Plant Working on War Orders Blown Up

Plant at Walkerville Engaged in Turning Out Uniforms for the British Army was Partially Destroyed by a Bomb Explosion

Windsor, June 21—The overall plant of the Peabody Sales Co., Ltd., Walkerville, which has been working on a $1,000,000 order for 115,000 uniforms for the British Army, was partially destroyed at 3 o'clock this morning by an explosion, believed to be due to a bomb placed by German sympathizers.

The damage is estimated at $10,000. The entire front of the three story steel and concrete building at the corner of Sandwich street and Victoria road was blown out.

J. E. Lennox, general manager of the Peabody Company, said he had expected for some time that an attempt would be made to wreck the plant because of its acceptance of British war orders.

No direct threat had come to the company, he said, but there had been rumors that unless the company ceased turning out uniforms for the British, the plant would be destroyed.

The police of Walkerville believe the explosion was caused by German sympathizers from Detroit, and that they fled back across the river as soon as they had done their work. Three foreigners acting suspiciously, were arrested near the scene within half an hour after the explosion, but were soon released.

Twenty-seven sticks of dynamite attached to a time fuse that had been set for 3.15 a. m. were found under the rear of the Windsor armory this morning. The fuse cap attached to the dynamite had exploded, blowing off the top of the grip in which it was concealed.

The main charge, however, had failed to explode. To this fact several men stationed in the armory at night probably owe their lives.

The charge was heavy enough to wreck the whole building. It was at 3.15 a. m. that Private Ranton, the guard at the armory, heard what he believed to be a pistol shot a short distance away. With several other guards he made a hurried investigation, but discovered nothing.

Later in the morning he discovered a grip bag fifty feet from where he had been standing when he heard the report. The bag had been concealed beneath the wall, muffling the sound and making it difficult to trace it. Police and military authorities are working together in the investigation, but no tangible clue has developed.

By the time the explosion occurred, the plant was engaged in turning out uniforms for the British Army. The plant was partially destroyed by a bomb explosion.

Mgr. Richard Dead At Rogersville.

Priest and Pioneer Will be Greatly Mourned on North Shore.

After an illness lasting more than a year, the death of a noted priest, Monsignor Marcel S. Richard, domestic prelate, occurred Friday afternoon at his home in Rogersville, Northumberland county, (N. B.). The reverend clergyman returned only about a week ago from Quebec, where he had undergone treatment. His death has been expected for some time, though he held up bravely and patiently to the last.

Enjoying the esteem and respect of all his parishioners, having the distinction of recognition from Rome for his able and successful labors in the welfare of the church, Mgr. Richard will be long remembered in the Chatham diocese. To him belongs the credit of founding the thriving village of Rogersville. When he left St. Louis, Kent county, about 1885, after fifteen years of progress and success as parish priest, he took with him a band of hardy pioneers and out of the wilderness they established a community, the tiny little settlement of Rogersville of the present day. There he has spent the last thirty years of his life, promoting the spiritual and educational welfare of his people, and striving to win souls to God in his parsonage in the pretty little church he built, St. Francis de Sales. He was particularly interested in colonization and education. While at St. Louis, where he was born sixty-five years ago, he established a college and convent. Though the former is not now in use, the convent is still flourishing.

At Rogersville he was instrumental in having four religious communities settle there, including the Trappist Fathers, who have helped greatly in the development not only of the religious phase of life there, but also in the study of agriculture among the people. Mgr. Richard was educated in Memramcook, and was ordained to the priesthood in 1870. He soon came to be recognized as a leader of men, and an able priest. While stationed at St. Louis he extended the work of the parish, and his name is still fondly cherished by the people among whom he labored there.

He was elevated to the rank of Domestic Prelate by Pope Leo XIII, in recognition of his various activities, particularly as regards the spread of education, and his pastoral efficiency. He was recognized among the clergy as one of the most eminent of French-speaking priests in eastern Canada, and will be keenly missed among his people. His funeral will be held at Rogersville this morning.

Mgr. Richard was a pioneer and a priest. He was greatly mourned on the North Shore.

RUSSIAN REVERSES NOT ALARMING.

Appeal to Country to Maintain Calmness—Ammunition Situation is Improving.

Petrograd, June 22—An appeal to the country to maintain calmness, signed by the Russian general staff, is posted in public places throughout the city giving assurances that the whole truth is told in official communications and that wild rumors which are being circulated in Petrograd are unfounded.

Military men view the situation without alarm, although admitting it may be some time before Russia again is able to resume a vigorous offensive. They assert that Russia has borne for ten months the chief burden of the war, suffering the greatest losses and materially improving the situation in the west. While she is reforming for a renewal

William Young Instantly Killed Near Nelson Jct.

Was Run Down by Second No. 39 Train and Struck by Engine on the Head Fracturing His Skull.

WAS SECTION MAN ON DIVISION NO. 13

The Unfortunate Man With Frank Hare. Another Section Man, Were Returning to Newcastle After Their Morning's Inspection of the Section.

A shocking accident occurred on Tuesday morning, about half past nine o'clock, when William Young, of Newcastle, section man on Section No. 13, was struck by the engine of Second No. 39 and instantly killed. The accident occurred in a cut on a curve about one-quarter of a mile to the south of Nelson Junction. The unfortunate man, with Frank Hare, another section man, had just gone over the section, as is usual every morning, and were returning when the sad accident overtook them.

Before starting on their return to Newcastle they stopped to listen to see if they could hear sounds of any train approaching. The east wind and rain prevented them, and they had not gone far when Mr. Hare turned around, saw the approaching train and called to his companion to jump. They both jumped and were out of danger, when for some unaccountable reason the deceased man ran back to the car and placed his hand on the handle, it is thought either to try and save the car or push it ahead.

When the men on the engine first saw the car ahead, the men were standing on it, but both jumped at about the same instant. The train then was only about eight or ten car lengths from them. The emergency brakes were at once applied and the whistle sounded, but the train with her heavy load could not be brought to a standstill in so short a distance to prevent the accident, the unfortunate man being struck on the side of the head while he still held on to the handle bar, fracturing his skull and killing him instantly.

The train was immediately brought to a standstill and when it was seen that the unfortunate man was dead, the remains were tenderly picked up and brought to the Newcastle station where an inquest was held shortly afterward by Coroner Desmond.

Upon being notified, Coroner Desmond went to view the remains and then the following jurymen were sworn:

Frank Barden, Alex. Major, Roy Bent, John Dennis, William Copp, John Battie, foreman.

Four witnesses were examined, and the evidence they gave was as follows:

Frank Raymond Hare, the section man who was on the handcar with the deceased when the accident occurred, was the first witness. Sworn, he said he was a section man on the I. C. R. on Section No. 13. I identify the remains shown as those of William Young, a section man on the same division as myself. About 9.35 this morning, June 22nd, deceased and myself were going over our section of the track. We had been through the cut about a quarter of a mile to the east of the South-west bridge. Before starting to return we stopped to listen for trains, but heard nothing. The east wind and the rain would interfere with our hearing today. When about four telegraph poles from the end of the section, we looked around and seen a special coming. When I saw it I said to deceased, "Jump and run, we can't save her." I jumped on the down river, or east side of the track; he also jumped, but on the opposite side. When I recovered myself I turned and saw the engine striking the handcar. I did not see the deceased struck by the engine. When the train stopped I looked through under the cars and saw deceased lying in the ditch about a rail length ahead of where I landed. I jumped between the cars as soon as possible and lifted him out of the ditch. I called to him to speak, but got no answer and found he was dead.

This concluded Mr. Hare's evidence, and Driver Woodville Ingram was called.

Driver Woodville Ingram Sworn, Driver Ingram said he was 38 years of age; occupation, engine driver on the I. C. R. I was engineer on Second No. 39 this morning, June 22nd; have been an engineer over two years. About 9.35 this morning while coming through the cut around the curve about one-quarter of a mile to the south of Nelson Junction, the fireman and brakeman called my attention by singing out to stop. I immediately put on the emergency brakes, and at the same time looked around at the front of the engine. I saw the two men standing near the handcar; they were just leaving it. It seemed to me that after leaving the car they took a step back towards the car again. Judging the distance I concluded they could not remove the car, so I sounded the whistle. I did not see the deceased struck by the engine; I was on the opposite side from him. When I first saw the men, my engine was not more than eight or ten cars from them. They were off the car when my attention was called to them. The engine had struck one of the men. I went back to where the remains were and saw the man was dead. I knew the deceased section man, William Young, and I identify his remains. I sounded my whistle on approaching the block signal. This was about half a mile to the south of where the accident occurred. Signed, Woodville Ingram.

