An Indispensable Favorite OR Wealth and Beauty at Stake!

CHAPTER XXXI.

"You needn't look altogether at the black side of things, mother," remonstrates Wilmot. "Uncle Silas will get about again, please goodness; and I hope things are not quite so bad with him as they seem just now. Uncle Silas has had heavy losses in the city, cousin," he explains, hurriedly to Yolande, who is looking from one to the other, breathlessly, wild-eyed, cold with apprehension of some unknown, fresh misfortune. "Things have been going wrong with him for some time; some speculation—"

"Which no one with an ounce of sense ought ever to have looked at!" interposes Mrs. Sarjent, sharply. "Well, we hadn't an ounce of sense—neither Uncle Silas nor I," her son says, patiently; "for we did look at it, and dabbled in it—worse luck!—only he'd a great deal more than I—and we both lost!"

"Yes; and you may thank your mother you didn't lose ten times what you did!" Mrs. Sarjent says, with stern satisfaction.

"Has uncle lost much?" Yolande asks, almost prepared to be angry with them for the terror they have made her feel during these few moments. It is only a money loss, after all—only an unlucky city speculation—some thousands of pounds perhaps. "Has uncle lost much?" she asks, sighing.

"All!" Mrs. Sarjent answers, emphatically. "No, Wilmot—there's no use in trying to gloss and smooth it over!"—as her son looks at her with a reproachful glance. "When a spec has to be faced, let it be faced, I say, and no shilly-shally about it! Your uncle's lost a frightful lot of money, Yolande, and that's the plain truth, and you'd best know it at once, and be sure of it. Nigh forty thousand—" pounds with one thing or another; and goodness knows what other liabilities he has! Every half-penny of the money he had from your Uncle Michael is gone," Mrs. Sarjent continues, bringing out with valiant precision one crushing piece of news after another, "and a good deal of your poor Aunt Keren's money gone with it. Them pensional speculations of his in the Pacific Salvage Company—Pacific Salvage, indeed! They shouldn't have a crooked sixpence of my money, as I always said from the first! Then he speculated in Welsh colliery shares and a Welsh railroad; and goodness knows what else he was led into by his grand acquaintances and grand connections—poor, foolish old man! He paid dear for all your grand, titled people, sure enough—all the earls and viscounts, the duchesses and the countesses he was acquainted with—he's paid dearly for the honor of their company! Ah, it was a bad day for you—one and all—you ever saw one of them or heard their names!"

"She stops to draw breath, fanning herself violently, hot and red and excited, but gratified at having "said her say."

And Yolande sits stunned, speechless, bewildered, scarcely comprehending her even yet. "But uncle is no worse off than before Uncle Michael left us all his money, is he, cousin?" Yolande asks, dazedly, shrinking involuntarily from Mrs. Sarjent, and meeting Wilmot's good-natured face.

"He's very deeply involved, I'm afraid, Yolande," Mr. Sarjent answers, reluctantly. "Things have been going wrong with him for a good while; and there was a heavy failure reported in the city this morning—a joint stock company—Australian and Polynesian Land Mortgage; and that was the finishing stroke—poor old uncle! He held a good deal of their stock. I stayed with him most of the day, and I thought he was taking it quietly, and I coaxed him to come out to Regent's Park to dine with mother and me. And then after dinner he went off in a sort of faint; and mother said we had better take him home; and just as we got him inside the door here, he dropped in the hall quite insensible—poor old man!"

"And is uncle quite ruined?" Yolande asked, faintly, in low, frightened tones. "It won't be bankrupt—your're not to think that," her cousin says, soothingly. "There will be twenty shillings in the pound for every one; but there will be very little left when uncle's clear again."

"Very little, Wilmot?" his mother questions in a high key. "There'll be none! There won't be one half-penny of your uncle's own money left, and there won't be above a thousand or two of Aunt Keren's!"

"Oh, yes, there will, I hope, mother!" urges Wilmot, uneasily. "Don't let us—" mother interrupts, determinedly—"and I generally know what I'm talking about—that when everything is paid off there won't be more than two or three thousand—well, say four—left; and it's a mercy Fair View is safe, or they wouldn't have a house to put their heads in!"

"Well, they have Fair View, mother, and a nice place it is, even with a small income," Wilmot says, trying hard to see light in the darkness in spite of his mother. "And of course there's Yolande's money all safe and sound—that's a blessing!"

"Oh, there's no fear of their coming to want, if that's what you mean!" Mrs. Sarjent says, gloomily.

"I should think not!" Wilmot says, gloomily. "I should think not!" Wilmot retorts, sharply, with a quick look at his young cousin's face, which is ghastly pale.

"No, no—of course not!" his mother says, angrily. "You needn't take me up so short, Wilmot! Of course we would never let our own kith and kin want! But what I was going to say was that Yolande will find she must go on another tack altogether if she is going to keep house for her poor uncle and aunt, and keep up Fair View respectably, on fifteen hundred a year. Her first duty is to them, of course!" Mrs. Sarjent asserts, with emphasis and a nod of her head at Yolande. "And you will have to make that fine lady mother-in-law of yours understand that, Yolande. She's not going to live on you any longer, I should hope! 'Ladylips' and 'lordships,'" Mrs. Sarjent says, scornfully, "won't pay butchers' and bakers' bills! The extravagance that's been going on in this house since she came into it was enough to bring down a judgment on you, what with dresses and parties and masked balls, and all manner of worldly follies!"

"Oh, come now, mother—that's enough!" her son interrupts, impatiently. "This is no time, as you said yourself, for fault-finding; and Lady Nora is a very nice woman, and a very sensible lady, I feel sure, and she will be willing to do whatever is best for all parties."

"She'll have to do it—that's one comfort!" Mrs. Sarjent retorts, grimly. "There will be no more money now to fling away on fineladies or too gentlemen—and a good thing, too!" At this point Yolande gets up quickly and goes toward the door. "Now, Yolande, you're not to take my words in bad part, or to think that because I'm plain and outspoken I don't feel for you!" Mrs. Sarjent exclaims, reproachfully.

But Yolande does not seem to heed her. She clutches her hands in her dress to help her to control herself until she can escape and get up to her own room, and lock the door, and stare dazedly at her own agonised face and burning eyes in her toilet mirror, and try to realize this new calamity that has fallen on her.

"For this means," she whispers, talking to the pale, forlorn face in the glass, "that Dallas and I are to be parted still—parted for an indefinite time—perhaps forever now! Unless I could make him rich—give him money and luxury—why should I ask him to give up his situation to come back to me? He doesn't care for me as men do who share poverty with a woman—I know that! I am proud, too. I won't ask Dallas to come back to me when I can give him nothing but myself. Oh, my darling, I have only seen you to lose you again," the girl cries miserably—"only had those few happy minutes with you to make me hungry and thirsty for more; but I won't ask you to come back to me now, Dallas. If you come back, it must be of your own free will and for love of me; and that you will never do!"

WOMEN FROM FORTY TO FIFTY

Will Be Interested in Mrs. Thompson's Recovery by Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Winnipeg, Man.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me good in every way. I was very weak and run-down and had certain troubles that women of my age are likely to have. I did not like to go to the doctor so I took the Vegetable Compound and am still taking it right along. I recommend it to my friends and every one I know who is not feeling well." Mrs. THOMPSON, 303 Lisias St., Winnipeg, Man.

When women who are between the ages of forty-five and fifty-five are beset with such annoying symptoms as nervousness, irritability, melancholia and heat flashes, which produce headache, dizziness, or a sense of suffocation, they should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It is especially adapted to help women through this crisis. It is prepared from roots and herbs and contains no harmful drugs or narcotics.

This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from roots and herbs, has for forty years proved its value in such cases. Women everywhere bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Women who suffer should write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Cobourg, Ontario, for a free copy of Lydia E. Pinkham's Private "Text-Book upon 'Ailments Peculiar to Women.'"

Beating the Crooks.

POLICE AS QUICK WITH THEIR GUNS AS THE THIEVES.

Within a week two alleged criminals have been killed by police bullets, in each instance while the men were escaping in automobiles. This is turning the tables, for up to recently it has been the policeman who was shot to death by desperadoes. The most recent case of shooting was by Constable Breton, of the Notre Dame de Grace Police Station. Out in that growing district the criminals have been very active of late and the police have been very busy watching them. There has been robberies of shops and citizens have been held up and beaten. A common offence has been the stealing of motor cars and the trees from the backs of cars left on the streets at night. The police have been watchful and active and Constable Breton, a new man, has been keenly on the alert at night. Consequently when he saw two men in an auto going up and down different streets early in the morning, he watched, and when he saw the men get from their auto and go behind a parked car and begin fiddling with the spare tire, he stepped up to question them, a courageous act for a policeman nowadays. The men jumped into the car and tried to run him down, and then he shot. In the circumstances that was the reasonable thing for him to do. He then reported to the station, not knowing that he had hit anybody. The sequel was in Lafontaine Park, where a man with an automobile with bloodstains in it notified the Lafontaine Park Station that there was a man lying in the park. The police went and found a dead man, and held the informer. The police system began to work and the incident of Notre Dame de Grace was connected with that of Lafontaine Park. After that the story came out. The policeman will not be blamed by the public, for revolvers carried at night are for use against criminals, who go about in automobiles now and carry arms and use them. The police have been the targets long enough, and now that things have changed in the right direction there should be a lessening of automobile handily in Montreal and its neighbourhood.—The Review, Montreal.

Fashion and Fads.

In all countries there are three millionaires for fall, one very straight and one like; another with a flare, and a third of a bouffant character. An evening gown of wide-shouldered rose net is flocked with metal and encrusted in rods of crystals. Rose-colored tulle makes the girdle. A coat dress of red velvet balances its left side closing with a side pocket on the right hip. A choker of monkey fur completes the costume. The very latest comb is a fashionable affair, crystal-colored, and encrusted with jewels.

RIVERA ASKED TO FORM MINISTRY.

