WON AT LAST.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

"Nat, I say, don't cry like that—there's a good girl! You will be ill, you know."

But she only stretched out one hand to me in a curious helpless way, and her sobs redoubled. I waited for an instant, and then lifted her to her feet.

"What is it, Nat? Has anything upset you—anything fresh?"

"No, no—it's nothing!" she faltered, trying to wipe herself.

"Oh, come, that's nonsense! Has madame been molesting you? No?"—as she made a movement of dissent. "Is it about the diamonds?"

"No, no!" She made a peevish gesture of dissent. "What do I care about them? I don't care if I never see them again!"

And I verily believed that she did not, for ever since the robbery she had been singularly apathetic about it.

She had clasped her hands round my arm in her favorite fashion as we stood side by side, and I noticed something that made my heart leap. Fraser Froude's big diamond ring was gone from her finger. Her eyes met mine at the same instant, and she flushed a hot red.

"Nat, have you taken it off?"

"Yes," she answered with a shiver. "I could not bear it on. The sight of it made me turn faint."

"I can well believe it," I said.

She burst into tears again, crying quietly this time, with her curly head resting against my arm. Presently I whispered in her ear—

"Nat, you are tired of this, aren't you?"

"Tired?" she echoed. "Oh, Ned, I wish I were dead—I do, indeed!"

"You are going on in a fair way to die. I should think, Nat, look here—be the sensible dear little girl you are, and break off this confounded engagement now—to-night! It is not too late. What's the good of it all, anyhow? Here you are fretting yourself to death; here is Roger just as miserable as he can be, and vowing to be two hundred miles away from Whittlesford before the week's out—and all for what? Some wild fad of yours which could be set right in two minutes if you only choose. Come now—let me tell him to-morrow that you want him to come to you to make it all up. Shall I?"

"No!" she said, shortly, and coldly, drawing herself away.

"You mean that you are going on with this suicidal engagement to

Eczema Cured Three Years Ago

Best City Doctors Failed, But Cure Was Effected by Use of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mrs. A. T. Smith.

You apply Dr. Chase's Ointment for eczema and feel the benefit as it by magic. It may take some days to get the sores cleaned out and the head in process fully established, but from day to day you can see the old trouble gradually disappearing and know that you are getting rid of it.

Mrs. A. T. Smith, 1 Mt. Charles St. Montreal, Que., writes:—"I had eczema on my leg for four years, and tried many remedies and doctors in Montreal and Boston, without a benefit. I used three boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment and was cured completely. Think me three years ago since then I have used Dr. Chase's Ointment for irritations and eruptions of the skin, and never got rid of them with two or three applications. Dr. Chase's Ointment is a wonderful preparation."

Dr. Chase's Ointment, 50 cents a box. All drug stores. Wm. H. Manning, Boston, Mass., Toronto.

Froude?" I said, more than half angry, for from the quiet way in which she had listened to me, I had fancied that I was making some impression upon her.

"You mean that?" I again repeated.

"I mean just that."

"If you do, I believe you'll be dead before you've been married a year!" I retorted.

"I hope I shall."

"And a cheerful prospect that is. I don't believe you mean it. Come, now—just say 'Yes,' and I shall know that Roger is to come here to-morrow poor old boy, and that Froude may go to Bath! Come, now—say it."

"I will not!" she cried passionately.

"I tell you that if he comes here I will neither see him nor speak to him."

"Although you are breaking your heart after him now?" I said, bluntly.

"If that were true," she returned, defiantly, "don't you know that I would rather die a thousand times than tell him so?"

"If it were my case, I'd sooner tell him a thousand times than die once," I rejoined, practically. "Then you won't send a message to him?"

"No!" she replied, turning away stubbornly.

"Although he's going away miserably, and driven away through you?" I continued, mercilessly.

In spite of everything, I believe she would have yielded with a few more words, for her face softened wistfully, and the rapid color flushed it as I spoke, but for an interruption that occurred—mademoiselle's voice speaking outside. She hardened and stiffened at it in an instant, and the flush died away. Valla entered almost at the same moment; and, saying good night, coldly and quietly, Nat motioned to me to go.

I went miserably enough, to find upon going downstairs that old Styles was making his nightly round of inspection of the locks and bolts with a candle, and that madame had gone to bed with a headache. So after all I was obliged to follow the general example and go to bed myself, without having asked my mother for Blake's last news about the stolen jewels, and without telling her of the strange interview which I had interrupted in the Lady's Walk between Mlle. Valdin and the unknown man with the ugly jagged scar across his forehead.

CHAPTER XXXV.

"I don't wonder at her being ill, poor child! How your mother bears the shock as she does I'm sure I can not imagine. What I have suffered in my nerves at night ever since it happened no one will ever know—never! And Alice is so unfeeling, and her father encourages her."

Mrs. Deeping was the speaker, and she ended her speech with a sigh and a shiver as she drew her wraps more closely about her, which were as thick as though the snug rectory drawing-room had not been very nearly of the temperature of a hot-house.

It was eight o'clock on the following evening, and I had walked over from Chavasse after dinner with a message from madame to the rector. But it chanced that the rector was busy in his study, and I had to wait, and had fallen into Mrs. Deeping's doleful clutches. I had the lady all to myself too, for, although Alice was in the room, she was talking to her major in a cozy corner by the window, and did not come to my relief at all. Now, at the fretful conclusion of her mother's speech, she simply made a gay grimace at me and went on with her whispered chatter. An inquiry of hers after Nat, which I had had to answer to the effect that she was not by any means well, had produced Mrs. Deeping's speech and half a dozen more like it.

What answer I should have made I do not know, for Mrs. Deeping always exercised a most depressing effect upon my conversational powers, but, as luck would have it, the door opened just then to admit the rector. He greeted me with his usual jollity, and I gave him madame's message—I have forgotten what it was now. Then he looked across at the major.

"By the way, Constable, have you that book we were speaking of the other day?"

"Yes," the other answered. "I meant to bring it with me to-day, but it slipped my memory. Are you in any hurry for it?"

"Well, yes, rather. In fact, there should be a reference or two in it that I want to-night. I tell you what—I'll step round with you to the Lodge and get it. It's a fine night for a walk."

The major's ready assent was stopped by Mrs. Deeping's fretful voice.

"What is that you are saying, William? I did not hear. I'm quite certain that I am getting deaf, although of course you will never perceive it. Did you say that you were going out?"

"Just round to the Lodge, my dear."

Constable has a book that I want," responded the rector, cheerfully. The man's unflinching good temper ought to have served as a cloak for the whole catalogue of his sins, whatever they were—that is certain. "Shall not be long—not more than half an hour or so, I dare say."

"Then I wish that, as you are going out, you would take a message" to Redpots. Really I don't know what has come to Doctor Yorke. He used to be so attentive, and now he has forgotten the lotion for two days together. Will you call for it? I shall not close my eyes this night without it, I am certain."

As gravely as though he believed in the lotion, the placid rector promised that he would, cheerfully adding that it would not take much longer if he went round by the river path; and then the major and I said good-night and went out into the hall, Alice following.

She remonstrated as I took my coat.

"What—you off too, Ned? I declare it is too bad! I thought you meant to stay and help me to listen to mother. It's too much for me—only a moderately robust person—to attempt, you know."

"Now, now, my dear," the rector expostulated, as he buttoned up his plump person. "I wouldn't say that if I were you."

"No, daddy dear; you are content to think it," Miss Alice returned, with the coolest audacity, pinching his ear. "Then you won't be merciful and help me, Ned?"