Venner V. Trites Brakeman Venner Trites, sworn, said he was brakeman on Second No. 39 this morning, June 22nd. About 9.35 this morning when coming through the cut and around the curve to the south of the South-west railway bridge, about a quarter of a mile south of Nelson Junction, I saw two men on a handcar. I called the driver's attention to them and told him to stop. I was on the up-river side of the engine coming up. I saw the men jump off the car, and it seemed to me they tried to shove, or get it off the track. One man disappeared; the other man came back to the car the second time. Just after this the engine struck the car. The man was then so close to the engine he could not escape being struck. I was on the same side as the deceased. I was not acquainted with him. I told the driver that one of the men had been struck by the engine. The driver and I got off and went around in front of the engine. We found some car tools in front of the engine. The driver then went back to see the man. I did not go to see the remains of deceased. Signed, Venner V. Trites.

Wilfred Pickard Wilfred Pickard, the fireman, was next called. Sworn, said he was the fireman on Second No. 39 the morning of June 22nd. About 9.35 this morning while coming through the cut and around the curve about a quarter of a mile south of Nelson Junction, I saw two men standing on a handcar. I told the driver to stop; he put on the brakes and blew the whistle. The men left the car and then came back and tried to remove the car or shove it on. One man disappeared from my view on account of the engine. The other man got on the car and a few seconds after the engine struck it. The deceased

Non-Resident Workmen Must Pay License

The Matter of Collecting Over-due Taxes and Non-Resident Licenses Discussed in Council

Newcastle Town Council met in regular monthly session on the 17th inst. Mayor Stothart in the chair. All present, Ald. Ritchie a little late.

A letter was read from R. E. Woodworth, asking for a reduction in his 1915 tax. He presented an affidavit claiming that his real estate, assessed at $1357, was worth no more than $850. In 1914 he had called the assessors' attention, but was too late to have any change made. He had written them again in March, 1915, asking that the matter be adjusted, but they had made no reduction. He was, therefore, asking justice from the Council.

Referred to B. L. P. & L. Com. Following was read from Dr. R. Nicholson, Sec. Board of Health: "The Board of Health understand from Mr. Clifford Allison that he intends if possible to convert the stream running through his property into a closed sewer. The Board have urged the necessity of this step upon different Councils as a sanitary measure and would again try to impress upon the present Council the great need there is for this work. They also hope the Council can be induced not only to assist Mr. Allison financially and otherwise but may also see the wisdom of continuing his work through the adjacent properties to a point where this stream may be no longer a menace to the health of the community."

On motion Ald. Stuart and Creagh, an communication was received and recommended to the favorable consideration of the W. L. & S. Com.

Following Finance Com. bill passed: Union Advocate $5.50

Ald. Hayward presented following Police Com. bills: Hattie Tweedie $1.75

J. D. Kennedy (2 police suits, 2 pns. police pants, 2 police caps) 92.00

$93.75 Ald. Ritchie took his seat at the Board.

Police Bills passed on motion Ald. Hayward and Doyle. Ald. Hayward submitted Chief of Police Chamberlain's request for his two weeks' vacation now, instead of later, as he wished to attend the Police Convention. Ald. Hayward recommended granting request.

Ald. Mackay and Stuart moved that request be granted.

Ald. McGrath said this was best time to collect default taxes. He did not want collections neglected those two weeks.

Ald. Hayward agreed about necessity of not stopping collections. The Police Com. would try to see that collecting went on.

Mayor Stothart said that there was $1000 less taxes in hand to date than a year ago. The feeling of the ratepayers was that collections should be made promptly. Payment of current taxes was $1000 better than last year, but default taxes were $2000 behind, making net difference $1000 poorer than last year. June and July were best months to collect taxes. It was everyone's duty to help collect. It would be a good plan to have the default list after a month or so published in the local papers. That would not be unfair to anyone.

Ald. Stables—Would it not be well to publish that all taxes must be paid promptly?

Mayor Stothart said the matter of default taxes should be given all the publicity possible. The people who are paying their taxes want the default list reduced. They are in earnest. When the taxes are well collected, it helps the collection of other bills. The long credit system should be a thing of the past. Some ratepayers didn't like the idea of paying collectors 10 per cent. commission, but the Council was going to collect, at that commission, and try to get the money in. In about two months all defaulters left should be published.

To Ald. Creagh's question as to how much default had been collected this year, Ald. McGrath replied that the lists had been summed up only a few days ago, and had not yet been handed to collectors. The lists had to be divided. Nothing had been collected from the defaulters since last year. He suggested a resolution to effect that all default taxes be immediately placed in collectors' hands.

Ald. Mackay said it was inadvisable to let the collector leave town unless the Com. made arrangements to have collection go on.

Ald. Ritchie—When will default lists be ready?

Ald. McGrath—Tomorrow morning.

Ald. Hayward wanted to hear from all the aldermen on such an important question as the policeman being off duty the fortnight.

Ald. Doyle said that the Police Com. would see that whoever took the Chief's place would also collect.

Ald. Creagh said that was the only way out of it. There was more money going now than at any other time of year.

Ald. McGrath said that for collecting taxes a policeman was always necessary. The chief could be better spared now than later, when it would be necessary to use the law in collections. The substitute would collect.

Ald. Ritchie said it was necessary to have a good tax collector in the Chief's place.

Ald. Doyle—The Police Com. understand that the people want taxes collected, and will attend to it.

Motion carried.

Ald. Stuart reported that the B. L. P. & L. Com. had considered the curfew question, and had got advice of the Attorney-General and the Town Solicitor. He asked that Com. be given extension of time to prepare the By-Law. This was granted on motion of Ald. Mackay and Ritchie.

Russians Driven Back By Austrian Regiments

Hotly Pursued by Austro-Germans, Russians Preparing to Evacuate Lemberg

Berlin (via The Hague), June 21—Lemberg is about to fall before the eyes of the Kaiser. The Russians are preparing to evacuate the city.

Since early yesterday trainloads of Russian wounded have been hurrying out of Lemberg. They are moving northeast in the direction of Brody, five miles from the Russian frontier. Aviators have brought word that several trainloads of heavy guns used in the defence of Przemysl are being moved out of Lemberg.

Hotly pursued by the Austro-Germans, the Russians who were driven out of Grodek, fell back toward Lemberg on a line paralleling the lakes. Through the gap between Lakes Prosdowcki and Czernianski, General Mackensen rushed flying columns of Russian wounded have been hurrying out of Lemberg. They are

Lt. Col. Becher Killed in Action

The Fourth Canadian Commander Killed—Two Others Among Wounded

Ottawa, June 18—After three weeks' rest the first Canadian Division has been again in action. The First Brigade has taken part in the latest fighting of the British forces, presumably in the battle at Festubert, where the official memorandum of the British War Office states that a line of German trenches had been taken and the second penetrated in part, but the ground had to be yielded.

Lieut. Col. Becher, of London, second in command of the First Battalion, has been reported killed, and it is believed that the losses in this regiment will be considerable. The First Brigade consists of the First, Second, Third and Fourth Battalions, under the command of Brigadier General Mercer, of Toronto.

Ottawa has received word that all four battalions took part in the fighting, although it is understood that the losses were heaviest in the First Battalion. Outside of Col. Becher, the only officer of whom word has yet been received as figuring in the casualties is Captain Willis O'Connor, of Ottawa, who is reported slightly wounded. Capt. O'Connor is a well known figure in military and social circles at the Capital. The lists of the officers who have been killed, wounded and missing will likely be received some time today and will be made public in the usual way.

General Sam Hughes, who arrived back this morning from London Ont. has received no particulars of the action and is not certain where the Canadians are again at the front. He is anxiously awaiting details of the latest battle, in which the First Division has participated. It is believed in military circles that the latest move of the British army against the Germans in Flanders is largely with a view of relieving the pressure on the Russians in the east.

