A GIPSY'S WEDDING

Bridegroom Accidentally Shot Dead Just After the Ceremony.

Bucharest, Sept. 4 .- A tragic affair is reported to have occurred at a gypsy wedding at Vladina in Moldavia. The marriage was being celebrated in grand style, with all the traditional usages of the "Tziganes." As is the custom, while the feasting is going on, the bridegroom suddenly rushes to the tent where his future wife is ensconsed, and seizes her, she screaming, in unison with her female companions, for succor. The bride is then carried off, the relations following, firing shots and making a mock chase. All this took place until the bridegroom started to drive off with his newly-gained orize. Then, as the first shots were fired, he was seen to throw up his hands and fall from his cart. Someone by mistake had fired a bullet, and this had pierced the unfortunate bridegroom's brain

TOUM London, Sept. 3.-A report which lacks confirmation is current here this afternoon that the Anglo-Egyptian forces have captured Khartoum. It is said that the loss of the Anglo-Egyptian army is 2,000 men, while that of the dervishes is placed at 8,000.

Up to a late hour this evening no confirmation of the report of the capture of Khartoum had been received at the foreign office or the war office. THE FALL OF OMDURMAN.

Omdurman, opposite Khartoum, on the Nile, Nubia, Sept. 2, by camel post to Nasri.-The sirdar, General Sir Herbert Kitchener, with the khalifa's black standard, captured during the battle, entered Omdurman, the capital of Mahdism, at 4 o clock this afternoon at the head of the Anglo-Egyptian column, after completely routing the dervishes and dealing A DEATH BLOW TO MAHDISM.

Roughly, our losses were 200, while thousands of the dervishes were killed or wounded. Last night the Anglo-Egyptian army encamped at Agaizz, eight miles from Omdurman. The dervishes were three miles distant. At toward Omdurman, discovered the enemy advancing to the attack in battle array, chanting war songs. Their front consisted of infantry and cavalry, stretched out for three or four miles. Countless banners fluttered over their masses, and the copper and brass drums resounded through the ranks of the savage warriors, who advanced unwaveringly, with all their old-time ardor. At 7:20 a.m. the enemy crowded the ridges above the camp and advanced steadily in enveloping formation. At 7:40 our artillery opened fire, which was answered by the dervish riflemen. Their attack developed on our left, and, in accordance with their traditional tactics, SWEPT DOWN THE HILLSIDE with the design of rushing our flank. But the withering fire maintained for 15 minutes by all of our line frustrated the attempt, and the dervishes, balked, swept toward our center, upon which they concentrated a fierce attack. A large force of horsemen, try-ing to face a continuous hall of bullets from the Cameron Highlanders, Lincolnshire regiment and the Soudanese, was literally swept away, leading to the withdrawal of the entire body, whose dead strewed the field. The BRAVERY OF THE DERVISHES can hardly be overstated. Those who carried the flags struggled to within a few hundred yards of our fighting line, while the mounted emirs abs lutely threw their lives away in bold charges. When the dervishes withdrew behind the ridge in front of their camp the whole force marched in bat-talions toward Omdurman. As our troops surmounted the crest adjoining the Nile, the Soudanese, on our right, ing a mile of Omdurman, and saw the came into contact with the enemy, dome of the Mahdi's tomb (Kubbet el Soudanese.

General Kitchener swung round the center and left of the Soudanese, and seized the rocky eminence, and the Egyptians, hitherto held in reserve, joined the firing line in ten minutes, and before the dervishes could drive their attack home. The flower of the Khalifa's army was caught in a depression, and within a zone of WITHERING CROSS FIRE three brigades, with the attendant artillery. The devoted Mahdists strove heroically to make headway, but every rush was stopped, while their main body was literally mown down by a sustained deadly cross-fire. Egyptian cavalry were in close fighting a horse battery, pushed forward to throughout with the baggara horsemen. For a short period the captured and held the guns, but it was brilliantly retaken. The heroic bravery of the dervishes evoked universal admiration. Time after time their dispersed and broken forces reformed, and hurled themselves upon the Anglo-Egyptians, their emirs conspicuously leading, and spurning death. Even when wounded and in death agonies they raised themselves to fire a last shot. Among the wounded is Col. Rhodes. the correspondent of the London Times and a brother of Cecil Rhodes.

The cavalry and camel corps trotted forward: but only a few scouts were seen, under the command of Abdel Baki, a dervish emir, who fell back rapidly without a contest. In a village we passed, a number of charred and mutilated bodies were found-bodies of natives suspected of spying, and murdered by the dervishes. At 7 o'clock the Maxims fired a few rounds, scattering a body of dervishes in the bush. There was a lull until noon, though the cavalry and camel corps were several miles in advance and in the rear of the low hills around Kerreri. The gunboats signaled that 500 dervish horsemen were west, upon the Egyptian right, and the lancers. on the left, trotted to intercept the enemy, the camel corps supporting. But the

Then two officers went ahead and discovered that there were many flags in the dervish camp. They were fired upon, and eventually the entire mounted force returned to Sur Urab. inside the zeraba. During the afternoon, the gunboats shelled the dervish camp for several hours, apparently doing much damage. A number of dervishes who had fled to the bush to escape the shells, surrendered during the evening. Among the refugees were the sheikh of Kerreri, and a grandson of Kurshid Pasha. This (Thursday) morning the army advanced at 5 o'clock, and FOUND KERRERI DESERTED.

Splendid Bicycle Races Also on the Programme-Fred Deeley the Hero in One of the Best Races Ever Held on the Track.

Saturday was Commercial Travelers' Day at Tecumseh Park. The Knights of the Grip and the Hustlers of the Trunk fraternity, together with their friends, enjoyed a few hourse' rare sport. Bleycle races, some of which were as good, if not better, than any ever before seen on the track, and a baseball match, unparalleled in the history of any athletic park, were among the events. The intense heat of the afternoon and counter attractions were responsible for a comparatively small attendance-only comparatively, because, although not up to the number the attractions warranted, there was quite a crowd of spectors present.

THE BICYCLE MEET. Mr. James McCormick was secretary of the committee, and displayed his accustomed energy and ability in arranging the details of the meet. The entries were plentiful, and the races were all run off promptly and with-

The two-mile handicap was one of the best races ever held on Tecumseh The finish was made with a park. The finish was made with a bunch of seven or eight riders, only a few inches apart. Almost till the tape was reached it looked as though Crouch would be the winner, but Deely swung around the bunch in a fine burst of speed and finished with a slight advantage.

The mile lap race was also a pretty event, done in good time and with a close finish. Fred Deeley and Jas. Crouch, of this city, and Thos. Higley, of Blyth, were prominent in this and some of the other races, and proved themselves riders of exceptional merit. winning.

