(Continued.) "This is the house of the Duke of St. Quentin," I said. "Surely you could not come in at the gate without discovering that?"

"He is a very grand seigneur, then, this duke?" "Assuredly," I replied cautiously. "More of a man than the Comte de Mar?"

"Well, I wonder, monsieur, I wonder if we are going to sell ornaments to Peyrot?" "Monsieur goes to the Hotel de Lorraine as a jeweller?" I cried, enlightened.

"Yes, he is a jeweller," I said, without enthusiasm. "He has always traded you well?" I had thought myself of the trick I had played successfully with the officer of the burgess guard.

"Why, yes, I suppose so. I have only known him two days." "But you have known him well?" he demanded with ill-concealed eagerness.

"This M. de Mar downstairs, he is a very good master?" "Yes," I said, without enthusiasm. "He has always traded you well?"

"That's as I would have it," he returned, coming over to the bedside to arrange his treasures. "For if I look new to you, I think I may look so to the Hotel de Lorraine."

"I thank my stars I was born a boy," I declared. "I wouldn't get into this tangle for any one on earth. I tell monsieur that, flat."

THE AMERICAN WHO PLANS AN ATTEMPT TO REACH THE NORTH POLE

New York, June 15.—Special cables received here today announce that Walter Wellman, the American who plans an attempt to reach the north pole by means of a dirigible balloon, is now on his way to Norway, whence he will sail for Spitzbergen.

Wellman left Paris yesterday. His outfit and materials were shipped on an special train five on Wednesday. The explorer left Paris expressing himself as confident of success.

Walter Wellman's proposed trip to the north pole in his dirigible, excited general interest, not alone because the undertaking had its beginning in a daring newspaper assignment, but because this is to be the first time that a man will attempt to reach the north pole by means of a dirigible balloon.

BOILS ALL OVER HIS FACE AND NECK

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS DID FOR HIM WHAT FOUR DOCTORS FAILED TO DO

KEWASANT, Ont., July 25th, 1906. Messrs. T. J. Matthews Co., Ltd., Toronto, Ont.

Dear Sirs:—I am writing to let you know what Burdock Blood Bitters has done for me. I am a young man, twenty years old, and for the last year I have been suffering from boils on my face and neck, mostly on the left side. I would no longer get rid of one than I would have, perhaps, two or three more appear.

I had four doctors trying to cure me but they had very little success. They would stop them for a month, and then when they would be as bad as ever again.

Always every patent medicine, advertised to cure boils, could get hold of, I tried, but still without success. At last one day, last spring, someone happened to say "Burdock Blood Bitters" for a bottle, but at the time was doubtful if it was worth trying.

However, I used that bottle and while I was taking it I began to feel better, although I still kept having a few boils, but not nearly such bad ones. I did not know who the medicine was, I used to miss, sometimes, a week out of every month. I kept on taking the medicine until I had taken six bottles, and needless to say, I was cured.

But even now that I held still we could not draw the last boils in the bodice-point nearly together.

"Yes, monsieur, I can never wear it like this," I panted, when he had tied it as tight as he could. "I shall die, or I shall burst, the sooner. He had put force to give me more room; he pulled the apron higher to cover gaps, and facprovision, what to him seems the most complete and perfect safeguard, may be plunged into ruin by some unforeseen happening or seemingly trivial circumstance.

One sets out upon such a quest, not with a light heart, not even with confidence, perhaps with a little fear, yet certainly with hope.

Now a word about the leader. Walter Wellman is 45, rather past the prime for Arctic exposure. He began newspaper work at 14, and since 1884 has served as Washington correspondent of the Chicago Herald and Record-Herald, which time he has not been engaged in adventure.

In 1892 he located the landing place of Columbus on Weddel Island, or San Salvador, and marked the spot with a monument. In 1894 he led an Arctic expedition, reaching the latitude 81 degrees northeast of Spitzbergen. In 1898-9 he explored Franz Josef Land, discovering many new islands, and reaching the 82nd degree of latitude. He is a man of intelligence, determination and leadership.

COMMENT ON WALL STREET

J. B. Picken--Outside of the private despatches of a few grain houses, reports of crop conditions although not as favorable as last year, are not alarming. We believe that the market will remain narrow and uninteresting for some little time to come.