MADRID, Sept. 14. King Alfonso this afternoon asked Captain General Primo Rivera, the leader of the military movement against Albuca's Cabinet, to form a Government. It was announced by Captain General Muniz Cobo, of Madrid, who is charged with the maintenance of public order, that a proclamation of martial law was necessary.

DIRECTORATE ACCEPTED.

BARCELONA, Sept. 14. Captain General Primo Rivera, whom King Alfonso has charged with the forming of a new Government, declared this afternoon that the King, with whom he conversed by telephone, has accepted the directorate proposed by the military chiefs.

MARTIAL LAW IN MADRID.

MADRID, Sept. 14. Martial law has been proclaimed, and the streets of Madrid are patrolled by military. Primo Rivera, leader of the revolution, who has been asked by the King to form a new ministry, has instructed the military judges to institute proceedings against Santiago Alba, former Foreign Minister, and has issued a proclamation inviting all Spaniards to declare themselves on the political morality of the former minister who is believed to be a refugee in Biarritz.

MEXICO'S EXCUSE.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 14. Mexico has declined the invitation from Latin American delegates to the League of Nations to become a member of the League. The fact that diplomatic relations between Mexico and Great Britain have not yet been resumed and that Great Britain has a delegate in the League Council is deemed to be the obstacle preventing Mexico from making application for admission to the League.

The History of Quinine.

One of the most valuable remedies yet discovered is quinine. The drug has been known since 1665, when it was called "Jesuita Powder." The bark has been used in this country since 1660, Charles II. being considerably relieved by it during a bout of fever.

Two French astronomers encountered the bark when travelling in Peru, and sent it home to Linnaeus, the renowned botanist, who named it Cinchona, in honor of the wife of the Spanish Viceroy of Peru, who, when ill with fever, derived great benefit from it. The drug being administered by a native who knew its medicinal value.

The attention of the Indian authorities being drawn to Cinchona, it was shipped there recklessly, and there were fears that the supply would be exhausted; definite steps, however, were not taken until 1859-60.

The quinine-bearing country was divided up amongst several searchers, and different species of the drug were shipped to Kew, but with great difficulty owing to the obstruction of the Peruvian Government.

GOVERNMENT BONDS and stocks of local enterprises bought, sold, or exchanged for securities yielding nine per cent. with safety. For prices and full particulars telephone 1875 or write to RICHARD C. POWER, Bishop Building, St. John's.

THE AMBASSADORS' NOTE.

PARIS, Sept. 14. The text of the note addressed by the Council of Ambassadors to Greece has been officially communicated to the League of Nations with a covering note expressing the opinion that the situation created by the assassination in Greece of General Tellini and other members of the Italian Commission may be considered to have been regulated in a satisfactory manner. The text as now made public gives the five conditions which Greece must fulfil. The fifth condition says the Inter-Allied Commission investigation into the assassination will commence its work on Sept. 27th at Janina, and that five days later it will telegraph its first observations. If the culprits are not discovered by that time the Commissioners will report the conditions under which they are working, and the Ambassadors' Council will decide from this report whether the fifth condition of its note to Greece that exemplary punishment of the guilty parties should be undertaken with all possible speed, has been fulfilled.

NO TRAGIC CONSEQUENCES ANTICIPATED.

PARIS, Sept. 14. French official opinion is that a solution of the Spanish crisis will probably be arranged in Madrid without tragic consequences. The attitude of the French Government is one of absolute detachment, except that events are being followed with friendly interest and hopes for Spain's welfare.

Miss Boissineau Tells How Cuticura Healed Pimples.

"About three years ago I was bothered with pimples on my face. The pimples were hard and small and feasted, and my face was disfigured for a while. They sometimes caused me to lie awake hours at a time as the irritation was so great.

"I tried different remedies but without any relief. I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment and after the first application I could see an improvement. I continued using them and was completely healed after using three boxes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment." (Signed) Miss Rose Boissineau, 12 Bellevue Ave., Seattle, Wash., Oct.

Just Folks.
By EDGAR A. GUEST.

TEARING DOWN AND BUILDING UP There is ever the tearing down And the building up again; There is nothing in city or town Man fashions long to remain. Better's a constant cry, Bigger's a constant call, And even beneath the sky We fing up our towers to fall.

The sound of the blast by day Shall deafen our puny speech, As the old to the new gives way, And higher we strive to reach. What was but a year ago A glorious goal attained, We are turning from now to know The goal that shall soon be gained. Shall ever we sit and see The last of our building done? Shall ever the morning be When there's no new dream begun? Not while men seek renown, And a drop of life in the cup, Shall we pause in our tearing down Or halt in our building up.

For better's our constant cry And bigger's our constant call. Both buildings and builders die, And changes come to us all. And the old shall give way to the new, And the hammers of men shall ring, So long as the skies are blue, And the flowers bloom in the spring. Milk-eggs, green vegetables, herrings, and oatmeal together form a diet which should produce perfect teeth. The distillation of ships at Constantinople for the possible evacuation of the British colony cost us $59,000. Red-haired boys and wavy-haired girls are usually popular at school; they are optimistic and high-spirited. The recent hot weather greatly increased the supply of honey; hives which were empty filled up in about a fortnight.

Harbor Grace Notes.

Miss Annie Garland, after spending a two week's vacation here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Garland, left town again last week for the city.

The officers at the E. A. Citadel here held a sociable on Tuesday night, which was very well patronized. Teas, syrups, ice cream and candy were all on sale, and something in the neighbourhood of $40.00 was realized as the proceeds of the evening, and a very enjoyable time was spent by all who attended the affair.

Miss Winnie Noel, who is on the office staff at the Royal Stores, Grand Falls, has been spending her vacation with her parents on the South Side, and relatives and friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. John S. Taylor, accompanied by their two children, Dorothy and John, returned by Tuesday's express en route to Pittsburg, P.A., after spending the summer here in the old home town. We trust that their visit has been all that could be desired, and to the land of Uncle Sam, the good wishes of their many friends follow them.

Mr. Bert Davis, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Davis, was also a passenger by Tuesday's express, for Boston, Mass., where he will take a position. Bert shall be missed, and especially so in tennis circles, being a good player, and a member of the Aero Tennis Club. It is our sincere wish that he will have the best of luck.

Schooner "Isabelle Moore," Capt. Walsh, was docked during last week. The S.S. "Cabot" was also docked within the last few days.

S.S. "Sargona" on her route from Labrador called here this afternoon shortly after dinner hour, and left again after a short stay.

The wedding of Mr. Frederick Martin and Miss Sibella Hawkins, both of this town, was quietly solemnized at St. Thomas's Church, St. John's, at 3 p.m. on Wednesday of last week. The newly wedded pair left the same evening for Brigus where they spent a few days, and returned to town by Saturday night's train. Both are well known here, the groom being for many years the agent for Messrs. G. Browning & Son, and other firms, while the bride is a popular and energetic member of Christ Church. We join with their many friends in wishing them many years of happiness.

Mrs. Beech, of Boston, Mass., arrived recently, and will spend some time with relatives here.

Rev. W. R. J. and Mrs. Higgett, of the "Rectory," are spending a two week's holiday at Whitbourne, which we trust will prove most enjoyable and beneficial.

Lots of raspberries have been on sale in town during the week, the price asked being $1.50, which met with ready purchasers.

Yesterday afternoon a motor car accident occurred on Carboner Road, which had like to be a very serious one indeed. From what we can gather the driver, Mr. H. Howell, accompanied by his wife and child, were driving in their Ford car to Harbor Grace. The car had gone outside Carboner and was proceeding down Carboner Road, near about the "Saddle," when the driver, from some cause or other, is supposed to have lost control, which resulted in the car being ditched, and turned over by the roadside. Mr. Allan Cameron, of Carboner, happened to pass along at the time, and rendered valuable assistance. Soon a couple of cars from Mr. Grace were at the scene of the accident and the injured ones were conveyed to Carboner. Two of the occupants received bruises, Mrs. Howell having been pinned under the car. We are glad to know that the injuries received by Mrs. Howell are not so serious as at first feared.

The stork arrived to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stonestone Parsons, Bear's Cove, on Sunday morning last, and left a twin (boy and girl). Congratulations.

Dr. W. S. Goodwin spent some time at Bay Roberts during the week on a professional visit.—COR. Hr. Grace, Sept. 15, 1923.

Rain-Making Insects.

Seventy years ago David Livingstone discovered a "rain-tree," which showered a quart of liquid from its leaves in about an hour. He did not know the cause until it was discovered that the so-called rain-trees of the tropical regions belonged to many families, and that the cause was not of vegetable origin at all, but the work of an insect.

Most gardeners, especially those who grow carnations, are familiar with a little green insect called a frog-hopper or cuckoo-spit. It is, in fact, a kind of aphid which has developed a remarkable protective adaption in the form of the "spit."

This is the sap of the young plant, worked up by the insect, which sucks it up so greedily that surplus oozes through its delicate skin. This fluid, overflowing, is lashed into froth by the creature's tail. The whipped-up liquid finally surrounds the creature's body and makes a sort of veil.

The same thing occurs in the case of the rain-trees. The tropical insects are also of the aphid order, but larger and more numerous, so their attack on the tree causes the strange and, at times, beneficial "rain."

Everybody Should Write for This Free Sample of Genuine Beaver Wall Board

The Red Beaver Border on Wall Board means:

1. The only wall board made from virgin SPRUCE fibre through and through—long, tough, sinewy, strong.
2. Positive insulation against heat and cold and sound, because the use of long virgin spruce fibres gives us millions of microscopic "dead" air cells in Beaver Wall Board.
3. 25 layer construction. Several layers give great strength and stiffness. Beaver Wall Board is 25 layer.
4. The only wall board kiln-dried and seasoned before leaving the mill.
5. Sealed against moisture by our patented sealite process.
6. A wall board specially calculated and primed to produce our Art Finish Surface. No staining is necessary.

GENUINE Beaver Wall Board with the Red Beaver Border is one of the most important manufactured building materials in the world. Over two billion feet are in satisfactory use. Every day it is saving money and time and labor in building and altering. It is adding new value and new comfort to homes and stores and factories. Write for your sample of this wonderfully useful manufactured lumber. Note how clean and sturdy it is—how easy to saw and nail. Note the beautiful painted finish.

