever there is a pain rub on Nerviline; it will always cure.

The large 50-cent family size bottle is the most economical; trial size 25c. Sold everywhere by dealers.

WOMAN A PHYSICAL WRECK

Tells in Following Letter How She Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Milwaukee, Wis.—"Before taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was a physical wreck. I had been going to a doctor for several years but he did me no good. A friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, so I decided to give it a fair trial, and it gave me relief from bearing down pains which had been so bad that I would have to lie down. I also used the Sensitive Wash and it has done me a great deal of good, and I am not troubled with a weakness any more."—Mrs. P. L. BRILL, 1299 Booth Street, Milwaukee, Wis.

The most successful remedy for woman's ills is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has stood the test for forty years, which would be impossible if it did not have genuine merit.

For special advice, free, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

were for Percy, or make the best of it, as he called it. But Percy got quite wild and stern, and insisted upon everything being made over to Kyra at once! In fact he worked night and day to remove any little obstacle that might be in the way of her getting the Vering money."

"Just like Lord Vering! Yes, and he might have made no end of trouble for you see, Polly; the lawyers would have taken years to prove that Kyra was really Kyra, and then a few more years to prove that she was Lord Vering's daughter. But Percy sealed it with a stroke of his pen. Poor old Percy."

"Why do you pity him so?" said Lady Mary. "Lord Percy is not the sort of man to care for money, dear."

"Not that! It is not the loss of the money he cares about; no man thinks less of money than does Percy; but you see, he had spent a tremendous lump of the old earl's money in buying the Wolding land, thinking, of course, that he was doing what he liked with his own, and of course, it was Kyra's, all the while."

"And, of course," said Lady Mary. "Kyra would never think of taking it from him in any case, or thinking a word about it! I know every wish of hers, dear, too well!"

"Kyra! not she! But Percy will never rest until he has paid the money back all the same, and all the more for that. And another thing, that cur Hudspeil has spread it about that Percy had a hand in the suppression of the will—and there are fools and knaves enough in the world to believe it!"

"The idiots!" asserted Lady Mary indignantly. "And Stephen—does he contradict it?"

"Poor old Stephen!" said Charlie—"yes, he did all he could; he made a clean breast of it. It was all done for love of Percy. The poor old fellow was united to the old place, and the old name, and couldn't bear that the money should go to rack and ruin, as he thought. Of course he didn't know that a child of Lord John's was alive, and he thought it would all go to the lawyers; and he could not bear it; so he says, 'to think of Percy, a great earl, short of money—as he would have been—and is'—and so he hid the will."

"It is a wonder, he did not destroy it," said Lady Mary.

"Yes, but I believe people who do that sort of thing seldom destroy the documents. He would never have showed up, but that he saw Percy cared so much about losing Kyra. Poor old fellow—"

"Why do you pity him so very much? I'm sure he has done a good deal of harm," pouted Lady Mary.

"Don't you know?" said Charlie, quietly; "he's dead."

"Dead?"

"Yes, and died in Percy's arms. Percy never left him night or day while he was dying; the old man spoke to no one else; looked at no one else but Percy. He died a week ago. Just before he died I called in to see him,

In Milady's Boudoir

THE OUTDOOR COMPLEXION.

While all out-of-door sports are as destructive to good looks as they are beneficial and up-building to the health, it is safe to say that the motor girl resps a larger collection of complexion ills than any of her lover of the out-of-door sisters.

One's hair, especially, suffers. Country traveling is usually a matter of tearing through billows of dust, while the hair holding out its thousands of little fibres to catch the passing atoms and floating particles. After each trip the hair should be shampooed. Road dust must never be allowed to remain for any length of time in the hair. It will act as a drying agent, and in time the delicate shafts will break almost at a touch.

Before the shampoo the scalp should be well frictioned with hot olive oil, which detaches the dust and makes the shampoo more thorough. The best shampoo agent is white soap melted, with several beaten eggs added. The soap must be cool. Begin the rubbing with a vigorous rinsing with the bath spray. Dry the scalp quickly.

The "wash up cases" provides a comb and mirror, clothes brush and manicure set, wash cloth and towel, soap and soap box, all as neat and compact as a little bug's ear and as convenient as a one-room flat. Everything within the touch of a hand and the length of an arm! The shops are showing "wash up cases" fascinating little affairs provided with a canvas bowl. Fancy the pleasure of bathing one's face al fresco or arranging the accessories of the toilet table on a grassy mound and dipping water from a clear, cool stream.

It is a good rule to oil the complexion before going out into wind and sun, and directly after coming in. It is like buttering a frying pan to keep one's dinner from burning. Where the skin is moist with cold cream the sun's rays cannot penetrate. This practice of rubbing an emollient is the very best form of discouragement to freckles, tan, sunburn, blisters and the thousand and one ills of the skin.

"Nor I!" retorted Lady Mary; "only that she is a thousand times better than I am, and therefore a million times too good for you, you wicked, impudent boy! Go on!"

"Well Percy had the Grange fitted up, sent a lot of things—anything she particularly liked or happened to admire at the Wold, and made it comfortable for her."

"But alone?"

"No, no, of course not—Lady and Lillian Devigne."

Lady Mary breathed a little sigh of dissatisfaction.

"What's the matter now?" said Charlie; "doesn't that please your highness?"

"Always those Devignes," said Lady Mary, doubtfully. "Do you know—tell me, Charlie—do you like—do you feel as if you could quite trust—you know what I mean—quite believe in Lillian Devigne?"

Charlie pondered in silence.

"I wonder why men are so dull and stupid?" sighed Lady Mary, plaintively.

"That they may fall a prey to you clever ones," said Master Charlie, promptly.

"Ah! and perhaps some of you will fall a prey to Lillian Devigne!" retorted Lady Mary, as promptly. "But go on—I'll talk directly."

"Well, Lady Devigne and Lillian are down there with her, and she is to make her debut next season."

"Under Lady Devigne's wing, of course?" put in Lady Mary, sarcastically.

"Yes, just so—what's the matter with that?"

and it was a fine thing to see old Percy, as tender and gentle as a woman, holding the hand of the old man. Poor old fellow! He did all he could to repair the damage—made a clean breast of it, and told Kyra everything he could remember about her people—her father and mother—you know."

How to Save Your Eyes

Try This Free Prescription.

Do your eyes give you trouble? Do you already wear eyeglasses or spectacles? Thousands of people wear these "windows" who might easily dispense with them. You may be one of these, and it is your duty to save your eyes before it is too late. The eyes are neglected more than any other organs of the entire body. After you finish your day's work, you sit down and rest your muscles. But how about your eyes? Do you rest them? You know you do not. You read or do something else that keeps your eyes busy; you work your eyes until you go to bed. That is why so many have strained eyes and finally other eye troubles that threaten partial or total blindness. Eyeglasses are merely crutches; they which cure. This free prescription, which has benefited the eyes of so many, may work equal wonders for you. Use it a short time. Would you like your eye troubles to disappear as if by magic? Try this prescription. Go to the nearest wide-awake drug store and get a bottle of Ben-Opto tablets. Drop one tablet in 1/2 glass of water and allow it to thoroughly dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. Just note how quickly your eyes clear up and how soon the inflammation will disappear. Don't be afraid to use it; it is absolutely harmless. Many who are now blind might have saved their eyes had they started to care for them in time. This is a simple treatment, but marvellously effective in a multitude of cases. Now that you have been warned, don't delay a day, but do what you can to save your eyes and you are likely to thank us as long as you live for publishing this prescription. The Vering Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription, by mail, if your druggist cannot.

Spring Suitings!

Have just opened our new Spring Suitings. We were fortunate in securing a splendid range of English Worsteds and Irish and Scotch Tweeds.

Notwithstanding the scarcity of the woollens and the drawbacks in freights, we are able to show as good a selection as before the war. The latest in cut, the best in make. Write for samples and self-measuring cards.

QUEEN ALEXANDRA'S HOSTESS.

