STEWART'S Home Made Bread,
THE BREAD MY DADDY LIKES.
Daddy is evidently not one of those back number lords of creation who believes that woman's place is in the home—and only there. His taste in a wife is an up-to-date woman who will prove herself a real companion. He knows that if she is a slave to her kitchen she can't enjoy the poise or have the interest in world affairs that a little extra leisure would make possible; and so he is pleased to eat MRS. STEWART'S HOME MADE BREAD—the loaf with the home made flavor.
The smiling, well-nourished kiddie doesn't look as though suffering because mother is progressive enough to buy good bread made by a bread specialist, instead of wearing out her life in the kitchen.

CHAPTER XXII.
WOUNDED LORE.

"Beden, is he?" says Clarence. "I've a brother there. I wonder whether he knows him? I'll write to him and ask him to look your brother up; he might be of some use, as Hal is fresh to the place."

Jeanne looks around gratefully. "Thank you very much," she says; then, as if speaking to herself: "Dear old Hal it seems so long since I saw him—so long!"

"You haven't been home, then?" Clarence ventures timidly.

"No," says Jeanne, quietly, thinking of the reason. She has not been home because she dares not face Aunt Jane's keen, loving eyes; because she is afraid that those eyes will read through her mask, and discover the secret of her unhappiness. No, she has not been home, she says, and sighs unconsciously as she adds, musingly:

"I wonder how Regie looks? How long it seems since I saw the sea!"

"Look!" says Clarence, with eagerness, and he points to a line of light which has suddenly become defined in the distance.

"What is that?" asks Jeanne.

"The sea!" he says, as pleased as if it belonged to him.

Jeanne's face flushed.

"Really?" she asks, breathless with delight. "I did not know we were so near!"

"Quite near," he says. "I'm almost glad you didn't, or I should have lost the pleasure of showing you. And I may show you, may I not?"

Jeanne does not hear the question, and goes on:

"I'm generally run down before breakfast. There's a near way through the woods; you couldn't find it alone. May I show you?"

Jeanne rouses, and is about to say "Yes" with alacrity, as she would have done in the old days, but suddenly remembers that she is no longer Jeanne Bertram, but the Marchioness of Ferndale.

"Thanks," she says, "I need not trouble you. I dare say some of them will be going."

Clarence's face falls.

"Ah, yes," he says, trying to speak cheerfully. "I thought you would like to see it to-morrow morning, as soon as possible."

But Jeanne does not hear him; all her eyes are for the line of shimmering, silver light.

Suddenly a sound makes her start. It is Vane's voice.

She starts, she does more—she turns pale, as she recognizes the song.

"Let us go back," she says, in a very low voice.

As they enter the drawing-room, there is a profound silence, and every eye is turned on them. Vane standing, almost lounging against the piano, hears the rustle of the dress, and looks, too, just as Clarence goes down on one knee to pick up the flower which she had dropped.

Jeanne stands upright as an arrow, with a faint flush of color on her face, and a sudden light in her eyes. But they are not called there by the fact that all eyes are turned on her and Clarence, but by the sight of Lady Lucille looking up with half-closed eyes at Vane, as she plays for him the accompaniment to the song, which was the first she had heard him sing. He has not sung since her marriage, and yet he sings for Lady Lucille, and chooses this song.

A sudden pang shoots through Jeanne's young heart. It is scarcely jealousy—rather wounded love.

With a sudden, awing smile, that sends the blood to Clarence's face, she says:

"May I change my mind? I would like to go down to the beach to-morrow, if you will show me the way."

Clarence inclines his head, scarcely trusting himself to speak.

"At what time?" he asks under his mustache. "Is nine too early?"

"Nine!" says Jeanne, and she moves away as Lady Lucille, the song being ended, amid a loud buzz of eager admiration, comes up to her.

"Is not the marquis good-natured, Lady Ferndale? So soon after dinner, do you know the song? It is a great favorite of mine—very great favorite! We heard it when we were at Naples—did we not, Lord Ferndale?"

Jeanne, hiding the quiver of her sensitive lips behind her fan, smiles serenely, but the words have struck home to her innermost soul.

The song which he had sung to her in the old house. How often had he sung it with this blue-eyed, golden-haired woman, and why did she flaunt it in his wife's eyes?

She's still asking the question when Vane comes up and leans over her chair.

"Will you play, Jeanne?" he asks, in the low, constrained voice in which he always addresses her. "The countess has sent me to ask you."

"Pray excuse me!" says Jeanne; and, with a slight incline of his handsome head, as if he had received a blow, he takes her refusal to the countess.

CHAPTER XXIII.
THE FISHER AND THE MAID.

On the right a rising line of mountain—green, purple and crimson in the rays of the setting sun; on the left the fringe of pines, which stand as outposts of the deep, dark, shadowy wood. Above, a blue sky, flecked here and there with fleecy clouds; below, an undulating valley, broken by rocky little ravines, through which runs a noisy, silvery stream. Altogether, as sweet and romantic a bit of scenery as painter ever tried to depict or poet to describe—and failed. So quite is this secluded spot that one might fancy oneself in one of the valleys of Herefordshire; but this is not England—it is Germany; the fringe of firs in the beginning of the Black Forest, and the tinkle of the vesper bell comes from the village of Forbach, which lies hidden by the valley's curve.

It is September—in fact, it is the week of the marquis and marchioness's visit to Charlie Nugent's, and it is as hot here in Germany—hotter than in England.

A sublime stillness reigned over the valley, broken only by the laughter of the stream as it throws itself yappingly against the stones in its path, by the occasional call of a bird to its mate among the pines, by the vesper bell tinkling melodiously among the hills, and by the hum of the innumerable bees. All this sounds like noise; but it is by sounds like these that nature symbolizes silence.

Suddenly, and yet slowly, a human figure emerges from the shadow of the forest, and comes into the red sunlight.

Now, as a matter of stern fact, the human figure, as it appears in modern civilized life, does not improve scenery. Even the pyramids can be made to look small and vulgar, if a score of modern tourists are seen scrambling up their mathematically correct sides.

But though this human biped in the valley of Forbach wears a suit of cheviot knickerbockers, and smokes a short briar, he does not spoil the scene so much as he might. For one thing, he is young and good-looking; for another, he is tall and straight, and for the rest, he possesses the grace of strength and health, and is altogether, perhaps, as pleasant a sight to look upon as the stream, the trees, or the mountains themselves.

With his hands in his pockets, his pipe in his mouth, and a casted fishing-rod under his arm, he saunters along, watching the stream and puffing away as indolently happy as the big kingfisher, which, perched on a rock, with its head on one side, eyes him curiously.

Presently he finishes his pipe, knocks the ashes out upon his hand, and noiselessly and slowly proceeds to put his rod together. Five minutes after he is whipping the stream, and, as he turns his face, one may recognize an old friend; it is Hal. That boys should grow up of one nature's by-laws; and either owing to the fact that the Bertrams are a tall race, or the other fact that Hal is particularly strong and healthy, Hal had grown exceedingly tall, and looks in the sunset almost a man. It is only when one hears him laugh—which he wouldn't do now with all these trout about for the world!—that the fact of his extreme youthfulness becomes patent. Looking at him, one is reminded of two things—that few countries can turn out a better sample of a young man than the English, and that this particular sample is a remarkably good one.

With that peculiar patience which belongs to the fly-fisherman, and to him alone, Hal whips the stream, casting the dainty bait in shallows and depths, and wiping the perspiration from his tanned face with his disengaged hand, never raising his eyes from the clear water as it rushes merrily by him.