Burnett & Co.--The majority do not see much in the market except from a trader's view point until something of a more positively favorable character develops to infuse life in speculation.

Marshall, Spader & Co.--The disposition of larger interests to withhold support from the market has been quite manifest recently, and the situation has been almost entirely in the hands of professional traders, which element has accomplished quite a free market movement in the face of dividends.

He has received an invitation from Col. H. H. McLean to spend a week with his guest either at Bonny River or on the Isle Royale, and, if possible, he will angle for a time in these waters.

Be Done With Catarrh!

Why allow this filthy disease to poison your system? It drains your strength, ruins digestion, pollutes the breath, makes you nervous, and causes a host of other ailments. It is a disease that is not cured by medicine, but only by the use of Wearly Willie Walker.

The steady development of the taste for musical comedy which has been growing to a full sized habit among the masses who look upon the playhouse as a place where to go for their amusement finds ample exemplification in the favors which have been showered upon "Weary Willie Walker." This big musical comedy, as advertised as a clean cut exposition of animated fun condensed into rational shape for the proper interpolation of the choicest extractions from the popular song hits, and a sufficient number of musical selections to lend cohesiveness to the action of the plot. Smacks of wit and humor of high making quality that tells with effect.

The production of "Weary Willie Walker," announced for June 21, 22 and 23, at the Opera House, will show a wholesome quantity of unique and costume features, as well as the train load of extremely pretty girls of various variety.

THE ISSUE

Socialism or Individualism - The Democrats must choose under which banner they will fight. Hearst represents one, Bryan the other. So an American writer defines the situation as it appears today.

Law seems to be at hand, and the solution of the problem is one that must cause anxiety not only to Natal and South Africa, but to the Imperial power, whose forces may be called upon to determine what might become a very dreadful war.

There is essentially no difference between the Pennsylvania railroad chief clerk who gathered in thousands of dollars from coal companies as a tip or price for steering the railroad company's orders in their direction, and the coachman who pockets an occasional dollar in the placing of orders for oats, or the steward who profits similarly at the expense of his employer in buying meats and other table requirements.

The playground plan has long since passed the doubtful stage. It rests with the public to say how many supervised grounds the city will have. The first will soon be in readiness.

THE WORLD IS BETTER

Notwithstanding Tainted Meat or Tainted Money or Graft, We are Growing in Grace

Current opinion to the contrary notwithstanding, the world is getting better all the time.

Neither tainted meat, nor tainted money, nor Standard Oil rebates, nor railroad discrimination, nor insurance graft, nor political corruption, nor special privilege, nor yellow journalism, nor monopoly prices, nor closed doors, nor unfair competition, nor over-capitalization, nor stock jobbery, nor bombs, nor lynch law, should blind us to this fact.

CHILDREN AND THE FIRE DRILL

The London, Ont., Board of Education believes in fire drill in the public schools twice a month, winter and summer, and once in summer only, as is the practice in some places. The London board has issued in pamphlet form a set of rules for the government of its officials, and the teachers and pupils. There are some striking things in the book, among them the regulations governing the fire drill. They are:

- (a) Fire drills should be held at least twice a month.
(b) They should not be held at regular times.
(c) There should be a special signal given with the bell, which should be given only for fire drill.
(d) Teachers should dismiss pupils at once, and always in the same way, on hearing the signal.
(e) Pupils should not wait to put on clothing.
(f) They should be urged to walk quickly, but they must keep in line and avoid crowding.
(g) Teachers and larger boys should be stationed at the foot of the stairways and in other important positions to raise any who may fall. They should be especially trained in reaching their positions with great promptness.
(h) The object of the fire drill being to prevent a panic in case of a real fire, it is desirable occasionally to cause a smoke by some means in the hall before giving the signal. No risk of fire should be run in causing this smoke.
(i) It is desirable to confine the pupils to one means of exit occasionally, so as to be prepared for the contingency of having the other cut off by fire.
(j) Principals should sometimes halt the pupils in the midst of a fire drill, so as to train them to stop instantaneously in case of emergency.