The Marquise d'Autpoul, who is about to be Queen Alexandra's hostess at her country seat, is, I read, a god-daughter. She is the only daughter of the late Mrs. Stonor, for many years lady-in-waiting to Queen Alexandra when Princess of Wales, and Julie Stonor, as she then was, grew up as a contemporary with Prince Albert, Victor and the Present King. She is perhaps the only lady of the Royal Birth who still calls him by his Christian name. Until the war she had a flat in Paris, at which the late King Edward often dined. The Marquise has often been mentioned in public for that accomplished and dress Miss Ellis Jeffreys, to whom she bears a striking resemblance. She is a devout Roman Catholic, quite cosmopolitan in her acquaintance, but very exclusive, and has the combined dignity and simplicity of character characteristic of the Royal Family, among whom she was brought up. Her brother, Mr. Henry Stonor, is the most intimate private friend of the King, and has been his gentleman-in-waiting ever since his accession to the throne.

TWO EMPERORS ILL—AND A WONDER.

Rumor is revived that the Emperor Francis Joseph is in extremis, and it is one which so frequently has been heard here since the outbreak of war, and particularly during the first few months of the struggle, that one will be content to await definite information before trusting the new report. The same is to be said concerning statements which have again been put into circulation concerning the illness of the Kaiser. There is nothing new about these except as emphasizing the increased mental loss of both emperors, as well as the physical ailments from which the German ruler is known to have been suffering for a long period. Twelve years have passed since an examination of the affected portion of the throat had to be made at short notice by two specialists on board the Imperial yacht Hohenzollern when lying at Naples, and its result, while not publicly divulged, was gloomily guessed in Germany when Professor Schminke, who had been summoned from Rome to Italy for the purpose of making a further investigation, returned. His Italian visit, indeed, had been due because of the Imperial doctor's strong insistence upon the necessity for a thorough rest and change, towards the end of each day the Emperor's voice became quite weak, and in the morning particular remedies had to be applied to remove hoarseness, a condition of the throat which the intervening time has not improved.

LONDON GOSSIP.

LONDON, June 26, 1916. QUEEN ALEXANDRA'S HOSTESS.

The Marquise d'Hautpoul, who is about to be Queen Alexandra's hostess at her country seat, is, I read, her god-daughter. She is the only child of the late Mrs. Stonor, for many years lady-in-waiting to Queen Alexandra when Princess of Wales. Miss Julie Stonor, as she then was, grew up as a contemporary with Prince Albert, Victor and the Present King. She is perhaps the only lady not of Royal birth who still calls him by his Christian name. Until the war she had a flat in Paris, at which the late King Edward often dined. She is a devout Roman Catholic, quite cosmopolitan in her acquaintanceships but very exclusive, and has the combined dignity and simplicity of manner characteristic of the Royal Family, among whom she was brought up. Her brother, Mr. Henry Stonor, is a most intimate private friend of the King, and has been his gentleman-in-waiting ever since his accession.

TWO EMPERORS ILL—AND NO WONDER.

Rumor is revived that the Emperor Francis Joseph is in extremis, but it is one which so frequently has been heard here since the outbreak of war, and particularly during the first few months of the struggle, that one will be content to await definite information before trusting the new report. The same is to be said concerning the statements which have again come into circulation concerning the health of the Kaiser. There is nothing new about these except as emphasizing the increased mental loss of balance, as well as the physical ailment, from which the German ruler is known to have been suffering for a long period. Twelve years have passed since an examination of the affected portion of the throat had to be made at short notice by two specialists on board the Imperial yacht Hohenzollern when lying at Naples, and its result, while not publicly divulged, was gloomily guessed at in Germany when Professor Schmidt immediately was summoned from Frankfurt to Italy for the purpose of making a further investigation. That Italian visit, indeed, had been taken because of the Imperial doctors' strong insistence upon the necessity for a thorough rest and change, as towards the end of each day the Kaiser's voice became quite weak, and in the morning particular remedies often had to be applied to remove hoarseness, a condition of the throat which the intervening time has not improved.

THE NEW ADMIRALS.

The retirement of Sir George Eger-ton, Sir Frederick Inglefield, and Sir Arthur Farquhar left three vacancies in the active list of Admirals, which have been filled by the promotion of the officers at the top of the Vice-Admirals' list. Four are, as a matter of fact, formally raised; but one—Admiral Frederick S. Pelham—went on the retired list on the day following his promotion. The three are Sir Frederick Hamilton, who is Commander-in-Chief at Rosyth; Sir Ocell Burney who holds an important command with the Grand Fleet; and Sir Alexander Bethell who is Admiral Commanding Coastguard and Reserves. The four Rear-Admirals at the top of the list have been promoted to fill the vacancies in the Vice-Admirals' list. Vice-Admiral Bernard Carrey was appointed officer in charge of the Naval Establishments at Gibraltar in September, 1915; Vice-Admiral E. C. T. Troubridge was in command of the British naval forces which served in Serbia last year; Vice-Admiral Sir A. G. H. W. Moore was early in the war in command of a battle cruiser squadron; Sir Charles Madden is Sir John Jellicoe's Chief of Staff, and has been acting Vice-Admiral for a year.

PROBLEM FOR TAILORS.

The outlook in regard to dress for the coming autumn and winter is giving serious anxiety to the ladies' tailors and others who are now coming to the end of their resources in the matter of cloth reserves. The price of the navy blue serge coat and skirt is advancing month by month, and the quality is showing corresponding deterioration, as the stocks of men's coatings and trousseings and other good quality materials which lend themselves to the requirements of ladies' tailoring are diminishing. The costumiers are not encouraging their patrons to order coats and skirts made of woollen fabrics, but are diverting their attention to summer goods such as shantung silk and linen; while one or two houses are attempting a revival of alpaca and mohair. For the moment, therefore, the difficulty is being got over, but the prospects in regard to the autumn are not reassuring. The general belief appears to be that the wool census which has just been concluded will almost invariably be followed by Government restrictions on the private consumption of wool. Already several wholesale houses are declining orders for the autumn delivery owing to the inability of the manufacturers to make the goods.

DANCING AGAIN.

There is almost a sort of season going on among that section of society which is keen on dancing. Hostesses have given quite big dances, either at their own houses or at the Grafton Galleries. These ladies fight shy of having their names in the papers as dance givers, and everyone is only "having a few young people to dance to amuse the girls," or "just to make things bright for Bobby's leave." The fact remains that London is dancing in a very great deal, what with private dances, Cro's, and the Savoy, where the crowd is terrific.

A WAR WEDDING RING.

Lady Dorothy Walpole, who was on June 21st, married to Captain Herbert Mills, had her wedding ring set, by her own special desire, with a portion of the shrapnel with which her husband was so dangerously wounded in France. He at present holds a high position in the Censor's office, and is the author of one of the most brilliant books of impressions of the war. Lady Dorothy has always been the close companion of her father, Lord Orford.

Prince Albert is so friendly and so all-fired-good that it just makes a man sorry that he didn't get onto this pipe thing and cigarette rolling stunt a-while-ago. He counts it lost time quick as the joy's goodness of P. A. tobacco gets firm set into his happiness division. Realize, too, that the patented process by which Prince Albert is made cuts out bite and parch! You smoke all you want as often as you care to fire-up, without a comeback! Prince Albert has always been sold without coupons or premiums. We prefer to give quality!

Men, it's so easy to get on the right track for straight-ahead-action that it sure is due you to know how much you'll like

That tobacco appetite of yours, when it gets-going-good, is as eager as a baby's cry for milk! Right now, while you feel it digging in, make a straight line for the nearest store that sells tobacco! And get your P. A.! If your dealer cannot supply you, ask him to secure Prince Albert through his wholesaler.

Because Prince Albert, packed into a jimmy pipe or rolled into a makin's cigarette, taxes the joy-speed-limit! And you'll understand what that means the minute you put some P. A. next to a match! You'll get flavor and aroma and coolness that will set-to-rest-for-all-time any odd notions you ever hatched about pipe-pleasure or cigarette pleasure!

THE HEIR-APPARENT'S BIRTH-DAY.

