She was eager now to get him away from Richard's presence. She caught at his arm and to her surprise found that the point, and the tide having turned, there was just room for them to pass between surf and rock, Thurlstone having to lift her only once out of the water reach.

With this assurance she had to be content, and Thurlstone watched her smiling words. She looked into his face with one quick, eager glance, and felt sure that there was some anger or grief hidden behind his mockery.

CHAPTER XXIII. Across the glistening sands, heavy and wet with the retreating sea, Lillian and Poppy ran, with hearts beating fast and faces full of fear and trouble.

At the same instant a man on the other side of the point, having made up his mind to do precisely the same thing, rushed forward also; and thus, on one of the narrowest paths, Richard and Thurlstone met.

Richard's face was ashen, and his eyes were staring. He felt as if he were being pushed back by a giant hand, and he knew not what to do.

'Very good friends,' echoed Poppy; 'but friends may have a difference of opinion sometimes.' 'Ah, I thought so!' resumed Thurlstone. 'I am sure you were on the edge of a fight, Poppy; and I arrived exactly at the right moment to stop you from going in.' 'Now own it!'

'I will own nothing of the kind!' cried Poppy angrily. 'And I hate along.' Her brother burst into a laugh, and took her hand on his arm.

'You are not angry, Lillian?' Thurlstone asked, looking over her shoulder with a last smile as he walked on quickly.

'Oh, nonsense! Nothing has happened. Jocelyn has had his fun and chaff. He will tease you dreadfully now about this little bickering of ours; and mind you don't pay him the compliment of confessing what it was about.'

'How fast Jocelyn walked, you mean! I had no idea he had hurrying us along at such a pace.'

'I am quite sure there is a fuss going on about nothing,' she said, 'only you do not like to own it.'

'Then, by a quick movement, and a little gesture towards Lillian, she feared Luffinot understand that she feared some disagreeable scene awaited her companion for her delinquency in meeting Jocelyn.'

CHRONIC GRINNING.

There is a kind of disease, not often referred to in medical treatises, which may be described as chronic grinning. The malady is by no means an uncommon one, and it is sometimes regarded as the incipient stage of helpless idiocy. Its victims are afflicted with an uncontrollable passion for grinning. They grin in the parlor, they grin in the lecture room, they grin on the street, and even in places of religious worship they keep up their everlasting and hideous grinning.

The disease we are speaking of is altogether different from the pleasant smiles of social life or even the buoyant hilarity of healthful cheerfulness. The merry grin of genuine laughter and the bright smile of happy faces, are always agreeable and inspiring; but the chronic grinner is an object of pity if not of contempt.

It is said that on the island of Sardinia there grows a kind of wild parsley, which, when eaten, contracts the muscles of the face in such a way as to produce a painful and horrid leer known as the Sardinian grin, or horse-laugh. We occasionally meet with persons who seem to have demolished considerable quantities of this unfortunate parsley. The muscles of their faces have become permanently distorted into the form of an idiotic and irrepressible grin. Whether they are seen in the sacred precincts of the sanctuary or amid the weeping groups of mourners around the dead, that awful grin seems to accompany them.

The most hopeless feature of the case is that these grinning specimens seem to imagine that their performances indicate smartness and intelligence. In all probability a similar motive prompts the whole monkey tribe to exhibitions of this kind, to make good their claims to the ancestral honors accorded them by Darwin. So far as chronic grinning is concerned, the Darwinian theory might be unhesitatingly accepted as sufficiently demonstrated.

Conceited persons of very bad taste and exceedingly limited intelligence are liable to contract this malady. Unable to perceive or appreciate what is good and noble in others, they are always on the watch for what they imagine to be defects in the words or actions of their superiors. But their ignorance leads them to transform excellencies into defects and to grin at those things which win the esteem and applause of cultured minds.

A clergyman was once very much annoyed by nothing a young woman constantly giggling during religious worship. His first impulse was to administer a sharp rebuke, but he was afterwards glad that he refrained from doing so. On inquiry, after the close of the service, he was informed by a friend that the poor girl was a lunatic. The incident has led many a clergyman to exercise commendable forbearance under the impression that the circumstances might be of a similar character.

