her husband and family, and her sister came up the river in a tow boat. They landed at what was then called "the time" the time the more condition of this part of the country was a pretty low ebb. Each of the settlements made a small clearing, built some rough buildings, and an amusement of a very primitive order. If a man wanted to command respect he did it by getting some other man. If he could whip a big man, it would be some honor to whip a small man. The "frictions" of those days were very strenuous, and the men were very powerful.

DEATH ENDS CAREER OF GENERAL BOOTH

Head of Salvation Army Went to His Reward Tuesday Night

Left Name of His Successor in a Sealed Envelope But it is Thought Bramwell Booth Will Be the New Leader--The Veteran Uplifter of Humanity Succumbed to an Operation for Cataract--His Long and Wonderful Career.

It is open and read the formal appointment of King George as commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army. The chief of staff of the Salvation Army, Bramwell Booth, died Tuesday night at his residence in London, England, after a long and wonderful career of humanitarian work. He was 82 years of age.

King George's message was as follows: "I am grieved to hear of the death of the great and noble man who has left a great organizer and a poor whole-hearted and sincere friend who devoted his life to helping them in a practical way. I realize the good wrought by him for his fellow creatures. Today there is a universal mourning for him. I join in it and assure you that your own true sympathy in the heavy loss which has befallen you."

GENERAL WILLIAM BOOTH

London, Aug. 20.—The Reverend William Booth, general and commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army, passed away at 10:13 p.m. on Tuesday night. He was born at Nottingham in 1829.

Children and Letters to Soldiers. "In Darkness—England" and "The Way Out." All profits from the different books and publications have gone towards the support of the various branches of the work. General Booth has visited almost every country in the world and his recent visit to Canada will be fresh in the minds of many.

General Booth was married to Catherine Mumford in 1855. Mrs. Booth shared largely in the work of her husband and was the author of several books relating to the Salvation Army. She died in 1890 after a painful illness with which she bore her sufferings with Christian fortitude.

General Booth's eldest son had been his chief of staff, managing all the business of the Salvation Army. His second son, Bramwell Booth, had been in charge of the French branch of the Salvation Army. The third son had charge of the Great Britain section, and his second daughter, Mrs. Booth, had supervised the operations in India, the third daughter, Mrs. Booth, had been at the head of the Women's Training Depot established in various parts of London.

FORGOT TO BAKS LOST THOUSANDS

Teller of One Institution Stole at Least $25,000 to Bet on the Races

RICHMOND, A PLUNGER Dropped $10,000 to $12,000 Daily in Effort to Recoup Losses--The Other Clerk's Stealings Were Less, Probably Not Over $5,000.

Toronto, Aug. 20.—The defalcations of Arthur Richmond, the young bank clerk of the Elm street branch of the Bank of Toronto, who attempted suicide, is now estimated at $25,000 as a result of playing the market with money belonging to the bank.

Another department of the chief's complex mind, and one of inestimable value to the Army, was his ability to "organize." Where the line of demarcation between the business man and the organizer was blurred, Booth was a natural. He was a purely business man would naturally look for an immediate result for his efforts, and would not be altogether content to wait until the future.

TELLS OF TRAPPING ALDERMEN

Burns' Detective on the Stand Posed as Railroad Agent and Easily Bought Councilmen

"Honest Tom" Glennan Given $1,000 for His Vote, But He Returned it When He Saw He Was in a Trap—Eighteen City Fathers Charged With Bribery.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 20.—The testimony of W. J. Brennan, a Burns operative, was the feature of the police court examination today of "Honest Tom" Glennan, the first of the eighteen aldermen, recently arrested on bribery charges, to be tried in court. It was Brennan's evidence that resulted in the arrests of the eighteen aldermen and Common Council Clerk Edward Schreier, the latter having since made a complete confession.

Divided into the three classes, British, Continental, and United States, the comparative figures for the first three months of this and last year are as follows: British—For April, May and June of present year, 69,919, as compared with 71,947 for the corresponding period last year, or a decrease of 1,128.

Trapped the Aldermen. The detective then told of getting himself acquainted with the different aldermen, of impressing upon them the urgent desire of the railroad for the right to the street, and of opposition to the proposal that was expressed by several of the councilmen. Finally, he testified, Glennan came to his office and arrangements were made for the closing of the street.