Remember, Beaver Wall Board comes in big, flawless panels, with over a hundred uses. It has exclusive advantages to be found only in the genuine. You can be sure of these advantages only if you see the Red Beaver Border on the back edge of each panel.

The best lumber and building material dealers in all localities sell genuine Beaver Wall Board or can easily get it for you. Your carpenter can figure costs and apply it.

Discipline for Doctors.

PROFESSIONAL MEN SOMETIMES PAY HEAVY PENALTIES FOR CRIMES THE LAW DOES NOT RECOGNIZE.

The "hammering" of a Stock Exchange firm some time ago draws attention to the methods by which members of the various professions are punished by their fellows for offences against the code of their calling.

"Hammering" has been for many years the traditional method of dealing with members of the Stock Exchange who have been unable to meet their commitments. The practice was suspended during hostilities, and when the "hammer" sounded, a month or two ago, for the first time since the beginning of the war, many of the younger members heard it for the first time.

Then, the doctor who breaks the rules framed by the General Medical Council may be punished by that authoritative body. His case is "tried" in a fashion closely akin to that of a High Court trial. If he is found guilty his name may be struck off the medical register, which means both professional and social ruin.

When the Shepherd Strays. When a solicitor is proved guilty of professional misconduct he is "struck off the rolls," a procedure which means that he is no longer qualified to practise his calling. His case is investigated by a committee formed of members of the Incorporated Law Society, who embody the findings in a report which is sent to the High Court for final judgment.

Clergymen charged with misdemeanour are tried before what is known as a Consistory Court, a tribunal which comprises a chancellor—usually a barrister well read in ecclesiastical law—and five assessors, who hear the case much in the same manner as a magisterial bench. The outlook for the person who is found guilty by such a court is unpleasantly forbidding.

A ship's captain, again, may lose in one day, by incompetence or neglect, a position which it has taken years to attain. A Board of trade investigation committee considers his case, and if the decision is against him it involves more often than not the suspension of his certificate. Similarly, pilots guilty of infringing the regulations of Trinity House may have their licenses cancelled.

A Record Harvest.

In the old days seventy fold was reckoned to be the outside limit which could be expected by the wheat grower. That is seventy grains from each one planted.

But at South Hornchurch, in Essex, an interesting experiment has shown the possibility of raising not seventy grains, but seventy ears from one grain of wheat.

The seed was sown in March in a pit a yard wide and eighteen inches deep. As soon as sprouts appeared they were lightly covered with earth, and from then all through the summer the sprouting grain was covered over, and over again until the pit was full and its surface covered with a grass of wheat.

The shoots remained quiescent during the winter, but in spring grew rapidly, and eventually, in the following autumn, eighty-five stalks were cut of which no fewer than seventy had ripened ears.

These seventy ears weighed over a quarter of a pound and averaged forty-four grains to the ear. Surely an amazing harvest from one seed.

Why Accept French Leadership.

There seems to be rather a powerful movement in Great Britain based on emotional antipathy to the Germans, rather than reason and foresight, to force the British Government to accept French leadership in the present European crisis. When and on what occasion has French policy been a safe guide for other nations? Certainly it did not prove so in the Great War.

The refusal of the French General Staff to accept the warnings repeatedly given by the intelligence officers of British from 1911 onward, its rejection of British strategic proposals, before and for three years after the Battle of the Marne, prolonged the war long beyond its natural duration and cost countless lives. Not until British practically assumed control of affairs did the tide turn toward victory for the Allies. It is true that in the final stages the Allied troops were commanded by a French generalissimo, but it is now known that Marshal Foch was a British rather than a French apoplexy. Had it not been for British insistence Foch would never have been given an opportunity to display his military genius, and in France to-day Britain has many enemies who are still sore over the dramatic manner in which she impressed her military views on that country. They are willing to honor Foch, because he was victorious, but they have not forgiven Britain for having discovered his genius and forced his appointment on them. There was a good deal of criticism of Lord Haig and other British officers because of their reluctance to accede to the idea of a general command. This reluctance is easily understood since the infirmity of French strategy and the French political methods was revealed in such books as "The Yamp of Power," and Winston Churchill's "World Crisis."

Admitting that French leadership was defective in war, despite the noble heroism of French troops, why should such leadership be deemed wise and potent in the present complicated state of European affairs?

King George Adds to Royal Prestige.

Lord Birkenhead Compares Constitutions for Nations.

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 30. (A.P.)—Speaking before the convention of the American Bar Association, Lord Birkenhead, former Lord Chancellor of Great Britain, after comparing the constitutions of Great Britain and the United States said that the prestige of the monarchy in Great Britain had increased under King George.

Explaining the fundamental differences between the constitutions of the two countries, Lord Birkenhead declared:

"Your constitution is expressed and defined in a document which can be pronounced upon by the Supreme Court; your judges are masters of your executive. Practically no law in Great Britain is constitutional in that sense. Any law in Great Britain can be altered by any Parliament and no court may challenge the constitutional force of any Act of Parliament."

Reviewing the rise of the Socialist party in Great Britain, commenting on the possibility that it might ultimately control the Government, he declared:

"I am not on the whole, of the opinion that any early success awaits the Socialist party; they are divided against themselves."

"The position and prestige of the British monarchy, during the 50 years, has not declined," he continued. "In the prudent and conscientious hands of King George, the prestige and influence of the monarchy have rather waxed than waned."

"King George, at the most difficult period of all, has accepted in his own person a kingly responsibility which has done as much to strengthen the British monarchy as any one of his predecessors since the constitution of England became a reality and not a theory."

Fire Without Smoke.

REPORTED DISCOVERY OF A NEW FUEL.

It would appear as if the smoke problem were at last in a fair way of being solved. After 15 years' research Professor S. Roy Hillingworth, head of the chemistry department of the South Wales and Monmouthshire School of Mines, Treafret, has succeeded in producing from small coal a smokeless fuel of higher heat value than coal, with little or no ash. The fuel has been produced by a low temperature carbonisation process, and is now claimed to be a practical commercial proposition. During the last ten months Dr. Hillingworth has been perfecting his discovery at what has been termed locally the "mystery house," and his efforts have culminated in a perfect smokeless fuel. Dr. Hillingworth, in an interview, stated that following his academic research he was convinced that by means of low temperature carbonisation it was possible to produce all kinds of smokeless fuel suitable for domestic and industrial purposes, more useful for heating than ordinary household coal, and most certainly cleaner. Experiments had been made by him with all kinds of coal, ranging from coal possessing 45 per cent. volatile (spontaneous evaporation) qualities to anthracite with 6 per cent. Generally household coal possesses from 30 to 40 per cent. volatility, and this volatile matter was wasted when burnt in the grate. Practically 80 per cent. of ordinary coal goes up the chimney in the form of smoke. By means of subjecting small coal to certain processes all the volatile matter is extracted. "The fuel turned out from this experimental station," he says, "has been Tried, Under Test Conditions under a boiler, against the best quality Welsh steam coal, and after 13 hours' test the fuel showed itself to be equal to the coal for steam-raising purposes. It has also been used in cupola work in smelting metal, and proved satisfactory. We have experimented with over 50 kinds of coal, and in every case the fuel has satisfactorily passed the test. The universal use of smokeless fuel would give industrial areas like Lancashire and Yorkshire and cities like London, Manchester and Sheffield a freedom from smoke, grime and dirt which would revolutionise the present conditions. The advantages of the new fuel briefly are:—

More suitable for domestic purposes.

Little or no ash.

Household grime associated with coal fires almost eliminated.

The chimney-sweep rendered superfluous.

No small coal to be wasted, as fuel would be turned out in convenient size for domestic use.

No danger of spontaneous combustion. The new fuel, it is claimed, will use to its fullest extent small coal, which is at present wasted in big quantities.

Fighting Fires by Aeroplane Feasible.

Windsor Man's Suggestion to Save Canada's Forests Carried Out in France.

Early in the present year the suggestion was made to the Ontario and Dominion forestry branches by P. MacIure Sclanders, commissioner of the Border Chamber of Commerce, that forest fires might be subdued by the use of aeroplanes from which bombs containing some powerful chemical could be dropped. The replies he received indicated that the suggestion was impracticable. The reason for this seemed to be that there was no known chemical substance which would do effective work.

Mr. Sclanders' suggestion makes doubly important the following report from France, which deals with the fighting of forest fires from aeroplanes. The report says:

"Eugene Turpin, the universally known inventor of melinit, has supplied the French Government with a chemical formula to fight forest fires by aeroplanes."

Mr. Turpin suggested that an aviator be supplied with liquid carbonic acid, liquid sulphuric acid, or liquid ammonia in tubes, tied with bombs to shatter them and spread the contents over a wide area. He also suggested that packets of sulphur extinguisher or blasting powder might be used to advantage."

Ostriches in the Zoo obtain all the thirst-quenching material they want from a diet of clover, chaff, lettuce, maize, cabbage, bones, and stones; they are not supplied with drinking water.

Holy Cross School Festival.

September 14th is a red-letter day in the Calendar of Holy Cross Schools. Yesterday the anniversary was celebrated in a manner worthy of the occasion. Most of the present and quite a number of the past pupils gathered at the early morning sacrifice at St. Patrick's Church. Having duly honored the Religious Aspect of the Festival, a holiday was declared and a large number of Senior boys assembled in the school whence they motored to the spacious playgrounds of Mt. Cashel where the day was spent in many games and athletic feats. The boys of Mt. Cashel graced the occasion by discoursing a selection of the classic music for which their band is deservedly famous. Needless to say the courtesy of the Mt. Cashel Community was highly appreciated. During the day the presence of some of the ex-pupils made the re-union all the more memorable. At 6 p.m. return was made to the city, and there was unanimity of feeling that the 1923 Festival of the Old School was the best yet.

Our Dumb Animals.

REPORT OF THE CHIEF AGENT FOR WEEK ENDING SEPT. 14th, 1923.

