IRISH AFFAIRS

GLADSTONE AND THE PARNELLITES.

MANIFESTO OF THE IRISH BISHOPS.

The misery of the people due to English mis-government. A protest against emigration; it is unwise and impolitic...

DUBLIN, July 17.—In the polling for a member of Parliament in Wexford borough to-day there was considerable animosity shown towards the Liberal candidate, the O'Connor Don, who was hoisted as he drove through the streets...

DUBLIN, July 20.—Four farmers have been arrested near Newry for beating nearly to death a man who took a farm from which a previous tenant had been evicted.

At a meeting of the organising Committee of the Irish National League held to-day, Parnell presided and Davitt was present.

LONDON, July 21.—Mr. Parnell goes to Ireland tomorrow to prepare for the definite organization of the National League, which, owing to the extreme pressure of Parliamentary business, and partially to the co-operation of the Coercion laws, has been somewhat neglected.

FRANCE AND ENGLAND. The present relations between France and England are rather alarming. The English mercantile class, puffed up by the victory of Tel-el-Kebir, think they can steal DeLesseppe's Suez Canal with impunity.

GLADSTONE'S GOVERNMENT IN JEOPARDY. Unless the English people cool down the fate of the Gladstone Government will be in the hands of the Parnellites.

The advanced Liberals do not take at all kindly to the idea of a coalition between the Irish Liberals and Conservatives, in opposition to the Nationalists. They argue that it would be far better for the government to reopen the Irish land question, and by amending the land act of 1881 in accordance with the demands of the tenant farmers...

DUBLIN, July 19. The Roman Catholic bishops have issued a manifesto upon the distress in Ireland and the question of emigration or migration as a remedy.

The Roman Catholic bishops have issued a manifesto upon the distress in Ireland and the question of emigration or migration as a remedy. Their expression of opinion was limited to this subject, and was embodied in the following:—First, that owing to the misgovernment of Ireland in the past a chronic state of misery and want has been produced in several districts of the West, Southwest, Northwest and other parts of the country, where the people have been compelled to crowd on the poorest and least productive lands...

Third, that with every recurring period of agricultural depression the people of these districts are reduced to a condition bordering on starvation, and therefore must be an abiding source of solicitude and anxiety to every one having the welfare of his country at heart. Fourth, that the provisions of recent remedial legislation have not extended in any appreciable degree to the deserving but destitute class. Fifth, that State aided emigration as a means of curing this evil is unwise and impolitic and tends only to

TO IRELAND'S PROSPERITY.

Parnell's Response to the Toast of "Irish Industries."

AN ELOQUENT SPEECH THAT IS UNIVERSALLY PRAISED DELIVERED AT THE EXHIBITION BANQUET IN CORK.

The banquet given by the Mayor, Corporation and citizens, to celebrate the opening of the Exhibition, proved to be a very brilliant affair. The gathering was, perhaps, the most influential and representative that was ever brought together on any similar occasion. Gentlemen representing the most widely divergent opinions in politics met together, and partook of the civil hospitality with as much zest as if all belonged to one harmonious mass.

On the Chairman's right sat—Earl of Bandon, the Recorder, Earl of Donoughmore, Sir George St. John Cothare, Sir George Fenrose, Major-General Correns, Mr. Sheehan, the City High Sheriff, Commandant Delany, John George McCarthy, K. St. G. M.; John Daly, M. P.; Colonel Colthurst, M. P.; Mayor of Colman, Lord Carbery, Colonel Shuldham, Captain Sarsfield, D. L.; R. U. Penrose Fitzgerald, D. L.; Dr. W. K. Sullivan, L. A. Beamish, T. Rogers, Belfast.

On his left sat—Lord Mayor of Dublin, Earl of Dunraven, Right Hon. W. H. F. Cogan, Sir John Arnott, D. L.; Sir Daniel O'Sullivan, Colonel Tanner, O. B.; Archdeacon Archdall, the County High Sheriff, Mr. B. J. A. Looch, K. St. G. M.; Mr. Parnell, M. P.; Mr. Shaw, M. P.; Mayor of Waterford, Mayor of Drogheda, Captain Rye, D. L.; Mr. A. H. Smith Barry, Mr. Maurice Murray, D. L.; the United States Consul Mr. E. D. Gray, M. P.; R. U. D. Sullivan, M. P., and Senator Haribart, United States.

The Mayor, who was received with loud applause, said—My lords, ladies, and gentlemen, the next toast on my list is Prosperity to Ireland and her Industries (hear, hear). This toast of Prosperity to Ireland is a practical one, and it will be responded to by a gentleman whose name is known and respected throughout the length and breadth of the land (hear, hear).

A STEAM CATHEDRAL ON THE AMAZON.

There have often been missionary ships and floating churches, but it has been reserved for the Catholic Bishop of Para and Amazon to propose to combine the two by building a large missionary church to ply with steam upon the Amazon.

The floating church will be dedicated wholly and exclusively to missionary purposes. It will be built by the most skilled artificers of Europe and superbly decorated and adorned. The rarest and most precious woods with which the Amazonian valley abounds, pine in grain and varied in color, will waikoaat the sacred interior. At one end will shine forth the altar, with its gilded reredos and glittering tabernacle, containing the most Blessed Sacrament, and surrounded with the usual ornaments and tapers. This new floating cathedral—its Basilica naval—will, of course, possess its pulpit and confessional, its organ and baptismal font, and all the ornaments of church furniture requisite, not merely for the decent, but even for the solemn and splendid, exercise of Catholic rites.

In the lower portion of the ship a suitable room or cabin will be prepared for the Ordinary of the diocese, and a sufficient number for the priests attached to the missionary ship, as well as the usual accommodation for the necessary sailors and naval officers. The whole structure will be dedicated as soon as completed, to the Blessed Sacrament, and will be called Christopher, (or Christ-bearer).