The Prince of Wales, who will not be home on leave for some time, completed on June 23, his 22nd year and passed his birthday "somewhere in Egypt," whither he returned a month ago after an inspection of the Italian front with King Victor Emmanuel and a few days with his parents at Windsor and Buckingham Palace. The Heir-Apparent now has been on the staff of General Sir Archibald Murray, the Commander-in-Chief of the Mediterranean Expeditionary Force, for over three months, and since he arrived at headquarters he has gained some useful experience of the warfare practised in that field of operations, which differs greatly from that which the Prince had seen during his long spell in France as aide-de-camp in succession to Viscount French and Sir Douglas Haig, each of whom has testified in despatches to his services. His Royal Highness was recently described by an American as "the willing Prince," and by this name the Heir-Apparent might well be content to go down in history.

ROSE DAY.

London was blushing pink with roses last Wednesday, June 21st, the second Alexandra Day in war-time. Midsummer Day really was summer-like for once, and the patches of red everywhere in the shallow street vistas came out gaily in the sunshine, with an odd, carnival-like effect in keeping with the lighter mood of the moment. In Leicester Square the open-air hovers of roses looked like a scene from the latest dazzling revue, and 15,000 girls in white were attacking London in skirmishing order, and they were none too many for London's seven millions of population. Before the day was very old everyone had a rose and was being pressed to buy a second one. Every motor-car had a rose in its bonnet, and one saw motors filled with wounded men with bouquets as big as cabbages on their bouquets. A lifeboat floated round the streets on a cart with a crew of beanties fishing for pence on the pavement tide. Queen Alexandra had her little triumph in the afternoon when she drove round an dreal flowers were showered into her carriage. Last year Alexandria Day brought in £100,000 for the hospitals. This year it is likely to be a good deal more.

Salt and Water Cure for Wounds in War.

London, July 19.—A saline solution for treating wounds invented by Sir Almoth Wright is coming into almost universal use on the British side. On the field of battle and during transport the wound must be covered up in the old way with lint and antiseptics, but as soon as the patient reaches the hospital the lint is stripped off and is not replaced. Instead a mixture of salt and water is allowed to flow drop by drop over the wound day and night, cleansing and healing at the same time.

The antiseptic system aimed at killing the germ of putrefaction; the saline solution system not only washes away any germs that are there but prevents others coming into existence. A cradle keeps the bedclothes away from the wound. The salt and water solution is carried to the spot through an India rubber tube and nature does the rest.

Your Boys and Girls.

This diet from the eighteenth month to the end of the second year may help some inexperienced mothers: 6.30 to 7 a.m.—10 ounces warm milk; 9 a.m.—orange, peach or prune juice, two or three ounces in one ounce water; 10 a.m.—Rolled oats, cooked three hours, two to three tablespoons, served with thin cream. Toast or zwieback and a cup of warm milk; 2 p.m.—Rice thoroughly boiled, with two ounces beef juice and one slice dry toast. For dessert the pulp of prune may be given, cooked without sugar until very soft. Steam to remove skins; one tablespoon at first, later two tablespoons, one-half cup of milk. Another day—Chicken or mutton broth, with boiled rice and some bits of soft meat, very finely cut up, may be allowed. Piece of dry wheat or rye bread, twenty-four hours old zwieback. Dessert, soft part of baked apple, without skin. Water, but no milk at this meal. Another Day.—A codded egg may replace meat broth. 6 p.m.—Farnia. Another Supper—Zwieback soaked in warm milk. Some dietitians advise fresh vegetables thoroughly boiled and well boiled and well mashed.

Ten Minutes Cold Cure. Relieves Almost Instantly.

Nothing cures so quickly as the healing pine essences in Catarhose. It fills the breathing organs with a healing, soothing vapor that relieves irritation at once. Ordinary colds are cured in ten minutes. Absolutely sure for Catarrh, and in throat trouble it works like a charm. Catarhose is a permanent cure for bronchitis and throat trouble. Not an experiment—not a temporary relief—but a cure that's guaranteed. Get "Catarhose" to-day, and beware of substitutes. The dollar outfit is guaranteed and small size 50c; trial size, 25c., at all dealers.

Infantile Paralysis Epidemic.

Ontario Health Officer Warns People to be on Guard.

Toronto, July 13.—Dr. J. W. S. McCullough, provincial chief officer of health, today issued a warning bulletin urging citizens throughout Ontario to guard against the possibility of an outbreak in Ontario of the epidemic of infantile paralysis, which is raging in some cities in the United States.

Dr. McCullough stated that in one town in Ontario—the name of which he did not care to disclose—several cases had been reported while others are suspected.

"While the cause of the disease is as yet unknown," said Dr. McCullough, "it is believed that infantile paralysis is spread from one child to another by means of secretions of the nose and mouth by direct transfer. It is possible also that it is spread by flies which have been in contact with intestinal discharges.

"It may become widespread in country as well as in crowded city districts and persons who have been in contact with cases of the disease may harbour the contagion and give it to others without contracting the disease themselves. That is, they are carriers."

Signs of the Dawn of Peace.

There are multiplying signs that the industrial world is beginning to believe in the coming of peace. From all over the globe our steel trade is receiving orders for ship plates for merchant vessels, while it is widely reported that no war material orders are being given to run after January 1 next. This may be in part due to the increased production of British and Russian factories; none the less, it is possible to deduce some belief in a lightening of Europe's horizon. So far as our own war order companies are concerned, it was announced last week that the Dupont powder mills had cut off one shift of men, and the Westinghouse Air Brake Company is dismantling some of the buildings it used for the making of munitions. In addition, there are known to be numerous cases where plans are already under way to convert mushroom war order plants into factories for the production of tin-plate, dyestuffs, and other material needed in the peaceful arts. All of this, be it noted, has disturbed Wall Street, not at all, so that those prophets who have looked for a violent convulsion at the close of the war may well take courage. Indeed, the peaceful character of the orders now pouring in to the steel trade give every ground for the belief that the United States will be called upon to furnish a very large share of the material needed for the reconstruction of Europe.—From the New York Evening Post.

Household Notes.

Castile soap should be bought in quantities, and put away on the shelf to ripen. It may grow dark, but the older it gets the better it will be.

To make butter scotch, mix four cups of brown sugar, two cups of water and three tablespoons of water and boil until crisp in water.

For a tight, hoarse cough, where phlegm is not raised, take hot water often, as hot as can be sipped. It will nearly always give great relief.

To clean a Panama hat, brush it with a paste made of powdered magnesia and alcohol. Set aside to dry and then brush out the dry powder.

Lettuce, watercress and all such things should be kept on the ice or in ice water long enough before a meal to get them thoroughly chilled.

A delicious way to serve baked potatoes, is to remove them from the skins, run through a vegetable press and mix with salt, pepper and butter. Keep all wide-mouthed bottles that come into the house. They are handy receptacles for keeping tacks, seeds, screws and other small things.

To brighten the eyes, take occasionally, just before going to bed, the juice of half a lemon in a small tumbler of water without adding any sugar.

If cabbage is soaked in cold, salted water for an hour before cooking it will have a most delicious flavor, and the odor will be less disagreeable.

When pouring jelly or canned fruit into tumblers or glass jars, set the jars first on a damp cloth. This goes a long way toward preventing their breaking.

Everyday Etiquette.

"What is considered the correct length of time for a person in mourning for a member of the family to refrain from attending public places of amusement?" asked Hester.

"After six months or a year one may in a quiet way attend concerts, etc., if one desires," answered her city cousin Helen.

Belgium, Poland and America.

A tragedy, vast and pitiful, underlies the matter-of-fact words of one of yesterday's messages, which many will have read casually and heedlessly. Poland is starving to death; America would feed her if she could, but she cannot. And such are the circumstances that it is very unlikely that she will ever be allowed to. Perhaps we criticize America too hastily. She kept silent when Belgium was outraged. It is an old tale now, but the blot is there and will never be effaced. But if Belgium is America's disgrace she is at the same time her everlasting honour. Perhaps the very sense of their Government's failure and the stigma it cast upon themselves was as potent to arouse the responsive sympathy of the Americans to Belgium's cry for help as was Belgium's need itself. However that may be, there can be no doubt about the response. America has kept Belgium alive during her captivity. This is not over-stating the case; it is the plain truth. This much, and it is a very great deal, her neutrality has done.

