

Fortieth Anniversary of Christ Church

On Thursday, November 13th, the fortieth anniversary of the opening of Christ Church was fitly commemorated by three inspiring services in the Church, and by a sumptuous anniversary dinner and supper in the basement. The weather was very favorable, being bright in the morning, though cloudy in the afternoon.

A large congregation assembled for the Holy Communion service at 11.00 a.m. The Rev. G. W. Swayne, L.Th., rector of Bath and Ernestown, and a former rector of this parish, was the celebrant. Canon F. D. Woodcock, of Brockville, read the epistle, and the Rev. George Code, M.A., rector of Newbyrne and Lombardy, also a former rector, read the gospel. There were about 70 communicants. The Rev. L. E. Davis, M.A., rector of St. Paul's Church, Brockville, and Rural Dean of Leeds, preached an able and inspiring sermon from Nehemiah 3:28 and 4:6, "For the people had a mind to work", emphasizing unity, faithfulness and perseverance, as being factors in successful work.

The musical part of the service was beautifully rendered by the large surplined choir under the leadership of Mrs. V. O. Boyle. The anthem was entitled "Christian the Morn Breaks Sweetly O'er Thee", the soprano solo being taken by Mrs. Boyle in her clear powerful soprano.

After the service the congregation repaired to the basement where a most appetizing chicken and meat dinner was served, with pies and salads and cakes in abundance.

At three o'clock in the afternoon an informal service was held in the church. The opening hymn was "Blest Be the Tie that Binds", and the prayers were read by the rector, Rev. V. O. Boyle, M.A., B.D., who also presided.

The first speaker was Rev. A. H. Coleman, who was rector of Leeds and Lansdowne Rear from 1872 to 1878. This pioneer clergyman now over four score years, reminisced on olden times and told of the hardships and difficulties and sacrifices of the early days.

Canon F. D. Woodcock spoke next and paid high tribute to the love and devotion of the church people of former days and urged the present generation to carry on the work they so ably began.

The first rector of the parish of Lansdowne Rear and Athens, was the Rev. R. N. Jones, who undertook the task of building the church. The corner stone was laid in June, 1883, and the church was opened on Thursday, November 13th, 1884. The rector read a letter from Mrs. Jones expressing her regret at being unable to be present at the fortieth anniversary, and conveying her good wishes for a successful day. A letter was also read from Rev. C. E. S. Radcliffe, Deseronto, in which he paid a glowing tribute to the character and work of the late Rev. R. N. Jones, who had been a personal, as well as a college friend of his.

The second rector of the parish was the Rev. Wm. Wright, who had charge for fifteen years, from 1889 to 1907. A letter was read from his widow expressing her inability to be present, but extended her congratulations and good wishes. His son, the Rev. J. deP. Wright, M.A., B.D., rector of St. Luke's church, Kingston, spoke briefly, expressing his pleasure at being present and noting the many improvements in the church since his boyhood days.

The third rector was the Rev. R. B. Patterson, M.A., now rector of Woodbridge, who was incumbent from 1901 to 1912. Mr. Patterson was present and spoke at length, recalling many pleasant memories of his associations with the parish, and telling something of his peregrinations since.

The fourth rector was the Rev. W. G. Swayne, L.Th., now rector of Bath and Ernestown, who was rector from 1912 to 1918. Mr. Swayne referred to the improvements made during his incumbency. The surplined choir was started, the chancel window raised and beautified, and the church re-decorated in its present color. He expressed the hope that the church people would be as loyal in the future as the past and accomplish great things for the Kingdom of God.

The Rev. George Code, M.A., now rector of Newbyrne and Lombardy, who was rector of this parish from 1918 to 1920, then spoke briefly. He regretted having to resign the parish on account of ill-health and referred to the "flu" epidemic and the Anglican Forward Movement as being two outstanding events during his short ministry.

Mr. A. E. Donovan, who presented the church with a silver communion service forty years ago, and which is still in use to-day, spoke briefly. He recalled being present at the twenty-fifth anniversary in 1909 and compared the old fashioned days with modern times and noted several scientific conveniences to-day, unknown to our forefathers. After several humorous reminiscences he concluded by expressing his good wishes for a prosperous future.

The Rev. H. E. Warren, M.A., B.D., pastor of the Athens Methodist Church, brought greetings from his congregation and reviewed briefly the past hundred years of missionary effort in Canada.

The Rev. G. G. Upham, pastor of the Baptist Church, Athens, extended the hearty congratulations of his congregation and sounded the note of sociability and also of fraternity among the churches to-day, which had not been so closely heard in the past.

Leslie Burnham, baritone, sang a beautiful solo, "A Voice in the Cathedral" (Adams).

Rev. A. H. Coleman pronounced the benediction and after the singing of the hymn, "Watch and Pray", a very inspiring meeting came to a close.

A delicious supper was then served in the basement to about 200 people.

The church was filled to overflowing for the evening service, which began at 7.30, the choir and the clergy proceeding up the aisle singing the hymn "Rejoice, the Lord is King".

The service was in charge of past rector, T. Rev. R. B. Patterson read the service and prayers, the Rev. George Code read the first lesson, the Rev. W. G. Swayne read the second lesson, and the Rev. J. deP. Wright, the son of a former rector, preached an eloquent sermon on the duty of thanksgiving, using as his text Psalm 91, "I will give thanks unto Thee, O Lord with my whole heart".

A choir of 25 voices, assisted by an orchestra of three pieces, provided a musical treat. The anthem, "Lift up Your Voice", was exceptionally well rendered, the quartette part being taken by Miss Kathleen Taylor, Miss Victoria Lee, Geoffrey Goodbody and Rev. V. O. Boyle. The orchestra selection was "Now the Day is Over", the solo part being played on the cornet by Lawrence Taylor, accompanied by Mrs. Boyle on the organ, Wesley Morris, clarinet, and Raymond Taylor, saxophone. The duet, "Consider and Hear Me, O Lord My God", was most acceptably rendered by Rev. V. O. and Mrs. Boyle.

Other clergymen present were Rev. A. H. Coleman, Rev. S. E. Morton, M.A., Lyndhurst; Rev. Thomas F. Dowdell, M.A., B.D., Lyn. The Rev. Rural Dean Davis closed a most impressive and inspiring service with the benediction.

The anniversary services extended to Sunday, November 16th. There was a celebration of Holy Communion at 8.00 a.m. and evening service at 7.00 p.m. The special preacher was the Rev. W. G. Swayne, who preached in his usual eloquent manner from the text, "That which remaineth is glorious", I Corinthians, 3:11.

The choir again rendered delightful music. Miss Kathleen Taylor and Miss Victoria Lee sang beautifully the duet, "The Sabbath Bell", (Shelley).

The anthem, "Abide With Me", showed careful shading and splendid music. The solo parts being taken by Misses Taylor and Lee and Rev. V. O. Boyle. The orchestra played a selection from the cantata "The Star", which was most artistically rendered, the cornet solo being taken by Lawrence Taylor, accompanied by the organ, clarinet and saxophone.

The fortieth anniversary will long be remembered as one of the most helpful and inspiring events in our parish history, linking the prosperous present with the noble past, and creating a good hope for the future.

The proceeds from the dinner and supper were $147 and the collections amounted to $54.

A World at Peace

Rev. H. E. Warren, M.A., B.D., gave a splendid post-armistice day address in the Methodist Church on Sabbath evening, using as text, Matt. 26:52. Though Christ believed in force when imperative, as instanced on the occasion of His cleansing the temple, yet the passage selected indicated His attitude toward war, even a war of defence. Offensive warfare is barbarous, hellish, inexcusable.

The Great War was precipitated, not because royalty was slain—but because of boundaries, economic rivalry and international jealousy. Think of the stupendous cost of the war in human sorrow and suffering! It has taken years to compile statistics, but it is estimated that thirteen millions were slain, twenty millions were disabled, nine millions were made orphans, and five millions were made widows. The stricken ones were not the old and decrepit but the flower of youth and middle age. What a financial loss the war entailed! Three hundred billions of dollars were wasted! At least two nations gankrupt, and others trembling on the verge. Then, on the moral side, the juggling of facts and figures, intended to mislead each other, engendered deceit among the nations and produced a lack of confidence which is lamentable. But there is a revulsion of feeling against war, not only among the entente powers, but among the central powers as well; the world is feeling that war must go. There are various solutions offered as to how the problem of the abolition of war is to be met. Some say by moral suasion. This is good as far as it goes, but like a short life-line, it does not go far enough. Some say "prepare peace by preparing for war". There is a preparedness which produces peace and there is a preparedness which fosters war, as exemplified by Germany in the years gone by. Then there are the pacifists who cry "peace at any cost". These were characterized as foolish for the safety of the Empire, and the world depended on Great Britain entering the war unprepared though she was for so sudden an outbreak of hostilities.

The Parliament of Nations, in some fifty countries participated in the League of Nations, and all are working together, instead of constructing armaments, it is vastly preferable to erect universities. But the real solution of the question of a worldless war can only be found in living individuals and peoples to know Christ as a personal Saviour, Christ, the Prince of Peace, who, reigning in the hearts and lives of all, will usher in an era of good-will, and then will be realized the dream of the ages, a world at peace.

Have The Best Always

When buying a newspaper the same rule should apply as when buying goods. You want the best for your money. There is one "best" in Canada and it should be in every home. You should have your own local paper without doubt, but you should also have the Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal. It is undoubtedly the greatest family and farm paper on the continent and at the low price of Two Dollars it is a wonderful bargain. This year the Family Herald is giving to each subscriber a chance to win as much as Five Thousand Dollars cash, and each subscriber receives a large calendar with a fascinating picture that would adorn any home. For those who secure new subscribers there are some very handsome rewards, which are described in a catalogue obtainable free.

A World at Peace

Rev. H. E. Warren, M.A., B.D., gave a splendid post-armistice day address in the Methodist Church on Sabbath evening, using as text, Matt. 26:52. Though Christ believed in force when imperative, as instanced on the occasion of His cleansing the temple, yet the passage selected indicated His attitude toward war, even a war of defence. Offensive warfare is barbarous, hellish, inexcusable.

The Great War was precipitated, not because royalty was slain—but because of boundaries, economic rivalry and international jealousy. Think of the stupendous cost of the war in human sorrow and suffering! It has taken years to compile statistics, but it is estimated that thirteen millions were slain, twenty millions were disabled, nine millions were made orphans, and five millions were made widows. The stricken ones were not the old and decrepit, but the flower of youth and middle age. What a financial loss the war entailed! Three hundred billions of dollars worse than wasted! At least two nations gankrapt, and others trembling on the verge. Then, on the moral side, the juggling of facts and figures, intended to mislead each other, engendered deceit among the nations which is lamentable. But there is a revulsion of feeling against war, not only among the entente powers, but among the central powers as well; the world is feeling that war must go. There are various solutions offered as to how the problem of the abolition of war is to be met. Some say by moral suasion. This is good as far as it goes, but, like a short life-line, it does not go far enough. Some say "preserve peace by preparing for war". There is a preparedness which produces peace and there is a preparedness which fosters war, as exemplified by Germany in the years gone by. Then there are the pacifists who cry "peace at any cost". These were characterized as foolish for the safety of the Empire, and the world depended on Great Britain entering the war unprepared though she was for so sudden an outbreak of hostilities.

