CHAPTER XX.
A STRUGGLE FOR DEAR LIFE.

Presently, however, he came round, and then, with a revulsion of feeling, threw his arms round Laurence's neck, crying and sobbing and saying that he, Laurence, had saved his life, and that he was the dearest, bravest man that ever existed.

But, feeling the warm blood upon his face, he fell back with a cry of horror and clapped his hands before his eyes.

"Oh, oh, oh!" he cried; "you are hurt! Oh, Lorry, Lorry, look at the blood! You are hurt—you are hurt!" Laurence laughed, to reassure him, and from its rarity—for it was the first time Cecil had ever heard Lorry's laugh—he withdrew his hands and, with a shudder of horror, clung to Laurence's arm.

"Oh, what shall we do—what shall we do?" he moaned. "Look at your face and your breast! Oh, dear, good Lorry!"

And, much to Laurence's consternation, he burst out crying.

Laurence, more moved at the sight of the lad's tears than his own wounds—and some of them were not trifling—caught him by the hand.

"Don't cry, for Heaven's sake, Cecil!" he said. "Come, we must get away quickly—to the hut."

He spoke with difficulty, and Cecil, suddenly plucking up, not a little helped therein by the sight of Laurence's bleeding wounds, ran forward and caught the horses, the poor animals having been terror-stricken by the sight of their common enemy, and being too much encumbered by their bridles, which had caught in the thick tangle, to escape.

Laurence got into the saddle, but with difficulty.

Cecil was suddenly and marvelously calm, but kept his eyes as much as possible from the blood.

"Oh, let us ride for life!" he said, imploringly, "Let us get to the hut, Lorry."

And Laurence, smiling still but silent, led the way.

They had been tracking round almost in a circle, and fortunately were not far from the hut.

Fortunately, we say! for as they came in sight of it, Laurence swayed and nearly fell from the saddle, and had only strength left to reach the door when he fell full length upon the bed of grass.

Very pale, but very determined and resolute, Cecil tied the horses, and, kneeling down beside the swooning man, poured some brandy between his lips.

The spirit revived him sufficiently to enable him to raise his head and look around.

He nodded with great satisfaction as he recognized the hut and, lifting his eyes to Cecil's pale face with a quiet smile, said:

"Well, Cecil, it's my turn to faint. My poor boy, it's a rare fright for you."

"Oh, never mind me!" cried Cecil, hotly, stamping his foot. "Think of yourself. Tell me where to find some water."

"At the back of the hut—the stream runs behind the rock," said Laurence. Cecil sprang away, and returned almost immediately with one of the iron basins full of water.

Then, without a word, he helped Laurence to raise himself, and bound some strips of linen round his breast.

It was some minutes before the blood would be stanchied, but Cecil succeeded in stopping it at last, and then, Laurence letting him have his own way, without a word he bathed the scratch on the forehead and removed the hideous stains from the tanned face.

"There," he said, in a cheery voice but with an angelic smile of pity and tenderness; "there, you look my brave, good Lorry once more! Oh, I can't bear blood, and to think you should be covered with it—ugh! And now a drop more brandy."

Laurence drank a little and dropped back. He was too weak, too faint with the loss of blood, to feel even surprised at the sudden change in his youthful companion; but he was conscious of a sweet, delicious sense of peace and relief, and lay with closed eyes.

Meanwhile Cecil lighted the fire and put the iron stew-kettle on the tripod. Then he took one of the remaining steaks from the saddle-bags and cut it up into squares ready for stewing. When the water was hot he put them in.

It was all he could do, and having done it, sat down to wait, for Laurence had fallen asleep.

What Cecil was thinking of as he gazed at the handsome face of the helpless cattle-runner at his feet who can say?

Perhaps the look upon his face, marvelously gentle and loving, was called there by the remembrance that Laurence had saved his life and had shed his blood for him.

Presently Laurence woke, with a wistful, devouring gaze in his eyes. He stared for a moment, as one does when waking from a dream; then, raising himself upon his elbow, said, faintly:

"Cecil, it is growing late. They will expect you at the station. Take the black—he is the quickest—and do not spare him."

"And you?" asked Cecil, with a quiet but determined smile.

"Tell them," replied Laurence, laying his head down again, "that you left me in one of the runs and that I shall be back in a day or two. You need say nothing about our little adventure, lad. I'll stay here."

Cecil smiled, and without a word rose and left the hut.

Laurence opened his eyes and sighed. "He might have said 'good-night,'" he muttered. "Poor lad! Too frightened maybe to think of anything."

In a few minutes, however, Cecil re-entered the hut with the two saddles upon his arms.

Laurence raised himself again. "What have you taken the saddles off for?" he asked, faintly.

"You said you would stay here, did you not? And it would have mattered little if you hadn't, considering you can't ride a yard! And I am going to stay, too," said Cecil, quietly.

"No, no!" remonstrated Laurence. "Take the black and made for the station."

Cecil's brow lowered.

"Lorry," he said, "I should be worse than the beast that hurt you if I did such a thing. And you know it! Don't be a cruel, wicked, unkind Lorry; but let me stay!" he added, imploringly, kneeling down beside him. "Let me stay!"

Lorry took the little white hand and pressed it, but the youth clasped his other hand on top of the wounded man's and held it for a minute; then, bursting into tears, bent his head and kissed it passionately.

CHAPTER XXI.
"SHE HAS RUN AWAY."

How are we tossed! On fortune's tickle food! The waves that with surprising kindness brought The dear wreck to my arms have snatched it back. And left me mourning on the desert shore.—SHAKESPEARE.

It is almost time we returned to the Dale.

The beauty of the Cape scenery and the interest attached to the strange life in its wilds have beguiled us from that impartiality which is the stern duty of every historian.

To return, then, to Merry England and miserable Squire Darrell.

The captain and he remained talking for a little while, both planning and laying out the future with that delightful short-sightedness which distinguishes men of their class, and taking Grace's consent as a matter of course, in exactly the same way as the squire had reckoned upon Hugh's tame submission.

Then the captain, saying that he would go back at some hour which the squire was anxious about, both left the room and went down-stairs.

In the hall the captain met Mrs. Lucas. She courted as she passed her, and he turned to ask her if she had seen Grace.

"No, Mr. Reginald," replied Mrs. Lucas. "I haven't seen her since she went out this morning."

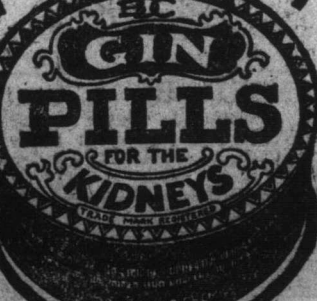

"Oh," said the captain, "she is staying at the Warren, I suppose!" and putting on his hat went out. He wanted a little quiet time to think over the last move he had made and to plan the remainder; so he walked round the farm and lounged about the stables, apparently to look at the horses and smoke his cigar, but really thinking hard.

He was out till it was time for dinner, to which he came dressed more carefully than usual, a flower from the conservatory in the button-hole of his well-cut coat, a nicely toned smile on the good-looking, high-bred face.

To-night he meant to follow up the attack he had made on the vanity—he gave neither Grace nor any other woman, save the dead one, credit for heart-of-the-rough, unsophisticated girl, and wanted to look his best.

As for his smooth, soft tongue, that was always in training; he could always rely upon that.

The squire hobbled down—he said he couldn't sleep if he did not take his cut of beef and glass of wine in the dining-room—and Mrs. Lucas was only waiting for the appearance of Miss Grace to send up the dinner.

Reginald looked at his watch. "What is the time?" growled the squire.

"A quarter-past seven," replied the captain. "Grace is late."

"Yes," snarled the squire, "and the fish will be spoiled. Ugh! If there is anything I hate it is to have my dinner spoiled; it's the only thing I enjoy. She's always late. Here, James, go and ask Mrs. Lucas if she knows where Miss Grace is, and look sharp."

The man flew before the captain could put in:

"She is over at the Warren, I think, sir. At least, I left her on the way to it. She will most likely stay to dine there."

"Then why the fiend can't she send word?" growled the squire. "Rebecca's got plenty of people hanging about the house she might send it by, surely, and it's scarcely civil, I think, to keep me waiting. Ring the bell, Reginald, will you? I won't wait any longer for her."

Dinner was brought up, and the squire eat his fish and fowl in bed temper.

Reginald Dartmouth set himself to work to dispel it and, after a deal of talking about the estate and crops, finally succeeded.

Dinner was finished without further mention of Grace, and the squire sank into his dining-chair.

The captain lighted a cigar and threw himself upon the sofa, considering whether he should take horse and gallop over to the Warren or send the basket-chaise to bring the willful girl back.

But thinking it best to wait, feeling assured that Rebecca would bring her home in the brougham, he closed his eyes and took his seat, waiting her return.

Presently the squire woke. The room, lighted by the fire only, was nearly dark.

"Grace!" he cried, with a start, looking round the room anxiously.

"She has not come back yet," said Reginald. "I better go after her."

"Not come back?" said the squire. "Confound her, I was dreaming of her, I think! It's miserable dreaming—you always dream something confounded unpleasant and disagreeable! It's very late. Take the brougham, Reginald; she'll catch cold else," he growled.

The Most Beautiful Car in America

A New Development in Light Sixes

Before we began experimental work on our new six-cylinder motor three years ago, we made a very thorough investigation of the light six field.

We found out just what qualities car owners desired in the power plants of their motor cars and then we designed an engine to meet these requirements.

The wisdom of our method is attested by the unanimous approval given our five-passenger "Glenbrook" model. With its first appearance, it immediately won the enthusiastic support of motorists.

And, by its dependable and economical performance, it has so clearly demonstrated its high character as an investment value that our production schedule is already proving unequal to the demand.

The "Glenbrook" is a truly remarkable development in five-passenger cars. Won't you arrange for a demonstration while our dealer is in position to meet your requirements as to delivery?