Attended to the landing of two car-loads of cattle at the Railway Station, on Sunday morning. Received word of some cattle which were shipped on the Glencoe. They were suffering very much as they were knocked about on the deck. I interviewed Mr. Taylor, the Freight Agent, who said he would give this his best attention in future, but they have no other way in carrying cattle on the bay boats. I attended three sales of cattle, about 200 head, besides a number of sheep and pigs. Also the landing of 40 head of cattle from the schooner Rivier, from Lunenburg; these are the cattle which were saved from the Sable I. some weeks ago. The cattle were knocked about quite a bit but the Captain and crew of the schooner deserve great praise for the way they looked after those animals. I examined a horse for a city gentleman; the horse is getting very old and is apparently past his labor, he intends having it humanely put to death. I spoke to several drivers about fast driving. I also received a report of a dog being run over on Monkstown Road. I found the man who had done this named Mahoney. He said he did not think he had hurt it had enough to kill it. One hour after the accident I found the dog; it was dead. I warned the driver and told him what the Act said about it, and he promised to do better in future. All drivers are requested to report any accident which may happen, to the nearest policeman or phone 653. Another report from a lady on Wat-erford Bridge Road, of a very lame cow in a field. I also attended to this. I ordered the owners of three lame horses to give the animals a rest, and they did so. Quite a number of minor cases have been attended.

Talented Mary Carr

COMING IN "SILVER WINGS"

When William Fox presents a photo-play as a "special" to an American audience, it is always an event in the film world. When it is a picture in which he has surpassed himself, as in his latest, double importance attaches to the event. In Mr. Fox's newest and most pretentious film, "Silver Wings," featuring "the most famous mother in the world," Mary Carr, which opens at the Majestic Theatre Monday, will without doubt draw record attendances.

So much stir has been made in all the large centers where "Silver Wings" has already appeared that opinion is divided whether it is due to the emotional quality of the famous drama upon which it is based, to the very remarkable characterizations of the principal roles, or to the magnificence with which the story is presented.

Newspaper Printed on Calico.

CURIOSITIES OF THE WORLD'S PRESS.

The biggest newspaper ever published was the "Illuminated Quadruple Constellation," issued in New York in 1839. The paper measured eight and one-half feet in height and six feet in width, and consisted of eight pages, each containing thirteen columns.

A ream of the strong paper on which it was printed weighed 30wt. Forty people were occupied continually for eight weeks in order to bring out this oddity, which its designers proposed should be issued once every century.

In the Caucasus before the war a postcard newspaper was issued, the print of which was so small that a magnifying glass had to be used to master its contents; while in 1831 appeared the first number of "Berthold's Political Handkerchief," a newspaper printed on calico to evade the stamp duty. This newshunt measured 18in. by 11in., and sold for fourpence.

The Editor's Advice.
 A similar sheet was started in Grenock in 1849. It was known as the "Grenock News Clout," and the editor advised its readers to use it as a handkerchief when read!

Some years before the war, the "Journal des Jambes" appeared in Paris. Its prospectus declared that it filled a "long-felt want," and that it would be "a friend and counsellor to all who wish to keep their legs fit, and to all who, weary, impotent, or worn out, wrongly believe that they have lost the use of theirs beyond recovery."

It went on to say: "This journal will deal with all the medical, surgical, choreographic, sporting, or other questions relating to the human leg of either sex."

The Housing Problem

CONDITIONS WHICH EXIST TO-DAY.

"You cannot rear an Imperial race in a slum."—Lord Rosebery.

The above remark was made with reference to the housing conditions in England, where during the past eighty years or more the problem has been seriously considered, and various experiments have been made to effect a solution.

Both in St. John's and in the Island generally the conditions under which the poorer people live are lamentable. In many houses the sanitary arrangements are antiquated or absent altogether, and the housing accommodation is so limited, that overcrowding, particularly during the last few years, has increased to such an extent as to become a menace. Houses that were intended originally for a single family are occupied by two, three, or even four, which means that there is no privacy as between families or the different sexes and the conveniences such as they are, are inadequate. Whole families eat and sleep in the same room in which they live, and the atmosphere is such as to make it impossible for a clergyman or a doctor to prolong his visit for more than a few minutes. Ventilation, for the simple reason that, during the cold weather at any rate, warmth is a matter of dollars, is not encouraged, and even during the warm weather it is often found that not a single window can be opened.

In the outports the evil of living under such conditions is mitigated to some extent by the open spaces in which the houses are built, and by the outdoor life which the people lead. But the tale as told in the reports which show the high death rate among adults from tuberculosis, and among children from infantile complaints which under normal conditions would not prove fatal, is sufficiently conclusive of the irreparable harm that is being done.

In the city matters are even worse, and it is not to be wondered at that such "homes" are the breeding grounds of diseases worse than death. Sunlight and fresh air seldom enter these hovels. They are built not only without intervening spaces, but many of them adjoin others at the rear as well, or if there is a space, it is a receptacle for garbage and rubbish of all kinds. Often in front of the door is a hopper which pollutes the surrounding atmosphere, or the cobble stone drain, putrid with the filth that lodges in the spaces round the stones. The buildings themselves, particularly those which escaped the fire of '92, are tumble down rat traps that no up-to-date city would tolerate, and that no landlord should be allowed to exploit to add to the comforts of his own mansion. The children's playground is the street and their "toys" are more deadly than the stink bombs of the Huns.

Picture these crowded homes with little or no warmth in winter, rooms into which the light of the sun seldom enters, and in which there is little or no ventilation! What kind of physical and mental development can be expected in such an environment?

To a great extent the conditions are due to circumstances over which the occupants have little or no control. Herding has followed the high cost of living, which was not compensated for by a proportionate increase in wages. The cessation of building operations, and the consequent mounting of rents until in many cases they reached a figure that was most exorbitant, and the influx of people from the outports are the chief factors that have brought about the present state of affairs. What applies to the poorest class applies also in a lesser degree to those who possess moderate means.

The situation is critical, and the effects are serious. The health of the people is being undermined, the difficulties of coping with an outbreak of an infectious disease are insuperable, and a fruitful soil is being prepared for the seeds of immorality and other crimes. Houses are so difficult to obtain and the rents of those available are so high, that many young people who have married have been compelled to crowd in with other families, and others have had to postpone the event indefinitely.

The health, happiness, and moral development of a people is a matter of national concern. In a later article dealing with the same subject, we shall refer to the manner in which other countries have dealt with the problem with satisfactory results.

The Spanish Situation.

The revolutionary movement in Spain was the cause of considerable speculation and anxiety in the city yesterday. Coming at a time when our cargoes of fish are either on the way or about to be shipped, it was feared that in the event of a widespread revolt the market would be seriously disorganized. The news to-day indicates that the outbreak, although general, does not seem likely to interfere with affairs to any extent, and that as King Alfonso of Spain has accepted the ministry proposed by the leader of the movement, no more serious consequences will result than a change of Government.

If, as the meagre reports indicate, the former administration was responsible for irregularities and supineness in office, the change will be beneficial to the country and may have a favourable effect upon our trade.

The Godner Centenary.

SAMUEL GODNER, A Pioneer in Education in Nfld.

To-morrow at St. Thomas's Church a Thanksgiving Offering will be devoted to the work of the Colonial and Continental Church Society which will be taken up. This Society, of which we hear but little, and the founder, Samuel Godner, who is seldom referred to, accomplished a great work in Newfoundland which later spread to other countries. The results of Godner's work in the cause of education are today a living testimony of his zeal in well doing.

In 1821 Samuel Godner, a Newfoundland merchant, was returning to Devonshire for the winter when the vessel ran into a violent storm. It was only after all hope of coming through safely had been abandoned, that the weather improved, and wrecked as the ship was, those on board were able to make port. To mark his thankfulness, Godner determined to devote himself to the task of securing for the people in Newfoundland better educational facilities. As a result of his efforts, the Colonial and Continental School Society was formed in June, 1823. It was not long before several schools were established in St. John's. Teachers were secured and soon the work was extended to various outports. The schools were open to all regardless of creeds—a condition of affairs in striking contrast to the system which obtains to-day. The movement spread to the neighbouring continent, and in course of time the activities of the society became world wide. With the widened sphere of activities of the Society its responsibilities and expenses have also increased. It was therefore decided to mark the Centenary by seeking financial assistance in the form of voluntary contributions in those countries which benefited by its earlier activities and are still receiving aid.

The health, happiness, and moral development of a people is a matter of national concern. In a later article dealing with the same subject, we shall refer to the manner in which other countries have dealt with the problem with satisfactory results.

Prime Minister Warren Interviewed.

As the Prime Minister, Hon. W. R. Warren, sails to-day for England to attend some matters which may occupy his attention for a considerable time, it is not likely that the enquiry into the alleged scandals which caused the downfall of the Squires administration will begin much before the latter end of October. Interviewed by the Telegram to-day the Prime Minister stated that the terms of reference had been settled by the Government and until these were in the hands of Mr. Walker, who is to conduct the enquiry, he was not in a position to state what its scope would be. Pressed for something definite, he said the enquiry will embrace all the affairs that led to the disruption of the past administration, and he expected it to begin the middle of October; this of course was subject to the engagements of Mr. Walker, who is one of the leading barristers in England, and therefore a very busy man. Mr. Walker alone, he said, would conduct the enquiry. In addition to attending the Conference of Premiers, which will last about a month, Hon. Mr. Warren has the question of the Labrador Boundary to look after. The cases in this matter must be exchanged by Dec. 31st, with a view to having it tried before the Privy Council in June, 1924. The Telegram learned from Hon. Mr. Warren that a project for the establishment of an other pulp and paper industry on a scale almost as gigantic as the Humber deal is now well underway. The parties interested, however, he said, are not seeking a government guarantee or similar concessions.

UNKNOWN MAN KILLED BY TRAIN AT OXFORD JUNCTION, N.S. OXFORD JUNCT., N.S., Sept. 15. Just as the Maritime Express for Montreal was pulling away from the station this evening an unknown man dashed for the front end of the baggage car, slipped beneath the wheels and was cut to pieces. Neither money nor railway tickets were found on the body and the only thing by which identification might be effected was a black cord tied about the man's neck and fastened to a button on his coat. The dead man had been wearing a dark suit of good quality and was apparently about thirty-five. He had carried a lunch wrapped up in a paper parcel. The body is being photographed for identification purposes.