The Parliament of Nations, in some fifty countries participated in the League of Nations, and all are seeking to inaugurate constructing armistices, it is vastly preferable to erect universities. But the real solution of the question of a worldless war can only be found in living individuals and peoples to know Christ as a personal Saviour, Christ, the Prince of Peace, who, reigning in the hearts and lives of all, will usher in an era of good-will, and then will be realized the dream of the ages, a world at peace.

W.M.S. Open Meeting

As the delegate to the annual district convention was to give her report, it was voted that the November meeting of the W.M.S. would take the form of an open evening session, which was accordingly held at 7.30 p.m. on the 11th inst. in the vestry of the Methodist church, with a large company in attendance. The programme for the month was in charge of Mrs. G. F. Gainford, who spared no pains to make everything the success which it proved to be.

Helpful notions in gold lettering on white cloth were placed about the room, and with the boughs of pressed maple leaves in autumn colorings and the evergreen branches, made an attractive setting for the evening function.

Special mention might be made of the comprehensive report of the district convention at Prescott, given by the delegate-elect, Mrs. (Rev.) C. J. Curtis, also the interesting items gleaned from the centenary celebration of missions the previous week, by Mrs. (Rev.) H. E. Warren. A solo, "God Is Love", was effectively rendered by Miss Pearl Burnham, and was much enjoyed.

Over thirty members of the Pansy Mission Band, of which Mrs. Gainford is president, staged an attractive harvest-time pageant, full of helpful lessons for the days to come. The Harvest Queen and her herald and attendants, the boys with their lessons from nature, the gleaners with their sheaves, the girls with their various leaves, many wearing their badges in gold lettering, made indeed a pretty picture, while the splendid singing of the children added much to the enjoyment of the pageant.

Efficient Farming

CHEATING THE OLD SCRAP PILE.

Few farms, indeed, have no graveyard for old machinery and parts. A passerby, familiar with factory methods, wonders at the dismantled wrecks of mowing machines, once resplendent in shining red and yellow paint, now rusting in a slump of burdock and brambles. Perhaps all that is wrong is a broken axle. A crippled tedder, that might still be kicking out the long windrows of hay in the low meadow on July mornings but for a stripped and toothless gear, and a bent camshaft, disconsolately forms a rusty trellis for wild morning glories.

Dozens of smaller parts are always there, too. A flywheel from the threshing machine, with a chunk missing from the rim. A broken pump handle. Cracked transmission housing from the tractor—how long was the spring plowing delayed while the tractor was laid up waiting for the new one to come in? Plowpoints, dozens of them; and half a hundred small wheels, gears and pinions. Parts from the car and the trucks. Harvester parts, cultivator parts, parts from the gas engine and windmill—no one could name them all.

Such a scrap pile nearly always is to be found on the best managed farms as well as those run by the old methods. In fact, the better equipped the farm, the larger is likely to be the heap of discarded metal parts. Modern machinery converts the up-to-date farm into a well ordered manufacturing plant. This situation is followed by the manufacturing plant's problem—the maintenance and repair of machinery.

Besides the fact that it is an unsightly heap of junk, possibly even dangerous to children and to live stock, a haven for field mice and a possible fire hazard from the tall dry stalks of the over-growing weeds, what does this scrap pile mean? What significance has it to the owner of the place?

It is a monument to waste. Every piece on the scrap pile has had to be replaced. From the mower to the smallest sprocket every item was once important and necessary, and when thrown away a new part had to be bought so work could go on.

Industrial plants, faced with the same problem, would weld these impaired parts. Many scrap piles representing thousands of dollars in machinery have been wiped out, never to reappear, and the salvaged parts not immediately required have in many instances formed a reserve supply to be drawn upon as needed. The savings made in these plants have justified the investment in welding equipment many times over.

However, to reclaim worn or broken farm equipment it is not necessary for the farmer to buy welding apparatus. The nearest job welding shop will fix it for him.

With the oxy-acetylene welding blowpipe in the hands of a competent operator all sorts of worn and broken parts can be repaired—more than "repaired" in the ordinary sense of the word—actually made as good as new. Cracked castings can be welded, missing gear teeth replaced, worn sections and surfaces built up. Malleable castings can be brazed, and the part will be as strong as originally. Steel parts can be made over; plowpoints built up with an alloy steel welding rod will give service like new ones. Bent shafting can be straightened easily by heating with the welding blowpipe.

New parts and new equipment can also be fabricated by welding. One stock farm bought a number of old hot water tanks (range boilers) from a junk dealer, cut them into halves with a cutting blowpipe, and after welding pieces of old pipe to them for legs, used them for stock-feeding troughs. On another place a chute for bags of grain was made by welding old pieces of steel sheet, bought very cheaply from a scrap yard.

It is in the repair of damaged parts, however, that the greatest savings can be made. The actual savings in dollars and cents is a large figure, but the greatest saving is the time necessary to secure a new part.

Take, for example, a typical instance. There are ten acres to be plowed for fall wheat. Disc-harrowing will not do, the ground must be turned over. The first morning an accident to the tractor put it out of service with a crack in the cylinder block.

A new block can be obtained only from the factory, and this will take weeks. Added to the cost of the new block is the freight or express and, unless the work can be properly done on the farm the cost of installing the new block. In the meantime the plowing waits, unless a man and a team of horses can be put to it.

Welding will do away with nearly all of this delay, and much of the expense. The cracked block is simply removed from the tractor and taken to the nearest welding shop. There it is carefully preheated, the crack welded and the casting slowly cooled—all of this work will not take a day.

And the results are very much worth while. The scrap pile is cheated. The cost of a new cylinder block is saved. But best of all, the plowing can go right ahead.

This incident is but a sketchy illustration of the possible value of welding on the farm. Hundreds of similar instances might be cited of savings that are now being made, or that could be made were the value of this reclamation process known to all who could take advantage of it.

TRAINING OUR CHILDREN

"How does it happen that Throck is making such a fine success of his work?" Aunt Tacey Ellen, who is anything but diplomatic, asked Throck's mother.

"Happen?" little Mrs. Rogers challenged, with a slight trace of irritation, "why, it could never have been any other way!"

"But I know plenty of failures," Aunt Tacey Ellen insisted.

"Yes, but my son isn't one," the mother proudly answered. "You see, I never allowed the word 'failure' in Sonny's vocabulary. From the time he was a little chap I taught him that he must finish, do well, anything, and everything he undertook. A task completed develops self-confidence, you know."

"But, my dear," Aunt Tacey Ellen objected, "the probably had a character that was easily molded. And, no doubt, he was the type of child that would have accomplished anything he undertook, regardless of training."

"Indeed," Mrs. Rogers said crisply, "He was the type of child who is inclined to procrastinate and to jump from one thing to another. But I made up my mind to help him break this tendency, which is not conducive to success."

"How did you go about it?" I asked, entering the conversation.

"First, as I said, we made it a rule that whatever he undertook must be finished. When the task was finished I praised and encouraged him if it was well done. And the next and best influence was instilling in his young mind the thought that he would be successful at whatever he undertook. I had the motto 'Failure is only for those who think failure' framed and hung in his room. I searched our library and the public library for success stories of great men who had overcome handicaps!"

"Didn't Throck's own handicap ever worry him?" Aunt Tacey Ellen inquired.

"If it ever did, I never heard of it," Mrs. Rogers replied. "Some way, I don't believe it ever occurred to him that he would ever be anything but successful."

"And he hasn't been anything else," I added.

Some weeks later I was spending a few days in the great city in which Throck is making a name for himself. Going out of a store one day,

I met my neighbor's fine, big son. I told him how proud we all were of him.

"Oh, it's mother who deserves the praise," said Throck. "I couldn't have done what I have without her. I owe it all to her."

And I went away thinking, "That is true. He does owe it all to his mother. And I believe she is right. Failure is only for those who think failure!"

The Dairy

The dairyman should know: That timothy hay lacks protein, is not very palatable to the dairy cow, and has a constipating effect.

That, when combined with alfalfa hay, a limited amount of good corn fodder is, pound for pound, worth as much as alfalfa hay.

That a good rule to follow in feeding corn silage is to give each cow three pounds of silage and one pound of dry roughage per day for each 100 pounds of live weight.

That there is no advantage gained in removing the ears of corn from the plant before putting the crop into the silo.

That a heavy ration of potatoes gives milk of inferior flavor, and butter that is salty; but that the potatoes can be satisfactorily used in moderate quantities if fed when cooked, and in still smaller quantities when raw.

That profits depend upon providing an abundance of succulent, palatable feed in a well balanced mixture which is fed under comfortable quarters that admit of a reasonable amount of exercise for the cows.

That cows will not thrive unless they receive a regular supply of salt, at least a daily allowance of an ounce for each cow.

That, other things being equal, cows return the largest profits when their owner, through his kindness has gained at least a portion of the affection that these cows would naturally give their offspring.

Every rural community would profit by an inventory of its production farm by farm, family by family. Further, the school children would profit highly through the gathering of the material of such an inventory.

An enterprising town has planted a municipal evergreen tree which will be used to each Christmas for a municipal Christmas tree as long as it lives. Other towns should take the hint and do the same thing.

Poultry

Until a few years ago I believed that corn is a mighty poor feed for young pullets, especially just before they are to be placed in winter quarters. That fall, however, it was a case of "corn or no grain" as I was unable to procure anything better at prices that I could afford to pay. Accordingly I began, somewhat reluctantly, to feed corn to the flock of pullets from which I hoped to select my winter layers.

A neighbor, far more experienced in poultrycraft than I, declared that the fowls would accumulate so much fat that they would be worthless for anything but market purposes by the time cold weather began. But I was desperate and concluded to give corn a trial.

The pullets were on an extensive range at the time. In November they were placed in winter quarters, and from that time forth I realized that a more balanced ration should be provided and began feeding a commercial scratch feed. To the astonishment of myself and neighbor, these pullets began laying in December, and kept us in fresh eggs during the balance of the winter; and not a single pullet went into molt.

Some months later I happened to mention the matter to a poultry expert. He merely laughed and replied, "Nothing remarkable about that. In fact, I always make it a rule to feed corn to my free-range pullets as soon as the extremely hot weather is past; and I continue to feed it liberally until the fowls are placed in winter quarters. By such a system the pullets put on sufficient flesh to begin winter laying without experiencing a loss of vitality, and thereby escape the winter molt."

"As long as the young stock is on free range there will be plenty of bugs, worms, weed-seeds and waste grains about to balance all the corn they will consume, and it is almost impossible at that period to induce them to eat more of it than is good for them. The time to cut down on corn in the poultry ration is when the flock is confined to close quarters where the birds can not get sufficient exercise."

Many herds of hogs will be better fed this winter for they will receive something besides corn. Corn lacks in protein and mineral elements. Tankage, buttermilk, skim milk, oil meal, fish meal, shorts or middlings fed with corn makes a better ration.