Imperialists Behind Revolutionary Movement

In Germany -- Royal Plotters Are Fomenting Trouble --- Privy Council to Have Dominion Ambassadors -- Russian Envoys in London Regarded as Mysteries -- Cumberland County, Nova Scotia, Ravaged By Forest Fires -- Turkish Press Demands Modification of Peace Treaty.

RUMOURS OF REVOLT IN GERMANY GROWING.

LONDON, May 31. Rumours of impending revolt are steadily growing in Berlin and there are indications that the headquarters of the new revolutionary movement are at Potsdam where Prince August William, son of the former Emperor William, is staying. He is regarded as the leader of the military party, says a despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. Advances from Doorn, where the former Emperor is now living, declare William Hohenzollern is in high hopes of a successful coup and believes he will once more become ruler of the German Empire, the despatch says.

WILL SUPPORT GOVERNMENT.

BERLIN, May 31. Commanders of the garrison of greater Berlin visited the Minister of Defense to-day and took the oath that they and their corps were ready to protect the constitution by force against any attempted coup whether from the right or left.

THE TURKISH TREATY.

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 31. The full text of the Turkish treaty is expected to reach Constantinople within two or three days. In the meantime Turkish papers are making clear their view that no Government dare sign the treaty without modification. It is generally believed here that failure of the Turks to sign would result in a movement of Greek forces from Smyrna toward the interior of Anatolia.

ENCOUNTERS BETWEEN GREEKS AND TURKS REPORTED.

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 31. (Associated Press).—Karagatch, a suburb of Adrianople, situated on the right bank of the Maritza river which is being occupied by Greek troops, was under fire from Turkish artillery yesterday. A number of shrapnel shells fell about the station but the building was not damaged. Several small encounters between Greek and Turkish forces south of Karagatch are reported.

REPORT COLONIAL OFFICE TO BE REORGANIZED.

LONDON, May 31. The Daily Express says that the Colonial Office is to be reorganized and the Dominions in future will deal solely with the Privy Council, of which Balfour is Lord President. The Express adds "the sister nations overseas will enter the highest Council of the Mother State. Their high commissioners in London will become Ambassadors and members of the family Council of the race." This announcement has not been confirmed in any other quarter and Dominion representatives have had no information concerning it.

MEN OF MYSTERY.

LONDON, May 31. Gregory Krassin, Russian Soviet Minister for Trade and Commerce, and his fellow commissioners now in London have remained men of mystery thus far during their visit here. They are secluded in a quiet hotel frequented chiefly by business men from the Provinces, and in accordance with conditions arranged previous to their coming, they are refusing to see newspaper men or even representatives of the business world who wish information or desire to present plans for trade with Russia. The London newspapers which are against any negotiations with the Soviet movement are continuing to protest against the admission of Krassin and his collaborators and against the proposal for a meeting between them and Lloyd George and Lord Curzon, the foreign secretary.

CHARGES AGAINST KAROLYI.

BUDAPEST, May 31. (Associated Press).—A warrant for the arrest of Count Michael Karolyi, former Provisional President of Hungary, has been issued by the commandant of the military tribunal. Count Karolyi is charged with having instigated murder and with acting against the National defense.

PROZE TO DEATH.

COPENHAGEN, May 31. Two members of Captain Ronald Amundsen's North Polar expedition, Knudsen and Tessen, are reported in advices received to-day, to have frozen to death during last winter.

NO TAX ON WAR WEALTH.

LONDON, May 31. The Press foreshadows the abandonment of the proposal to make a levy on war wealth and Lord Beaverbrook states that this is the Government's decision.

MADE ROME TO TOKIO FLIGHT.

TOKIO, May 31. Lieutenants Masiero and Ferrari, the Italian aviators, completed their flight from Rome to Tokio to-day.

FOREST FIRE DOES IMMENSE DAMAGE.

AMHERST, N.S., May 31. Half a million dollars damage has already been committed by a huge forest fire that is raging in Cumberland County. The town of Joggins and the villages of River Herbert and Mac-cann are in serious danger from flames and unless rain falls within the course of the night it is more than likely that the villages will be wiped off the map. Backed by a forty mile wind the fire is speedily sweeping all before it. Thus far a school house and several mills have been destroyed. Over ten thousand acres of valuable timber land have been devastated and many thousands of other acres will be cleaned out by the raging flames.

RAILWAY COLLISIONS.

ELMIRA, N.Y., May 31. The engineer and firemen of Lehigh

Valley train number 6 were killed and 3 passengers were slightly injured when that train met head on with a train drawn by two engines near Vanetten, N.Y., on the main line of the Lehigh Valley early this morning. Train number 6 was a through train comprised of six or eight pullman cars east bound and was due in New York early this afternoon.

The Virtue of a Comma.

Small and insignificant though the comma looks, its absence in ancient times made it possible for the pagan oracles to reap a golden harvest on predictions which "never failed," because they could be interpreted any way the event happened to fall out.

For example: "Pyrrhus I tell you the Romans will conquer." If the comma is placed after "you," the meaning is that the Romans will conquer. Poor Pyrrhus, however, put a meaning upon the sentence as if the comma had been after "tell," and this gave him the idea that the oracle meant that he would conquer. He didn't.

Even after the introduction of commas and other modern punctuation marks—the memorial—English lawyers in the Middle Ages, down as far as the time of the famous Blackstone, less than two centuries ago, made it a point never to punctuate pleadings or other important documents. They knew that a comma, one way or another, would change the meaning and fearing they might place the comma in the wrong part of the sentence, they eschewed its use altogether.

True, it was not always a matter of punctuation that gave the ancient oracles their dual meaning. This frequently depended upon the grammatical construction of the sentence, which no possible kind of punctuation could have obviated.

Of the historic Delphic replies one of the best known is that given to Croesus, king of Lydia, and one of the wealthiest men of antiquity. He had long had his eye on Persia, which under Cyrus had grown to be a mighty empire. Before attacking Cyrus he asked the Oracle at Delphi what the outcome of his campaign would be. The reply was, "If you cross the River Halys you will destroy a great empire."

Destroyed His Own Empire.

The Halys was the boundary line between Lydia and Persia. Consequently Croesus felt that the meaning of the oracle was conclusively in favor of his conquest of Persia, and accordingly he crossed the Halys with an army of mercenaries. His army was beaten and in the end he was taken captive by Cyrus and ordered to be burned to death.

The great empire which he had destroyed was his own. But in justice to the memory of Cyrus it should be added that the death sentence was revoked in the nick of time, just as the flames were beginning to reach out for the fagots on which the feet of Croesus were resting.

In the heyday of his prosperity Croesus had entertained at his court Solon, the great Athenian lawgiver, and had shown him his treasure-houses and other evidences of wealth, and then asked him whether he did not consider him happy. "No one," replied the sage Solon, "can be called happy as long as he lives, for the vicissitudes that one life and fortune are so treacherous that one can never know just what misfortune the morrow may bring forth."

And so now, when he saw the flames drawing nearer and nearer, the hapless king, recalling the words of the Athenian sage, exclaimed, "Oh Solon, Solon, Solon!"

Cyprus demanded to know what he meant by this exclamation, and when Croesus told him, the conqueror, realizing that the same instability of fortune which had hurried Croesus from the throne might also fall to his own lot, ordered his release and took him into his friendship.

Kissed Our Universal Mother.

The most important oracular statement ever given as far as Rome was concerned was that given to the sons of Tarquin, who had gone to Delphi to inquire concerning a portent which had appeared to their father, and after receiving the reply, they made further inquiry on their own "book" as to who should be their father's successor as king.

"Whichever of you shall first kiss our mother shall possess the sovereign power at Rome," was the reply.

Titus and Aruns, the young princes, drew lots as to which of them was to have the privilege of bestowing the filial kiss first upon their return from Greece, and they gave orders that no one should dare tell their brother secrets, who had remained at home, what the oracle had predicted.

The ambitious young men had taken along with them Lucius Junius, their cousin, who, to escape the tragic fate which had overtaken the rest of his family at the hands of Tarquin, had feigned imbecility from early childhood and was accordingly allowed to live as incapable of being dangerous to the rule of the royal family. On account of his apparent difficulty of speech they had nick-named him Brutus, in allusion to the brute animals.

When Brutus heard the prediction of the oracle he fell into a fit of what seemed to be insane laughter, and, laughing, stumbled and fell, and, unobserved by the princes, kissed the earth, our universal mother.

How the Oracle was Verified.

Those who are familiar with the story of the chaste Lucrece know in what manner the oracle was verified, when Brutus, chasing the Tarquins out of the city, ended once for all the kingship of Rome and established a republican form of Government.

Another famous oracular saying which was misunderstood until the moment when it was verified was that given to the great Theban general, Epaminondas. He was the man of whom history speaks, as one who would never tell a lie. In the case of Epaminondas this love of truth was carried to so sublime a height that he would not even tell a lie in jest.

But to return to the oracle. He had been told never to trust himself to Pelagos. Now Pelagos in Greek means sea, and, believing that the oracle meant to warn him against ever trying the fortunes of war at sea, took great pains to avoid any sea conflict with his country's hereditary foe, Sparta.

During the most famous of the battles against the Spartans, the battle of Mantinea, the fighting led into a forest, where Epaminondas fell mortally wounded while performing prodigies of valor. He lived just long enough to discover that the name of the forest was Pelagos.

SUGAR.

The Newfoundland Food Control Board have, in the interests of the general public, taken over the control of all Sugar Sales.

In accordance with the plan worked out, by which the price of sugar will be stabilized until the end of year at least, the maximum retail price of sugar is today fixed at THIRTY CENTS PER POUND.

Regulations governing sales will in due course be published.

This action has been taken in order to protect the public against the probable price of forty cents per pound in a few months, which would have been inevitable if this step had not been taken.

New Flags the War Has Made.

Never has there been such a fluttering of new flags as at the present time, and as "Peace" and other celebrations have revived much interest recently in national emblems, an account of their varied colors and designs may be timely.