The death of Col. Becher makes the fourth Canadian colonel to be killed in action. Col. Hart McFarquhar, of the 7th Battalion; Col. Boyle, of the 10th, and Col. Birchall, of the 4th, were all killed in the battle of St. Julien while leading their men in charges against the German line. Two colonels in addition have been wounded, Lieut. Col. Buel, of Brockville, of the 4th Battalion, and Lieut. Col. Percy Guthrie, M. L. A., of Fredericton, who succeeded Col. Boyle as commander of the 10th.

GUARD BABY'S HEALTH IN THE SUMMER

The summer months are the most dangerous to children. The complaints of that season, which are cholera infantum, colic, diarrhoea and dysentery, come on so quickly that often a little one is beyond aid before the mother realizes he is ill. The mother must be on her guard to prevent these troubles, or if they do come on suddenly to cure them. No other medicine is of such aid to mothers during hot weather as is Baby's Own Tablets. They regulate the stomach and bowels and are absolutely safe. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

AFTER CLEAN-UP DAY, WHAT?

The Cultivation of Civic Pride a Necessary Factor to The Clean Town

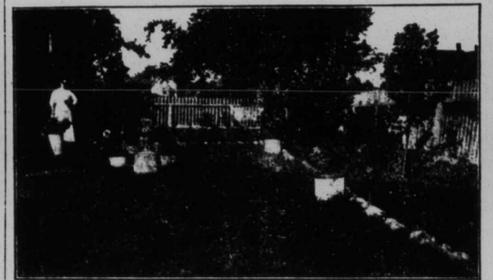

In many cities and towns of Canada, the annual clean-up day has been observed. Refuse and litter have been removed. Yards have been tidied up and made presentable. This result has been secured through the active agitation of public bodies and private individuals interested in the sanitary and cleanliness and town movement.

But why should this laudable effort be restricted to annual clean-up days?

In Canada, owing to the covering mantle of snow which hinders the complete removal of garbage and other refuse, there is some slight excuse for the untidy conditions found in the spring. As this excuse is not applicable, however, during at least eight months of the year, there is no reason why, after the spring clean-up, the improved conditions should not be continued.

has been beautified almost entirely at the expense of labour, the monetary outlay being negligible. The cottage is that of a workman, but the surroundings, the pride of ownership, have succeeded in creating that place of all places, home. There are many nice little cottages in Newcastlo with sufficient garden room in front that could be made to look as attractive as the illustration shown here. What is now a bare patch with "the green grass all around," could be made up into flower beds which would add considerably not only to the beauty of that particular home, but to the town as well.

There are other cases where there is no lawn, but where the expenditure of a few dollars would replace a broken down and worn out fence. Every citizen has a certain amount of respect for his home town.

The cultivation of civic pride is a necessary factor in the clean-city objective. The officers of municipalities, and especially the newspapers, have it in their power to create and foster this spirit of pride. With the incentive of respect for the home town, it becomes a duty of first importance on the part of its residents to see that its roads, sidewalks and open spaces are kept clean, to protect its trees, and in every way possible to preserve and beautify their homes.

Each householder can add a beauty spot to his town. True, this space may not be large, but there are very few homes without sufficient space for either a flower-bed or a piece of well-kept lawn. The illustration herewith shows what can be done in the way of improving the appearance of the home. This plot but many of us, sad to say, do not make an endeavor to show that respect in a manner beneficial to our own interests. We admit to ourselves that we have the best town on the map, but we do not do the things to convince the prospective new-comer that we have the best town to live in. We depend too much on some one else to do the convincing.

Just look at the above illustration, figure out how near your own lawn can be made to duplicate it, then figure out the cost—don't put it off, but go ahead, and then note what a short time will elapse before your neighbor will be following your example. The good housewife in the picture is viewing with pride the result of her efforts in making her home beautiful. You can enjoy the same pride if you take the same interest she has taken.

"The Paths of Glory Lead But to The Grave"

Lieut. Reginald A. J. Warnford, Who Won Fame by Destroying a Zeppelin Single Handed in an Aerial Fight, Plunged to His Death

Paris, June 17—Lieut. Reginald A. J. Warnford, who gained fame recently by blowing to pieces a Zeppelin over Belgium, was killed today by the fall of an aeroplane at Buc, France.

Lieut. Warnford was piloting the machine, which had as a passenger, Henry B. Needham, the American writer, who was also killed.

Lieut. Warnford and Needham fell from a height of 500 feet. The Lieutenant had been spending a few days in Paris, where he came after his Zeppelin exploit to receive his decoration of the Legion of Honor. According to a report received in Paris, the accident resulted from an explosion in mid-air, which caused Lieutenant Warnford to lose control, the machine crashing to earth. Needham's body was taken to the English hospital in Trianon Palace, Versailles. He had been in Europe about four months as a correspondent of magazines and a New York newspaper. He had received permission from the military authorities to make a flight in order to get material for a story. His wife, who also is a writer, accompanied him during the early part of his trip abroad. Mrs. Needham sailed for America six weeks ago.

The death of Lieut. Warnford caused much regret among the French people, his exploit having made him as popular here as in England. Since his arrival in Paris he had been the object of attentions on the part of military men and the public generally. Only last night he was the guest at dinner of friends who desired to honor him. It was given in a restaurant, in Paris, and at the end, a Count, who is a member of the French nobility and who was one of the patrons of the restaurant, approached Lieut. Warnford's table and in French congratulated the aviator, Warnford replied in English, which a companion interpreted to the Count. Before the interpretation had finished Warnford arose and shouted "Long Live France" and "Long Live the Allies," which was greeted with cheering.

SUFFERED EVERYTHING

For Years, Restored To Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Canadian women are continually writing us such letters as the two following, which are heartfelt expressions of gratitude for restored health:

Glanford Station, Ont.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and never found any medicine to compare with it. I had ulcers and falling of womb and doctors did me no good. I suffered dreadfully for years until I began taking your medicine. I also recommend it for nervousness and indigestion."—Mrs. HENRY CLARK, Glanford Station, Ont.

Chesterville, Ont.—"I heard your medicines highly praised, and a year ago I began taking them for falling of womb and ovarian trouble. My left side pained me all the time and just before my periods which were irregular and painful it would be worse. To sit down caused me pain and suffering and I would be so nervous sometimes that I could not bear to see any one or hear any one speak. Little specks would float before my eyes and I was always constipated. I cannot say too much for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, for there are no medicines like them. I have taken them and I recommend them to all women. You may publish this testimonial."—Mrs. STEPHEN J. MARTIN, Chesterville, Ontario, Canada.

Stomach Troubles Quickly Cured

People go on suffering from little stomach troubles for years, and imagine they have a serious disease. They over-eat or over-drink and force on the stomach a lot of extra work, but they never think that the stomach needs extra help to do the extra work. If these people would take TONOLINE Tablets regularly they would be a great big help to the stomach in its straits of over-work. No matter what you eat or drink TONOLINE tabs sweeten your sour stomach and stop gas belching in five minutes. The heaviness disappears, and the stomach is greatly aided in its work of digestion.

TONOLINE Tablets not only promptly relieve all distress, but if taken regularly will absolutely cure indigestion by building up the flabby, overworked walls of the stomach and make them strong enough to digest the most hearty meal. $1 for a 50 days' treatment. WEEDS ON VACANT LOTS

What undoubtedly constitutes a menace to those farmers who are making an honest effort to keep their farms clean is the crop of weeds found growing on vacant lots and roadsides in and around our towns and cities. These vacant lots are often nothing more nor less than nurseries and breeding places for all kinds of weeds. This is especially true of towns where large areas adjoining have been subject to wildcat sub-divisioning and have had roadways ploughed, forming lodging places for weeds, which are allowed to grow unmolested. These produce countless numbers of seeds, to be blown and scattered by the winds over the farms. So far, bulletins, articles and advice pertaining to weed control have been directed at the farmer. A glance at the conditions found in most of our cities and towns will prove convincing that the farmer is not entirely to blame in the matter of weed seed production and distribution.

In the West the weed inspectors are being trained and instructed along lines that will enable them to assist the farmers in weed control, while at the same time provision by law is made to prevent any farmer from allowing his farm to become a breeding place for weeds and a menace to his neighbours. In most towns there are by-laws covering the weed problem but too often they are not enforced. Those living in towns and cities should co-operate and do their bit in the war against weeds. This is an important matter, and should receive strict attention by every town council. Action should be taken at once and not deferred until the weeds ripen and scatter their seeds.—F. C. N.