Fattening Cockerels.

For crate feeding, cockerels give best results when they are put into the crates at from four to five pounds in weight, according to experiments carried on under the direction of the Dominion Poultry Husbandman. They stand the confinement and forced feeding better than younger birds. It is recommended that they be fasted for practically the whole of the first day and then fed sparingly for several days. If fed heavily from the beginning, the birds go off their appetite and lose rather than gain in flesh. After the few days of feeding sparingly the birds will soon be able to handle two or three full meals in the twenty-four hours. During long days, or when artificial light is used, suitable feeding hours are six in the morning, at noon, and six in the evening. Two feeds are sufficient in the shorter days, at morning and evening. The duration of the feeding period varies from two to four weeks, which should terminate when the birds have become well fleshed and are noticed not to be eating well. Whole grain should not be given, and the finer the grain is ground the better feed it makes, and may consist of a mixture of corn, oats, barley, buckwheat, or wheat. The feed should be given in a wet state mixed to the consistency of porridge, so that it can be poured from a pail or dipped with a flat ladle. Buttermilk is regarded as the best liquid, skim milk coming next. Better results are obtained when the milk is sour and the feed mixed one meal ahead. A little salt added to the mash is recommended. The birds should have water constantly available, and a supply of grit at all times.

Strictly Fresh. First Cold Storage Egg—"You don't like him?" Second Cold Storage Egg—"No, I don't, he's too fresh for me."

The clerk who hopes some day to become a merchant and the traveling salesman who hopes to be a successful executive or manufacturer should learn how to use imagination in the retailing of any commodity which he may handle.

FOR HOME AND COUNTRY

News from the Algoma and St. Joseph Island Institutes.

The Institutes Branches of Algoma and St. Joseph's Island have in general excellently planned and executed monthly program put on by the members and local talent. The reflex effect on the girls and women is noticeable. They are especially bright, efficient, and clear-visioned, carrying their working principle of co-operation from the individual to the Institute, schools, county, college, and Government.

St. Joseph's Island, in co-operation with the Red Cross Society and Council, is establishing a hospital at Richard's Landing. The Island Institutes are co-operating to furnish it and render all help possible in other ways. Good health in home and community is a study of intense interest in the north.

Espanola members volunteered to help the doctor and nurse with a baby clinic, gave a donation to the Children's Aid and Muskoka Sanatorium, encouraged the young people to put on a play, and helped needy local families.

Gordon Lake had an apron-making contest and are arranging for a Girls' Garment Making Club.

Richard's Landing are devoting their energies to the new hospital.

Dayton did, as community work, quilting and mending for the neighbors, darned socks for the bachelors, held a box social to add to their funds and neighborhood good times, and made a donation to the hospital. They also lent a helping hand to the School Fair by giving a prize for the best collection of wood leaves.

Bruce held a tag day for a blind man, had a Dressmaking Course for their own improvement, looked after the sick and helped the Children's Shelter.

Walford had a fine community spirit among their forty-five members, each one taking an active part in a well-planned program. They are making ready for a healthful winter by placing hot lunches in two of their schools and taking the Short Course in First Aid and Home Nursing themselves. Cemetery beautification is one of their local improvement activities.

Spanish, a baby branch, is already active in home and neighborhood improvement planning a basketball equipment for the school children.

Hilton Beach reports: "After Prohibition carried, we had no more need of a jail. So we turned it into a public library and one-half of all we earn goes to its support, the rest to our monument fund. We have been very energetic educationally, having had a course in Millinery and another in Home Nursing."

Tentor remembered the Old People's Home, the hospital, the babies' ward in the Children's Hospital, the Sault W. I. Rest Room, and helped sick neighbors, then in August took a day off in a jolly community picnic for everybody.

West Korah believes that old people should stay young and held a picnic in their honor. They also believe that young people should have wise heads on their shoulders and had a day for the naming of weeds and making two-minute speeches, with a treat following for the school children. They exhibit at the Sault Fall Fair, selling the exhibit at the close to an appreciative public, and ward off trouble by having the Medical Officer of Health meet with them in a heart-to-heart talk on Preventive Medicine and First Aid.

Echo Bay are busy beautifying the Memorial Park and Playgrounds previously bought.

Capreol have a First Aid demonstration at each meeting in connection with their study of health: poultices, plasters, bandages, disinfecting, interspersing these with demonstrations on candy-making, table-setting and serving, and a button-hole competition. They help the Hospital, Sudbury Children's Aid, and give prizes to the children of their own schools.

Kenvale believe in making a survey of community needs and seeing to them first. They are very active in the Outpost Hospital aid at Richard's Landing, paid a pupil nurse to look after a needy maternity case, gave a quilt to the Children's Shelter, to a needy family, helped the library, and held a community evening with games for old and young at it by way of good times at home. Then they found a little to spare still to send to the Japan famine sufferers.

Macleanan equipped local fire sufferers with quilts and kitchen utensils, sent soup, fruit, or plants to every sick member of the neighborhood, had an apron contest, two social suppers, took a day off to clean up the cemetery, and propose starting a public library of their own, having outgrown the travelling library which has served them so well.

Prince likewise aided local fire sufferers with housekeeping outfits.

East Korah and the school board are co-operating to equip and beautify the school, the board buying curtains and the Institute making them, and both putting in hot lunch equipment and an electric stove. The April meeting is a regular school treat meeting when prizes and a treat to the pupils come from the visiting Women's Institute.

Iron Bridge put in a telephone for their nurse, cleaned up the cemetery, helped the School Fair, and attended to some needy members of the community.

The Transfiguration, Luke 9: 28-36. Golden Text—This is my beloved Son: hear him.—Luke 9: 35.

ANALYSIS.

I. THE DISCIPLES' VISION OF THE GLORY OF JESUS, 28-33.

II. THE CONFIRMING VOICE FROM HEAVEN, 34-36.

INTRODUCTION—With the confession of Peter at Caesarea Philippi, there begins a new period of deep and intimate communion between Jesus and his disciples. He is at last able to reveal what his Messiahship, which they have now discovered, means. This is nothing less than death at the hands of the nation. Such teaching startles and dismays the disciples, who had cherished very different thoughts of the Messiah's fortunes, but within a week three of them have a very wonderful experience on the Mount of Transfiguration, which confirms to them the truth both of what Peter had confessed, and of what Jesus had subsequently revealed. This experience forms the subject of to-day's lesson.

Let us remember that the whole preceding week had been one of great religious emotion, and indeed excitement. Jesus had announced in solemn terms that he must go to Jerusalem and die, Luke 9:22-27. He had said that the path of the Messiah must be the path of the cross, and that his faithful disciples also must now be prepared to forsake everything, to renounce self, and accept, if need be, a cross of execution. This was new teaching, and at first the thought that Jesus must die left them utterly aghast. What then, they argued, was to become of his expected crown and kingdom? From these thoughts the disciples are delivered by a supreme experience granted, as we have already said, on the Mount of Transfiguration. In a great moment of spiritual illumination, they see Jesus in his real glory. They see Moses and Elijah bearing testimony to him, and to the fact that he must die. Finally, they hear a voice from heaven naming Jesus as the divine Messiah, and calling upon themselves to listen to his words.

I. THE DISCIPLES' VISION OF THE GLORY OF JESUS, 28-33.

V. 28. A week after Peter's confession, Jesus takes his three most intimate disciples with him to a quiet retreat among the hills. Luke alone tells us that Jesus was praying when the Transfiguration occurred. Doubtless, before the prayer, Jesus had been speaking in solemn terms about his Messiahship, and about the necessity of his death.

Vs. 29-31. It would appear from v. 32, that during the prayer of Jesus—somehow—the three disciples had fallen into a deep slumber. They were exhausted perhaps by their long vigil on the mountain side, and by the strain of sad foreboding inspired by Jesus' words. But the evangelist explains that meantime, as Jesus prayed, his face grew brighter, a heavenly radiance spread over him, and he was no longer alone. For there before him, in heavenly vision, were Moses and Elijah. They were speaking to him, and revealing that he must indeed go to Jerusalem and die.

V. 32. Suddenly the disciples became wide awake. They perceive the radiance of Jesus' face, and they are at once aware that he is holding converse with the two heavenly spirits. Instantaneously, the elements of a vision come together before their eyes. They see Moses and Elijah by Jesus' side. The two representatives of the law and the prophets are bearing witness to Jesus' Messiahship.

V. 33. Like a man only half-awakened from a dream, and not properly distinguishing what is vision and what is everyday reality, Peter wish to prolong the scene, and blurts out foolish words about putting up shelters on the hillside for Jesus and the two heavenly visitors. The evangelist explains that Peter at that moment did not know what he was saying. But while Peter is confused, there is no mistaking what the vision means. It means that Scripture, in the persons of Moses and Elijah, is now seen witnessing to the truth of what Jesus has said regarding his Messianic destiny of suffering. Jesus had perhaps spoken earlier in the evening of the Messianic predictions associated with the names of Moses and Elijah, and now in a flash of heavenly insight, the disciples see the truth.

II. THE CONFIRMING VOICE FROM HEAVEN, 34-36.

V. 34. At this moment a cloud overshadows the disciples—a symbolic way of saying that they become suddenly and strongly aware of the divine presence. The impressions of the hour have culminated, and the truth comes powerfully home to them that God is present, confirming by his own voice, what they have seen and heard.

V. 35. They hear the voice: "This is My Son, My beloved; hearken to Him." This is practically identical with the voice which Jesus heard at his baptism, and signifies that what God revealed to Jesus at the beginning is now revealed to Jesus' followers. (Compare Mark 1:11.) Thus the Transfiguration experience is the heavenly confirmation of the truth of Peter's confession. But it is also understood as a clear sign that Jesus' prediction regarding his death—which had hitherto been a great stumbling-block—is to be received by faith.

V. 36. The vision passes, but the truth remains. The disciples cannot yet reveal all that they have seen and heard, but they ponder it in their hearts.

THE GLORY.

The "glory of God" has in Scripture great fullness of meaning. It means his exalted and holy character and being which he reveals to men, but there is always, or nearly always, a background of nature. The glory of God starts out from the brightness and splendor of the sky. God used to come sweeping on in the thunderstorm, with the lightning as his gleaming arrow or flashing spear, and the thunder his voice. In the thunderstorm he came to the relief of the distressed psalmist (Psalm 18), hidden in the cloud, it is true, but none the less darting out fiery death upon his enemies. In the temple, Isaiah saw the king of kings upon his throne, and even the courtiers who stand by him are fiery beings (the seraphim). Iso. 6. The vision of Ezekiel (chs. 1-3, is of a being so resplendent that the clouds cannot hide him. The glory of God is described in Exod. 24:16-18 as if it were a great fire breaking through the cloud that hangs over a volcano. I have seen an irradiated cloud at Vesuvius by night. The Isalties got glimpses of this glory of the God of the bright heavens, and Moses did often (Exod. 33:17-23; 34:6, 7).