Frenchman Gives Exhibition on Bottom of Seine River, Lasting Many Minutes.

Paris, Aug. 20.—Maurice Fernez, an old sailor, created a mild sensation today by giving an exhibition in the Seine of a simple apparatus he has invented which enables him to remain under water a long time without suffering apparently the slightest inconvenience.

St. Stephen, N. B., Aug. 20.—A shooting case in which a man was taken place Meredith Settlement last night. Three men were traveling through the settlement and called at a house asking for food. No one answering they forced the door when the foremost was shot, receiving the bullet in the hip. His companions, who were evidently trying to get him to a place of safety were forced to abandon him. He was picked up by a team and taken to Honeysdale and was brought by this morning's C. P. R. express to Chipman Hospital.

CHAPTER XI

And There Are Social Duties to Perform

The First November

The world had waged on its matter-of-fact way for more than six months now, since that day in April when Philip de Mountford—nuder cover of five months had made his way into Lord Radcliffe's presence; more than five months since the favored nephew had been so unconsciously thrust out of his home.

Spring had yielded to summer, summer given away to autumn, and already winter was treading hard on autumn's heels. The autumn session had filled London with noise and bustle, with political dinner parties and monster receptions, with new plays at all the best theatres, and volumes of ephemeral literature.

And at that was—tonight—wrapped in a dense fog, the first of the season, quite a stranger, too, in London, for scientists had asserted positively that the era of the traditional "pea-sooper" was over; the metropolis would know it no more.

Colonel Harris was in town with his sister, Lady Evelyn, and with her, and swearing at London weather; in true country fashion. He declared that fog paralyzed his intellect that he became positively imbecile, not knowing how to fight his way in the folds of such a black pall. Taxi-cab drivers he mistrusted; in fact, he had all of old sportsman's hatred of mechanically propelled vehicles, whilst he flitted restlessly to bring valuable horses up to town when their death of cold whiff waiting outside in the fog.

So Luke had promised to pilot the party as far as the Danish Legation, which was to dine tonight. This was the only condition under which Colonel Harris would consent to enter one of those con-founded motors.

Colonel Harris had remained loyal to the cause of Luke and his fortunes. It is a way of sportsman's love, and he had never interfered by word or intension in Louis's actions with regard to her engagement.

His daughter was old enough to know her own mind. She liked Luke, and it would be abhorrent to leave him in the lurch, not that the last of the society rats were scurrying to leave the sinking ship. They were doing it, too, in a very proper manner. The invitations which the penniless young man received toward the end of the London season were considerably fewer than those which were showered on him at the beginning before he had realized that Philip de Mountford had come to stay, and would one day be Earl of Radcliffe with a rent roll of eight thousand pounds a year, and the sore need of a

It had all begun with the bridge parties. Luke would no longer play, since he could no longer afford to lose a quarter's income one sitting. Under his hand he had the indifferent shoulders at such losses, and placed blank checks at the dear boy's disposal. Imagine then how welcome Luke was at bridge parties, and how very undesirable now.

Then he could no longer return for hospitable entertainments. He had no home to which to ask smart friends. Lord Radcliffe thought a monster of ill-humor, gave splendid dinner parties at which Luke was quite host. Now it was all give and no take; and the given retired one by one, quite unregretted by Luke, who thus was left the initiate of the society of his friends. They did the turning, quite politely but very effectively. Luke scarcely noticed how he was dropping out of his former circle, but he was not surprised, and really did not care. Moreover his dress clothes were getting shabby.

Tonight at the Langham, when he arrived about seven o'clock so as to have an undisturbed half-hour with his sister, Harris greeted him with outstretched hand and a cordial welcome.

"Hello, Luke, my boy! how goes it with you?"

Louise said nothing, but her eyes welcomed him, and she drew near to him, on to the sofa in front of the fire, and allowed her hand to rest in his, for she knew how he loved the touch of it. There were beginning to say that Louise Harris was getting old: she never had been good-looking, poor thing, but always smart, very smart—now she was losing her smartness, and what remained?