The case of Poland is worse than that of Belgium—infinately worse if the truth were known. Germany cannot feed the territory she has overrun, and it is probable that she is making no great effort to. The stories that have leaked out of the distress of the Poles are appalling. Practically every child under seven years of age, it has been stated, has died of starvation; children have gnawed their own arms to satisfy their hunger. America is ready, and offers, to send cargoes of food to Poland, but they must first pass the British navy and after that the German authorities. If they pass the first they are not likely to pass the second, and the British Government knows it. In the blockade it has found a legitimate and powerful weapon, which it cannot afford to relinquish for a moment. Much as it would like to alleviate the sufferings of Poland, it has no wish to alleviate those of Germany, and this is what it would do if it permitted food to enter German ports. There is no assurance worth while that such food would be appropriated to the humane purpose for which it was sent, and every reason to believe that it would not. As a result, President Wilson is face to face with what he calls "a stone wall." To do him justice, he is making every effort, and he may yet achieve some success. But there is only one direction from which any real help to Poland can come. It is from the Russian armies which confront Von Hindenburg, and which are slowly encompassing Kovel. It is a far cry yet to Warsaw and Lodz, but the ground will be covered.

Killed While Facing the Foe

The name of Lance-Sergt. William Ollerhead, No. 746, 1st Newfoundland Regiment, belonging to Heart's Content, appeared in the list of deceased yesterday. Lance-Sergt. Ollerhead, prior to the outbreak of hostilities was a C. of E. school teacher and a very popular one. He was in charge of the school at Portugal Cove where he was held in high esteem by all whose privilege it was to know him. The teaching profession in Nfld., loses one that it can ill afford to miss. But we are proud to know he died facing the foe, with that dogged determination that was characteristic of his young life. Lance-Sergt. Ollerhead was with "Ours" in the Gallipoli campaign and came through without a scratch.

Man Dropped Dead In Boat.

With dramatic suddenness and under exceptionally sad circumstances, the death occurred yesterday afternoon of Mr. John Conway, the well-known plasterer and catered resident of King's Bridge Road. Some months ago he became a sufferer of a serious ailment and acting on the advice of his physician he ceased working at his trade and took up the codfishery with his brother-in-law, Mr. W. O'Brien. Yesterday Messrs. Conway, O'Brien and Squires (2) left Quidi Vidj in their motor boat for the fishing grounds, towing a small boat. In the latter Conway remained jiggling while the other three went to haul their trawls. They had only gone a short distance away when they heard their comrade collapse in the boat, and when they got to him he was lifeless. The party immediately returned to port and reported what had happened. The body was conveyed to the Morgue and a post mortem was held on it, showing that death was due to heart failure. The remains were later taken to the late residence of deceased and prepared for burial, after Rev. Dr. Kitchin had broken the sad news to the heartbroken widow and nine little children.
John Conway was an exemplary citizen and a devout Roman Catholic. He was on the threshold of the half century of years. He is also survived by several brothers and a large circle of relatives and friends. The Telegram expresses its condolence.

Students of Blind School Give Second Concert.

His Excellency the Governor presided last night at the second concert in the Methodist College Hall, given by the students from the Halifax School for the Blind. The spacious building was filled to overflowing and hundreds were forced to go away. His Excellency in addressing the vast audience referred to the great work done by this splendid institution. Heartily congratulating the students, he said that he was proud to have in his charge of the school at Portugal Cove where he was held in high esteem by all whose privilege it was to know him. HOLIDAY PROGRAMME AT THE NICKEL THEATRE.

The popular serial "The Romance of Elaine" is fast drawing to a close. It will be continued to-day when the last episode but one will be shown. It is entitled "The Disappearing Helmet," and is one of the most sensational of the whole serial. All who are interested in this brilliant picture should make an effort to attend. Another great feature film arranged for to-day is "By Love Redeemed," a powerful story in three acts by the Vitagraph artists. It is a most impressive story and is splendidly acted. "A Flower of the Hills" is a dainty social drama, and the comedy "The Rescue," in which George Ovey stars.

COX'S GELATINE.—Mark the brand. The housewife's choice and the old favorite that stands every test. For sale at all first-class grocers. Insist on getting Cox's.—June 24, 1916.

Sensational Arrest.

Yesterday afternoon George Day, a Junior official in the Department of Marine and Fisheries, was arrested by Detective Tobin, charged with having appropriated to his own use certain monies belonging to the Department. It appears that sixteen registered letters, containing different sums of money, were sent out of the Department and given to Day to post. They never reached their destination, as the letters, it is alleged, were opened by him. The extent of the embezzlement is not exactly known, but it is said to go into the hundreds. Meanwhile he is being sent to the Penitentiary pending investigation.

Lecture by Captain Parsons, R. A. M. C.

Last night Capt. W. H. Parsons, of the Royal Army Medical Corps, who is here on a short furlough from his front, spoke at the Masonic Temple of the ambulance work on the firing line. The address was one of unusual interest. Capt. Parsons first displayed and explained a number of trophies from the front, including gas masks, steel helmets, shells and other articles peculiar to the mode of fighting. He spoke clearly and in detail of the activities of the Red Cross, and showed how perfect was the system of hospitals and the treatment of the wounded. He also spoke generally of the fighting, and paid a glowing tribute to the 29th Division, of which the Newfoundland Regiment is a unit. He told tales of the inhumanity of the Germans, by whom the Red Cross was not regarded except as marking their bearings as a favorite target. The whole address was instructive and interesting, and was followed closely by the Captain's audience. A vote of thanks was moved by Messrs. Robinson and J. J. McKay and carried by acclamation. Following a short speech by Mr. D. M. Baird on the subject of the Cot Fund, the Captain was accorded the Grand Honours. He leaves again in a short time for the front to resume his duties.

CONGRATULATIONS.
LONDON, July 18. King George to-day sent the following message to General Douglas Haig, commanding the British troops in France and Belgium: "The continued successful advance of my troops fills me with admiration. I send best wishes to all ranks. The Emperor of Russia has asked me to convey his warm congratulations to the troops upon the great success they have achieved. General Haig replied as follows: "British armies in France offer most respectful and grateful thanks for this further mark of what they have achieved. They also respectfully beg that their grateful acknowledgments be conveyed to the Emperor of Russia for His Majesty's congratulations."

OVIERS REPORTED CAPTURED.
PARIS, July 18. The capture of Oviliers by the British, necessitated one of the most sanguinary encounters of the advance, writes the correspondent of La Liberté. Nevertheless the British were well rewarded for the effort. They gained possession of the broad highway leading from Albert to Bapaume village, defended for 10 days by two regiments of the Prussian Guard. He says that of these regiments only 128 men survived, all of them having been captured. It was at Oviliers that the British offensive, which began on July 1st, was held up, while the remainder of the line was advancing. From July 7th on, the village was cut off almost completely from the German rear, but it was not until July 15th that the desperate resistance of the Prussian Guard was overcome. The Germans suffered greatly from hunger and thirst, the British curtains of fire preventing the bringing up of fresh supplies. Some of the Germans are reported to have been poisoned by drinking bad water from a pond. Others have been driven mad by the bombardment. When the survivors left the village as prisoners, the British presented arms in recognition of the bravery of their defence.

NORTH OF OVIERS.
LONDON, July 18. Substantial progress by the British on a front of 1,000 yards, north of Oviliers, was announced to-day by the War Office.

ST. PIERRE BULLETIN.
PARIS, July 18. South of the Somme yesterday evening and during the night the Germans attacked our positions from Biaches village to Lamaisonnette. In spite of repeated attempts, costing them heavy losses, they were unable to capture Lamaisonnette. Some enemy tractions slipped along the canal into the eastern part of Biaches, where the struggle continues. On the west bank of the Meuse a German raid against our trenches on Hill 304 failed under our fire. On the right bank during the night there was grenade fighting in the vicinity of Chapelle Sainte Fine and west of Fleury, the enemy being repulsed everywhere. Sharp artillery action in the region of La Laveffe and Chien-

FRANCE CALLS UP RESERVES.
PARIS, July 18. The Government has called to the colors the class of 1888, that is men from 47 to 48 years of age, except those in munition factories and, for the present, farmers and farm laborers who are now busy with the harvest. Export workers of various sorts of the class of 1888 had already been called up some months ago.