MATE OF LUCILLE ARRESTED ON THE CHARGE OF DISPENSING OF CARGO OF ALCOHOL. DIGBY, N.S., Sept. 15. James M. Power, mate of the schooner Lucille which arrived at Meteghan a week ago, and reported a piratical attack of the Massachusetts coast in which twelve thousand gallons of alcohol were said to have been taken off the Lucille boat at the points of guns. In the hands of fifteen men Power was arrested to-day on the information laid by the owners of the schooner and her skipper Capt. Leblanc of Wedgeport. The story given out when the schooner reached Meteghan last Sunday morning was that the piratical attack occurred while the skipper was ashore in Boston, and that immediately after the outlaws departed, mate Power set sail for home not waiting for his captain. It is also said that another story was told to the effect that the cargo was jettisoned during a heavy storm. Captain Leblanc stated in his information that the mate sailed for home leaving him in Boston to which port he had gone on business, and it is charged that mate Power disposed of the cargo to agents who came out from Massachusetts and kept the proceeds for himself. The mate is in jail and will be given preliminary hearing Tuesday next, the crew being held aboard the ship as material witnesses.

REPORT OF TENSION BETWEEN JUGOSLAVIA AND ITALY UNFOUNDED. BELGRADE, Sept. 15. All reports circulated in the past few days alleged that tension existed in the relations between Jugoslavia and Italy because of the interruption of the Fiume Conference Committee are unfounded, says a statement issued by Foreign Office. It adds that the desire of both countries for agreement is undiminished. The time limit set by Italy for the determination of Fiume's status expires to-day, although there has been intimations that Rome would extend it so as to permit direct negotiations with Jogo Slavia. Annexation of Fiume it is reported in Paris recently, would be accompanied by the withdrawal of the Italian troops from Portofarros the adjoining harbor and by renunciation by the Italians of any claim to Susak.

THE PRINCE IN CHAPLEAU, ONT.

A special train carrying Lord Renfrew and party westward arrived at Chapleau yesterday afternoon where some two hundred people gathered out to catch a glimpse of the distinguished visitor. Through a ten minutes stay the Prince remained in the train reading and smoking a Briar pipe. When the train began to move out the crowd cheered which the prince acknowledged from rear platform.

Contract for Road Awarded.

At a meeting of the members of the Board of Works yesterday evening the contract for improving the Kenmount Road was awarded to Messrs. Herbert Young, W. Croft and A. W. Smith. Some 28 tenders were received and it is said that the prices ranged from four to thirty thousand dollars. Four and a half miles of road have to be done and the first mile which is in fair condition has only to be ditched, cleaned and slightly widened. The second mile requires some ballasting as well as ditching and top dressing. For the remaining two and half miles the specifications call for clearing of trees and a widening of the road from the present 16 foot path to a uniform width of 15 feet.

TRAIN DUE.

The incoming express with the Kyle's mails and passengers is not expected to arrive before 6 p.m.

Disorderly Girls Fined.

Two young girls charged with disorderly conduct were sentenced to a term of 14 days imprisonment with the option of paying a fine of $5 each by Judge McCarthy in the Juvenile Court to-day. Neither of the girls appeared to be more than 14 years old and in fact one is attending school. They were placed under arrest on Water Street last night by two constables, to whom they gave considerable trouble. According to the testimony of the officers the girls were in company with Portuguese sailors, and they were obliged to turn them off an East End watered premises. Both girls said they preferred to go to jail rather than pay a fine.

Weather in Halifax.

Will not interfere with sports. A message to the Telegram from Halifax states that the weather is fine and cool. The sports will therefore take place this afternoon as scheduled.

Halifax Results

Will be eagerly awaited. News of our athletes competing in Halifax to-day will be awaited with interest by all the local sports. The first message likely to be bulletined at the Angle, will be the 1 mile walking match, in which Grant Burnell, our pride and hope will be a strong contender. Burnell, in a message to his father, states that he expects to cover the course in 7 minutes and 45 seconds, which is some twenty seconds faster than his local record. News of the walking match should reach here about 5 p.m. while the outcome of the 5 mile race can hardly be expected before 7 p.m. The programme of events commences at the Wanderers track at 1 p.m. which is about 2 o'clock, local time.

Exhibit of Trophies.

A splendid collection of cups and medals won by the athletes of St. Bon's College is now on exhibition in Mr. Geo. F. Kearney's window, Water Street. Included in the prominent display will be found a set of gold medals, the gift of Mr. John McGrath, an ex-pupil, now of New York. The medals are the best obtainable and were won by the College hockeyists, who lifted the Inter-Collegiate Championship last winter.

DEMPSEY WINS.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14. Jack Dempsey retained his world's heavyweight championship crown tonight before ninety thousand raving fans at the Polo Grounds, when he knocked out Luis Angel Firpo, of Argentina, in the second round of the scheduled fifteen round bout. Dempsey weighed 192½ pounds and Firpo weighed 192½ pounds and the two fighters received a deafening ovation when introduced. John Gallagher, of New York, was referee, and brought the men to the center of the ring at 10:04. Firpo landed a left jab on Dempsey's nose in the first round of the fight. Dempsey then floored Firpo with a left to the chin and he got a count of one. When he got up Dempsey knocked him down again, but not for the count. Firpo got up and Dempsey knocked him down again, and when he got up chased him to his corner and knocked him down again. When Firpo got up after the knock he was bleeding from the mouth and the referee called the fight over. Firpo pounded Dempsey of the jaw with sledge hammer rights when the round ended and both men went to their corners bleeding. Firpo staggered into the ring for the second round and Dempsey caught him with a right hand left to the chin that sent him to the floor. Firpo was bleeding from his mouth and nose. He remained on the floor for a count of ten and the fight was over. Fifty-five seconds from the start of the second round.

THE MANASSA MAN MAULER. Jack Dempsey, who successfully defended his world's heavyweight title against Luis Firpo in that short but sweet bout at the Polo Grounds last night, won the championship from Jose Willard, giant Kaban, in one of the most one-sided, yet spectacular battles in heavyweight history. The match was decided at Toledo, Ohio, on July 4th, 1919, and Dempsey was credited with a knockout in three rounds, although Willard did not admit defeat until his seconds tossed in a towel just at the start of the 4th round. Willard was an overwhelming favorite, but he was beaten into a helpless figure before the end of the first round, in which he was floored seven times. In the second Dempsey battered him around the ring horribly. Willard was a chopping block for Dempsey in the third and the end of it found him blinded and dazed, and barely able to keep his feet. His seconds tossed their towels into the ring just a few seconds after the beginning of the fourth in token of defeat.

When Tommy Gibbons, two months ago, stood against him the whole 15 rounds at Shelby, the wise ones figured that Dempsey was slipping. Tex Rickard, the famous ring promoter, taking advantage of the meteoric rise of Firpo in the cauliflower world, pitted him against Dempsey, after Firpo, on July 4th, had knocked out Willard, now an old man of 43. Clever press agents based on the fact that "Bazum was right when he said 'one was born every minute,'" boosted the present fight, though after Firpo's exhibition with Willard, the experienced sport writers agreed that the big Argentine was altogether too green and inexperienced to even have a chance against Dempsey. The fight was held in the huge Polo Grounds, where baseball is played. The ring was in the center of the arena and brilliantly lighted with the most powerful arc lights.

ball is played. The ring was in the center of the arena and brilliantly lighted with the most powerful arc lights. Dempsey's next fight will be against either Harry Wills, the negro, who has been trying to have a fight arranged for the past five years, or Tom Gibbons. Those in the know state the champion is really scared of a combat with the negro and will not fight him unless forced to do so by the Boxing Commission.

THE WILD BULL OF THE PAMPAS.

Luis Angel Firpo, ex-stevadore, the son of an Italian emigrant to the Argentine—who succumbed last night in New York to the terrible rights and lefts of Jack Dempsey, in an endeavor to wrest the world's heavyweight crown from him, has one of the strangest, most picturesque careers the prize ring has ever known. He was unheard of two years ago. Big, strong and possessed of a powerful punch, Firpo was recognized by boxing critics here as a dangerous contender for the title; but back in his native Argentine Luis was more than that—he was a National hero. Firpo's early career in the land of the pampas gave little forecast of the athletic prowess he was to gain. Born Oct. 29, 1895, nearly 28 years ago, in Buenos Aires, he had little bit size and ruggedness to recommend him as a ring prospect.

His father, a native of Genoa, Italy, emigrated to the Argentine at an early age. Enrique Firpo was small of stature, but his wife, born of Spanish parents in the Argentine, was of much larger build. The mother died several years ago, leaving an older brother and a younger sister. The father is now employed in the Government railroad offices at Buenos Aires.

Stevadore and Bootblack.

Before turning to pugilism as a means of livelihood, Firpo had a variety of occupations, doing odd work as a stevedore for some time. He also earned a little as a bootblack and had another job as bottle-washer in a drug store—the foundation upon which was built the legend that he once was a drug clerk.

Firpo, however, irked under the drudgery of these tasks and devoted most of his time to athletics, where he demonstrated all-round prowess through natural aptitude and physical qualifications.

He had read of the achievements of the world's great pugilists and one day when a friend took him to a gymnasium he seized a chance to enter the ring against an amateur named Angel Rodriguez.

The disastrous ending of that attempt, in 1917, was the real stimulus to Firpo's ring career. He was knocked out in the first round by Rodriguez, who since has retired from active competition.

That setback, the only one of his career, was followed by a succession of triumphs. Firpo learned the rudiments of the game rapidly, through relying chiefly on his strength and punch. He knocked out a score of opponents as an amateur. Then, in his first bout as a professional, he knocked out an American, William Daly, in the seventh round. That bout occurred in September, 1919, in Chile, and was followed by a string of knockouts by Firpo in that country, Uruguay and his native land, the Argentine.