Every now and then, late as the season is, a trout leaps into the sunlight, like a piece of quicksilver, and presently Hal has one lying snugly in the basket at his side.

"Tiptop," he says, taking a peep at it, "not so bad for Germany. Let's have another throw."

Slowly but steadily he works his way. Two, three, four restless pieces of wet silver kick and founder beside the first; and Hal, growing excited, strides from bowlder to bowlder, oblivious of time or place, whip-whipping every spot, likely or unlikely.

So rapt and oblivious is he to all but his work that he makes his way around the curve into a spot where the bowlders grow less frequent, and the water deeper. He is about to get a rise, and is fighting skillfully with his fish, walking along as he does so, when his foot catches in some light, diaphanous object. With an impatient exclamation, he stumbles upright, and takes his eyes from the water to cast about for the trace which is so unexpected that he not only forgets his fish, but very nearly his manners also.

For close at his feet—indeed, they are standing upon her light dress—sits a young girl, so motionless as to appear part and parcel of the bright grass and wild flowers, and seems so like a wild flower herself that it is little wonder Hal has stumbled over her unwittingly.

He is about to speak, when she holds up her hand, puts it to her lips, then points to the stream with a quick, impulsive gesture, which is at once so commanding and imploring that Hal turns to his fish, and, perhaps, not unmindful that he is being watched, plays his victim with all the skill he knows, and lands him, literally at her feet.

With a muttered apology he secures the jumping, kicking prey, and puts him into the basket;—then raises his hat, blushing like—like a boy.

"I'm—I'm very sorry," he says. "I hope I haven't hurt you; very clumsy and awfully stupid, but I was looking at the fish."

He stops short for lack of words, and stares at her in his old way.

Hal is not a lady's man, and the effect of beauty upon him is to make him as speechless as an oyster, and apparently as stupid.

And the face that looks up to him is beautiful enough to strike an older man.

Suddenly, and yet slowly, a human figure emerges from the shadow of the forest, and comes into the red sunlight.

"I'm afraid," he says, looking down at her dress, "that I've torn your frock. If it hadn't been for this confounded trout I should have seen you—and

She looks up, striking him silent again.

"Does not matter—no, not in the slightest," she says, in very good English, but with an accent that serves to intensify the music. "I am very glad you have caught your fish."

"Ah! I'm very sorry I ever hooked him," says Hal, "if I've spoiled your dress."

She laughs, and just touches her torn skirt, with a good-natured contempt.

"It matters not—not in the slightest," she repeats. "How let jump! Have you got any more?"

Hal goes down on his knees, and opens his basket.

"Five," he says.

And she bends forward and peeps in curiously, extending a finger and touching one of the trout, with a little, musical laugh.

"What pretty fellows," she says; "and you caught them all? I watched you coming around the valley, and wondered what you were doing. Is that little fly what you caught them with?"

"Yes," says Hal, and he places the fly in her hand, his shyness vanishing slowly under the charm of her frankness.

"What a little thing to catch so large a fish!"

Hal laughs.

"Here are some more!" he says, and opens his flybook.

As she takes it in her hand, Hal notices for the first time in his life how white and small it is. And she, if the truth must be told, wonders as much at the brownness of his, from his hand, it is very near her own as they both bend over the flybook—and she looks up, wondering again at the deep tan which extends from ear to ear, forehead to chin.

Quite unconscious of her gaze, Hal turns the leaves of his book—dearer to him, alas! than any volume ever printed—and points out the various flies.

"Ah!" she says, "it is interesting, this fishing. Will you not go and catch some more?"

"This seems so remarkably like 'You may go now,' that Hal jumps to his feet, and catches up his basket with a boyish flush.

"Yes," he says. "I'll go now."

"But not far, please," she says, with a natvete which is irresistible. "I should like to see you catch another."

"All right!" says Hal, immensely relieved, and, adjusting his line, he goes a little distance and begins again.

The girl folds her hands around her knees, and watches him under her broad, tilted hat, watches him with the pleased interest of a child, and yet with a certain gravity which does not properly pertain to her years. Hal goes on step by step, and is almost on the way forgetting his companion, when suddenly he hears a cry of pain, and feels his line caught—both at the same moment.

LONDON, Feb. 7. Inquiry, carried out in official circles, with reference to the statement by Austin Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, in his speech at Birmingham last Saturday night, that the U.S. Government had vetoed the British suggestion for a general writing off of Inter-Ally obligations, tends to show that the Chancellor's declaration was based on misinformation.

THE AUNT WITH THE MOTHER HEART.

In a letter which came to me this morning the letter was reflected as deep and exquisite a sympathy and tenderness for the children under the writer's care as I ever came into contact with. Was the letter from the children's mother? It was not. It was from their aunt. I wish I were a poet so that I might do tribute (in a way that would go straight to the hearts of folks) to certain things which touch me strongly. If I were one of the first poets I would write would be "To the Mother Heart in the Maiden Aunt."

I think there is no more beautiful love in the world than the utterly unselfish tenderness some of these dear women give their nephews and nieces. The Aunt Who Could "Bring Them Up Properly" Exists. I do not mean to imply that all aunts are like that. Of course there are many who are indifferent, many who are critical and chiefly interested in thinking how much better the children would be brought up if they were theirs, many who have a merely casual affection. But at the same time there is also a goodly sprinkling of the kind of aunt who unconsciously painted herself in that letter. We all know them. There is the aunt who works in an office and scribbles herself to send a beloved nephew through college; there is the aunt who is always ready to drop any interests of her own to take her sister's place when the latter is ill or away; there is the aunt who lives with her sister's or brother's family and is considered by them a dependant although if they paid for the services of every sort she constantly renders, the dependance would be found to be on the other side. An unmarried aunt has within her the repressed power of the love she would have given husband and children, and when she pours it out on her nephews and nieces instead of

Coughing Must Cease In Canada

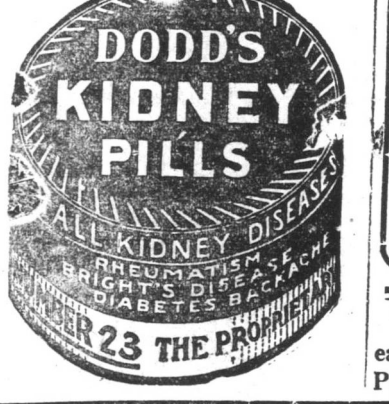

There is absolutely no use wasting any more time on the question of coughs, colds, etc. Action is required at once to stamp these ailments out of Canadian life for ever. Humanity must not suffer any longer. Success is certain if Buckley's Bronchitis Mixture, the greatest cough medicine known to mankind, is used. Thousands of sufferers have been helped, and recommend this remedy. It accomplishes almost the impossible. There is absolutely no excuse for anyone suffering from colds, bronchitis, influenza, etc., when there is within easy reach this scientific mixture, which has proven beyond a doubt its ability to relieve speedily and permanently. If you are a victim of any of the above ailments, don't hesitate a moment longer. Get a bottle at all druggists. Beware of all substitutes.

Almost Never Gets a Return.

I said that once when the dearest aunt that ever lived, came to my home—and it is one of the four things I would like best to have wiped out of my life. One of the Most Pathetic Figures in the World. The aunt who takes a dead mother's place in the home and grows to love the children as dearly as a mother, and then is driven out when a new wife is instated, seems to me one of the most pathetic figures in the world. Of course she is sometimes instated in the vacant position herself, and that is for the children the happiest thing that could happen. They stand the best chance of having a true foster-mother that way. Could anything in the world show the law-making folly of which man is capable, better than the Dead Wife's Sister Act, the law that for so many years made it illegal in England for a man to marry his dead wife's sister, the one woman in the world who would come to the children with a natural affection for them already in her heart? Thank goodness, we never had that folly here.