RUSSIANS SUCCESS CONTINUES.
PETROGRAD, July 18. The Russian victory over the Teutonic forces in Southern Volhynia has resulted in their being driven across the River Lipa, and beyond that stream, says a War Office statement issued to-day. The indications are, the statement adds, that the retreat was effected in great disorder. In Riga region, efforts by the Germans to retake positions they had lost were unsuccessful.

HUN CONFERENCE ON THE FRONT.
NEW YORK, July 18. A Journal desparch from Amsterdam to-day says that renewed success by the Russians in Volhynia have resulted in a hurried summons to Field Marshal Von Hindenburg by the Kaiser to attend a conference on the western front. According to reports reaching here from Berlin to-day, the conference is to be held somewhere near the Somme front, where General Von Falkenhayn, Chief of the General Staff, now is. It is for the purpose of discussing the critical situation on the east front, and will probably result in Field Marshal Von Hindenburg being given supreme command of the German Austro-Hungarian troops from Riga in the north to Bukovina in the southeast.

PRESSED BACK BY RUSSIAN ATTACK.
VENICE, July 18. Austrian advanced posts in the region of Seabian Tatarow, south of Kolomea, in the Carpathian region, have been pressed back by the Russian attack, says a War Office statement issued to-day. The main Austrian positions have been firmly held.

IN MESOPOTAMIA.
LONDON, July 18. Premier Asquith intimated in the Commons to-day that there was some basis for adverse criticism of the conduct of the British expedition in Mesopotamia. After the battle of Ctesiphon last November, he said, General Nixon, who was then in command, telegraphed that medical arrangements were quite satisfactory. "Thousands died," one member called out. Later, Mr. Asquith continued, unofficial reports were received which seemed to point to a very different state of affairs. "A commission was appointed" to investigate the whole matter. "The report of the commission has been received by the Government of India, which is holding in full the Indian Commander-in-Chief had an opportunity to submit his observations thereon. The commission reported that everything possible was now being done. Re-arranging transport facilities, Mr. Asquith said that the necessity of attempting to relieve Kut-el-Amara was so urgent that it was thought right to push on the troops in advance of their transport.

Mesopotamian operations excited such widespread and legitimate interest, and anxiety, the Premier continued, that incidents occurred which aroused doubt as to whether the best policy had been adopted to bring the end in view. Every step had been taken on the advice of the military authorities, and defects in the medical transport services had been remedied.

The Premier's remarks were brought out by the demands for publication of the papers regarding the Mesopotamian and Dardanelles expeditions. Mr. Asquith said that these papers could not be published without assisting Britain's enemies and prejudicing operations in Mesopotamia. He promised to discuss this subject at more length in the House on Thursday.

Sir Edward Carson, speaking of the Mesopotamian expedition, said that thousands of people in this country thought it had been conducted with criminal negligence.

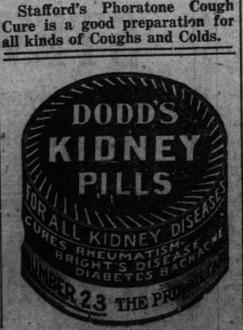

ENLARGED BUILDING PROGRAM.
WASHINGTON, July 18. The Senate to-day adopted an enlarged building programme naval bill, a viva voce vote. It provides for the construction within three years of 157 war vessels of all classes, and for four dreadnoughts and four battle-cruisers to be built next year.

RELIGIOUS FANATIC.
CHICAGO, July 18. A negro religious fanatic, named McIntyre, becoming violently insane to-day, shot four people to death and wounded three. He was himself killed with his wife, after 150 police had dynamited the house in which he was barricaded. McIntyre and his wife, who were armed with powerful rifles, were shot to death. The police were held at bay for more than an hour.

TO-DAY'S Messages.

IN HONOR OF OUR BOYS!

Special to Evening Telegram. LONDON, To-Day.

Speaking of the Newfoundlanders coolness under fire, Sir Edward Morris, Premier of Newfoundland, explained that the Island battalion when called upon to take the third line of German trenches were suddenly faced by machine guns. These caused heavy losses, but the Newfoundlanders made a gallant attempt, the best proof of their tenacity being that the battalion suffered 400 casualties. The place where they were stationed was renamed 'St. John's Wood' out of compliment to the Capital of the Ancient Colony.

VILLAGE DESTROYED.
PARTANBURG, Sc. To-day. The village of Chimneyrock, N.C., has been destroyed by high water, according to reports reaching here tonight.

ON ALL FRONTS.
LONDON, To-day. With the exception of the region of Longueval and south of the Somme at Biaches, relative calm prevails on the fighting front in France. The British and Germans are engaged in a sanguinary conflict in the region of Longueval salient to the northwest of Comblis. With the clearing of the weather the Germans have taken the aggressive here after a preliminary bombardment in which a new asphyxiating gas shell was used. At the last accounts no decision has been reached in the battle. To the south of the Somme the French have driven out the Germans from some houses which they held in the village. The Germans failed on Tuesday to renew their attacks between Biaches and Lamaisonnette in which the French inflicted heavy casualties on them on Monday night. On the eastern front, Vienna asserts, fresh Russian attacks in the territory southwest of Lutsk were without success, but says that in the Carpathian region near Seabie and Tatarow the Russians have pushed back the Austrian advanced posts, although the Austrian main line is firmly held. In the vicinity of Riga the Russians are vigorously on the offensive against Field Marshal Von Hindenburg's army, but all their attacks have been repulsed with heavy losses, according to Berlin.

In the Austro-Italian theatre Rome reports fresh victories for the Italians over the Austrians at various points while Petrograd chronicles further advances against the Turks by the Russian right wing. Constantinople says in recent days on the central sector Russians suffered tremendous losses south of Tobruk River and that their attacks have become less violent. Cannonading is going on along the entire front in the region of the Greek border between forces of the Teutonic and Entente Allies.

METHODICAL ADVANCE.
LONDON, To-Day. While adverse weather is compelling a lull in the fighting on the Western front, military critics are taking stock of the situation. They are agreeably surprised by the large captures of heavy armament which Sir Douglas Haig, British Commander in Chief, has been able to announce, and point out how although the British attacks have been pressed with the greatest rapidity in order to give the Germans no time to organize formidable defences at the same time, as was evidenced by the withdrawal of the British from Fourreaux Wood, where they had reached the German line, General Haig wisely resisted the temptation to hold on at that point, which would have incurred severe fighting with probably heavy losses, in favor of a more methodical advance. Evidence has been received from the front as well as an official map published here seems to prove that the German second line of defence was far less strong and elaborate than the first, since military observers believe that the obstacles are likely to be less difficult as the Entente Allies advance. With regard to the Eastern front, General Von Linsingen's retirement across the Lips is considered by critics as removing the last source of obstacles to the advance of the Russians toward Lemberg.

STEAMER SUNK.
LONDON, To-day. Lloyd's reports the French steamer Villo De Rouen, 4721 tons, owned at Rouen, sunk by submarine.

PATHS ON THE MAP.
BRITISH FRONT IN FRANCE, To-day. On the map of vari-colored patches across the Somme progress in the offensive, there is one for to-day's work to the hour of writing, so far as is known, north of Oviliers and west of Pozieres, and another west of Pozieres. The British apparently are following the same methods after the attack and after the Scott, fortifying the positions gained, staking German machine gun detachment, taking needful tactical points, and feeling their way systematically, while their concentrations of gunfire give no sign where the infantry is going to act.

"Shells," said a gunner, who remembered the days of munitions starvation, "is no longer a case of asking for more, but of somebody in the rear asking over the telephone if we have enough."

Obituary.
JOHN COSTELLO.

"To-day I kneeled upon that lonely grave, Where Death and silence unmolested reign; While overpowering as a surging wave, Came golden memories of the past." I meekly prayed—while tears the sword did love, O God! be gracious, if his soul had slain.