And when God tabernacled among men, his presence was on more than one occasion marked out by shining light and cloud. When Jesus was born "the glory of the Lord shone round about" the shepherds, Luke 2:9. When he was transfigured, his white and glistening presence was encircled by clouds. On the way to Damascus, Paul saw at midday a "light from heaven, above the brightness of the sun," Acts 26:13. The early Christians expected Messiah to come in glory—that is, in dazzling splendor—on the clouds, Matt. 16:27. And in the heavenly life, no light of sun or moon is needed, the glory of God doth lighten it, Rev. 21:23.

I Put My Farm Name on My Mail-Box.

It is now about three years since I purchased my farm. About the first thing I did after building a house was to set up a mail-box with an attractive, short farm name printed neatly on its sides, with my name beneath. I never saw a more pleased expression upon the face of a person than appeared upon the features of our mail-carrier who came along just as I had finished nailing the box on the post.

"By golly," he said, "you've got the right idea. You're the first man in here to give his place a name, but it means a lot to me as well as to you. If all the farmers would get busy and do the same, it would speed up mail delivery nearly 50 per cent."

"Well," I replied, "I hadn't thought of it in that light but I wanted a way of letting people know where I lived."

"Well, they'll know where your farm is before they know you," he said, as he left.

I watched him until he turned the corner, and thought of what he had said. If they knew where my place was, in time they would get to know me and my name would be linked inseparably with the name of my place, and this in the long run would be good advertising.

Now it is getting so that when any of the dealers in our town make my acquaintance they say, "Oh! Are you the fellow that lives in 'Northaven'?" and want to know what I intend to raise on the farm. So taken as a whole I feel that the 10 cents I spent for paint to put my farm name on the mail-box has been a good investment.—H. O. Hall.

Bedtime Stories

Betty and the Fairy.

Once upon a time not so very long ago there lived on an 80-acre farm a family of four. Their names were Jack Brown, Betty Brown and Mr. and Mrs. Brown. Jack was a boy of eleven and was very fond of fun. Betty was a quiet child two years Jack's junior and she believed in fairies.

One day Mrs. Brown told Betty to go to the orchard after some apples. Betty was very fond of apple pie so she went gladly. When she got to the apple tree she said, "Oh, I wish the apples would come down to me so I wouldn't have to climb the tree!"

A high, small voice (very much like Jack's) answered, "If that is all you wish, little girl, I will gladly help you, for I am a fairy."

Betty cried with joy, "Oh, may I come up and talk to you, Fairy?"

The high voice tried to be alarmed, but it was a very bad attempt. "Oh, no, no, no, little girl! You mustn't, for I would fly away."

Betty asked several questions which the fairy wouldn't answer.

That night at supper when they ate their pie, Betty told her adventure. Now why do you suppose Jack had to get a drink so suddenly?

Seed Ears.

The corn seed ears are best selected from the standing plant. For those that neglected to do this, the next best practice is to select the best ears at the time of husking. Good seed corn will in all probability be scarce in this province next spring, so every real good seed type ear should be carefully saved. After husking, the seed ears should be kept in a place of storage that provides a uniform temperature, good air circulation and freedom from moisture.

Canada from Coast to Coast

CANADA FROM COAST
 P.E.I.—The breeding of min commercial purposes is a new industry which has followed the success of the silver black fox breeding in Prince Edward Island. This venture has met with considerable success and recently a shipment of mink was made to British Columbia and points in the western United States.

Sydney, N.S.—In spite of the prevalent impression that whaling as a Canadian industry has practically disappeared, over $100,000 worth of whale oil has been passing through this port during the season now drawing to a close. The product is brought here in Newfoundland schooners and trans-shipped in tank cars to Canadian and American markets.

St. John, N.B.—Unusually heavy yields of potatoes are reported throughout the Province of New Brunswick, as high as 225 bushels per acre being secured by farmers in some sections.

Montreal, Que.—One thousand and forty-eight ocean-going vessels have arrived in Montreal to date this season, as against 974 during the corresponding period of last year, according to a statement made by the Harbor Master.

Toronto, Ont.—For the second year in succession the McIntosh red apple, first produced by the late Henry McIntosh, on his Ontario farm at Dundella, near Iroquois, has been declared the finest variety of dessert apple produced in the British Empire. The particular specimen of the fruit, which won this great distinction at the Imperial Fruit Show, held at Birmingham, England, was grown at Vernon, B.C., and exhibited by the Associated Growers of British Columbia.

Winnipeg, Man.—Farmers of Western Canada are now giving increased attention to the improvement of their home surroundings. They have not only planted 5,250,000 trees distributed from the Canadian Government forestry stations at Indian Head and Sutherland, Sask., this year, but have also purchased large quantities from private nurseries.

Regina, Sask.—Two poultry-marketing pools have been arranged through the co-operation and markets branch of the Saskatchewan Dept. of Agriculture; one pool working in conjunction with the Saskatchewan Grain Growers' Association to market dressed turkeys direct through country points, and the second pool to market live turkeys through the various killing stations of the Saskatchewan Co-operative Creameries.

Edmonton, Alta.—The first carload of Alberta tar sands to be shipped out of Alberta for experimental purposes left here for Petrolia, Ont., recently. The shipment is being made by the Draper interests, who are operating tar sand claims at Waterways. The carload of material sent to Petrolia will be used for the repairing of street paving. Part of the material will also be used for experimental purposes at the Draper plant in Petrolia.

Vancouver, B.C.—Since the opening of the present crop year there had been exported from this port 4,240,574 bushels of grain; of this, 3,510,388 bushels went to the United Kingdom, 334,263 bushels to the Orient and 242,340 to the Antipodes.

President Calvin Coolidge and Vice-President Charles G. Dawes of the United States are shown wearing a smile of victory following the results of the recent elections.

BLACKFEET INDIANS OF NORTH AMERICA HOLD CONFERENCE IN ALBERTA

A despatch from Macleod, Alta., says:—Macleod, famed as a trading post of the early days, and coupled with the pioneer activities of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, is the scene of a unique convention—a conference of Indian chiefs representing the Blackfeet tribe of the North American continent. Delegates are present from reserves in the United States and Canada, discussing problems and grievances. Many belonging to the newer generation are educated, and well versed in present-day conditions, while there are also "veteran" chiefs in attendance, some of whom attended the signing of the Blackfeet treaty in 1877.

When their treaty was signed, the old chiefs declared, the Government promised them "$12 every year until the rivers run backwards and the sun fails to rise and set." This promise, they asserted, had not been lived up to; they had suffered a reduction of $7, and they urged the carrying out of the treaty as signed in 1877.

A resolution, presented by Joe Calf, chief of the Blackfeet, "that only one form of marriage amongst Indians be recognized and made law as included in the Indian Act, as asked for and recognized by the Christian Churches and Government," was defeated after a short discussion.

R. J. Hamilton, of the North Pie-gans, Montana, a highly educated Indian and one who holds the position of commissioner on his reserve, is chairman of the convention, and Mike Mountain Horse, of Bloods, is secretary.

Prussian Officer Pays Debt for Cruelty in War

A despatch from Paris says:—First Lieutenant Knetsch of the Prussian army was during the war in charge of French prisoners. Now he is busy buying up the Brittany apple crop for making German "champagne." While superintending the loading of apples at a little railroad station in Morsihan a Breton peasant walked up and, having scrutinized him, asked politely, "Excuse me, Monsieur, aren't you Lieut. Knetsch?"

Pleased to have his personality and rank thus recognized far from the Fatherland, Knetsch, proudly drawing himself up, replied affirmatively.

"Then just come along with me, because I have a little account to settle with you," said the curly Breton, and without further remark, and showing no undue haste, deliberately set about to beat the German up, first with a whip and then with a heavy sledge-hammer, and but for the intervention of railroadmen Herr Lieut. Knetsch would probably have been beaten to death by one of his ex-prisoners who had long suffered cruel treatment at his hands in a German war prisoners' camp.

Members of Labor Government Barred from Pensions

The short life of England's experimental Labor Government bars any members of its ministry from qualifying for political pensions had they been inclined so to insure their future, says a London despatch. Service of more than four years is required under the Victorian Act of 1869, which provides for annual pensions of from $4,000 to $10,000, in round figures.

Because of the short life of the ministries of the last generation the British taxpayers are not being called upon at present to pay any political pensions, although only recent Lord George Hamilton, who served as Secretary for India in the Balfour Ministry, gave up his pension of the maximum amount annually, which he had drawn for twenty-two years. In all there have been only sixteen political pensions granted, largely for the reason that before the advent of the Labor Ministry the practice had been to appoint only men of considerable means as the Premier's official co-workers in the Cabinet.

French Academy Makes Award for Quadruplets

Quadruplets among a family of ten are the cause of a special award of 25,000 francs granted by the French Academy to Mr. and Mrs. Debreuil, of the little village of Saint-Hilaire-de-Veloite, in Vendee, says a Paris despatch. The prize comes as a special honor from the fund set aside by the Cognac-Jay Foundation for annual distribution to French families of unusual size.

The four children, two boys and two girls, were born on January 7, 1915, and had as their respective godparents, whose names they carry, former President Poincare, King George of England, Queen Elizabeth of Belgium, and Queen Alexandra of Russia.

Business Outlook Hopeful.

Business in Canada continues to improve slowly. That it is making progress, however, is evident from the reports of manufacturers and merchants, which, as a rule, indicate some expansion. Although this is not always as extensive as had been expected, better things are hoped for as the season advances. The good crops in Ontario, combined with the higher prices, mean increased prosperity for the farming community in this province, and while the situation in the West is still not quite clear it is evident that better conditions will prevail this year than since 1921.

Country business is already reflecting the highest purchasing power of the Ontario farmer, while the reflex of the improved situation in the West is encountered in this province and elsewhere in Eastern Canada. Employment has shown a noticeable improvement in the last three weeks in manufacturing, logging and general business. Building is still quiet. Some large mercantile structures are now being erected in Toronto, but the total volume is not large. Textile mills are busier than they were, and it is predicted in well-informed quarters that factories will shortly be running on full time if they are not doing so already.

Generally speaking, the basic conditions appear favorable, and it is contended that all that is needed to ensure good active business is greater confidence on the part of the public.—Retail Merchants Globe.

Home-Finding.

Large sums have been given to gather children into orphanages. Who ever heard of legacies or bequests to get homeless children into real homes? The best kind of social work is often kept in a state of semi-starvation.

STEAM-DRIVEN SHIPS ARE LIKELY TO REMAIN

Future of Oil-Burning Vessels Marred by Increase in Fuel Price.

A despatch from New York says:—Oil-burning ships are not likely to replace steam-driven vessels because of the extensive use of the former would increase the price of oil until it would not be employed profitably as fuel, Captain Walter T. McFarland, retiring president of the Society of Naval Architects and Marine Engineers, said at the opening session of the Society's 32nd annual meeting on Thursday.

"There are services on which motor ships can use oil at its present price," he said, "but authorities warn us that the oil supply is not inexhaustible, some predicting its failure within two decades. Many designers, now even, are insisting that boilers be constructed to permit a ready shift to coal when the price of oil becomes prohibitive."

LOST FOR DAYS IN NORTHERN WILDERNESS

Printer Crawls for Miles on Hands and Knees in Bush Near Sault.