With the two Turners, Doc Sippi, Bob Lind and "Pat" Cowley, they looked easy winners. Bob Lind got tired carrying two sweaters around after five innings, and retired in favor of Cam-

The Trunks had some excellent batters on their team. Billy Bell proved to be the batter of the day. He covered his territory around second base as easily as he would his territory on a trip. Out of six times up he hit out a triple, two doubles and a single. Ernie Turner presented him with a pass the first two times at bat. After the third inning Doc Sippi went into the box for the Grips, and the heavy hitting by Bell was made off his delivery. Martin followed Bell closely for hon-ors in batting with four singles. Glover had two singles and a double. Strike-outs were as numerous as travelers are in the small towns on a Monday, and no home runs were made, as the travelers were already home. Eardley and Gillespie, of the Grips, would probably have had better suc-cess in hitting the ball if they had had a grip in their hands instead of a bat. They struck out three times each. In base-running, the heaviest man of the two teams, McLennan, of the Grips, did the most. In four times at oat he scored once, twice he reached third, and once second. For a heavybuilt man he runs very fast, and it was one of the most amusing features of the game to watch him on the bases. The Trunks were easily blanked in the first, Catcher Cowley nipping two Trunks making the second bag. In and caused the cables to part. On the second and third, bad throwing this account a crew was ordered down misjudgments of fielders scored nine runs. The heaviest hitting by the Trunks was made in the seventh, when two singles and two doubles were made off Doc Sippi's delivery. Errors and passed balls also came in fast and often. The Grips were fond of the figure 2, as four times they scored two runs. Poor hitting and better fielding by the Trunks was the reason of their inability to send in more runs. Several chances were given, but the strike-outs came too often. The Trunks felt pleased over their victory in winning the McCormick trophy, and rumors say they will commence to play handball next spring, and follow it up by continual practice In the half mile for boys under 16 years of age the fast time of 1:18 3-5 was made, George Higiey, of Blyth, Government Boat Blown Up in New Orleans Harbor.

The Vessel Totally Destroyed and Four Men Killed.

New Orleans, La., Sept. 4 .- The government boat John R. Meigs was totally destroyed by an explosion at Fort Philipp yesterday. She had on board Lieut. Jerevy and a party en-gaged in removing torpedoes laid in the Mississippi river during the war with Spain.

The killed were: Captain Starr, commander of the boat; Sergt. John Newman, of the engineers; Pat Carlos and Major Quinn, of the engineer corps, was advised today that the Meigs had been blown up by a torpedo or mine. The government engineers had been unable to recover the mines and tor-pedoes from shore by means of the cables to which they had been attached, owing to the fact that the sand in the river had weighted them down on the Meigs to grapple for the tor-pedoes and bring them to the surface. The crew had almost completed the work when the accident occurred,

I shall never cease to see, when the word Caney is spoken, a line of some 50 or 60 light-blue-clad men standing in a trench, the line bent in the middle at right angles by the square turn-ing of the ditch; at the bending of this line some blue-coated young officer standing, always exposed to the belt, and sometimes, as he stood up on the level ground, exposed to the feet; the men rising at the word of this officer's command for hours and hours, delivering volley after volley full in our faces; standing as they did so exposed to the waist, confronting 3,000 men, grimly and coolly facing death, drawing their dead up out of the trench, as they fell, to make standing room for living holding thus their trench immovably from morning until eveningthis is what Caney will always mean to me first of all, by virtue of an impression as vivid as the light of day, and as ineffaceably as the image of death.

I say it is a sorrow, because I would like to have my picture of the first great fight I was ever in center around Royal Navy Chocolate some such deed of my own country-men. That is where they make a mistake. Chatham is in the Canadian League to stay, and next year will have a club that will soon freeze out such one-horse aggregations as London and Hamilton possess. last many months "The miners stand at all times ready to fight against a reduction of wages. When the Chicago contract expires, or possibly before that time, they will be obliged to accept a reduction of 15 or 16 cents per ton, or fight. I think they will fight, and will fight harder than they ever have before. The West Virginia miners are working cheaper than they ever have before. All efforts on the part of the other miners to organize them have been in vain. There is no hope that they will be brought into line.'

Edward Marshall, the Wounded Correspondant, Tells How Men Act When Shot.

I saw many men shot. Every one went down in a lump without cries, without jumping up in the air, without throwing up hands. They just went down like clods in the grass. It seemed to me that the terrible thud with which they struck the earth was more penetrating than the sound of guns. Some were only wounded; some

There is much that is awe-inspiring about the death of soldiers on the battle-field. Almost all of us have seen men or women die, but they have died in their carefully arranged beds, flickering spark; with loved ones clustered about. But death from disease is less awful than death from bullets. On the battle-field there are no delicate, scientific problems of strange microbes to be solved. There is not petting, no coddling—nothing, nothing, nothing but death. The man lives, he is strong, he is vital, every muscle in him is at its fullest tension when, suddenly, "chug" he is dead. That "chug" of the bullets striking flesh is nearly always plainly audible. But bullets which are billeted, so far as I know, do not sing on their way. They go silently, grimly to their mark, and the man is lacerated and torn or dead. I did not hear the bullet shriek that killed Hamilton Fish; I did not hear the bullets shriek which struck the Private residence, 48 Becher many others who were wounded while Telephone-Store 440; House, 432. zxv I was near them; I did not hear the ority on the Work of the Quebec Conference.

U. S. RELATIONS WITH CANADA

[Ottawa Cor. Buffalo Express.] Ottawa, Ont., Sept. 2.—The absence of the Hon. David Mills from the Quebec conference has been commented upon in the press, seeing that the minister of justice has made a close study of the commission, and certainly knows more about them than any other publie man in Canada. Under these circumstances, your correspondent thought that it would be of particular interest at the present time to get the views of Canada's greatest constitutional authority on the conference. Appended is the interview:

"What do you think is likely to be the result of the Quebec conference?" was asked.

"That would, indeed, be very diffi-cult to say," Mr. Mills replied. "A great deal depends upon the mood in which the government and the people of the United States find themselves after this war with Spain. If they feel that the government of the United Kingdom in any way rendered them substantial service, although the war proved to be a very short one, the efect of such service upon the minds of the president and congress will not be wholly obliterated by the peace which may follow. The growth of a friendly feeling towards the United Kingdom in the United States tends to put the two great countries in this regard more nearly on an equal footbecause the government of the United Kingdom has for a half century been sincerely anxious to establish friendly relations, of a permanent character, with our neighbors across the border. The feeling with a very considerable section of the people of the United States, has not been reciprocated; but the sympathy of the great powers of the continent of Europe with Spain, and their inclination to interfere on her behalf, have perhaps, for the first time in the history of the United States impressed them with the importance of the friendly support of the United Kingdom; and so his conference is taking place under circumstances more favorable than any previous one held for the settlement of the questions of difference between the great republic and the British Empire." Is it your opinion, then, that peace will facilitate or retard the work, before the commission?" "It can only effect the commission in the way I have indicated. Lasting friendships between states are usually of slow growth. There has been until now on the part of a portion of the population of the United States a unfriendliness toward the United Kingdom. There has been, as I have said, no corresponding feeling of unfriendliness on the part of the people of Great Britain, and certainly not of Ireland. From the commencement of the recent war the conduct of the British government has left no room for doubt in the minds of the American people that it is earnstly desirous of establishing the most friendly relations between the two countries. It has rendered the United States very important services on this continent. The people of the republic realize this; and it has awakened amongs them a widespread and more profound feeling of good-will towards the United Kingdom, than has ever existed before; and had there been an attempt of inter-ference against the United States on the part of any European state, that feeling, no doubt, would have been greatly strengthened, for the governof Lord Salisbury would not have been an indifferent spectator in that event. And so, no doubt, the continuance of the war would have strengthened the mutual good-will between the two Anglo-Saxon nations; but no one in this country would desire to see the evils of war continued that good might come.'