On July 3rd, there passed away at the age of 16 at Wood's Island, a kind, docile and affectionate son in the person of Jack, the second son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Costello. Born at Conception, he moved with his parents some eight or nine years ago to Wood's Island. After receiving an elementary education at the latter place, and following the footsteps of his elder brother, he entered St. Bonaventure's College early in November of year year. For some weeks he carefully and diligently pursued his scholastic duties, but at the close of the term he contracted what at first appeared a slight cold, but after a while it developed into symptoms of a serious nature, which defied the best medical skill and attendance, and eventually caused his death. After returning from Conception, where he spent his Christmas vacation, he resumed his usual school studies, but with physical decay, a few lack of mental activity, and a few weeks before the Easter vacation he returned home to receive the care and attention of his family circle. But a few short months were necessary to purify his grand young life and spiritually strengthened by the help of the church he passed to his True Home.

"Upon whose portal yet he lingers Looking back for us to come." His life was of the purest of boyish happiness. How could it be otherwise, since "the good are always happy." Faithful to his school duties and a worthy companion of the best boys of his age, his life was a sweet hastening homewards. Poor Jack is dead, but his memory shall long be green in many a boyish heart. By his death, Mr. and Mrs. Costello are bereft of a kind and loving son, and St. Bonaventure's of a truly upright and genuine Catholic boy. While at college the good Christian Brothers did everything possible to bring about his recovery, and placed by his side the medical skill and experience of Dr. Scully. While the death of this pure-minded and noble-hearted young boy is regretted by a large circle of friends yet is there not utterable consolation in the thought of the life he led?

"Blessed are the clean of heart for theirs is the Kingdom of Heaven." Many a prayer will the reading of these lines call forth from many a boyish heart for the repose of the soul of a genial comrade who has fallen early in life's battle. To the sorrowing parents, brothers and sisters the writer extends deepest sympathy.—Requiescat in Pace. —T.J.W.

SURVIVORS' SPECIAL TIVES.

Waiting Calmly, He Went Down Ship.

(By Our Special Correspondent) How Lord Kitchener died was described to me by Leading Seaman Rogerson, a survivor from the Hampshire, whose home is in St. John's.

"Of those who left the ship, I am the one who saw Lord Kitchener. He went down with the ship and did not leave her.

"I saw Capt. Savill help the crew to clear away his gallies. At the same time the captain was with Lord Kitchener to come to the deck but owing to the noise made by the wind and sea Lord Kitchener did not hear him, I think.

"When the explosion occurred, Lord Kitchener walked calmly to the captain's cabin, went up to the deck and on to the quarter deck. I saw him walking quite calmly talking to two of the officers. Three were wearing khaki uniforms, no overcoats on. In fact, they were dressed as they were when on board. Lord Kitchener did not watch the preparations for doing the ship, which were going in quite a steady and orderly manner.

"The crew just went to their stations and obeyed orders, and did the best to get out the boats, but it was impossible. Owing to the rough sea, their boats could not be lowered. Those that were got out were crowded up at once. No boats were lowered. What the people on shore saw were the boats leaving the ship. I did get into the boats as they were their cradles, thinking that I would be under them the boats would sink. But the ship sank by the bow when she went stern first. I was sent forward, carrying a box for her all the boats and those in them.

"I do not think Lord Kitchener was in a boat. When I sprang from the quarter deck talking to the officers. From the little that I glimpsed between my leaving the ship and her sinking I feel certain Lord Kitchener went down with the ship and was on the deck at the time. Of the civilian members of the suite I saw nothing.

Bying on the Rail... "I got away on one of the boats and we had a terrible fight with the water. It was so rough that the seas beat down on us, and we were killed by the buffeting. Others died from the pieces of the ship. I was quite numb, and I had a powerful desire to sleep. I tried to keep this away from me, but each other on the back. I was who went to sleep never woke. When the men died it was not though they were falling as the man stood upright for five minutes, the raft with dead lying on it, and one man died in the water.

"As we got near the shore, the union grew worse. The ship was blowing on shore, and the sea dashed our raft against the shore with tremendous force. We were killed in this way, and our ship was overturned. I was picked up by the shore. I know how I got ashore, but I had gone out of my mind. I was very kindly treated by the people who picked us up. They said that the worst storm they had for years was what happened on the night of the Hampshire struck a mine and exploded under her fore part. It had not been a submarine, but a weather, and an internal explosion of her magazines was what ripped her apart. It was coming to such an end that it was through the battle of Jutland. We led the ironclad action and sank a German cruiser and two submarines. It had not have a single casualty.

Only on the Level.

WITH CAMERON

A young school friend of mine has been reading about the Spanish Inquisition and the burning of the heretics in "Spain's Cruelty." She is horrified. "I am so glad I didn't live in those times," she said. "I know I couldn't be a virtuous and good person in those times, but I would have demanded more freedom." Then I thought it over and asked myself, "Am I more educated than the women who have had my opportunities, more independent than the women of to-day?" And, finding myself only even with the level of those who have had my opportunities and environment, I had to decide that I would not have risen above the level in those days.

They Think They Would Be Cleaner.

People who are offended by the lack of personal cleanliness in the "lower classes" often announce that they would manage to keep themselves clean even if they were handicapped by the lack of tub and other facilities. The answer is, "Are you more immaculate than the people with your opportunities?" Very well, then, finish the equation for yourself.

This habit of believing that we would have been superior to a former age is one of many pleasant illusions which most of us like to cherish about ourselves. Perhaps it is foolish to destroy them because they make us a little happier, but if self-ignorance is bliss is it folly to be wise? I wonder. No, I don't.

I fell from a building and received what the doctor called a very bad sprained ankle, and told me I must not walk on it for three weeks. I got MINARD'S LINIMENT and in six days I was not to work again. I think it the best liniment made.

A Common Form Of Self-Deceit.

I think it is a rather common form of self-deceit to fancy that the standards of tolerance, of education, etc., that one holds in this age and under the circumstances in which one lives, one would still cling to in a less propitious age and environment.

For instance, I found myself thinking when I read about the ignorance and semi-slavery of the women of the middle ages, "I would never have stood that; I would have insisted upon learning to read. I would have demanded more freedom." Then I thought it over and asked myself, "Am I more educated than the women who have had my opportunities, more independent than the women of to-day?" And, finding myself only even with the level of those who have had my opportunities and environment, I had to decide that I would not have risen above the level in those days.

Dining Cars

By GEORGE FITCH

Author of "At Good Old Sirash"

A dining car is a restaurant on wheels, which moves swiftly from place to place at a cost of two cents a mile for transportation and fifty cents a mile for food.

However, the short-sighted railroad officials did not follow up this great idea and put the dining-car waiters on wheels, the fixed or immovable kind being used.

Dining cars are handsomely fitted up with mahogany furniture, flower baskets, stained glass, and red and green carpets. However, they do not contain orchestras. For this reason, many people are passionately devoted to dining cars and eat in them until they starve to death or their creditors interfere.

Dining cars travel very rapidly and have double-tracked scenery—equal portions on each side. The first course usually consists of fifteen miles of scenery, after which the diner may eat five miles of oysters, twenty-five miles of steak and fifteen miles of ice-cream, without inconvenience—that is, on good roads. On railroads suffering from senile debility of the roadbed, eating in a dining car is a feat, not a pastime. Unless the traveler is experienced he is almost certain to drink his coffee with his vest, eat his soup with his eye, and take a large forkful of ear by mistake while chasing his roast beef.

Dining-car kitchens are so small that all the porterhouse steaks have to be fried lengthwise, and the cook keeps the salt cellar in his hip pocket to save space. All our best jugglers and rope walkers are recruited from dining-car waiters, who are trained to carry a platter of food up and down and around a dining-car floor on a worm fence road and deal three full hands off of it without dropping a card.

Dining-cars are very expensive to run and the railroads declare that they only operate them because of their kind feelings toward the public. This confines their use to the upper classes and compels the common day-coach traveler to subsist on peanuts and portified oranges. If dining-cars are a philanthropy, what we need in this country is a system of endowed cars, and Andrew Carnegie may embrace this suggestion free of charge.

Incandescent Gas Lighting.

Possibly, the feature of incandescent gas lighting most frequently noted by casual observers is the great ease with which tasks, ordinarily arduous under artificial light may be performed under the Welsbach gas mantle. The light has a peculiarly "soft" quality, difficult to describe, but which is readily recognized by those who have had experience with the gas-mantle lamp.