It must be admitted that in most cases a great opportunity has been missed, and not much originality or imagination shown, for certainly none of the newcomers can challenge comparison with our own splendid Union Jack, the Stars and Stripes of the United States, or the effective Sunburst of Japan.

One of the most successful is the new flag of Poland, consisting of white and red horizontal stripes, with a red shield appearing in the centre of the upper half, upon which is emblazoned the white eagle of Poland, curiously enough (seeing that it is the flag of a republic) still wearing a crown!

There has been a great moulting of "eagles" recently in European heraldry, but the bird of war flags its wings and again raises its (double) head as the emblem of rock-bound Albania. Incidentally, in this flag is committed what might almost be called the heraldic "crime" of emblazoning "color on color"—that is black or red. If one had been a "metal" (yellow or white) it would have made all the difference.

The flag of Ukraine, modest in its design of blue over yellow, horizontally arranged, aims at least at being symbolic, the official description explaining that it represents the blue sky over the golden wheatfields of Europe's richest granary.

The new flag of Czechoslovakia incorporates the colors of Bohemia, white over red, with a triangular patch of blue let in at the "hoist" end, emblematic of the blue hills of the Carpathians.

The flag of Latvia (otherwise Letland or Lettonia), one of the new Baltic states carved from the side of Russia, is red, white, red, horizontally, the two red stripes being each double the width of the central white. As an instance of the persistence of warlike

Do You Want to Wear The World's Best Hat?

Do you want to wear the latest recognized style, not of one city but of the whole world?

Do you want to wear one of the world's two best Hats made by manufacturers whose products cover the heads of All the World and His Son?

Do you want to wear a Hat that will not fade its color; that will not lose its shape; that will wear as long as you would expect a Hat of Superior Quality to wear?

Three statements that would apply, any or all of them, to the World's Best Hat. Perhaps someone has told the same things to you when he sold you your last hat. If he sold you the World's Best Hat he naturally would be enthusiastic about it. But it's hard to tell who sells the World's Best Hat when everyone claims to have it.

We have the World's Best Hat and we have an original way to prove it.

"If the hat fades its colour, if it loses any of the finely-blocked lines of its shape that the makers know so well how to put into it; if it does not give you greater value than any other hat made at ANY price—KEARNEY FIRST is willing to 'make good' your loss"—just to prove that we have the World's Best Hat.

realism, it may be added that the red is officially described as the "color of coagulated blood."

Futuristic Combination.

Two other states that have broken away from Russia have chosen horizontal stripes, but in these cases tri-colors of equal width, Estonia flying blue, black and white and Lithuania the gay "Futuristic" combination of yellow, green, and red, in both instances reading downward.

Another flag that will soon be familiar in Baltic and British waters is that of Finland, with its simple but effective device of a dark blue upright cross upon a white ground, oblong for the merchant service and swallow-tailed when flown as the ensign.

The new emblem of Austria is very liable to be mistaken for that of Latvia, here again the colors being red, white, red, horizontal, but in this case of equal width. This design only differs from the old flag of Austria-Hungary in not having the lowest stripe half red, half green, the latter color representative of Hungary.

The newly-recognized Caucasian republic of Georgia has chosen a rather striking flag, crimson in color, the upper "canton" (or quarter) being occupied by equal stripes of black and white.

Finally, from official information received it is stated that the new flags of Germany are as follows:

The national flag is to be horizontal stripes of black, red and yellow, while the mercantile flag retains the old black, white and red horizontally, but with a "canton" of black, red and yellow in the corner.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

IT HAS GONE UP FIVE HUNDRED PER CENT.

RUTH CAMERON

To say a thing has gone up 100 per cent. since before the war excites little comment in these days. We are coming to look upon the doubled cost of almost everything as a matter of course. But how about a thing which has gone up 500 per cent — at least? Surely such a leap should startle us even in these days.

I refer to the amount of money necessary to please and impress a child. There was a time when if you gave the child of an average middle class family a penny, you gave him the key to a child's kingdom of delight and he was grateful accordingly.

He Will Probably Think You a Piker.

Give that same child, or rather his younger brother, a penny to-day, and he is impressed? Not at all. He is more apt to be scornful of you as a piker who deals in pennies. It takes at least a nickel, in some cases a dime, to give him the same thrill that a penny used to give him. Seriously, the effect on a child's sense of values of the freedom with which money is flung about in these days is really bad.

When, with the rest of the world I read and loved Roosevelt's wonderful letters to his children, one thing which particularly impressed me was the simple standard of living to which the Roosevelt home life was keyed.

Each Child Received Five Cents.

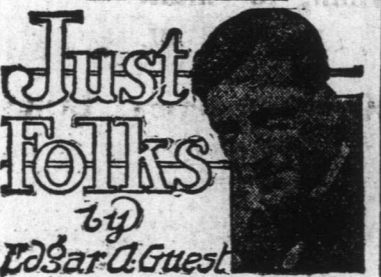

For instance, when the children had learned a hymn and recited it to their father in their mother's absence, Roosevelt writes, "Each finally got one hymn perfect, whereupon in accordance with previous instructions I presented each of them with a five cent piece." Yet the hymn was evidently the work of several days and the Roosevelts are wealthy people.

Again he writes to Ted, "Ethel is earning money for the purchase of the Art Magazine by industriously hoeing up the weeds in the walk." (In many families with half the Roosevelt's money the child would only have had to ask for such a magazine to have it given her. She would not have been obliged to make that effort which would bring her a compensating deepening of appreciation and enhanced sense of value.)

Later he writes to Ethel from the White House.

A President's Daughter Keeps Expenses Down.

"I think you are a little trump and I love the letter and the way you take care of the children and keep the expenses down and cook bread, and are just your own blessed self." The child who is taught the value of money, the difficulty and yet the sweetness of earning it the worthiness of wise spending and careful conservation of property, has learned a lesson that will stand him in good stead whatever his position in life may be.

MEMORIAL DAY.

These did not pass in selfishness, they died for all mankind. They died to build a better world for all who stay behind; And we who hold their memory dear, and bring them flowers to-day, Should consecrate ourselves once more to live and die as they.

These were defenders of the faith and guardians of the truth. That you and I might live and love, they gladly gave their youth; And we who set this day apart to honor them who sleep, Should pledge ourselves to keep the faith they gave their lives to keep.

If tears are all we shed for them, they shall have died in vain. If flowers are all we bring them, forgotten they remain; If by their courage we ourselves to courage are not led, Then needlessly these graves were closed above our heroes dead.

We must be brave as they were brave, and true as they were true. To symbolize our love with flowers is not enough to do. They died to build a better world, and we who mourn to-day, Should consecrate ourselves once more to live and die as they.

Fashions and Fads.

Tussore, ratine and rubberized cloths are used for beach capes. French hats are elaborately trimmed with ribbons and feathers. Frequently we see small puffed sleeves terminating in dainty ruffles. A good sports skirt is a black silk jersey striped with a white galloon. Vels are wide bordered. Bodices are slightly fitted. Fleet sweaters grow lazier. Hats from Paris are very colorful. Red-and-white combinations are popular. The turned-up brims bring back the parasol. Embroidered organdie muslin is widely used. Beach wraps follow the lines of street capes. Elbow-length gloves will be worn this summer. Large hats of ribbon are faced with organdie. The bathing suit features a large crushed girdle. Fancy stockings are having a tremendous vogue. The round, frilled collar of organdie is back again. Wool frocks cut in coat style are worn at the shore. Large, brilliant buckles are worn with dull slippers. For the sports suit, horseshoe pockets are popular. Bustles are sometimes composed of large taffeta bows. For organdie frocks wide scallops are much approved.

The Ex-President of Mexico.

Since February 23, 1913, when President Madero was murdered, Mexico, for the most part, has been in a chronic state of revolution. The populace has been given over to factions that have carried on a guerrilla warfare, destroying one another and ruining the industries and the commerce of the country.

After a brief lull, the storm again rages, and the control of the Government of the country is again being fought for. The constitution provides that this is to be decided by the ballot-box. That is the theory; the practice is to decide it by the rifle.

After the murder of Madero, power was seized by General Huerta. Two months later civil war broke out, and a little more than a year later Huerta resigned. Then General Carranza came to the front and formed a government. In May, 1917, an election was held and Carranza was declared elected. His government has never known peace and now it is the storm-centre of another revolution that threatens to upset everything, so far as there is anything established in Mexico.

General Venustiano Carranza was born 60 years ago in the City of Cuatro Ciénegas. His father had been a colonel in the Mexican army.

After leaving school, young Carranza began to study law, but he soon deserted his books for the open life of farming and cattle raising on his father's estate. He made a success of his undertaking, and so established himself that they elected him Municipal President, or head of the district in which he lived.

Next he became Governor of the State of Coahuila, but not until he had threatened rebellion against the central Government.

Diaz was then Dictator, and he opposed the election of Carranza for a second term. Madero supported Carranza, and in the end Diaz was overthrown and Madero became President, to be murdered a few months later. Since then insurrection and anarchy have raged like a prairie fire.

Some who knew Carranza intimately speak of him as a man of ability, high courage and devoted to Mexico, but having the ill-fortune of attempting to govern in a stormy time.

OPTIMISM.

Are you sad and weary hearted, are you full of prunes? Come and see my lyre get started, hear my cheer-up tunes. Do you think you've cornered sorrow? I have griefs, as well; but I'm banking on to-morrow; hear my blithe-some yell. I have worn and see the reaping done by other men; I've had spuds and hoped to cook them, greens I wished to eat; but the sheriff came and took them, in the name of Pete. I have lost an aunt so stately that she beat Lenore; even yet I miss her greatly, but I weep no more. For our tears bring home no bacon, bring no fodder in; when we're stricken and forsaken, it is best to grin. Are you beaten down and broken, finding life too hard? Come and hear a glad word spoken by a cornfed hard. Single sorrows soon are double if you weep and sigh; nothing scares off Old Man Trouble like a courage high.