I said that I wished to walk with the rector to Redpots too. I wanted to see Yorke.

"Of course!" cried Alice, pouting.

"What you will do without your friend passes my comprehension. Well, if you must go, you must. Mind you give my love to Natalie; and tell her I'll never forgive her for being such a little stupid!"—for Miss Deeping could not at all get over Nat's

The Quickest, Simplest Cough Cure

Easily and Cheaply Made at Home. Saves You $2.

This recipe makes 16 ounces of cough syrup—enough to last a family a long time. You couldn't buy as much or as good cough syrup for $2.50.

Simple as it is, it gives almost instant relief and usually stops the most obstinate cough in 24 hours. This is partly due to the fact that it is slightly laxative, stimulates the appetite and has an excellent tonic effect. It is pleasant to take—children like it. An excellent remedy, too, for whooping cough, croup, sore lungs, asthma, throat troubles, etc.

Mix two cups of granulated sugar with one cup of warm water and stir for two minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (dirt cents' worth) in a 16-ounce bottle, and add the Sugar Syrup. It keeps perfectly. Take a teaspoonful every one, two, or three hours.

Pinex is one of the oldest and best-known remedial agents for the throat membranes. Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in gualic acid and all the other natural healing elements. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

SUFFERED EVERYTHING

For Years, Restored To Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Canadian women are continually writing us such letters as the two following, which are heartfelt expressions of gratitude for restored health:

Glanford Station, Ont.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and never found any medicine to compare with it. I had ulcers and falling of womb and doctors did me no good. I suffered dreadfully for years until I began taking your medicine. I also recommend it for nervousness and indigestion."—Mrs. HENRY CLARK, Glanford Station, Ont.

Chesterville, Ont.—"I heard your medicines highly praised, and a year ago I began taking them for falling of womb and ovarian trouble. My left side pained me all the time and just before my periods which were irregular and painful it would be worse. To sit down caused me pain and suffering and I would be so nervous sometimes that I could not bear to see any one or hear any one speak. Little specks would float before my eyes and I was always constipated. I cannot say too much for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, for there are no medicines like them. I have taken them and I recommend them to all women. You may publish this testimonial."—Mrs. STEPHEN J. MARTIN, Chesterville, Ontario, Canada.

luckless engagement to the master of Holmedeane.

We went to the Lodge, obtained the book the rector wanted, and then, coming out again, hesitated a little. It was intensely cold—the coldest night, I think, that we had had that winter—and the rector shivered under his thick coat. Evidently he did not much care for the walk down by the river to Redpots, and, seeing it, I suggested that I should give Mrs. Deeping's message there, and that he and the major should go back to the rectory. But he laughed at that.

"My dear boy, if I appear without that blessed lotion, I shall never hear the last of it. No, I'll come. It isn't far—that's one comfort."

The major said he would come too; and we all three turned off in the direction of the road by the river, which, as I have said, was the shortest way to Redpots, cutting off as it did a great loop of the High Street. And very cold it was by the river, although very pretty, for a light snow had fallen early in the day which covered everything with a glittering mantle of white. The rector was almost as fond of every inch of Whittlesford as I was, and he paused presently to look about.

"You didn't get anything like this in India, eh, Constable?"

"Not exactly, sir. In fact, I don't think I saw a flake of snow all the ten years I was stationed there."

"No; you can't match an English winter," went on the rector, complacently. "And, to my mind, this little river just here is as pretty a scene as any you'll find."

"I thought so when I saw it first," assented the major. "After the color and glare of Calcutta, it was like a new world."

"That's pretty much what St. George—that Jamaica fellow, you know—said," I struck in. "The first night he was up at Chavasse I walked him home around here, and could hardly get him along. He was shivering like one o'clock, too, all the time."

"He usually is, I think," the rector observed, pulling up the collar of his coat.

If We Only Could.

By RUTH CAMERON.

There is a widow in our town who earns her living by "accommodating." This woman has the most nervous energy of any person I ever knew. She simply flies from one task to another and is never happy unless she is rushing. Unkind rumor has it that her temperament had something to do with the untimely death of her late husband, but I don't know about that. Recently she was recommended to a friend of mine whose broken health made it imperative that she have some trustworthy and capable person to help her about her house. Apparently Mrs. R. was just the person. Actually my friend endured her just a week.

"I should live with that woman a month I'd be in the hospital," she explained to me later. "I never was more tired in my life than at the end of the week she was here. Yes, she did all the housework and more, but honestly it made me more tired to have her in the house with me than it would to do everything myself. I think she actually radiates nerves. You know I'm a good sleeper usually, but she had me so worked up that I woke up at half past four or five all the time she was with me. I know she thinks I'm ungrateful for all the work she did, but I simply couldn't stand it another day."

"That's one example of the contagion of nerves. Here's another: A livery stable keeper just yesterday was bewailing the fact to me that his best saddle horse had been hurt in a runaway."

"Had that horse for ten years and let him to all kinds of people—men, women and children—and he never ran away before. And do you know what the trouble was, Miss Cameron. It wasn't that the driver didn't know how to ride. He's taken dozens of lessons. It was just because he was so darned nervous that he worked that horse all up."

Molly, the little stenographer lady also had an unconscious contribution to make to this subject. She came home the other night completely tired out.

"Tired?" said she in answer to our sympathetic queries. "Not anything so mild as that. Just half dead. You see Mr. A. dictated to me two hours steady this afternoon. No, that's not a terribly long time, but didn't I ever tell you about him? Why, he is the bete-noir of the office. We'd rather take any other man's dictation all the morning than his for an hour. No, he doesn't dictate so terribly fast. It's just that he's so horribly nervous and keyed up, and in a hurry inside that he makes everybody he talks to feel nervous and on a tension. Some of the girls have hysterics when he gets through dictating to them. Of course I don't do that, but I always make four times as many mistakes with him as I do with anyone else, and I'm limp as a rag when he gets through."

But the best example of the contagion of nerves, it seems to me, is in regard to the telephone. When the telephone rings very quickly, I am pretty sure one of two things is true. Either some chronically nervous, impatient person is calling, or someone made nervous and impatient by delay or difficulty in getting me. If on answering the telephone I find the first isn't the case, I always ask about the second, and in nine cases out of ten, find my supposition correct.

Try this some day. You'll find it an interesting experiment and I'm sure you'll be convinced, if you aren't already, of the deadly contagion of nerves.

Why Women Are Not RICH.

Man is a millionaire many times over in the possession of blood cells. Woman is not quite so rich, for scientists have proven that the normal man has five million—the woman only four and a half million to a cubic millimetre of blood. A decrease in number of red blood corpuscles and a person "looks pale"—in fact, is anemic, the blood does not get the right food and probably the stomach is disordered.

Dr. R. V. Pierce found years ago that a glyceric extract of golden seal and Oregon grape roots, queen's root and bloodroot with black cherrybark, would help the assimilation of the food in the stomach, correct liver ills and in Nature's own way increase the red blood corpuscles. This medicine he called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. By assisting the food eaten the system is nourished and the blood takes on a rich red color. Nervousness is only "the cry of the starved nerves for food," and when the nerves are fed on rich red blood the person loses those irritable feelings, sleeps well at night and is rested in the morning.

"I was attacked with a severe nervous disease, which was caused by a disordered stomach and liver," writes Mr. J. S. LEVLEY, of Wells, Tenn., Scott's Emulsion. "All my friends thought I would die and the best physicians gave me up. I was advised to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I bought a bottle and used it. My case had run so long, it had become so chronic that nothing would effect a permanent cure. I had been in bed for several months. I feel now that I can do anything I wish to do. I highly recommend it. I heartily advise its use as a purgative, and further advise adding people to know Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery have run so long that there is no chance to be cured."