I have a feeling that if we do wear crowns in Heaven there will be a very special crown for the Aunt with a Mother's Heart. It may have somewhat different gems from those in the mother crown, but I can't believe they will be any less bright.

Japanese Competition.

The Japanese being now greatly interested in fish food production, having fleets of small craft engaging in the coast fisheries, while larger vessels are outfitted for the Siberian Banks, are looking to other markets than home for the disposal of their catch, and already Japanese fishing concerns have made many shipments to Pacific ports of the United States, and even some small lots have found their way into several of the West Indian islands.

Fish oil when manufactured from fresh liver is an edible fat, and in addition to its value for glycerine content, many grades are used in paints, varnishes, waterproofing materials, manufacture of leather goods and as a component of lubricating oils.

The success of the evening largely depended on the President, C. F. Davis, and to him much credit is due for such a record success.

Buying Readymades has been an expensive game. But BLAIR'S Overcoat Sale gives everybody a chance to get into the game and you can't lose.

There is an established market for fish oil in the manufacture of leather goods, paints, soap and in all lines using edible and non-edible fats which would guarantee a permanent industry of importance if given the same protection accorded other American manufacturers whose competition by foreign production is hampered by cheap labor in a dangerous factor.

Japan's entrance into the cod oil industry is likely to have some effect on Newfoundland sales in Britain and America, which may only be obviated by the placing of an extra duty on Oriental oils or by giving a tariff preference to such as are produced from the Atlantic and Pacific Fisheries of Canada and Newfoundland.

Induction of New Pastor.

The induction of the Rev. R. J. Power, M.A., took place last night in St. Andrew's Church, and the services were under the auspices of the Presbytery of Halifax. The storm somewhat interfered with the attendance, but a fine audience, in the circumstances, followed the service with intense interest.

People on the West Coast are justly increased over the arbitrary action of the Food Control Board in compelling them to pay so much more than is quite legal in order that the F.C.B. may be recouped for its blundering losses—for sugar until June.

Personal.

Miss Sargent, Superintendent of Spencer Lodge, Forest Road, since September last, has resigned and leaves by the S.S. Rosalind for New York, having accepted a post in that city.

G. W. V. A. Card Tournament, which was to have taken place to-night, is postponed until Thursday, 8.30 p.m. All Vets and the public are cordially invited.—Feb. 8.

McGill N. F. Skating Club.

A skating party was held by the Newfoundland Club of McGill University, Montreal, on the evening of Thursday, January 27, and, says the McGill Gazette.

If the weather gods had been consulted they could not have assigned a better night for a skating party than was on that date. The members of the Newfoundland Club met at the M.A.A.A. rink at 8 p.m. The ice was in perfect condition, and the music was of the usually high standard.

Mr. and Mrs. R. L. McLean, formerly of Newfoundland, also attended with the members. Mrs. McLean was the chaperon for the evening, and the men as well as the fair sexes agreed that her decisions were always timely.

It is said that "Tommy" Parn, the Feildian skipper, will referee to-night's game between the St. Bon's and the Saints.

Gunning Accident.

Mr. Peter Troke of Durrell's Arm, met with a nasty accident yesterday morning, January 28, says the Twillingate Sun, while out birding, and as a result is suffering from a severely cut face. Mr. Troke was shooting from the right shoulder, when the gun kicked strongly and the lock caught him in the cheek, laying it open to the bone.

Buying Readymades has been an expensive game. But BLAIR'S Overcoat Sale gives everybody a chance to get into the game and you can't lose.

Western Notes.

J. P. Chelwynd of Port aux Basques is outfitting the twin screw motor boat Luxor to engage in the spring fishery. Capt. John C. Ford goes in command.

Mr. T. Soper, Sub-Collector of Customs at Channel, who has been very much incapacitated from work for some time, does not appear to be improving, and it is the general opinion that this old and faithful servant of the Crown should be pensioned.

Weather about Port aux Basques and Channel has been exceedingly stormy of late, and very cold. There is plenty of fish at Rose Blanche and Burnt Islands, and boats there are doing well. Catches are fair at points West of these places, but as there are only about a dozen still operating from Channel and surrounding, the voyage there will not be an average one for January month.

The Railway terminus and freight sheds at Port aux Basques are practically completed, and electricians are now engaged wiring and installing a lighting plant, which is expected to be ready for illuminating purposes by the end of February.

People on the West Coast are justly increased over the arbitrary action of the Food Control Board in compelling them to pay so much more than is quite legal in order that the F.C.B. may be recouped for its blundering losses—for sugar until June.

Hockey Notes.

Last night's game was postponed at the last moment owing to the storm and will take place to-night. Over 150 spectators braved the drift to go to the rink and they were greatly disappointed.

The line-up will be the same as that published yesterday.

The protest in connection with the St. Bon's-Terra Nova game which was to come up before a league meeting to-day was unavoidably postponed.

The Feildians and Methodist College boys met this morning in the second game of the Intercollegiate series. The game was a fast one throughout the three periods, both sides putting up some very good play. The game ended in a draw 4-4. Owing to the referee being late the game could not be played to a finish. The next game of this series will be played on Thursday morning, the Feildians and St. Bon's being the contesting teams.

The Feildians and Terra Novas will probably meet to-morrow night in the second game of the second round of the league series. A very fast and exciting game is expected, and quite a number of surprises may be forthcoming.

It is said that "Tommy" Parn, the Feildian skipper, will referee to-night's game between the St. Bon's and the Saints.

Getting the Tank Ready.

Mr. R. G. Silverlock had a number of mechanics at work on the Whippet Tank yesterday afternoon and this morning for some hours trying to get it in working order preparatory to its being used for beating down the snow on the streets. Some difficulty was experienced in getting the engine under way as the battery had run very low and, as the Tank has been lying up for such a long period, it was only natural that the engine would require to be heated for some time before combustion could take place. Although the mechanics had got the engine started, up to press hour the tank had not been moved.

Renders Human Body Transparent. A Russian physician, Dr. Wassiloff, has announced the discovery of a fluid which renders the human body transparent. Flowers which he treated in the same manner also became transparent, he says, but apparently were otherwise unaffected. Before the war, Dr. Wassiloff had a laboratory in Petrograd, but he is at present living in Paris. He refuses to reveal the nature of the fluid, but says it is a combination of a number of liquids.

IN LOVING MEMORY of my dear husband, who died Feb. 7th, 1920. Gone but not forgotten. Dearest one thou have left me. For the battle fight alone. But I hope someday to join you. With the angels around the Throne. Sometimes I wish the fight was over. When the conflict I find hard. But I know you fought before me. So all my trust is in the Lord. —Inserted by his loving wife, Susan Meadus.

