Letter From Manitoba

Guelph Evening Mercury

We have pleasure in giving the following extracts from a letter written by Mr Kenneth McKenzie, late of Puslinch now in Manitoba, to Mr Samuel Taylor, an old acquaintance of his in Puslinch. The letter is dated January 30th. Mr McKenzie's old friends will be glad to hear of his success in the far west.

After referring to the safe arrival home of Mr Taylor's son, who went out to Manitoba with the Volunteers. Mr McKenzie goes on to say:—The winter here has been very severe till the new year, but since then we have had fine winter weather. I see by the papers that you had your share of cold in Ontario. My stock of horses did not do as well as my cattle have done during the severity of the weather. My thoroughbreds stand it as well as any of the natice cattle. I would not advise people from Canada to bring many horses with them, as it is far better for the first few years to have plenty of oxen and cows, as they require no grain feeding. They can either bring some with them, or purchase in the States, or even here in Manitoba, although somewhat high at present. I had a good fair crop of all kinds of grain and roots. I saw the Brydons the other day; they are both well and in good spirits. Wm Sinelar is also well. We have a new Steam Grist Mill now at the Portage; I got a grist ground there last week which is a great convenience, as having only 8 miles to go in place of 70 is a great benefit. There is timber out for a second one, and the parties are in Ontario just now in order to have the machinery out in the Spring. Everything is more lively this season than it used to be. I had a letter from Annie from the Saskatchena. She likes it finely. Up there the Buffaloes are more plentiful than they have been for a long series of years back, and which makes trading brisk. We will have over 100 acres ready to crop this season and the boys have over 10,000 rails out already which is about all we require. I do not expect to be in Canada this season, and the fore-runner of the other. Concert.—A closing concert will be given, in the Town Hall, on Thursday and Friday, 29th inst. and 1st prox., by the juvenile class of Prof. Cushman's singing-schools. The pupils have been training for this concert, and as appropriate costumes and scenery will be introduced, it cannot fail to be attractive. The Aberforce Concert.—The committee, who had this concert in charge, have had the great satisfaction of handing over to the person for whose benefit it was got up, $92.00—certainly a very handsome sum. They request us to return their sincere thanks to the singers and others who gave their valuable assistance on the occasion.

AN EARLY SPRING.—There is a tradition among farmers that an early appearance of the polecat tribe denotes an early spring; and as these animals are now out in force, it is presumed the present spring will be an early one. One farmer said the other day that he had met strong evidences of as many as several skunks in a drive to market of some twenty miles. He is a firm believer.

Heard From.—We noticed the other day in a Peterboro' paper an account of a concert lately given in that town by Mr. Galletley, assisted by Miss Gerrie from Guelph, and twenty other amateurs. The paper speaks in the highest terms of praise of Miss Gerrie's singing, for all owhich we feel, of course, quite proud, as she is a Guelph lady. Our contemporary adds that at the urgent requestof a number of Miss Gerrie's musical admirers she has consented to give a concert, for herbenefit, in that town, some time this month.

Matamoras, Feb. 20.—The Government troops under Gen. Resquiera, Governor of Sinloa, were routed in that state by Gen. Marqueze, with a loss of four pieces of artillery and many prisoners. Generals Gurra and Naraujo, with 8,000 revolutionists, attacked the city of San Louis Protosi on the 16th inst., driving the Government forces within the barricades, cutting off the reinforcements and supplies. A conducta, with a million and a half dollars, reached the frontier near Camargo yesterday, guarded by 5,000 revolutionists.

Harriston Correspondence.
Correction.—The daily attendance of pupils at Mrs. Lang's department of the Harriston School is 95 instead of 75 as printed last week. Mrs. Lang is not generally very much to be dreaded, but she does say that when she sees your compositor she will make him hold out his hand for 20 slaps, a whack for each scholar less than the actual number. Well, he need not be frightened, the punishment will be lightly executed, and will neither break his heart nor blister his paw.

he need not be frightened, the punish-I menth will be lightly executed, and will neither break his heart nor blister his paw.

Loos and Lumber.—It is reported in some papers that the saw millers in Harriston have 16,000 logs in their yards. The Harriston saw millers are doing exceedingly well, but that is an exageration of huge proportions. The veracity of the writer was last winter questioned when he stated that 5,000 logs had been laid down at the Messrs. Preston's mill, but it was true notwithstanding that—and the lumber manufactured therefrom, together with a considerable balance from the previous year, with the exception of about 40,000 bought by parties in Elora, found a ready cash market at home.—During the present winter up to the present time there have been over 7,000 logs brought to this mill, but they are cutting up from 40 to 50 per day, and there remains on hand only about 6,200. These belong to the millers, having been bought instead of taken on shares according to the good old enstom. Wm. Lemon's mill is also going, and there are about 4,000 logs piled up in his yard, they being also his own property. The ensning season is expected to be fully as good for business as the last. Large contracts for lumber are already being entered into, and the saw millers, of whom it used to be said that they would either make a spoon or spoil a horn, will certaunly make the one and save the other.