"Get a Worry Book. Put down in it to-day everything that worries you. Look at it a week from to-day. How many of the things you are worrying about will happen? The longer you keep a Worry Book the shorter will grow the entries."

"The worries of to-day are the jokes of to-morrow. Look over your past life. What are the incidents that you find funny now? Every one of them was a worry at the time it happened. You laugh as you look back at past worries. Well, why not laugh at the worries of to-day and to-morrow as well?" asks William Johnston in the American Magazine.

The victories of the temperance party would have been still more numerous did not the law require a three-fifths majority to carry closure legislation. The most remarkable fact about the situation is that in so comparatively short a time the question of liquor legislation is coming to be a powerful factor in the political situation. So far as the respective organs of political parties in the Province voice differing opinions, they compete in the direction of more rather than less restriction on the liquor traffic.

THE MAN A WOMAN LIKES.

The sort of a man a woman likes is the topic of a symposium in the Woman's Journal. To the average Briton, however, as well-known women writers have contributed. Miss Marjorie Bowen thinks "the most desirable qualities in a man are courage, intelligence, gaiety, and sympathy—and if you add sweetness and generosity you have perfection."

"Rita" (Mrs. D. Humphreys) asks that he be "strong, firm, and self-reliant, with just enough tenderness to love a woman for her own sake. Above all, a good temper." Mrs. Child (Champion de Crespigny) were in the air. He no doubt understood a good deal about the possibilities of American success, as in his travels and contacts of the North American continent, he would have learned much of the surmises and feelings of the people; and the evidence was pretty sure that the Revolution would succeed, and a new nation be born. With this thought in mind he prepared for the worst; and

CAGED WOMEN.

"We secluded women of the East are the guardians of the Mysteries of God Most High—the verities of life and death, of birth and growth and decay—all those things that come directly from the hand of God. These are the sense of life, though much obscured by all the surface agitation which disturbs the life of men. We, in our calm retirement, always view them."

These words are supposed to be spoken by the principal wife of an Egyptian Pasha in a remarkable new novel by Mr. Marmaduke Pickthall, entitled "Veiled Women" (Nash).

Its pages are to bring together the eminent leaders of every division in the world of Christianity. Therein such men will have the opportunity of stating their religious convictions in the form which comes most naturally to them, and with certain knowledge that their utterances will be read by members of every Church and denomination."

Wonderful Advertising

At an advertising man's banquet in Denver, Dr. H. Wood Avery, the author of many advertising monographs, ended an address with this story:—"The power of the 'ad.'," he said, "is truly miraculous. I know a young actress who mislaid a string of pearls. She inserted a 'lost and found' advertisement, and the next day I asked her: 'Well, did you get your pearls back?' 'Yes,' she answered—and isn't advertising wonderful? The string I lost were only scientific, but those that have been returned to me are the real thing."

I. C. MORRIS.
CHAPTER XXI.—THE STORY OF DR. WALSH.

The Doctor in leaving the ship managed to take with him his instruments, and also a small mahogany table, and with these he began his home in a strange land, in the new world. He kept the table as an heirloom, and it has been handed down to his grand-children and great-grand-children, and it is now in the possession of Mrs. Mickle, of Halifax, who was formerly Miss Paul of New York.

At Great Burin at the time of Dr. Walsh's landing, there was, as already stated, but one resident, and under his roof the strangers found shelter and friendship. It was a great change for a man to leave a high eastern home, and to come to a change for the fair lady who had come from the busy New York, and who had been accustomed to society life. But love makes all things smooth, and as there were no obstacles in the way, and very little to occupy the attention of the young couple, they seemed to have found in their solitude a reward for their sacrifice. At that time (one hundred and fifty years ago), there was an abundance of fish, both cod and salmon, herring and caplin, in Placentia Bay and all round about Burin, and in Great Burin, and as there were no people among whom the Doctor could practice his profession, he adapted himself to his surroundings, and became a fisherman, and in his new role of fisherman, he did real well, and earned more than sufficient for his wants; and in a short time he had his home around him, and his happy children were afterwards trained and educated.

As time rolled on, Great Burin and the nearby places became a bit populated, and the Doctor proved very useful in his practice of medicine and surgery. Although he still fished, and became quite an expert at the work, he put in a good deal of practice, and proved a very useful member of the community; for nearly half a century, he practiced medicine until the end of his career; and he taught his son the profession; and he also practiced, and the entire district reaped great benefit from Dr. Walsh's respected son.

Shortly after the Doctor had made his home in Great Burin, the rumblings of war reached him, and the symptoms of the American Revolution were in the air. He no doubt understood a good deal about the possibilities of American success, as in his travels and contacts of the North American continent, he would have learned much of the surmises and feelings of the people; and the evidence was pretty sure that the Revolution would succeed, and a new nation be born. With this thought in mind he prepared for the worst; and with his friend and neighbor, Mr. Inkpen, and several other families who had made their home with them, they decided to fortify the harbor; and so they prepared themselves for any possible attacks of the enemy. The Doctor having had some four or five years experience in Naval works, and having seen a good many forts built, and also having examined the forts in Nova Scotia, and the New England States, was very competent as to what should be done. And so he erected forts at the most important points of Great Burin; mounted them with cannon, and took every precaution to protect the lives and property of the people. The forts were never really used, although at one time they had them manned and ready for action; but the ship which have in sight proved to be a friendly one, and the expected encounter did not take place.

These old forts, or what is left of them, are still to be seen at Great Burin, and while they are but mounds and their history not very well known, they are at the same time mementoes of the young Doctor, who for the sake of love forfeited his ship and risked his life; and thereby helped to make Great Burin the flourishing and independent centre of trade that it now is, and has been for a long time. In different parts of Placentia Bay similar forts are to be seen; and notably so in Mortier Bay, where several cannon still are found. These all mark the presence of the old-time British soldier; and they tell that somebody has fought for our present independence, and struggled for our liberties. In travelling in those by-places, not only in Placentia Bay, but in the different great bays of our community, one is led to wonder how so much masonry was constructed under such difficult conditions as must have prevailed two centuries ago; and while it is somewhat difficult to solve this problem, there is the certainty that the old-time British soldiers were men of strange; and were able at the shortest notice to construct forts, and to erect batteries; and thereby give a bold front to the enemy. Much of this has been done in Newfoundland, and in every tottering fort that we see, in every squared stone that we behold, there is in them evidence of the genius and skill, and the daring and gall of the soldier of two hundred years ago.

To climb Castle Hill at Placentia is to see the strength of the French soldier; while to look at the old fort at Mortier Bay, or the old forts at Trinity, or the mounds of Dr. Walsh's forts at Great Burin, is to see at a glance that the days of British wooden walls and old-time soldiers, were truly days of hard work and endurance; and withal days of victory for the few.

Bowels Bad, Liver Torpid, Cascarets.

If Constipated, Bilious, Headachy, Stomach Sour, get a 10-cent box of Cascarets—take one to-night.

You men and women who can't get feeling right—who have headache, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath, dizziness, can't sleep, are bilious, nervous and upset, bothered with a sick, gassy, disordered stomach, or have back-ache and feel worn out. Are you keeping your bowels clean with Cascarets, or merely forcing a passage every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil? This is important.

Cascarets work while you sleep; cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poison in the intestines and bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box from any drug store will keep your stomach sweet; liver and bowels regular and head clear for months. Don't forget the children. They love Cascarets because they taste good—do good—never gripe or sicken.