Propelled by steam, and drawing but little water, it will carry the zealous missionaries along the great natural highway—as far as possible distant parts of the country—as far as Bolivia and Peru, Ecuador and Colombia and Venezuela, and even to the more distant European colonies of Guiana. The direct service of the swelling organs accompanying the soft, sonorous chant of the priests will spread over the tranquil surface of the river, and give notice of the approach of Christ's "ambulans super aquas." From time to time the good fathers will stop at convenient places, where the people will be collected to receive instruction and exhortation, where the children will be baptised, and where all who desire it will have an opportunity, now scarcely ever afforded, of going to confession and holy communion. Mass will be celebrated with much pomp and circumstance within the hallowed precincts of the anchored church, and all will be invited to attend. After a time regular stations will probably be formed from one extremity of the gigantic river to the other, which will be visited at certain stated intervals.

A PLUCKY BANKRUPT.

The dead Lord King says he could not raise $500, but he is going to work again.

CHICAGO, July 23.—McGeech, the bankrupt lord king, said yesterday that he was cleaned out financially. He could not raise $500, but meant to go to work again underneath. He will devote himself to his Milwaukee street Railroad stock, which is held by the bank as collateral. The bank will permit him to redeem it from the road's earnings. McGeech before his failure was worth three millions.

The death is announced of the Rev. Mother St. Rehastrique, who has been a nun of the Ursuline Convent for the last fifty-two years.

SHOT AT AS AN INFORMER!!

JAMES McDERMOTT ACCUSED OF BEING A BRITISH SPY.

What Davitt has to say in reply to an Enquiry of "The Post"—The Mysterious Pistol Shot—McDermott Alleged to have Betrayed Irish Fenians into the hands of the Detectives—Three men said to be Assigned to Kill Him—A Startling Note.

New York, July 23.—The shooting at Jas. McDermott in a saloon in Chambers street on Saturday afternoon, has caused a good deal of excitement in Irish revolutionary circles, both in this city and in Brooklyn. It will be remembered that the New York Herald intimated several weeks ago that something of the kind would probably happen. A summary of an interview with one of the Irish leaders was published in the Herald some weeks ago, and it was stated in the interview that as soon as the revolutionists obtained proof to warrant them in doing what they contemplated a certain alleged informer recently arrived from Europe would be shot. The name of "Jim" McDermott was mentioned to the reporter, but with the request that it should not be published.

The N. Y. Herald reporter last night asked an active but not prominent "dynamiter" for the facts in the case. "I have not much to say at present," said the person, "but possibly before long the whole thing may be made public. McDermott is one of us, and has made several trips to Europe. One of the journeys was on his own account. Two months ago we received information that he was betraying us to the English Government—in fact, that he had given away Dr. Gallagher and his companions. There was no positive proof of this, but the Council set to work to investigate the affair.

THE CHARGES AGAINST McDERMOTT. "So far as I have personally ascertained the ground for the charge was this. In the first place, I must tell you that ever since the 'removal' of O'Connell and Burke the English detective force on this side has been greatly increased, and by men—and women, too—of more than ordinary smartness and intelligence. McDermott's connection with the Brotherhood was soon found out, especially as he was a well known politician in Brooklyn, and when he crossed the ocean he was shadowed. On the other side several detectives made his acquaintance, and our men frequently saw him in their company and inferred that he was doing the 'crooked' business.

Whether McDermott knew the detectives and fooled them, or whether he sought them for an evil purpose, I will not say. I only state the facts as I have heard them. It was ascertained, or at least it is said that it was ascertained, that after that an Inspector of police had visited him at his lodgings. It is also said that McDermott had visited Millbank Prison and had identified some of the 'dynamiters,' including Lynch, before Lynch had information that it was decided to make away with McDermott. Three men were assigned to the task."

"Was the arrested man, James Gaynor, one of them?"

"I can't say, but I do know that two of the men were in Ryan's saloon when the attempt was made. Gaynor will get off, whether he is or is not the man, for McDermott will not appear against him."

A NOTIFICATION OF DEATH. Immediately after McDermott left the saloon, when he was shot at, a scrap of paper was found near the spot where he had stood. The following was written on it:

This is the body of James McDermott, the English spy, who left New York for Ireland last January in the pay of the British Government, and wormed himself into the confidence of Irish nationalists in Ireland, England and Scotland, and betrayed them for $10,000, for which he now dies at the hands of the Irish Avenger, who followed him 3,000 miles to punish him as a warning to others; (Signed) Captain DAYLIGHT.

James Gaynor, the prisoner, is a young man of 25 years, and gave his residence as Cherry street. Captain Petty informed Justice Smith that it was reported to him on Saturday afternoon that McDermott was fired on by the prisoner and struck by a bullet in the cheek, which glanced off without doing him any injury. This phenomenal occurrence took place, as alleged, in Captain Ryan's saloon, No. 8 Chambers street, in presence of O'Donovan Rossa, "Bobby Mountain" O'Brien and Colonel James Cavanagh of the Sixty-ninth Regiment. The weapon, which is now in possession of Captain Petty, is a British bulldog revolver, one chamber of which is empty. It is alleged that Gaynor threw it away after the shooting.

Various causes have been assigned for the trouble, and persons who were in the saloon at the time seemed disposed to treat the matter lightly, speaking of it as the result of an outbreak of temper not uncommon with men of certain temperaments when under the influence of liquor. Men interested in Irish national movements take a different view of the affair, and make allegations which, if well founded, place McDermott in a most unenviable position. It is said that prior to his recent visit to Europe he ingratiated himself into the good fellowship of members of the Fenian Brotherhood and other Irish revolutionary bodies, and obtained letters of introduction from prominent Irish-Americans to the leaders on the other side of the Atlantic. It is charged further that on the strength of these letters he obtained admission to secret meetings in Ireland and England and that he betrayed the confidence reposed in him and the desired result.