MY COLUMN

(By the Cub-Editor.)
IT SERVES ME RIGHT.
When I first announced that I was going to answer all questions asked through this column, I little thought that I would receive letters requesting answers to such preposterous questions as some of those that have reached me. I have managed, however, to survive up to the present, and the last question put to me made my temperature rise to very near 190. I pulled through in a great deal better than I shall ever be able to understand for first when I read the letter I fainted on the spot, and I remained unconscious for several hours. I am sure I have tonight my readers' curiosity to a point and as I don't want to be the cause of any bereavements I cut off curiosity, 'y' know, I will tell you the substance of the letter which was the cause of so great a shock in my busy life. It came on one morning in a delightfully sealed envelope and was signed "Cutie". As if this weren't enough, the letter propounded the following question which was sufficient to knock any man out: "How can one curl one's hair out?" she asked. Ye gods! she asked! What a question! I immediately called the stenographer for consultation. ("E did not, 'E ain't one-Harris). With her aid I obtained the following solution to the problem which I hope "Cutie" will be able to use.
"First of all the would-be curler of hair must eat crusts constantly. Crusts always crusts and still more crusts. Then each night as much of the hair as can be got at must be tied up in curling pins, odd bits of flannel and pieces of twine. This must be done for three months without intermission. Every morning during the first three months the curling tongs must be set to work. This also must be kept up consistently. By the end of the time the sufferer should be so fed that she won't care whether her hair is curled or not. If she isn't, she had better write me for further directions."

RIMES OF THE TIMES.

Late Sunday night
A curious sight
Was seen on St. John's Street.
A man of might
His wife did fight
He gave all passes-by a treat.
It seems that she Did not agree
That her home life was the best.
And therefore he Should his duty
Be to the manly's arrest.
So then and there
His wife did
Begin to fight home to drag.
She was so Scared and
He began her man to scrag.
She was so
Thought he did shout
That he was both strong and
She knocked him out
Then turned about
And was escorted by the crowd.

CHOICE OF EVILS.
"Would you marry her just because she's wealthy? Don't you know she has a questionable past?"
"Well, what of it? If I don't marry her I shall have a questionable future."

CLEANED OUT.
"All there left," shouted a Brighton hotel landlord to a partying guest who was packing for a train, "you've dropped your pocket-book."
"All right," shouted back the guest without stopping, "I've no further use for it."

Robbie—"Yes, ma'am."
Teacher—"What lesson do we learn from it?"
Robbie—"That we shouldn't eat everything we see."

A PALPABLE HIT.
The anti-vegetarian was arguing that while a glass of buttermilk may be as nourishing as a half dozen oysters, you'll never find a pearl in a glass of buttermilk.
"Humph!" ejaculated the other, "I've found as many pearls in buttermilk as I ever have in oysters."

ADVICE TO THE HUSBAND.
A crowd quickly assembled when it was discovered that a tall man in a temperance suit of all black, clad wearing tee-total whiskers, was chafing a gay semi-drunk—one of a party of roysterers—with a flapping umbrella. The young man was taking his castigation to the greatest good humour, while the ineffective weapon fell harmlessly upon his shoulders. The tall man in the Rechabite coat explained with righteous ferocity: "This scoundrel kissed my wife! He just walked up to her here in the street, and kissed her."
"Yes, he did," shrieked a gaunt lady, with a face a little like a defective iron moulding, "and I never saw him before in my life."
Her shrill grief inspired the husband to more violent efforts with the gamp.

"Teach you to kiss my wife!" said he.
Then the portly cabman cut in: "Garn!" he snorted. "You can't hurt him with that. Make him kiss her again!"

LENTEN PASTORAL MESSAGE.

EDWARD PATRICK, By the Grace of God, and Favour of the Apostolic See, Archbishop of St. John's, Newfoundland.

TO THE CLERGY, RELIGIOUS COMMUNITIES AND LAITY OF THE ARCHDIOCESE OF ST. JOHN'S, HEALTH AND BLESSING.

My Dearly Beloved Brethren: The Lenten Season is again with us, and with it comes the annual Pastoral Message to the Clergy and laity of the Archdiocese.

SIGNIFICANCE OF LENT.

It is a wise disposition of the Church which provides this Season of piety and devotion every year. The Lenten Season year by year breaks sharply into the ordinary routine of our daily lives. It is not a mere survival of a more religious age, the meaning and significance of which have passed away; its former rigour has been mitigated, but its spirit remains ever the same. Various are the means and methods by which the Church strives to hold aloft the torch of the supernatural amidst the darkness of the world. Her mystic sacramental system, her imposing and impressive liturgy, her pious sodalities and confraternities, her missions and retreats, are all directed to the same end—to remind her children of their eternal destiny and to assist them in ordering their lives with a view to the attainment of that end. Amongst these means one of the foremost and most important is the Lenten Season. Lent is the time which the Church especially chooses for recalling to our minds salutary thoughts, thoughts bearing upon the great eternal truths which we are too often disposed to forget.

UNSETTLED AND IRRELIGIOUS CONDITIONS.

It is well, particularly in these unsettled days when the minds of men are so engrossed with material matters and are so far from God and the supernatural, that this Holy Season should intervene and recall us to a consideration of higher things than those that concern the present life. In the moral, as well as in all the more material relations of life the Great War of a few years ago has been followed by disastrous consequences. It was through many when the war began, and as it progressed that it would have the effect of deepening and strengthening the sense of religion in the world, and of drawing mankind closer to the Creator. It is true, indeed, that during the war many of the afflicted and stricken who had long forgotten God and religion turned to their Creator in the depths of their distress and desolation, but it must be sadly admitted that the war has left the world much worse than it found it, has blunted in a great measure the moral sense of the world, has tended to foster the spirit of indifference, and irreligion which was already too marked in the modern world, and has given birth to a number of theories and views utterly subversive of Christian teaching, and of everything for which Christianity stands. It is well known that all wars in history have been followed by a loosening of the bonds of morality and a weakening of the spirit of faith just as they have been always followed by economic and social disturbances. In the face of the present war the moral "stagnation" following has been all the greater in proportion to the magnitude of this mammoth struggle, the most gigantic and disastrous in the world's history.

POST WAR PROBLEMS.

The secular leaders of the world to-day, the statesmen, diplomats and leaders in finance, industry and commerce are grappling with after war problems the world over, struggling with problems of reconstruction and readjustment, endeavouring to evolve order out of chaos, to bring back a disturbed and unsettled world to the normal conditions of peace. The Church also has to deal with the moral problems to which the war has given rise, has to endeavour to stem the tide of immorality which the war let loose on the world, to purify and uplift the moral life of mankind, in one word, to undertake the great work of moral and religious reconstruction. The Church, furthermore, believes that this lies at the root of all other reform and reconstruction. It was the departure from and forgetfulness of the principles of Christianity and of Christ's teaching that plunged the world in war; the only remedy, therefore, for the evils of the day lies in the return to the principles of the Gospel of Christ.

MODERN UNBELIEF.