A commercial traveller was bragging about the magnitude of the firm he represented.

"I suppose your house is a pretty big establishment," said the customer.

"Big? You can't have any idea of its dimensions. Last week we took an inventory of the employees, and found out for the first time that three cashiers and four book-keepers were missing. That will give you some idea of the magnitude of our business."

The South Pole Quest.

From the far South Pole o'er England's tide
The message speeds on wing,
Telling the story of those who died
For country, fame and King.

A monarch weeps 'neath a Kingly Crown,
An Empire mourns its loss,
A world in sorrow gazes down
On a tent, a cairn, a cross.

A canvas shroud for our heroes three,
A snow-cairn raised on high;
A prayer for the rest, where'er they be
Who wandered out to die.

A cross, erect midst the ice-King's breath,
Shadows the loved ones' bed,
Emblem of triumph even in death,
Marking an Empire's dead.

A tent, a cairn, a cross of love,
Five heroes sleeping by,
And an Empire mourning those who strove,
Who triumphed but to die.

Oh King, go chisel each honored name,
The work they did was good;
Carve well their mark in scarp of hills
Of fame—
A soul—a cross of wood.

Notes and Comments.

Mr. John R. Bennett, in moving for a Select Committee yesterday, in the Assembly, said of Sir R. Williams: "He had not alone performed his duties with much skill, but had made himself acquainted with the lives of the people throughout the Colony by frequent visits among them and earned for himself the love and esteem of everyone."

To show how Sir Ralph appreciated the love and esteem which the people of this Colony bestowed on him we draw the attention of our readers to the letter of a correspondent who was a passenger with the Governor on his trip to the Old Country.

Speaking of the Boers, he (Sir Ralph) said they were the dirtiest people on the face of the globe; AND NEWFOUNDLANDERS CAME NEXT!

What do you think of that for a man who "earned for himself the love and esteem of everyone"? Is it not rather hard on the people of this Colony to have such insults hurled at them by a man who had not the remotest right to do his duty when he met it face to face!

The Government, as an act of reparation in their dying days, has decided to reduce the duty on certain articles consumed by the fishermen. No credit, however, is due to either Sir E. P. Morris or his associates in this matter. The person to whom credit is due in this connection is "Tim Shannahan," our able correspondent, who has urged at all times—in season and out of season—backed by the Evening Telegram, that the Government should redeem its pre-election promises. Well Done Tim! You have brought Morris to time at last!

Governor Williams and Newfoundland.

Dear Sir—To make an item for your paper you are free to state that Sir Ralph Williams deliberately insulted every Newfoundland at dinner the first day after we left St. John's. Speaking of the Boers, he remarked that "they were the dirtiest people on the face of the globe, Newfoundlanders coming next!" He also spoke during the voyage very disparagingly of Judge Emerson and Mr. George Shea. I could tell you more about his conduct but will reserve it till later; at any rate we are not always "entertaining angels" in such people as the Williams's. Imagine him summoning the chief steward just as we were all seated at dinner one evening and "going for him" in anything but gentlemanly language, because the said steward refused to allow smoking in the saloon. Imagine how pleasant it would be for us if in such people as the Williams's, we had a more present acting similarly; of course Miss Dean wouldn't object as she reeked off her cigarette with the best of them.

I sent my usual letter which I hope you'll find interesting. Being in business I didn't like to include the above; but not a man on board resented it.

Years truly, PASSENGER. London, Feb. 12, 1913.

KENT SCORES THE GOVT.

Amid General Applause Government Speakers Fail to Arouse Any Enthusiasm.

When the Governor's speech had been read by the Speaker, the Rt. Hon. the Premier rose and referred in touching terms to the loss the Legislature and country had sustained in the demise of the venerable Sir Edward Dalton Shea, Judge Seymour and Mr. Duff, of Carbonear. He at some length sketched the public career of each, descanted upon their virtues as public men and citizens, and proposed resolutions of sympathy to be tendered to the bereaved ones who mourn the honoured dead.

Mr. Kent seconded the resolutions proposed by the Premier, and in doing so felt sure he expressed the full feelings of every member of the House when he told of the sincere regret felt at the departure of each of the three gentlemen named from the midst of their compeers since last the Assembly met in the legislative session. Sir Edward Shea occupied a more prominent position in public life than the other two gentlemen, being identified with the Legislature of the Colony and public affairs since the inauguration of Responsible Government down to the day of his death, a few months since. He had held the highest position in the public life of the Colony, being Administrator of the Government, Colonial Secretary for 12 or 14 years, held a seat in the Assembly for a number of years, and when he had passed to the other chamber (the Legislative Council) his distinguished services were still, at the disposal of the country which he loved so well. The other two gentlemen would be remembered more for their identification with the official and commercial interests of the Colony than with legislative matters. Mr. Seymour's legislative career was comparatively brief, but all, irrespective of party recognized in him a useful member and one interested in everything concerning the welfare of the country. Mr. Duff's life had been given rather to the development of the business or commercial affairs of the country, and his success in commerce will stand as a monument to him in time to come. All three represented three different phases of our life. Mr. Shea represented the Irish, English and Scotch. It was fitting then that the House should give this expression of sympathy and he begged to accord the Resolutions so feelingly introduced by the Premier.

The Resolutions were also supported by Mr. Parsons in a speech breathing the sorrow he felt for all that he eloquently dwelt on his long friend and colleague, Mr. Seymour. Mr. Bennett proposed that a Committee be appointed to draft the Address in Reply to the Speech from the Throne. He eloquently dwelt on the good qualities of ex-Governor Williams who, he said, had fulfilled the duties of his office to the satisfaction of the people of the Colony, and told with what regret Sir Ralph severed his connections with Newfoundland. He dwelt on his efforts to help every good work, how he visited the working classes and fishermen to see for himself how they lived; dwelt on the discomforts he had in travelling, but fortunately did not hear the remark of a citizen spectator, who said, "that one could not succumb quickly to the hardships to be encountered in a 'hooker' like the Fiona. Mr. Bennett also referred in complimentary terms to our new Governor, Mr. Davidson whose excellent reputation preceded him here and who stands high in the official life of Great Britain. He congratulated him on the message from His Majesty the King which had been read and also congratulated the Government on the Speech which he held in the House of Commons. In 4 years the country had made great strides in the development of its resources; great undertakings had been thoroughly carried out. He held up to admiration Sir Edward's Manifesto of four years ago with its tone of optimism, with the faith he had in the ability of the country to bring to fruition the promises and despite the opinions of skeptics men now realized he had made good. He thought the branch railways were the limit in progression (many in fact assert that veritably they are "the limit"), but the Government would go further and remit taxes which no other Government had the ability to approach. The taxes were taken off tea, sugar, pork and corned and other meats, but Mr. Bennett did not say why it was that this was done only at the expiration of four years and on the eve of a general election. The announcement did not "bring down the House," to use a well known phrase, the applause of the galleries was very "plano" and the great "coup" fell as flat as the Picnic Party will in 1913. He was sorry the Leader of the Opposition was not present to see what view he would take of this unprecedented feat of the remission of $335,000 in duties which, however, the speaker said should be made up in some way and of course all know who will do the "making up"—the unfortunate taxpayer as usual. He eulogized the branch railways, the old age pensions, which with the addition of this year's $66 will cover every old man of over 70 years in the country, and deplored the loss of the assertion of the Opposition that the $50 was a pauper dole. This was returning to the fishermen some of the taxes they had paid at a time of life when it would do them most good. "The expectation of life," as the insurance people would say, is not promising at 75 or even 70, and the poor old worn out fisherman cannot expect to enjoy the pittance long. The provision to allocate monies for marine casualties was also applauded, and when dogfish and glue factories will be working overtime, the jam and collar factories, "two blades grass," "sheep on the South Side Hill" and "Mackinson Cod," of historic fame will be "littered" with "35 cents cash" in comparison. Nothing short of a $1,000,000 plant will give us glue enough to make this "cod" stick and swat the dogfish into the Government had done the scheme. But to revert to Mr. Bennett. He referred to the good work of the dredge which he claimed was a dead bargain at $50,000 per cash, and made some great "cracks" about the Government's expenditure for Education which was more for four years than any previous Government had done, and the scheme for night schools would be of incalculable benefit to young men. He referred to the benefits to be derived from the placing of our Consular agents in foreign countries to represent Newfoundland, but this is nothing new as the Opposition press advocated this three or four years ago. He referred to the Imperial Defence Movement and the attitude of the Government towards it, was enthusiastic over the great surpluses of the Government but forgot to say that Grand Falls, Bell Island, Bishop's Falls and the increased price of fish were the principal contributing factors to these excess funds and not to any merit possessed by a Government noted amongst bad governments for extravagance. He also referred to public works, the paper and pulp industries worth $3,000,000, (made possible by the wise statesmanship of Sir Robert Bond) the royalties on Bell Island ore, and eulogized our hospital and its conveniences notwithstanding the fact that some of the poorer patients must sleep on the floor and the accommodation is so circumscribed that many must wait weeks to be admitted. The Lunatic and Poor Asylums, the latter "the saddest place in Newfoundland," was referred to as the price of fish and brought forward a hardy annual and called it a new discovery, viz. another market for our fish in the United States. Coal boring, agriculture and some other important matters were omitted in the litany of great things, and the speech ended with the usual platitudes flattering the Premier.