MR. BRYAN AND THE AMERICAN NOTE

The rejoinder of President Wilson to the German reply to his former note of protest on the sinking of the Lusitania is couched in language so amiable and courteous, that public opinion both in his own country and in Canada wonders why Mr. W. J. Bryan resigned his position in the Wilson cabinet rather than sign it. There is certainly nothing in it of a belligerent tone. In fact the note is regarded in many quarters as even less imperative than its predecessor.

Mr. Bryan's action has brought him in for so much criticism in his own country, that it seems superfluous to criticize him in Canada. But when he begins a campaign of agitation calculated both to relieve Germany of her condemnation, and to deny Great Britain of her just esteem and honour, Mr. Bryan commits an offence against every right thinking citizen of the world over.

And Mr. Bryan will speak to a much wider audience than the American people to whom the first statement of his campaign absurdity is addressed. In his manifest published within a few hours of relinquishing his official duties, he blames the whole European war upon an obsolete system of diplomacy. One by one, he says, the nations were drawn into the conflict.

This implies a number of things. Among others, it implies that each nation is to blame for the conflict, each of the nations at war. Germany is exonerated of the greater part of the blame, and the nations fighting to save civilization from barbarians are put in the same category as the barbarian nation itself.

Leaving aside the fact that Mr. Bryan chose a strange time for his crusade to alter the existing system of international diplomacy, the fact stands out that he has cast upon Great Britain and her Allies, the same shameful reflection that established facts have cast upon Germany, and Austria-Hungary.

But, as a contemporary points out, the American people know the facts and Mr. Bryan knows them. They know that Germany went to war to exercise her militaristic strength for imperial purposes. They know that Austria went to war to exterminate a path. They know that Germany ravished Belgium with a cynical disregard for the rights of smaller nations.

All this Mr. Bryan condones and excuses. Germany is not to blame. Austria is not to blame—it is the system. Russia, which stood up for Serbia, and Great Britain, which stood up for Belgium, are given the same rank in Mr. Bryan's conception as the blood-thirsty Germans and Austrians.

That is what Canadians resent, and that is what the vast majority of the American people will resent. What, then, is the explanation of Mr. Bryan's wandering in his mind?

In the light of the comparatively mild character of the latest American note—which terrified Mr. Bryan into resignation, according to his own explanation—the reason for this politician's sensational course is obvious. Mr. Bryan was piqued at something he will not tell. And in order to give a shadow of justification to his desertion of the ship of state at a critical time, he must scoundrel about in the maze of international affairs of which, as his term in office abundantly proved, he has only hazy and half-baked ideas. All this would be the business of the American people, if Mr. Bryan kept his hands off the allies. But when Mr. Bryan makes an assault upon the honor of the nations fighting for liberty and humanity, he strikes fire from the heart of every British patriot.

of Flanders and in the fens of Holland for some great cause. A century before Napoleon's time Louis the Fourteenth, the arrogant autocrat who, when someone spoke in his presence of the State, answered: "The State? I am the State," tried to add the Low Countries to his swollen dominions. British troops, under Marlborough, at Ramillies, Oudenarde and other hard-fought fields in the very region now the scene of still more heroic struggles, beat back the regions of France. Another step into the past brings us to the Elizabethan era, when the stout captains of the English Queen not only spined the beard of the King of Spain in the Biscayan ports, but aided greatly in the struggle of the United Netherlands to maintain their hard-won freedom. Who does not know the story of the gallant and debonair Philip Sidney, poet and soldier too, who at Zutphen, a little over three centuries ago, turned away the cup from his parched lips as he lay on the field fatally wounded, and insisted that the precious water to a common soldier lying near who needed it more? Five centuries back Agincourt, fought in October, 1415, was the high-water mark of English power in northern France. And, again, at La Bassee and Festubert, as at Agincourt, the cry is:

"Once more into the breach, dear friends, once more,
Or close the wall up with our English dead."

Our dead today are no less heroic than those who died on the same fields five hundred years ago. What knight of them all showed greater valor than young Warneford, the aviator whose death is reported as the result of an accident in mid-air? While the history of the British people lives in song and story the tale will be told of how, alone in the mid-heavens, he fought the crew of a great Zeppelin, and in the first decisive conflict between aeroplane and dirigible brought his giant antagonist crashing to the earth in shapeless ruin.

WHAT SANK THE "LUSITANIA"

When charged with the sinking of the "Lusitania," Germany did not finally deny that it was done by a submarine. In fact, she gloried in the feat, German clubs and associations everywhere celebrated the event—even openly until the populace compelled them to act a little more as though they had the consciences of human beings.

But, although Germany admitted the act, even officially, many arguments were put forth in vain attempts to justify the awful slaughter of non-combatants. The most common was the warning they had published, advising against sailing on that boat. Their theory seems to be that it is perfectly justifiable to kill a man provided you tell him you are going to do so.

Later they took the stand that the slaughter was to a great extent, accidental. They held that only one torpedo was fired and that they knew that one torpedo would not be sufficient to cause such a sudden sinking as to seriously endanger the lives of all on board. They stated that it was their intention to so critically injure the great ship that she would certainly sink, but only after a sufficient interval to allow those on board to escape by the boats. In confirmation of this, they claimed that there was a second terrific explosion after the torpedo had done its work. They claimed that the second explosion was the blowing up of a large quantity of ammunition which they say that ship carried, and that it was this second explosion which caused so sudden a sinking.

A very brief consideration of well known instances of the blowing up of magazines completely disproves this lame excuse, as has been the case with all of their other contentions.

In the cases of the Russian ship Petropavlovich, the Japanese ship Hatause, the French ship Liberte, and the United States ship Maine, the explosion of the magazine caused an almost immediate sinking barely two or three minutes elapsed between the explosion and complete disappearance. In the cases of the ship's Maine and Liberte, it was possible to examine the wrecks. In both cases it was found that the entire deck above the magazine had been blown up, bodily lifted up and folded back upon the remaining deck, just as one would turn the leaf of a book. There is no reason to believe that there would be any different action in the case of the "Lusitania." Yet, there is absolutely no evidence of such action and no evidence whatever of any explosion of the magazine.

The truth is that the enormous charge of the present German torpedo was ample to cause very rapid sinking of the "Lusitania" by the combined action of the explosive itself and the terrific expansive action of the gases liberated within the hull as a result of the explosion. No one knew these facts better than Admiral Von Tirpitz and his subordinate in charge of the submarine which lay in wait for the "Lusitania."

WAR SUMMARY

A century ago on Friday, upon the plains of Flanders, almost within sound of the great guns that roar around Ypres, British valor, aided at the eleventh hour by Bluecher's swift-marching Prussians, pulled down Napoleon. From that day, until the eager hands of Emperor William clutched at world-power a year ago, no British troops had been seen upon the fields of the Low Countries—the cockpit of Europe. Looking back into the centuries it seems the fate of the Islanders once in a hundred years to die on the plains

BURNING RUBBISH CAUSES FIRES

The clean-up campaign in the various cities and towns during the months of April and May, is in every way commendable. At the same time it must be held responsible for numerous small fires. Burning of rubbish in backyards, near outbuildings and wooden fences, constitutes a danger which is not sufficiently realized by those starting the fires. Sudden gusts of wind or flying embers, carry the fire to these combustible structures and they are soon in flames. In most cases, the losses are not large, but this result may be credited almost entirely to the watchful care and readiness of local fire departments.

Too much attention cannot be given to the burning of leaves and other refuse, and the custom of leaving such fires to the care of irresponsible children should be discontinued.

THE DAWN OF YOUNG WOMANHOOD

Girls upon the threshold of womanhood often drift into a decline in spite of all care and attention. Even strong and lively girls become weak, depressed, irritable and listless. It is the dawn of womanhood—a crisis in the life of every girl—and prompt measures should be taken to keep the blood pure and rich with the red tint of health. If the body is not in a healthy condition at this critical stage, grave disorders may result, and future life become a burden. Deadly consumption often follows this crisis in the lives of young women. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have saved thousands of young girls from what might have been life-long invalidism or early death. They are a blood-builder of unequalled merit, strengthening weak nerves and producing a liberal supply of rich, red blood, which every girl needs to sustain her strength.