Y. M. C. A. DELEGATES.—The meeting at Providence Church on Friday evening last was not as largely attended as had been anticipated. But the addresses of Messrs. Cree and Hall were full of instruction and interest. They pointed out with much earnestness the disastrous consequences of neglecting the intellectual and moral culture of young people, and showed to what an alarming extent this neglect prevails in almost all communities.

They gave an interesting account of what has been done through the agency of the Young Men's Christian Association in the way of promoting the welfare of young people. There is no doubt that in large cities much good has resulted from this movement. Our young folk in this place have many privileges both religious and intellectual, and if they fail to profit by these, one should have some doubt whether any new organization would conduce much to their improvement.

In the British House of Lords, on the 12th inst., a bill for rendering attendance at school compulsory passed its second reading without division. The fact is now steadily gaining ground that such a law is really necessary to our country's well-being. We are now paying a heavy school tax for one reason, that the children of the poorer classes may enjoy the privileges of obtaining a good education. But anyone who will take the trouble to observe during the teaching term, cannot fail to see that there are dozens of unemployed boys, some of respectable parentage too, who do nothing but roam our own streets, where they pick up what centre around a class that infest our streets, corners, offices and shop steps throughout the town, ways and lanes that unfit them for any worthy object in life, foul and blasphemous language, a disregard of existing laws, and other bad habits that are much to be deplored, and the evil does not stop here as much of it is picked up by the children who do attend school, as it is impossible in many instances to keep them separated from the street Arabs mentioned. If we had a compulsory school attendance law, with proper enforcement, very much of the above evil would be obviated, and a good would be done in this district alone that would make its impress on future generations.

The Provincial Penitentiary of Nova Scotia is no more. Sixty-five convicts were removed from its walls on the 16th inst., and sent under guard of armed men to Dorchester.

LOCAL AND GENERAL EDITORIAL ITEMS.

F. C. Harris, Esq., has been gazetted a Justice of the Peace.

STEFANSON.—The firm of Messrs. R. Book & Sons, one of the oldest establishments in Halifax has suspended.

We see by the Chronicle that the Mr. Halliday, who lately sold out the Wolfville Store, has opened a boarding house in Halifax on 73, Granville St.

A Quadrille Assembly is to be held in Victoria Hall on Wednesday evening next. See notice in advertising columns.

Harper's Magazine for August is a splendid number, and abounds in interest from the opening poem of Robert Burns by Henry W. Longfellow to the concluding article in the Drifter.

BEAR RIVER.—The cherry crop is very large this year and visitors from all parts of the county are visiting the place. Some twenty or thirty of the residents of this town and vicinity went down during Saturday last.

TEACHER'S EXAMINATION.—The examination of applicants for teachers' licenses and for a higher grade commenced yesterday. The applicants are but few in number, compared to previous years.

It seldom we ever have such dry weather as we are at present experiencing, for beyond a shower or two of but a couple of hours duration at a time during the last two months we have had no rainfall.

FORT GEORGE.—On Thursday, July 18th, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Weaver were out driving, the horse took fright and ran away, upsetting wagon, breaking shafts, etc. Both were thrown out and very seriously injured. No limbs broken.

A young girl named Mary Dowell, daughter of Capt. John Dowell, was run over by a horse on the 19th, and broke her arm.—For.

ADVANCE.—Molasses and sugar are advancing all over the world. Cable advice quotes the last sales of Barbados molasses at four cents advance from the lowest point in England.

Sugar, according to cable advices has advanced in England on refined from 1s. to 2s., according to quality.

The molasses crop in Barbados is short and nearly exhausted.

A GOOD CITIZEN GEORGE.—Mr. Beniah Morse died at Berwick, Kings county, at the ripe age of 77 years. He was a man possessed of high intelligence and many excellent personal qualities; was highly esteemed in the community in which he lived. He formerly lived at Wilmet, Annapolis, where he had many friends, but for some years he lived at the place from whence he was called to his fathers.—H. Chronicle.

The number of murders, arson, rapes, incendiary fires, crimes of every description, together with railroad and other accidents that appear in the despatches every week from the neighboring republics is simply astounding. To keep a faithful record of them all would be next thing to enumerating the horrors and the effects far-reaching, as a general rule we rather aim to keep accounts of crimes out of our papers as the taste for such literature is a most vitiated one and we do not care to pander to it.