She had come up to town this autumn in last autumn's frocks; and the twins were after all being chaperoned by their mother. Would it be a hard engagement never to be broken off? For Louise Harris married to a poor man! Why, she did not know how to do her hair, and dress, and still worn fastened at the back, and would be for years to come! Louise Harris was no French maid! Cheap corsets and clean gloves! It was unthinkable.

Perhaps the engagement was virtually broken off—anyhow the wedding could never take place.

Unless Philip de Mountford happened to die.

But it did not look as if the engagement was broken off. Not at any rate on the raw November evening, when there was a dense fog outside, but a bright, cheery fire and plenty of light in the little sitting room at the Langham, and Luke sat on the sofa beside Louise, and plain Louise—in last autumn's gown—looking at him with her candid, luminous eyes.

"How is Lord Radcliffe?" asked Colonel Harris.

"Badly," replied Luke. "I am afraid. He looks very feeble, and his asthma I know must bother him. He was always weak in foggy weather."

"He ought to go to Algiers. He always used to."

"I know," assented Luke dejectedly. "Can't something be done? Surely, Luke, you haven't lost all your influence with him?"

"Every bit, sir. Why, I hardly ever see him."

"Hardly ever see him?" ejaculated Colonel Harris, and I am afraid that he swore.

"I haven't been to Grosvenor Square for over six weeks. I am only allowed to see him when Philip is out, or by special permission from Philip. I won't go under such conditions."

"But somebody ought to go," "Edie would be only too willing—if she is allowed."

"What will Reggie Dugan have to say to that?" "Nothing," he replied quietly. "Reggie Dugan has cut off."

"No, he and Philip have joined some new club in Shaftesbury Avenue—'The Veterans' I think it is called."

"Somehow, I don't see how you could be so ungenerous to thrust out of his home."

"I should think not indeed. I wouldn't set foot in such a place."

"It goes these busy evenings, and so does Philip—and it's so bad for Uncle Rad to let late these foggy nights."

"You ought to make an effort and stop in, Luke."

"I had made many efforts, sir. But, as a matter of fact, I had made up my mind to make a final one tonight. Uncle Rad ought to go abroad, and I thought I would try to impress this on Philip. He can't be too busy."

"Oh! can't he?" said Colonel Harris's moustached comment.

"At any rate, if I have no influence, he had a genuine trust in the unpleasantness of the fog, and that best was like as long as it will south."

Louise paused awhile, his face flushed with this expression of derision which must have caused him to picture many a bitter pang. Then he resumed more quickly: "It's rather humiliating, isn't it, to go to that man as a suppliant?"

"Do you insist on your uncle being properly looked after?"

"I don't know," he replied. "I should like to see him."

"I don't know," he replied. "I should like to see him."

"I don't know," he replied. "I should like to see him."

"I don't know," he replied. "I should like to see him."

"I don't know," he replied. "I should like to see him."

"I don't know," he replied. "I should like to see him."

"I don't know," he replied. "I should like to see him."

"I don't know," he replied. "I should like to see him."

"I don't know," he replied. "I should like to see him."

"I don't know," he replied. "I should like to see him."

"I don't know," he replied. "I should like to see him."

"I don't know," he replied. "I should like to see him."

to lose a future percentage all of a sudden and he has no private fortune either."

"I heard there were awful rows between the couple and Lord Radcliffe himself turned Luke and the others out of the house."

"And now Philip de Mountford has been murdered."

"It certainly looks very suspicious."

"Something to read about in one's morning papers."

"I shall say and get reserved seats for the trial. I hate a crumb of dough."

"Will they hang him, do you think?"

"If he is found guilty—English justice is no respecter of persons."

"How awful!"

"And what, senseless talk, ignominious marks, were visited on the guilty wince of the fog. They penetrated everywhere, in the lobbies of the theatres, the boudoir of Madame and the smoking room of the reception room of the Danish Legation, and Louise heard the remarks even before she knew the full details of the story.

"It was a real case of 'Don't know what you're doing.'"

"One of the chattering-boxes must have pointed her out to the others."

"Whereupon Louise, serene and smiling, turned to the man in her conversation; one of the chattering-boxes must have pointed her out to the others."

"Please, she said, 'don't stop. I have heard nothing yet. And of course I want to know.'"

"The old man said nothing more. He had spoken at all then it would have been to tell her that he, too, was thinking of Luke, and that there was perhaps not a person whose name he had not thought of at that moment who was not in some way or another—thinking of Luke."