Over and over again Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have proved their value to women and girls whose health was failing. Miss Jennie Gereau, St. Jerome, Que., says: "At the age of eighteen my health was completely shattered; I was suffering from anaemia with all its attendant evils. The trouble forced me to leave school. I suffered from headaches, was tired and breathless at the least exertion. I had no appetite and my face and lips were literally bloodless. A good friend advised the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and thanks to this great medicine I am again enjoying good health, with a good appetite, good color and a spirit of energy."

Every anaemic girl can be made well and strong through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Are Wooden Pavements Good Pavements?

The linking up of science and industry was what Hon. W. J. Roche, Minister of the Interior, had in view in establishing a Forest Products Laboratory of Canada, under the Dominion Forestry Branch. The plan is that expert chemists and technical men devote their whole time to discovering new uses for Canadian woods and better methods for applying woods to their old uses, so that our citizens may secure the greatest efficiency and profit in handling this great natural resource. One of the fruits of this plan is the bulletin just issued by the Forestry Branch on "Treated Wood Block Paving." The question of wooden paving is a most important one to Canada which has such a great surplus of this material. The bulletin tells of the results obtained in European, United States, and Canadian municipalities in using wood for paving and gives the methods by which the best results have been obtained. Any resident of Canada interested may have a copy of this bulletin free by writing to the Director of Forestry, Department of the Interior, Ottawa.

CONCERNING WAR MUNITIONS

The Liberal press of Eastern Canada was somewhat taken aback the other day when General Bertram explained the part that Canada was playing in the matter of supplying the Allies with war munitions. The Ottawa Free Press, the leading Liberal paper at the capital had a prominent editorial, which, did our space permit, would be worthy of reproduction in its entirety. As it is, the following quotations will serve to show the tone of it pretty well.

"What Britain has begun to do today after the lapse of seven months, what Britain has formed a coalition cabinet for the purpose of carrying on, what Britain has just created a separate government department for with its brainiest statesman and organizer at its head—that Canada started to do within four weeks of the declaration of war."

Here is another paragraph telling what the results of the ships taken by the Canadian Government has been:

"Result: Canada was at that time equipped to turn out 75 shells per day, importing most of the material in the component parts; Canada is today turning out between forty and fifty thousand shells per day and the component parts are mainly produced in Canada—the Dominion has already shipped 650,000 shells."

Not only the Ottawa Free Press, but also the Toronto Star another leading Liberal paper, applauds the action of the Borden Government. Calling General Bertram's statement very satisfactory, the Star goes on to say:

"The Star has been urging on the Government the advisability of mobilizing the country's manufacturing powers in the production of munitions for Great Britain and her Allies, and we feel compelled to say that this has already been done to any extent that we were not aware of."

Only gross partisanship has kept the Liberal press from acknowledging the great work done by the Borden Government in training and equipping 100,000 men for the British army, and in preparing munitions, and so forth. The press supporting the Liberal party has been much more concerned with the few and unimportant instances of grafting and so forth than with the military progress as a whole. One eightieth of one per cent. represents the losses Canada sustained through frauds—and frauds which the Government is doing its best to punish and correct, be it noted—but the eyes of the Liberal press are fastened on that loss, so that their vision cannot encompass any of the great work that is being done. It is pleasing however to see papers like the Free Press and The Star, broad-minded enough to recognize good work when it is put squarely before their judgment.

ENDED IN SMOKE

The resolution condemning the encouragement of smoking among soldiers at the front created a stormy scene at the Methodist Conference in Toronto. It was passed at one session, but was brought up again at the next by Rev. Dr. German, who moved that it be rescinded. He referred to the man who sat in his study reading the war news, and yet did not want the soldiers in the trenches, fighting our battles, to smoke. Rev. Dr. Chambers said: "I think it a great pity that this resolution was brought before the meeting, and I am among the ministers who deeply regret that it was accepted. I also wish to express my regret that Conference went out of its way to throw slurs upon our soldiers." Several members defended the resolutions and the debate waxed warm, with many interruptions, but Dr. German's motion to rescind was finally ruled

German Spies Blow Up
Russian Munition Factories

Chief Cause of Lack of Equipment Among the Czar's Forces
---Officers Hanged for Espionage

New York, June 21—John F. Bass, an American war correspondent, who has been with the Russian army in the east since last August, returned yesterday on the American L liner New York on his way back to Chicago.

"The Russian army," said Mr. Bass, "is short of ammunition, artillery, rifles and powder, which is chiefly due to a number of their magazine and ammunition depots in Russia having been blown up by German spies. One of the largest of these explosions was at Petrograd."

"The Germans have a regular system of espionage in Russia, and some of the spies are officers in the Russian army, who were of German descent or German born. One of these army spies was hanged at Warsaw while I was there. There were also a great deal of German influence in the Russian court, through which the spies obtained information of the movements of the army.

"If the Russian army can obtain plenty of ammunition, artillery and rifles, it can hold the Germans and lick the Austrians. I have seen a small army of 5,000 men drawn up in the rear of a battle line waiting to take the weapons and ammunition of those who were either killed or out of action."

"Indeed I have known many cases of men being sent into the trenches unarmed to take the rifles and cartridges of those who were out of action. It was the only thing the Russian commanders could do under the conditions they had to contend with."

Failed to Escape
Alfred Reitch, a German on parole here, made an attempt on Sunday to ship on a brigantine at Chatham on Sunday. But for the keen eye of Chief Chamberlain, who missed him, he would have made good his escape. He was brought back to town. He is about 35 years of age, and is one of three sailors taken off a vessel at Chatham last September.

The Master Key

The Trey O' Hearts, which has been drawing crowded houses at the Happy Hour up to the time of its conclusion last Wednesday night, is being followed by The Master Key, beginning tonight, which comes even better recommended than its predecessor. Visitors to town, who have seen it at American and other show houses, say it is a wonderful picture. The large crowds drawn to the Happy Hour by these high-class pictures, speak well of the appreciation shown the management by this popular house's patrons. Many other picture houses are charging the 20 cent admission, but although these films are more costly than the ordinary, the Happy Hour is charging the regular admission fee of ten cents.

William Young Killed

 ed was thrown into the ditch. I did not see the engine strike him, but saw him thrown into the ditch about six feet away. I do not remember if whistle was sounded between Passmore and southwest cut, Signed, Wilfred Pickard.
 Driver Ingram was recalled here and swore he sounded the whistle on approaching the block signal, which is about half a mile south of where the accident occurred. He sounded the whistle again when he applied the emergency brakes.
 This concluded the evidence and the following verdict was rendered by the jury:

THE VERDICT

"We, the jury empanelled to enquire into the death of William Young, of Newcastle, New Brunswick, which took place on the I. C. R. about a quarter of a mile south of Nelson Junction, on the morning of Tuesday, June 22nd, find, That the deceased William Young came to his death by being struck by the engine of Second No. 39, while endeavoring to save the handcar which was on the track. We find his death was accidental.

Frank Barden,
 James Haynes,
 Alex. Major,
 Roy Bent,
 John Dennis,
 William Copp,
 John Battle, foreman.

The late Mr. Young, who has been a resident of Newcastle for about twelve years, coming here from Whitneyville, was a well-known and a highly respected citizen of the town. He entered the employ of the I. C. R. as a section man just after coming to Newcastle, and has been a valued and efficient employee ever since. He was popular with his brother employees who will deeply mourn his death. To his companion employee, Mr. Hare, he was as a brother, and his absence now will bring back memories of past many happy instances in their lives together on the road.

Besides a wife, he is survived by three sons and three daughters. The sons are, Robert, employed with Baird & Peters, Newcastle; Harvey, with Ed. Dalton's livery, and Barry, the youngest, at home. The daughters, Beattie, on the North Shore Leader staff; Mabel and Cecilia at home. Three brothers and one sister also survive. The brothers, Thomas and Michael of South Esk, and James of Whitneyville. Mrs. Wm. Murray, of C. I. Road, is a sister.

Interment will take place at St. Mary's R. C. Cemetery and will probably be on Thursday morning. Mr. Young and family have the deep sympathy of a large host of friends.

Non-Resident Workmen Must Pay License

 rect, asked Chairman Mackay to explain the large item paid Maritime Foundry, so that the public would understand.

Ald. Mackay said the greater part of that amount was due to a breakdown in the large unit in the Power House, which necessitated a new shaft, a new bearing, and new crank pin. The extra bearing was necessary to secure against another break. Then there was the cost of setting up, etc.