"Assuming that the United States made peace with Spain at once and before the labor of the conference began, what are the chances of a settlement of all the questions which have been referred to it for final disposal: "There are important questions where there is no great diversity of interest, and I see no reason why a satisfactory conclusion should not, be reached in regard to them. Take the lake fish-We have been endeavoring to maintain the productive character of these fisheries. In this respect there is no difference of interest between the people of the United States and of burselves, but so far, there has been, on the part of the states bordering on the lakes, great difference, and our efforts at preservation have been wellnigh rendered nugatory by the destruction that is carried on, without legal restraint, by the fishermen of the United States upon the borders of these lakes. I cannot say how far this destruction is due to interference, and how far it is due to the weakness of the state governments and their inabil-Ity to control their own people. However friendly the government of the United States may be, I apprehend that they will never be able to secure the same respect for and obedience to the regulations which they make, conjunction with us, in respect to the fisheries of the lakes, as we are able to secure on our side of the boundary.

we have gone a long way beyond the requirements of international law, in nsenting to be excluded from waters ordering upon the islands, to which the seals resort, to a distance of 60 miles. This is a concession made, a restraint imposed upon us under the Paris regulations beyond the requirements of international law. But the people of the United States are not satiated, and desire us to consent to still further restraints. Now, this is B matter about which there might negotiations, and it is possible that the people of Canada, with proper compenation given, in the form of treaty questions (for this is an industrial concession on our part), might be disposed to leave the business of pelagic ealing, so far as we are concerned, entirely to our neighbors. The fishermen of the United States objected to very much more reasonable regulations in respect to the fisheries on the coast of Newfoundland. The government and Legislature of Newfoundland made regulations governing the fisheries upon their coats, and applied these regulations to their own fishermen as well as the fishermen of the United States. Penniless.

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 4.-The steamer Del Norte arrived today from St. Michaels with 100 disappointed miners, some of whom were almost penniless. Detroit, Sept. 4 .- "In my opinion there are now 10,000 too many people in the Klondike," said William Booth, who returned to Detroit from there on Friday night.

Mr. Booth was associated with Dr. Metcalf in taking a large party from Detroit to the Klondike last winter. "There is no longer any trouble to reach that region," he continued. "You can go from Seattle to Dawson by the overland route in twelve days. The reason is that steamboats are now plying through the upper lakes. To show the advancement that has been made in one year it is only necessary to say that there are about 130 steam craft on the Yukon River in the vicinity of Dawson now. The Alaska Commercial Company has four as fine boats as ever plied the Mississippi, and all craft are built on the Mississippi plan. "There is plenty of gold up there," continued Mr. Booth, "but the thing is being overdone. At this time of year there is almost nothing doing and no work, except cutting wood for the Woodcutters are paid $15 per boats. cord, however. The digging is all done in the winter months, and during the summer the dirt is washed out. Now the washing is all done, and there will be nothing doing until digging begins again. There are plenty of men there to do it. A great many people are there who have invested all the money they had, and are now in bad straits.

> William Will Help Bring the Conference About.

Some Difficulties in the Way, but the Dreibund Powers Heartily Indorse the Project.

Berlin, Sept. 4 .- The astounding disarmament proposal of the czar has overshadowed everything this week. The members of the government, the newspapers and the public have alike exhibited the liveliest interest in the matter. There is no doubt that the German Government views the project with favor, "sincerely and with no ulterior motives," as an officer of the foreign office said to the correspondent here of the Associated Press, and that Germany will make strenuous efforts to bring about, firstly, the conference itself, and then a realization of its object, at least so far as it is humanely possible. While it is not literally true, as France suspects, peror William is responsible as France suspects, that Emezar's proclamation, nevertheless it is a fact that ever since the czar's accession to the throne the German emperor has repeatedly discussed partial disarmament with him, and during the last year Prince Hohenlohe, the imperial chancellor, and Count Mouravieff, the Russian minister for foreign affairs, have exchanged views on same topic. But it cannot be said that the government is very hopeful of the czar's ideas prevailing. Baron von Buelow, the minister for foreign af-fairs, invited the foreign diplomats to the foreign office for the purpose of gleaning their views and imparting to

In regard to the power with which Russia has closest political ties, let us wait and see whether the proposed conference will not also be acceptable to it.' The press and public opinion on the subject vary. The inspired and radical press hail the disarmament proposition with joy, and the agrarian, military, and a portion of the conservative press and a portion of the conservative press look askance and question the sincer-ity of the czar. The Vorwaerts flatly dubs the proposal of Russia as a "trick," and the Hamburg Nachrichten, which prefaces its editorial by saying that if the late Prince Bismarck were alive the subjoined would be his views, expresses the opinion that the Russian proposal was only made with of it later, "when war will have bro-ken out." the intention of reminding the world

THE BELLICOSE KENTUCKIAN.

Credited With Having Reversed the Destinies of the New World. The utility of possessing New Orleans was evident, were it only to acquire the incontestable right to navigate the Mississippi, Spain having expressly interdicted this navigation to the Americans. But with New Orleans we sold them Louisiana -that is to say, an immense extent of territory which had no northwest boundary because that part of the continent was still unknown. This vast extent of gray herizon produced the Kentuckian, who became the father of the second phase of the American spirit, as the Puritan was father of the first. The Kentuckian had in him a touch of Virginian civilization grafted upon the temperament of the trapper and adventurer. Do not neglect a single opportunity of studying that strange type of the Kentuckian.

It is he who has reversed the destinies of the new world. What he was is still to be found in the man of Chicago, but attenuated and deformed. The Kentuckian loved whisky, dueling and eards. He was crazy over eloquence. The sense of grandeur was developed in him in a surprising fashion. He wished to magnify everything. His patriotism was pure, but exalted. Napoleon was his god and the eagle his emblem. He was bellicose. He urged on the war against England in 1812. He wanted to conquer Canada. He obtained finally the annexation of Texas, the invasion of California, the war against Mexico. The treaty of Guadaloupe-Hidalgo crowned his prayers. The United States stretch- unworthy of Egyptian taskmasters-is ed now from one ocean to the other. Its area was quintupled in 45 years. It took rank among the great countries of the world. The Kentuckian, obscure workman of this immense task, had for standard bearer in the federal senate the celebrated Henry Clay, after whom Vebster and Calhoun patterned themselves, all three enamoured of the same dream of national greatness. - Revue Bleue.

Makes Well John Hampden and Ben Jonson Reminiscences.

> Restoration of the Church Where Rest the Bones of "John Hampden, Patriot," -A Recent Performance of the "Sad Shepherd," of Ben Josnon, in England-The Morris Dance.

There is something of a Hampden revival in England. A bazaar was recently held to raise money for the restoration of Hampden Church. Some two miles from the Buckingham village of Great Hampden, on a woody eminence among the Chiltren Hills, stands Hampden House, the ancestral home of John Hampden, the patriot. Close to the house is the little church where he lies buried. The house is entered by a quaint and characteristic old hall, surrounded by a wooden gallery, and among the many interesting relies of

In the hall there is a full-length portrait of Queen Elizabeth, attributed to Zucchero. This portrait was presented by Elizabeth to Griffith Hampden, the grandfather of the patriot, on the occasion of her henoring him with a visit to Hampden House. The estate at that time was completely buried in thick woods. Her Majesty remarked that the prospect of the country and hills was cut off by the tall trees surrounding the house. During the night her host-anxious to gratify the desire conveyed in her remark-caused an avenue over a mile in length to be out through that part of the forest which faced the Queen's bedroom, so that when she rose in the morning a far extending landscape lay before her e . This avenue-thus hewn in one nig. 6, a feat not called the "Queen's Glade," and the further end of it is used at the present day as the carriageway, and is the principal entrance to the estate.