W. G. & B. Co.—This company have, with praiseworthy perseverance, after sundry defeats, succeeded in running freight trains daily to Walkerton, where they were anxiously looked for. Wheat had been stowed in the station house in such large quantities that it was feared the structure would burst or break down, and other large quantities that it was feared the structure would burst or break down, and other large quantities that it was feared the structure would burst or break down, and other large quantities had been teamed to such available places as could be found in the County Town. Words of Soberness.

The N. Y. Times appears to disapprove atirely of the thoughtless talk on war hich some of the papers have indulged which some of the papers have indulged in. It says:—

"As for the talk of war, it is too absurd for serious discussion: The people of England do not want to go to war with this country—this country does not want to go to war with them. Probably such an issue has never been seriously discussed, even in the most intemperate of the English journals—the cable messages are very apt to misropresent and exagerate comments on such subjects. It suits some hair-brained writers to get up a war ery, but the bulk of the people in the United States and England know that war between two such nations would be a diagrace to civilization, and they are not likely to be bounded into it by passignate journalists."

CHAPTER XVII.

MRS. ALLERTON'S STORY.

The intelligence paralysed us all. Our consternation and dismay were indescribable. While Percival and I thought principally of the awful position into which Edwin had brought himself, and punishment which would be by the law inflicted on him, the Squire was more concerned about the disgrace which had been brought upon the family, which would be rendered indelible by the exposure of a public trial. At once, therefore, he exerted himself to have this calamity averted, and my father seconded his efforts in every possible way. How he reproached himself now for the haste with which he had proceeded, and what would he not have given to be in the position he was when he first discovered the false bill. But seeing this was impossible, he used every influence he possessed to save Edwin from the consequences, and the family name from the shame and obloquy which threatend to overtake it.

he possessed to save Edwin from the consequences, and the family name from the shame and obloquy which threatend to overtake it.

The difficulties in the way were immense, and though the influence possessed by the Squire and my father was very great, it took it all to get the authorities to forego their claim against the law-breaker. At last, and when efforts had been made in very high quarters indeed, it was arranged that Edwin should be allowed to go, on condition that he immediately left the country, and did not return for at least five years. On no easier terms could the elemency be obtained, and in truth the Squire cagerly acquiesced in the condition of expatriation, so incensed was he against Edwin, so anxious to have him obliterated from the presence and even from the recollection of the family whose unme he tarnished, whose honor he land sullied.

He was to sail immediately from Liverpool, and Percival and I went to see him before he quitted London. Oh, the pain and agony of that interview. I have never thought of it—I cannot think of it now—without the saddest emotions. Ah and more so now than over, when the true meaning of his frantic distraction is known to me. We thought it proceeded from remorse and from the shame he folt at the ignominious, the criminal position in which he had placed himself; but, oh, Helen, his wild grief came from another and a deeper source.

Percival, I regret to say, was harsher with him than he ought. His proud Allerton spirit keenly felt, and could not help resenting, the wound which had been given to the family honour, hitherto so spotless and unimpeachable, and his conduct to Edwin was cold and constrained. For my part I could not believe but extenuating circumstances existed, and that if we knew all the particulars of the case, and how the poor boy had been tempted to the commission of such a scrious crime, there would be less to blame and more to pity than now appeared. I could not him it maner and that few knew all the particulars of the case, and honourable as I had

I did not learn very much. Had Percival been kinder to him in manner and tone, I am per suaded he would have opened his heart to as fully, and we should then have seen how far he had been naded the victim of evil men. But he was wounded by his brother's coldness, and restrained his confidence. We bearned this much from him, however—that he had, after quitting the Hall and condup to London, get into the society of gamblers, who drew him to the ganning table and involved him in their toils. Pressed for money by the Squire's obduracy, he had been induced to play—perhaps in the hope of winning, perhaps in order to drive care and anxious thoughts from his heart. Fortune went against him, and he drank deeply to drown reflection. He was in this state when the forgery was committed, and spoke as if he was not clearly conscious of it when it was done. But one important fact we learned—that during the fifteen months he had been anseen from the Hall, he had passed under my father's name, and had called himself Waldegrave Winthrop. It was a name, therefore, he had ofton written without any fraudulent intention, and possibly in putting the signature to the bank bill he contemplated no deliberate crime.

I spoke some words to that effect, and crime.

I spoke some words to that effect, and I have never reflected on the painful matter through all these, years without being glad that I did so, for, by the soft-oned and grateful look in his eyes, I saw he received comfort from the charitable judgment. He was too proud to utter a syllable in his own vindention or with a giew to pullating his crime, though I was certain that, had he told us the whole trath, match, very much of an extenuating character would have manifested lited. A glance, however, at Percival's cold and half-averted face caused him to shalt up his opening confidence. I lamented the at the time, I hanent in thousand times more now, for an attitude of kindness towards thin would in all probability have drawn fourth the story of his marriage, and received the card and fatal consequences which ensued. Alas, alas I we parted twen hite is utter ignorance of all that.

Of the point of thus, parting I geometric.

Of the soin of that parting I counce speak even now—it was terrible. He tried to bear it travely, but the sight of uny pric and terrible such that it to break down, and he rushed into an inner root and shift himself up, nor would be come forth again to take abother farewell. So we had to leave, and that was the has we saw of poor Edwin. We only like that within a week he had sailed for Australia, and the bright, renearly high applied, handrom youth.
