SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE FIRES LEOPOLD

Novelist's Summing Up of the Congo Charges—An Awful State of Affairs—A Book Rehearsing the Case Against the Belgian Administration of the Congo State, and Holding King Leopold Responsible for What Is Wrong.

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle believes that if the powers of Europe do not unite to coerce the King of Belgium into putting a stop to the outrages alleged to exist in the Congo State, there remains nothing for the Congo Reform Association of London to do but to "honor the contract made as to the safety of these poor people (the natives), and to turn to the task of setting it right ourselves. If the powers join and give us a mandate, all the better, but we have a mandate from something higher than the powers which obliges us to act."

In order that those of his readers who are unacquainted with the Congo situation may understand how it was that King Leopold and the Belgian State Company gained control over the Congo territory, Sir Arthur devotes the first chapters of his book to a narrative of the formation of the international association, and the subsequent exploitation of the natives of Central Africa, the pioneer work that Henry M. Stanley did in winning the confidence of the native chiefs and the creation of the Congo Free State by the Congress of Berlin. Churches, missionary societies and boards of trade throughout Europe were enthusiastic in their support, and an altruistic scheme for benefiting the blacks that found its sponsor and head organizer in the King of the Belgians.

All the powers exercising sovereign rights or influence in the Congo pledged themselves to watch over the preservation of the native populations and the improvement of their moral and material conditions of existence. The author quotes from Article VI of the Berlin Treaty, "and to work together for the suppression of slavery and of the slave trade."

The King of the united nations of Europe," says Sir Arthur. "It is a disgrace to each of them, including ourselves, the way in which they have fulfilled it. Before the eyes of the world, before the eyes of their missionaries, traders and consuls, all corroborated, but in no way checked by the King of the Belgians, they have seen these wretched, unhappy people, who were their wards, robbed of all they possessed, degraded, mutilated, tortured, murdered, all on such a scale that no other knowledge, occurring before in the whole course of history."

That King Leopold was not guilty of conscious and deliberate crimes, fathered the Congo scheme the author believes, and his views were vaguely philanthropic, but before the Belgian troops had put down the Arab slavers in the Congo, the King had already altered the system. The word was never said, there is no possible subtlety by which the moral guilt can be deflected from the head of the state, the man who went to Africa for the freedom of commerce and the regeneration of the native.

Everywhere, in flagrant disregard of the Treaty of Berlin, the state proclaimed itself to be the sole landlord and sole trader. In some cases it absorbed whole regions, in others it simply took over the organization or private companies.

Each agent received from 150 to 300 francs a month as nominal salary, but this amount he could increase by bonuses on the amounts of rubber collected.

With the natives, as the author says, increased pay, official commendation and a speedier return to Europe awaited him if he killed, maimed, or destroyed and when they are running away in the forest to try to hide themselves and save their lives they are found out by the soldiers.

And now, the 2,000 agents being in place and eager to enforce the collection of rubber upon very unwilling natives, how did the system intend that they should set about it? The method was as efficient as it was absolutely diabolical. Each agent was given control over a certain number of savages, drawn from the wild tribes that armed with firearms. One or more of these were placed in each village to insure that the villagers should do their task. These are the men who are called captives or head-men in the accounts, and who are the actual though not the moral perpetrators of so many horrible deeds.

Before that body in some instances by the natives themselves. "With the characteristic policy of the Congo authorities the report was brought in given to the world," Sir Arthur says, "as being a triumphant vindication of King Leopold's administration, which would certainly have been a general European congress to extract every yet carried through on the planet. Looked at more closely it is clearly seen that behind the veil of former phrase and complimentary forms every single line has been absolutely established."

The reward of genius is far more prompt than it ever was before, and far more generous, as well. Within a month after his home-coming, Dr. Cook was receiving $5,000 a night for lectures on his polar trip. One lecture has probably netted him more than he realized in a half-year previous to his departure for the Arctic, and he has already realized, on public appreciation of his success, more than President Taft will receive during two years of hard work at his trade.

At the beginning they came with their smoking hands. The sentinels or else the boys in attendance on them after they had been smoked they by and put them on the top of the rubber baskets. I have on many occasions seen this done. "The Doyle trials of the Belgian commission of inquiry of 1904 with scorn. The commission did not, but whitewash the whole Congo regime according to him, and some of its Findings Were Ridiculous in the face of the testimony brought before that body in some instances by the natives themselves.