When standing in the churchyard one cannot help thinking of the poet Gray. Probably he never visited this "secluded spot," or, at any rate, not until after he had written his "Elegy," for the original copy of one of the verses ran thus:

Some village Caesar, that with dauntless breast The little tyrants of his fields withstood. and it was only on the suggestion of a friend that he changed the name Caesar to Hampden-a name conveying to the English mind, more vividly than any other, the idea of dauntless patriotism. Indeed, the vicinity of Hampden's grave is not unfitted to invoke the moralizings of a poet, should he chance to pass this way and rest beneath the "rugged elms, the yew tree's shade."

A BEN JONSON REVIVAL.

Recent Performance of "The Sad Shepherd" in England.

A performance like that of Ben Joning over the counter, shouted in a loud son's "The Sad Shephera," in the grounds of the Bishop of London's Palace at Fulham meently, undoubtedly does something to justify the existence of that much criticised body, the Elizabethan Stage Society. No manager acting upon

BEN JONSON'S "SAD SHEPHERD"-THE MORRIS DANCE AT THE END OF THE

PLAY. commercial principles would care nowadays to produce the best of Jonson's acting plays, much less a delicate tender phantasy such as this. It does not appear, indeed, that "The Sad Shepherd," which was left uncompleted at Jonson's death, has ever been represented before. This is not surprising, however strange it may seem that the works of Shakespeare's great rival, who possibly, in the estimation of Elizabethan playgoers, ranked as high as Shakespeare himself, should have faded so completely out of the repertory of the acting-drama. Dickens and his splendid strellers did something, as we all know, to resuscitate Bobadil and Kitely and their associates, but that is a good many years ago, and, generally speaking, it may be said that Jonson is as unfamiliar to all but students of our old dramatic literature as Heywood or Dekker or Marston. In characterization, in incident, in humor "The Sad Shepherd" is vastly inferior to "Every Man in His Humor." In poetical beauty it is not surpassed even by the best of productions of the author of "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes," and a hundred other dainty lyrics which are part and parcel of our literature. Yet it may be doubted whether such performances as that spoken of are not to some extent love's labor lost. Sitting in the spacious courtyard of the Bishop's Palace, one had some difficulty in seizing, without reference to the printed work, says London Graphic, the manifold beauties of the text. Nor was this altogether the fault of the performers, who gave evidence of attentive study and zealous preparation. The dresses of the Elizabethan period were sumptuous in the extreme. The scene of the play is the Forest of Sherwood, where Robin Hood and his merry men disport themselves, which takes us back to a time far anterior to the days of the Virgin Queen; but the society, it is well known, aims at giving us pieces as they were presented to the lieges of Elizabeth and James. One anachronism, however, they persist in, and that is in the introduction of actresses upon the stage. No modern audience, probably, could see without tittering a youth being made love to in petticoats, although it must have seemed the most natural thing in the world to playgoers so late as the early part of the reign of Charles II.

ENGLAND'S FUTURE KING.

He Wears as a Baby the Plainest Kind of Frocks and Bonnets.

Those wise little mothers who decry the Canadian habit of overdressing wee bits of babies will be interested to know that Prince Albert, the small mite of four years, who is in the direct line of succession to the throne of England, wears the plainest kind of frocks and bonnets

The children of the royal family are always clothed simply. Their little arms are unhampered with frills and furbelows. and ribbons and bows are not continually getting into their precious mouths or tickling their soft, pretty necks. Little Prince Albert, whose picture is here given, wears tucked skirts of pique and blouses of the same material, trimmed with braid of plain white or turkey red. Prince Albert's younger brother, Prince Albert Frederick Arthur George of York, who is one year younger than the eldest baby of the Duke of York's interesting family, plays his baby games in ordinary frocks of nainsook, trimmed perhaps with a few dainty tucks or edgings of delicate hand embroidery. The little sister, Princess Victoria, who was one year old April 25 last, has for everyday wear plain fine little slips that have

OUR NEW PATRIOTISM.

Conditions in Canada and the Problem the Dominion Is to Solve.

Dr. Leigh R. Gregor, professor of German at McGill College, recently lectured on "The New Canadian Patriotism." Ha divided this patriotism into four groups The first is purely Canadian and looks to Canada first and last. The second is British and regards Great Britain and Canada alone. The third is Imperial and includes in its scope Great Britain and all its possessions and dependencies: while fourth looks for a union of the whole Anglo Saxon race. The first two have practically passed away, while the fourth the lecturer looked upon as utterly impossible, inasmuch as history would not unfold itself back again and sentiment in the United States made it impracticable.

The third was the real trend of opinion in young Canada to-day. Dr. McGregor then went on to enumerate the various resources upon which Canada's future was so securely founded, mentioning her agriculture, forests, mining, fishing, fur trade, cattle and dairying industries, climate, etc. Her educational system was excellent and she had produced a voluminous and, in many instances, meritorious literature, and she had a glorious history. Twice, indeed, she had successfully resisted the attacks of her powerful neighbors to the south. The Canadian race, he said, had sprung from the two nations which had long been in the vanguard of civilization, England and France. 'As for our French speaking compatriots they will ever love the French language, French institutions and their own church better than any other, and yet much as their hearts are set on old France it is French Canada that is the centre of their deepest affections. In time past some have spoken of their absorption, but it is useless to hope for that. At the same time though they recog nize how well they have been treated under British rule and realize that nowhere else would they have been protected in their language and the institutions as they have under Great Britain's flag. Some French-Canadians had even dreamed of making a French-speaking country of Canada, and in their more sanguine moments they had included all America in these calculations. What they can do is to help with their English-speaking brethren to establish a great united Canada from ocean to ocean. The plans proposed for Canada's future Government were: 1, annexation; 2, independence; 3, the present state of affairs; 4, closer relations with Great Britain. The first is as extinct as the dodo; the second would be suicifal, for we would have, like Chili, to subordinate our commercial interests to naval and military ones, and even then would be powerless away from home without good bases of supplies. The real desideratum, in his opinion, lay between the last two. The old Canadian thought he had driven a good bargain with the mother country, and wanted to keep it. The young one is disposed to hold out the helping hand to her in matters of defence as well as everything e'se, just as Natal has done. Contribution to the navy was the most favored plan among those he had spoken to, and no one had been against it. The Jubilee fetes were graphically and stirringly referred to as an instance of Imperialism, and the work of such men as Joseph Howe, Sir John Macdonald, Sir Charles Tupper and Sir Wilfrid Laurier was warmly approved. Universa! Deafness. Physiologists say that of all people in middle life at least one third have one ear in some degree affected by deafness.

BEST FOOD FOR CHILDREN.

They Should Be Given That Which Will Build Muscle, Brain and Nerve.

"If mothers only knew how to prepare their children for the hardships of life, these conditions might be easily avoided, writes Mrs. S. T. Rorer of "The Best Diet For Bloodless Girls," in The Ladies' Home Journal. "At a very early age they should be taught to eat food to build muscle, brain and nerve and to give force and heat -not simply to satisfy appetite, a scientific rather than a haphazard operation. It is not necessary, however, to hold long conversations with the child as to what she should and should not eat. As a rule, the first dish of catmeal the mother gives to her first child is simply covered with sugar. In a little while the health gives out, and the child has indigestion.