Mr. Squires followed in a brief address, practically speaking, going over the same ground as Mr. Bennett and paying a tribute to the memory of his deceased friend Mr. Seymour. That the mantle of the honoured leader of the Opposition, Rt. Hon. Sir Robert Bond, has fallen on capable shoulders was well demonstrated yesterday when the floor was taken by the leader pro tem, Mr. Kent, who literally tore the Government's vaunted performances into shreds and incidentally brought down the galleries. He began by congratulating the mover and seconder re the Address in Reply. The Speech from the Throne was always interesting and instructive, the Government had their own fixed ideas on the matters contained therein, but fortunately all did not see eye to eye with them, and it was to the interest of the country that such should be. They were beginning the last session of the Legislature and it afforded him great pleasure to welcome on behalf of the Opposition party His Excellency the Governor and Mrs. Davidson to our shores. He took him to be a man of more than ordinary ability and one who would know his duty towards the people of the Colony, and was prepared to perform that duty. He regretted the absence of Sir Robert Bond from the House and his leading place on the opposition benches. He would be detained in England but expressed the hope before he (Sir Robert) left for England that he would be present at the close of the session, and they would welcome his ripe judgment and experience in the discussion of public matters. He felt sure Sir Robert would "light" the bar, this session, but whether he was or not he would come back victorious next fall, and when the chamber met again would replace it, and taxation eventually is all the heavier.

As much before fully equipped and ready and handed over to the final control of the contractor. When a Government which squanders millions of dollars comes down to the reduction of taxation they must go somewhere else to get the money to do it, and taxation eventually is all the heavier. In the old age pension he (Mr. Kent) contended that this scheme of the Government could not be rightly called an old age pension. That is a reward for merit which men could claim knowing that it was theirs by right and justice. The proper designation for this scheme is an assistance to the aged poor, and any person reading the application forms that an applicant had to sign would be convinced that this was the object, not the granting of an old age pension. A man applying for it should show what were his means of support, who he depended upon for it, every applicant should be vouched for by four sponsors. It was given a fallacious title and the Government knew it. He heartily concurred in the Government's Relief Fund for the relatives of those lost at sea and regretted that they did not extend the operations of the fund to cover those who met with accidents in mines, in logging and lumbering enterprises where risks to life and limb were great and growing every year. Factories claimed their quota also and it is a pity the provisions of the Act would not be applied to those who had met with accidents abroad. He, however, heartily welcomed the provision for the benefit of those "who go down to the sea in ships." He next referred to the dog fish, factory and glue enterprise and he thought he might venture an objection, which he had made before in the House and that was to the method in vogue of legislating by contract, which created an improper monopoly. It was evidently intended in this case to subsidize some company of which he, Mr. Kent, knew nothing until he saw the details of the project. The proper way to encourage such an industry was not to contract with any particular company but to hold out encouragement to local capitalists to participate in such industry. The whole fishery was all invested in by local capital and to-day some factories are running and paying well. Mr. Kent also roundly scored the train and mail service the past 12 months and demanded that the Assembly take due cognizance of it. The whole business public were loudly complaining. He did not know what the details of the scheme for Consular agencies were and was glad to see the Government were moving in the matter for it certainly was time they did. He was glad to see the Government had reversed this condition and established continuation schools. Mr. Bennett had said that it was the proud boast of the Government that they had granted more money for education in four years than any preceding government; as a matter of gross amount that statement might be true, but relatively and taking into consideration the amount of Revenue at the disposal of the Government it was not true, and he would show how it was not true. Take the amount of increase in the Education Grant compared with increase of Revenue at the disposal of the Government from 1904 to 1908. The increase was from 7.01 to 3.06 per cent. or an increase of 2.05 during these four years. The increase from 1908 to 1912 was from 9.06 to 3.36 or 23 of an increase which is not 1 per cent. The relative increase for the 4 years previous has been greater than the past four years. The question of Imperial Defence mentioned in the speech was a great problem confronting the Empire. It was how to provide efficiently for the defence of the scattered possessions of the Empire. Newfoundland had been doing her best in the matter in the past and he (Mr. Kent) had expected a more definite pronouncement on this important matter than the House had received. Ever since 1909 the Premier had been attending Imperial Conferences but during his four years of office he had made no statement as to what part he took in these or what part was expected of Newfoundland, except that we had the grave statement of the Premier in the public press of England that we could make a whole fleet of Dreadnoughts. As regards the re-

Murderer of Seven

IS CHAINED TO FLOOR OF DEEPEST DUNGEON.

Prussia is excited by the capture of August Starnickel, whose crimes are numerous—General Belief he killed fourteen—Officials Shocked Because He Eluded Iron-Clad Rules For Removal for Nine Years.

Berlin, Feb. 7.—In the strongest cell of the jail at Frankfurt-on-Oder, with his leg chained to an iron ring in the stone floor, sits a murderer for whose arrest rewards have been offered at various times in the last few years aggregating 12,000 marks ($3,000). He was charged first with three murders. It was soon learned that he was responsible for at least two, and probably four, more. The evidence now accumulating appears likely to add two, and perhaps more, to his account. Not is it at all certain that this number represents all. The man came last October to Ortzig, a village near Frankfurt, and entered the employ of a prosperous farmer. A few nights ago some bedded persons saw a farm wagon being furiously driven through the town. It was discovered soon afterward that a stack of straw in a field was afire. After this was extinguished the bodies of a man and woman were found in the embers. These were soon identified as the bodies of the farmer and his wife.

Strangled Women.
The farmhouse was found apparently deserted, but two daughters, aged 12 and 15, were eventually found locked in a wardrobe of their bedroom. Further search disclosed the body of a maid-servant in a stall. All three victims had been strangled. The coroner called on the hired man, who was known only as Heinrich, and he was arrested two days later in a neighboring village. At the first hearing he strongly denied having anything to do with the murders. He was being led to the lockup for the night when some one in the crowd caught a glimpse of his peculiarly equipped head and cried out, "That's Starnickel!"