RIDER HAGGARD'S VIEW

Nearly twenty years ago H. Rider Haggard wrote of the black peril in South Africa: "It is obvious that, sooner or later, these two races (i. e., the Natal colonists and the Zulus) must come into contact, the question being how long the present calm will last. To this question I venture to suggest an answer—I believe a right one. It will last until the native gets so cramped for room that he has no place left to settle on except the white man's land."

Nervousness, A Calamity.

Many who don't realize what lies beyond, read an attack of the nerves with indifference. Others consider it will soon pass away. But in every case nervousness is a calamity. Only one remedy will cure—nerve-a-nerve strengthener that acts through the blood. It's Nervine. It gives you appetite—you eat plenty. This fills the blood with nourishment for the inner nerve-force. Energy and strength is instilled into every part of the system. You get well—keep well—nervousness forever departs, because you've used Nervine. Price 50c. per box of fifty tablets at all dealers.

LIFE'S MIRROR

There are loyal hearts, there are spirits sincere; There are souls that are pure and true; Then give to the world the best you have, And the best will come back to you. Give love, and love thro' life will flow. As a strength in your utmost need; Give faith, and a score of hours will show 'Thir faith in your word and deed. Give truth, and your gift will be paid in kind, And honor will surely honor meet; And a smile that is sweet will surely find A smile that is just as sweet. For life is the mirror of king and slave - 'Tis just what we are and what we do; So give to the world the best you have, And the best will come back to you.

HIGHER EDUCATION. The stranger in town observed a very small lad sitting up beside the driver of a stage van. "Ah," said the stranger, "your mamma's moving, isn't she, little boy?" "Yes, my mother," replied the lad. "I'm going to school and this van contains my regular school books. This is Boston, you know."—Columbus Dispatch.

A HISTORIAN'S MISTAKE. "Don't you think Brown is a good descriptive writer?" "Yes, generally; but he makes mistakes sometimes." "For instance?" "Well, he was writing of a naval battle once, and he said the world's brave sailors on the defeated vessel bit the dust!"

THE DOCTOR'S VIEW. Buxton Widow (at evening party)—"Do you understand the language of flowers, Dr. Crusty?" "Dr. Crusty (an old bachelor)—"No, ma'am."

Widow — "You don't know if yellow means jealousy?" Dr. Crusty — "no, ma'am; yellow means biliousness."

APARTMENT HOUSES. Our guide was showing us the new apartment houses in the great city. "Over here," he announced through his megaphone, "we have 'Bonaparte Court.' This, ladies and gentlemen, is occupied by the middle class."

"And that grand building to the left?" "That's 'King's Court.' Occupied by only the wealthy." "Wonderful! But how about that extraordinary model of architecture with Cupids shooting broken arrows at iron hearts?" "Oh, that is 'Divorce Court.' Occupied by the ultra-married set!"—Puck.

MONTREAL MONOPOLY (Montreal Witness). The rumor that the Montreal Light, Heat & Power Company is contemplating a five per cent dividend in place of the four per cent it is paying now, is naturally interesting to the public, and especially to its shareholders. The combination can well afford to make such an increase as last year its net profits amounted to $1,278,486, after paying $476,410 interest on bonds and loans; that is to say, its net earnings amounted to $1,754,896. If the $7,341,000 represented by the bonds is the actual capital of this combine, then this million and a quarter, which remains after paying interest on all the money put in, is payable to proprietors of water. Five per cent on the seven million of water stock would only come to $350,000, which is only two-thirds of the net earnings. The other third is being bid away somewhere for the benefit of the stock holders to come out some day in the shape of new stock. To show the growth of the business of the combine we find that it earned about eight hundred thousand dollars in 1902, so that the expansion has been more than a hundred per cent. This in spite of the fact of the stock holders to come out some day in the shape of new stock. "I HAVE ACTED SQUARE SINCE I LEFT ST. JOHN"
British Crook, Located in Winnipeg Tells of His Criminal Record But Says He is All to the Good Now --- Was in This City in February.