Rosebery On Universities

The Old and the New—Different Destinies. Lord Rosebery presided the other night at a dinner of the Glasgow University Club in London. Proposing "The University and the Club," he said that there was nothing more interesting at the moment in the non-political aspect of affairs than the sprouting up of new universities all over the country. In his time he had seen Manchester, Leeds, Sheffield, Liverpool, Bristol and Birmingham—last but not least—all arising in England. Scotland had remained satisfied with its quadrilateral ancient universities, its four-fold fortress for the defence and promotion of learning, with the single addition of the Dundee College. That surely showed an uprising in this country of intellectual interest which was full of promise for the future. He did not think the older universities could compete with the newer universities in the practical and technical branches of knowledge. The newer universities adapted to never needs were the universities of the future. They were sending out men all over the Empire who must inspire the Empire with the ideal they had received. The universities of the Empire were likely to be moulded by the good or evil by the character of these missions of empire. (Cheers.)

There are ancient universities which are also new. One of those is the University of Glasgow, which is a precursor of the future. Oxford and Cambridge are the only ones that have not been founded by the city and the university joined together. The one that has not been founded by the city and the university joined together, but neither has an absolutely independent existence, that of the city, which has always formed part of the city. There is no other great city of which can be said.

Genius and Marriage Are They Incompatible?

- The Majority of Great Writers Unmarried—Percentage of Unhappy Marriages Very High—Sidney Low's Interesting Statistics.
- Mr. Sidney Low, a well-known English writer, has lately gone to the trouble of compiling a list of the reproductive literary men of Great Britain during the three centuries, with a view of ascertaining their "condiction in regard to marriage." His conclusion is that there is an incompatibility between marriage and the literary career, and that the majority of great writers were unmarried. The list is published in the Nineteenth Century.
- Shakespeare—Married at 18, with hasty irregularity, a woman of humble origin, eight years older than himself. The union seems to have been unhappy. Separated from his wife after a few weeks. His wife wrote tract on his poet's life point to an estrangement between husband and wife.
 - Milton—Married three times. The poet's first wife left him after a few weeks. He wrote tract on his wife and paid his addresses to a very handsome and witty gentleman until the wife returned.
 - Dryden—Married—unhappily.
 - Bunyan—Married twice—satisfactorily.
 - Hobbes—Unmarried.
 - Pepys—Married. Unfaithful to his wife, and frequently quarrelled with her.
 - Samuel Butler—Married late in life.
 - Locke—Unmarried.

GENIUS IS WELL PAID THESE DAYS

Dr. Cook Makes a Fortune in a Couple of Months—Wright Brothers Also Getting Rich—$12,500 for One Flight—Roosevelt Making Big Money—Remuneration of Great Explorers, Inventors, Writers and Musicians of Today Compared With Former Times.

Never before was there such magic in the first of "ex-president." The title of them to earn a good rate at journalism was Benjamin Harrison, who, it is said, got $1,000 a piece for the series of articles, "This Country of Ours," which ran in a noted woman's magazine. Mr. Cleveland also got big rates from weekly, journal published by the same Philadelphia firm. But in the old days our White House veterans had no such chances. Jefferson, with all of his mastery of the pen, did not pay his debts, was poor, and had to depend for a livelihood on funds voted to her and her children by the states of North Carolina and Virginia. Milton, who spent his last days urging the Government to pay his claim for the return of expenses which he had incurred abroad while engaged on a Government mission, had to depend on the Government to pay his claim for the return of expenses which he had incurred abroad while engaged on a Government mission.

Indeed, for any man with something big to say, and with a big way of saying it, the gates of fortune are open. That master genius, de Maupassant, was satisfied to write for 2 or 3 cents a word, whereas Conan Doyle now estimates that his last Sherlock Holmes story had been sold for $2,500 to him. In fact, de Maupassant had put into his creator's pocket no less than $100,000, which is eighty times as much as Henry Esmond was worth to Thackeray. And on her side, Mrs. Humphry Ward realized an average of $10,000 more per volume than Scott did for his— and Scott once held the record for a novel, having sold the record volume of "The Three Musketeers" for $100,000.

