Editorial Notes. The first party division in the House of Commons took place on Tuesday night, Sept. 8th, on Mr. Foster's amendment against going into supply on the ground of illegal issuing of government warrants for large numbers of persons was in contravention of the principles of parliamentary control.

The vote gave the government a majority of 34 on division, standing for the amendment 69 against 103. The vote by provinces was as follows:—

Provinces. Opposition. Ministerial. Ontario. 33 38

Quebec 13 42 Nova Scotia 10 10 British Columbia 2 3 Manitoba 2 2 P. E. Island 3 1 N. W. Territories 1 2

Total 69 103 Altogether 172 votes were cast out of a House of 213 members. There are therefore 41 votes to be accounted for. Of these 32 were paired off, 16 Conservatives being paired with 16 Liberals. There were six members absent without pairs, three from each side. Reckoning the Speaker and the two Conservatives, Bonar and Saskatchewan, which are vacant, and the whole 213 votes are accounted for. The figures show that in a full House, with the support of the Independents, the Government was an unimpaired majority taking into consideration the two unrepresented constituencies. The House, as it goes on record, is as follows:—

Ministerialists, 103; Oppositionists, 69; Speaker, 1; absent, 6; Speaker, 1; constituencies unrepresented, 2; total 213.

The actual standing of the two parties in the House of Commons according to this showing, is as follows:—

Voted, Ministerialists 103 Paired 10 Absent, unpaired 3 Speaker 1

Total 127 Oppositionists 69 Paired 16 Absent, unpaired 3

Total 88 Northumberland's representative was not present when the vote was taken and hence failed to have his vote recorded.

The question of subsidizing mail steamers making their terminal in a foreign port is again being prominently discussed by St. John and other maritime papers.

The former Dominion government had some time ago notified the proposed action, and it is reported that the British government, that no further subsidy would be granted, as the present existing contracts expire, to steamers not making their winter terminal port on this side at a Canadian port. This step ought to have been taken years ago, and then public Canadian funds would not for so many years have been used to build up a service which is now neglected in Canada.

Now a determined effort is being made by lines of steamers serving Portland as their winter port, assisted by the officials of the Grand Trunk, to have these subsidies continued to such steamers and Portland, Maine, to remain the winter port for Canada.

St. John people, whose hopes were raised by the success attending the last winter's operations of steamship lines there, thought it probable that even greater success would attend their port the coming winter owing to its being expected to be made the terminal of additional lines of steamers subsidizing to carry the mails between Great Britain and Canada. To have this hope destroyed by the renewal of former subsidies making Portland the terminal is making a strong feeling of opposition to the proposed action, and there is talk of a mass meeting to be called to protest against the subsidizing of a foreign port. If, in spite of their remonstrances, the subsidies are renewed to Portland, there is talk of a mass meeting to be called to protest against the subsidizing of a foreign port. If, in spite of their remonstrances, the subsidies are renewed to Portland, there is talk of a mass meeting to be called to protest against the subsidizing of a foreign port.

There should, however, be a stop made to subsidizing steamers making their winter port on this side in a foreign country, as Canada has so many available sources of capital to the purpose, and which would help to build up our own country where they are situated and utilized in this way.

Post Office Irregularities Examined. The Fish investigation, which was postponed until Friday last, was on that day further postponed until Thursday, Sept. 17th, because of the absence of witnesses.

The Smith investigation, adjourned until Monday the 14th, was on that day further adjourned until Monday, the 21st, because of the absence of the principal witnesses.

THE CHARGES AGAINST POLICE MAGISTRATE McCULLY OF CHATHAM.

REPORT THEREON OF COMMISSIONER G. G. GILBERT.

(From the Advocate.)

To His Honor John James Fraser, Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of New Brunswick.

One was a case against one Michael Hickey (exhibit No. 23) for violating the Canada Temperance Act. In this case the magistrate convicted the defendant, and I think very properly, as there was ample evidence of the sale of whiskey, and no defence offered.

Another case (exhibit No. 23) was one against Catherine Fitzpatrick for violating the Canada Temperance Act. There was no direct testimony of a sale, but the circumstantial evidence was very strong, and as the defendant did not go on the stand to deny the sale, I think the magistrate had good reason for convicting.

Exhibit No. 34 was the record of a case against the same Catherine Fitzpatrick, for violating the Canada Temperance Act. In this case there was direct testimony that the defendant sold intoxicating liquor between the dates. Her counsel contended that she was a married woman, and was living with her husband and under his control, that she was selling for him, but as the 15th March up to the present time, he also said that he derived no profit from Johnston's business, that all he got was the rent for the room. The witness stated that the defendant in bar had been built the January previous to the trial.

There was no doubt in my mind that the defendant suspected that Johnston would sell intoxicating liquor on the premises he leased him, and that he thought that by leasing the room to Johnston, he was getting the defendant, being liable under the Act.