(Winnipeg Telegram.)
James Shuttle, the ex-convict, who played such a sensational part in the famous trial of Hugh Watt, M. P. for Glasgow, for plotting the murder of his divorced wife, is in Winnipeg, and is discussing the case freely on the streets. What is of special significance to Winnipeg people just at the time when the police are having trouble with hold-up men and diamond thieves, is that Shuttle was sent to Canada by the British Government, given money to pay his passage, and set on foot in the city without previous knowledge to the authorities.
Shuttle, under the alias of James Edwards, has been employed for several weeks cleaning offices in a local bank building. Yesterday he was discharged as the result of his being engaged in with an elevator man in the building.
Shuttle laughed at the suggestion that the police might be paying some attention to him and said: "No, I'm square. I have been square since landing at St. John and they needn't arrest me because if they do they would have to turn me loose."
In conversation, he insisted that the police did not know anything about his movements, and said that when he was given money by the Crown agents to come to Canada he was assured that nothing would be said to the Canadian authorities about his presence on this side until he had had time to look about and get a start.
"I don't know any crooks here," he continued, "and I don't want to know any. I am working and am earning an honest living. This guy in the Old Country needn't blame me for his trouble, for I merely give him what any of the boys would. I needed the money and I never intended to kill anybody. I sent my pal to tell his wife, and she gives me some money so you see we got 'em both for a while. I was hard up—broke—or I wouldn't have done it. I say to him when he asked me if I would do a job for him, 'sure' he said, 'do you know how to kill a woman,' and I says 'sure,' hit her on the head with a bar of iron."
"He asked me if I had done time and I told him yes. Then he says, 'what for,' and I says 'for killing a woman. Then he gives me ten pounds and I blow him—er, I was west near him again until I got broke again. That was some time afterwards and I comes out of jail and I know he would have to give me some money so I goes to his house. He comes to the door but did not know me and I told him I had been sent by the man who introduced us before and asked him if he wanted a job done. Then he gives me some more money and I blows him again. Then we all goes arrested."
Shuttle is a man of perhaps 32, slender, disheveled, dark, and with features indicating cunning. He has a very fair command of language, but resorts to the vernacular of the crooks frequently. He does not seek to shield his past, but places special emphasis on the fact that he has reformed.
"You see, it was this way," he explained. "I got crooked gradually. I was runned with some club boys and the money I expected to get from home didn't come and I just got to going out on the street. I got a diamond pin, sometimes a big roll of money, and sometimes nothing but hard knocks—but I was lucky, for I didn't get caught. I could always sell my stuff, of course, at fences, and I blew it at the races mostly; then I had to go after more, but I could get it easy enough."
Shuttle came into the Telegram office to tell a story of a man he wanted to "get even with." He was drinking and who knew him though he said he had to use the name of Edwards to get a job. He talked freely. "That's what they always does when a crook passes up a chap for 'em like we did Watt."
It was learned last night that Shuttle had taken a sudden departure from the city and it is assumed that he has gone to one of the big American cities.

Charles M. Hoyt, William Wainwright, Alfred Peter Stuart and William Hodgins Biggar, all of the Grand Trunk Pacific, Montreal, and Nicholas Bevil's merchant, of Winnipeg, have been incorporated to carry on an elevator and warehouse business and for that purpose to erect, acquire, lease, maintain and operate elevators, grain storage and cleaning plants and warehouses, the latter either for grain or general merchandise; to store and clean grain; to store and handle merchandise, goods and chattels of any and all kinds, and carry on the business of warehousemen generally. The operations of the company are to be carried on throughout the Dominion of Canada and elsewhere by the name of "Grand Trunk Pacific Terminal Company," with a total capital stock of $5,000,000, divided into 50,000 shares of $100, and the chief place of business is to be at Montreal.