Holloway's Ointment and Pills.—Female Complaints.—On the mothers of England devolves much and serious responsibility in securing for their daughters robust health; frequently, alas! thoughtlessly sacrificed by culpable selfishness at a particular period of life, when all important changes take place in the female constitution, upon the management of which depends future happiness or misery. Holloway's Pills, especially if added with the Ointment, have the happiest effect in establishing these functions upon the performance of which health and even life itself depend. Mother and daughter may safely use these powerful doctriant remedies without consulting anyone. Universally adopted as the one grand remedy for female complaints these Pills never fail, never weaken the system, and always bring about the desired result.

NOTES FROM ROME.

POPE LEO XIII. ON THE EDUCATION OF GIRLS.

A Valuable Manuscript used to wrap Oily Fish in.

THE SOVEREIGN PONTIFF AND THE RELIGIOUS PEACE OF EUROPE.

Rome, July 3.—The special correspondent of the Filio sends the following interesting notes:—

Leo XIII. expressed his ideas on woman's place in the social order in a discourse addressed to the young ladies receiving their education at the Convent of the Sacred Heart at Trinita de Monti, Rome. This is what the Pope said:—"Oh, how greatly is it to be desired in our days that the benefit of Christian education should be widely extended to girls—to those of the highest as well as to those of the most modest social condition! Woman, in the designs of Providence, is destined to be the most powerful aid to the well-being of the human race; but in order that she should rise to such a height, it is necessary that a sound and wise education should in the fitting time form her mind and her heart. Informed by the principles of the Catholic religion, which alone has restored to her true rights and replaced her in her position of honor, woman in the family will be the wise mother, the support and security of the household; in society she will be an example, by her speech and by her beneficent and patient charity, the fruitful inspirer of virtuous and saintly deeds. In as far as her education depends upon the dictates of the Gospel, woman will be the fatal cause of corruption and of ruin in the family, and through the family likewise in society. That is why the state of darkness desired at all costs that the education of young girls should no longer be inspired or in conformity with the maxims and teachings of the Catholic religion, and be no longer subject to the maternal vigilance of the Church. That is why, with grand and fallacious promises, they study to foment vanity in these souls and to inspire them with a sentiment of indifference for the faith of Jesus Christ, and of aversion for the holy and severe laws of its morality."

A very curious discovery has just been made in a grocer's store in Rome. A grossy page of manuscript used for the wrapping up of oil-preserved tunny-fish in the store of a grocer has been found to form a page of a rare illuminated Codex, which, according to bibliographers, belonged to the Emperor Charles V. The book had passed from Spain to Rome, and fell into the hands of an old family fast passing into decay and poverty. A learned German was desirous of purchasing it for the Berlin Museum, but a Roman antiquarian, since deceased, raised a cry about the document, and its owners held on to it, refusing the German's price. The possessor of it having died, it passed into the hands of his widow and her daughter, who, in course of time, were reduced to such straits that they had given up their old manuscripts and books to the grocer in payment for the groceries they had had of him. The grocer, not having a knowledge above his business, found that the imperial manuscript was excellently fitted to wrap oily fish in, and applied it to this use—only one leaf being now left.

The various efforts made by the Sovereign Pontiff to secure religious peace in the States of Europe were begun by his letters to the Emperors of Russia and of Germany commending the war waged against the Church in their dominions. Later he wrote to the Emperor of Austria to regulate the conduct of Catholics in Bosnia, which had been divided a few years previously to the Austro-Hungarian Monarchy. He also congratulated the Sultan for the part taken by the Ottoman Government in the resolving of the Armenian question. All these letters of Leo XIII. were crowned by considerable amelioration in the religious conditions of the people to whom they referred. It is to be hoped that the recent letter of the Pontiff to M. Jules Grevy may bring about in France a moment of rest, at least in the persecution of Catholics.

The medal ordered by order of the Pope this year for the feast of St. Peter is, as usual the work of M. F. Bionchi, and has on one side an admirable portrait of the Holy Father. On the other side is a representation of the Slave's pilgrimage, which took place July 5th, 1881, when 1,300 pilgrims of all classes of society came to Rome to show their gratitude to the Pope in receiving the honors due to the great observance of their feast, July 5th, throughout the whole Catholic world. EDITH YORKE.

CHAPTER XXVIII.—(CONTINUED.) GOOD NIGHT AND GOOD-BYE.

"Because you told me that your life hung in the balance, and then I was your only hope and aim," she answered. Her voice trembled slightly, and her eyes softened as she remembered how nearly he had spoken the truth.

"Dick," Edith asked breathlessly, "have you quite got over caring very much about me? Are you not disappointed?"

He looked out thoughtfully, and she sat looking at him. At length he said, with a faint smile, "I wrote you last year of a visit I paid to the island and cave of Capri. That scene is like my past life."

"O! course there was a struggle," he resumed, "for I was sincere. But that is over. My unreasonable affection for you is as thoroughly eradicated as if it had never been a part of my life."

"Edith," he said, then, "put the test. Dick, I must be satisfied that I am really free. If you were sure now that no other, deeper sympathy stood between me and you, and that I were ready and willing to fulfil my engagement to you, would you still say that God alone held your heart?"

"After the momentary fear and suspense that had accompanied her question, Edith's first feeling was one of joyful relief and freedom, her second and indignant sense of the wrong that had been done her.

"You may well be ashamed," she said, "for you have been unmanly! I do not speak of what I have suffered in my own mind, but you have exposed my reputation, which, next to my character, I hold sacred."

Edith's face grew pale, and she looked away. "You have deprived me of my mother's friendship, for she will never cease to blame me. You have had me proclaimed as your promised wife, every one supposing that the promise was freely given. Yet, when I went down stairs that day, I was like a victim going to be immolated. Nothing but prayer had strengthened my resolution."

"She heard that tremulous prayer through her sobbing, and starting, looked at Dick. His face was bowed forward in his hands, as though he could never again raise it. She recollected herself. It was God who had cured and enlightened him. He was not a man who had turned from one noble fancy to another. He was in the hands of God."