A despatch from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., says:—I. J. Walters, a deaf-mute, recently of Toronto, where he has a wife and family living at 30 Sellers Avenue, but who is now operating a linotype at The Sault Daily Star office, recounts a harrowing tale of his experiences in the Northern bush near the Sault, where he spent most of three days wandering about after losing his way near Glendale, on the Algoma Central Railway, 24 miles above the Sault. To add to his predicament, he encountered one of the worst storms of the season, was without matches or food, and at night wolves prowled about him as he lay under logs seeking shelter, though they did not attack him. He believed steadfastly in his compass, and eventually, in a fainting condition, sometimes crawling on his bleeding hands and knees, he made his way to Island Lake, ten miles below his starting point, where he was found and given food and shelter by Mr. and Mrs. William Calvert, who happened to be in their summer camp on a hunting expedition.

The country through which he travelled is probably the wildest portion of the district near the city, and contains many lakes, swamps and muskegs, besides mountainous hills. He entered the bush on Monday morning and was found Wednesday noon and brought to the Sault. His feet and hands were badly swollen from the severe frost and all parts of his body wracked by the privations he endured.

Arrangements had been made to send one of the Ontario Forestry aeroplanes and members of the Provincial Police staff in search of the lost man, but word reached here that he was recovered just in time to head off the rescue parties.

Indian Kills Dog Team to Drive Away Evil Spirits

A despatch from Wrangel, Alaska, says:—Killing and torturing members of the tribe having failed to drive away evil spirits that were causing hunger and disease, an Indian in the Liard district of Canada, 500 miles east of here, hanged a dog daily until he had put to death his whole sled team.

This was one of the tales that trickled through to Wrangel by means of gold prospectors after a party of Canadian Royal Mounted Police passed through here recently bound for Vancouver, B.C., with five Indians accused of torturing to death Moccasin, a lad of 17. The boy was said to have been buried while he still breathed.

His Highness the Maharajah of Alwar was the most picturesque person attending the recent imperial conference, his appearance giving a welcome note of coloring to the drab gatherings.

ISLAND OF JAVA SHAKEN BY QUAKES

Three Hundred Lives Lost, Countless Missing and Many Towns Destroyed.

A despatch from Batavia, Java, says:—The island of Java has been severely shaken by earthquakes. At least 300 persons are reported killed and countless missing. The earth shocks extended over Wednesday and part of Thursday. Many native towns in the Kedu district, a central residency of Java, have been destroyed by landslides. One village completely disappeared into the river.

The shock centred in the health resort of Wonosobo, where all the buildings collapsed.

A despatch from London says:—A despatch to The Morning Post from Amsterdam, quoting reports received from Java, says the river near Kampong has been transformed into a mud channel in which the bodies of men and animals are lying. Forty-five houses in the Leksone district have disappeared entirely. The whole of Dessah Badjinger has been engulfed in the Pring River. Magelang, the principal town in the Kedu district, was only slightly damaged. Houses of Dutch officials at Wonosobo were not destroyed.

Java, in the Malay Archipelago is the seat of government for the Dutch East Indies. As it was the creation of violent seismic convulsions, so, from year to year it is subjected to similar disturbances, less violent, but sufficient in times past to have destroyed much life and property.

In 1919 the volcano of Kalut erupted and caused many deaths, variously estimated at from 15,000 to 60,000. Besides Kalut there are many active volcanoes in the island, with its 48,000 square miles. Some of these seismic disturbances have been accompanied by heavy floods and landslides.

Palestine Assembly Meets in March, 1925

A despatch from Tel Aviv, Palestine, says:—The Jewish National Assembly of Palestine, known as the "Assephat Hanivcharim," will be convened in March, 1925, according to the decision of Vaad Leumi at a meeting held here. The Vaad Leumi will also call a conference of representatives of the Jewish communities in Palestine for the purpose of organizing them to render assistance to the immigrants in the country.

France to Discharge War Debt to Canada End of Year

A despatch from London says:—The French Ambassador has informed the Canadian High Commissioner, Hon. P. C. Larkin, that on December 31 the Government of France will pay off the debt it owes to Canada in connection with the war, the amount totalling $5,657,000.

According to a report, the farm of Smith Bros., near Cardston, Alta., has maintained an average in wheat of forty-two bushels an acre, for eleven years.

ANNUAL GATHERING OF WORKERS IN THE SABBATH SCHOOLS

North Leeds Religious Education Council Meets.

PROGRAMME IS ENJOYED

Death of Mrs. Lucy Knowlton is Much Regretted at Philippsville.

Philippsville, Nov. 14.—The North Leeds Religious Education Council held its annual convention in the Philippsville Methodist church on Wednesday, November 12, with about 75 delegates in attendance.

The afternoon programme opened at 2.30 p.m. with Mr. E. Bent, vice-president, in the chair, and Rev. A. E. Sanderson taking charge of a devotional period.

The first part of the programme was given to the receiving of reports from the departmental secretaries and secretary-treasurer. A nominating committee was named to meet between sessions, and a short song service was engaged in, following which Rev. W. A. Dobson gave a very practical and stimulating address on "The Problems of the Sunday School," dividing them into two classes—mechanics and dynamics. Following this he conducted a helpful round table conference which led to a discussion of various aspects of the work. Mrs. T. Townsend then sang a very pleasing solo, and Rev. L. S. Throop was called upon for an address on "Teacher Training." He gave a clear and comprehensive outline of this course, so beneficial to Sunday school teachers.

The meeting adjourned for supper, coming together at 7.30 for a half-hour song service, led by G. F. Warren, with Rev. A. E. Sanderson presiding.

A report of the nominating committee was given by Mr. Throop, who moved the following resolution, seconded by Rev. T. F. Townsend, "That the R. E. C., of North Leeds, assembled in annual convention, record its gratitude to Almighty God for the vision of the electors of the Province of Ontario which enabled them to sustain at the polls on October 23, 1924, the O.T.A."

"We also record our appreciation of the stand taken by the Hon. G. H. Ferguson, Premier of Ontario, and the Hon. W. F. Nickle, Attorney-General, on the verdict of the people, and their determination to lead the people in the securing of their expressed desire.

"We also urge the continuance of the plebiscite committee to aid the government in the enforcement of the act, and, further, we urge every Sunday school to give a prominent place on their programme to temperance instruction as the only way of securing the future from the curse of alcoholic beverages.

"Lastly, that a copy of this resolution be sent to the Premier and the Attorney-General."

Mr. Throop also presented a resolution of appreciation to the Methodist and Baptist congregations for the royal way in which they had entertained this gathering, and the efforts expended to make it a success.

The names of those forming the new executive were read, each coming to the altar in turn, where Mr. Dobson took charge of a short installation service, impressing upon each his responsibility in this cause.

Following this, Mr. DeWolfe sang very acceptably, and then Rev. Benjamin Davis gave a most interesting address on "Some Impressions of the Sunday School Movement."

Miss Ada Wing favored the audience with a solo, after which Mr. Dobson gave the closing address on "Consecration," impressing his hearers with the importance of the task.

A liberal offering was then taken and an enjoyable duet was sung by Mrs. Phillips and Mrs. Townsend.

A motion of thanks was tendered all those taking part in the conference which all agreed had been a successful one, and Mr. Dobson closed with the benediction.

The Women's Institute met to-day with 30 present, when an interesting and profitable afternoon was spent, the directors for the meeting being Mrs. M. Davison and Miss M. A. Moulton. While the programme proceeded, a quilting was in progress, with the usual opening and attention to some business matters. The numbers on the programme included a reading by Mrs. Clifford Freeman, "The Spelling Bee," the keynote of which was the true way to spell "success"; a very fine paper by Mrs. Thomas Moulton on "Thanksgiving and Its History," and an excellent report from the Ottawa convention was presented by the delegate, Mrs. Hollis Chant. Piano selections by Miss Amanda Eyre were enjoyed, and a vocal duet by Mrs. Whitmore and Miss Lucille Whitmore. The roll call was planned to bear a Thanksgiving thought. Plans were made to carry Christmas cheer to shut-ins and aged ladies.

Visitors during Thanksgiving holiday and this week included Mrs. Lottie Kelsey, Elgin, and M. B. Denny, Watertown, N.Y., at the home of William French; Mrs. Estella Preston, three daughters, and Miss Jessie Erwin, Delta, at Robert Preston's; Miss Leola Willows, and Frank Willows, Lyn; George and Frank Poole, Forfar, at Morley Willows'. During their stay here for the convention, Rev. W. A. Dobson was a guest in the home of Ed. Kernan, and Rev. L. S. Throop at the home of Morley Willows.

It was with much regret that many old friends and neighbors of this district heard of the passing of Mrs. Lucy Knowlton at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Phillips, in Boston. Before leaving to make her home in Boston some years ago, she had, as a member of the Baptist church here, given from early life to the community a truly beautiful example of Christian life, and her memory will be long cherished because of the loving service which she rendered. Her funeral, which was largely attended, was held at this, her home church, on Wednesday morning, the pastor, Rev. B. Davis, conducting the service and burial was made in the family plot at the Baptist cemetery. Many beautiful floral offerings gave silent expressions of loving sympathy. Dr. and Mrs. Phillips, of Boston, called on friends here on Thursday.

NEWS OF THE DISTRICT

Fred Landon, South Augusta, Falls and Sustains Fracture of Leg.

Elgin, Nov. 7.—On Thursday, November 6, the Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. T. Rosborough. After the opening exercises, letters were read and committees were formed for the bazaar which is being held on Friday afternoon, November 21. Poppies were distributed among the different schools to be sold on Armistice Day by the pupils. The "Canadian Farmer" and "The Sailor" were given to members who had not previously read these papers. Mrs. Dunn gave a report of the receipts and expenses of the banquet. Miss McGuigan gave a report of the furnishing of the hall. A vote of thanks was tendered those who had so kindly given the Institute the use of the Orange hall during the months the other was being renovated. A vote of thanks was also tendered Mr. Ferguson, who so kindly donated the rolls for the banquet. The business now being transacted, an excellent programme followed. Mrs. W. H. Smith gave a very pleasing piano solo. Mrs. M. E. Ferguson read a very instructive paper on "Fire Prevention." The roll call followed. This was answered by "Uses for Left Overs" and was responded to by 44 members. The Ode was now sung. Mrs. J. C. Penock gave her report of the Ottawa convention, which proved most interesting. The meeting was now brought to a close. The ladies were then invited to view the needle-work which was on exhibition in an adjoining room. Everyone took part in a contest, after which a most delicious luncheon was served by the hostess and the directors, Mrs. W. Gray, Miss F. Taylor and Mrs. C. Shearwood. A vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Rosborough and the directors. The Institute was delighted to have as guests at their meeting four ladies from the Chaffey's Locks branch.

1924 Christmas Seals

The National Sanitarium Association is to be congratulated on the handsome Christmas Seals now on sale in aid of the Muskoka Hospital for Consumptives.