THREE TRYING TIMES IN A WOMAN'S LIFE
There are three periods of a woman's life when she is in need of the heart strengthening, nerve toning, blood enriching action of
MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS
The first of these is when the young girl is entering the portals of womanhood. At this time she is very often pale, weak and nervous, and unless her health is built up and her system strengthened she may fall prey to consumption or be a weak woman for life.
The second period is motherhood. The drain on the system is great and the exhausted nerve force and depleted blood require replenishing. Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills supply the elements needed for this.
The third period is "change of life" and this is the period when she is most liable to heart and nerve troubles.
A tremendous change is taking place in the system, and it is at this time many chronic diseases manifest themselves. Fortify the heart and nerve system by the use of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and thus live over this dangerous period. Mrs. James King, Cornwall, Ont., writes: "I have been troubled very much with heart trouble—the cause being to a great extent due to 'change of life.' I have been taking Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills for some time, and mean to continue doing so, for I can truthfully say they are the best remedy I have ever used for building up the system. You are at liberty to use this statement for the benefit of other sufferers."
Price 50 cents per box, three boxes for $1.25. All Dealers. The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Plans for organization on a large scale are under way in several large cities, notably Philadelphia and Chicago. The different national and international unions are sending in their best organizers and the America Federation of Labor is doing the same. Apart from the desire to increase the membership of the trade unions, it is the intention to organize the people on independent political lines, as recommended by President Lincoln and the executive council of the A. F. of L. Between now and next fall it is expected that there will be the desire to form independent political parties in the field, with a resultant increase in the trade union membership of 200,000.
An idea of the strength of organized labor in Great Britain may be gained from an official return with regard to the funds of registered trade unions for the year 1904, which has just been issued by the chief registrar of friendly societies. The total membership for Great Britain and Ireland of the 686 unions making returns was 1,840,000 persons, while their income amounted to $12,420,190, and their expenditure to $1,758,985, the balance of funds at the end of the year being $38,229,020.

The Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen recently initiated seventy-seven new members in the Altona, Pa., lodge.

Descendants of Washington

Mrs. William Lanier Washington nee Brennan
FROM A PAINTING BY F. BOUTWELL
NEW YORK, June 10.—In the Church of the Incarnation Wednesday morning, Miss May Bruce Brennan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Brennan of Louisville, Ky., was married to William Lanier Washington of this city. It was a very quiet wedding, owing to the recent death of the bridegroom's brother, and was witnessed by the author's half dozen relatives of the couple. The bride entered the church with her father, who gave her away. She wore a pale grey chiffon cloth, with a hat of corresponding color, acted as best man. There were no bridesmaids.
Among those who witnessed the ceremony were the bride's parents, her brother, Dr. Robert Emery Brennan, Mrs. H. Irvine Keyser and Mrs. E. Glenn Perrine, of Baltimore, aunts of the bridegroom. There was a later a wedding breakfast, after which Mr. and Mrs. Washington left on a wedding tour.
The bridegroom is a descendant of the same family as President Washington and a direct descendant of Dolly Madison. He gave his bride handsome jewels inherited from his mother, and also some of the historical silver that came from the ancestors of the Washington family.
Mr. and Mrs. Brennan gave their daughter a large chest of silver, and from relatives in Baltimore there were also many handsome pieces of silver. The bride's brothers gave her ornaments of diamonds and pearls. After their wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Washington will remain for a while at the Waldorf and will go to Newport for August.
The bride passed part of last summer in Newport, and during her stay there was a guest of Mrs. Cleopatra L. Best. Next winter Mr. and Mrs. Washington will take a house in this city.

Cures Rheumatism
"I had an attack of Rheumatism—pains near my heart—which increased to such a degree that I became very anxious. I lost my appetite, and an intense itching or heating of the head made life miserable. I asked a druggist, was there nothing he could suggest that would help me, and he replied 'Why not try ABBEY'S SALT?' I did so, and can now state positively, and without solicitation that the Rheumatism has disappeared—my appetite is grand—and the itching of my scalp has ceased.
I suggested to my aged Father and Mother that they should try ABBEY'S SALT for their Rheumatism—and they tell me they have received immense benefit."

LITTLE GROWLING BIRD IN WINDEGO LAND

1. One day, when No-komis had given him a new flint tomahawk, Little Growing Bird asked permission to go down to the creek, Dancing Water, to play. No-komis let him go, but warned him not to get his nice deerskin suit muddy. Of course, Aun-dak, the Crow, had to tag along; so—

2. When they came to the bank of Dancing Water they found Ah-mik, the Beaver, very busy biting away at a birch tree. Now, that is the way Ah-mik chops down the timber he uses to build his house and make a dam so as to raise the water high enough to cover his front door; besides, he thinks the fresh bark is very good to eat. Little Growing Bird thought it was a funny way to chop down a tree, and asked Ah-mik if he were getting in his winter firewood.