"The first trouble in changing one's residence," she said, "is to make people remember one's address. Fortunately, our number, 96, is peculiar. It is the only created thing I know, except the planets, which is not changed nor discontinued by being turned upside down."

"The night was calm, the street quiet, but there was that unmistakable feeling that a great presence of human life is near. It was not that presence which one feels in the woods, where nature is obedient to its Maker, and the soul is lifted by the constantly ascending-homage that surrounds it, but a lateral influence, electrical and exciting, of contending human wills."

"Trees, and toads, and mooses, and no market, are all very charming for a change," she said. "But if one does not live in the city, the city should be near. A man or a woman without society is no better than a vegetable."

"Edith," she said, "I have no doubt of it," he answered. "Nothing else is of worth?" he said after a minute, as if speaking to himself—"nothing else is of worth!"

"Presently she spoke again, very softly: "Sometimes, when one has meditated a long while, everything seems unspeakably good and beautiful, as if it were in God. A warmth and sweetness flow around the soul. If your enemy should come to injure you, you would embrace him. If your friend were taken away from you, you would smile and let him go."

"Dick, looking out at the sky, smiled. "Yes," he said, "yes!"

"A carriage drove up to the door, Hester's carriage, come for Edith. Twilight had fallen softly around them, and their faces were dim, as each other in that outland chamber.

"I put my hand on my head, and say, 'God bless you.'" He did as she bade him, laid his hat on her head, and said, "God bless you for ever! Good night!"

CHAPTER XXIX. EVERYBODY'S CHAPTER.

The family had come to Boston and were settled in their old home. The change had not been effected without emotion, and to the surprise of all, the one most moved was Mr. Yorke. When so much excel women, he had carefully concealed the real misery of his life in Boston, or whether the return to the former home reminded him that it had been lost by his act, we will not attempt to say, for he did not.

"Perhaps nothing in life is more sad than to have a boon long sought for at length accorded to us, and to find that we have lost the power to take delight in its possession. The furniture and baggage had been sent in advance, and Hester and Edith had superintended the arrangement of everything, so that all was ready for them. Their last week in Boston had been spent with Major Cleaveland, at his house there. He had kept it open for that purpose, and remained to assist and accompany them, while his wife and children had preceded him to the city."

"The next thing is," she pursued, "to prevent our friends going to extremes in making their new estimate of us. They must be made to comprehend that, though we have positively renounced the German, we are not Puritans nor ascetics; and that, though we have written, do write, and mean to write in letters, and put ourselves in print whenever we feel so disposed, we do not set up as geniuses. Papa," she said suddenly interrupting herself, "why is not the plural of genius genui? I always want to say genui."

"They mean about the same thing," Mr. Yorke remarked; and there was silence again for a while.

"The night was calm, the street quiet, but there was that unmistakable feeling that a great presence of human life is near. It was not that presence which one feels in the woods, where nature is obedient to its Maker, and the soul is lifted by the constantly ascending-homage that surrounds it, but a lateral influence, electrical and exciting, of contending human wills."

"Edith," she said, "I have no doubt of it," he answered. "Nothing else is of worth?" he said after a minute, as if speaking to himself—"nothing else is of worth!"

"Presently she spoke again, very softly: "Sometimes, when one has meditated a long while, everything seems unspeakably good and beautiful, as if it were in God. A warmth and sweetness flow around the soul. If your enemy should come to injure you, you would embrace him. If your friend were taken away from you, you would smile and let him go."

"Dick, looking out at the sky, smiled. "Yes," he said, "yes!"

"A carriage drove up to the door, Hester's carriage, come for Edith. Twilight had fallen softly around them, and their faces were dim, as each other in that outland chamber.

Amplifying to his niece. "Well, Edith, if you will listen to a chapter from me, I will tell you your prayers, and join in them as far as I can."

"She did not say anything as she rose to call the servants; but, passing her uncle, she laid a loving hand on his shoulder, and looked her gratitude and delight."

"The first time any of this family had ever assisted at a private Catholic devotion, and they were astonished to perceive how every circumstance and need of man was met by this perfect spiritual science. The devotion was not something apart from life, but a aspiration and petition from every thought and act of life. The invocation to the Holy Spirit, the recommendation to place themselves in the presence of God, the pause for the examination of conscience, the act of contrition following it, the preparation for death—a Catholic knows them all, but to a Protestant their effect is startling."

"Edith was happy in her religion; but, though she went to Mass every day when she could, had a mind too enlightened and well balanced to find her religion only in going to church. She was not in the least a gushing young lady; hers was a deep and silent enthusiasm which moved to action rather than to speech. The persecution of Catholics was going on in Massachusetts also, and Governor Gardner and his militia legislature were making injurious judgments of the law as well as of the facts, and disbanding Irish regiments (which were allowed to re-enlist for 1885), and making a law which would enable them to send a troop of men to search the dormitories of colleges and cellars of convent schools. But all this troubled Edith very little. She could laugh at the Transcriber's parody:

"Half a league, half a league out of the city. All the boarding-school rode the committee; and could see how the enemies of the church were covering themselves with ridicule and disgrace, and securing their own ultimate defeat."

"The night was calm, the street quiet, but there was that unmistakable feeling that a great presence of human life is near. It was not that presence which one feels in the woods, where nature is obedient to its Maker, and the soul is lifted by the constantly ascending-homage that surrounds it, but a lateral influence, electrical and exciting, of contending human wills."

"Edith," she said, "I have no doubt of it," he answered. "Nothing else is of worth?" he said after a minute, as if speaking to himself—"nothing else is of worth!"

"Presently she spoke again, very softly: "Sometimes, when one has meditated a long while, everything seems unspeakably good and beautiful, as if it were in God. A warmth and sweetness flow around the soul. If your enemy should come to injure you, you would embrace him. If your friend were taken away from you, you would smile and let him go."

OBLIGATIONS OF THE TELEGRAPH COMPANIES.