All South America Conquered. By the winter of 1921-22 Firpo had conquered about all the pugilistic op-condition was doubtful, yet it is felt that his stomach trouble must be only local; and as the message was sent on Thursday night it was felt that Manager Cullen had plenty of time to rectify his indisposition. Through the courtesy of Manager H. A. Saunders, the Anglo American Telegraph Company will bulletin the results as they come in. The sports start at 1 p.m., and it is understood the 5 mile race will be the sixth item on the program. No news therefore may be expected before 4 p.m. when the result will be immediately announced.

RADIO FANS HAD RESULTS VERY PROMPTLY.

Radio parties were all the rage last night as owners of sets had been notified that the fight would be described, round by round. The wireless station was as follows: "At 10:30 Dempsey and Firpo squared off. Dempsey knocked out Firpo in the second round. Firpo went down with a left to the body and a right to the jaw. He went crashing on his back and was counted out. Firpo got to his knees dazed and utterly defenceless." Subsequently the analysis of the fight was broadcasted, in which it was stated that Firpo had been knocked off his feet five times.

FAST SERVICE.

Keeping up its reputation for service, the Anglo issued a bulletin six minutes after the fight started in New York stating: "Dempsey knocks out Firpo in second round." The bout was timed to start at ten o'clock New York time, which means 11:30 local and at 11:36 this message to the Anglo was flashed over the wires.

FOOTBALL.

The Stars were but plastic in the hands of the Cadets—the Champions of the League—in the fourth Tie Cup game last evening. As they were the only team to score against them in the League schedule, it was felt the Stars would put up a stiff fight against the Cadets. The result was that the champs scored 8 goals—not to count the two goals that Bill Callahan scored but was ruled off sides. The record of 8 to 0 makes the record for the season. The goalkeepers were Young, Meaney, Flynn, Maddigan, and Billy Callahan. The next game will be played on Monday when the Guards and Felidians will replay their draw game.

A TICKLISH POINT.

Editor Sportographs. Dear Sir—In reading your report of Wednesday evening's junior football, I notice the following statement, which I quote verbatim: "Just after crossing over, Jackman for the Holy Cross scored after the placing of a corner, but was off-sides." Although of late years I have not followed the rules of the game very closely, I have always thought that in the kicking of a corner, the off-sides rule is not applicable, and I think I am pretty safe in stating that in soccer games in the Old Country, when player places a corner kick, the off-sides ruling does not apply. May I impose upon your good nature, for enlightenment in the matter.

Very truly yours, OLD TIMER.

St. John's, Sept. 13th, 1923.

THE RULING.

If when placing a corner kick, the player, instead of directing it on the goal prefers to play it towards his own goal to enable, for instance, his full back line to try a shot, then the assembled players who are naturally near the goal-mouth could be ruled off-sides. This is a matter which of necessity is left to the discretion of the referee. Of course, if the corner kick were placed directly on the goal, no off-sides could be given as this is the purpose of the rule.

Editor Sportographs.

Dear Sir—Would you kindly answer through your valuable column, the following questions:—(1) Are the Annual Indoor Dominion Sports to be held this Fall; if so, about what time?—(2) Are they open to Outport competitors?

Yours sincerely, SPORT.

Placentia, Sept. 12th, 1923.

ANSWERS.

The Dominion Indoor Sports have not been announced. The A.A.A. are holding their annual indoor Championship Meet at the Prince's Rink, about November 1st, and "outport competitors" (as you choose to term them) will be gladly welcomed.

THEIR HEAVY TRAINING.

Since pugilism has entered the realm of high finance the average day's training for the topnotch prize fighter is as follows:— Two hours of desperate sparring within adding machine. Ten minutes' exercise in looking over left shoulder and counting the house. This develops the neck muscles. Fifteen minutes' heavy massage on the multiplication table. One-half hour shadow boxing with percentages. One hour of financial argument with promoter of the fight, to strengthen jaw muscles. Ten minutes' light work pulling tape from stock market ticker. One half hour's wrestle with a bull, and then one half hour's wrestle with a bear. Light work with slate and pencil trying to outpoint fractions. One-hour of heavy mathematics with heavyweight financiers as sparring partners. Fifteen minutes in the gymnasium juggling dividends. One hour's roadwork, paced by a galloping investment. One half hour of mental arithmetic and lightning calculation, adding 47 customers who arrive late while the fight is on, to 67,983 already in the house, and subtracting 4 who came in on passes. Two hours' heavy slugging with wildcat securities.

WEEK-END NOTES.

(I. C. MORRIS.)

RAILWAY MATTERS.
The Railway question has largely been a vexed one, and during its entire term of over forty years the railway itself has come in for a big share of criticism, as well as a moderate share of litigation. With such various branches of industry as railways imply, it is not to be wondered at, that disputes arise. Thus looking at our own railway for the past twenty-five years, there is room for comment upon its operation. For that full period of time the railways and docks, and also the greater portion of our coastal services, were under the control and management of the Reid Newfoundland Company, and whatever success has been accomplished, or whatever advancement has been accomplished, or whatever advancement has been made, the credit for the same must be accorded the said Company. It may be claimed in some respects that during the period, there was not really much improvement and that the railway did not prove a paying concern, nor did it develop the industrial potentialities which were hoped for.

Before the introduction of the railway, in 1831, we were told that unless the country were opened up, and her mines and forests and water powers developed, the public generally agreed; and so the railway came, and began its career, and extended its branches, until every district worth while has been connected. Looking therefore at the forty years, and comparing the trade conditions at the beginning of that period with those of the present, and considering the very limited internal industries that have been established, it does look as if the railway has fallen in the fulfilment of its initial purpose; for it cannot be said to-day that Newfoundland is really opened up. She is not, for at best, we have but begun to tap her resources. Thus reviewing the railway since its inception, in the light of development, the answer is plain, that the railway has not fulfilled its purpose. It is indeed regrettable that such is the case, and that such is the answer. This answer gives rise to the question as to the cause of this failure, and why better results have not followed. This question is open to various answers, all of which have something in their favor. To those who have independently watched the various stages of our railway operations since the day that the Reid Company took them over, it has always been evident, that there was too much antagonism between the Company and the various Governments of that period. This was especially noticeable at election times, and whether it was intentional or not, the Reid Company always came in for a big share of hard blows. Of course, the Company once or twice in its career, made the mistake of seeking representation in political life. This the people always opposed, because they maintained, and wisely so, that a corporation of such magnitude had of itself in its contracts, sufficient power, without being in a position to dominate the Government of the country. These attempts at political power intensified the friction, and tended to widen the breach which never should have existed. At times the Reid Company was blamed for this friction; but the fault was not fully theirs, most of it lay in the extreme manner of our party politics. That the Reid Company believed in the resources of Newfoundland, and in the possibility of their development, there can be no doubt; but they were thwarted in carrying out their programs. The present Rumber Deal is but a later development of what the Messrs. Reid attempted to establish by their ninety eight contract, but unfortunately their terms were such as the country could not accept; therefore the project was called off, and so the years passed, and we have arrived at the end of the Reid Newfoundland Company, in connection with our railway. This severance had been hinted at for several years, and now that it is an accomplished fact, it is hoped that better conditions are in store for the railway, as well as for the retiring company. The Reid Company has played a big part in the politics and commerce of Newfoundland; hence their retirement marks an epoch, which may be a turning point in the country's affairs. Like most corporations the Reid Company was viewed with jealousy and mistrust, and this spirit was intensified by the outcry of extremists on both sides of the party-political fence; but in all the career of the Messrs. Reid, it must be ever said of them, that they were open handed and liberal to every good and worthy cause, and that personally, they showed themselves big hearted men. Their retirement marks a new era in our history. What this era may mean is a matter of diverse private opinion; but all things considered it is quite safe to say, that if good-will be fostered, and public confidence be exercised, the change should prove beneficial to the country, and her interests in general.

This introduces to us the future of our railway, and opens up the problems of the growing century. We of course refer to the problems of Newfoundland. Such a prospect presents a broad field for survey, and to do it to continue the subject a little further than the limits of this article permit.

Mushroom Don't's.
You may have heard that spirits should never be consumed during a meal of which bananas have formed a part. The same thing is true to mushrooms. To take whisky, brandy, or gin with mushrooms is asking for trouble.
Here is another curious point about mushrooms. They must never be cooked twice. A freshly cooked mushroom is good and wholesome, but if one forms part of a stew and the stew is left to cool and then re-heated, the mushroom becomes poisonous.
Mushrooms are a valuable food. In this respect they beat potatoes and onions, and come next to beef and mutton. A mushroom contains three and a half per cent. of protein; a potato only two and a half per cent.
The strangest mushroom to be found in the British Isles is the fly-blown agaric, common in the Highlands of Scotland. It is very beautiful, but poisonous. One specimen is said to make a man intoxicated for a whole day!

SUNSET IS NOT A TINT
SUNSET should not be confused with tints and other products which are not fast. SUNSET is a real fast dye, clean and easy to use, and produces brilliant results. Once you have discovered how simple SUNSET dyeing is, you will find dozens of different ways to profit by it.

SUNSET IS DIFFERENT FROM ALL OTHER DYES. For SUNSET does not stain like soap or other dyes. SUNSET dyes cotton, wool, silk, linen and mixed goods, or even in the same dye-bath, gives the same color to all—season after season. It has the same tone as the modern fast dyes, and is permanent. SUNSET fastens the color of the material.

The strangest mushroom to be found in the British Isles is the fly-blown agaric, common in the Highlands of Scotland. It is very beautiful, but poisonous. One specimen is said to make a man intoxicated for a whole day!

STAR MOVIE

A Total Loss.
FISHING BOAT RUNS ASHORE IN HEAVY GALE.

A message to the Deputy Minister of Customs from the Sub-collector at Lawn was received yesterday, to the effect that the boat "Brothers" of Marytown, which harboured at L'Anse au Barque out of the storm on Thursday night, broke her chains, yesterday morning in the height of the gale, and drifting ashore, became a total loss. It is presumed that the vessel was returning from the fishing grounds when she met with her doom. Mr. Thos. Miller, of Marytown was the owner of the vessel. Only a small portion of the schooners gear and fittings was saved.