To meet a persistent demand for a real Christmas Seal, not merely an advertising sticker, quite a new departure has been made. The seals, beautifully colored and embossed, ten designs, are put up assorted in packets of different denominations. The Hospital is in need of funds to carry on its work. Why not buy these seals in lieu of others? Not only will you get good value in return, but your money will be made to serve a greater end, for it will go to help someone in distress.

For sale by school children, and banks, or direct from Xmas Seal Department, Gage Institute, Toronto, Ontario.

THE SORE SHOULDER

Ill-fitting Collars Cause Much Suffering to Horses.

Shoulder Galls Are Developed—Soaking the Collar in Water Helps to Reshape It—Bathe and Dust the Galls—Hessian Fly Control.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

A collar that does not fit the horse's neck and shoulder perfectly may be the cause of considerable suffering to the animal through soreness, galling, and blistering. Hundreds of horses suffer each year, more especially during the period of warm weather, when the work on the land is pressing.

Poor Collars Cause Shoulder Galls.

Shoulder galls develop largely through the use of collars that do not fit properly, through the draft being too high or too low, through neglect on the part of the driver to keep both collar and shoulder clean. When a teamster develops a blistered heel or a sore to the necessity of adjustment is fully and painfully apparent to him, so he fusses around and adjusts the boot or his foot to get relief for himself. A humane and thoughtful driver will do the same for his horses; but unfortunately there are many drivers who neglect to give their horses all the attention that a working animal is entitled to. Collars may fit the horse's shoulders in the spring when the animal is in good condition, but the shrinkage of flesh due to the hard work of several months may leave the horse with a collar much too large. The collar that is too large or not of the correct shape is bound to cause trouble. Sore neck, sore shoulders or unnecessary pain that may develop viciousness or other bad habits or reduce the efficiency of the horse, should be avoided.

A Horse's Haul Is Done From the Shoulder.

The work that the horse has to perform is done from the shoulder, so it is very important that extreme care be given to the fitting and adjustment of the collar. The new collar is generally so firm and stiff that it is difficult to mould it to the shape of the horse's neck and shoulder without soaking it in water overnight. After soaking a collar of the proper size in three inches of water, face down until well wet, it may be placed on the horse. The hame straps should be adjusted to draw the collar snugly to the neck. The collar in its softened condition will press into shape to suit the horse's shoulder. Be sure of the adjustment of the hames and draft. Work the horse only moderately the first few days while the shoulders are hardening and becoming used to the collar. Frequent airing and bathing to cool the shoulder and remove sweat and dust are very essential in preventing shoulder soreness.

Dealing With Mis-shapen Shoulders.

Horses that have mis-shapen shoulders can only be given relief by being fitted with a collar or collar pad made to suit the requirement of a special case. An hour's work on a collar pad with thread and needle in the hands of a humane teamster will save a faithful horse much pain. If your horse is suffering from shoulder galls, adjust the draft or shape the collar or collar pad so as to remove the pressure of draft from the sore point. The horse's shoulder should be watched during the day when at heavy work, especially during hot weather. Bath with salt water each evening, and treat the galls with a dusting of zinc oxide. If the horse is so fortunate as to be in the hands of a good driver or teamster it is not likely to suffer from shoulder trouble very long. Remember, the horse cannot speak and make complaint; it is up to you who are responsible for the horse's welfare to give the working comfort that a faithful slave is entitled to every day in the week.—L. Stevenson, Sec., Dept. of Agriculture, Toronto.

HESSIAN FLY CONTROL.

Is Found Best Effectuated by the Late Planting of Fall Wheat.

The late planting of wheat is generally recognized as being the most effective practice in Hessian fly control. Land for wheat should be prepared early, at least six weeks before seeding, in order that a firm seed bed with two inches of loose soil to provide ample covering when the seeding is done. Late in August or early in September narrow strips should be seeded across the field at intervals, these are for the purpose of attracting any Hessian flies that may be present and offering an inducement for egg laying. Between the fifth and tenth of October these egg-catching strips should be ploughed in and the entire field re-worked and seeded. Lands that are in good condition will withstand Hessian fly attacks much better than poor ill-prepared soils, due to the fact that a weakened plant can make good recovery if well nourished. Prepare the land early, fertilize if possible, and seed as late as you can expect the wheat to make sufficient growth for wintering.—L. Stevenson, Sec., Dept. of Agriculture, Toronto.

Costly House for Poultry.

An extensive and costly house for the poultry does not necessarily mean that the stock kept therein is any better than the average. Very often we find that the owner is more proud of his houses and surroundings than he is of his stock of poultry.

ANIMAL TEMPERATURES

Interesting Figures Relating to Farm Live Stock

Horses Are Relatively Cold-blooded—Poultry Have Highest Temperatures—High Temperatures Indicate Fever—Wintering Bees—Select Sires to Give Balance.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

The temperatures of domestic animals are of interest, in that each class has a normal temperature range of its own.

The horse in health will have a temperature not lower than 99.5°, or higher than 101.3°. There are exceptions, of course, to all rules, and a few animals may be normal at higher or lower temperatures than those given.

Cattle.

The normal temperature range for cattle is 100.4° to 103.1°, which covers the case pretty well. When a bovine animal's temperature goes above 103.1° it can be considered above normal, and that there is some disturbance within.

Sheep and Swine.

Sheep to be considered normal give a temperature reading between 102.2° to 104.5°. The pig's normal temperature can be looked for between 100.4° and 104°. Some individuals run high and others low, but all are steady within two degrees during period of health.

Poultry.

Poultry have very high normal temperatures, 106.7° to 108.5°. Such temperatures as enjoyed by poultry in health could not be endured by any other of our domestic animals for more than a few days.

High Temperatures Indicate Fever.

Any deviation from the normal temperature is taken as a source of information regarding the state of health of our domestic animals. High temperatures indicate feverish condition, while sub-normal temperatures indicate decline and weakening of the individual to a point of grave danger. Exercise raises the temperature, and rest lowers it, hence we get higher readings in the evening than in the morning.—L. Stevenson, Dept. of Extension, O. A. College, Guelph.

WINTERING BEES.

Every Colony Should Have a Queen—Have Enough Bees—Keep in a Naturally Protected Place.

Every spring beekeepers find from 5% to 50% of their colonies have died during the winter, or are very weak. There is no reason why the winter loss should be higher than 2% or 3%, provided the beekeeper will prepare and pack the bees properly. So says Prof. Eric Millen of the Ontario Agricultural College.

Every Colony Should Have a Queen.

The first step is to make sure every colony has a queen. As it is too late to require now, queenless colonies should be united with those having a queen. Place a sheet of newspaper on top of a strong queen-right colony, and place the queen-chamber of the queenless colony on top. Leave them for a week, and then shake the bees into the lower broodchamber and remove the upper broodchamber. It is taken for granted that no American foulbrood exists in the apiary. Otherwise, colonies should not be united, but rather destroy the queenless colonies and combs, if diseased.

Have Sufficient Bees.

The next step is to see that each colony has sufficient bees to cover at least three frames on both sides, if examined on a cold morning when the bees are clustered. This will insure enough bees to come through the winter, provided the stores and protection are adequate. A very important factor of wintering is the question of food. Many beekeepers give every colony ten or fifteen pounds of sugar syrup made in the proportion of 2½ of sugar to one of water, and fed in an inverted feeder over the brood frames. This is done in many cases regardless of the amount of stores the colony has.

Every colony should have at least 45 pounds of food to ensure successful wintering, and an opportunity to increase in strength in the spring.

Keep in a Naturally Protected Place.

Bees should be kept in a naturally protected place for winter, or a board fence should be erected around the apiary to form a wind protection. Colonies may be packed singly, two in a case, four in a case, or in any other way desired by the beekeeper. Three or four inches of packing should be placed all around the colony, and not less than eight inches on top. Dry leaves, planer shavings or cork chips make satisfactory packing material. If the beekeeper will see that his colonies are put away for winter in good condition, the winter loss will be negligible.

Sausage Rolls

(By Mrs. Alymer Macpherson)
Make a nice biscuit dough, roll it about a quarter of an inch thick, and cut into ovals. Bake in two layers, first brushing the lower one with melted butter, and laying on it a crisp, cooked small sausage, pressed slightly into the dough. Put on tops and bake in a quick oven. Brush the tops of the rolls with butter when removed from the oven, place on a flat serving dish, and cover with a rich cream sauce to which has been added a cupful of liberally buttered canned peas.

Baked Veal Cutlets

Lay in a heated, buttered casserole one and one-half pounds veal steak. Add one cup of seasoned stock, then spread over the steak a dressing made of two cups bread crumbs, one onion, chopped fine, one beaten egg, a spring of minced parsley, one tablespoon salt and one-half salt spoon of pepper. Cover and cook one-half hour in a hot oven, then uncover and brown. Serve with baked potatoes and green peas.

INVENTED THE SEWING NEEDLE

To reach the age of 100 is a great achievement. To be active at this age and conduct a productive business is even a greater feat.

Charles Quick, maker of racing saddles, of Vancouver, B.C., has just begun his 104th year. He looks hardly sixty.

Quick was born in England. He is given credit for inventing the ordinary sewing needle with an eye in the end.

It is a wonderful power—a power that we all have in a greater or smaller measure—to put gladness and joy into others' hearts. No mission in life can be nobler than to live to be a happiness maker.

To sympathize is simply this, to feel with those that suffer. It is the obedience to that law of Christian duty which bids us "rejoice with them that do rejoice, and weep with them that weep."

TAKING CARE OF THE HONEY CROP

Honey is a perishable article, no matter whether it is left in the comb or extracted. With care it can be kept in good condition for long periods, especially in the extracted form. Nectar, as stored by the bees, contains a high percentage of water, which must be evaporated before the honey can be extracted. When the cells are filled and the right amount of evaporation has taken place, the honey is sealed over and is then considered to be "ripe." It is not advisable to extract honey until at least three-fourths of the cells are capped, especially in regions where the honey is inclined to be rather thin. Comb honey should be left in the hives until all cells containing honey are sealed, but should not be left on any longer than this or the sections are likely to become travel stained.

The honey should be extracted as soon as possible after the supers are removed from the hives, and if done while still warm, more honey will be taken from the combs. After the honey is extracted it must be strained to remove all foreign matter. Straining may be done through fine cheese cloth or by letting the honey stand in tanks for two or three days, when all foreign matter will have risen to the surface. If the honey is in the final containers at once, before it starts to granulate, but if it is too thin it should be left in the tanks a short time for further ripening. Honey should be stored in a dry place, as it readily absorbs moisture from a damp atmosphere. Honey ripening in tanks should stand in a warm, dry room. Ripened honey in containers ready for market will keep better in a cold, dry place. Section honey should be stored in a well-ventilated room where the temperature is high and constant or moisture will condense on the cappings and be absorbed.

Hospital for Sick Children

67 COLLEGE ST., TORONTO

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Your readers have probably had their appetite for statistics satiated during the past few months. Still they will, no doubt, want to know something of the work accomplished by the hospital to which they have so generously contributed in the past. They are shareholders in a Mission of Mercy. Their dividends are not paid in coin of the realm. May I trespass upon your space to outline what those dividends are?