"Then, too, the child thus trained from infancy feels that fat is objectionable, and at the age of 15 or 16, when an anæmic condition comes over her, fat, the one necessary article to her salvation, is the most difficult to take, and it is frequently necessary to resort to oil baths or oil inunctions. You will no doubt call to mind that cod liver oil is the first thing added may be used in as large quantities as the patient can conveniently di "All fried foods must b strictly avoided. Potatoes may be eaten twice a week and should always be baked. Boiled rice may be taken once a day, but all bulk as the reasons for such exclusion from foods, such as turnips, cabbage, carrots employment. The opinions and exand parsnips, should be avoided. I fully perience of employers were also inbelieve that special feeding in any disease will bring about a cure unattainable by medicine alone. By special feeding for different diseases I mean living on precised hours of labor. The relation between partly owing to the enormous immidifferent diseases I mean living on precisely such food as the patient in that condition can thoroughly digest and assimilate, or upon the best foods to repair the diseased tissues, rejecting all others."

DECLINE OF THE DUSTER

The Practical Disappearance of a Garment That Was Once Familiar.

A traveler by rail cannot fail to notice the decline of the duster. And one does not need to be, as the man said, a centenarian to observe this. In fact, only 30 or 40 years ago dusters were commonly worn by railroad travelers. They were coexistent with the carpet sack and the alligator mouthed valise, both now more completely passed away than the duster itself and almost as completely gone as the hair covered trunk The duster was worn, of course, to pro tect the wearer and his garments from the dust. When the linen duster flourished, locomotives burned wood, tracks were sand ballasted and rails were light, cars were not vestibuled or provided with dust screens for the windows, and the time required to cover a given distance was far greater than now. A duster was far more needed then than now, and it was likely to be a part of the equipment of the casual as well as of the regular traveler. Indeed it may be said that the casual traveler would scarcely have thought that he had made a trip by rail unless he had provided himself with that indispensable part of every traveler's equipment. But the linen duster was not the only one. There were dusters of alpaca and of mohair and of other materials, some of them black and some gray-big, flowing, comfortable dusters, which, if not beautiful, had at least the grace that all things made of good materials possess. You could almost tell a man without seeing his face by the duster that he wore.-New York

The Voices of Bullets.

From 11:30 onward for two hours the Turks did their very best. Their fire was incessant. We kept a constant watch and fired when possible, but as we were against the skyline the enemy had a much better sight of us than we had of them. However, from behind our little wall we could laugh and say, "Kale oral" ("Good morning to you") as the bullets howled past. By the way, the voice of a bullet varies.

There is the thin, high whistle, to which no one pays any attention after the first half hour; there is the prolonged moan, 'the cry of a lost spirit," as a novelist might say; there is the wolfish howl, which for some reason always seems to be taking one on the flank instead of fairly in front, and last of all there is the low, ill tempered buzz, as though the nasty thing had got out of bed the wrong side, as children say. It is far the most terrifying, especially if it suddenly stops as the bullet strikes something close at hand. It was to those bullets only that we politely wished "Good morning."-London Chron-

Its Economics Treated in a Washington Report.

Interesting Questions Put to Employers-The Treating Habit,

[Harper's Weekly.] Doubtless an investigation of the results of the drink habit on employes in various industries would have a high economic value if it embraced a sumcient number of facts, and if it estimated with some degree of accuracy the variable conditions due to differences of character and temperament. The department of labor at Washington has issued its twelfth annual report, in which this phase of the liquor problem is treated on the basis of an investigation conducted in co-operation with a large number of employers. The points on which light was sought were, broadto the ordinary dietary. Butter and cream | ly speaking, concerned with the consideration which is given to the drinking habits of the seeker for employment and the means used in judging his fitness. The various industries in which those who indulge in intoxicants are not employed were considered, as well vestigated as to the use of liquors by increase in the population of about employes subject to night work, ex- 30 per cent, and this, as in the case pay days, holidays and Sundays, and over-indulgence in intoxicants was also onsidered, and, finally, the means sug-

> to lessen the consumption of intoxicants were examined. Of the 30,414 employers to whom schedules containing questions on the above points were addressed, 6,091 replied, reportiting a total list of 1,745,923 employes. Manufacturing industries reported 3,700 establishments and 1,-011,661 employes, while 713 transportation companies reported 458,764 employes. In other industries a fairly renoted that less than one-fourth of the whole number of employers replied to he inquiries addressed to them As was expected, the results of the nvestigation showed many differences gested by employers as best calculated in the point of view from which exist-ing evils were sought to be remedied. Of 7,000 employers, 5,363 reported that means were employed to ascertain the practice of employes in regard to intoxication. The largest proportion of these were connected with transportation where sobriety is a matter of the highest importance; and the two predominant reasons given were "to against accidents," and "responsibility of position." More than one-half of the establishments require, in certain supations and under certain conditions, that employes shall not use intoxicants, while the remainder make no such requirement In regard to the use of liquor by those engaged in night work, statistics will correct the prevalent impression that more drinking is Out of 1.650 establishments employing night workers, only 141 stated more liquor was drunk than by day workers, while 1,460 reported less consumption among night workers than among day workers. Equally surprising and contradictory of the usual belief are the facts in regard to employes subject to overwork, exposure and in regular employment. These unusual of a very large majority of astablishments consulted, were not accompanied by any greater use of intoxicants than among those habituated to regular hours and more favorable conditions. There is here excellent material for onsideration by those who have often based a certain class of arguments on premises which at least need revision There is nothing unusual about the findings of the labor commission in re gard to the increase of drinking im mediately after pay days and on holidays. It is human nature that a full purse should begin to be emptied a little liberally at first, and that its contents should disappear more slowly as the next pay day is approached. far the most interesting feature of the replies concerned the inquiry as to the est means of lessening liquor-drinking among the people. Prohibition was suggested by 1,103 establishments, while 1,687 reported in favor of the non-employment of drinking men, high license, ducation, abolition of saloons, and local option. A great deal of the evil due to intoxicants is set down to the treating habit, whose contagious viol-ousness and seductive influence are denounced in many of the reports as the chief obstacles to the desired re-

THISGROWINGWORLD

Comparative Density of Population-Remarkable Growth of Old London -Australia Sparsely Settled.

[Westminster Review.] In the United States and Canada the increase in population is about 20 per cent per annum, but this is partly owing to immigration from countries already full. In South America, owing to the general unhealthfulness of the country and the mixed composition of the inhabitants, the increase is only about 5 per cent per annum, it being and half-breeds cannot rival the purer

The vast colonies of Australia are fast filling up, and there is an aimual 30 per cent, and this, as in the case gration from other parts of the world. Still, in comparison with England, Australia has at present a small average population to the square mile. Africa has during the last few years been well explored, and from all accounts the center of that vast continent seems to be unfitted for other than the native inhabitants. Africa has an area of about three times that of Europe; the population is roughly estimated at 205,000,000.