"The hostess came in, elegant and worldly, with a few words to request the pleasure of hearing some more of the singing."

"It is so kind of you," she said, "to offer me a glimpse of your face, you know, and people say you have such a splendid voice that perhaps you would rather not sing tonight."

"I am sure you would rather not sing tonight," she said kindly.

"Indeed, Countess, why should you think that?"

"They are stiff, these English and oh! they have no feeling, no sentiment!"

"The English have no heart! She sings and she has no heart!"

"The tale had to be told."

"And whilst the morning papers were unfolded by millions of English men and women, and the details of the mysterious crime discussed over eggs and bacon and buttered toast, Philip de Mountford, the young man whose name was on the London police mortuary chamber of a London police station, quivered he had been conveyed in the same cab, a palatine, as Louise Harris, who had been enacted within their precincts."

"Lord Radcliffe had been accused at 10 o'clock on the night of the murder of the police, who came to break the news to him. It was not late, and the old man was not yet in bed. He had opened the front door, his hair, his eyes, his hands were explained—were speaking their evening more agreeably elsewhere.

Lord Radcliffe, face to face with the awful event, strove by every power at his command to remain dignified and impassive. The lessons taught by generations of ancestors had to bear fruit now, when a representative of the ancient name stood confronting the greatest crime that one of his kind has ever had to face—the brutal, vulgar fact of a common curder. The realities of a sordid life brought within the four walls of a solemn, aristocratic old house.

"THE DAY"

Pierce and Braggart Gerhain Poem of Victory Over Britain.

Up rose the dawn; we saw With gladness and with awe The ships of England rise To our expectant eyes. Set on the clear sea looms Oh! that great and grim Those bulwarks of our foes, And we cannot them as they rise, One by one.

Under the sun: Three-four-hundred-and-twenty No more. Then we knew That The Day was ours indeed!

The battle is a dramatic representation in vigorous verse, intense and unswerving in its lesson:

But from the Aegean bow, Swinging steady now Roared the first guns. High then the signal flew, Passing from crew to crew— "Spring great guns! we know, 'Himmel mit Uns!'"

On the fierce English bore; Led by the Conqueror, But she is stretched sore Ere she can looke; Hulled by a submarine, Gliding unperceived, Unseen into the lines between, Down—down she goes!

Tonnet! the fight that fell! None such a strife may tell; Under red storms of shell Each ship becomes a hell, Bloody and battered; The wind, afraid, grew still, The cold sea seem to thrill; Fear shook the world until Death snatched materiel!

While the shells shriek and rave, Lashing the tortured wave, There as our lines they drive Like dragons waving, Nigher and even higher, Tempests of steel and fire. Burst on them like God's ire— Back they go, reeling!

Look where the huge Orion, Twist Odin and Gefion, Spelt like a wounded lion On the crowded water, Clove by our batteries, Down sinks the Hercules, Yet never vessel flees, Out of the slaughter!

WOMEN'S INSTITUTES AT FLORENCEVILLE AND CENTREVILLE

Florenceville, Aug. 20—At a meeting held in the Assembly Hall of the Consolidated School at Florenceville, on Monday afternoon, sixty-two men and women listened to addresses on Women's Institute Work.

The meeting was opened with a demonstration on cookery by Miss Daisy E. Harrison, of Grand Point (N. B.), a graduate of domestic science from Macdonald College, after which Miss E. R. Smith, a trained nurse, gave an interesting and practical talk on Home Nursing. Miss Smith is an experienced institute worker, and after giving the ladies a short account of this work in Ontario found them ready to organize with a membership of twenty-three.

The meetings will be held the second Tuesday in each month at 7.30 p. m. The September meeting will meet at the home of Mrs. Ross, the president.

The following ladies were elected officers: President, Mrs. D. W. Ross; vice-president, Mrs. D. Fisher; vice-president, Mrs. B. Charlton; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. R. Smith; directors, Mrs. C. H. Knaprick, Mrs. E. Smith, of Toronto (Ont.), a speaker on the subject of Home Nursing. The aim and organization of the Women's Institute were then discussed at some length and a branch meeting was organized with the promise of seventeen members to begin with.