Firstly, the daily average of children occupying cots in the Hospital for Sick Children was 255. The total cared for as in-patients was 6,397. That is equivalent to the population of a good-sized Ontario town.

And secondly, the out-patient department. This is a wing of offices given over to consultation and minor operations. On an average there were 190 young callers a day.

That is where the dividends are earned—in the difference made in the lives of thousands of children through the voluntary contributions which render it possible to maintain an institution where pallid cheeks become rosy and twisted limbs are made straight.

It that were not dividend enough, one might try to estimate the enormous salvage of child-life in Ontario which has taken place since "Sick Kids" doctors and "Sick Kids" nurses have been going out through this province equipped with a knowledge of children's diseases, which they could not get except in some such highly specialized and pre-eminent institution as the Hospital for Sick Children.

On this year's service the Hospital expended $345,126 and finds itself in the hole to the extent of $124,284. What comes in around Christmas-time keeps the Hospital going. So long as the word "Christmas" retains its original significance could any charity possibly enlist more of the sympathy of your readers or entitle itself to more of their support?

Faithfully yours,
I. E. ROBERTSON,
Chairman Appeal Committee

SCRAP-BAG GIFTS.

Christmas is coming, so let's see what dainty gift possibilities the scrap bag holds, though, indeed, it is equally useful when birthday anniversary and hope-chest remembrances are in order.

Every bit of silk, lace, ribbon, left-over yarn and half yards of material should be used up, and there are ways for the ingenious woman to make them into unusual gifts.

There is nothing which so pleases the little girl as doll clothes. Make her a little bathing suit for her rubber or celluloid baby, using an old woolen stocking, binding it with gay red ribbon, and a little cap made from a torn rubber glove or the pieces of a discarded bathing hat.

A velvet or silk evening cape; a little feather or ribbon hat; underwear that will come off; a knitted blanket, a foot gauge made from a small ball of rose wool; a little white bedspread—these will bring their reward in a child's gratitude.

If the men are handy with tools make a doll house for the child. Partition it into four rooms with tiny doors and proceed to furnish it from the scrap bag. The pleasure one gets in making tiny draperies for the windows, choosing small pieces of silk and velvet for door hangings and cushions, dressing the pasteboard furniture in muslin sheets or gold-thread tapestry as required, is such as is never found shopping in town for the expensive doll or mechanical plaything you want to give a little girl on Christmas.

Flowers are used on so many things now that they are a most acceptable gift. Make them of organdy, velvet, taffeta or satin and trim with lace or embroidery. It is easy to pick up effective ideas for such work, and both maker and receiver will be pleased with the gift.

Beautiful pillow covers for the bed or couch can be made from half-yard pieces of silks or linen. Eye-net combines beautifully with linen—a deep rose cushion, veiled with cream net, making an ideal gift for a friend's hope chest.

The porch can always find use for any number of square, round or oblong cushions covered with cretonne, percale, gingham or rep. Plain backs of a contrasting color, using the same in applique on the front, permit using small scraps.

Don't forget aprons! One cannot make the large kitchen aprons from small pieces, but the refreshment or hostess aprons offer no end of opportunity to the scrap-bag possessor. A very quaint black satin one was made from a long narrow piece of material, wide as the width and only half a yard long. Turned about, the top slightly tucked at the waistline and ribbons attached, it became a great favorite with its gay orange velvet applique.

Bits of left-over crochet cotton may be used up advantageously in making three-inch flit initials for towels or making lace out of short lengths of rickrack or braid. One girl was pleased as could be with a half dozen initials and trimming for the end of as many towels for her hope chest.

A yard and a half of material can be cut beautifully into one of the popular bed or breakfast jackets. A combing jacket made of voile is always useful and can often be made with a yard, if the piece is used over the head diagonally, and short under the arms.

Don't overlook the gingham luncheon sets. Perhaps by combining two kinds of material the little dollies and napkins can be made, trimmed with cross-stitch or applique. Just the lunch cloth alone, made of gingham with a plain border or unbleached muslin with a deep checked border, makes a nice gift for the busy woman.

Remember the old crewelwork in yarn and give everything a touch of it. Think over the possibilities and copy the clever work you have seen. Make a doll light, a candle lamp shade, a telephone mask, underwear, silver or typewriter covers of flannel, bookmarks of ribbon with flower end weights—anything.

Get out the scrap bag to-day!

THE AFTERNOON CUP OF TEA.

If I wish to serve an especially tasty cup of afternoon tea I use orange flavoring, many people preferring this to lemon. To give the tea a delicate flavor put dried orange peel in a closed jar with cube sugar. In a few hours the sugar will absorb the orange flavor just enough to make a cupful of sweetened tea delicious. Sliced lemon served with the orange-flavored sugar adds to the tea for some people.

WATCH THE ASH PAN.

Ashes allowed to accumulate in the fire box of a stove will cause the lining to burn out. Ashes will also interfere with the heating of the rest of the stove. To lengthen the life of the stove, keep the ash pan empty. When a full pan of ashes becomes hot, it will keep the grate of the stove so hot that it will warp and burn out, and sometimes cause the oven to warp. When a housewife tries to build a fresh fire in a stove with a full ash pan, she will have to take twice as long before she gets her stove heated satisfactorily. It is also a waste of good fuel.

Oil From Locusts.

Locusts, the greatest pest to crops that South Africa possesses, provide a wonderful aeroplane engine oil. They are being exported from South Africa for that purpose.

The Railway General Managers' Bulletin of Johannesburg, states that eighty-eight bales of locusts, weighing approximately eighteen tons, were forwarded recently from Kazerne to Durban for shipment to Holland.

The locusts will be used principally for feeding livestock and poultry, while a small proportion of oil will be extracted and used in connection with aeroplane engines.

Special properties are reported to have been found in the oil, which is said to retain its liquidity at a very high altitude.

Love Gives Itself

THE STORY OF A BLOOD FEUD

BY ANNIE S. SWAN.

CHAPTER I.—(Cont'd.)

Peter Garvock was a long, lean, harsh-featured man, with coal-black and rather fiery eyes, a thin, but extraordinarily mobile mouth, capable of expressing far better than his somewhat slow tongue the emotions of his soul. They were chiefly aggressive emotions it must be admitted. Peter Garvock was one of those aggressively masterful men who get what they want in this world by demanding it in a very loud and no uncertain voice.

They talked briefly of the event which affected both families, but did not, of course, come to any intimate details until they were alone at the luncheon table, with no one within ear-shot.

"So you're not going back, Alan. You didn't care for Bombay?"

"I didn't care for Bombay?"

"That was the round peg in the square hole, Peter, and I daresay they've told you that. Old Mackerrow would, anyway, I'm sure. He was often enough rubbing it into me that my place was at Stair."

Mackerrow was the Managing Director of Garvock's in Bombay, and to him Alan Rankine undoubtedly owed what little success he had had in his attempts to make good in commercial life.

"Mackerrow didn't say much, but how are you going to do, Alan? Things are down almost to rock-bottom. You couldn't be better to let the place" ("see" being in his cousin's look Stair with the words.

"I haven't much to spare, since you came on the scene," she answered, and her glance, provokingly inscrutable, left him in complete doubt as to her meaning. "I promise you I won't snarl at him. You may go and talk to father presently, and send Stair—as you call him—to get his tea from my hand."

Peter went, nothing loath. His opinion of himself, never at any time a small one, had advanced by leaps and bounds since Carlotta had accepted him.

"Carlotta wants to talk to you, Alan," he said at his cousin's elbow. "And here is your tea, Professor. How are the fossils getting on? Found any fresh ones lately?"

Alan Rankine, not willing, yet inwardly glad—if so strange a contradiction is possible—stepped to the table where Carlotta sat.

"I have come because Peter sent me. I suppose I ought to say how glad I am that soon we shall have a new cousin at The Lees, and a very charming one?"

"And you do not wish to say it. Is that what I am to infer?" she said, with a little, mocking, half-defensive note in her voice.

"Why should I not wish to say it? Now you are unkind," he said in a low voice, as he stooped to take the cup she offered. "I am a little overwhelmed, that is all."

"By what?"

"By you."

"I am insignificant, a person of no account in the world except to a very few—that old man"—she added, bending eyes that were marvels of tenderness towards the white head in the distance—"and my mother—"

"And Peter? Surely he must be included?"

She gave no answer to that.

"Tell me about your poor sister. Do you know, Mr. Rankine, that she is the only woman who has actually spoken to and looked at me in true friendly fashion since I came to this place?"

"I am glad that she happened to be that one," answered Rankine promptly. "But what you tell me is unthinkable!"

"It is true," she answered, and, leaning her elbow on the table, she permitted herself to look for a brief moment into his lean, brown, handsome face. "We are aliens here."

in one hand, while, with the other, he pushed back his spectacles among his hair.

"Rankine of Stair? That name certainly occurs in some of the old Scottish Records," he said, surveying the tall figure with much interest.

Rankine laughed.

"I don't doubt it, sir; and not always creditably! We have been in at the death a good many times in the old days. I am flattered to think my name signifies something to your imagination."

The old man, liking the frank hearty tones of the pleasant voice, mentioned him to a chair, sat down beside him, and Peter was free to go to his sweetheart's side.

"Well, how do you like his looks, Carlotta?" asked Peter, and his slow gaze became quick and impassioned as it swept over her already changing face.

"He is a very large person," she answered, and there was a strange note of petulance in her voice. "Does he always take up all the room there is?"

Peter laughed in evident enjoyment. "You must ask him, Carlotta. Be kind to him, poor chap," he added, with a consideration surprising in him who, until now, had had so few thoughts to spare for others. "His father died this morning, and it is a pretty tough row he has come home to."

"But he'll do it," said Carlotta, though her eyes did not travel towards Stair with the words.

"I shall tell him you said that, or would you like to tell him yourself?" asked Peter. "I haven't much to spare, since you came on the scene," she answered, and her glance, provokingly inscrutable, left him in complete doubt as to her meaning. "I promise you I won't snarl at him. You may go and talk to father presently, and send Stair—as you call him—to get his tea from my hand."

A Little Bird Writes Copy.

There are many stories about Horace Greeley's handwriting, which is said to have been the worst ever seen even in a newspaper office. Perhaps the best of the yarns is the following:

There was only one compositor in the Tribune office who could read Greeley's copy. One day while the compositor was out a bird had flown into the office, walked into some printing ink and then on a number of loose sheets lying on the floor.

"Why," said one of the printers, picking up a sheet, "this looks like the old man's writing." So saying, he fastened the sheets together and put them on the absent compositor's case.

Presently the compositor came back and with all eyes turned on him picked up the sheets and to the amazement of the room started setting up the supposed "copy."

Presently, however, he hesitated at a word and asked the man nearest him what it was.

"How should I know?" was the reply. You know that you alone can read the old man's writing. Better ask him."

Reluctantly the baffled compositor took the sheet to Greeley's sanctum.

"Well," said the great man, "what is it?"

"It's this word, Mr. Greeley."

Greeley snatched the sheet from the man's hand, looked at the alleged word and threw himself back with a snort of disgust. "Why," he shouted, "any fool could see what it is! It's 'unconventional!'"