The Fishery Outlook.

Northern schooner owners are beginning to make their annual preparations for the fishery. Vessels are being cleaned and painted up, sails overhauled, repaired and bent, traps, seines and nets taken out of the store and treated to a solution of bark and tar. The wheels of industry hum early and late in the multitudinous details of getting ready, and men are busy as bees using axe and hammer and saw, sail and netting needle, preparing for the Labrador trip and its attendant good fortune. Already the white sails of the advance guard of the fleet have appeared in the harbor, the waters of which are dotted with fore and afters, both large and small, while the wharves have received their quota of the flotilla discharging produce and taking on supplies for the season's work. That is those of the planters who are receiving outfits from the supplying merchants. According to reports the number of these is small, and suppliers are not anxious, because of prevailing conditions at home and abroad, to increase their issues on fishery accounts. This state of things, however, may change when the bulk of the fleet arrives, and it is possible that having reviewed the situation, the trade may gain more confidence in future transactions on a credit basis.

The present stringency is doubtless due to the financial state of the countries to which our fish is exported. Their recovery from the strain and stress of the war is proceeding but slowly, and is being retarded seriously by the frequent recurrence of strikes. Such problems as these with which they have to deal are vastly different from those of Newfoundland. Never wealthy countries, in so far as the masses go, our customers in Europe had more serious conditions to face after the termination of the war, than the general public of Newfoundland was aware of. Their problems of reconstruction were of a more complex nature, their finances being all adrift. Hence it stands to reason that while they are laboring to rebuild their shattered financial fabrics, they have to economise and in the practice of that economy high prices for fish have to be ruled out. They simply cannot afford to eat it in quantity. But in the process of time—a short one we hope—matters will adjust themselves and Newfoundland will be able to dispose of her fish products at a profit that will make it worth while to increase production. Because a temporary depression has set in and foreign markets have not yet settled themselves with any degree of stability, is no reason for letting up on a single fish industry of Newfoundland. Codfish must be caught to supply the needs of countries which have no fisheries of their own, and therefore being the staple of our wealth, it would be disastrous and ruinous to thousands if the prosecution of this fishery were to be abandoned.

Years ago the Labrador herring fishery was a source of tremendous revenue to fishermen. The demand for these fish, barrelled, came from the neighboring continent, and cargo after cargo was sold in the markets of Montreal and Quebec, these cities being the centres from which Newfoundland herring were distributed all over Canada. Of late years, however, Labradorers have not been equipping themselves with a great deal of twine, taking along but enough to provide themselves with bait, and should the herring again return to the shore in only half the numbers of earlier years, the lack of appliances would militate against any large takes. Old fishermen, who have made a study of the herring, based on past experiences, claim that each year of the past five has shown that these fish are coming back to their original schooling grounds in ever-increasing numbers. As there is no reason to doubt this statement, it would be well for those who go down to Labrador this year to take with them all the gear necessary and be prepared to resume this fishery, once so valuable, and fraught with so little trouble in its prosecution. The days of the thousand barrel hauls by seines may not come back, but there is a great opportunity of reviving this industry and making it again an asset of no small importance. A rather peculiar hypothesis was advanced the other day by a caller, who stated that, coincident with the departure of the herring from the Labrador coast, the curlew and plover, birds which were found in myriads during the months of July and August, also took flight and have not been seen on the whole stretch of coast in any great flocks since. Whether there is any connection, or whether it is merely one of these natural coincidences that occur at times, who can say? But this much can be said, the curlew has forsaken Labrador. Should it return with the herring the coincidence theory disappears.

"Instigations" a New Book.

"Instigations," (Boni and Liveright, N.Y.; S. E. Garland, retail), by Ezra Pound, is a collection of various works by that popular writer. They are written in Pound's own style, and his fresh, brilliant criticisms will delight and charm the discriminating reader. A peculiar thing about Ezra Pound is that once you read anything which he has written you become, like the admirer of George Bernard Shaw, a devotee of his cult, and acquire, strangely enough, an insatiable thirst for his poetry, his prose or anything else that is his. He writes of the life and beauty of the day as they find expression in literature. "Instigations" is an expression of the fullness of his appreciation and the depth of his rare and imaginative critical faculty. Here are the verses and the living studies of French poets—La Fontaine, Rabelais, Rostand, and a vitalized analysis of the work of Henry James. And a piercing, a fully understanding discussion of the looming figures in modern letters that acts like a searchlight, illuminating the road that the spirit of man is taking, somewhat uncertainly perhaps, to interpret life and make it comprehensible. "Instigations" is a new publication, fully in keeping with the high standard of excellence set by Boni and Liveright. It has been locally copyrighted.

Shipwrecked Crew Arrives.

By S.S. Rosalind there arrived Capt. Samuel Courtney, Mate E. Whiteway, Engineer C. Courtney, Cook P. Vautier and Seamen J. Crewe, G. Hawkins, G. Flynn, P. Murphy, V. Viscount, of the ill-fated auxiliary schooner Samuel Courtney, which vessel was destroyed by fire at Gibraltar early in May. The vessel was on a passage from Italy to Seville, Spain, with a cargo of Staves, and on May 6th, being then about to enter the port of Gibraltar, took fire and burned to the waters edge. The disaster happened at midnight and the Captain and crew had but scant time to escape in their boat, being obliged to leave all their belongings behind. They crossed from Gibraltar to New York on an East Indian ship. The Samuel Courtney was a tern, auxiliary schooner, having twin screws registering 419 tons and owned by Campbell & McKay, T. H. Carter being the manager. She was practically a new vessel being but eighteen months old.

Mission Evangelist Going to America.

Miss Alice B. Garrigus, who came here 9 years ago as an evangelist to Bethesda Mission, New Gower street, left for Canada and America on a vacation which will last for the summer months. In Montreal Miss Garrigus will spend some time at a mission conducted by Rev. Mr. Baker, who was in this city last summer. Several people from Bethesda Mission saw the evangelist off at the station to-day.

Trap Berth Trouble.

Fisheries Minister Makes Statement. A number of fishermen from Pouch Cove, came to the city this morning to interview the Minister of Marine and Fisheries re a difference of opinion about the regulation of trap berths. A body of men went to the fisheries office this morning, and finding that the Minister was in asked to have an interview. This they were not granted, and according to their own story, the door was locked and that gentleman escaped through a secret entrance, but a sentinel who spotted him getting in his motor car got a statement from him—thus: "The berths will be drawn for." The trouble, it appears, is that on May 5th it was gazetted that berths would be drawn for Pouch Cove section in June. A petition from some of the fishermen was presented asking that the drawing be stopped. This was agreed to by the Fisheries Board and consequently the men set their traps in the usual berths. In the meantime another deputation waited on the department and stated that the majority of the fishermen were in favor of a drawing; consequently the drawing was ordered to take place. The men with traps in the water say they will not remove them and they will wait to see who will. Legal advice has been taken on the matter.

New Fire Trucks Arrive.

Crowds of people visited the Red Cross pier this morning to inspect the two new trucks which arrived by the Rosalind for the fire department. The apparatus may be described as a combination chemical engine and hose truck. It is a substantial affair, 6 cylinder, 105 horse-power and giant cord, 9 1/2 inch pneumatic tires. The equipment is complete with all the latest fire fighting appliances and includes 1,000 feet of 2 1/2 inch water hose, 200 feet chemical hose, 2 chemical tanks of 40 gallons each capacity, 12 ft. roof ladder, 20 ft. extension ladder, a number of hand extinguishers, siren horn and a 9 inch searchlight. One of the trucks will be stationed at the Central Fire Hall, and will respond to calls from all over the city; the other will be used in the West End only. Inspector General Hutchings deserves credit for this valuable and modern addition to our fire fighting apparatus.

C. L. B. Overalls Dance.

GREAT SUCCESS. Some 800 couples attended the C.L. B. "overalls" dance in the Gymnasium last night. As any garments would do for the occasion, a most enjoyable time was spent. Some of the ladies looked charming in their cotton and gingham dresses while the gentlemen also looked business like in their overalls. It is likely that the affair will be repeated in short.

Educational Meeting To-Day's

Large Audience Hears Views of American Expert -- N.F. School System Severely Criticised.

Doctors Engelhardt and Hart, educationalists, Columbia University, New York, spoke last evening to a crowded house in the Methodist College Hall on the subject of "Inter-denominational Education."

Mr. J. W. Withers, presiding, introduced the lecturers, of whom Dr. Engelhardt was first to speak.

He pointed out that all the 10,000 students (teachers and superintendents from various parts of America) who went to Columbia University did so with the fundamental idea that the state is responsible for the education of the young and that the home cannot attend to the same in the present compact state of affairs. Education is a state function and the state ought to pay for it. In the United States $100,000,000 is being appropriated for control of schools by various states. Every boy and girl should be given a chance, and teachers properly fitted for the work accorded them. Such teachers will demand the right kind of school buildings and a living wage. In communities in N. Y. State teachers receive from $1,500 to $2,700, with opportunities for advancement—and this in communities no bigger than St. John's. Millions have been appropriated for schools in small cities in America, and all are built with standard floor space, lighting arrangements, ventilation, etc. No room housed more than 40 pupils—mostly it was 35. Children are classified according to their mental capacities, and the scheme is developed on scientific lines, so as to place each child in his particular class. Children are, in St. John's, crowded into schools which are really dirt dungeons, and he showed by scales prepared that, whereas the Protestant denominations should have 560 pupils beyond the 7th standard in attendance, they have not 120. The schools are not made attractive for them. Some 36% only of St. John's pupils are in their proper grades, 21% are in advance of their associates, and 41% are too old for their classes. The scales prepared show very poor progress here. The school plant is entirely inadequate, the school buildings being particularly defective. There is no need of this. He had visited the Roman Catholic schools which were far superior, and if he lived here he would never allow a child of his to cross the threshold of any other. If his statement was not believed he invited his hearers to go into their own schools in many of which the mop or soap was unknown, the walls had no decoration and the illumination was such that there was no chance to study or read. How can children be expected to study in such quarters? Some 93% of the rooms are defective in lighting. The whole Protestant school system ought to be condemned. There was no fire protection here though children should not be expected to risk their lives to get an education. Sanitation also is neglected and even ordinary comfort not arranged for. Instead of a number of schools there should be large ones accommodating perhaps 1200 pupils and high schools through which they could advance and learn what direction to take in life. With this plan we would have in five years one of the best systems on this side of the Atlantic. Here we pay about $9 per child for education and in the United States about $75 and the difference in the results is in about the same proportion. We should have state control, a state board of education and a local board of laymen, elected at large to run the schools, and the property so taxed as to pay the teachers and provide text books free. Power should be obtained by the local board to assess and collect the taxes and to see that pupils got clean bodies, clean clothes, etc.