In its general effect upon bodily health and comfort, the use of incandescent gas lighting is decidedly favorable. The currents of air set up by the burning gas improves ventilation, tending to expel the air vitiated by respiration and draw in fresh air to replace it. Harmful or dangerous disease germs are instantly destroyed in the flame. The extent to which this effect takes place may be verified by placing a gas lamp close to a ceiling without any provision for interfering with the up-rushing air currents. The charred particles which collect immediately above the lamp are the remains of dust particles which before passing through the flames were laden with germs and microbes. Actual experiments have shown that the burning of gas lamps in rooms previously containing bacteria, resulted in absolute sterilization of the air.

Contrary to the popular notion the temperature of rooms lighted by incandescent gas lamps is seldom markedly greater than under incandescent electric light, even under unfavorable conditions of ventilation, while in rooms provided with the ventilating facilities required by the demands of hygiene, the temperature in gas-lighted rooms is frequently lower.

An Empire's Tears.

Lady Frances Balfour (she is a sister of the late Duke of Argyll and sister-in-law to the great Mr. Balfour), contributing to the British Weekly an account of the Memorial Service in St. Paul's Cathedral, says that if Kitchener had sent a message home to his nation by an earthly lips, the message would have been that of the Hebrew captain of old, "Say unto the people that they go forward." Lady Frances Balfour has a more excellent gift in writing than her brother had. She is not infrequently contributor to the British Weekly. She tells how the long farewell of the "Last Post" echoed through the Cathedral, and its echoes rolled from soul to soul and died away in our thoughts which were not in that great multitude, but in the storm sweeping on the wings of mighty winds across the waters that make our island story.

But the most impressive report that I have seen of the service came from the pen of Mr. James Douglas.

An age was there as well as a world, with divine music interpreting its awe, its reverence, its grief, and its unwavering faith. Never has music touched hearts more subtly or more profoundly.

"This service seemed to be like a great Miltonic sonnet, shining and flowing from majesty to majesty, from sublimity to sublimity. It was by turns august and homely, proud and compassionate, lordly and contrite. It rose to the height of hope and sank to the very depths of anguish. It touched every beautiful and tender chord in the human heart. It left us shaken and almost broken with its mystical poetry of sorrow.

"There were many great men round the King and the two Queens, but they were all merged in the greatness of death. The sense of brotherhood and comradeship melted us all into one marvellous sodality of patriotism. We were one people under the dome.

"Then a great hush, out of which stole the sweetness of that wondrous hymn, 'Abide With Me.' It adumbrated our inmost thoughts of the soldier's last home in the desolate solitude of the Orkneys:

"Abide with me; fast falls the evening tide;
The darkness deepens; Lord with me abide."
"From that grave and serene mood the service swept perfectly from phrase to phrase of beauty. Everything seemed to be charged with an appropriate message.

"As the choir chanted 'De Profundis,' the noble voice pierced our hearts with its meaning.

"Out of the deep have I called unto Thee, O Lord. . . . O let Thine ears consider well the voice of my complaint. If Thou, Lord, wilt be extreme to mark what is done amiss, O Lord, who may abide it? . . . My soul seeth into the Lord; before the morning watch, O Israel, trust in the Lord, for with the Lord there is mercy. And He shall redeem Israel."

The lesson was from 1 Corinthians xv., and then followed the "Dead March in Saul," played by the Royal Engineers.

"It opened with a terrible volley of drum-taps that beat on every heart. Then it broke in raffles and gusts of brazen sounds that seemed to be the echo of the never-silent guns coming across the sea. It rang in our ears like the very voice of battle, and it hurt us, wounded us; hurt us, and wounded us so sorely that we could hardly hear the victorious cry of faith in its close. Wave after wave of sublime statement surged through the grey spaces of the Cathedral, and humbled us all with a knowledge of our mortality.

"There was a gracious fitness in the hymn which led us up to the close. 'For all the Saints who from their labors rest,' for in it, we found this verse:

"And when the strife is fierce, the warfare long,
Steals on the air the distant triumph-song,
And hearts are brave again, and arms are strong. Alleluia!

"The triumph-song may be distant, but it seemed to be nearer as the hymn died away, and as we stood up after the benediction, pronounced by the Archbishop of Canterbury, and listened to the silver grief of "The Last Post," the slow and passionate cry of the trumpets seemed to fall from heaven. Again and again, between dramatic pauses, the trumpets repeated their long cry, and rent us with their exquisite sorrow.

"I think we could have borne no more. It was not a congregation that was shedding its tears; it was an Empire."

There is no funeral service so touching, none that stirs the deep recesses of the soul as that of the Church of England. There is no patriotic nor any need of it. More, there would seem to be an awful audacity in it.

A Word about Carpet Squares!

We have just opened the finest display of Wilton, Axminster and Tapestry Carpet Squares that have ever been seen in the Island.

These Carpet Squares are remarkable for their exquisite colors and perfect design. Beautiful old Blues and deep Brown tones are blended in a fine Wilton that is very pleasing and restful to the eye. Another—a Tapestry in quaint Grey Tints has a lovely Pompadour border of roses in subdued colours. Yet another in lovely Old Rose and Reseda.

There is also a quantity of handsome Axminster Art Squares suitable for Den, Dining-room and Library.

The Last Man to See Lord Kitchener.

SURVIVORS' SPECIAL NARRATIVES.

Waiting Calmly, He Went Down With Ship.

(By Our Special Correspondent.)
How Lord Kitchener died was described to me by Leading Seaman Rogers, a survivor from H.M.S. Hampshire, whose home is at Hertford.

"Of those who left the ship and have survived," said Rogers, "I was the one who saw Lord Kitchener last. He went down with the ship. He did not leave her."

"I saw Capt. Savill help his boat's crew to get out the boats, but that was the same time the captain was calling to Lord Kitchener to come to the boat, but owing to the noise made by the wind and sea Lord Kitchener could not hear him, I think."

"When the explosion occurred Lord Kitchener walked calmly from the captain's cabin, went up the ladder, and on to the quarter deck. There I saw him walking quite collectedly, talking to two of the officers. All three were wearing khaki and had no overcoats on. In fact, they were dressed as they were when they came on board. Lord Kitchener calmly watched the preparations for abandoning the ship, which were going on in quite a steady and orderly way."

"The crew just went to their stations and obeyed orders, and did their best to get out the boats, but that was impossible. Owing to the rough weather no boats could be lowered. Those that were got out were smashed up at once. No boats left the ship. What the people on shore thought to be boats leaving were the rafts. Men did get into the boats as they lay in their cradles, thinking that as the ship went under them the boats would float. But the ship sank by the head, and when she went she turned a somersault forward, carrying down with her all the boats and those in them."

"I do not think Lord Kitchener got into a boat. When I sprang to a raft he was still on the starboard side of the quarter deck talking with his officers. From the little time that elapsed between my leaving the ship and her sinking I feel certain that Lord Kitchener went down with her and was on the deck at the time she sank. Of the civilian members of his suite I saw nothing."

Dying on the Raft.
"I got away on one of the rafts, and we had a terrible five hours in the water. It was so rough that the seas beat down on us, and many were killed by the buffeting. Many others died from the piercing cold. I was quite numb, and an overpowering desire to sleep came upon us. To keep this away we thumped each other on the back. For the man who went to sleep never woke again. When the men died it was just as though they were falling asleep. One man stood upright for five hours on the raft with dead lying all round him, and one man died in my arms."

"As we got near the shore the situation grew worse. The wind was blowing on shore, and the fury of the sea dashed our raft against the rocks with tremendous force. Many were killed in this way, and one raft was twice overturned. I don't quite know how I got ashore, for all feeling had gone out of me. We were very kindly treated by the people who picked us up. They said it was the worst storm they had for years."

"Although I do not really know what happened, my belief is that the Hampshire struck a mine which exploded under her fore part. It could not have been a submarine in such weather, and an internal explosion in one of her magazines would have ripped her apart. It was hard luck coming to such an end after going through the battle of Jutland unscathed. We led the Iron Duke into action and sank a German light cruiser and two submarines, but did not have a single casualty ourselves."

although big shells fairly rained into the water all round us."

Another Survivor.