Already the business men and corporations of the United States and Canada are complaining of the heavy losses which they have incurred and will incur through the action of the telegraph companies in neglecting to fulfill their obligations towards the public.

Unless otherwise instructed all offices will be careful in receiving messages for transmission to notify sender that the same can be taken only subject to delay, and to mailing en route if necessary to complete the transmission to point of address.

This is trifling with the public with a vengeance. This telegraph company will undertake to send the telegraphic messages of the people by mail! How generous the company will receive full rates for the message and will use a postal card or a 3-cent stamp to forward it to its destination.

THE TELEGRAPHERS' STRIKE.

On Monday last the Executive Board of the Brotherhood of Telegraphers of the United States and Canada presented to the executive officers of the several American and Canadian telegraph companies a memorial setting forth the grievances of the operators and employees generally.

The writers had the privilege of conversations with Father Nelligan in Ottawa on the 24th and 25th of June last, wherein the Marquis of Lansdowne was very fully discussed. In these conversations the Rev. gentleman not only did not condemn the exposures made of Lord Lansdowne by the Catholic press in Canada as unjust and untrue, but reproached the conduct of that nobleman in certain respects in very strong language.

PAYING THE IRISH MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT.

About a year ago the question of paying the Irish members of Parliament was pretty well discussed in the columns of the public press, and it was generally acknowledged that good and honest members, springing from the ranks of the people, could not be secured unless some pecuniary return was given for their services.

Their third demand is one that affects the modern element in labor, the woman. This may prove a knotty question. Should a woman be paid the same wages as a man? We hold that a woman who satisfactorily performs the same amount of work as a man, should receive an equal amount of compensation.

As to the demand for a general increase of pay, that is a question for the employers and the employees to settle among themselves. Of course, if the companies are not doing a profitable business, they will be justified in refusing to make the concession; but it is hard to see how companies who can ward their stock to an enormous extent can decently or honestly refuse to comply with the demand of the operators for a fair increase. A small number of capitalists' annually draw their millions from these telegraph concerns, while the poor operator, who makes the money, has to get his living out of a paltry salary, which, on the average, does not exceed the sum of $37.49 per month.

when the time shall come, and answers which have been received indicate that the cash responses will be liberal. It is to be sincerely hoped that the movement will be eminently successful, for the experience of the last two or three years has demonstrated beyond the shadow of a doubt that the maintenance of an Independent Irish Parliamentary Party is a thing well worth paying for.

The Committee appointed to investigate the serious charges of indecency, cruelty and barbarism brought by Governor Butler against the infamous Tewksbury Almshouse and its management have concluded their labors and presented their reports to the State Legislature. The reports are two, a majority one, and one from the minority. The Republicans, who formed the majority of the Investigating Committee, had, from the outset, determined to defeat the object of the Governor in revealing the horrors of the Almshouse and the atrocities of its Republican management. Accordingly, in their report they haughtily pronounce the main charges of His Excellency groundless and cruel. They give the 3,000 pages of evidence, which had been piled up against this abode of suffering and death, a flat denial, with the utmost effrontery. They found the institution in good condition, and depict its charms, past and present, in the most polished terms of appreciation and admiration. They even confess in their report to have "blushed for the Commonwealth and turned away in amazement"; not from the stinking slaughter of infants, or from the inmates feeding on filth and having rats in their cells for companions, but from the indelicate attempt of the Governor to charge the management with such crimes. The majority, in alluding to the fact that human skins had been sold by the institution to tanners, to be turned into leather, could not see that there was any barbarity in the transaction and made very light of the occurrence. On the whole, their report was nothing but one damn of whitewash for the almshouse and one continual rebuke or censure of Governor Butler for his officiousness in prying into Republican niceties. The report presented by the minority of the committee offers a most striking contrast to the foregoing, as it is more in harmony with the evidence adduced at the investigation. After claiming that much important testimony, which would have proved very damaging, had been excluded by the Committee the minority hold that the trustees of the almshouse were unfaithful to their trusts; that the retention of Superintendent Marsh in his place during this period of corruption and cruelty was simply a crime, and that the State Board of Health cannot evade responsibility in the matter. The report further says that the grossest abuses were practiced, and that the system of superintending the institution is without precedent as deserving of public censure. The officials, the minority declare, have been guilty "of the most wilful neglect, of penitents without parallel, of the most abandoned debauchery and most wanton cruelty, the evidence of which cannot fail to carry conviction to all intelligent, unbiassed minds. The testimony is cumulative to an overwhelming degree, that infants—foundlings and those born of patients and inmates—were purposely poisoned and willfully neglected, to linger in a starving condition till death. The death rate of infants at Tewksbury when compared with that at any other like institution is of itself conclusive evidence of the blackest guilt. With such a frightful mortality, when neither pestilence nor plague is pleaded in defence, the evidence stands on record unexplained." There is not much whitewash about this report; it forcibly shows the terrible Refuge, its working and its officers, in their true light. It is, however, to be dreaded that the perpetrators of these outrages on weak and suffering humanity will escape the punishment due to their crimes, and that the Republican party, who are still the majority in the Legislature, will condone the offenses as the easier way to cover up their shame and humiliation.

The Shrine of the Illustrious Saint—The Pilgrimage of the Irish Catholics of Montreal—An eloquent Instruction by the Rev. Father Callaghan—A Grand Success.

The Irish Catholics of Montreal have reason to feel highly gratified in the manner in which their annual pilgrimage to the shrine of St. Anne de Beaupre was conducted this year.

num. Commodore Nutt and General Tom Thumb both fell in love with her. After some months of deadly rivalry, which almost led to bloodshed, she became the wife of the General and the Commodore was almost broken hearted. The marriage was solemnized at Grace Church in New York city, on February 14th, 1853.