3. "Firewood!" said Ah-mik, with scorn, "what do beavers want with firewood? The bark on these limbs is for my family's supper and breakfast, and after that, the sticks come in handy to build an extension to my house. But run away and play; I've a lot of work to do today!"

4. "Well, anyway," said Little Growing Bird, "I can beat you cutting down a tree with my tomahawk." "I'm a very busy man, myself," Ah-mik replied, "and as a rule do not allow idle boys or chattering crows to bother me; but, for once, I'll just have to show you the right way to chop down a tree." So he started biting into his tree with his sharp teeth at a great rate, and Little Growing Bird began to hack away at another one, until—

5. Suddenly, the head of the tomahawk (which had not been fastened on properly) flew off and hit poor Ah-mik as awful whack in the stomach!

6. He jumped so far backward that he cumbled into the creek. He was so excited that he hit the water a terribly loud slap with his tail—which is Ah-mik's

7. Of course, the water splashed all over Little Growing Bird's pretty clothes; and Aun-dak, the Crow, fell in the water, too, and got his feathers soaking wet. They were in a nice fix, but there was nothing else for them to do but to sneak home and try to dry themselves at the camp-fire; but—

8. What happened to Little Growing Bird when he got there? You can guess from the picture! Chee Muk-quaw, the Big Bear, was on his way home from a bee-hum, when he heard the racket; so, he seized around until things had quieted down, and then—

9. When Little Growing Bird came out, in a blanket, he took him on his knee and comforted him, and gave him something nice and sweet out of his dinner pail. Now, if you should ever see a beaver, very busy working, and should disturb him by throwing a stone in the stream, he will, very likely, bring his tail down slap, bang, on the water, and try to splash you! He knows the way to punish little boys that frighten him—just like Ah-mik, his cousin, did to Little Growing Bird, once upon a time.

FASTIDIOUS ATTIRE SEEN AT SUMMER HOPS

The toilettes now shown for Summer hop wear evidence many simplifications. The early splendors of the season are also seen, but it seems more the thing to have even-tinged gowns of medium cost than one very fine one.

There are many lovely ways of putting on the narrower skirts. Sometimes a skirt has innumerable little frills edged with single, double or triple ruffles of the lace, the frills forming V panels between others of some decorative sort.

and the very low waist is hung over the shoulders by a narrow scarf band held by a jeweled clasp, below which, leaving the shoulders exposed, is an infinitesimal sleeve. Pale rose chiffon taffetas forms the underbody of this superb gown and shapes the deep girde. Shoes of rose satin with square brilliant buckles, long white suede gloves and a white canopy for the hair, are elegant accessories.

feasible for modest wear made of tinted or white cashmere, lined with silk and with lace trimmings. A pretty trifle in jewelry is a hair neck chain of pure gold in the old fish scale mesh. This is sold for the incredibly small sum of $5, and for $10 more a pendant in baroque pearl and brilliant can be bought.

ribbon into designs on each side of some dressy bodice and bringing the ends down on each side the front to hang loose to the bottom of the skirt.

A charming Paris evening frock is somehow always easier to get than day styles, the gay tastes of this nation turning always most spontaneously to the prettier modes.

As to form, the gowns supplied for summer hop wear have rarely the distinctively evening essence of those seen in winter. They are in the main more like the frockes a stylish girl would put on any night for dinner, for most often the décolletage is only medium low and the sleeves elbow length.

One of the smart ways in which to wear a sash is to draw the wide ribbon in soft folds over a boned bodice lining and at the back twist the ribbon loosely on each side the fastenings.

Another smart method of wearing a sash is to knot the ribbon in a loose knot above double loops and ends, or just single ends, and wear the knot either on one side or at the back, according to the style of gown.

With ribbon, net, point d'esprit, Swiss, etc., the Dresden ribbons showing delicately colored flowers on a white background are charming and inexpensive garnitures. Several organdy frocks seen were beautifully decorated with garter ribbons in sage green color, with a sharply contrasting border.