Dr. Hart, following, said that our schools were 150 years behind the times. By a number of lantern slides he compared our schools to modern schools abroad. The contrast was startling. He emphasized the necessity for school libraries and of fire safe-guards in buildings where so many young children congregated.

His Excellency the Governor in moving a vote of thanks to Dr. Engelhardt and Dr. Hart, congratulated the Inter-denominational Education Committee on having brought them here and referred to the waste of energy in not combining for school work. He hoped the new scheme would mark the dawn of a new era for education in Newfoundland and that the lessons learned would be applied with due consideration to our possibilities.

Rev. Dr. Curtis seconded the motion which was passed by acclamation and the meeting closed with the National Anthem.

To-Day's Messages.

THE CABINET AND IRELAND.

LONDON, May 31. A Cabinet meeting was held to-day to discuss the Irish situation, at which Premier Lloyd George, Viscount French, Lord Lieut. of Ireland, A. J. Balfour, Lord President of the Council, Sir Hamar Greenwood, Chief Secretary for Ireland, and General Sir C. F. Nevill McCready, Military Commander in Ireland were present. The latter two came from Dublin especially for the meeting. It is believed that Ministers discussed, among other things, the situation ascending from the Irish Labor challenge regarding the handling of munitions. Despatches from Dublin state that some of the English labor leaders are urging the Premier and his Cabinet to hold their hands regarding the Irish Labor situation.

INUNDATION TRAGEDY.

LOUTH, England, May 31. Twenty seven bodies of those who lost their lives, Saturday night, in the sudden overflow of the River Ludd, have been recovered, and many persons are missing, although unofficial estimates still place the death toll at about fifty. At least fifty houses were washed away and a thousand others damaged. Upwards of one thousand persons have been rendered homeless. The damage is variously estimated up to a million dollars. The waters of the river have now subsided. Premier Lloyd George sent a message to the Mayor of Louth asking what assistance the Government could render. The fury of the storm which caused the overflow of the Ludd, centered about Louth, but it swept across the country, its track being from North Wales to Shropshire, then to Lancashire and Lincolnshire, and subsequently to Cambridgeshire, where it exhausted its fury. Floods were experienced in many districts, and numerous cattle were drowned and much material damage has been reported.

TO INCLUDE U.S.A.

LONDON, May 31. The Pall Mall Gazette says to-day that the question of renewal of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance has not reached a stage in which its consideration by the British Cabinet has become imperative. The newspaper says it believes that Premier Lloyd George favors utilizing the occasion of a renewal to help forward the principles of disarmament. Efforts will be made in the next few weeks to solve the difficulty between U.S. and Japan. Pall Mall Gazette adds, after which the possibility of widening the scope of the treaty to include the United States would be much less remote than appears to-day.

RENEWAL OF TREATY.

TOKIO, May 31. The cabinet has decided to open negotiations for the renewal and revision of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance, which Great Britain is said to be willing to maintain, with modification, according to Yomi Uri Simpsuru. Marquis Shigenobu Okma, former Premier, has issued a statement saying that although the downfall of Russia and Germany has removed the original positive reasons for the alliance, under certain conditions in China and Siberia, and agitation on the part of Mohammedans of Southern Asia make a renewal of the past desirable as a negative instrument of peace.

CHEVROLET WON MOTOR RACE.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 31. In the most spectacular finish ever witnessed on the Indianapolis speedway, Gaston Chevrolet, driving a car of American design rode to victory in the eighth renewal of the five hundred mile automobile race to-day, before a record breaking crowd of one hundred and twenty-five thousand. Chevrolet's time was five hours, forty minutes, sixteen seconds, an average of 88.6 miles per hour, the second best time in the history of the event. In addition to winning the twenty thousand dollar first prize, Chevrolet also won approximately five thousand more in a lap prize competition and cash prizes offered by accessory firms. All of the thrills came in the last thirty miles of the race, when Ralph DePalma, the favorite, with a lead of miles to his credit, seemed certain of winning, but with victory in his grasp, DePalma's car burst into flames on the north turn of the two and a half mile course, and a few minutes later the car driven by Joe Boyer, who led during the first two hundred miles, skidded, overturning and crashed into a brick retaining wall within a few feet of the spot where DePalma's car caught fire. Neither Boyer nor his mechanic was seriously injured.

ANGLO-SAXONS CAN DO IT.

CHICAGO, June 1. A strong International League of Churches, working in harmony with the League of Nations, would maintain world peace for ever, the Rev. Alfred Ernest Garvie, of London, said yesterday at the Union meeting of Chicago Ministers. Dr. Garvie said that the United States and Great Britain "representing the backbone of the Anglo-Saxon race, and of the Christian Church, must be the first layer in the foundation for International Church Union."

ASKING BARE JUSTICE.

MONTREAL, June 1. Rev. Dr. H. A. Irwin, Presbyterian clergyman at Killand, near Belfast, Ireland, addressed a large meeting at the Windsor Hotel last night. He said that "We in Ireland are not out for revolution, though we do not deny the right of revolution if circumstances demand it. We are simply asking for the same justice that has been given Belgium and Poland." He disclaimed any fear of religious trouble in Ireland if British soldiers were withdrawn from the country.

Rev. Henry Gordon Will Speak.

At the Sociable to be held in the Canon Wood Hall to-morrow evening at 8 o'clock, the Rev. Henry Gordon will tell of the latest development in his plans for a boarding school at Cartwright, which he hopes to get underway immediately. The evening will be further specialized by a cup of tea and a programme to which the following will contribute: Miss Christian, Mrs. F. J. King, Mrs. J. A. Winter, Misses Dunfield, Barnes, Ellis and Williams; Messrs Ruggles, and A. Williams. The clothing provided during the winter for the orphans in the Cartwright Mission will also be exhibited. Tickets are being sold for 40 cents, or three for a dollar.—adv., 11a.

A Hint to Mr. Mullaly.

Editor Evening Telegram
Dear Sir,—I am, indeed, pleased to observe that some steps have at last been taken with regard to providing pedestrians with certain roads whereon they may enjoy themselves without being subjected to the dangers and discomforts occasioned by motor traffic.

I note that in bringing the Resolutions before the Council, Mr. Mullaly has expressed the desire of first obtaining the opinions of the public before finalizing matters, and being one of the latter I take this opportunity of expressing a few views on the subject. It is proposed to allot to the East End the road which encircles the lake of Quidi Vidi. I quite agree with this and think that it is a very happy selection; for, besides being by far the most popular walk in that vicinity this road is of a fine generous length, measuring some three miles in its entire extent. On seeking as to how the West End is provided for in this connection, I am amazed to observe that the selected area is that portion of the Southside Road which runs from Job's Bridge to Syme's Bridge. Now unless there has been a mistake and the word Syme's substituted for Waterford, then the idea is ridiculous in the extreme. All West Enders know that the entire length of the piece of road mentioned is in all about three hundred yards, a paltry two minutes' walk, and situated more in the town than in the country. As a walk for pedestrians, unless they wish to do sentry beat from one end to the other, it is utterly and absolutely useless. The road West Enders want is that portion of the Southside Road which runs from Job's Bridge to Waterford Bridge. This is the route that some hundreds of pedestrians use every Sunday and holiday and is only a proper equivalent to the road around Quidi Vidi. The scarcity of motorists on the Southside Road shows that they could easily dispense with it, and this can be easily understood when it is seen that there are at least three other parallel roads in the vicinity.

In penning the above, not only do I feel—I am certain—that I express the wishes of all the West End pedestrians, and if Mr. Mullaly and the other City Fathers wish to please the people and do the proper thing in this matter; a little investigation will convince them that only by doing as I have suggested will they accomplish this end.

Yours truly,
PEDESTRIAN.

"Redoos" Taxation.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—On Nomination Day, in the fall of 1919, we had the privilege of hearing the then prospective members for Port-de-Grave make their appeals for support. One of the main planks on which Mr. Geo. Grimes sought support for his party was—that if said party was elected they would endeavour to "redoos" taxation. Cashin & Co., said he, had expended a revenue of so many millions and he contended that some of this should have been saved by the people by "redoosing" taxation. Now that Mr. Coaker, of whose party Mr. Grimes was a candidate, is in power, the people naturally expect the promises of Mr. Grimes to be in some measure fulfilled. No such intention is as yet apparent. On the other hand, those who shouted that Cashin & Co. were grinding the life out of the toilers by taxes, are now introducing measures to further increase those taxes.

Now if Cashin & Co. were robbers for taking so much from the people in taxes, what are we to look upon the members of the present administration as? Angels I presume? Wait and see.

Thanking you in anticipation of space, Mr. Editor.

Yours truly,
SENEC.

Cup Challenger Takes the Water.

CITY ISLAND, N.Y., May 26.—Sir Thomas Lipton's challenger for the America's Cup was launched here at high tide to-night, at the yards of Robert Jacob, where she has been since last November. The green racer, with Sir Thomas Lipton's private signal and the burgee of the Royal Ulster Club proudly flying in the evening breeze, slid down the ways and hit the water at 7.15 p.m. As she took her first plunge since she has been altered from an extreme scow to a more conventional racing machine, her crew and the representatives of Sir Thomas sent up a cheer. They all were of the opinion that Shamrock IV. is the most dangerous yacht that ever has come after the America's Cup.