National Biscuit Co. Have Chosen the Star Movie.

Some time ago Mr. Leo A. Duffy made announcement through the Telegram of his Company's intention to have "The History of Uneda Biscuit" screened in St. John's. Of course to do this successfully Mr. Duffy was asked by his Company to forward to the head office at New York, a list of theatrical houses located here, which he very promptly did. A few days ago a reply came through the mail to make arrangements with the Star Movie to run this wonderful film as the N.B.C. were advised in the Big City to contract with the Star, if they wanted genuine results. THE ENTERPRISE ALL CAST PIPELESS FURNACE

Is not merely a furnace without pipes. ALL CAST means a heavier furnace—a longer wearing furnace.

ALL CAST means that the radiator too is made of Cast Iron. The radiator extracts all the heat from the fire, and sends it up into the house—not out the chimney.

The ALL CAST Radiator is unaffected by the corrosive action of fuel gases, it will never wear out.

ALL CAST means that expansion and contraction are even,—that the whole furnace is proof for life against leakage of gas, smoke and dust. For this reason it is guaranteed absolutely

Dustproof

ALL CAST means lifetime satisfaction.

Every Enterprise ALL CAST Pipeless Furnace that we install—and being practical Tinsmiths we install them ourselves—carries with it the ALL CAST Guarantee of the makers. "You will be able to go around your house all next winter in your shirt-sleeves, if you install one of these Chill-Chasers in your home."

Facts.

The plans of an egret will bring to America 10-day. Great Britain had 24,000 fewer men than arms in 1923 than in 1919. Last year 11,466 passengers were carried by air transport in this country. Modern fashions are said to have raised the standard of health among women. Since its foundation, the Ministry of Pensions has expended about $478-

069,000. A famous aviator pays an annual premium of $50,000 on an insurance policy for $220,000. Bees and poultry are kept in many British schools by the masters and pupils as subjects of study.

SIDE TALKS.

By Ruth Cameron.

SPEAKING OF BANANAS.

"I have brought you home the words of a new national anthem," said the Authorman the other evening.

"Didn't know we had one," said I obligingly. "What is it?"

The Authorman read:

"Yes! we have no bananas; we have no bananas to-day. We've just killed the pony, so taste our bologna. It's flavored with oats and hay. We have those New Hampshire squashes. They taste like galoshes. But YES, we have no bananas. We have no bananas to-day."

He also contributed these interesting pieces of information, perhaps already familiar to you, about it.

That the two young men who wrote it in 15 minutes, got $60,000 as their first royalty payment.

That it has already sold a million copies and that it is anticipated that it will sell more.

At Least $300,000.

That Irving Berlin reckons that the profits from it will probably amount to, at least, $300,000.

Surely the American people is lavish in its rewards to those who can tickle its fancy by some perfectly absurd catchword.

For the use of one word in an absurd way, those two young men will make as much money by that 15 minutes work as a first class college professor would earn in a lifetime.

I say the use of one word because if they had written, "No, we have no bananas to-day," of course there wouldn't have been any song. $300,000 for the whimsical use of one word!

A Bitter Cup.

"Do you remember that a few months ago, at the time when the fight for the world's heavyweight championship title was going on, we read of the suicide of a professor of a large technical college? A scientific investigator whose discoveries, the fruit of long hours of toil and intense application, are of great value to the world. One of the chief reasons for his act was that he had been driven almost out of his head by the struggle to bring up his family and pursue his investigations on the money he could make, and resentment at reading in the newspapers of the huge sums of money those men were to get for one fight had been the last push that drove him over the brink.

Had he lived until the day of "Bananas" and read of that $300,000 for 15 minutes, his cup, though it could not have more surely overflowed, might have been even bitterer.

One of Our Greatest Lotteries.

"The American government may flatter itself that it forbids lotteries but, so long as huge sums of money and notoriety may be captured by the one song in a hundred thousand that draws the lucky number of popular favor, it flatters itself falsely.

We study the folk songs of old civilizations to get the idea of popular tendencies and amusements and mental reactions of that day. I wonder what conclusions the student of Americans of the twentieth century will draw from the fact that "YES, we have no bananas to-day," was one of the biggest song hits of the century.

NOTHING BUT GOOD.

WALT MASON

I hang a wreath upon the tomb of J. Augustus Frantz, and thus allviate it in a gloom of all his weeping sunts. I boost him in the market place now that he's looped the loops; "He was a credit to the race," I say to village groups.

Augustus bored me many years, stale rags he used to chew, and from my eyes the bitter tears his stories often drew. But now he's dead and in his grave and he'll be there a while, and I am anxious to behave in seemly, fitting style. Men say we should bestow our flowers on people "while they live, not on their graves drip briny showers—such tears no comfort give. But while a man is still on earth he's able to resent the casual speech or ribald mirth of any passing gent. It's fair to criticize him then, to say he is a frog, to score his faults with tongue or pen, regardless of the cost. If he resents the things I've said, his vengeance he may seek, and punch me roundly on the head, and sweat me on the back. But when he dies I must forget all rancor, ire and spite, and boost him as the village pet, and say a fond "Good night!" Speak nothing of the dead but good, the time-worn maxim reads; recall the things for which they stood, expound their useful deeds.

Edison is Now Seeking to Learn Where Souls Abide After Death.

Inventor, at Harding Funeral, Reveals Belief That Human Beings are Made up of Intelligent Entities, One of Which Gives Life and Motion.

Marion, O., Aug. 10.—(Associated Press).—Thomas A. Edison, here attending the funeral of Warren G. Harding, is talking to the Associated Press to-day, said he "was seeking after the truth and had made much progress" in regard to life after death.

"The soul after death takes flight," Mr. Edison said, "but in what form and manner is unknown."

Regarding spiritualism, Mr. Edison said he did not believe the spirit returned to earth and commingled with those living, but he added "we know that the soul does exist after death."

"I have not found it possible to demonstrate the existence of the life beyond the grave and I cannot say that men, including the beloved President Harding, live after death.

ing and all my thoughts are regarding the life after death—where the soul goes, what form it takes and its relations to those now living.

"I am convinced that the body is made up of entities which are intelligent. When one cuts his finger, I believe it is the intelligence of these entities that heals the wound. When one is sick it is the intelligence of these entities that brings convalescence.

"You know there are living cells in the body so tiny that the microscope cannot show them at all. The entity that gives life and motion to the human body is finer still and lies infinitely beyond the reach of our finest scientific instruments. When the entity deserts the body, the body is like a ship without a rudder—deserted, motionless and dead. It is mere clay, as all orthodox Christians believe. I still believe in the religion of Our Lord and Master."

TRINITY

AN INCIDENT OF 150 YEARS AGO IN TRINITY.

A few weeks ago I mentioned the fact that the ten years—(1768-1778)—in the history of Trinity, were more than ordinarily prolific in deeds of violence and sad happenings. Than any other period of that history. There were two causes for this. (1) A large number of those who came to Trinity during those years were men of very poor character. (2) There was more hard drinking than usual. I have tried to make this clear, in my reference to the actions of those men, as given in my notes of the recent past; and whilst I am not at my best when bringing these deeds to light, yet they are bound up with our history, and as such they are calculated to teach positive as well as negative lessons to those of us who are living in other times, and in different surroundings. Let us add the following to the incidents already given:—Captain John Kerly was well known in Trinity and Limerick in those days. In his earlier years he was most careful about his conduct, and he was highly respected by all who knew him. During the later years of his sea-faring life, as a result of new associations, he became fond of drink, and this fondness so increased with years, that his employers decided that it would be a kindness to him and a duty to themselves as owners of the vessel, to relieve him of the responsibilities of Captain.

Captain Kerly felt his discharge keenly, and it well nigh broke his heart to remove all his belongings from the vessel that had been practically his home for twenty years. He had always owned a little house in Trinity in which his wife had lived for several years (and was still living there) and it was hoped by her and his many old friends, that he would settle down to a quiet and sober life during his declining life. For awhile his life and actions were all that could be desired. Then he began to visit the public houses during the winter evenings. Gradually the old craving for drink returned, and as he was hear the conversation of Field and her husband, and knew just what was going on in the "den." She realized that Field was getting dangerous and the sooner he got away to his home it would be better for him and the Captain. At 11.45 she went in and reminded the men that it was nearly Sunday morning, and that the pleasant evening had better come to a close. She produced Field's coat, and comforter and cap, and though not very conscious of what he was doing, he tried to thank Mrs. Kerly for an enjoyable evening, and with an attempt at a good-night, he went out into the whirling snow storm, and the biting cold, intending to get to his home as soon as he could.

What were the thoughts and actions, and the feelings of James Field during the next half-hour, no one but God knows. The next morning as the old Sexton of St. Paul's was on his way to make the fires in church, he saw something in the lane leading to Captain Kerly's house, and partly hidden by snow, which upon examination he found to be the body of James Field. The following entry in the Burial Register of the old church books will best tell the tale: "Jan. 18th, 1768.—Interred, James Field, found dead on Sunday morning, the 17th of January, about 8 o'clock, near the house of Captain John Kerly, with whom he had been drinking the night before. The Coroner's inquest brought in their verdict:—"Accidental death, occasioned partly by liquor, together with the excessive frost."

THE LINEAGE OF GEORGE AND MARY LATE.