In the drawing pictured are given five hop gowns, in the various degrees of elegance seen. In the larger picture a toilette designed for Stratton, where hotel life is one round of fine dress, is shown by the central figure. For this white net delicately spotted with an embroidered dot is used. The flounces of the skirt are of white chiffon edged with rose satin ribbon, the embroideries in being embroidered roses in natural colors in pale rose chiffon. The bodice here displays the same garniture scheme, trimming the wide skirt. A novelty lace, dotted with raised balls of silk is put on in a full ruff around the V-shaped neck and trims the ruffled cuff of the puffed elbow sleeves. Pale blue taffetas, cut bias, girdles the waist and falls in the back in a shaped sash.

Many sash ribbons have borders of satin or fancy stripes and checks, and others have a broche center with wide satin borders.

For organdies in solid color or pure white no more lovely a trimming is offered than plain footings. Put on a flounce edge, as insertions or in ruchings of various sorts, this dainty net lace effects a look of great distinction. Crisp taffeta ribbons in the frock color also add to this, and if the figure is slim the wide belt may end in a floating sash. Anything which contributes to a girlish look is desired this season, especially for evening wear, and so common and open is this intention that many of the garments for middle age are quite juvenile. For Swiss, narrow French or German Valenciennes in the lace most productive of stylish results; but if elaborate effects are desired, quantities of the lace should be bought.

is generally informal, following Saturday night dinners or some modest entertainment. A medium round skirt, with a distinct and fitted bodice, girdled high, is the model most seen. Sometimes the skirt finally but it is only to a slight degree, and a dancer should have all the art of its proper disposal before attempting such a feat. Girls who know the awkward risk of a train lift them by a loop ribbon sewed in a left breadth, and hung over the arm. This management of the fluffy, too-petulant petticoat, however, may be made an added grace if the fair maid knows the poees necessary.

In the way of evening accessories a little Summer cloak ordered for Bar Harbor service is more than worthy of mention. This is a short cavalier cape of soft pink taffetas lined with chiffon and ruched with deep cream lace. But at the back of this ravishing little mantle was its most adorable feature, a wide, loose hood with more coquettish ruchings, all made of lace. Similar capes would be because they were generally in some other city. First we issued our bait in high-sounding literature that offered: 'A Complete Course of Lessons Embodying Hindoo and Oriental Methods in Telepathy, Hypnotism, Personal Magnetism, Magic Healing, Personal Influence and the Art of Demonstrating the Wonders of Oriental Occultism.'

The invocation and conjurations of the spirits of the hidden world. Mediumship—how to call, to influence, to hold and dismise spirits, both good and evil. The secret methods used by the Eastern philosophers to produce somnambulism or trance in hypnotic subjects.

The books were wonderful compositions—if anybody ever understood one, he did more than I could do. The most mysterious passages usually ended with: 'See pages— and— in our newest book, So and so. Then the poor huffer, puzzled and almost crazy, would send posthaste for the other book, and it would cost several dollars extra.

Women in love who had designs on men of wealth furnished somewhat of a business. They would pay almost anything, if they thought they could get the goods. I remember one woman of means who took lessons in spiritualism as a side issue. Every time the table rapped it led her to give up $100.

Another woman—she must have been 30 years old or so; she was positively daffy about him. Could she have his wandering affections? Certainly. She took courses in everything in sight at a cost of $200, and got four diplomas. I guess that young man is running very well.

Being in love with a wealthy banker, a woman residing on Riverside Drive came to us with her troubles. She was always delighted when I passed into a hypnotic trance—transform myself, as it were, into the other man—and reveal to her the secrets of his heart. No, she never caught him; he got wise to her game finally and sprung the blow number one in this way.

IS MARS MAKING ITS LAST GASP?

From A Photograph Showing the Canal System of Mars

Imagine an entire world almost at its last gasp; its people working desperately to sustain life by every artificial means that their command. Imagine that these people realize the hopelessness of their task; that the end is slowly but surely approaching—and you picture mentally the conditions on the planet Mars as it is believed to be to-day.

According to recognized lights, the people of Mars are much further advanced in civilization and scientific knowledge than we of the earth. For one thing, they had several million years' start. This very fact now leads to their advanced undoing—and the fate of the Martians suggests what may befall earth's inhabitants some day.