At the launching were Colonel Duncan F. D. Neill, the yachting representative of the Irish challenger; Charles H. Nicholson, who designed the craft; William P. Burton, the amateur skipper, who will race Shamrock IV.; Mrs. Burton, his wife, who is able to stand a trick at the wheel as well as any man; Claude Hickman, who will navigate Shamrock IV.; Amelius Jarvis of Toronto, Canada, one of the best known yachtsmen in the Dominion; and a half dozen others, all deeply interested in the success of the Irish craft.

As she slipped down the ways to-night, Shamrock IV. looked an entirely different yacht from the one that arrived from England in August, 1919. The yacht's bow and under-body have been changed so much that she never would be recognized by yachtsmen who saw the craft six years ago. Six tons of lead have been cut off the forward part of her fin and "lagged" to the bottom of the keel. The bow has been changed from a scow to lines resembling an extreme racing cutter. All agree that she has been wonderfully improved.

According to Colonel Neill, the mast of Shamrock IV. will be stepped to-morrow. Regardless of the accident to the built-up hollow wooden mast on Resolute, off New Haven, on Saturday, those in charge of Shamrock IV. are going ahead with their original plans and will step a somewhat similarly built-up wooden spar. Designer Nicholson stated that the Shamrock spar was a much heavier and stronger one than the mast Resolute lost. It was not a "pole" mast, he said, but a conventional one with a top-mast added. He does not expect to have any trouble with the stick. Although work will be rushed on the craft, it is doubtful if Shamrock IV. will be under sail much before next Tuesday.

House of Assembly.

Monday, May 31.
The House met at 3 p.m.
Hon. Mr. Warren, on behalf of the Speaker and Mr. Abbott presented petitions.

Mr. Fox introduced a Bill to amend the Sealing Laws.

Council's amendments to "Codfish-ery Information" Bill and "Shipbuilding" Bill were read a second time.

The "Business Profits Tax," "Monopolies Trust Co.'s" and "Existing Tenancies and Ejectment Therefrom"
Bills were read a third time.

The "Hardwood Licenses" Bill,
"Preservation of Beaver" Bill and
"Postal and Telegraph Services" Bill were put through the committee stage.

The "Act respecting former Enemy Aliens" was read a second time.

In committee on the "Preservation of Beaver" Bill there was quite a lot of informal discussion. One amendment was accepted by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, that of granting licenses to kill beaver free of charge. Mr. McDonnell objected to the clause which embodies the idea that the profit derived on sale of beaver skins after being purchased by the Department of Marine and Fisheries be used in the formation of a state insurance scheme. He objected strongly on behalf of the trappers of his district who, he said, would be taxed on their produce to provide this money. A division was called on this section 4, Mr. McDonnell moving that it be stricken out, but was voted down.

The House adjourned until 3 p.m.
to-day.

FOR WESTERN PORTS.—On tomorrow the s.s. Seal will begin taking freight from Bowring's coastal premises, the ship having been chartered to make a trip on the Portia's route to Western ports.

Another Protest.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—I notice in reading over the weekly report of the City Council, that Councillor Mullaly presented a petition re closing a road in the East and West Ends of the city on certain days, to motor cars. I notice, too, that he has picked out the South Side Road (in the West End) as the one he wishes closed.

May I ask Mr. Mullaly how many South Siders signed that petition, and if there were as many signed it as those who sent letters to the Council asking them to stop dumping the filth and dirt of the city a few yards away from our doors. Mr. Mullaly evidently thinks that as he has helped to make South Side a city dump (which is a disgrace to the city), he is justified in helping to take away one of the greatest pleasures we have.

We enjoy watching the motor cars pass, the more the better, even if we do have to use strong language on the Council for having dusty roads.

As a south sider, who does not own a car, I strongly object to closing the south side road. May I suggest to Mr. Mullaly, if he wants to withdraw from the action he took in connection with the dump, he can give the south side a coat of oil so as we can enjoy watching the cars pass without dust.

Yours truly,
DUMP.

It Got Her Out of Bed, Declares Halifax Woman

General Breakdown Overcome and She Feels Splendid Since Taking Tanlac.

"The way I improved in health after I started taking Tanlac was truly astonishing, and I don't remember ever feeling better than I do at present!"
said Mrs. Lena Sampson of 39a Fred-erickton Ave., Halifax, N.S., when relating the facts concerning her experience with the medicine.

"When I started taking Tanlac I had been in bed for three weeks and was in a terribly weakened condition. For two years before that I had been very run-down. My nerves were so bad that the noise of the children irritated me and any sudden banging of a door would almost scare me to death. I often went all night without sleeping a wink, and became so weak that I used to shake like a leaf and could not walk a block without getting out of breath.
I was simply tired out from morning to night and just enough energy to do my housework. I lost weight all the time, and as I've said ended up by breaking down altogether and having to go to bed for three weeks.

"My husband had taken Tanlac with splendid results and it was he who insisted on me trying it. Well, remarkable though it may seem, I was up and about again before I had finished the first bottle, and now after taking two more I am feeling just fine again. That tired run-down feeling has all left me and my nerves are now as steady as can be. I sleep good and sound every night and am so much stronger that I can get through my housework with ease. Only to-day I have done a big round of shopping and don't feel a bit tired after it. Tanlac is certainly a grand medicine and I gladly recommend it to everyone."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M.
Connors; by Reg. Sullivan, Pouch Cove; Sound Island Store, Sound Island; Dennis Ryan, Avondale; J. J.

Resolute Defeated Vanitie

But Suffered Disaster at Finish.
NEW YORK, May 24.—The Her-reshoff cup yacht Resolute defeated the Vanitie on Saturday afternoon in one of the most thrilling and spectacular races ever seen on Logn Island Sound.

As she drove across the finish line, heeled over, an extra heavy puff of wind snapped the Resolute's mast off twelve feet above the deck.

At the same time her topmast buckled and the whole cloud to white canvas came down athwart the tiny stake-boat that marked the finish line.

Carl Anderson, a seaman, and the Resolute's mate, were swept overboard with the gear. The heavy rigging started to sink and the two men were pulled down with it.

They undoubtedly would have been drowned had it not been for the fact that the race committee had given permission to two motion picture photographers and a reporter to watch the finish from the little stake-boat. The craft was completely obliterated from view as the boylng mainsail of the racer collapsed upon it, and the three men were knocked flat. Richard Scharf, one of the photographers, got out pocket knife, and cutting a slit in the sail crawled through and assisted his two companions. They emerged in time to see Anderson and the Resolute's mate being pulled down by the sinking rigging. Scharf had a movie camera with him, and with the prongs of the tripod reached out to where the two sailors were struggling, and literally spared Anderson as he was going down. Both men managed to clutch the tripod and were pulled alongside the stakeboat.

Meanwhile, the Vanitie, with her sails set and looking as though her own stick might carry at any moment, came booming along 'in the Resolute's wake and just managed to miss the wreck.

The wreckage of the Resolute came as the climax of a day that provided all kinds of sailing weather. The two yachts started the race in a dead calm that left them for an hour engaged in a drifting match. Forty minutes later a midsummer squall came up and with it came a pouring rain. The wind rapidly rose to a point that would cause any but the masters of the Vanitie and Resolute to take in sail.

It was the determination of Skipper Adams to give the Resolute all she would take that caused her mast to carry away under the strain. It is doubtless whether a racing yacht of her class was ever subjected to the gruelling test that the Resolute got.
She was exactly half way across the finish line when the accident happened, and she was keeled over so far that her deck was in almost a perpendicular position.

Obituary.

At the ripe old age of 74, there passed away at his home, St. Joseph's, Salmonier, Mr. Peter Daley, a well known and respected resident of the place. During his span of life the deceased had never had any disease, and in his last moments was attended by his Parish Priest, Father Earlight.
Beloved by all who knew him his passing is sorely felt. He leaves to mourn a wife, one son, 9 daughters, 2 brothers and several grand children. A large gathering of friends and relatives attended the funeral, which was held on May 28th, the Parish Priest administering all the rites of the burial service. To the sorrowing relatives we extend our heartfelt sympathy. R.I.P.—Com.

Spring Time.

Fair blossom! Do not look with scorn upon the faded one—No flower ever turned its face reluctant from the sun.

It may be by your petals hid, no ray of light pierced through.

To shorten its delicate life and wet with 'too much dew.

The blight that settled on its heart,
the destructive stealthy mould Crept on and warped the tender leaves that struggled to unfold.

With care we nursed in gentle air, untouched by cold or gloom—
You could not keep your beauty back—you could not help but bloom!

And to have them in your garden plot,
you need the sun and shower;

Poor withered bud, with care and skill,
you would be twice the flower.

POWER-WALSH

A very pretty wedding took place in the R. C. Cathedral, on May 28, when Frederick Power of Branch, led to the altar Anastasia Walsh of Bay Bulls. The bride looked pretty dressed in green satin with gold lace trimmings and picture hat to match. The bridesmaid, Miss Annie Walsh, wore a white satin dress, with hat to match. Mr. Power, brother of the groom, acted as best man. After the ceremony refreshments were served, the newly married couple later motoring to Bay Bulls, where the honeymoon spent. Mr. and Mrs. Power received many useful presents from friends in the city and elsewhere, testifying to the esteem in which they are held.

HOUSEHOLD NECESSITY

Gillett's Lye has long been regarded as a household necessity because of the fact that it is useful in so many ways, and so satisfactory in every respect that no woman feels that she can keep house without it. Makes the finest kind of soap for washing and cleansing. One can of Gillett's Lye will make ten pounds of good soap in twenty minutes. Many of its uses are shown in booklet under the label.

LONDON GOSSIP.

VICTORIAN TRIUMPHS SUBMERGED.

LONDON, April 26, 1920.