With the aid of the finger-print records the officers established that he was August Starnickel, who was convicted of murdering a miller and his family in Silesia in May, 1905, but escaped from the officer in charge. Following the trail back, the detectives believe that they have reason for saying that Starnickel, who has confessed to the triple murder at Ortzig, is likewise responsible for three murders in Silesia two years ago and also for a double murder in a town near Frankfort last year. He is likewise accused of killing a gentleman some years ago by pushing him into the canal.

Has Bad Record.

The murderer, who is now 47 years old, had a bad record as a young man. He is big and powerful, but a quiet man, with no indication in his features of his real character. He has almost a mania for keeping and caring for pigeons.

The horror caused by his deeds mingles with wonder at his ability to elude capture for so long, despite the marked and easily described physical characteristics and in the face of the large rewards and the official restrictions upon personal liberty and movements.

In Prussia, even when moving from one house into an adjoining one, three forms must be made out for the police, giving the age, birthplace, religion, calling, and other details of not only the head of the family, but also of every member and of servants. Moreover, Prussian officials are afflicted with almost a mania for requiring everybody to "legitimate himself," as they term it, on the slightest occasion.

That Starnickel should have spent nine years in Prussia without any papers is a fact that has aroused much comment. The most plausible explanation appears to be the great and growing scarcity of farm labor, which makes any laborer welcome on any farm and no questions asked.

The Backbone

BY H. L. RANN.

The backbone is a long, rigid piece of furniture suspended immediately below the collar button. It is liberally ornamented with bristles and back talk, and never gives up while there is a n y breath left in the owner.

The rarest variety is the political backbone, which goes into hiding during a campaign and has to be prodded with impertinent questions from the back seat. Nearly all the politicians leave their back bones in Washington just prior to election, so that they will not have to tell where they stand on anything but the little red schoolhouse on the hill.

The female backbone is a determined species which is used to shoo persistent agents off the front porch. It is also used to trim chesty husbands down to their proper size. A little, 110-pound woman who is equipped with a trip-hammer backbone can cause a large, beefy husband to lock himself in the pantry and apologize profusely through the keyhole.

The male backbone is composed of various ingredients, ranging from Portland cement to tow string. Nearly all of the backbones found in the band wagon and "join the crowd" procession consist of a genial mixture of gelatine and indecision. If there were more backbones which refused to lean on the ward healer on election day, there would be fewer frock-coated jokes in the halls of Congress.

The American backbone is a resolute, two-fisted variety which has caused everybody who attempted to step on its tail to retire to the hospital for repairs. At the sight of the Stars and Stripes this backbone rises up in patriotic music, impromptu orations and a tingling sensation up and down the spine. It is the grandest backbone ever invented and promises to waver for quite a few seasons.

Some backbones have the habit of crawling in under ridicule and spilling good resolutions along the pathway of life, while others set their jaws and hang on the face of sneers and discouragement. This is the kind which enables a man to lock himself in the face without flinching.

Bovril Limited.

From the Annual Report of this Company the following extracts are taken:—
The Chairman said:—Never in the history of our Company has Bovril sold so well as during the year 1912, our sales being far ahead of all previous records, not only have we beaten all sales records for the year, but the rate of increase during the two years 1911 and 1912, has been greater than during any two previous years. I am pleased to say this increase still continues, the sales for January, 1913, being well ahead of all previous records for this month.
The sales for 1912 were over 25 per cent. greater than those of 1910—ad.11

When Morris would no salary take, And promised the people all the cake, They voted when he stood;
But when he to the Hague did go, And drew seven thousand cold in doubt,< The people held their breath, for lo! Morris was making good!

The Mercy Convent.

For some time past the nuns of the Mercy Convent, Military Road, have been contemplating some improvements in the building rendered necessary by the increase of the number of sisters and also the dilapidated state of the annex in rear of the building. These improvements will greatly extend the accommodation in the addition of five or six new cells, also the remodeling of the kitchen and refectory departments, which are at present hardly inhabitable. The contemplated work will be somewhat expensive, and the Nuns have asked the sanction of the Archbishop, to hold a Sale of Work.

Some time next fall to raise funds towards defraying the expense. His Grace has kindly consented. More particulars will be given later on.—com.

Athens-Corn Silk can reasonably claim to be the quickest and most easily applied, the most cleanly in use, the most comfortable to wear, as well as the most effective cure for various and kindred troubles. You have simply to apply a piece of Corn Silk of appropriate size, wear it for two days, when upon soaking the foot it will generally be possible to remove the corn or callous spot at once. Corn Silk takes up no room in the boot, is quite clean, and affords pain and soreness almost at once. Price 10 cents a stick.
Parafaric Throat Lozenges do excellent service in cases of hoarseness, sore throat and bronchial irritation. They are quite pleasant to take and are prompt in action. Price 25c. a bottle.

House Guttled.

At 8.45 a.m. an alarm was sent in from box 12, bringing the Central and East End Companies to Signal Hill where a blaze was in progress in the house occupied by Mrs. Josephine Savage. The fire originated in the top flat, sparks from the chimney lighting the woodwork of a partition and all that section of the house was badly gutted before the firemen had the fire under control. A few hundred dollars worth of damage was done. Had the cook's shop which is situate at the rear of the house and which was filled with dry stock, ignited, the result might be disastrous as there was a high wind blowing.

Disastrous Fire.

House Guttled This Morning and Boy Dangerously Burned.

At 8.05 this morning Mrs. E. Power left her house at Lewis Place, just east of the Western Fire Station, to go to the fountain and returning was horrified to find the building in flames. The apartments of Mrs. Power which are on the second floor of the house are reached by a short hallway and a narrow stairs, and Mrs. Power, knowing her four children—3 girls and a boy were in their beds bravely rushed up through smoke and flame and reaching the girls room dragged them unharmed over the stairs into the street to the head of which she ran clapping her hands and screaming, "fire!" She ran to the Western Station, called fire repeatedly and in a few seconds Capt. Keen with Sergt. Reardon and Firemen Kavanagh, Galway, Hagerty and Bennett were on the scene with a hose reel and had a stream of water on the burning building. No report of the boy being in the building in the excitement was made until when Capt. Keen mounted a ladder run up to the front window he heard means coming from the door of the kitchen which is in the front of the house. Repeatedly the Captain attempted to enter through the window but was driven back by smoke and fire until the water had taken proper effect when he made a dash inside and found Mrs. Power's son by a former husband, John Murphy, aged 16, lying on the floor unconscious. The boy was quickly passed down the ladder and taken to the Western Station where Dr. Fritchard revived him, dressed the terrible burns received and after alleviating his pain despatched him to the hospital in the ambulance. When Capt. Keen was taking the boy out the skin came off his limbs in large portions, his night shirt in which he was dressed had been burned off him and he was literally baked about the face and hands. He is not badly burned about the body and his injuries are not necessarily of a fatal nature, though it is feared the shock to the nerves will kill him.

Mrs. Power lit a fire in the kitchen just before she left her home. There was a flange out in the chimney facing her boy's room and it is thought the fire got into this and ignited the paper on the wall and fired the place. The house and its contents were practically destroyed and the heart broken mother and family are objects of pity and charity. The boy was evidently aroused by the fire but overcome by smoke and sank to the floor quickly. Had he turned sharp after leaving his room he would have gone over the stairs to safety but dazed as he was he wandered into the kitchen which was a mass of flames. But for the bravery of Mrs. Power, the mother, the other 3 girls, whose ages range from 9 to 14, would have steamed.