By the way, it is a fact that the first India tales for $50 a piece when he first came to America, but today our big novelists are getting $100 a line. One of our 5-cent... The original of the red pole or pole, as a line and superficial measure has been traced to the red pole, pole or pole used to urge or direct a team of oxen pulling a plow. So it came about as being a convenient and handy land measure in feudal times by the lords in allotting plots of lands for agricultural purposes to the vassals and others.

Bleriot's latest model at $2,400 with a motor of 25-horsepower. Santos-Dumont's Demoiseille model is a 30-horsepower engine that can be bought for $1,000. The Bleriot company is making a new biplane with a 43-horsepower engine, to sell at $3,500.

Clergyman Rebukes Lords

Dr. Clifford, Leader of English Baptists, Hopes Their Veto Will Be Extinguished. Dr. Clifford, leader of the English Baptists and perhaps the foremost nonconformist in England, has addressed the following letter to the Press Association:

"The rejection of the London election bill by the Lords is another indication that 'Britons will be slaves' as long as the veto of the Lords is allowed to exist. Therefore, the immediate duty of the friends of freedom and of progress is to abolish that objectionable element of our government of our freedom. That is the key to our national well-being. Members of the House of Commons are now giving—as one of them told me yesterday—ten or twelve nights to their constituencies. The duty to be urged with insistent enthusiasm is not merely the claims of the budget; they are generally understood, and widely admitted; but the task is undertaken to prepare the constituencies for crippling the House of Lords by depriving it of its veto. Allow that House one veto against a measure sent up by the Commons, but not a second. The budget will pass, if not at once, yet speedily. The next election should turn, not on that simply, but on the abolition of the veto. Those who have taken part in London elections have seen the intolerable wrongs inflicted on our fellow-citizens by the present arrangements. A man loses his vote by crossing Edgware road from Paddington into Marylebone, or the other way about. He may be with in 50 yards of his former abode, but his franchise is destroyed. SHACKLETON AND HIS HARDSHIPS

Shortness of Food Prevented His Reaching South Pole—Ate Horse Two Months Dead. Lieutenant Shackleton had a great reception at Manchester University on Nov. 19. The pack was my enemy, but the students here are my friends." He described how fifteen men, down in the winter quarters in the Antarctic regions, had a little but all to themselves, and how outside they had four million square miles also to themselves. Golden Rule on "The Force"

What It Has Done for the City of Cleveland in the Administration of the Police Department.

On various occasions since the inception of our common sense or so-called "Golden Rule" policy in the police department of the city of Cleveland on January 1, 1908, I have been asked by various interests just what our policy is and what it does for the people of this city.

This golden rule policy adds character to the force and gets away from the old idea that the police are harsh and simply persecute people. It is a newer and better justice. It never caters to crime or criminals. It encourages and needs of the prevention of crime, the capturing of criminals and those who make their living by criminal means and practices.

Through the golden rule plan, we have reduced the arrests for intoxication alone, from 49,735 during the years 1905, 1906 and 1907, under the old general custom of making arrests (an average of over 16,000 per year), to the arrests were growing larger in number each year, to 3,592 for 1908, and still were in 1909, the total for nine months up to October 1 being but 731.

Through years of study and observation we were thoroughly familiar with the fact that the evil of indiscriminate arrests of relatives who are sale arrests in first and minor violations, as in cases of intoxication, not only greatly enhanced the possibility of a large number of relatives being arrested and arraigned had accomplished positive harm.

TWELVE THOUSAND MILES FROM THE ORIENT

FRESH and fragrant from the finest tea-producing country in the world—The Island of Ceylon. Do you know "SALADA" Tea by Flavor? Have you ever enjoyed its deliciousness and downright goodness? "SALADA" is "hill-grown" tea—grown on plantations high up on the hills. The leaves are small and tender, with a rich, full flavor. It is picked every week, and reaches you fifteen weeks later in air-tight, sealed "SALADA" packets. Its native purity and fine flavor are perfectly preserved. You are guaranteed tea of unvarying good quality.

—Will you ask your grocer for a package to-day?

It is mathematically impossible to correctly illustrate the proportionate growth in our sales in this space, as the 1908 elephant should be 302 times larger than the 1892 elephant.