Even before the war the trend of modern irreligious thought was to separate morality and religion, to seek elsewhere than in the Gospel and Christ's teaching for standards of morality, to set up a purely natural standard of virtue, independent of the Divine and the supernatural. In the code of morals of the modern unbelieving world God had no part; the Ten Commandments and the Sermon on the Mount which are the basis of all morality and Christian perfection were disregarded and set aside, and were no longer to furnish the rules for man's conduct and manner of living. These modern errors were accentuated and intensified by the War. The horrors, cruelties, injustices and inhumanity which the War called forth, emphasizing all that was worst as it brought out all that was best in man, tended to confirm the views of the skeptic and unbeliever and even to change the viewpoint and weaken the faith of many who had been believers in Christianity and all that it represented. The contention of many was that the fact that the world had been plunged in such a war was in itself an indictment of its mission which Christianity could not answer. But the whole history of Christianity has been a struggle against the forces of evil. There have been many periods in the history of the Christian Church when the struggle against immorality and sin has never been as great as that which confronts the Church to-day, yet the triumphant power of religion has been vindicated time and again, and so it will be to-day. The world will eventually come to see that the moral and material well-being of man can never rest on any other foundation than religion and the Gospel of Christ. "Other foundations no man can lay but that which is laid, which is Christ Jesus"—(I. Cor. III. II)

A modern writer on Christian ethics has the following: "The moral system in the modern world is the creation of Christian religion. The will of God, the example of Our Lord Jesus Christ, the hope of future happiness, have furnished the ultimate reasons for leading a good life. The characters that have most won men's respect, that have influenced the world most deeply have been those formed under the influence of religion. Respect for authority and the permanence of political institutions depended less on their material force than on the fact that they were representative of Divine Authority. Civil laws had a binding force stronger than the penalties surrounding them because they were accepted as the promulgation of the laws of God. The religious spirit gave birth also to chivalry, courtesy, benevolence, honesty, patience, loyalty, courtesy, disinterestedness, the sense of human brotherhood and love of liberty. In fact, what we mean by morality, that is, the principles of a noble and beautiful life, were the outcome of Christian doctrine."

"I believe about God, the human soul, the Fall and redemption, the person of Jesus Christ, the dignity of His blessed Mother, free will and responsibility, sin and Heaven and Hell."

These great truths have ever been the essence of the Lenten observance. They are the fundamental and essential principles of the teaching of the Church. The great historic fact of the Incarnation of the Second Person of the Holy Trinity, the Divinity of Jesus Christ, the establishment of His sublime code of morals by the observance of which alone will man be saved, the foundation of a Church to continue His mission by means of preaching, sacrament and sacrifice, the existence of a future life, of a Heaven for the reward of the just, of a Hell for the punishment of the wicked—all these are elementary principles of the Theology and Catechism of the Catholic Church. They are the theme of her instructions, the subject of her sermons at all times, but they are brought home to her children with special force during the Season of Lent, for Lent is the time when throughout the Church there are not only special liturgical devotions, but also special conferences on, and expositions of, all that is contained in that familiar formula, Christian Doctrine, or the teaching of Christ. In harmony with the universal practice throughout the Church during the coming Season there will be the usual sermons and devotions throughout the Archdiocese in accordance with Diocesan regulations, and the arrangements according to local conditions, of the Pastors of the various Parishes.

MISSION IN ST. JOHN'S.

In the city of St. John's arrangements have been made for the holding of Missions at the Cathedral and in St. Patrick's during Lent. It is now five years since there has been a regular Mission, and in the ordinary course the time has come for another. The Mission will continue for four weeks, two weeks at the Cathedral and two weeks at St. Patrick's with an intermission of one week in mid-Lent. There are special reasons why a Mission is particularly opportune at the present time. We have not been unaffected by the laxity that is prevailing everywhere to-day; we need that spiritual tonic which only a Mission can supply. Missions constitute one of the greatest forces for good which the Church possesses, and everywhere they are producing the most spiritual results amongst the faithful. It is to be hoped, then, that our people will faithfully attend the exercises of the Mission, and thus avail to the full of the great means of grace placed at their disposal during the coming weeks.

LENTEN FAST AND ABSTINENCE.

It may be that many, for various reasons, will not be bound by the law of Fast and Abstinence. Pastors and Confessors have the most ample powers with regard to dispensations and are expected to exercise them with the greatest leniency in this respect. Nevertheless, the Lenten Regulations were removed altogether. This year it has not been judged expedient to do this, but all who think that for any reason they are exempt from the Lenten observance should obtain a dispensation from their Pastor or Confessor. Pastors are requested to instruct their flocks that if their be any doubt as to whether they are bound or not they should not assume the obligation without consultation with their Spiritual Director.

CONCLUSION.

Meanwhile all the faithful are earnestly exhorted to enter into the spirit of the observance of this sacred and ancient Christian Season, to give heed to the higher standard of living, and to order their daily lives in such a manner in this world as that they may be worthy of obtaining hereafter the eternal happiness of Heaven. "For the rest, brethren, rejoice, be perfect, take exhortation, be of one mind, have peace; and the God of peace and of love shall be with you. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the charity of God; and the communication of the Holy Ghost be with you all. Amen"—(II. Cor. XIII. 11-13.)

REGULATIONS FOR LENT.

1. Every day in Lent, except Sunday, is a Fast day on which one meal only and a collation are allowed. A slight relaxation, however, over and above is allowed by immemorial custom in the Diocese.
2. By an Indult from the Holy See renewed April, 1914, ad decennium, that is until 1924, permission is given to use in cooking the lard or fat of animals on all Fast days throughout the year.
3. By the same Indult the use of flesh meat is allowed on all Mondays, Tuesdays and Saturdays of Lent, except Saturday in Ember Week, February 19th.
4. It is permitted to use fish and flesh meat at the same meal on all days on which the use of meat is allowed.
5. Milk, butter, cheese, and eggs are allowed even at the collation every day during Lent, including Ash Wednesday and Good Friday.
6. The faithful are exhorted to

BABY COLEMAN.

"Altogether brighter and happier"

161, Cambridge Road, Seven Kings, Essex.

Dear Sirs, My baby seemed to be quite healthy at birth, but being unable to feed him I tried different foods at various times. At first he appeared to be making progress, but after a few months it became evident he was wasting, and I was advised to try Virol. He soon began to pull round, and in a short time made considerable weight. This satisfactory progress has continued, thanks to Virol, which has built up his strength, making him a splendidly sturdy little fellow. In view of the gratifying results obtained, I do not hesitate to recommend Virol whenever the question arises of the best alternative food for baby.—Yours truly, G. C. COLEMAN.

For tiredness, nervous exhaustion, and sleeplessness take Virolised milk three times a day. (A teaspoonful in half-pint of warm milk.)

make some compensation for these Apostolic indulgences by hearing daily Mass, attending Evening Devotions, making the Way of Cross and by giving alms to the poor.

7. All persons under 21 years of age and over 60 are exempt from the Fast; also all engaged in hard labour or who have to earn their living by daily work of a difficult kind, and all who are in a delicate state of health.

8. All dances, parties and balls are strictly forbidden during Lent.

9. The obligation of the Lenten Fast and Abstinence terminates at noon on Holy Saturday.

JE. P. ROCHE, Archbishop of St. John's, Quinquagesima Sunday, February 6th, 1921.

Not a Popular Wish.

(From the Boston Transcript.) The new clergyman was trying to raise a charitable fund just before Christmas and a man in the congregation said he would give $100 to start it off.

"I don't know your name, sir," said the grateful clergyman, "but I thank you and I pray that your business may be doubled during the coming year."

There was a solemn hush in the congregation, punctuated here and there with something that sounded like a titter.

"What's the matter?" the clergyman whispered anxiously to the chairman.

"Er—nothing—nothing," stammered the chairman, "only that gentleman happens to be an undertaker."

Schoope Says He Sleeps All Night Long Now

Gets Up Fresh As A Daisy Every Morning Since Taking Tanlac.

"What I needed was just an all round building up and Tanlac has done that very thing," said Joseph Schoope, Dartmouth, N.S. "For at least a year before taking Tanlac I was in a badly run-down condition. I wasn't sick exactly but had no strength or energy and it didn't take anything hardly to tire me out. What little sleep I got seemed to do me no good and I got up in the morning with a dull, bad taste in my mouth and feeling worse than I did through the day. I had a dull headache all the time and felt weak and languid and it was a drag for me to get through my work."