The following ladies were elected officers: President, Mrs. Ed. West; vice-presidents, Mrs. Andrew Beckwith, secretary-treasurer, Miss Fay But, Directors, Mrs. Mrs. H. Peppers, Mrs. Chas. Long, Mrs. Anson marginson, Auditors, Mrs. John McLean, Miss Mildred White.

The ladies desired to hold their meetings on the second Tuesday of every month at 7.30 p. m. All the ladies of Centreville and vicinity are cordially invited to attend the September meeting. Mrs. Pepper will give a talk on the subject of Invalid Cookery. The women are asked to come prepared on this part in a discussion on the topic and also on the general subject of the organization of the Women's Institute.

CHANGES IN MT. ALLISON CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC STAFF

Sackville, N. B., Aug. 18—The vacancy on the staff of the Mount Allison Conservatory of Music created by the resignation of Miss Nellie Amelia Clark has been filled by the appointment of Miss A. H. Branton, a sister of Prof. J. Noel Branton, director of the conservatory since Miss Branton was a student at the Royal Conservatorium at Stuttgart, Germany, for three years, under such instructors as Professors Schneider and Spedel. For a considerable time Miss Branton was mistress at the High School for Girls at Liskeard, England, and for a time also filled the position of head mistress at the American College at Sautari, Constantinople. Miss Branton possesses a very pleasant mezzo-soprano voice and understands how to lead vocal music with surety and understanding. Miss Branton will accompany her brother to Canada and will remain in Europe until September 21, and are expected to arrive at Sackville about the first of September.

Prof. McLeary, who takes the place on the Conservatory staff vacated by Prof. Pickard, as assistant director and professor of piano and organ, will sail from Glasgow on the Scandinavian Aug. 21.

STORIES WANT A TRUCE NOW

Those who take note of such matters will have observed that the Liberal newspapers have been much more fair in dealing with Mr. Borden in connection with his London visit and his talk on our imperial relations than were the Conservative organs. Sir Wilfrid Laurier was in Mr. Borden's place. There is on the part of the Liberal newspapers a disposition to accept Mr. Borden as a prime minister of Canada who, while abroad, is entitled to be regarded as a representative of the country rather than of a party. His speeches while in England have not been subjected to fastidious and hostile interpretation by the Liberal press here. No political leader in this country ever received greater consideration than Mr. Borden from first to last. One explanation of this fact is that Sir Wilfrid Laurier is a courteous man himself.

BOOST GOOD NEWS

Highly Important Statement

By Wealthy Breeds Who Came Recently

Greatly Impressed Opportunities Here— Good Social Conditions— John a Natural Industries and Agricultural Possibilities— Province Tremendous

The Telegraph prints here more of highly important news regarding this city. New Brunswick maritime provinces generally, and particularly the western part of the province, which recently made a tour through the maritime provinces, and who were in the Dominion of the West.

If people in St. John, and elsewhere, sometimes blind to the opportunities or are inclined to be ungenerous because of long familiarity, it is refreshing to read the opinions of these wealthy and influential men from the west, and rural of the observance of the shrewd.

These men were greatly interested in the opportunities here and in the rapid expansion during war and population must be kept in mind.

The first statement is that the Dominion of the West is the most fertile and compact part of England. He has given the maritime provinces to Wake Up, He Says:

This section of Canada has attracted the attention of the people of the world, and it is the province not being brought in a similar manner to what the Dominion has been brought into the world. If these provinces will do better, and better than their natural resources of power and cheap water power, they should not become the province of the collection of the Centre and the east of Australia, and the great port of the Dominion.

The Dominion of the West is a natural center for the collection of the Centre and the east of Australia, and the great port of the Dominion.

St. John's Great A. J. Stark Brown, of L. of Brunsmeld, Ltd., British colonies, Ltd., and various other companies. Dear Mr. Palmer—You are of my opinion of the many fine things that have happened in this until this journey to Canada as given a thought. I knew from my visit in 1901 that it was a fine country, but it is only in my mind, began to talk about it, and embraced a big country covered by it. I knew also that great developments were going on in the north-west. The reason for this lack of interest is partly due to the paucity of booming which is going on for several years, and partly to the fact that served by the C. P. R. an absence of enterprise in maritime provinces theme.