The magistrate in his judgment convicting the defendant, gave no reasons for the judgment. If it was true that the lease was bona fide and that Johnston had no knowledge of the rented premises, and that the defendant derived no profit from the sale of the liquor sold by Johnston, I can not see that the mere fact that the place in which the liquor was sold belonged to the defendant, is a proper reason for convicting him, for having parted with the possession of the premises by lease, he had no power to control its use.

Another record (exhibit No. 38) was put in by Mr. McCully's counsel. It was a case against one Henry R. Murray for keeping liquor for sale. The magistrate dismissed the case, and rightly for the reasons given, and I think that Murray had no liquor for sale in his house. The record (exhibit No. 39) of a case against Catherine McCreadell for unlawfully selling liquor was put in by Mr. McCully's counsel. The evidence was very satisfactory, but I think there was sufficient for the defendant to put in his defence, and that he did not appear and give evidence, I think the magistrate was justified in convicting her, which he did.

The record (exhibit No. 40) was put in by Mr. McCully's counsel. The case was against one William Kelly for unlawfully selling intoxicating liquor. In this case there was evidence of sale of intoxicating liquor in defendant's house by his wife, and the defendant did not go on the stand to show that she was not his agent, I think he was rightly convicted. Another record (exhibit No. 41) was put in evidence by Mr. McCully's counsel. It was a case against one George Tracer for keeping intoxicating liquor for sale, there was some very small quantity of liquor found in his house by Mr. Menzies, on a search warrant. The wife of defendant testified that for liquor was kept for private use, and not for sale, and the magistrate very properly dismissed the case.

Why Mr. McCully's counsel put these eight records in evidence I do not see, unless it was to show that in these cases Mr. McCully decided rightly. The counsel for Mr. McCully also put in evidence the record of a conviction (exhibit No. 37) against one Henry Murray for unlawfully selling intoxicating liquor between 15th March and 15th April, 1892.

It appeared by the evidence that the defendant Henry Murray was the proprietor of "The Union Hotel" in Newcastle, and had been so since 1887. That in this hotel there was a room, which had been used as a bar room, that the room was small and there was a counter in it. That a partition (board partition) had been run across this room, about the middle of the counter, and that just above the counter there was a hole in the partition about high enough to pass a tumbler or flask of liquor through, but the height of the hole above the counter was so small that the person outside could not see the person inside. This partition had been built by the defendant prior to the 1st of March, 1892. It was proved that in this room between the dates a number of persons had asked for, got, and had for intoxicating liquor, but that the person getting the liquor, while he could converse with the party inside, could not see him or her, and therefore was not able to identify the person from whom he got the liquor, or who he paid for it. There were a number of witnesses called for the prosecution, all of whom testified (list between the dates they obtained and paid for liquor in this bar room, in the manner above indicated, but of course they could not, or at least not in those testified that they did not know the persons from whom they got the liquor they got and paid for. One of the witnesses said he got liquor there on 1st April. The defence, Murray, when put on the defence, gave as follows: "I did not see Russell on 30th March last any liquor, nor did any person with my knowledge or authority. I did not sell any intoxicating liquor to Stewart on the 1st of April, nor did any person with my authority or knowledge sell it. I was not in occupation of the room spoken of by witnesses on 1st April. It was in occupation of John F. Johnston, of Newcastle, (a paper was put in.) This is Johnston's signature to this paper, it is a true copy, since this lease was made. This lease was put in evidence and the following is a copy-remembrance of lease made and entered into this first day of

Mr. Alexander Taylor, of Newcastle, who has been visiting friends in Montreal and the County of Northumberland, held keeper of the one part, and John F. Johnston of Newcastle, in the County of Northumberland, laborer, of the second part, witnesseth that the said Henry R. Johnston agreed to pay the said rent on the days and times above set forth and at the end or sooner termination of this present lease, to be paid and quietly to yield up possession of the said room, to the said Henry R. Murray in as good repair as he received the room, reasonable wear and accidents by fire and the acts of God excepted.

Witness our hands the day and year first above written.

There was no doubt in my mind that the defendant suspected that Johnston would sell intoxicating liquor on the premises he leased him, and that he thought that by leasing the room to Johnston, he was getting the defendant, being liable under the Act.

The magistrate in his judgment convicting the defendant, gave no reasons for the judgment. If it was true that the lease was bona fide and that Johnston had no knowledge of the rented premises, and that the defendant derived no profit from the sale of the liquor sold by Johnston, I can not see that the mere fact that the place in which the liquor was sold belonged to the defendant, is a proper reason for convicting him, for having parted with the possession of the premises by lease, he had no power to control its use.

Another record (exhibit No. 38) was put in by Mr. McCully's counsel. It was a case against one Henry R. Murray for keeping liquor for sale. The magistrate dismissed the case, and rightly for the reasons given, and I think that Murray had no liquor for sale in his house. The record (exhibit No. 39) of a case against Catherine McCreadell for unlawfully selling liquor was put in by Mr. McCully's counsel. The evidence was very satisfactory, but I think there was sufficient for the defendant to put in his defence, and that he did not appear and give evidence, I think the magistrate was justified in convicting her, which he did.