SIDEGLIMTS ON NOTABLE PEOPLE BY THE MARQUISE DE FONTENOY

Lord Lansborough, who has just been appointed to the post of military secretary to the Governor-General of Canada, as lieutenant-colonel of the Coldstream Guards, has until now been serving on the staff of the King's brother, the Duke of Connaught, and succeeded to the family honors, which include a barony, a viscounty, and an earldom, about four years ago. Up to that time he had been known as Lord Newton Butler, and it was as Lady Newton Butler that his wife achieved celebrity as one of the most beautiful women in London. Lord Lansborough's peccadilloes are all Irish. But he has been elected a representative peer of Ireland, and as such occupies a seat in the House of Lords.

he was an infinitely greater peril to Sir John, whose son, Sir Eldon, is reported to be on the eve of resigning his office as British plenipotentiary in Egypt, owing to the realization that he has failed to continue the good work and to maintain the prestige of his predecessor, Lord Cromer, originally was designed for the church, and was taken out to New Zealand by the famous Bishop Selwyn to help him in the evangelization of the Maoris. Most of the bishop's young men blossomed forth into prelates and archdeacons. But Sir John possessed too much pugacity in his composition to find the calling of a missionary congenial, and accordingly he became a soldier and a magistrate employed in the suppression of the Maori rebellion. Subsequently he returned to England, where he joined the brilliant fourth party, and founded the Primrose League in conjunction with the American wife of his colleague and intimate friend, Lord Randolph Churchill.

Sir John attracted much attention last summer by surrendering to the Government a pension of $6,000 a year, which he had been drawing since 1902 as a former cabinet minister, on the succession to the Castle Combe property, near Chipswodham, of a maternal grandchild of the name of Lowides. The Castle Combe estate was owned by the Scroppe family for nearly 600 years, during the days of reconstruction. He was a handsome, athletic fellow with regular features, a fair skin and light brown hair.

In the politics of a southern state during the days of reconstruction, he was a handsome, athletic fellow with regular features, a fair skin and light brown hair. When his father and all of his self-proclaimed members of his immediate family died he decided to quit the south for the north and pass for white. He started a haberdashery on one of the main streets of Cincinnati and prospered. He made no attempt to marry a white woman. All that he desired was to be let alone.

found employment as a demonstrator in a booth on the world's fair grounds. Along came a young German who fell in love with her. The young German was a graduate in medicine and surgery. His people in Berlin were rich. The young German proposed marriage to the octoroon girl. She declined him.

He pressed his offer. He refused to be refused. Finally she told him about herself. She wanted to be fair about it. He told her that what she told him made no difference. They were married.

Rev. A. H. Armstrong writes in the Chicago Advance. I returned my week-end in London for a few hours to my dear little boy in this country, not in the pulpit, but in the garden. It took two train hours to Cambridge, and two taxicab minutes to Roman Road. A big, dark man in his shirt sleeves ran out, calling, "Hello! Hello! Mr. Armstrong." We were fairly tired out and borne home by him.

"Passing for white is a phrase in quite common use among our people nowadays," said an educated colored man, a mulatto. "It refers to persons with colored blood in them who really do pass for white. There are more of these persons scattered all over the United States, chiefly in the Northern States of course, than white people have any idea of."

She was a proficient stenographer and was employed in the office of a well-known San Francisco attorney. "She was a good, self-respecting woman. All that she asked of the world was the privilege of being allowed to pass for white as white as any white person's. Her features were of the classical type."

BUYING CHRISTMAS PRESENTS EARLY

Start Now, Cecilia Says—She Has Already Begun to Look.

"This year," says Cecilia, "I am going to buy my Christmas presents early, earlier than ever. I don't know what will happen, but I am going to make a great effort to get through in time this year. I began weeks ago to make lists of the things that I want to get through this. I could give everything I'd like to. And I know pretty well already what I want to get. I may have to revise these lists somewhat as we go along. I may discover that some of my folks or friends change their minds and express in their casual conversations, of which I take mental note, new preferences which I shall want to regard, but I have got now pretty good rough lists of what I want to buy, and I have already begun to look. I have done this now for two or three years. I don't know what I'm going to get for John; but I know there are more and more people nowadays who think these things over in advance and make up their minds and then go ahead and buy the things one or two at a time. I know I do that. I start weeks in advance and find the greater variety and get what I want and things that haven't been missed."—New York Sun.