On motion of Ald. McGrath and Creaghan, it was resolved, That all default taxes up to 1915 be placed in hands of our collectors for immediate collection.

Ald. Creaghan wanted to know whose duty it was to collect licenses from outside workmen employed in town. Would it not be well for policemen to get lists of all such strangers and force those not exempt to pay their licenses? There were many in town.

Ald. Ritchie said this suggestion was a good one. There were strangers in the mills and at other work, some of them getting big pay. The By-Laws should be enforced.

Ald. McGrath wanted to know if it were not the duty of the By-Law Com. to collect all licenses.

Ald. Creaghan suggested that the Town Clerk get lists of strangers from employers and have bills presented to them.

Ald. Doyle said it was up to the chairman of the By-Law Com. to see that the law was carried out. It was not up to the Town Clerk to see about it. The tax collector should enquire and find out as best they can.

Ald. Creaghan said it was hard for the B. L. P. & L. Com. to find out. Lists were wanted. The license for laborers was $3.00 a year; for mechanics, $5; for foremen, $10. It was up to somebody to collect. Bathurst collected a lot from such people.

Ald. Stuart said it was not the personal duty of the B. L. P. & L. Com. to collect licenses. In fact it was no one's duty. It was the duty of anyone liable to pay a license to come to the Town Clerk himself and get it. The penalty for working or doing business without the necessary license was from $2 to $40 for each offence. Anyone could complain and have the fine collected. The By-Laws provided not only for the licensing of all workmen from outside the County, except those engaged in work "undertaken or carried on by, or on behalf of the Town of Newcastle, or the School Trustees of the said Town, or of the Governments of New Brunswick or the Dominion of Canada," but all Livery Stables, Coachmen, Truckmen, etc. were also subject to license. It was the duty of all of these to get their licenses before they began work or business. For every day they neglected to do so they were liable to a penalty. But to prevent any injustice from so sudden a change of policy, the Council should instruct the Chief of Police to notify all he knew of who should pay license to do so at once and save trouble. He was not in favor of enforcing the law against the working men only—let all the licensing by-laws be equally enforced, so long as they remain by-laws.

Ald. Mackay said it was a good plan to take steps to get lists of non-resident workmen.

Ald. Stables—Why the Committee bring this matter up is to find out whose duty it is to collect licenses.

Ald. McGrath—It is the duty of the By-Law Com.

Ald. Stuart—Did you do it last year?

Ald. McGrath—It is time to begin now.

Ald. Creaghan said people who come in from outside should pay. He would not be too hard on people who live in town.

Ald. Hayward said he understood that licenses were not to be collected, but had to be applied for by those who needed them. Let a few be prosecuted and the rest will find it cheaper to come and pay up. They have as much right to pay licenses as the rest to pay taxes.

Ald. Stables—Before we can collect by law, a complaint must be laid. Complaints were laid in Bathurst.

Ald. Creaghan—Get a list, and get the collections made.

Ald. McGrath said that in cities policemen go around and attend to these matters. The police kept track of strangers. A contractor who hired strangers got licenses for them. That custom should prevail here. If our policemen went to industrial establishments he could get the names and have collections made.

Ald. Doyle—The policeman is the proper man to look after this. Have men fined for not having a license. If they did this, employers would soon learn to acquaint their workers that licenses were necessary.

After several motions were made but not seconded, it was moved by Ald. Stuart, seconded by Ald. McGrath, and carried:

That the Chief of Police be instructed to collect all licenses due the town according to the By-Laws.

Ald. Ritchie asked if Government officers (military and naval) should be on the assessment list.

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF, HAIR STOPS FALLING

Save your Hair! Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine right now—Also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf. There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store. You surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Save your hair! Try it!

Russians Driven Back

ums of cavalry and infantry. They drove the enemy eastward so rapidly that the Slaves made only a feeble attempt at resistance at their first line of trenches, three miles east of the lakes.

The Russian centre retreated so rapidly that the right flank had to give way and began falling back in confusion from Wereszyca River, north of Grodek, at daybreak Sunday. Throughout Saturday night and early Sunday the Russians continued to give ground, abandoning one after another the row of trenches on the hills east of Grodek. They are making their final stand on a four mile ridge of hills topping the rolling plain that sweeps down upon Lemberg.

Austrian Headquarters (via London), June 21—A feeling of distinct optimism prevails here regarding the outlook for the Austro-German allies in the forthcoming "third battle of Lemberg."

The Russians have been losing ground steadily in the campaign across Galicia, which has lasted nearly seven weeks, and in spite of the repeated arrivals of reinforcements have been unable to hold any of the various positions taken.

MORE BUSINESS THAN USUAL

It has been learned through Rev. C. A. S. Warneford, of Annidale, N. B., that Lieut. Warneford, R. N., who recently won the Victoria Cross and the Legion of Honor for bravery, and who has since been killed, was not a Canadian. He had visited Canada, however, and is a cousin of the rector.

WAKE UP! NEW BRUNSWICK!

The World War Demands the Supreme Effort of a United Empire

Shall Our Province Fall Behind?

It should not be supposed that contributions of a couple of thousand men, a few odd dollars, some barrels of potatoes and boxes of socks constitute our rightful sacrifice. So far not more than a handful of people in all this country have any actual realization of what the war means. These few have given their husbands or their sons to the cause of Empire. The remainder have done nothing in comparison with their abilities and their opportunities.

Our national life, our peace, our prosperity and our happiness are so dependent upon the well-being of the British Empire that only by playing our part in that Empire can we maintain our fortunate position.

Up to the present ninety-nine per cent. of us do not realize what sacrifice means, nor what is being endured by those nearer to the firing line than we are. We must give, not only of our material wealth, but of our blood, and not niggardly, but with a generous hand.

None of us wish to part with our husbands and our children, but it is better that they should serve the Empire and save our homes than that our enemies should triumph and all that we hold dear be taken from us.

*"For Romans in Rome's quarrel
 Spared neither land nor gold,
 Nor son nor wife, nor limb nor life,
 In the brave days of old."*

The 55th Regiment still requires five hundred men from New Brunswick. These men must be furnished at once, and must be recruited from New Brunswick homes. We cannot ask strangers to take our places. The duty before us is clear, however hard the part may seem. Some will lose their lives; others will be maimed; many will return.

MEX OF NEW BRUNSWICK—Once upon a time there was a man who said that he would rather be a live coward than a dead hero.

CANADIAN NEWS-PAPER DIRECTORY

McKim's 1915 Edition of Directory Now Issued

It is now nearly a quarter of a century since Mr. A. McKim, who established the first independent advertising agency in this country completed the rather ambitious task of publishing the first Directory of Canadian publications. The nine successive editions of this valuable work provide the most complete and detailed record available of the growth of Canadian periodicals.

The 1915 edition, of which we have just received a copy, shows that the great war has not seriously affected the newspapers of Canada. While the birth-rate of new publications has received a check, and the death-rate of the weak ones has perhaps increased a trifle, most of the leading papers, particularly the dailies, show very healthy increases in circulation. Three metropolitan dailies have reached or passed the hundred thousand mark.

A census of the papers listed and described in the 1915 Directory shows nearly 150 dailies, 7 tri-weeklies, 45 semi-weeklies, over 1065 weeklies, about 40 bi-weeklies or semi-monthlies, 3 bi-monthlies and 15 quarterlies—a total of over 1575 publications.

This means approximately one daily to every 10,000 families, and one weekly to every 1,500 families. From this one would infer that for a comparatively new country, Canada, is well-read.

IMPROVED SEED IN IMPROVED DEMAND

Reports received relative to the demand for seed this season indicate that the orders generally have been for higher grades. All the seed merchants, without exception, agree in this. Several consider that this to a noticeable extent is a result of the recent patriotism and production campaign. Enquiries were made in many sections of the country and the responses received were all of the one tenor, that greater care had evidently been taken in the selection of seed, and that, with

PRINTING

FINE PRINTING IS AN ART

Do you know good printing?
Do you like good printing?
Do you know that it always pays to have the BETTER kind?
Perhaps you have been used to the one class of printing and know no other.
If this is so, it is time for you to have a look around and investigate and see what's what.
Do you know you do not have to go any farther away than Newcastle to obtain the BETTER class of printing.
Perhaps you have not given it a thought, but a great deal depends on the stock used in order to get a BETTER job. Investigate this.