First-class Petty Officer Wesson, the first man to scramble ashore from one of the rafts, said:

"At 5 p.m. on Monday, June 5, we embarked Lord Kitchener and his staff on a special mission, but we did not know where we were going. The weather was very rough—so rough that the two destroyers escorting us were sent back. About 8 p.m., while the watch below were standing by their hammocks ready to turn in, an explosion occurred. I was on the mess deck at the time. When the explosion happened all lights went out and a terrible draught sweeping along the deck blew the men's hats off. We did not know what had happened, so we walked aft to the only hatch that was not battened down owing to the weather."

"While I was waiting with others on the half-deck an officer came with Lord Kitchener from the captain's cabin. The officer called out, 'Make way for Lord Kitchener!' and the men opened out for Lord Kitchener to pass. His lordship went on deck and I did not see him any more after that."

"I went on deck and helped to clear away the hatches. As these were opened the men swarmed up them in hundreds from the mess deck. I saw all the crew were at their stations for abandoning ship, so I went to No. 1 raft and remained there until the water came up to the ridge rope. The ship went down forward and sank in about a quarter of an hour. Three circular rafts were launched. I picked up some men who had been wounded by the explosion, and put them on the grating in the bottom of the raft. Then I launched the raft upon which there were about forty men, including the wounded. We paddled clear of the ship and when we had got about fifty yards from her she turned and went right over. Some men were in the boats waiting for the water to lift them up, but when the ship turned over she took all those down in her vortex."

"The galley upset while being lowered and the whaler broke in two as she was being launched. It was impossible to launch both properly as the derrick would not work in consequence of the water in the ship having cut off the electric current. I saw men jumping from the quarter-deck as the ship turned over."

"The galley upset while being lowered and the whaler broke in two as she was being launched. It was impossible to launch both properly as the derrick would not work in consequence of the water in the ship having cut off the electric current. I saw men jumping from the quarter-deck as the ship turned over."

"The place where the ship sank was about three miles from the shore, and but for the awful weather the whole crew would probably have been saved. The seas were terrible. They overran us and swamped the raft. It was bitter. We suffered greatly from it, as some of the men were only half clothed, and were thoroughly exhausted when we reached shore. As the raft grounded I jumped off and waited until the next sea took me farther in. Then somehow I scrambled to the top of the cliff."

Scramble up Rock Cliffs.
"When I tried to stand up on reaching the top of the cliff my feet would not support me and I fell again. Seeing a house in the distance I crawled to it and tried to wake up the occupants. After shouting for about ten minutes I got an answer. When the people came to me I tried to explain to them what had happened, but could not. They took me in and put me in bed with hot-water bottles, but me in bed with hot-water bottles. Meanwhile I had managed to make them understand something about my companions, and rescue parties of the crofters living round about got ropes and went to the cliffs and saved all they could."

Other survivors tell similarly harrowing tales of their experiences. They say that many men perished from cold and exposure in the awful seas as the rafts were drifting shorewards. Many others were killed by being dashed against the rocks, which were precipitous and jagged. They estimate that where the raft landed the rocks were over 60 feet high, and all efforts to steer into a safer landing place proved futile. All the survivors were badly bruised and had their hands torn by scrambling up the rocky cliffs. They speak highly of the kindness shown them by the Orkney people. Thanks to the admirable care with which they have been treated in the naval hospitals all the survivors are now sufficiently recovered to go to their homes for a period of rest.—Daily Mail.

Address to Rev. Capt. Nangle.

At the O'Donel Wing of the B. I. S. Hall last night the Rev. Fr. Nangle, who leaves with the 1st Newfoundland Regiment as Chaplain, having received his appointment from the British Government, was presented with a purse of gold, accompanied by an illuminated address. The former was the gift of a host of friends and well-wishers of the popular young Priest, while the latter is a beautiful piece of art work prepared by Sister Mary Gerard, of the St. Clare's Home. Hon. J. D. Ryan made the presentation and also read the address. The Rev. Captain Nangle made a suitable reply. Speeches testifying to the many sterling qualities of the beloved Priest were made by Rev. E. O'Brien, Rev. Bro. Kennedy and Rev. Bro. M. C. Ryan.

The singing of Auld Lang Syne and the National Anthem, with cheers for Rev. Fr. Nangle brought the affair to a close. Following is a copy of the address:—

Dear Rev. Father,—We meet you to-night, not in a spirit of sadness which would usually pervade an atmosphere where farewells are said, but rather in a spirit of pride and joy.

In ordinary circumstances your parting with us would have begotten a sense of bereavement as does the departure of a Catholic Priest from the midst of a flock that loved him and whom he loved.

In the present extraordinary circumstances of war, your going is not a real separation, for you go to those whom we cannot separate from our dear boys fighting for our homes, who with our consent battle on the gruesome fields of combat. You go too, as one who will console not only the noble soldier lad with the solace of spiritual and manly encouragement, but also their parents and friends who anxiously are passing through the baleful grief of suffering and woe. For some time we have heard of your high resolve to go to the front and bring the sacramental benefits of Holy Religion to the dead and dying—and we regretted that your hope was deferred, owing to the difficulty of supplying your place in the Archdiocese. Now, however, the realization has come—our good Archbishop has given you his consent, and his blessing, and amongst the glories which will assuredly cover his Episcopate none will be greater than that he should allow the Catholic part of the Nrd. Regiment the services of him whom they love, revere and admire. Since the first enlistment you have shown a keen interest in our brave co-religionists in the regiment, and if their slogan in the 'immortal offensive has been push on with it before—inspired by your presence and led by your example of daring—the slogan shall have an added effect. We know you go to keep up the best traditions of the Catholic Priest, we feel that to succour those that are dying, you will consider your own life as nothing, and we are convinced that no chaplain on the field will have done his duty better than our own Father Tom. We say farewell—a glad farewell—we are proud of your undertaking and we applaud your noble spirit of patriotism and priesthood. As a little pledge of reverent esteem, kindly accept this purse. May you come back again, and until then God-speed and God bless you.

A Royal Visit to Canada

(From the Manchester Guardian)

The appointment of the Duke of Devonshire to be Governor General of Canada is, I believe, the preliminary to His Majesty's resolution to make a tour of the Dominions as soon after the war as may be feasible. He had intended visiting Canada during the Duke of Cornwall's tenure of office, but the hostilities of course put this out of the question. The Duchess of Devonshire is not only Mistress of the robes to the Queen, but is perhaps more intimately her friend than even Lady Llanington. The Queen will certainly accompany the King, who will probably take the opportunity of getting some big game shooting. Both the Duke and the Duchess of Devonshire (who already knows Canada) are anticipating their sojourn there with enthusiasm. The Duchess is an admirable hostess. The Canadians will doubtless see in the Duke Mr. Stephen Laycock's incredible idea of an English lord come true.

War on a Gigantic Scale.

The human mind staggers and reels as it attempts to grasp and apply the figures now coming from the battle-fields of Europe. Only the other day it was announced that England had four million men under arms. Yesterday came the news from German sources that the Russian infantry now actually on the field of battle on the eastern front numbers 2,740,000 men. The statement comes from London that the German losses since the war began, based on German figures, exceed three million men. The war bulletin from Petrograd last night declared that General Erusloff's army up to July 10 had taken prisoner 5,600 officers and 265,000 men. Fifty-three years ago the high-water mark on battlefields in the United States was reached at Gettysburg, when the Union army numbered 88,000 men and the confederate army 73,000 men, and the losses in three days' fighting on both sides killed, wounded and missing aggregated 43,449 men. The German losses in the war thus far about three million men exceed by more than 200,000 the total strength of the Northern armies engaged in the civil war from 1861 to 1865.

Gray in Shorthand.

(From the Philadelphia Bulletin)
"Efficiency has been getting the laugh of late, because its engineers claimed too much for it."
The speaker was Dr. Harris Dulles Rhodes, the efficiency expert of Denver.
"Yes," he continued, "the average efficiency engineer bragged as stupidly about efficiency as the correspondence school principal who said: 'We are told, and credibly told, that it took Gray seven years to write his famous poem, 'The Elegy in a Country Churchyard.' Yet if Gray had been an adept in our system of stenography he could have written the piece in seven minutes. Every graduate student of ours can write the poem in that length of time. It's one of our tests."