WARREN, MASS., July 19.—Major Newell gives the following details of the sad death of General Tom Thumb: "The general has been for the past two weeks somewhat indisposed. His wife started last week (Wednesday) for Ocean Grove, N.J., as a guest of Mrs. Kellogg. She endeavored to postpone her tour on account of the general's not feeling well, but he insisted she should go, and after she took her departure he went down to the pond and enjoyed an hour's nap in his yacht. He slept with me Friday night, and Sunday morning early he came in to my room, approached my bed, and waking me up, said: 'Sleepy head, why don't you wake up?' At the same time he crawled into bed with me. After a little conversation he fell off into a sort of drowse. Soon after he got up and retired to his own sleeping apartment. The general's brother-in-law went to his room at about 8.20 o'clock and announced breakfast. The general responded, saying he would get up. The brother had taken but a few steps from the door, when I heard a fall. I at once ran into the room, and found it was the general, lying partly dressed on the floor, in the agonies of death. We at once lifted him upon the bed, when he gave one or two spasmodic breaths and died. The shock to the general's wife upon hearing of his death was very severe; it seemed as though her heart would break, so overcome was she. Our party was engaged to open in Boston on September 3, but I am to go to Boston to-day, when I shall cancel all engagements made.

services in Middleboro took place this morning. The body will arrive in Bridgeport in the course of this evening and will be taken charge of by the encampment of Knights Templar, of which he was a member. Public funeral services will be held in the Congregational Church on Thursday, the pastor officiating. A stone vault is now being constructed on the lot belonging to the deceased, and the casket will be enclosed in solid masonry, to prevent any disturbance from grave robbers. The lot in which the body will be buried is finely situated, and in its centre is an imposing monument erected by the general some years ago. Telegrams of condolence have been pouring in from P. T. Barnum and many others, and much sympathy is expressed for the bereaved little lady, who was a general favorite in this place, where she was born and brought up.

HANLAN VICTORIOUS.

He Beats the New Brunswicker—The Champion Beats His Record—"Simply a Procession."

OSWEGATCHIE, N.Y., July 18.—When the time for the race arrived the appearance of affairs as regards the weather was decidedly indicative of a postponement. The breeze, which in the morning had blown strongly from the northwest, veered round until at half-past three there was a pretty stiff blow from the west. By this time many of the excursionists had concluded there would be no contest, and accordingly went home. However, at 6 o'clock the two press boats steamed out of the Oswegatchie River and proceeded over to Ross quarters on the Oswegatchie side. Ross, on being asked, said he would row at any time if the water became at all smooth. At the end of another half hour the river was perceptibly calmer, and the judges accordingly decided to attempt a start. At 6.45 Hanlan appeared dressed as usual in his blue Jersey and tight. As he passed the wharves on his way to the starting point, THE SPECTATORS CHEERED LUSTILY.

Both men looked to be in splendid condition. Hanlan if anything seemed overtrained. Hanlan won the toss and chose the inside. At 6.59 the word "go" was given, and both men got away almost together, Hanlan, however, having a slight advantage. The pace on the start was rapid; Ross was evidently doing his best; the fates, however, were against him. Slowly but surely his opponent was drawing ahead of him, and at the first half mile led by a boat length and a half. Here Ross made a tremendous spurt, and lessened the gap between the two boats by about half a length. The effort was vain, though it was evident by the way he set his teeth, and the force he threw into his stroke, that he was

MAKING A HARD STRUGGLE.

The first half mile was made by Hanlan in 3.15, and at the end of the second half, which was made in 7.07, the race was virtually over. Hanlan after that did just as he pleased. At the turn, which was reached in 11.22, Hanlan led by fully five boat lengths. Here Ross lost, taking about twenty seconds to turn his buoy, while Hanlan turned in about seven. The Press boat waited for the oarsmen to pass at the first half mile on the return, and here Hanlan shouted

"IT'S LONESOME HERE, CAN'T YOU SEND OUT COUNTRY?"

Shortly afterwards he stopped rowing, took a drink and waved his hand to those in the boats. At the finish Hanlan led by fully ten lengths, and he might easily have made his lead much greater for, after turning, he simply played with his opponent. At no time in the race after the first half mile could Ross be said to have had the slightest chance of winning. It was, in the language of one of our American cousins, "simply a procession." Hanlan has beaten his record; the official time was 27.57 for Hanlan, 28.45 for Ross. It is thought that if the water had been smooth the time would have been even better.

DEATH DUE TO A SCRATCH.

A sixteen-year-old boy's fight against hydrophobia—slightly hurt by the frightened family cat who fled from a dog, and displaying all the signs of the dread disease.

New York, July 19.—A very extraordinary case of hydrophobia, resulting in death yesterday afternoon, occurred at Fort Hamilton. The victim was a boy 16 years of age, named Peter J. Byrne, a son of Peter Byrne. The disease is supposed to have originated from the scratch of a cat about six weeks ago. The cat was a great favorite with the children. She seemed to have been severely worried by a dog and had fled to the children for protection.

"While the children fondled the cat she scratched the boy slightly over his eyebrow and behind his ear, but the marks or wounds were so insignificant that he never complained of them, and his health did not appear to be affected until last Friday, when he began to exhibit strange, nervous symptoms which the family did not understand. The family physician, Dr. De Munn, was called in, and declared the symptoms to be those of hydrophobia, and prescribed for the boy accordingly. Drs. Vollum and Spencer were also in attendance, and thought it a clear and very peculiar case of the disease.

The boy was at first seized with a dizziness in the head, with pains in the throat and jaws, as if he had toothache. These symptoms were succeeded by an insupportable dread of water, the sight of it alone throwing him into paroxysms and convulsions. During the night he became so violent that considerable force was required to hold him in bed. He was at times delirious, but generally, until a short time before his death, he was not only in his right mind, but exhibited remarkable will power, and made desperate and resolute efforts to resist and overcome the terrible malady. He was removed from his father's house near the shore to the house of his sister, Mrs. Robert Emmons, in the village, in order that he might escape the constant sight of the bay.