Among the other consequences of the Budget the sentimental may drop a tear over the evidently final disappearance of two of the most vaunted social triumphs of the Victorian Age—the penny post and the sixpenny telegram. The first was secured when the late Queen had not been long upon her Throne; the second when she was closely approaching her jubilee; and each was hailed in turn as a tangible proof of prosperous progress along the paths of peace. It is true that, during the war, when all of us shrugged our shoulders over additional imposts, and vowed we would cheerfully bear them all as the price of victory, no one much troubled that the charges for both letters and telegrams went up fifty per cent. There is a difference, however, when the fifty per cent. becomes ten for cent twelve months after the Peace Treaty was signed. Lord Rosebery, in his younger and more brilliant days, discoursed to the Royal Academy in annual banquet assembled on the penny as a humble but heavy coin, and yet a unit of price which brought blessings in its train, the penny post and the penny press being instanced in proof of his submission. There is no longer a penny post, and virtually no longer a penny press; and as the two-penny piece went out of existence in mid-Victorian times, there is no longer even that humble but decidedly heavy coin to inspire the dithyrambs of a later Lord Rosebery.

SABRES AGAIN.

Last year, as part of the London police reforms and to please those who asked that the force should be purged of all military characteristics, the mounted police were deprived of the sabres, which they carried ever since the Trafalgar Square riots of the 'eighties, and were left with a long truncheon as their only visible arm. To-day I notice that the mounted constables, who nowadays are sent out into the West End to exercise their horses and aid in controlling the traffic, have all sabres once again.

CHURCHES CAN WAIT.

Some of the biggest West End departmental stores have just been pulled up short in the middle of extensions or rebuilding by an intimation from the London County Council that this work is unnecessary and must not be continued while there is a shortage of men to work on housing schemes. At the Ministry of Health, which is the central housing authority, I am told that Whitehall has not asked the London County Council specially to take this course, nor will any circular be sent to provincial municipalities asking them to prohibit work on shops and offices. Each must judge for itself, chiefly according to its own need for buildings, but the Ministry says that in March 8,000 men for whom work was available on housing schemes could not be obtained, and it has already told local authorities how in its view private buildings schemes other than houses are to be classified as bad, indifferent, and beneficial. The "low category" building, which will probably all need to be suspended soon, includes all work on billiard halls and saloons, cinemas, music halls and theatres, dancing halls, licensed premises, and clubs. The "intermediate category," which in general ought to wait its turn, includes office buildings, multiple shops, large stores and warehouses for retail trade, chapels and churches, and perhaps in some cases factories and mills. The Ministry of Health indicates that in general houseless people would get more benefit from houses than from these. "High category" work, which may justifiably be pressed to completion, is defined to be industrial buildings in private ownership, the completion of which will increase employment, local revenue, and by export trade or otherwise the national revenue also.

TOURIST INVASION COMMENCES.

The vanguard of the great army of American tourists which is to descend on London this summer has already arrived, and, early though it is, sightseers are now beginning to make themselves conspicuous in our streets. These early arrivals are of course but a fraction of the hosts which will follow. The real invasion will start in May. From America not far short of a million visitors are expected, and several months ago it was announced that Washington had received applications for over 200,000 passports to Britain. The numbers which America will send are, indeed, expected to be limited only by the carrying capacity of the great Atlantic liners. From France, Belgium, Holland, and the Far East there will also arrive very large contingents. Schemes for housing these visitors are going forward with considerable success. Most of the big hotels have made overflow arrangements by which people for whom beds cannot be found in the hotels will be accommodated in the suburbs. The problem is also being faced by the Hospitality Committee of the Young Men's Christian Association, and within a few days the Beaver Hut in the Strand, which constituted a home from home for many a Colonial soldier, will be open as a central bureau, where all visitors from overseas will find helpers willing to assist in finding them accommodation.

SALVING WINE IN BELGIUM.

One West End of London wine house is congratulating itself and its customers on having just received into stock a large quantity of old burgundies under rather remarkable circumstances. During the first two years of their occupation of Belgium the Germans did not requisition a good deal of wine except at certain points. They had marked down where it was to be had, however, and after that time they started requisitioning right and left. There was a family near Liege who owned a large quantity of burgundy of fine vintage. When things grew critical they secretly assembled the wine in stout cases, carted it through the streets, and drove it to an ice factory, expecting every moment to be stopped by the guards. The wine was placed in the vaults of the factory and the entrance hidden so well that it remained undiscovered until after the owners came back. The owners, now impoverished, were much overjoyed to find it untouched, and at once sold the collection. A good deal of wine hidden from the Germans has recently come out of Belgium, but some of the owners of good stocks were not so fortunate. I hear of one curious case where a Belgian landowner hid all his old wines in the lake at his country place but forgot to take the labels off the bottles, and the next day the labels were all floating on the surface. The clue led the Germans to drain the lake and get all the wine.

FRENCH RHINE WINES.

The Alsatian wine industry, having escaped from German servitude, is in process of reconstruction, and the results promise to be beneficial to this country as well as to our French Allies. A trade correspondent tells me that the first consignment of Alsatian wines since Alsace has returned to its Motherland has just reached London, and has received a warm welcome in the trade. This news is very gratifying, since in pre-war days few in this country knew of the existence of these wines, as the Germans used to buy them up at fancy prices, blend them with their own wines, and ship them here under the general names of Moselles and Hocks. In future these products will enter the markets under their own names, and will no longer bear the Prussian trade marks. As such the people of this country will surely welcome them. Every grower and merchant of Upper and Lower Alsace has joined a syndicate, whose name will be a guarantee for quality and genuineness. The committee, six of the ablest experts, have decided that not more than five qualities are to be sent to Britain, and as each of these qualities will have its special bouquet it can be relied on. These wines will bear a tricolor label, with the words—"French Rhine wines from Alsace."

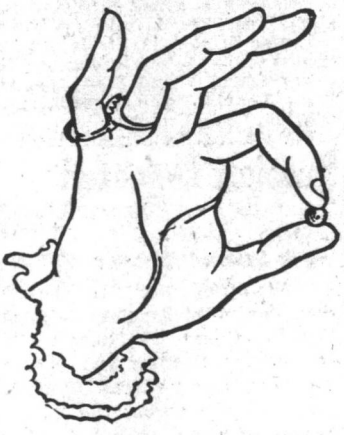

MOTOR BOAT RACING.

Motor boat racing promises to play a large part in the revival for which not only Cowes, but all other places in the Isle of Wight are preparing this year. There is to be a contest for the British international trophy, which Sir Edward Mackay Edgar's Maple Leaf regained from the Americans in 1912, and successfully defended in the following year from French and American challengers. New challengers are being prepared in the United States and France, and according to accounts there is to be no lack of British defenders. The chances of the French craft are already strongly fancied, although the possibilities of an American surprise are not being ignored. With Sunbeam engines, the Despujols skimmers are certainly very dangerous. I have not seen this year's Despujols hulls, but if they are the least like those which competed in 1912, it seems to me that the time is ripe for restrictions. To achieve a speed of a mile a minute in a "sea sled" is praiseworthy. But it does not carry us very far along the road leading to profitable increase of speed on the water, and that is—rather ought to be—the purpose of an international competition of this character. Both the Thorny-croft skimmer and the Fauber hydroplane are practical firms, and can do real work in reasonable weather. The usefulness of the sea sled is, on the contrary, definitely limited.

WITH FINGERS!
CORNS LIFT OUT

Freezone is magic! Corns and calluses lift right off—Doesn't hurt a bit

A few cents buys a tiny bottle of the magic Freezone at any drug store. Apply a few drops of Freezone upon a tender, aching corn or a callus. Instantly that troublesome corn or callus stops hurting, then shortly you lift it out, root and all, without any pain, soreness or irritation. These little bottles of Freezone contain just enough to rid the feet of every hard corn, soft corn, corn between the toes and the calluses on bottom of feet. So easy! So simple. Why wait? No humbug!

Anglo-American Clouds.

Right-minded people in the United States and England regret the temporary clouding of relations between the two countries. Yet, clear-sighted men in both lands knew that it was inevitable. The high note of cordiality struck in 1917 and 1918 could not be maintained. In some minds the ancient grudge was sure to be revived. Then there was the coming Presidential campaign; there was oversteering Ireland; there were the inveterate mischief-makers; there were the politicians always ready to capitalize international jealousies and dislikes. The vision of Americans and Britons clasping hands in unfeigned friendship and vowing aid to each other in every good work for liberty and order and peace throughout the world was alluring and bright, but too bright to last without a certain dimming.

This was foreseen as well as deplored by thoughtful Englishmen who know America well. One of them writes in the April Nineteenth Century, mainly in order to warn his countrymen not to expect too much too soon from the good understanding with the United States. There were certain to be pin-pricks across the sea. It was for Great Britain to take them as stolidly as possible. Thus far she has been doing it. The Irish flourishes of the American Congress have been officially ignored, as they have been privately smiled at, in London. Very little comment has been provoked even by the publication of President Wilson's sharp strictures on the policy of the British Admiralty. English dispatches intimate that the word has been passed around quietly to take no notice of these naval lectures by a landsman. British phlegm will pretty surely be called upon to draw upon its reserves during this our year of unleashed politics. But we hope that British intelligence will be able to pierce through the dust of the campaign and perceive the immensely greater stock of good will for England which the war accumulated in America.

The English writer mentioned above is shrewd in advising Britons to attempt no advances to Americans at this time. Anything like official propaganda would be fatuous. Flattery or wheedling would be resented. Just let England go on with new power in the old way and the United States will in time swing back to the full enthusiasm of war time for Anglo-American co-operation. Mr. Kipling, who knows a thing or two about us, appears to be strongly of this mind. In the long speech which he delivered on England's Day before the Royal Society of St. George there was no direct reference to the United States at all. But he did express the hope that "we and

You are Welcome To this way to white teeth

All statements approved by high dental authorities

You see white teeth wherever you look today, for millions of people use a new teeth cleaning method. Leading dentists everywhere advise it. You are welcome to a ten-day test, and you owe it to yourself.