My eyes have been opened to the fact that the Dominion of the West is a natural center for the collection of the Centre and the east of Australia, and the great port of the Dominion.

OBITUARY

Abram Smith. Salisbury, N. B., Aug. 19.—Isaac Smith, Fred Smith and Mrs. Sutton came to Salisbury last week from their homes in Massachusetts owing to the serious illness of their father, Abram Smith, Mr. Smith passed away at his home here at 7 o'clock Saturday evening. He is survived by his wife and grown up family of three sons and six daughters. The sons are Isaac and Frederick, of Massachusetts, and William, at home. The daughters are Misses Eliza and Ida M., at home; Mrs. Robbins, of Edmonton, and Mrs. Alfred Parker, Mrs. Howard Fowlsworth and Mrs. Sutton, residents of Massachusetts. Mr. Smith, who was highly respected, was born in England eighty-one years ago and came out with the people to Prince Edward Island when a child. He was married to an Island lady fifty-six years ago and came to Salisbury with his family about thirty-five years ago, taking a position as car wheel inspector on the Intercolonial railway here, which position he held up to a few years ago when he retired on his service pension. For many years he was a prominent member of the Salisbury Methodist church and will be greatly missed not only by his church but in the community generally.

Mrs. Daniel Oughlan. Wednesday, Aug. 21. The death of Ethel, widow of Daniel Oughlan, took place yesterday at the home of her son-in-law, W. O'Meara, Doreen avenue. She was the daughter of Alexander Mott, of Annapolis, and is survived by three sons, Daniel, Frederick and Len, of this city, and one daughter, Mrs. M. O'Neill. Her husband died four years ago. The funeral will take place tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock from the residence of P. M. O'Neill, Douglass street, St. Peter's church for requiem high mass at 9 o'clock.

Mrs. Walter Baxter. Wednesday, Aug. 21. The death of A. Baxter, wife of Walter Baxter, took place yesterday morning. She is survived by her husband and one sister, Mrs. Laura Holdsworth, Lynn (Mass.). The funeral will take place at 2 o'clock this afternoon from her late residence, St. David street. Services will commence at 2:30 o'clock. Mrs. Baxter was highly thought of and a great number of friends will regret the loss of her passing away.

A. J. Stewart. Wednesday, Aug. 21. The death of a well known resident of St. John occurred yesterday morning at the General Public Hospital, when Andrew J. Stewart passed away after an illness of about three weeks, suffering from a stroke of paralysis which he sustained while in Boston on a vacation. He was a well known in this city and elsewhere who will be mourned by his friends. He was 66 years of age and was a native of Scotland. He was married to Mrs. Stewart, who was sixty-four years of age and was the owner and had lived practically all his life here. In his younger days he was in the soap manufacturing business with his father and was also in the office of the City of St. John. He was a prominent member of the City Council and was employed for some time as clerk. Later he went with the Robert Reid Co., and was then with the City of St. John, where he was recognized as a valuable and capable employee. He was also a member of No. 2 fire department.

Mrs. George Foster. The death of Mrs. Mary A. Foster, widow of George Foster, occurred Monday morning at the home of her son-in-law, J. F. Archibald, of St. John. She is survived by four sons and four daughters. The sons are: A. L. Foster, of St. John; W. H. Foster, of St. John; J. A. Foster, of St. John; and James, of this city. The daughters are: Mrs. J. McCullum, Mrs. Stephen Foster, Mrs. Charles Garfield and Mrs. Wm. Gibbons, all of St. John. Ernest E. Hunter. Ernest E. Hunter, who was an active member of the First Baptist church, Spring Hill, and a member of the board of trustees, died from inflammation of the brain early last week, Thursday morning at his home, 44 Cedar street. He had been in poor health four months. June 4 he went with his devoted wife to Perry Point (N. B.), where it was hoped that the change of air would be beneficial. For a month he visited at the home of one of Mr. Hunter's sisters. From the date of their arrival back home, July 4, Mr. Hunter failed rapidly. He had been a respected citizen of Somerville, twenty-three years, and throughout that period he was employed by Messrs. Brock, the well known Boston contractors and builders. When taken ill, Mr. Hunter was superintending the reconstruction of the Boston custom house. He has charge of the construction of the new Harvey's dental parlors and the Charles river shelter. Prior to his connection with the local Baptist church he was a member of the Inman square Baptist church, Cambridge, which he served as superintendent of the Sunday school; for several years he taught a class of young men in the Sunday school of the Spring Hill Baptist church.