His will power seemed at times to prevail over the strange and subtle influence that produced the convulsive effects on his nervous system at the sight of the water. "He went resolutely to the basin yesterday," said Mrs. Emmons, "when all the time the sight of the water was causing paroxysms, and put his hand into it and lifted up some of the water and threw it on his neck, saying that he could not understand why he should be afraid of it. It was very strange to hear him talk that way so sensibly, while he was going into convulsions through fear of the same water.

"He held a glass of water three hours in his hand," continued the speaker, "with a dreadful determination to try and conquer the feeling, whatever it was. When he would get that he would put the glass down and rest a little while, and then take it up again, as if it was a death struggle to overcome whatever caused that terrible fear."

"Did the spasm seize him during that time?" "Oh, yes, frequently; but he still held on to the water, as if he felt he could overcome the dread. He was quiet all the time, until this morning, when, I think, the morphia which the doctors had given him affected his mind. Then he got better again, and ate something and drank some water. He suffered terribly from thirst; but for a long time he dared not touch the water. Poor dear, as he held the glass in his hand, I was in agony to see him. At last he did drink it, in spite of his fear, he was so thirsty, but it brought on the spasms again, and then he endured great suffering."

Dr. Vollum, the post surgeon, in conversation with the reporter, said: "The case is a very interesting one. I was called in for consultation. The symptoms were quite characteristic. He was a very intelligent boy, and could describe his symptoms accurately. He said the very vapor of the water brought on the spasm. He was so morbidly sensitive that even the sound of the water falling when he did not see it threw him into convulsions. The sound and the sight of the water seemed to convey to him a subtle influence that communicated a shock to his system like that arising from electricity."

"Was there anything of special interest in the treatment?" "There is one point of considerable medical interest both to the profession and the community," replied the Doctor. "The comparatively new remedy for hydrophobia, called 'curare,' or the South American arrow poison, was tried. It is the most recent remedy recommended. In this case it had the effect of instantly controlling the spasms. We gave him one-tenth of a grain. It relaxed the entire muscular system, and is the best antidote to the mysterious virus yet discovered."

"What is your theory of the contagion?" "The most plausible theory is that the cat had been bitten by a dog that had rabies and the virus got into the claws, which became the inoculating points. How this powerful poison produces such a strange effect on the nervous system has thus far evaded the research of medical science; but there is nothing so subtle in its nature. The hearing becomes abnormally acute and the patient can hear the sound of water a long distance."

A HORRIBLE MURDER.

PARIS, July 17.—Paris is once more startled by the discovery of a horrible dramatic murder. The victim is a good-looking, attractive lady, of light manners, who for some years past had occupied a small but tasteful apartment in the Rue Condorcet. On Saturday night Miss Marie Jouin came home as usual about midnight and retired to her room. Next morning Miss Jouin did not appear, but taking it for granted that she had gone off to the country with an admirer, the concierge paid no particular attention to her non-appearance. There was no sign of Marie for several days after. At last some of the other lodgers in the house came down to the concierge to complain of the mysterious stench which seemed to come from the apartment rented by the missing woman. The police were informed, and the doors broken open, when a horrible sight was revealed. Marie was discovered on a bed

HALF NAKED, DROOPING, MURDERED. Round her throat was a leather strap. On her forehead were five marks evidently made by an iron knauke duster. It is supposed that the murderer waited till his mistress was asleep, then having stunned her with the knauke duster he had for double security strangled her with the strap. Even then the wretch evidently had some misgivings, for when the magistrate entered the room the body was concealed by several pillows and a chair. Doubtless having piled the pillows on his victim, the murderer had put the chair on the bed and seated himself on it to complete the suffocating process. He had then quietly rifled all the drawers and wardrobes and made off undisturbed with the booty. It is said that he has since been arrested. There is no confirmation yet.

INTERESTING STATISTICS.

The Monopoly of Licenses by the French Canadians—How the other Nationalities stand.

A correspondent has sent us the following interesting statement bearing on the nationality of the holders of licenses in this Province:

On looking over the statement of licenses issued in Montreal during the months of May and June last as published by the Collector of Protractal Revenue, I was struck by the number of French Canadian names therein. It shows that they devote themselves to the business of shopkeepers and traders far exceeding the proportion they bear to the remainder of the population. I have taken the trouble to retrace the return, and send you the result. I decided the nationalities as best I could by the names given:—

Table with columns: Nationality, Hotels in Montreal City, Hotels Outside Montreal City, Restaurants in Montreal City, Restaurants Outside Montreal City, Skops in Montreal City, Skops in Other Places, Pedlars, Billiards and Pigeon-Holes. Totals are listed at the bottom.

NOBODY CARES. Why grumble at every little thing? Nobody cares to see you anything about it. If you have toothache, get a dentist to remove it. Don't increase your misery and try to make others unhappy by talking about it. How stupid a subject of conversation is an aching tooth or two. Can you expect sympathy? Every person knows that Putnam's PAINEXTRACTOR removes them without pain in a few days. Then the proper thing is to invest in a bottle, get it at the corner, and the thing is done. Be sure you get Putnam's, for there are others offered as substitutes for the genuine.

ORDINATION. At St. Mary's Cathedral, Halifax, N. S., on Sunday, 15th inst, the Rev. Alphonus B. Parker was invested to the Dignity of the Priesthood by His Grace Most Rev. O. O'Brien, Archbishop of Halifax. Several notable happy marriages have been made on two hours' courtship, but it is a pretty safe rule to know the girl for at least three days and a picnic.

CHURCH ARCHITECTURE. The old church at Verennes is being pulled down, and is to be replaced by a handsome structure on the same site. The contract has been awarded to Messrs Martineau and Fautoux for $78,000. The church will be of the Byzantine order, the front being partly octagonal. There will be three principal entrances. The total length inside of the edifice will be 162 feet and the breadth 68 feet, while the transept will be 115 feet long. The steeple will be 17 feet high and will be crested over the facade, and a dome 120 feet high will crown the middle of the edifice. The main nave will be 58 feet high. All the windows will be of tinted glass and the walls frescoed. In addition to the main building, there will be a sacristy 45 by 39 feet, in which will be constructed a private chapel and the baptismal fonts. The church will be heated by hot water. It is estimated that the church will have cost in the vicinity of $90,000.