Photographs of the Martian canals—the first really successful ones ever taken—were made recently at Flagstaff, Ariz. Better than words, they depict the sad plight of the people of that planet. Slowly, but steadily, Mars is sinking into the arid, waterless lifelessness, contention of the moon. Even now the areas of vegetation apparently are confined to the vicinities of the numerous canals, and these canals evidently were cut by the Martians to irrigate all of the planet visible is interlaced by these canals, and all the signs of life that can be seen are grouped about the artificial waterways.

That the Martians are pumping desperately for existence, that they depend now not only upon their wonderful system of canals to support vegetation, is evidenced by the records, as the Prince of France approached through one of ages its highest manifestations, must gradually recede, as the Prince of France marched up the hill and then marched down again.

It has been calculated that these canals surpass any of the great works of similar kind ever carried on upon earth. Some years ago J. Orr, of the British Astronomical Association, estimated that it would require an army of 200,700 men, working for 1000 years, to construct the canal system visible upon Mars. These waterways run for thousands of miles over the surface, always seeking the most direct route for the polar caps, where the ice and snow melt in the spring, to the places where vegetation is apparent. Constantly intersecting, sometimes several making a junction, it is evident that the canals are artificial and were constructed under a general and intelligent scheme of irrigation.

Interior of the Lowell Observatory at Flagstaff, Arizona

So far as known, there is no natural explanation to account for the change. The only solution of the problem is that the canals have been dug by an intelligent and highly civilized people in their efforts to prolong existence upon a sphere that is gradually but surely becoming an arid waste like the moon. Mars has no oceans; it has an atmosphere, but this is only about one-third the density of that of the earth, affording just that much less protection against heat and cold.

It is a favorite theory with some leading scientists that life, having approached through one of ages its highest manifestations, must gradually recede, as the Prince of France marched up the hill and then marched down again. Mars is long since past middle life; it is getting well into the late autumn of universal time. It has reached a state half way between the present fertile condition of our globe and the lifeless, arid waste of the moon, and is steadily continuing to draw nearer the fate of the latter body.

The planet is, therefore, like a sinking ship, able to stay afloat as long as its people work desperately at the pumps. In this case the pumps are the canals, which draw the life-giving and vegetation nourishing water down from the icy polar regions and maintain zones of safety in which the Martians may congregate during the last centuries of their existence. It has been calculated that these canals surpass any of the great works of similar kind ever carried on upon earth. Some years ago J. Orr, of the British Astronomical Association, estimated that it would require an army of 200,700 men, working for 1000 years, to construct the canal system visible upon Mars.

which has already overtaken the moon. This thrilling but pathetic struggle of a world against extinction is watched with intense interest by the people of the earth, because this planet seems headed toward a similar destiny, although several million years may elapse ere the people of the earth find themselves in the present plight of the Martians.

Of all the planets in space, too, the earth and Mars more closely resemble each other, they have more characteristics in common, so that we are naturally interested in what transpires upon the sister globe. Mars is considerably smaller than the earth, being only 4200 miles in diameter, while the earth is 7918. Were the substance composing the earth made into seven balls, each would be as large as Mars. Owing to its greater distance from the sun, Mars receives but one-half the amount of heat and light to which the people of the earth are accustomed.

From the lessened force of gravity on the planet, its inhabitants might be considerably larger and stronger than ours, without being clumsy or impeded by their own weight. In fact, this is regarded by some as being indicated by the elaborate canal system they have constructed, which, perhaps, may be supplemented by other systems of internal improvements and scientific progress of which other worlds are ignorant. Every evidence points to the possession and application of a high order of engineering skill there. Climatic conditions are much like those of the earth. Although the planet's distance from the sun would indicate that Mars is much colder than our globe, yet various phenomena as to vegetation convince astronomers that it is not yet too cold to permit animal life to attain a high state of development. Just what effect the conditions obtaining have upon physical structure is not known. All agree, however, that, if the laws of evolution are correct, the people of Mars must have attained a much higher intellectual plane than we, because they had several million years' start. They are just that much nearer the fate of extinction against which they are so desperately battling.