"But Tanlac has straightened me out in every way. I have gained ten pounds in weight and am stronger and feel more like working than I have for years. I sleep fine, get up feeling as fresh as a daisy and feel good all through the day. I have recommended Tanlac to a great many of my friends. It is certainly a great medicine."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, in Paradise by Mrs. Martin F. Byrne, in Upper Gables by Fieher Andrews, in Portland by H. C. Haines, in St. John's, Salmonier, by Mrs. J. Gushue, in McIverton by Ex-plotis Valley Royal Stores Ltd., in Flat Islands by Willis Samson, in Jamestown by Christopher Haines, and in Lewisporte by Uriah Preake.

WHEN DAY IS DONE.

When day is done and the night slips down, And I've turned my back on the busy world, And come once more to the welcome gate Where the roses nod and the children wait, I tell myself as I see them smile That life is good and its tasks worth while.

When day is done and I've come to my quiet street and the friendly door, Where the mother reigns and the children play And the kettle sings in the old-time way, I throw my coat on a near-by chair And say farewell to my pack of care.

When day is done, all the hurt and strife And the selfishness and the greed of life, Are left behind in the busy town; I've ceased to worry about renown Or gold or fame, and I'm just a dad, Content to be with his girl and lad.

Whatever the day has brought of care, Here love and laughter are mine to share, Here I can claim what the rich desire— Rest and peace by a ruddy fire. The welcome words which the loved ones speak And the soft caress of a baby's cheek.

When day is done and I reach my gate, I come to a realm where there is no hate, For here, whatever my worth may be, Are those who cling to their faith in me, And with love on guard at my humble door, I have all that the world has struggled for.

THE HIGH PLACE.

I do not envy Warren G., his task I would not share; I have no Presidential see, I want no White House chair, for all it brings, as he will see, is plain and fancy care. He's full of high resolves, you know, our confidence to earn; he'd make the wheels of commerce go, as all good wheels should turn, and put the lid on every woe, and give us joy to burn. And if we all stood at his back, to help us best we might, to share the burden he must pack, and cheer him day and night, he might enjoy that old white shack and think his work delight. But ere he's fairly warmed his seat a million hungry chaps will ask why, in the name of Pete, they don't get public snaps, and they will stop him in the street and bore him with their yaps. And he will sit at night and sigh, and curse the froward fates that put him in a place so high, where only trouble waits; no nation has enough of pie to feed the hungry skates. And those who fall to get a slice will say he is a fake, and they will hand him chunks of ice when he's expecting cake, and one day or maybe twice, his weary heart will break. And he will walk with dragging step to meet his callers gay, and they will see he loses pep with every passing day; and soon he'll summon Old Dog Shep to chase the bores away.

Destitution in the Second City.

There is considerable destitution in this town and in other places in this district, caused chiefly by the shutting down of work on Bell Island, and poor returns from last summer's fishery. Should the Government decide to help the deserving men over the pluck of the times, it would be a wise step if some work would be provided, so that returns, even if limited, would be had for expenditure. No man wants straight Government help. In this and other localities, clay and gravel are needed for the repair of roads, and the dig-

A 10-Day Tube of Pepsodent, to show you how to end film. See below.

Never Sleep

With a film-coat on your teeth

Millions of people on retiring now combat the film on teeth. They fight it day by day. And those glistening teeth seen everywhere now form one of the results.

You owe yourself a trial of this new teeth-cleaning method. Dentists everywhere advise it. The results it brings are all-important, and they do not come without it.

What film does

Your teeth are coated with a viscous film. Feel it with your tongue. It clings to teeth, enters crevices and stays. And dentists now trace most tooth troubles to it.

The ordinary tooth paste does not end film. So, despite all brushing, much film remains, to cause stain, tartar, germ troubles and decay.

It is the film-coat that discolors, not the teeth. Film is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

Ways to combat it

Dental science, after years of research, has found effective ways to fight film. Able authorities have proved their efficiency. Together they bring, in modern opinion, a new era in teeth cleaning.

These five methods are combined in a dentifrice called Pepsodent—a tooth paste which complies with all the new requirements. And a ten-day tube is now sent free to everyone who asks.

Watch the teeth whiten

You will see and feel results from Pepsodent which brushing never brought you heretofore. A week's use, we think, will amaze you.

One ingredient is papain. One multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva, to digest all starch deposits that cling. One multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva to neutralize mouth acids.

Two factors directly attack the film. One of them keeps the teeth so highly polished that film cannot easily cling.

Watch these effects. Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. Note how teeth whiten as the film-coat disappears.

The book we send explains all these results. Judge what they mean to you and yours. Cut out the coupon so you won't forget.

How Hugh McNeil Met His Death.

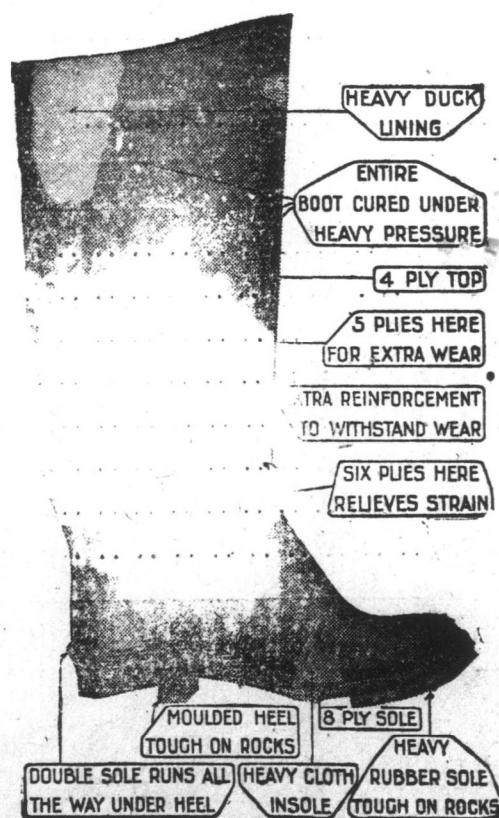

(Western Star.)

Although not a lover of criticism, I feel in duty bound to make a few remarks concerning an item which appeared in your issue of the 19th ult., about the death of Hugh McNeil. Mr. McNeil was not a native of the Highlands but of Grand River. The statement that he accidentally fell on an unburned point of his pick which pierced his breast and entered one of his lungs, is incorrect, and whoever sent it to the press gave a poor description of how the unfortunate man met his fate, and being an eye witness of the affair I beg leave to give a proper explanation of it. Mr. McNeil was timbering in the west drift with two other men, the three of them having had former experience at mining and while he and his two comrades were putting up a boom a "pocket" fell from the roof and crushed him to the bottom amongst the tools with which they had been working, but neither the pick nor any other tool pierced his breast or lungs. He was somewhat bruised about the back and one of his legs was broken and his side pierced by some small object, but no one is positive what it was. His comrades removed the debris, which had fallen on him, as quickly as possible, and for over sixteen hours after the accident he had the use of his senses and speech. All available physicians were brought to him as quickly as it could be done, he was consoled by the last rites of the Church, and on the early hours of the following morning he passed to the Great Beyond. Mr. McNeil was always remarkable for his courteousness and patience, and was held in high esteem by all his acquaintances, a kind and loving friend always cheerful and ever ready to help the needy. He leaves to mourn their sad loss a father, five brothers, four sisters, a sorrowing wife and three children, besides a large host of friends, to whom the community extends sympathy in their sad bereavement. As the North Sees It.