The comptroller of the currency, Washington, warns the public not to receive $100 notes purporting to have been issued by the National Revenue Bank of Boston, Mechanics National Bank of New Bedford, Pittsfield National Bank of Pittsfield, Mass., and National Exchange Bank of Baltimore, counterfeiters on these having been discovered.—John Sun.

We will bear this in mind, sure, and scrutinize every $100.00 note closely that is paid in to us.—We await the ordeal with fear and trembling, because we might be taken in by not recognizing the names of the above banks.—Eo. Mos.

BRITISH COLUMBIA.—A friend in Yale B. C., writing on June 27th, says that the weather there is very warm—the thermometer indicating 95° in the shade every day for the week prior to the date of his letter. Several fatal cases of sunstroke have occurred on the line of railway. He quotes a good authority for saying that it is a poor place for young fellows to get along when speaking of an application he received from a brother in prospect of remunerative employment. Wages on the railroad for laborers are $1.50 per day and board $1.00 per week, men and boys, but such wages don't hold out much inducement to people on this side of the continent.

The fire in Annapolis, which we noticed in our last, was regularly investigated into, but no definite conclusion was arrived at as to the origin of the fire, though it was evidently the impression that it was an incendiary work. The fire started in the cellar of Cummings' shop. This cellar, according to the affidavits made by the persons whose efforts extinguished the fire, contained a number of empty barrels and a cask with some 15 or 20 gallons of kerosene in it, while a bucket of oil was standing on the floor of the cellar, which Mr. Cummings says he can in no way account for. The building in which the fire was discovered and the one opposite (L. Shaw's), were saturated with oil on one side for quite a distance from the ground. Everything seems to point in the direction that there was an evident intention of some firebrand to destroy both buildings, at least, as in connection with the above facts, the hose of the engine was used, and one gentleman makes affidavit that he thinks the hose was cut after the water was turned on the fire.

Col. Laurie has made answer to the Western Chronicle's correspondent that he does not intend exhibiting his Devons all the forthcoming Autumn, but that some thirty-three of his herd he has passed into other hands, which will show well to the front. He then takes up the objection raised that as he has a voice in drafting the prize list he should not exhibit, explaining that he personally thinks it not desirable, but that it could not well be avoided in the past as the number who were willing to give the aid of their money influence were very few, that those who would spend their money in the advancement of agricultural interests were still fewer in number, and it was from these classes the Board of Agriculture had to be selected, and it was on them that exhibitors depended for any large show of thorough bred stock. He closes by saying, "it may be desirable to abolish the Central Board. It is not uncommon for those who cannot have their own way to avow that the existing restraints should be removed. Whether the case was really of good service to the agricultural community must always be a matter of opinion, but it seems quite clear that some administrative body must exist to exercise control. The members of the Board have throughout given their time and services gratuitously, and are quite prepared to see the duties transferred to any other organization that will more efficiently discharge the duties with which they have been entrusted."

S. P. C. A.—A public meeting was held in Annapolis on Saturday evening last at the office of J. J. Under the chairmanship of the Rev. W. S. Gray was elected chairman, and R. E. Harris Secretary pro tem.

Mr. J. Naylor Secretary of the Nova Scotia Society for the prevention of cruelty to animals—Rev. W. S. Gray was elected chairman, and R. E. Harris Secretary pro tem.

Mr. J. Naylor Secretary of the Nova Scotia Society for the prevention of cruelty to animals, has been elected chairman, and R. E. Harris Secretary pro tem. The Rev. W. S. Gray was elected Secretary. Moved in amendment by J. M. O'Brien, seconded by A. Shearer, "That this Society confine its operations to Ward 10 only." Moved in amendment by J. M. O'Brien, seconded by A. Shearer, "That this Society be a branch Society for the whole County." Amendment passed.

The following are the officers: Vice-President—Rev. W. S. Gray, George Wells, and James Hovell. Executive Committee—Messrs. A. W. Corbett, Fowler Burns, Dr. Cunningham, E. C. Cowling, and Dr. Withers. Treasurer—R. J. Uniake. Secretary—R. E. Harris.

MOVED, seconded and passed: "That the executive committee have power to appoint Vice Presidents in different parts of the County."

A vote of thanks was duly presented to chairman. Meeting adjourned sine die.