Film dims the teeth

The teeth's great enemy is film. It clouds their beauty and it destroys the teeth. Most tooth troubles are now traced to it.

Film is the viscous coat you feel. It clings to teeth, enters crevices and stays. Very few people escape the effects of it.

It is the film-coat that discolors, not the teeth. Film is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea, which attacks 95 in 100.

The ordinary tooth paste does not dissolve film, so old methods fail to end it. Dental science has for years sought the right way to combat it, for tooth troubles have been constantly increasing.

The method has now been found. Convincing clinical tests have amply proved its efficiency. And now the way is embodied, for daily use, in a dentifrice called Pepsodent.

Three unique results

Pepsodent is based on pepsin, the digestant of albumin. The film is albuminous matter. The object of Pepsodent is to dissolve it, then to day by day combat it.

Pepsin long seemed impossible. It must be activated, and the usual agent is an acid harmful to the teeth. But now a harmless activating method permits its constant use.

Two other new-day requisites are also found in Pepsodent. So this tooth paste in three ways brings whiter, safer teeth.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coat disappears.

Results are clear and quick, and our book explains them. Make this test and judge them for yourself. Cut out the coupon now.

The New-Day Dentifrice

Capt. Charles Webber, son of the late Capt. George Webber, arrived from Bell Island last Saturday, by Stewart's motor boat, to spend the week-end with his home folk. The steamer of which he is Mate, is at present at Bell Island. Mr. Webber had command of a ship some time ago in foreign seas, and had a hard time of it, meeting as he did with very untoward weather conditions. Twice he had to put back to port, having in both cases been disabled by the loss of a spar and other such set-backs. Captain Webber is looking O.K., and his many friends are pleased to see him, and regret that his stay was so brief. He returned to his ship Sunday afternoon.

Mr. William Simmonds, of the Telegram staff, St. John's, arrived from that city Saturday night on a brief visit to friends.

Empire Day—Empire Day, 1920, was celebrated by our townspeople to the full. While some took themselves to the country, there to enjoy the pure air, some others repaired to their gardens and tilled before and after the intense heat of the noon and afternoon. Many were the motor cars, each laden with happy sight-seers, that sped North, West and East. Each car was decorated with the flag of the Empire—the flag that flew in defiance to the greatest, deadliest and most inhuman power the world ever heard of: Strife. In the early morning the Orangemen paraded to Carboner and attended service at the Methodist Church there. In the afternoon, Miss Maud Butt, Principal of Victoria Street School, together with her pupils, went a-picknicking in the country, and enjoyable is no name for the time spent by one and all of the children. The day, being one of the best of the summer, it was difficult for anyone to do anything but enjoy one's self. It is to be hoped that the good Queen, to whose memory and respect, the day is kept, was not forgotten in the prayers of our people. A State Convention of the Knights of Columbus was held during the day, and was attended by representatives from the different Councils of the order in the island. In the afternoon a dinner was given to the State Officers by Dalton Council, No. 1448, at the "Retreat" Hotel, and the usual toast list gone through. In the evening a dance was held in the Academy Hall, and was largely attended by Knights and their lady friends. An orchestra from St. John's having been engaged for the purpose, assisted by Mr. James Garland of Hr. Grace, added to the enjoyment of the evening. Great praise is given to Mrs. Bailey for the pleasant way in which she catered to the wants of her guests. And then, as the sun sank down behind the Western hills, having smiled and blessed those beneath it, many happy and refreshed children, many thankful men and women of the upper walk, and many feet weary and thankful pedestrians of the poor rank, having done their bit to the betterment of their families for the coming season, retired, and found themselves back again in the land of dreams in the arms of sweet Morpheus where the early morning found them. And others, as the moon sailed down on the sleeping town, danced until early hours. And thus, Empire Day, 1920, came to a close.

Miss May Dooley, daughter of Constable Dooley, who has been ill more or less for some few weeks past, is suffering from an attack of La Grippe or some kindred sickness, is, her many friends will learn with pleasure now on the road to complete recovery, and will be about again soon.

Mr. Harry Stevenson left for Montreal by Tuesday morning's train. Master George Sheppard, son of Mr. E. Sheppard, who had been to the Hospital at St. John's for some three months past, returned Saturday night, and is now very much the better for his visit. He will no doubt be O. K. again in a short time.

Fresh salmon was on the market Monday and Tuesday morning and sold readily at 20 to 30 cents a pound. One fisherman had quite a good catch—and may be get many more, say all of us. Many were the side glances at a string of fresh fish, too, Tuesday; but that was not so plentiful. This is the first of both fish that has been on the market here for the season, and the hope is entertained that it will be followed by large catches. Fish is cheap, while pork is almost to be ignored—still a local farmer (and one it is said, now on the Food Control Board), is biting the ends off the people's purse!

Schr. Dorothy G. Snow arrived Tuesday to go on dock.

Miss Irene Wells was in town this week from the city to spend Empire Day with friends. She returns Tuesday morning.

(The envelope containing the above notes is date stamped Harbor Grace, May 26, and St. John's May 27, yet it was not in the Telegram Box at the East End Post Office on Saturday, 29, nor was it received at this office until yesterday morning's clearing. It speaks volumes for our up to date mail service with a Minister of Posts, to boot, that a letter mailed in Harbor Grace on Wednesday, May 26 and received in St. John's the following day, should have taken three extra days, going the rounds somewhere, before being received by the addressee. But such is the case. The P.M.G. may have the covering envelope as evidence, if he wishes.—Ed.)

NOTES OF TRAVEL:

and Reminiscences of a Pleasant Tour.

CHAPTER X.
A VISIT TO CHINA TOWN.

We had often heard about China town in New York; hence it was only natural, when a chance offered, that we go and see it for ourselves. This was the Blue Line Touring Cars. These cars are very popular, and they are a big trade every day. Each car has sixteen passengers, and in addition to the chauffeur, carries a lecturer. The lecturer's place is near the driver, and as each point of interest is passed, he shouts through a megaphone, and recites the particular history of the place. We had two cars in these cars, and had two lecturers. Both of these gentlemen did their work well, and though they themselves must be tired their recitals, to the stranger it is very novel, and not a little instructive.

House, or place of worship. This sanctum is located at the top of the building, and is approached by a very narrow and old fashioned stairway. The building is one of the many of its style in the row, which was at one time a centre of English speaking residents. The entire locality is now owned by wealthy Chinese Merchants, and is thickly populated. Many of the tourists do some trade at these stores, and the amount of cash that changes hands must be large. The wares are mostly of Chinese make, and they bear the insignia and impress of oriental life, and they seem to speak to the Western purchaser, and to say to them, "We are of the misty and mysterious past; before you were a people we were a power, and the traditions which we followed in the East, we mean to perpetuate here in the West."

The scene within the Joss House is perplexing—it is almost distressing. Such a place should be avoided by those who are of delicate health. The climb up the stair-way, and the dimness of the place are too much of a tax for any to undertake who are not of sound mind and strong nerves. Some of our party did not ascend to the Joss House, and we were very glad they did not do so. True it is, they missed something very strange and unusually quaint, but sometimes too big a price is paid for curiosity, and it is an easy matter to make this mistake in such a place as that of which we write. At every point the lecturer instructs his company, and so was it at the Joss House. The mystery of the shrines, and the meaning of the sacred fire, and the devotion of his followers were all explained, and as far as the duties of the lecturer permitted, they were faithfully performed. We learned something, and yet we did not learn anything. We saw for ourselves a living illustration of Chinese heathendom. We saw the density of these people in the light of divine revelation; and we called to mind the words of the prophet when he said "Darkness shall cover the earth and gross darkness the people."

We could not think otherwise than this. Around us we beheld the emblems of a deity and the shrines of a God, of whom the Palmist said, "Eyes have they but they see not, ears have they but they hear not, mouths have they but they smell not, feet have they but they walk not. They that make them are like unto them, and so is everyone that trusteth in them." The men before us believed in these emblems. They looked upon them as really existing, and whatever of faith, or hope they exercised, were centred in them. Thus they attend the Joss House, believing that it is possible to commune with Confucius, and to consult him upon business affairs. In this, the Chinese are like all other people. They feel the burden of life, and they want something that is greater than themselves, and they seek it in their religion. Such is the loading of the heart the world over, seek without and within, the bounds of Christendom. Greater than man must be that which satisfies them. In their darkness, the heathen seek for the greater from that which is lesser; and in their forgetfulness, Christians seem to miss the greater also.

The Lambeth Conference.

The arrangements for the Anglican Lambeth Conference are now nearing completion. It will be the greatest gathering of Bishops which has ever taken place on English soil, and, as representing Churches, it will be exceeded in numerical significance only by the Methodist Ecumenical Conference, which meets in London in the autumn of 1921. It is expected that about three hundred bishops will attend and among them will be Bishop Asariah, of Dornakal, the only native Indian bishop of the Anglican Church. Dr. Davidson will be the first Archbishop to be twice President of the Conference, for he was in the chair in 1908. On three occasions he has acted as secretary, commencing his work in this capacity forty-two years ago. The qualifications for attendance are stringent; only active diocesan are permitted to take part in the Conference, and this will exclude about sixty bishops who are now resident in the British Isles, but who have resigned their sees. It is interesting to note that seventy-two of the members of the Conference come from America, and one hundred and seven from "overseas." The Conference meets at Lambeth Palace from July 5 to 10. Then it adjourns until July 26, meeting daily after that until August 7. On Sunday, August 8, there is to be a concluding service in St. Paul's Cathedral, the preacher being Bishop Gailer, of Tennessee. The agenda is a heavy one, and includes such important subjects as Reunion, the League of Nations, Industrial and Social Problems, and the Position of Women in the Councils and Ministrations of the Church. The Conference has no executive authority, but from the nature of its constitution its decisions carry almost supreme influence within the Anglican fold.