INCOMING EXPRESS KILLS BOY AND INJURES ANOTHER

Harry McFarland Dies of Terrible Injuries Received at Pettitcodiac, and Russell Bannister is Badly Shaken Up—Lads were Driving Over Crossing Near Station When Engine Struck Them With Terrific Force, Hurling Them a Distance of 30 Feet.

Trainmen and passengers arriving in the city last evening on the Point du Chene express which connects with the outgoing Boston train, brought word of a shocking accident at Pettitcodiac in which nine-year-old Harry McFarland was killed and Russell Bannister, aged 10, was quite badly injured, by being struck by the train while driving over the railway crossing. The train arrived at Pettitcodiac at 4:20 o'clock yesterday afternoon, on time. Soon before the two lads had been over to S. C. Stockton & Sons barn to harness the horse and drive back to the store. They were on the crossing and started for the store which is only a short distance from the barn. It was necessary, however, to cross the track. They reached the crossing and were driving over it, before they noticed the oncoming train, which was then almost upon them. Had they continued to drive quickly over the crossing the danger might have been avoided, but, instead, they turned back to the horse and in so doing they were struck by the engine, young McFarland being hurled about thirty feet to the right and the Bannister boy about the same distance to the left, while the wagon was smashed to atoms. The horse escaped uninjured. The brakes were applied but it was too late. McFarland was picked up unconscious and was quickly conveyed to a building belonging to the Musard Hotel, which the other lads, whose injuries were not serious, was immediately conveyed to his home. McFarland's leg was terribly lacerated and completely severed below the knee, while the other leg was also frightfully mangled. He had a bad gash over the left eye and was terribly bruised about the face. The Bannister boy was badly bruised and shaken up, and received a nasty cut on the head. He will recover. Dr. P. W. Fleming, Dr. Charles King and Dr. Nathaniel Ayer, were summoned and dressed the wounds.

A long distance telephone message to the Telegraph last night was to the effect that McFarland never regained consciousness and died about 8 o'clock last evening. The crossing where the accident occurred is said to be quite dangerous but on the side the boys were driving an incoming train was passing about a mile or more from the crossing. Harry McFarland is the son of John McFarland, of Pettitcodiac, and besides his father leaves his mother and twelve brothers and sisters. The other boy is a son of Hassen Bannister, also of Pettitcodiac.

ROYAL PARTY WELCOMED BY ST. ANDREWS PEOPLE

Great Crowds in Town Greet Them—The Duke Dedicates Prince Arthur School.

Special to The Telegraph. St. Andrews, N. B., Aug. 22.—St. Andrews has never looked gay, never has its streets been filled with such a large number of splendid equipages, never has there been so many people gathered within its borders as there were this afternoon on the occasion of the public reception of the royal party.

The party walked to the head of the wharf where they entered carriages and preceded by the band, moved toward the new school building. The school children were massed on either side of King street and welcomed the Royal visitors by waving flags and scattered flowers along the way. Arrived at the school, a patriotic chorus was sung by the children. This was followed by the presentation of the civic address by Mayor Armstrong.

Witness said he saw Ray Vye the night before he left town and advised him not to go. Vye blamed Ferguson and Murray for getting him into trouble. After Vye told him that he might have some information about another matter, that might be of use to him and witness went back to Moncton. Vye was then attending an automobile school and did not want to leave but said that if an inquiry were started all the authorities had to do was to "shoot the wires" and he would come right along.

Witness said his reports were made to Messrs. Brady and Evans. Brady refused the matters to Ottawa for advice and sent Messrs. Bell and Alward came to Moncton from Ottawa and made inquiries. Witness said the counter-spying on the passes he examined did not appear to have all been done by the same person. Tingley said that one morning after he began inquiring into the pass matter Dr. Murray came to his house and said he had used some passes but thought they were genuine ones and all right to use. Murray said he had obtained the passes from Vye. At the conclusion of Tingley's evidence the inquiry was adjourned till Wednesday next at 11 o'clock.