We will now come nearer home and look at our own teeming population; presentative number of establishments that of Ireland is 145 to the square and employes reported. It should be mile, Scotland 135, whereas that of England runs up to about 497 to the square mile. The population of the British Isles in 1891 was 37,880,764. The increase in the population of London has been most remarkable. In 1801, the census showed 864,000 inhabitants; in 1811 there were over 1,000,000; in 1851 there were 2,362,000, and in 1881, 3,815,-534, while at the last census, in 1891, there were 5,633,806, being an increase of about 47 per cent in the last decade but many suburbs have been added since 1801. Statistics show that the population of this immense city, the largest in the world, doubles itself in about 43 years, and it is not improbable that in the year 1934 the population may attain the enormous magnitude of upward of 10,000,000 of souls.

LORD KELVIN AND ATHEISM. The Victoria Institute held its annual meeting in London on July 18. The lord chancellor was to speak and he was very anxious to do so, as his three letters evidenced, but in his unavoidable absence his place was taken by Lord Lister, a medical man, whom Queen made a nobleman.Sir George Stokes gave an address, and Lord Kelvin moved the vote of thanks. In doing so he called attention to the mar-Sir George Stokes), and said that when one sees such marvels and some atheconditions, according to the testimony ists tell him there is no evidence of design or designer, he has no patience with them. He then ended with this striking sentence, which produced a great impression, coming as it did from a student of nature, who ranks first among English scientists: "The atheistic idea is nonsensical."

Hinter Mountain is in the Fort Davis region of Western Texas. It is here that the sensation is to be found. The traveler finds himself faced by a small sugar-loaf mountain, with a trny cone at the summit, characteristic of an extinct

He becomes wildly hilarious, begins to dance eliriously, then he staggers, and fina'lly is as likely as not to fall down

Similarly birds and insects have been found intoxicated in the neighborhood, and evidently return again and again to enjoy the sensation. Scientists have not been able to explain the phenomenon. But it appears that the crater gives out alcoholic fumes, and quantities that only the most hardened can memain near without feeling the effects.

GLADSTONE AS A PATIENT. He had an accident one winter. Going up the icy steps leading from Downing street into St. James' Park, he slipped, fell, and struck the top of his head on the step above with some violence. The head was badly cut. He was kept in bed for ten days. Soon after I met him at a party, and asked about the accident and his recovery. To the last there was always a youthful buoyancy in him which at times seemed almost boyish. Down he went on his knees crying out, "You can see the scar now." An there it was, an ugly-looking scar enough, though the wound had healed, as a wound can heal only when the flesh is perfectly healthy.

"But the cut was nothing," he went on. "I suppose Clark was afraid there might be a slight concussion of the brain. He has kept me in bed all these ten days. That I could endure; but he forbade me to read, he forbade me to talk, he forbade me to think; I was to be a mere animal until he gave me leave to be myself. They are the worst ten days of my life. Never before was I asked to force my brain to be torpid while I was awake. And for ten days! Think of ten days! I have not forgiven Sir Andrew. There are ten days gone out of my life—and the number of my days is counted."—From "Mr. Gladstone," by George W. Smalley, in Harper's Magazine for August.

DOCKYARD SCANDAL. Malta, Sept. 4.-The prosecution of Mr. Henry Vella, late cashier to the admiralty dockyard here, has begun. The accused is charged in three indictments, setting forth that he converted to his own use, by means of false signatures, in 1891, £14,432; between 1893 and 1894, £10,600; and in 1897, £1,200, the total defalcations amounting to over £26,000. The crown advocate asks for periods of imprisonment varying from seven months to two years on each of the indictments.

ANNIHILATED. Makawiyeh, via Atbara, Sept. 4 .- The whole countryside presents a nightmare-like aspect, every yard showing signs of the destroying hand of the dervish rule. Villages are deserted. walls crumbling, and everything suggests misery and decay. This is the country of the unfortunate Jaalin, whom Mahmoud massacred last year. If any feeling of loyalty towards the khalifa ever existed, it must have been destroyed by his pitiless annihilation of a whole province thus. Those of the inhabitants who remain are practically destitute, living in grass shelters of the rudest possible con-struction, but behind the march of our troops some fugitives are returning to the scene of desolation, which was once their home. AN OLD AGREEMENT. Berlin, Sept. 3 .- The officials of the foreign office state that the London reports of an offensive and defensive alliance having been concluded between Great Britain and Germany are without foundation. The British ambassador here, Sir Frank C. Lascelles, when asked if an agreement between Great Britain and Germany concerning Africa had been reached, said: "Such an agreement already exists. Germany prefers that England, rather than France, should hold Egypt, although all that Germany expected from the English occupation has not been realized. Mr. Balfour and Count von Hatzfeldt dealt with other matters.' STEPPED OUT.

Paris, Sept. 3.-M. Cavaignae, minister of war, has resigned. The resignation of M. Cavaignac is due to a disagreement with his colleagues, who desire a revision of the Dreyfus case. M. Cavaignac sent the following let-ter of resignation to M. Brisson, presi-dent of the council:

"I have the honor to send you and signed said agreement, and that salesment would only sell to buyers who signed the same. The majority of the minister of war. There exists a disminister of war. agreement between us which, being to the terms of the agreemnt by voting for it. Carried. Mr. James Slater, ment at a time when it most needs ment at a time when it most needs a city buyer, would not sign the agreement, but stated he would bid or have determined, as heretofore, to compat a revision of the case. I do not intend to shirk the responsibilities of the present situation; but I cannot assume them without being in accord with the chief of the government to which I have the honor to belong.

The Dreyfus agitation is not abating. The populace has been inflamed by posters, printed by the Siecle, with which the town has been plastered. They reproduce two letters which Dreyfus wrote to the minister for war in 1894, and one which he wrote to his counsel, M. DeMange, in 1895, protesting his innocence and denying that he had even even been guilty of indiscretion. The posters also call at-tention to the fact that Col. Picquart wrote on July 9, affirming the falsity of Lieut.-Col. Henry's documents, and they denounce the arrest and imprisonment of Col. Picquart. WHY CAVAIGNAC RESIGNED. Paris, Sept. 4.—The circumstances which led M. Cavaignac to resign are that after the discovery of Lieut.-Col. Henry's forgery, the government sought means to reassure the people. The question of revision was broached. Certain ministers believed the time had come to throw full light and to establish every responsibility. M. Cavaignac strongly objected. He declared that he was convinced of the guilt of Dreyfus. Revision could only be justified if some new fact were developed to show there had been a judicial error, and that no such fact existed, Henry's forgery being subsequent to the conviction of Dreyfus, and only indirectly connected with it. After M. Cavaignac's departure a con ference was held at the ministry of the interior between MM. Brisson, Bourgeois and Sarrien. About 9 o'clock M Cavaignac's tender of resignation was received. It is assumed that a major ity of the cabinet shares the views of M. Brisson, as the other ministers retain their portfolios. The resignation of M. Cavaignac enables the government to decide the matter soon. EMPEROR WILLIAM EULOGIZES

THE BRITISH TROOPS. Place, the site of the fine column erected to the Hanoverians who fell at the battle of Waterloo. The altar was erected at the foot of the column, which was decoraed with emblems and wreaths. Emperor William attended the service, and, at the conclusion of the sermon, delivered a brief address. The emperor said that the troops then standing within sight of the Waterloo column were on historic ground. He reminded them of the comradeship in arms of the British and Germans at Waterloo, and referred to the fact that only a few hours before an English army had won, in Africa, a victory over a much stronger foe. At the close of his address, Emperor William called upon the troops to give three cheers for Queen Vic toria, who is honorary colonel of the Mecklenburg grenadiers.