SHOT AT AS AN INFORMER.

Continued from first page. gave information to the Government touching the plans and projects of the extreme Nationalists.

Since the collapse of the old Skirmishing Fund O'Donovan Rossa has started a new fund called the "Resources of Civilization," which, he declares, is intended for the prosecution of guerrilla warfare against England.

He left France in haste, the Nationalists say, because the English Government had taken steps to compel him to appear as a witness against the men arrested as conspirators.

Detective O'Connor informed Justice Smith that he had searched in New York and Brooklyn for McDermott, but had been unable to find him.

Michael Davitt and James McDermott.

(From the Dublin Freeman, July 14th.) A letter received by Mr. Davitt yesterday evening from the Editor of the Montreal Post contains the following in reference to James McDermott, of Brooklyn:

"I have just had a visit from James McDermott of Brooklyn. This man, to me, is an enigma. Would it be too much trouble, if you know him, or ever heard about him, to let me know by return of mail."

In view of what appeared from the Central News in yesterday's papers concerning this McDermott, and the coincidence of the report in yesterday's papers also of a plot being discovered in Montreal for the destruction of Government buildings in that city, Mr. Davitt cabled the following despatch at once in reply to the query of the editor of the Post:

"Letter received, McDermott is reported to be a spy, and has probably organized the so-called dynamite plot in Montreal as he is believed here to have organized those of London and Cork."

While in Dublin McDermott called upon Mr. Davitt during his imprisonment in Richmond Prison and represented himself as the special correspondent of the Brooklyn Argus and Bossa's United Irishman.

Upon the termination of the interview Mr. Davitt instructed the chief warder, who was present thereat, not to grant the privilege of a visit to McDermott should he again call at the prison for that purpose, expressing the opinion to Mr. Healy, who had refused to see McDermott in consequence, that the newspaper commission was a bogus one covering some other design, and that from the account which he had heard of McDermott's character in New York he believed him to be a man who would sell all Ireland, if he got a chance, for a hundred dollars.

"A MERE BLEND." Telegraphing from Dublin last night, a correspondent of the Central News agency says: "James McDermott undoubtedly made overtures to one O'Connell official with a view of making money out of his real and fictitious knowledge of the workings of the dynamite party.

These overtures were repulsed, and he applied in a fresh quarter, where he not only obtained a hearing, but from whence he obtained no mean sums of money. He was ostensibly watched by the police, but this was a mere blind. He still has relatives living in Dublin among these his mother (in very humble circumstances) and his brother, connected it is understood with the legal profession."

QUEEN VICTORIA.

HER MAJESTY PROSTRATED BY AN ATTACK OF MELANCHOLY.

Her Monomania of Seclusion, Madness and Fear attributed to the Death of the Favorite Gillye.

New York, July 18.—The London correspondent of the New York Sun writes:—The statement long expressed in hypothetical sighs, uplifted, mournful eyes, suppressed interjections, innumerable whispered with bated breath, veiled in metaphor or clad in wary disguise, is now coldly, calmly, openly, dispassionately discussed by partisans as well as foes, by flatterers and scoffers, by the staunch adherent and fawning courtier, no less than the violent anarchist or the red republican.

The more or less harmless mania in which, during a long reign, Queen Victoria has allowed herself to indulge unchallenged and unblamed; the erratic fancies, sudden caprices, unreasoning dislikes, unconquerable obstinacy, of which so many testimonies exist, seem to have culminated at last in a sudden, serious, pronounced, undistinguishable attack of melancholy, and fear, which it is idle to color with any other motive.

The disruption of this second all but widely communing was a cruel shock; and the consequences of it so alarming that the effects of a very slight, almost illusory accident, were magnified into a serious and dangerous sprain, so as to account to the public for the complete withdrawal of the sovereign from all intercourse, and her absolute seclusion from any eyes save those of her immediate entourage, and abstention from public duties, except the compulsory and mechanical signing of certain papers.

THE LACROSSE GAME.

Had it not been for the brilliant playing of the St. Paul Lacrosse Club the sportive star of St. Paul would have sunk far below the horizon. It alone saved the city's reputation, as both the cricket and base ball clubs were defeated. The game was decidedly the best ever witnessed in St. Paul.

LORD LANSDOWNE'S AGENT.

FACTS WHICH BEAR UPON HIS MISSION AS TOLD BY A MAN FROM KENMARE. To the Editor of the Republic: Dear Sir—In the last issue of your influential journal you said, in a sub-editor, that the Rev. Maurice Nelligan, O. C. Kenmare, Ireland, was in Canada ostensibly for the purpose of creating a reaction there in favor of Lord Lansdowne.

good (?) qualities of an infamous landlord as ever evicted a tenant or exacted rent. I was born on the Lansdowne estate, near Kenmare, about thirty years ago, and had a thousand fold better opportunities of judging Lord Lansdowne's sets than the Rev. Father Nelligan, and I have no hesitation in saying that he has depopulated the estate by his 'consolidation' and 'planting' process, by at least fifty per cent. I knew a sub-agent of his who, for the consideration of a few pounds, sold or a bottle of whiskey, would 'consolidate' by evicting one unfortunate tenant and give his land to the donor.

THE "CORMORANT BROOD." It might not mean hanging, but pains and penalties dire would undoubtedly fall upon an Irish newspaper that placarded Royalty as head of the "cormorant brood." We have recently, from time to time, shown the immense appetite of the reigning family, in all its branches, for emolument, pay for pictorial offices, and pension for continuing to do nothing on retirement.

Who doubts a Statement Made by Genl's Beauregard and Early Over Their Own Signatures? It is easy to carp at success and accuse of dishonesty those whose moral characters for integrity, veracity and fair dealing are as unimpaired as the driven snow.