Last, but not the least, do you know that The Advocate Job Department turns out only this BETTER class of work. If you will read on a little further, we will tell you how and why.

1st—We cater to that class of people who use only the best stock, and who know what BETTER printing is.

2nd—In order to give these customers the class of work they want, we have to keep in stock only the best grades of material. We do not handle cheap lines.

3rd—In order, again, to be able to turn out that BETTER class of printing, we employ only experienced and competent printers, who keep abreast of the times and watch the styles.

4th—What is as important as the above is equipment. If The Advocate Job Department was not fitted out as it is, with the most modern machinery and the very latest in type faces, it could not handle the fast growing trade, that has developed in the past year, of turning out that BETTER class of printing. Only the best inks are used, because this is necessary when high grade stock is used.

Now, Mr. Business Man, if you will read the above over carefully, see how your supply stands, then get in touch with this office, we feel sure you will become a customer. Give up that old-fashioned notion that first class printing comes only from the large city printing offices. As a matter of fact, the reverse is the case, and prices are invariably lower.

REMEMBER THAT WE DO ALL KINDS OF PRINTING

For commercial use, we have superior grades of Letter, Note and Bill Head Stock, at prices and quality to suit any business and any purse. Our prices range from $2.50 to $4.00 per thousand for Letter Heads, and from $2.50 to $3.25 per thousand for Envelopes. Our Envelopes are the same material as our papers, and therefore match. We are always pleased to submit samples of stock, and prices, on application.

More Business IS WHAT WE WANT

You want the work—we want to do it for you. We have just the grade of paper you want, so why not let us get together in a co-operative way and make a strong, pull for increased business—more business than usual.

FEDORA

BY VICTORIEN SARDOU

"Tell her," she said, huskily, and tried to telegraph to him to deceive her; Fedora caught the sign and cried out: "No, he must tell me truly what he will do. If it was your mother and your brother, Loris, then it was my mother and my brother. Tell me what you will do when you know the name of—of—the man who did it. Tell me truly, Loris. I shall know if you deceive me. Olga, do not look at him. I tell you I must know."

She was becoming so excited that Olga bade him tell at once. She feared Fedora would betray herself. Loris tried to speak calmly as he answered.

"There is but one thing I can do, Fedora. I shall pursue him everywhere, no matter where he may go, and I will have his life."

Fedora clung heavily to him, devouring his face. Olga drew nearer, for she feared for what Fedora would say next.

"Yes, yes; that would be right. It is what any man would do," said Fedora. "It is what I would do. His life, yes—his life. But, my Loris, suppose it should have been a woman? Ha, ha! it is foolish, but suppose it?"

"He shall suppose nothing of the sort," said Olga, almost fiercely. "Loris Ipanoff, if you have not the wit to see that that woman is losing her mind with all these horrors, you do not deserve to have her love. Answer her no more."

Fedora turned upon her, and caught her hand in hers. "You are right, Olga. Fedora, you must not ask any more questions. Besides, no woman could have done such a thing. Thank God! only a man could have done it."

"Yes, only a man, or a fiend," said Fedora. "Now sing for me, my Loris."

He sat down, and sang for her, and she drew Olga to her side as far from Loris as she could get, and whispered in her ear: "He will find out tomorrow, and he will come here to kill me. But I will never die by his hand."

"I will come here tomorrow early and I will not leave you," said Olga.

CHAPTER XXV

While Loris sang Fedora thought, and presently, to the surprise and perhaps to the misgiving of Olga, she recovered her calmness, and no longer seemed to be dreading to see Loris get up from the piano.

"Olga, dear," she said.

"Yes."

"Induce him to go away with you. I must get some rest, or I shall say something I ought not."

Olga agreed with her, but she cast a puzzled, anxious look at her. Fedora seemed almost herself.

"I will. You want me to come early in the morning?"

"Please."

"Shall I come again after dinner tonight?"

"Oh, if you will! Let me have until dinner to rest and think, and I will gain control of myself."

"She has some plan she is keeping from me," thought Olga. "I will watch her."

In a little while she went over to the piano, and stood by the side of Loris, and whispered to him that it would be wise to leave Fedora for a time.

"I will come again after dinner, and stay all night with her. You had better be here, too. I will keep out of the way, and give you a fair chance," she added, with an attempt to jest.

"You are a good Olga," was all he said.

Fedora was even playful when she said a revoir to Loris, and made him promise that he would surely return after dinner.

Olga saw Marka in the hall as they were going down, and signaled her to follow. At the door she let Loris go on while she remained to say a word to Marka.

"Your mistress is in great trouble."

"Oh, I knew it."

"Do you want to help her?"

"I will do anything."

"Ask the proprietor to step out here," said Fedora to the footman. The proprietor came out, looked with awe at the splendid equipage, and bowed almost to the ground.

"Have you any very fine Turkish sponges?" asked Fedora.

The man declared he had a wonderful assortment.

"Then I will go into the store," said Fedora, and she alighted, and went in.

She bought not only a sponge, but various other articles, and was going out when she stopped suddenly, and said:

"I have a pet pug dog which is suffering great agonies. He must be killed. Is there nothing I could give him that would put an end to his life without pain?"

"Poison," suggested the chemist. "Poison! That is such a dreadful thing!"

"Yes, but is it the best for the dog if he must die?"

"What kind of poison?"

"Prussic acid would be the quickest."

"Give it in his food?"

"You have only to touch his tongue with it, and it will kill him if it's strong enough."

"Can you prepare me some so that it will not be dangerous to handle?"

"It is against the law to sell without an order."

"Is it?" said Fedora, in surprise. "I am sorry. I would have given my price for it. Well, never mind, unless—oh, perhaps you could get the order. I am the Princess Fedora Romanoff. Could you not procure an order for me? I will pay you for your trouble, of course."

"Oh, I could not get the order for you. You would have to get it yourself. But," he stopped, and looked all about him to see if there could be listeners. "If you would promise me not to tell that I sold it—you see, I would forfeit my license if it was known—I can let you have it. The object of the law of course is only to prevent those who would commit suicide in getting it. If you will be very careful with it there would be no harm in letting you have it."

"I think not," said Fedora, gravely. The man laughed respectfully.

"No, it is not such as you who are guilty of such folly. It is only the poor wretches who are unhappy about something—love, very often. You would be surprised, your highness, how many there are who find love a terrible thing."

He laughed again respectfully, and went back to put up the deadly poison. He put it into a pretty little glass-stoppered vial, marked it poison, and put the usual skull and cross-bones on, and gave it to her highness, who would be surprised to know that there were those who found love a terrible thing.

She paid him liberally enough to have made him suspect, but who would suspect a princess, who would be surprised to know that there were those who found love a terrible thing.

She put the vial in her bosom when she was in the carriage.

"Never mind the jeweler," she said, as she stepped in, "I will go there tomorrow, perhaps."

The last was to herself as she fell back in the seat with a look of untolerable weariness on her face.

"It seems," she muttered, "that I am not alone. There are many who find love terrible. I wonder why that should be! Perhaps they all deserve it as I do. God help them! God help them!"

The Countess Olga came after dinner, as she had promised, but she had a hurried conversation with Marka before she went up-stairs.

"Anything to tell me, Marka?"

"She went out in the carriage as soon as you were gone."

"Where to?"

"She did not take me, but the footman told me. She ordered them first to take her to a chemist's. There she bought some things—a sponge, some perfume, and a lot of things. I don't know why she bought, for she certainly did not need them."

"What did she do with the things?"

"Nothing. They were brought up to the dressing-room, and she has not looked at them."

"How has she acted?"

"Very calmly. Not as if she were happy, but as if she were resigned."

"Then I will go into the store," said Fedora, and she alighted, and went in.

She bought not only a sponge, but various other articles, and was going out when she stopped suddenly, and said:

"Very calmly. Not as if she were happy, but as if she were resigned."

held him off with a terrified gesture. "No, no, not yet," she gasped. Olga watched her closely, or rather watched the hand that remained half clenched while it held the letter. Loris watched her face, pitying her for the unhappy state she was in, and blaming himself for it. Fedora lifted the letter and read, and as she read her face, already white, became gray and with a cry that neither could understand, she crumbled the letter in her hand, and turned to Olga, tottering, sinking.