of the racing at Sheepshead Bay yes-terday, the Herald has this to say terday, the Herald has this to say regarding the disqualification of Mr. Hendrie's horse Martimas, after the Futurity winner had finished first in the Flatbush stake event: The defeat of Jean Bereaud, the crack 2-year-old of the year, in the Flat-bush stakes, the handy victory of Martimas, the Futurity winner, in the same, and his disqualification on a sustained charge of foul, which served to award the stake to Autumn, were the incidents of a torrid afternoon. Jean Bereaud, with his trifling impost of 115 pounds, was a legitimate 7 to 10 favorite in the Flatbush stakes at 7 furlongs. He had as company Marti-mas and Duke of Middleburg, 120 pounds each; Filligrane, Frohsinn Ethelbert, Kingdon, and W. Overton, 115; Autumn, 112, and Manuel, 105. Fancy prices were quoted about everything in the race apart from Jean Bereaud until approaching the clost of speculation, when a commission from Mr. Hendrie, aided by one of "Pittsburg Phil" and J. E. McDonald, drove Martimas' edds from 20 to 1 down to

She had no money and wished to elegraph her brother in New York, and a message was sent at her direcions to the American metropolis, as ollows: "Come at once; matters serius." No sooner had she delivered the message than the judge was seen almost running to the doctor's office. Mrs. Mackey screamed, rushed through the office, locked the door after her, and went upstairs. It was an unpleasant moment for the medical man, as wished no tragedy in his medicine shop, so he located the girl and persuaded her to leave, which she did in company with the judge. The doctor's opinion is that the young woman cannot leave him, as she is terror-stricken, without money, no friends, and unable to earn her livelihood, having been brought up a lady, and to leave him might only mean a more wayward course in life. Judge Mackey was overheard to say that all would be right after he had succeeded in annulling the marriage with Sarah Curtis, of Stamford, Conn., whom, he alleges, had a husband living when he married her. Mrs. Mackey wears no wedding ring, but she told a reporter that she had discarded it when she found that the judge was wanted for bigamy. She also has a bundle of papers, which contain several columns of matter concerning them.

Judge Mackey claims to have written the work entitled, "The Theory of Law and Practice of Court Martial," the lives of Washington and General Robert E. Lee, and also the introduction to the life of Marion Simms.

FILIAL DEVOTION. Ancestral worship, which is a principal part of a Chinaman's religion, ometimes bears fruit in a filial devotion which it would be hard to find among the nations who are at present preying upon the Chinese empire. For example, at Canton, a few weeks ago, a young man eighteen years of age, was executed on the charge of murder, although it was known that he was not guilty. A Shanghai paper, in commenting upon the incident, spoke of the large amount of sympathy that was felt for the condemned man, because it was so well known that the actual murderer was his father. In order to save his parent and satisfy the law of "life for life," the son gave himself up as soon the son gave himself up as soon as he knew that his father had done the deed and confessed the murder.

As the Chinese saying has it, "He sealed his filial piety with his blood." THE NEWEST SLEEVE. The newest sleeve is close, so close that when made by an artist it hugs the arm without a wrinkle and rolls up from the small cuff that over-spreads the knuckles clear up to the armpits. Here, the a smoothly drawn kid glove, the sleve opens bell shape around a small pull which rather resembles a muskmelod in shape, and, if the sleeve is cloth of silk, this puff is most likely made of gathered or plaited silk muslin. To complete the arms' decoration, a very modest flat epaulette extends from the shoulder upon the puff. "By heaven!" cried the captain, now pale at a taunt which too forcibly told home; then, reverting to his former scoffing manner, which could scarcely hide the fury that convulsed him, he "So the statue can really be moved? the piece of snow impassibility warmed into life and speech? sults,' as she terms them, I suppose, in all cases save one?" Maria's brow even was crimson. She would have given worlds to have been able to keep back the indignant blood at this base, this cruel accusation. Could she doubt the nature of Lord Carisford's attentions when his friend spoke thus? Would he dared have done so if not in the full confidence of Cecil? Stung to the heart, she nevertheless would not own to reading the officer's meaning. She found it no easy task to keep her lip steady; but, succeeding, and fearless to all outward seeming, looking fixedly into her companion's eyes,

"Yes, Captain Lascelles, I have a champion to whom I most certainly shall fly-a champion I shall entreat to protect me from your insults! Such men as you have caused me to renounce homes where I might have been content and happy. Immediately Lady Westbrook returns I shall acquaint her with everything that has taken place, and request her either to save me from a repetition, or permit me to leave her service." She had plucked her wrist away from him, and now walked to the door. Captain Lascelles changed color. He felt, under the lash of her sarcasm, he had gone too far. In his desire to give a false reading to his patron's love of Maria, he had apparently got himself into a fix; indeed, might have procured himself banishment from the house if this girl made Lady Westbrook her confidante. His course was instantly taken. Following, and overtaking her, he again possessed himself of her hand; but now his touch, as his ones, conveyed the deepest respect and repentance. "Signora, I implore you," he said. "You must not leave me thus-you .ast not go until you have pardoned me! I have been a fool—a coward! Yes, I confess it. "Hallo, old fellow! so you have come in?" remarked the captain, in the tone of a familiar, advancing. "Yes," rejoined the other, with careless preoccupation, and making no alteration in his position. "Have you been here long?" "Not a quarter of an hour," answered the officer, taking possession of a rocking-chair; "found you not at home, knew the marquis and your cousin were out riding, so went to the library in search of that book on hunting upon which, you recollect, we had a wager last night."

"Yes; who was right?"
"You, of course, my boy! I never knew what a memory you have, Carisford-wonderful! A fellow envies you." Cecil made no reply. His eyes were still bent on the ceiling. In his lordship's bachelor menage, Captain Lascelles played the part of tame cat, and equally, with his feline namesake, was as little regarded, else at that moment the worthy officer would have been de trop.

There was a pause. Granby Lascelles lighted a cigar, regarded his patron curiously then, leaning back, lifted his eyes to the ceiling, probably to see what the other was looking at so fixedly. There was nothing-not even a party of flies. "Did you call about those guns, Granby?" asked Cecil, abruptly. "Yes; they promise them punctually

After Donohue was given warning he filled his pockets with rocks, and when the officer went to arrest him Donohue let fly the stone, which struck Mc-Donald on the side of the head, inflicting an ugly wound. Donohue was brought to the station by McDonald (who bled all the way over), and was locked up. Dr. Drake was called and dressed McDonald's wound, which will necessitate him laying off for a few Novel Advertising for Monsocn Tea.

Some bright suggestions come among the many new ideas offered to the Monsoon Tea Company for advertising their Monsoon Indo-Ceylon tea. The latest is the use of the horseless caror auto-motor, with carriage body designed to represent the original Monsoon Tea package as sold in the stores, but enlarged about a hundred times. And this novel vehicle is to serve as the Monsoon Tea delivery carriage. The trouble with these new advertising suggestions is that they fail in the most important object sought. They all lack the earnest assertion necessary to convince people of the fact that Monsoon excels all other package teas in purity, flavor and substance, which is proven so perfectly in the first sip of Monsoon

Through the generosity of the owners, private collections have been ransacked and take part on Labor Day at Queen's stripped of their choicest treasures. Among them will be "Bereft," a large canvas by E. Wylie Green, of Toronto.