Hockeyists Marooned.

Last evening at Bell Island, in the presence of 500 spectators, the city hockeyists played a team from the island and defeated them by 10 goals to 3. The Islanders put up a clever exhibition, Burnham in goal doing exceptional, but they could not withstand the rushes of the city boys. After the match both teams with Referee Higgins were dined at the Nova Scotia Co's. staff house. The city team and the enthusiasts who went over to the island intended to cross over the ice bridge to Portugal Cove this morning and return to town, but could not as the ice was broken up. Messrs. Graves, Ring and Dewling, who came over, had an experience they do not want repeated. They had to copy on the broken pans for about 200 yards. They say that if the ice does not drift out of the Bay the hockeyists will be marooned for some time.

LONDON, To-day.—Mrs. Emeline Pankhurst, leader of the suffragettes, has broken down completely. She has cancelled all engagements and has gone to the country for a rest. This announcement was made at a suffragette meeting at Hampstead to-night, where she was to speak. General Mrs. Flora Drummond took her place. Mrs. Drummond no sooner began talking than a group of students let loose quantities of snuff, starting everybody sneezing. A lively scuffle took place between attendants and disturbers, chairs were broken, blows exchanged and black eyes and bruises plentiful. Mrs. Drummond advised all Municipal electors to vote against London County Council Progressive candidates as a protest against the conduct of Right Hon. John Burns, President of the Local Government Board, who had been denouncing suffragettes as tyrannical and their militant efforts as blackguardism. John Burns spoke to-night at a meeting in Islington. While guards were clearing two disturbing male supporters of the suffragettes, Mr. Burns said, "Such disturbers were the result of the stuff newspapers had published," and later in his speech he said, "The press of the country is imitating the American newspapers which has lied against public men, so slandered them, that few decent men are willing to get into public life in America. If the present campaign of calumny continues this country will end in civil neglect and corruption, for it will repel from public life the sensitive, kindly and respectable men who formerly served their fellow citizens."

The Governor's Speech

Mr. President and Honourable Gentlemen of the Legislative Council: His Speaker and Gentlemen of the Honourable House of Assembly:

Understanding it to be usual for the Legislature to meet in the early part of the year, I made a special effort to arrive in time to greet you. This is an occasion of much interest to me, especially because it is my first such experience in the Dependency of the Crown enjoying Responsible Government. My earnest desire is to cooperate with the Legislature and the people in the maintenance of those principles, and in insuring, as far as lies in my power, the material welfare of this most ancient Colony and those who dwell within it. Though a comparatively brief period has elapsed since my appointment to the Governorship, I do not come to you entirely unacquainted with the history, the resources and the great possibilities of your country, and I rejoice with you in its unexampled prosperity and in the glowing prospects which the future holds out.

It is a desire to express you as the representatives of the people of Newfoundland, my deep gratitude for the whole-hearted kindness with which you have been welcomed among you. For my own part I shall devote my energies to the welfare and advancement of our land. His Majesty the King received me in private audience on my appointment as your Governor and displayed the wisest knowledge of Newfoundland and the present state of its affairs. His Majesty recalled his previous visits here with keen pleasure and bade me say to you that this, his most ancient Colony and its loyal people would always be held in affectionate remembrance by their King.

It is a special gratification to me that my arrival amongst you coincides with the time when the financial position of the Colony is so assured that my Ministers find themselves in the position that, having launched large public undertakings and ensured their completion and maintenance, they are enabled, after providing for every public service, to remove the taxes on certain articles which enter into daily consumption by the fishing and laboring classes, namely, tea, sugar and salted pork and beef. The amount collected in duties on the imports of these articles the past fiscal year was three hundred and eighty-five thousand dollars, and this remission of duty will release the largest reduction of taxation that has ever been undertaken at any one time in the history of the Colony. That this reduction is both possible and justifiable is evident from the fact that four years ago the total revenue was two million eight hundred and twenty-nine thousand dollars, and that for the last year it was three million seven hundred and thirty-six thousand dollars, representing an increase in four years of over nine hundred thousand dollars or the rate of more than two hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars per annum, and that the trade of the Colony has shown a similar gain in the same period, having advanced from twenty-three million one hundred and sixty-five thousand, four hundred and thirty-nine dollars in the year Nineteen hundred and eight, to twenty million six hundred and eighty thousand, two hundred and ninety-nine dollars in the year Nineteen hundred and twelve.

During the past year the Railway Contractor has made substantial progress with construction work. The rails have been laid on the whole of the Heart's Content Branch, and within a few miles of Trepansey, or the Branch which traverses Ferryland District. Operations on these two branches were suspended in the winter of the spring, and it is hoped to have both branches open for operation during the summer. The work of constructing the remaining miles of lines, those to Bay-de-Verde, Fortuna Bay and Bonne Bay, will also be commenced this year and carried to rapid completion as rapidly as possible. It is now thirty years since the railway policy was inaugurated by Newfoundland, and the progress the Island has made within that period in all departments of trade and industry, social and educational advance, is due more largely to the railway than perhaps to any other agency. This record of the advantages that have followed in the wake of railway extension abundantly justifies, not alone the construction of the main line, but also the branches which warrant the construction of other branches in the future, as the financial circumstances of the Colony admit.

The Old Age Pension Act, now in operation two years, has proved highly successful in ameliorating the condition of many of our old worn fishermen. Already its benefits have been extended to over a hundred persons, and you will be invited to provide for an additional Four hundred this year.

You will be called upon to consider a measure creating a Fund for the relief of the dependents of the bread winners who lose their lives while battling with the seas in our fishing and mercantile vessels. Heretofore, unless in exceptional instances, appeals have been made to private generosity to deal with such cases but my Ministers feel that it would be in the interests of the country that the State should at least take some part in making provision for those who suffer by the disasters that all too frequently rob the homes around our seaboard of their mainstay.

During the Session an agreement will be submitted to you for ratification, in which certain capitalists undertake the erection of factories on the south-west coast of the Island for the conversion of the waste products of the fisheries into fertilizer and glue, and for the utilization therein of the fish-bone which of late years have become so great a pest to our fishermen. The successful development of this industry will afford opportunities for the gradual extension to other parts of the seaboard, and the permanent locating of an enterprise here which will measurably enhance the earnings of our people.

The advantages of the daily train service have now become fully apparent, and thoroughly justify this step in advance. The Contractor has recently cently launched a second steamer of the finest class to ply in conjunction with the s.s. Bruce and further improve the service. My Ministers feel that the time has come when a similar progressive step should be taken in connection with the Labrador service, the great importance of which it would be impossible to exaggerate. The Contractor has also undertaken the construction of a new modern steamer for this route which will be ready to begin the service the coming summer, and my Ministers believe that the service should now be weekly instead of a fortnightly one, will ask you for the necessary authorization for a contract to this effect. It is proposed to reorganize the subsidiary service for the northern part of the Labrador coast which has been carried out the past four years, so that it may more conveniently combine with the proposed new service. The Government has also in contemplation the improvement of the existing coastal steam service in Notre Dame Bay, on the northern East coast, and in Bay St. George.

In view of the success of the Dock at Harbor Grace, brought into existence as the result of a guarantee of interest by the Legislature two years ago, which guarantee it now seems manifest the Government will not be called upon to make good, my Ministers are of the opinion that like encouragement should be given for the establishment of ship-yards and similar docks in other parts of the country, which would result in a great increasing ship-building operations and the construction of vessels for the Bank sealishery, and the conveyance of products to foreign markets. You will therefore be asked to enact a measure having this object in view.