Not His Fault.

"Why, Charles, how much you look like your father," remarked a visitor to the little 4-year-old.

"Yes'm," answered Charles, with an air of resignation, "that's what everybody says, but I can't help it."

Those who refuse the long drudgery of thought, and think with the heart rather than the head, are ever the most fiercely dogmatic in tone.—Bayne.

HEALTH EDUCATION

BY DR. J. J. MIDDLETON
Provincial Board of Health, Ontario

Dr. Middleton will be glad to answer questions on Public Health matters through this column. Address him at Spadina House, Spadina Crescent, Toronto.

What kind of person you are is due, in some measure, to heredity, but environment also plays a great part in your disposition and general character. If you are surrounded by uplifting and ennobling influences, the tendency is for you to become a better man or woman. If, on the other hand, your surroundings are mean, squalid or debased, there is little likelihood of your leading a life above, or even equal to that of the average mortal.

What kind of people we really are. There is little need of emphasizing the importance of heredity. We do inherit traits of character from our parents, but sometimes there are great differences even among brothers and sisters. One may have generous traits, the other mean and hard as nails. Brothers and sisters may not even resemble each other in looks.

We are strange, nervous mechanisms, we humans, fearfully and wonderfully made. S. T. Ballenger of New York, at a convention of paint and varnish-makers, told this remarkable story of the effect of such a commonplace thing as wall paper: "A young soldier, mentally wrecked by shell-shock, was experimented on by doctors. Taken to a room where everything was a vivid red, he shrieked with agony. Then they led him to a primrose yellow room. He sighed heavily and drifted into deep sleep. Kept in this room, he rapidly recovered to normal. Ballenger says scientists have discovered that a room furnished in a dark color tends to cause melancholia and an aversion to work. A red room temporarily stimulates, then reacts in nervous headaches. Blue induces calm. Green seems to impart happiness and vitality. Yellow makes people amiable, contented, soothed. This is a good tip when you redecorate your home.

Too often we are the victims of environment. What a lot of harm can be wrought in a family by a hard-hearted and thoughtless parent! How many children have left the old homestead because they did not receive any affection or even consideration! Lack of sympathy and lack of interest among members of a family are the cause of many a wrecked home. Then, too, the common practice of nagging or fault-finding is bad and often leads to dire results.

An environment that is pleasant and helpful makes for a higher and better standard of living and the reverse tends only to produce unhappiness, lack of interest in things worth while and a general disposition to take a distorted view of life.

The Oil Palm.

Unlike the date and the coconut palm, the oil palm is not at all well known. Nevertheless, it is exceedingly useful. In the Congo, writes Mr. Isaac F. Marcosson in An African Adventure, and for that matter in virtually all of West Africa, it is the staff of life.

Thousands of years ago the Egyptians used the sap for embalming the bodies of their kingly dead. To-day the oil palm not only represents the most important agricultural industry of the colony, it has long since surpassed rubber as the premier product—but it has an almost bewildering variety of uses. It is food and drink and shelter. From the trunk the native extracts his wine; from the fruit comes oil for soap, for salad dressing and for margarine; with the leaves the native makes a roof for his house; with the fibre he makes his mats, his baskets and his strings for fishing nets. The wood itself he uses in building. An oil palm will bear fruit within seven years after the young tree is planted. The fruit comes in what is called a regime, which resembles a huge bunch of grapes; each fruit in the cluster is approximately the size of a large date. The outer part, which is called the pericarp, is almost entirely yellow oil incased in a thick skin. Imbedded in the oil is the kernel, which contains a finer oil. The fruit is boiled down, and the kernels are dried and exported in bags to England, where they are broken open and the oil in them used for making margarine.

For hundreds of years the natives have gathered the fruit of the palm and have extracted the oil. The waste at first was enormous; the blacks threw away the kernels because they were unaware of the valuable substance inside.

London Bridge.

The folk that live in London,
They cross, with little heed,
The bridge their fathers builded
To carry them at need.

The folk that come to London,
Hotfoot from everywhere,
They loiter by the arches,
And lift their eyes and stare.

And, London-born or strangers,
Men cross before they die
The famous bridge of London,
Beneath the London sky.

—Eric Chilman.

THANKFUL MOTHERS

Once a mother has used Baby's Own Tablets for her little one she would use nothing else. The Tablets give such results that the mother has nothing but words of praise and thankfulness for them. Among the thousands of mothers throughout Canada who praise the Tablets is Mrs. David A. Anderson, New Glasgow, N.S., who writes:—"I have used Baby's Own Tablets for my children and from my experience I would not be without them. I would urge every other mother to keep a box of the Tablets in the house." The Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative which regulate the bowels and sweeten the stomach; drive out constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fevers and make teething easy. They are sold by medicine dealers, or by mail at 25c. a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Cross the Atlantic on the "Paris."

"The liner, she's a lady," wrote Kipling, and he must have had in mind this namesake of the world's enchanting capital, the "Paris." At first sight of this thoroughbred of the seas, the grace of her design impresses you even more than the immensity of her proportions.

The "Paris" is French in every line and detail. The furnishings, the cuisine, the conveniences, the comfort, the atmosphere of culture and luxury are essentially French. When you walk up the gang-plank you are in France! You enjoy six days of your visit to France before you ever set foot on her soil. Famous Parisian decorators have made the cabins de luxe as fascinating as the rooms of any great chateau. In the magnificent dining salon one recognizes the same Old World courtesies that make dining so delightful in famous Parisian cafes and hotels, and the same masterpieces of culinary art are offered for the traveller's enjoyment.

The kitchens of the "Paris" are a marvel—ranges of polished steel and gleaming nickel—long rows of steam serving tables—devices for timing the cooking of delicacies—white-clad chefs who take pride in their work of converting raw material into tempting dishes.

On the "Paris" children have the happiest of voyages. Governesses who speak both English and French take entire charge. They teach French, organize games and supervise the children at mealtime. Plenty of toys and a Punch and Judy show every day! So entertaining is it that the grown-ups love to visit this happy haven and join in the merriment of the fortunate little folk.

The gymnasium is equipped with every contrivance for the maintenance of physical condition. The promenade deck and the sundeck afford opportunity for healthful exercise. The fresh ocean air gives zest to the morning walk, and you may play deck tennis, shuffleboard, golf, or a variety of other sports.

You do not need to wait until you reach Paris to enjoy the novelty of the Boulevard meal—on the cafe terrace, with its flowers and shrubs and tiny tables, you may sip luxuriously, while looking out over an ivory-crested, jade-hued sea.

For the evening there is the music of a famous orchestra for dancing in the Grand Salon; concert programmes and often the impromptu appearances of internationally known artists.

The Anglo-Saxon visitor acquires something of the French capacity for enjoyment, for the care-free laughter that makes one young again; this remains an unforgettable inspiration.

One of the French Line offices is situated at 51 Adelaide Street West, Toronto, where information is promptly supplied.

A GRATEFUL LETTER

From a Lady Made Well by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

"I wish from my heart I could persuade every person who is run down in health to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial." Thus writes Mrs. Louie Mitchell, Oak Point, Man., who further says:—"About a year ago I was a weak woman, suffering from a run down system and impoverished blood. Any little exertion would cause my legs to tremble and my heart to throb violently. I could not sweep a room or walk fifty feet without being exhausted. Then I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and after taking only 6 boxes I am as well and strong as ever. I can walk and run without stopping every few seconds gasping for breath as previously. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will be my standby in the future if ever my blood needs building up again, and I shall always find pleasure in recommending them to anyone needing a tonic."

There are many troubles due to weak, watery blood which can easily be overcome by a fair use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The sole mission of this medicine is to enrich and purify the blood and when that is done all the varied symptoms of anaemia disappear, and good health returns. You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Vast Stores of Food That We Neglect.

Why don't you eat insects? Nearly every vegetable and animal contributes something to the world's food stores, yet insects are neglected and—according to some authorities—wasted.

Why is this? It is not because insects are not good to eat. In past times they were eaten and relished by many races, and even to-day some tribes in Asia and elsewhere make them a part of their diet. Europeans eat snails and frogs, and crabs and lobsters, which are not very different from insects; but the only article of food we actually obtain from insects is honey.

In the Bible there are several instances of insects as food. Moses tells us of the Jews eating four kinds of crickets, and John the Baptist lived on locusts and wild honey. The ancient Greeks also ate locusts, and to this day many of the peoples of Africa and Arabia regard this insect as a great delicacy.

In North Africa the natives collect huge numbers of grasshoppers, which are eaten raw, as well as boiled or fried. "Insects not consumed" are dried in the sun and stored for future use.

The ancient Romans used to eat the larvae of beetles. Fabre, the famous entomologist, tried the experiment himself. "Roasted," he said, "they are juicy, tender, and tasty. There is a certain flavor of roasted almonds, with a vague aroma of vanilla."

The aborigines of Australia eat moths, which they catch at night by means of torches, while in Mexico there are certain tribes which make bread from the eggs of water-bugs. In Central America, also, honey-bugs are a popular sweetmeat.

During a famine in Ireland about three hundred years ago cockchafers were cooked and eaten.

Mind Reading

A pack of cards is shuffled by the spectators and the performer is blindfolded. He takes the cards in his hand, face downward. He names a card and turns the top card face upward. It is the card he named. In a like manner he names half a dozen or more cards.

The trick depends upon the exercise of little skill but of much old-fashioned "nerve." In the performer's pocket are eight or nine cards arranged in a definite order which the performer has memorized. In the same pocket is a handkerchief. After the cards in the pack are shuffled, the performer puts them in a rather untidy heap on the table. He reaches into his pocket and brings out the handkerchief, and hidden by the handkerchief, the pre-arranged cards. He places the handkerchief carelessly on the table. With a little care he can manage that the hidden cards will fall on those which have been shuffled. While he is being blindfolded he picks up the cards and squares them neatly. "Reading" the cards is then simplicity itself. He should never "read" all that he has pre-arranged.

A Bad Guess.

Two artists were wandering about Spain. One day, after a long walk, they arrived at a shabby little posada in a village near a big town.

They could not talk a word of Spanish, and were half dead with thirst. The sun was so hot that they did not dare to drink wine, so they decided to try to get some milk. One of them drew on a sheet of paper a picture of a cow. The other jingled some coins in his pocket.

The proprietor went out making signs that he understood. He returned later with two tickets for a bull-fight!

Provost, Alberta.—"Perhaps you will remember sending me one of your books a year ago. I was in a bad condition and would suffer awful pains at times and could not do anything. The doctor said I could not have children unless I went under an operation. I read testimonials of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the papers and a friend recommended me to take it. Pains in Left Side

Lachine, Quebec.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because I suffered with pains in my left side and back and with weakness and other troubles women so often have. I was this way about six months. I saw the Vegetable Compound advertised in the 'Montreal Standard,' and I have taken four bottles of it. I was a very sick woman and I feel so much better I would not be without it. I also use Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. I recommend the medicines to my friends and I am willing for you to use my letter as a testimonial."—Mrs. M. W. ROSA, 580 Notre Dame St., Lachine, Quebec.