The following extracts from the old Church Register will supply the information asked for by a correspondent, and may be of interest to others of the same family. Two brothers by the name of Late came to Newfoundland from Devonshire, England, about 1798. One went to Fogo, the other, George, came to Trinity. "Married, May 13, 1801—George Late, of Amstover, Devon, and Mary Dewey of this Harbor." The following children were born to them: George, Asa, Elizabeth, Mary, Sarah, James, John, Hannah, Thomas, George Married Ann White in 1830. There were born to them: Zechariah, Mary, Eleanor, Louisa, Isabella, William, Margaret Ann. Elizabeth married James Taverner. Sarah married William Taverner. Ann married William Brown. Mary married Priscilla Maybee. There were born to them: George, Sarah, Charles, Mary Ann. James married Ann Brennock. There were born to them: Robert, James, Thomas. Mary married Ann Maybee. There were born to them: William, Richard, Mary. John moved to Smith's Sound and settled there. His son George was born there. George was married twice. One of his children is Elizabeth Late, at present living at St. John's. William, son of Thomas, married Jane Butler, and after her death he married Martha White. Two of the children born to them were Mary Elizabeth and Eliza. Thomas was married the second time to James Bailey. One of their children in James, the present ferryman. The Lates of Trinity and those of Fogo are consanguineous.

RE THE PELLEY FAMILY.

A few weeks ago (in reply to a question re the Pelley family) I gave two baptisms of 1805 and 1806 respectively, as the only entries that I could find in connection with the name. Since then I have found the following entry in the Burial Register: "1800.—Interred, Mark Pelley, Sr. of Han's Harbor, aged 69 years." This verifies my statement, that the reason why the old people's marriage, and their children's baptisms are not to be found in the old register is—they were married and baptized before the old Registers were begun. In 1768, "Thus Mark Pelley Sr., who was 67 years of age when he died in 1800, was born and baptized in 1731, i.e. twenty-two years before the Registers were begun."

The following entry is comparatively modern:—"1853.—Married, Richard Pelley, of Han's Harbor, and Mary Ann Green, of Scilly Cove."

"THIS ALSO SHALL PASS AWAY."

The above is an old motto given by a wise man of long years ago; for use by a troubled King. Surely it is most appropriate and helpful in all sorts and conditions of temporal life.

When trouble or sorrow comes to us, and we fear that we shall never get over it, we may say with truth and encouragement: "This also shall pass away." When worldly prosperity comes to us, and we are tempted to believe that it must last forever, let us remind ourselves of a possible truth:—"This also shall pass away."

indicate that there is no plus of Anthracite Coal in the U.S. The shortage caused by the strike of Anthracite Miners last year has been made up, and American hard coal will, in all probability, be hard to get and priced. Coke is an excellent substitute for hard coal, we have on hand a stock same that will soon be posed off, because a shortage of hard coal inventory creates an increased demand for our product. We advise our customers to book their requirements as soon as possible.

How to Cure Our Financial Cankers and Tone of the Emaciated Body Politic.

(By SPECTATOR.)

It is necessary to take a good confident look at the public; but here, just among the look blacker than thunder. There is no use denying the fact that the nation is in a state of financial distress. The young country can't manage without. The first supplies physical strength, while the second is a moral advantage that's hard to reckon. The latter I'm willing to do what I can. The former you'll have to consult your best views on. The gentlemen think it would cure cankers. The way of finance, if we just want the bankers' view. The proposal would square in my views. The lives were not all that we'd like them to be. THE ULTIMATE END OF GOVERNMENT. It is as we have always been under the impression that the ultimate of governing, under a constitutional form of government, was to get the will of the people. In however, it appears, we have been mistaken: that is, to accept the dictum of those who control a certain section of the country. These gentlemen, by their constant action, jointly and severally, have made it the object of government to be in power, and to bend the will of the people to their purposes. To ordinary minds, it would appear to be a reversal of the order of responsible government.

same may be said of Israel, Bright, Gladstone and other great statesmen of their day in the Mother Country. We all suffer because of the absence of such men from the arena of politics. Sir William Whitway was a safe man at the head of the government. He had character, which some of his successors had not; he put it into his speeches in the House of Assembly and elsewhere. It lurks in his letters—two or three of which are before me at this moment; it exploded in his conversation. You saw it in his face and figure; in his manner of holding himself, in all that he said or did. As a result of his character, he was always advocating it, not without reason, as subsequent events have shown. The Parliamentary vote he attached the greatest importance to, giving the private citizen a direct interest in the government of the country, and so elevating his own position. In short, Sir William was always occupied with important matters. He practised no reserve with respect to the truth in which he believed; and he never concealed his conviction that the causes he exposed were bound to prevail. He was a doughty fighter, and we cannot but admire his splendid courage and capacity. His thoughts and dreams and courage were all exalted by a faith in the colony that was capable of accomplishing much good. He made himself conversant with the chief questions that agitated the minds of his fellow-citizens, and dealt with them in a way that made him a master in all contemporary matters. He used to say:—"Let us remember that individual virtue can promote social happiness, and that social happiness and peace form the basis of political independence." But Sir William is gone, and it so happens that, since his departure, no ship of state has ever been freighted with more veritable Jonahs than this same unfortunate institution of ours.

THE AVERAGE SHEPHERD OF THE POLITICAL FLOCK.

The average "shepherd of the political flock," these days, is a different type of man altogether. He takes up the crook, not that the sheep may be fed, but that he may never want a warm woollen suit and a joint of mutton. He blows up the flames of political discord for no other reason than that he may thereby handily boil his own pot. I believe there are scores of these mutton-loving shepherds in the colony to-day, and, of these, how many have even the dimmest perception of their immense power, and the duties consequent thereon? Here and there, happily, one. Nine out of every ten labor to impress upon the people the great principles of Tweedledum, and the others preach with equal earnestness the gospel according to Tweedledum. Verily, there is a point where toleration, sinks into sheer baseness and poltroonery!

ARE WE GETTING BETTER OR WORSE?

One of our "City Fathers" remarked to me the other day:—"In view of the criminal statistics for the past year, what is the answer to the questions which rise to one's lips as he reads the Telegram's daily installment of police news? Are we improving or otherwise? Have we more crimes or less crime in proportion to our population? As the result of all our education, church union and extension movement, missionary, Salvation Armying and the like, have we been able to make any appreciable diminution in the number of crimes committed? He asked these questions, much as a passenger on board a vessel which has sprung a leak comes to the officer who takes soundings from time to time to ascertain whether the pumps are gaining on the water or the water on the pumps. The answer of the judicial statistics is, that slowly and steadily the pumps are gaining on the water, but that there has been nothing like the diminution of crime which superficial observers have been led to infer from a comparison of the prison calendar. A French critic recently commenting, with obvious admiration, on the progress towards the extinction of crime which had been made in England, as evidenced by the prison statistics there, said that in the last few years, or since the close of the World War, there had been such a decrease in crime in the English cities that they were encumbered with empty prisons, and some of those which were occupied were not more than half full. Hence, the natural optimism of many credulous people who, with the evidence of certain facts before them, could not resist the conclusion that we were really making strides towards the millennium. Alas! for the vanity of all mortal things, especially if these things are based upon statistical returns! Let me point out that while the diminution of the prison population is an undeniable fact, it is due, to a much greater extent, to the greater leniency in inflicting punishment than to any widespread improvement on the part of the criminal classes.

BRUTALISING EFFECT OF EXCESSIVE SENTENCES.

As a matter of fact, while the total of the prison population is somewhat diminishing, the number of crimes reported to the police has actually increased. Judges, from whatever cause, seem to have at last wakened to the fact that there is something brutalizing in the excessive sentences which some of their number deal out indiscriminately. Nor is that the only cause of the change. Prisoners formerly sent to the Supreme Court for trial and sentenced to twelve months and upwards, are now often dealt with in the Central District or Police Court, and sentenced to three or six months; and if we look only at sentences of imprisonment, we disregard the cases formerly punished by imprisonment for a month or a week where the sentence is now only a fine or sureties. The effect of the changes in procedure which the Summary Jurisdiction Act introduced was to make punishment more certain and quicker, but less severe; and it is a very old doctrine that quickness and certainty in punishment is more efficacious for the repression of crime than severity of sentence. On the whole, the best criterion of the amount of criminality is the total, not of crimes tried or indicted, but of indictable crimes. CRIMINALITY AMONG THE YOUNG. Special attention should, perhaps, be given to the fact that more than one-fourth of the persons convicted of larceny are children under sixteen; and that more than one-third of the convicted burglars are youths between sixteen and twenty-one. It would appear that from sixteen to twenty-one the proportion is much higher than at any other age, and that the proportion declines steadily as life advances. The proportion of women convicted of drunkenness and disorderly conduct is considerably higher than of men convicted of crime. Even for offences of cruelty to children tried summarily, the proportion of women is much less than that of men. The comparatively larger number of women who are criminals in the later periods of life may be due to the fact that women are less influenced by punishment than men. Possibly, however, we should look for the explanation in the fact that some women who, when younger, earn a livelihood in a questionable way, are in later life driven to crime. Several such cases have recently come under my notice.

REMARK MADE IN THE POLICE COURT.

The remark recently made in the Police Court by a certain prominent member of the bar that the law against the use of liquors stimulates to greater violation of the law, and produces an appetite for liquor drinking where it did not exist before, would be easily verifiable if true; but upon appeal to the facts of statistical reports of criminal and health records, there is no evidence to sustain it. To say that all prohibition laws are worse than useless, that they have not lessened the sale or consumption of liquors; that free spirits and free sale would increase the horror of the drunkard and decrease the horror of liquor; and by making the one a crime and nuisance, the merits of the other would come into prominence, or, in other words, increase the severity of the punishment of the drunkard, and make the sale of liquor practically free, sounds very tropical to say the least. It would be useless to make any detailed study of statements that will not bear the most casual scrutiny. Reformers and their opponents who battle with each other in a "Donnybrook fair style," striking in all directions, with the wildest dogmatic assertions, reckless of history.

DIFFICULTIES ON BOTH SIDES.

On the one hand, to repeal all restrictive and prohibitory laws and open the door for the free use of rum is to act in opposition to all the facts of observation and experience. On the other hand, to insist that prohibitory laws are the only measures to correct the drink evil, or that high license and local option, are equally powerful as remedies, is to assume a knowledge of alcohol and inebriety that has not been attained. The highest wisdom of to-day demands the facts and reasons for the use of alcohol, and why it should be literally and theoretically the cause of so much loss and peril to the race. All hope for the future solution of these questions must come from accurately observed facts and their teachings, and, like the problems of the stars above us, be determined along lines of scientific inquiry.