CATTLE EXPORT.—We have been adding up a record of one week's shipment of live stock from Annapolis to England during the month of June, with the following result: Cattle, 10,632; sheep, 9,435; pigs, 502. This gives an idea of the large proportions this trade has attained to.

A Woman's Desire for Liquor.—Mrs. Maria L. Judson, a young woman with an unusually intelligent face and a ladylike manner, was arraigned before Justice Plummer in the Yorkville Police Court Monday, on a charge of being drunk and disorderly on a street car on Sunday night. Her history has been somewhat eventful. She was born in the city of Boston, the daughter of wealthy and respectable parents. She received a good education, and at the age of eighteen was married to a man named Judson, who is in England, a wholesale liquor business in Connecticut, and who is said to be worth from $200,000 to $300,000. For about eight years the couple lived happily together. The wife then began to acquire a taste for spirituous liquors. Efforts were made by her husband to save her from the fate which threatened her, but in vain. Her husband, who is now in England, was so completely ruined by her drinking that he was led to a premature death, and she was left a widow with a young child, and a large amount of property, and she was leading a sober life, and through the perseverance of friends, she had the decree of divorce set aside, and was re-married to a man named Judson, for a time, however, and he fell the second time was even greater than the first. Again her husband deserted her, and she was left a widow with a young child, and a large amount of property, and she was leading a sober life, and through the perseverance of friends, she had the decree of divorce set aside, and was re-married to a man named Judson, for a time, however, and he fell the second time was even greater than the first. Again her husband deserted her, and she was left a widow with a young child, and a large amount of property, and she was leading a sober life, and through the perseverance of friends, she had the decree of divorce set aside, and was re-married to a man named Judson, for a time, however, and he fell the second time was even greater than the first. Joker's Corner.

On the Way Home.

It was just this side of Detroit that a man entered the car, took a seat, and devoted his attention to the morning paper. After a time the conductor came along and touched him gently on the shoulder, but without effect. The conductor tapped the passenger on the arm, but there was no response, and the official had to speak.

"The traveler looked wearily up from his paper, and said: 'I haven't any money.' 'I haven't any money,' said the conductor. 'I haven't any money.' 'Then you must get off at the next station.' 'I will,' was the submissive response and the conductor passed along. The train stopped at the next station, started again, and was bowing along at thirty miles an hour when the conductor tapped again, came through and saw the traveler on the same seat as before.

"I told you to get out of this car," he said, sternly. "You did." "Why didn't you do it?" "I did." "And then got in again?" "I did." "Now look here, my friend, I don't want any more of this nonsense. Get out of this car at the next station, and stay out. You hear me!"

Again the train stopped and again it started, and again, but in another car, the conductor found the self-same traveler, as calm as a June morning. "You here again?" he asked. "Yes, here again." "I tell you to get off this train and stay off!" "No." "I did." "No; you told me to get out of that car and stay out, and I did."

"Now, my friend," said the conductor, "listen to me, and mind you do just what I tell you. At the next station get off this train and stay off. Do just what I tell you or you will get into trouble." "Agreed," said the traveler, and the conductor passed on.

Again the train stopped and started, and again the traveler turned up on the seat. The conductor was just reaching for the bell rope to stop the train and eject him summarily, when the traveler stayed his hand. "You told me to do just as you ordered. I got out and stayed out until you said 'All aboard!' Then I got aboard, for I didn't want to get into trouble, you know."

Annapolis Division Grange No. 40. The second quarterly session of the above Division was held at Whitman's Hall, Lawrenceston, July 3rd, 1880.

The minutes of the previous meeting read and confirmed. The secretary's report was read and approved.

The subject of 'manures' was considered and discussed, as also the best method of application. The majority were in favor of applying manure in the fall, and plowing under as giving best results.

Your committee on Temperance in submitting their report felt assured that you will all agree with us in opinion that the power and influence for good designed to be exerted through the medium of the Grange is elevating the standard of the farmer to a position not inferior to the other professions of the day.

Especially would your Committee call attention to the beautiful and interesting reports of the ladies of our Grange, who are doing so much for the cause of the oppressed.

What will become of the Last Man. The Scientific American has lately enlarged in contrast the guesses of science on the final scene of human existence, and one finds therein food for reflection concerning the future.

When first our brother farmers in the "Sister States" deemed it expedient to organize the Patrons of Husbandry they wisely allowed woman a place within the gates of our noble order.