PURIFIED HIS BLOOD

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Healed Mr. Wilson's Sores

When the sewers of the body—bowels, kidneys and skin ducts—get clogged up, the blood quickly becomes impure and frequently sores break out over the body. The way to heal them, as Mr. Richard Wilson, who lives near London, Ont., found, is to purify the blood. He writes:

"For some time I had been in a low, depressed condition. My appetite left me and I soon began to suffer from indigestion. Quite a number of small sores and blotches formed all over my skin. I tried medicine for the blood and used many kinds of ointments, but without satisfactory results. What was wanted was a thorough cleansing of the blood, and I looked about in vain for some medicine that would accomplish this."

"At last Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills were brought to my notice, and they are one of the most wonderful medicines I have ever known. My blood was purified in a very short time, sores healed up, my indigestion vanished. They always have a place in my home and are looked upon as the family remedy."

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cleanse the system thoroughly. Sold by all dealers at 25c a box.

Up to that time he had been known as Lord Newton Butler, and it was as Lady Newton Butler that his wife achieved celebrity as one of the most beautiful women in London.

As chief of the general staff, he had a quantity of the most confidential documents relating to the defence of Italy, in his care, and these thus came into the possession of Mme. von Siemens, who at first declined to surrender them. Matters were further complicated by the fact that the German ambassador, when appealed to by the authorities, declined to interfere, on the ground that the woman was not a German, since she was by birth a Swiss, by her first marriage a Russian, and by her second a Persian. The Russian ambassador was reluctant to take any steps in the matter, on the ground that Mme. von Siemens had become a Persian by her second marriage, and that since Malcolm Khan had not completed the terms of his contract with the Persian Government, the union must be considered as still in existence. But finally Mme. Siemens succeeded in obtaining the loans to the Italian Government, on her own terms, which left her free to remain in Italy.

Werner Siemens married in 1882 a Russian woman—Natalie Gavrilov, of Odessa. This union was dissolved by divorce in 1894; and in the same year the ex-Mme. von Siemens became the wife of Baron Axel von Varnbuler, plenipotentiary of the King of Wurtemberg in Berlin.

While political principles may have something to do with Sir John's conversion, there can be no doubt but that he has been prejudiced against the Unionists by the treatment to which he was subjected at their hands, according to what is shown on the reconstruction of the Unionist administration by Arthur Balfour, after the retirement of Lord Salisbury. It was simply as a matter of course that he could not tolerate the stupidity of his inferiors in ability when these inferiors were set up above himself; and those who recall his defence in the House of Commons, when under secretary for India, of the unfortunate policy of his chief, Lord Cross, the minister for India, will readily understand that with his terrible gift of silky satire

Until you drink a cup of OXO you cannot have any idea how delicious fluid beef can be.

Many people dislike ordinary beef tea, and with good reason. Beef tea is often insipid and more like a medicine than a food. OXO is different. It is made in a highly scientific way which retains the delicious flavour and aroma of prime beef steak.

Every time you put a cup of nourishing OXO to your lips you know you are drinking real beef, the best beef.

OXO is made from healthy cattle which live out of doors all the year round in the sunshine and fresh air. It is such cattle which give OXO its delicious flavour—a flavour which gives the very choicest beef can give.

Ask your dealer to send you a bottle of OXO to try. Then we believe your home will never after be without OXO. It is a stimulating and invigorating drink for young and old at any time of day or night.

Hundreds of Articles Made From Tropic Product. Motor Car Tires Rapidly Adapting to the Demand for This Fast-Disappearing Gum.

[San Francisco Chronicle.] The great demand for rubber, which is rapidly getting ahead of the supply, has stimulated capitalists to cultivate this wonderful product of nature, and great success has already been achieved in many plantations in different parts of the world.

As early as three years ago automobile rubber orders in advance were sufficient to buy more than six times the rubber output. The rubber famine was foreseen years ago, and was the cause of the demand for automobile rubber, and is likely to still further increase.

Rubber, once a luxury, has now become one of the necessities of life, and all those who have conscientiously formed and handled plantations in a business-like manner will reap a rich reward.