But already Olga had caught the clenched hand in a tight grasp. Loris was by Fedora's side in a second, his arm around her waist, supporting her.

"Poor little woman!" he said, "she ought never to have known anything of this."

He tried to remove the letter from her hand, but not only her tight grasp prevented it, but a word and a touch from Olga as well.

"Do not take the letter," she said. "Let me do it. She has fainted. Put her on the divan. Do not call Marka. I will tell you why in a moment."

They put Fedora on the divan, and narrowly watching the clenched hand all the time, Olga gently removed the letter from her hand. Loris paid no attention to her, but bent over Fedora, trying to restore her. Olga read the letter.

"The report of the death of your mother and brother is false, but it was officially reported for some purpose which I do not know. The report has not yet been contradicted. Both are in prison, but not harshly treated. The person signing the information against you is the Princess Fedora Romanoff, now in Paris."

"Loris, Loris! Good news!" cried Olga.

He looked at her inquiringly. "Your mother and brother are not dead. The report was false."

"Thank God for that!"

"Now, Loris, give heed to me. Never mind Fedora for a moment. It seems an odd time for it, but it is the proper time to tell you the secret Fedora would have told you but for the news that was brought to you this morning."

"Perhaps you know best, Olga."

"I do know best, Loris. Loris, do you love Fedora?"

"You know that I do. Why do you ask?"

"Because I want you to realize how much you love her. Suppose she were to be taken from you at this moment?"

"Stop, Olga!" he said, with a cry of alarm, the fear taking possession of him that Fedora was dead then.

"Look into the hand that lies clenched by her side, Loris. Open it. Do not be afraid. I know what I am saying."

The sense of a mystery subdued him to a passive action. He took up the hand, and, with a kind of awe, as if Fedora were really dead, he opened the hand and took from it the vial of poison.

"My God!" he cried, "what does it mean?"

"It means that you were that near to losing her, Loris. Now, do you know how much you love her?"

He stooped over Fedora, and took her in his arms, crying out her name, and fondling her in an agony of fear. And presently she opened her eyes, and looked at him, and then he thanked God that she was not dead.

"No," said Olga, "she is not dead, and she will not die."

Fedora tried to rise, but Olga and Loris both prevented it.

"Lis still, Fedora," said Olga, "I want you to hear what Loris and I say. Now, answer me, Loris. Is there anything in this world you love better than Fedora? Do not wonder why I ask you, I do it with a purpose. Answer me."

"Nothing. Nothing in this world or the next."

Fedora smiled up at him eagerly, and timidly took his hand.

"Better than love for your mother, your brother?" went on Olga.

"A thousand times better."

The eager expression in Fedora's eyes intensified, and she smoothed the hand she held.

"Better even than your revenge?"

"I do not understand."

"If your mother and brother had been killed as was supposed, would you have foregone your revenge on the person responsible if Fedora had wished, if the following of it would have put your love in jeopardy?"

Fedora rose on one elbow and gazed breathlessly in his face now contracted into a puzzled frown. He felt the look, and turned not away as he looked at her, and a smile of perfect love and happiness took its place.

"Yes, Olga, you may suppose anything you like, and still it remains that I love Fedora, and she loves me. I would give up revenge, I would give up hope, I would give up anything and everything for her dear love."

"Would you give up honor, Loris?" asked Olga.

"I would not have you give it up, my Loris," murmured Fedora.

"No, she would not have you give it up, Loris, and that is why she held that ugly little vial in her hand."

Fedora started up with a cry, when she noticed that it was gone from her hand.

"Give it to me!" she pleaded.

"Keep it," said Olga. "Trust me, Fedora, and trust Loris. Shall I tell the story for you, Fedora? or will you tell it yourself?"

Fedora looked at Loris with devouring scrutiny.

"Loris," she said, "give the vial to Olga."

He hesitated a moment, and then obeyed.

"Olga," said Fedora, "tell him for me. I would if I could; but I cannot. I would tell him if nobody else would. Tell him, Olga, that I never intended to keep him in ignorance. I will go into the bed-chamber, and, Olga, promise me that either Loris will come to me with full forgiveness, or that you will bring me the vial. Promise me, Olga!"

"Yes, I will promise it. It shall be Loris or the vial!"

Fedora rose to her feet, and steadied herself against a chair. She would have held Loris off, but he put his arm around her and with a smile that meant worlds of love said:

"I see now that there has all along been some mystery which has tormented your soul. I seem to dimly suspect what it is, but I do not care to know, my Fedora. If it is something you have done let it die. It shall never give me a moment of uneasiness. I know that you love me and that is enough. I trust you implicitly. Why will you not trust me?"

Fedora kissed his hand.

"It is easy for you to forgive, my Loris. You have not sinned against me, and I have sinned against you. Hear what Olga will tell you, and if after that you can come to me and say that you will love me, I will say no more. But whatever you may say or do, I shall always love you; and I thank God for the letter which has come tonight."

Loris would have detained her, as she strove to leave him, but Olga said:

"Let her go, Loris. It will be best for you to hear the story. If it were only for Fedora's sake I would say let it die, too; but more is involved. Let her go and wait for you, for I know you will go to her."

Fedora passed out of the room, and when the draperies fell behind her, Olga handed the letter to Loris. He read it, and let it fall from his hand.

"My God! what does it mean?"

Then Olga told him all the pitiful story, and as it went on he buried his face in his hands and listened. Olga had faith in him, but she could not tell what he felt as he heard the details of the story.

But when she had finished he rose up, and without a word went into the other room, where Fedora knelt, praying.

"My love! I have come for you!"

Olga did not boast when she said she had some influence at the court of the Czar. She would have liked to see General Boroff making one of the colony in Siberia, whither he was minded to send the mother and brother of Loris; but her influence did not extend that far. It did, however, cause the release of the innocent victims of Boroff's wrath, and they were permitted to leave the country, where they could not be safe as long as Boroff was in power.

She did not forget Lasinsky in the distribution of the ideal justice, and she enlisted the services of Gretch to aid her. She combined with Marka, and represented to him that if he hoped to reap a rich reward, meaning the hand and heart of that bewitching young woman, he must discover what part Lasinsky had had in the matter of the telegram.

The truth of history compels the statement, however, that as a matter of fact Gretch did not discover anything about it, and so far as that particular transaction was concerned, Lasinsky went unwhipped of justice.

One day, however, Olga learned that the handsome Pole made various endeavors to obtain some of his wife's money, and falling in that, tried personal abuse of the good woman, therein showing that he was not as good a judge of character as Olga, for his wife turned the tables on him, and showed him that two could play at that game. Then, as he could not live in peace with her, he finally endeavored to smooth her passage out of this world of care and trouble. She resented this kindly effort of his—she learned of it in time to resent it—and he soon after had an opportunity of judging of the benefits of manual labor, for he was sent to the galleys for life.

When Gretch realized that it was useless to seek for the knowledge which Lasinsky alone possessed and would have laughed at the thought of divulging for any-day's pleasure,

Daniel Curtis Writes From Firing Line

Went Through Battle of Ypres With Only Slight Injury

The following letter written by Daniel Curtis to his mother, Mrs. Wm. Curtis, of Curventon, will be of interest to his Northumberland county friends:

Dear Mother,
I will now write you a few lines, letting you know that I am well and getting along alright. Hoping this will find you in good health. I came through the battle of Ypres without a scratch, although it was a pretty hot place and we lost a terrible lot of men in the four days we were there. No doubt you read all about it in the papers.

After that battle we were taken out to have a rest and were billeted in a good sized town. Were out about three weeks but did not get very much rest for they brought the new men over from England to make us up to strength again, and we had to be mixed up with them, go out on route marches, and be drilling with them every day to get them into shape. After that we went into action again and just now have come out after being in the firing line for ten days and it was a regular hell of a place for shells bursting all around, and in the trenches. I got a little knock on the head but it did not amount to very much, as it is nearly alright again.

I have not received parcels of tobacco yet; perhaps somebody has got hold of them, although I may see them yet, as sometimes they are slow in coming through.

We are now camped in a field back from the firing line. I don't know how long they will give us this time.

The weather is pretty fine but keeps cool at nights and it is a little cold sleeping out in the open. Well mother, I have nothing more to say, so will close for this time, hoping you will write soon and tell me all the news.

Your loving son,
DAN.