(Twillingate Sun.)

Having ransacked the Treasury by voting themselves five thousand dollar salaries, creating foreign and local appointments for political heifers and defeated candidates, appointing incompetent ambassadors, consuls and commissioners, and inspectors who are incapable, and even if they were, do not inspect, Newfoundland has been called upon to pay almost one million dollars for the extra officialdom of a Railway Commission.

THE INSPECTION FARCE.

Recently there was an exhibition at the Board of Trade Rooms, St. John's, a sample of codfish, returned from Europe, that had been passed by inspectors as No. 1 quality. It is declared by all who saw it to be only inferior cuttings, and so loosely was this inspection carried out that European buyers refused to accept our government grading entirely, as it was worthless. Thus another of the Minister of Fisheries' kites falls to the ground. All sorts of stories are current as to the cost of this fish inspection last year. Some people put it at $100,000, others higher; but a hundred thousand is probably much too low. No definite figures are available, however, until the House meets and opposition members dig out the facts. Of one thing the country is pretty well certain, and that is that beyond supplying certain good party supporters with a well paid job, mighty little benefit accrued to the country from the much advertised "inspection."

Marketing Our Herring.

The value of the Bay of Islands herring industry the past season has amounted to over three hundred thousand dollars. The fish by the "Scotch" pack was the finest ever sent from the shores of this country, and might well be classed as extra large and large. There were practically no small fish put up by that method. In fact the Government standard of sizes being so high, that what are classed as small, might well be termed medium, when compared with Alaskan and other foreign packs. It is generally considered, however, that the packers did not receive the prices for their goods in season commensurate with the conditions, they being at the mercy of foreign purchasing agents who had covered the market early in the season and who will no doubt reap big profits in many instances from the sales in the New York and other United States markets, as well as the rakeoff of a dollar a barrel on the purchasing transaction.

The time has arrived when our packers should get together and formulate a system for the marketing of their products. And this should be an easy matter, now that Newfoundland has a trade commissioner stationed in New York. With a wide-awake and thoroughly competent trade commissioner in that city, provided with the necessary facilities, our herring and other products which ultimately go into or are suitable for the market could be marketed with profit to the exporters and remuneration to the Government. Besides, the trade commissioner could watch the requirements of the market, and note any objections regarding goods sent forward and advise the exporter and in that way afford an opportunity for improvement; for if we hope to get full market value for our goods we must supply the class of goods desired by the consumer. When we fail to do so, our goods become a drag on the market, and have to be sold at reduced prices and the country suffers thereby.—Western Star.

The Fish Situation.

Another Complication Develops.

The expected antagonism which Mr. Coaker's deal with the International Mercantile Association, by which the Fisheries Minister gave that body a monopoly of all Newfoundland fish for the Portuguese market, has been realized, according to a message received yesterday by the Board of Trade. The message contains the information that the Portuguese Fish Merchants held a meeting, and that 10 of the largest buyers of our produce, have decided not to buy or sell any Newfoundland fish, unless the Regulations are lifted, and the present monopoly abolished. A Gazette Extraordinary was issued yesterday which extends the date of the embargo on shipments of more than 100 qts. of fish to Portugal to Feb. 12th. This it is understood will be the date of sailing of the first cargo under the new agreement, which permits the release of two vessels at the same time. The full text of the Regulations now governing sales to Portugal will likely be published in the regular Royal Gazette issued this evening. The decision of the Portuguese Fish Buyers not to buy or sell Newfoundland fish under present conditions, fully justifies our editorial statement yesterday, that nothing has been changed.

A Protest From the Royal Port.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir—It is with great reluctance that I take up my pen to write. As, however, human patience has a limit, I feel it my duty to do so and ask the people of Newfoundland if they want to be fooled any longer by the so-called F.C.B. or rather the Society of Bluffers, for goodness knows no other name will suit them, as they are pulling the wool over the people's eyes, and making pure scapegoats out of them. A short time ago under public pressure they cut the price of sugar down to 25 cents per pound, retail, and announced that the regulations would come to an end after February. But now we find that the regulations will be kept in force for at least four months longer. Now what do the Government and the members of the F.C.B. think we are. They must think we are a low type of human beings to put up with such treatment. If the price of sugar were high in the foreign markets, we would gladly stand by and accept the inevitable. But as every intelligent person knows we could have imported sugar and sold it here for at the most 15 cents per pound, retail. Now, Sir, the reason the F.C.B. is keeping the control on sugar is because they made a humbug of the situation a few months ago when the sugar was a high price and now we, the consumers, have to suffer.

In their statement issued a few days ago, they say that there were somewhere around twelve thousand barrels less consumed this year than there were last year. Now, Sir, I think I am safe in saying there will be twelve thousand barrels less consumed this year. They say that if the restrictions were lifted, we would have to pay a tax on sugar, as the Government will be a loser of thousands of dollars. Now, Sir, the goodness knows that is a shame. Why don't the modern Pharos and his party of political followers, who are travelling around the world at the expense of the people, stay at home and save the enormous amounts which their expenses would cost the people? They can't live the restrictions, but they can pay them. Goodness knows, that Job had a lot of patience, but I think the people of Newfoundland have got more. If they didn't they would be up and doing before this. Now, Mr. Editor, by writing these articles you are doing the majority of the work of this settlement. Men of Newfoundland, you are still living under the Union Jack. You have the freedom of speech, and it's up to you to use it. Come forward and show the vile politicians that you are not afraid of them. In conclusion, I wish to ask the F.C.B. what was the patent they used in destroying the rats that lived in the place where the sugar was stored?

Yours truly,
ELLI CURTIS.

Trinity Benefit Club.

On the 33rd annual meeting of the Trinity Benefit Club, on the Festival of the Purification, an address was presented by the officers and members, to Mr. Joseph Morris and Mr. Reginald Mills, as the oldest members of the Club. Mr. Morris has been a member for 65 years, and Mr. Mills for 64 years. The address was accompanied by a beautiful flashlight, which was referred to in the address as "A little tangible evidence of our good wishes, that for many years to come, you may continue to be helpful to others in the darker times of life; and to illustrate the wish expressed—that when the call comes to you, to ever upon the other part of the address, when the call shall be light."

The address was read by the Secretary, Mr. Walter N. White, and as he read it, a copy of it (together with the flashlight) was handed to each by the President, Mr. Edwin Grant; and all sang: "Should old acquaintance be forgot."

During the business meeting of the Club, a voluntary collection was taken for one of the older members—Mr. Jacob Woolridge, and the sum of ten dollars was handed to him with the compliments of the brethren. Mr. Edwin Grant was re-elected President, and Mr. Walter N. White was re-elected Secretary. Mr. John Burnell having resigned as Steward for St. John's, Mr. Walter Hart was elected to succeed him. After the parade, the members all sat down to a dinner, the first course of which was rabbit soup, followed by every other thing "according to the day's strenuous proceedings were wound up and shaken down by a dance that was a dance.

Morse Code Saves Man Locked in Vault.

Locked for nearly six hours in a hermetically sealed concrete and steel vault in the city treasurer's office at Philadelphia, Pa., a knowledge of the Morse telegraphic code probably saved the life of Arthur Brenner, assistant city treasurer. A mouse locked in at the same time failed to survive. Remembering that Charles Hockwald, a night watchman, also knew the Morse code, he pounded out on a wooden slat, "I am locked in." The answer came immediately from Hockwald, who telephoned for a man who knew the combination of the vault.