The record (exhibit No. 40) was put in by Mr. McCully's counsel. The case was against one William Kelly for unlawfully selling intoxicating liquor. In this case there was evidence of sale of intoxicating liquor in defendant's house by his wife, and the defendant did not go on the stand to show that she was not his agent, I think he was rightly convicted. Another record (exhibit No. 41) was put in evidence by Mr. McCully's counsel. It was a case against one George Tracer for keeping intoxicating liquor for sale, there was some very small quantity of liquor found in his house by Mr. Menzies, on a search warrant. The wife of defendant testified that for liquor was kept for private use, and not for sale, and the magistrate very properly dismissed the case.

Why Mr. McCully's counsel put these eight records in evidence I do not see, unless it was to show that in these cases Mr. McCully decided rightly. The counsel for Mr. McCully also put in evidence the record of a conviction (exhibit No. 37) against one Henry Murray for unlawfully selling intoxicating liquor between 15th March and 15th April, 1892.

It appeared by the evidence that the defendant Henry Murray was the proprietor of "The Union Hotel" in Newcastle, and had been so since 1887. That in this hotel there was a room, which had been used as a bar room, that the room was small and there was a counter in it. That a partition (board partition) had been run across this room, about the middle of the counter, and that just above the counter there was a hole in the partition about high enough to pass a tumbler or flask of liquor through, but the height of the hole above the counter was so small that the person outside could not see the person inside. This partition had been built by the defendant prior to the 1st of March, 1892. It was proved that in this room between the dates a number of persons had asked for, got, and had for intoxicating liquor, but that the person getting the liquor, while he could converse with the party inside, could not see him or her, and therefore was not able to identify the person from whom he got the liquor, or who he paid for it. There were a number of witnesses called for the prosecution, all of whom testified (list between the dates they obtained and paid for liquor in this bar room, in the manner above indicated, but of course they could not, or at least not in those testified that they did not know the persons from whom they got the liquor they got and paid for. One of the witnesses said he got liquor there on 1st April. The defence, Murray, when put on the defence, gave as follows: "I did not see Russell on 30th March last any liquor, nor did any person with my knowledge or authority. I did not sell any intoxicating liquor to Stewart on the 1st of April, nor did any person with my authority or knowledge sell it. I was not in occupation of the room spoken of by witnesses on 1st April. It was in occupation of John F. Johnston, of Newcastle, (a paper was put in.) This is Johnston's signature to this paper, it is a true copy, since this lease was made. This lease was put in evidence and the following is a copy-remembrance of lease made and entered into this first day of

A BRUTAL MURDER. SHOCKING TRAGEDY ON SATURDAY MORNING NEAR MONCTON.

MONCTON, Sept. 11.—A shocking tragedy was enacted at an early hour this morning at a place named Meadow Brook, about eight miles from Moncton, on the road to Berthier. A widow woman named Eliza Dutcher lived in a small house with two children, a boy aged eleven and a girl aged eight. She sold liquor and is known to have always kept considerable money about the house, by some estimated as high as three hundred dollars, which she kept locked in the trunk.

This morning about two o'clock Mrs. Jane Green, who lives about one hundred yards distant, noticed Dutcher's house on fire. She gave the alarm and roused her brother-in-law, Hugh Green, who is Mrs. Dutcher's brother, broke in the door of Dutcher's house and going to the sleeping room carried out the eight year old girl, being attracted to the bed by her cries. It was discovered that the left side of the child's face and head had been split open as if by a hatchet. Green was unable to reach the other occupants of the house, and Mrs. Dutcher, aged about 48 years, and her son, aged 11, were burned to a crisp in the building.

The little girl has not yet recovered consciousness sufficiently to tell any thing of the scene, of what took place and all is yet involved in mystery. The general impression, however, is that Mrs. Dutcher and her two children were victims of foul play, the motive being robbery, and that after being left for dead, the house was fired to cover the crime.

Mrs. Dutcher kept a rather rough place and had served a term in jail for violation of the Scott Act. Her house was the scene of many quarrels and it is said she had expressed fear of violence at the hands of one individual. This at least is the story of her brother, Hugh Green, but strange to say, the residents of the place have suspicions other than the above, though nothing is known as yet to warrant any arrest. An inquest was commenced to-day but adjourned to give time for the recovery of the little girl, who may be able to throw some light on the mysterious affair.

To-day when her wounds were being dressed this girl cried in terror. 'Don't kill me again.' This, if a confession, afterwards would seem to indicate that she had some knowledge of being assaulted. After Messrs. Clancy, McGregor, Bennett and Henderson had spoken, Premier Laurier again asked the house to let the bill stand to-night, so that the government could exhaust all diplomatic means before resorting to any other.

Sir Charles Tupper endorsed this view and the debate was adjourned. The house rose at 11:30.