It is a salon picture, where it won a gold medal; "Inasmuch," by J. W. S. Forster, of Toronto, and several of his splendid portraits; a large landscape by Edmund Frere, of Paris; a recent salon picture by Blair Bruce, a brilliant young Canadian artist living in Paris. England will be represented by a large landscape by Colvert and a figure piece by Beard. There will be several of Florence Carlyle's clever productions, one a solon, and there will be two Paul Peels, of 1890, loaned by Mr. Tisdall, of Clinton.

Temperance Addresses Delivered in the Auditorium by City Ministers

Who Urge That Canada Should Lead the Ranks of Prohibition Nations as She Did the Anti-Slavery Nations

The first Sunday meeting in the interests of prohibition was held yesterday afternoon in the Auditorium, under the auspices of the London Plebiscite Association. There were over two hundred present and much enthusiasm was shown. Rev. Robert Johnston occupied the chair, and in introducing the speakers, Revs. Richard Hobbs, J. H. Moorhouse and Ira Smith, limited the time of each speaker to ten minutes Rev. Richard Hobbs was the first speaker. He was sorry more time could not be given, as he had chosen half a doezn of the arguments used by the anti-prohibitionists as his theme The time would only allow of his dealing with two. He referred to those who did not believe in the principle of prohibition, and went on to say that a Christian or anybody believing in the principles of the Bible could not help believing in the principle of prohibition. God himself restricted us, and governed us by restriction. The very decalogue taught that. The argument that Christians could disapprove of prohibition would not stand. argument was on the wine that the anti-prohibitionists said the Bible Many Treasures Secured by the Hebrew scholars, and used in the Hebrew Bible, expressive of the nine different kinds of vinal beverages that were not used in our own. Some wines were good, others bad, others indiffer-Will Grace the Walls of the New Arts ent, yet all of the words designating ent, yet all of the words designating these had been translated as "wine" in our version. There was the wine that Christ approved of, and wine that he condemned; therefore, they could not be the same thing. God could not approve of and curse the same thing, and make that which his own words condemned. Rev. J. H. Moorhouse started out with the idea that intemperance was admittedly an evil, which destroyed man's body, his intellect, his morals, his character, his reputation, his home to remove it by voice, vote and prayer. Rev. Ira Smith gave an enthusiastic address on the great importance of cord as favoring prohibition. question of revenue and such like were after-considerations. Both Mr. Gladstone and Sir Leonard Tilley had testified that there would be no trouble in providing a revenue from a sober na-

Rev. Robert Johnston, in closing the as follows: meeting, spoke of the enthusiasm which was already manifested in this great question, which he urged his hearers to help along. He sincerely hoped that Canada would be the first nation in the world to place herself on record as a prohibition nation. He referred to the fact that before an anti-slavery law was enacted in any other nation it was already on the statute books of the Dominion of Canada, and Canada led the nations of the world in the abolition of slavery. He urged that she should lead in the destruction of a worse foe-the liquor traffic. He drew a picture of the results which intemperance produced in the downfall of a son, and said if that were multiplied by 10,000 instances it would afford but a slight conception of the disastrous work of the drink traffic, which he urged his hearers to destroy.

During the afternoon the Imperial Male Quartet beautifully rendered four

About 2,000 People Attend the Temperance Meeting in Queen's Park.

Speeches by Rev. Thos. Wilson, Rev. . G. Fallis and Ex-Mayor Spencer -Some Questions and Their Answers.

The advocates of temperance in this city have now got thoroughly down to work, and a most enthusiastic meeting was held in Queen's Park yesterday afternoon, which was attended by over 2,000 people. The day was beautiful, and a better place could not have been chosen. Ex-Mayor W. M. Spencer presided and, in his opening remarks, explained the term "plebiscite." The people were called upon to voice their feeling on a question of very great import-ance to the country. We, as a rule, ance to the country. We, as a rule, he said, sent men to parliament to represent us, and to speak for us, but when great questions came up, and legislators differed in opinion, they then gave a plebiscite to the people. He said the amount of money expended directly each year on liquor was over $40,000,000, and the amount indirectly expended, $90,000,000, making a total of $130,000,000. About one-third of the entire wages earned was spent in drink. If this vast amount of money were diverted into the channels of legitimate trade, the present means of manufacturing necessary articles would be altogether inadequate.

Rev. J. G. Fallis spoke of the influence of the liquor traffic on the character of young men, and instanced a case where a young man had been unable to secure employment, even in hotels, because of intemperate habits. Thos. Wilson said there were with reference to this question of pro-hibition. There were those who were strongly in favor of the measure, and were confident that a majority for it would be rolled up on Sept. 29. There was another class, who were vigorous-ly opposed to it, and would do all they could against it. And a third class, who were totally indifferent. That was the class of people who would tell on polling day. There was one question on which the whole audience was agreed — that Canada should be a great nation.

Graham Bros.,

That was the wish of every worthy man. No nation could become great that harbored sin. He referred to the and his property. It was the Christian's privilege in the coming plebiscite to utter his protest against this evil, in favor of prohibition, and seek of sin, instancing Achau, whose sin was responsible for the defeat of Israel at the battle of Aai. Israel was ignorant of the sin, but nevertheless did not prosper until it was discovered and address on the great importance of taking advantage of the coming opportunity given by the government of the country, of placing ourselves on record as favoring prohibition. The knew it, and licensed it, and never the cord as favoring prohibition. could become a great nation until that was removed. At the close of the addresses, the chairman expressed his willingness to answer any question that might be

Rev. Timothy Nattrass of This City Passed Away Saturday.

A Pioneer of Methodism in Canada-Funeral Service at the Dundas Center Methodist Church This Afternoon.

Rev. Timothy Nattrass, one of the pioneers of Methodism in Canada, died at his home in this city, 665 Elias street, on Saturday, after a long illness. The reverend gentleman was born in England 67 years ago, and had been in ministerial life for 40 years. For a quarter of a century pillar of the church in Canada, and many citizens will still remember him as pastor of the King Street Methodist Church before the union of 1874. Before coming to this country, Mr. Nattrass held charges in England and in Scotland. In Canada he was stationed at several places in Ontario, and his death will be learned with general regret. Mr. Nattrass was superannuated ten or twelve years ago, and although suffering from a lingering malady for some time, his death was sudden at last. A widow, one son, John Watkin, of Washington, U. S., and four daughters, Mrs. James H. Ferguson, Mrs. (Dr.) H. C. McCallum, Mrs. Wm. Telfer, and Miss Maria, all of this city, are the survivors. The funeral will be held this afternoon at the house at 3:30, and at the Dundas Center Methadist Church at 4 o'clock.

A Guelph Man's Pitiable Plight!

RESCUED BY DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS,

The terrible pain that strikes you in the small of the back, right over the kidneys, is nothing more than these disordered organs crying out for help. Will you go to their assistance with the right remedy—Doan's Kidney Pills?
Mr. William Waller, Richard street,
Guelph, Ont., did. They cured him, and this is what he says:

"For the past two years I have been troubled with a complication of kidney diseases, which caused various distressing symptoms, such as pain in the back, urinary difficulties, etc. I found it impossible to get restful sleep, my general health was miserable, and the pain in my back became so acute that could not get off a chair or turn in bed without assistance.

"Some four months ago I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills. Two boxes removed the pain from my back, completely cured all the kidney trouble, and gave me health and strength again. Price, 50c a box, or 3 boxes for $1 25. at all druggists.