Dr. Fallon's Current

On Saturday afternoon Dr. Fallon addressed the Progressive Reading Room. The Progress of the "fish" consists of a lecture on prevention of every standstill from the doctors' most desirable to the lay mind, and in proof of the treatment were shown intelligent through the advice given; this is always interesting definition of Fallon's address. That definite law being taught progressive social to-day, but progress to the novices, down measures, concerning quarantines, and protection, and assures we have a more exhaustive manner than the science of the human race, healthier, the more, and the average party vote of the chairman was accorded by Dr. Fallon. Tea and a pleasant close.

Fallon Lectures to Current Events Club.

The Saturday afternoon last a most instructive address was given by Dr. J. Fallon to the members of the Current Events Club. The subject was "The Progress of Prophylactic Medicine." The lecture consisted of a comprehensive review of the progress of prophylactic medicine on preventive medicine; and the lecturer very ably proved that the value of prophylactic medicine is not only in preventing sickness, but in the lay mind, the statistics quoted in his address were a revelation; and the lecturer's address was followed by a discussion of the value of prophylactic medicine in the prevention of disease. Dr. Fallon's address was replete with interesting facts and figures, and it was an advantage to have such definite knowledge. Dr. Fallon's address was replete with interesting facts and figures, and it was an advantage to have such definite knowledge. Dr. Fallon's address was replete with interesting facts and figures, and it was an advantage to have such definite knowledge.

Stranded at St. Pierre.

Yesterday's late cable dispatches from St. Pierre, Martinique, advised that the S.S. "Bassan" had been stranded in the harbor of St. Pierre, Martinique, and will likely be a total loss. The "Bassan" was one of the U.S. Shipping Board's vessels, was picked up off St. Mary's, N.S., some months ago. In a disabled condition she was towed to St. Pierre, N.S., and was stranded in the harbor of St. Pierre, Martinique, where she was wrecked. Since that time she has been the victim of such a chapter of misadventure as rarely, if ever, any other ship has been subject to. The climax came when she entered the harbor of St. Pierre in a leaking condition, on her way from St. John's in tow of the S.S. "Bassan," bound for Norfolk Island. In the heavy northeaster experienced at St. Pierre yesterday she was wrecked, becoming a total loss, and putting the finishing touches to an interesting bit of marine history.

Ladies Form Charitable Society.

On Monday afternoon, says the Herald Standard of 4th inst., about one hundred of the ladies of the town met in the Public Building, to consider some means of securing funds to help our poor. Mrs. R. S. Munn was appointed President, Mrs. W. S. Munn, Treasurer, and Mrs. Strapp, Secretary. A committee of fifteen, one from each denomination, was appointed, and it was left to them to review the men's committee to find out their ideas and requirements. At a large tea was mooted, but this proposition was changed, and a general voluntary subscription will be taken. The ladies in charge will be the Town Hall to receive any donations, and it is hoped that a substantial amount will be realized to further the good work of helping those whose circumstances are not so good as ours and who wish.

Hearst Opposition.

The Hearst sheets "battered into" the opinion of the Protestant Episcopal Bishop of New York, with the result that Dr. William T. Manning, Rector of Trinity Church, the candidate they backed on the score that he was in England, was elected. It is interesting to see that it is worth something even in New York in these days to hear the opposition of Hearst—Herald Chronicle.

Express Passengers.

The following passengers are on the incoming express, having arrived at Port aux Basques at 3.50 p.m. yesterday on S. S. Kyle after a stormy passage across the Strait: Miss A. Brady, T. J. Walsh, T. H. Phillips, B. French, W. Lockyer, R. H. Anderson, H. White, Mrs. S. Lockyer, Miss H. McCabe, J. D. and Mrs. Campbell.

Shipping Notes.

The work of discharging the steamer Manola and Canadian Sapper was stayed yesterday owing to the gale. There has been no word from S. S. Kyle since Friday last, and it is not known if the ship has reached Liverpool as yet.

Worst Snow Storm for Years.

TRAFFIC SUSPENDED.

The worst snow storm for years has been raging since early yesterday morning, when with a strong N.E. breeze snow began to drift and piling up in sheltered places completely blocked all traffic. The streets in the city, particularly those running North and South are at some points blocked with banks 8 to 10 feet high, and it will cost the Council a large sum of money to again open the thoroughfares to traffic. Ronnie's Mill Road, Monkstown Road and Hayward Avenue have more snow than has been seen for years. The suburban roads are also blocked and in places the drift is piled 12 to 15 feet high. In the exposed portions of the roads the snow was swept away with the force of wind. The storm reached its height yesterday afternoon and continued to sweep with hurricane force up till late at night when the wind shifted around from N.W. Very few milkmen reached the city yesterday, and those during the afternoon. It has been equally as severe along the railway and no trains were moving. An effort was made to keep the street car service open along Water Street but this too had to be abandoned. Work along the waterfront was suspended the day and truckmen were obliged to give up traffic in the early afternoon, the snow falls being too heavy for horses to get through. All entertainments, including the opera "Prince of Pilsen" and the hockey match were postponed, and the attendance at the different clubs and moving picture shows was the smallest in many years.

G. W. V. A. Card Tournament.

The arrangements for a series of card tournaments to be held by the G.W.V.A. during the next three months are in the hands of a capable committee. It is hoped that all veterans as well as their friends will attend these games. Owing to the storm the first of the series of games, which was to have been held last night had to be postponed but will be run off to-night beginning at 8.45 o'clock.

Kyle Has Rough Crossing.

In her last trip across Cabot Strait, S.S. Kyle had what was probably her most trying experience whilst on that route. The steamer was three miles east of Scatarie in open ice, with rain and fog at 4.30 p.m. Sunday, and she soon ran into a blizzard which prevailed until she reached Port aux Basques. Sydney Harbor is still blocked with ice and it is probable that the Kyle will have to keep running to Louisbourg for at least another few trips.

What is a Gentleman?

What is a gentleman? asks a newspaper of its women readers. The women agree that a gentleman must be kind, considerate, honorable, truthful, respectable, intelligent and possess all other standard virtues. The true nature of a gentleman has been under discussion for some 2,400 years. In the fifth century B.C., the Chinese philosopher Confucius was asked by his disciple, Tzu-kung: "What is a gentleman?" And Confucius replied: "A gentleman puts words into deed, and sorts what he says to the deed. He is broad and fair. The vulgar are biased and petty." Also, said Confucius, a gentleman is a good sport, or, in the words of the philosopher: "A gentleman has no rivalries—except, perhaps, in archery; and then, throughout the struggle, he is still the gentleman." Furthermore, we are told by Confucius, a gentleman "has no likes and no dislikes below heaven. He follows right. Gentleman trust in justice; the vulgar trust in favor." Upon being questioned further by the persistent Tzu-kung, Confucius replied: "The vulgar considers what will pay. A gentleman wishes to be slow to speak and quick to act. He helps the needy; he does not swell riches." However, the Puritan fathers had an altogether different conception of a gentleman. Confucius held a gentleman to be one who trusts in justice and not in favor, but the Puritans granted "gentlemen" special privileges under the law. Thus a code of statutes enacted in Massachusetts in 1641 provided as follows: "No man shall be beaten with above 40 stripes, nor shall any true gentleman, nor any man equal to a gentleman be punished with whipping unless his crime be very shameful." It appears, however, that being a gentleman in Massachusetts was a condition of life, rather than of character. The Chinese definition is the better. And, by the way, how many gentlemen would still be considered such, if the Confucius specifications were strictly applied?—Ex.