During the past four years Telegraph extension, to the amount of some five hundred miles of wire, has been carried out in various parts of the country, and cables laid to important settlements on outlying islands concerning them with the main system. It is proposed during the present year, to continue this work, and to complete in most essentials the Telegraph system of the Island. The Legislature of the Province of Quebec, at its last session, having granted a Charter to British and Canadian capitalists for the construction of a railway from the Labrador Labrador to its eastern boundary, and the parties having applied to my Government for a similar concession through Newfoundland, you will be invited to approve the necessary legislation for this purpose.

In view of the possibilities of further developing the Labrador fisheries, my Ministers have taken up with His Majesty's Government the matter of a survey of the Labrador coast, and it is hoped that the Admiralty will be able to devise a means whereby this important work may be carried out.

TOOTON PHOTOGRAPHIC STUDIOS, Houses of Superior Quality.

A public utility that promises to be of great service to our fishing population, has been provided in the Dredge, purchased by the Government a year ago, and doing service on various parts of the coast for several months past.

Following on the generous provision made by the Legislature in recent years on behalf of Education, my Ministers consider the time opportune for the establishment under the present Boards of special or continuation schools, to be conducted at night in suitable seasons, for fishermen, farmers, mechanics and laborers, wherein our young men may perfect themselves in their chosen avocations by acquiring instruction in subjects calculated to assist them in more successfully carrying on these pursuits. Enquiries will be instituted without delay with a view to utilizing the agencies best calculated to carry this policy into effect.

Negotiations are in progress whereby the British Consular service in foreign countries will be rendered available to Newfoundland to assist in developing its trade abroad. The result will, I hope, soon reflect itself in still more increased sales abroad of the Colony's stable products.

Mr. Speaker and Gentlemen of the Honourable House of Assembly:

I am gratified to be able to inform you that the Revenue for the past year substantially exceeded the Estimates and that the expenditures on account of the public service having been undertaken with due regard to economy, a surplus Revenue of Two hundred and eleven thousand dollars was realized over expenditure, although very generous increases were made in several appropriations. It is also gratifying to know that a surplus of Revenue over expenditure for the current fiscal year, of which eight months has now elapsed, may be expected, as the Customs Revenue for this period shows an increase of One hundred and eighty-seven thousand five hundred and twenty-eight dollars over the same period for the last fiscal year. The accounts for the past year, and the Estimates for that which is to ensue, will be laid before you in due course, and I feel satisfied that you will adequately provide for the needs of the public service.

Mr. President and Honourable Gentlemen of the Legislative Council: Mr. Speaker and Gentlemen of the Honourable House of Assembly:

The splendid contributions of the great Overseas Dominions of the Empire towards perfecting imperial defence have thrilled the loyal hearts of British subjects in every clime, and evoked the admiration of the world. My Ministers, feeling confident that the patriotic sentiment of this country would impel it to play its part in the splendid drama of Imperial consolidation, have opened negotiations with His Majesty's Government, with the end in view of ascertaining how such participation might be best effected, and I hope that before this Session closes, it may be possible to lay before you the views of His Majesty's Ministers in this respect, and to invite from you the enactment of such measures as will give effect to the decision reached.

In the award of the Hague Arbitration Tribunal dispute between Great Britain and the United States, it was suggested for the consideration of the parties thereto that a certain delimitation as to specified bays on our coast should be accepted, but my Ministers finding themselves unable to agree with this proposal, a Conference was held at Washington in April last between representatives of the United States, the Dominion of Canada, and Newfoundland, at which an arrangement was effected whereby the delimitation of all of the bays on the coast of Newfoundland continues as heretofore.

It is pleasure to me, as I am sure it will be to you and the country, that the material circumstances of the people of Newfoundland show such marked improvement in recent years. The fisheries have, on the whole, maintained their normal yield, and where in some localities there has been any shortage in the catch, it has been more than made good by the increased price. The other industries have had equally encouraging results, so that within the past four years Newfoundland has enjoyed a degree of prosperity never before equalled. During this period its trade has increased by twenty-three per cent and as there has been a substantial surplus of income over expenditure each year, my Government has been able to invite and obtain from you largely augmented appropriations for Public Works, Education, Increased Communication by land and sea, and the creation of the new and highly important service of Old Age Pensions, as well as the inauguration of other humanitarian undertakings, unapproached in the annals of the Colony. I sincerely trust that wide-spread prosperity may long abide with this ancient Colony, and be furthered by judicious legislation and an enlightened conduct of its affairs. It is my earnest hope also that in this good fortune every class and section of the people may participate.

As the life of this General Assembly expires on the thirty-first of May next, it has been felt desirable that the time of meeting should be postponed to as late a date as consistent with the adequate consideration of the matters to come before.

I invite your earnest consideration of the measures to which I have referred and of such others as may be submitted to you, and I pray that Divine Providence may guide you in your deliberations.

J. B. LIVESQUE, St. Joseph, P. O. 18th Aug., 1900.

S.S. Labrador Stranded.

Yesterday afternoon, the topic of talk in the city was the loss of the sealing steamer Labrador, which was wrecked in St. Mary's Bay, messages having been received to that effect. Between 1 and 2 p.m., the owners, Messrs. James Baird, Ltd., had a wire from Branch that the ship had gone ashore there during the height of a blinding snow storm, and that the crew were alright. On receipt of this the owners effected arrangements to have a tug sent to bring home the crew of seventy St. John's men aboard, as she was going to get the balance of her crew at Codroy. At 9.30 last night, the D. P. Ingraham left for the scene of the wreck. She will stand by the Labrador and give what assistance she can. At ten o'clock, Capt. Martin wired asking as to how he would send the men home and was forwarded a reply that the tug had left for Branch.

The Labrador left this port at 5 o'clock on Saturday evening for Channel, and was to call at Trepassay to get twenty men en route. She passed Cape Race on Sunday, when the weather was thick and cloudy with a heavy gale from the S. E. The following day fog set in and towards evening increased in density. The Viking was harbored at St. Lawrence on Monday night during the storm, which interrupted the line on that section of the coast and accounts for the news of the wreck being late in reaching here. The Labrador in the meantime was beached. The ill-fated ship was one of the strongest of the wooden ships, 436 tons gross and 256 net. She first came to the coast in 1891, being built to the order of the Hudson Bay Company twenty-five years previously in Sunderland. Ever since 1891 she has prosecuted the seal-fishery and met with fair success. She was responsible for saving the crew of the Windsor Lake off Cape Freels, on March 27th, 1896. Up to three years ago, when she was repurchased for $10,000 by Jas. Baird, Ltd., the Labrador was owned by a company.

LATER.

No further news was received today from Branch concerning the misfortune to the s.s. Labrador. The vessel is not a total wreck and there is a possibility of getting her off the beach into deep water. Mr. H. Baird has wired Capt. Martin for further particulars and expects a reply this afternoon. A posse of police left this morning by train to proceed to the scene of the wreck.

OBITUARY.

ELLSWORTH WATSON SMITH. Ellsworth Watson Smith, 44 years old, died at his home, No. 96 Franklin Avenue, yesterday afternoon following a long illness. He was the son of Irene A. and the late Watson Noble Smith, of Bristol, and a native of Middlebury, Mass. He had been a member of Peck's Theatre Orchestra in this city for the last seven years, previous to which time he lived in Bridgeport. He belonged to the Musicians' Union and to Springfield Lodge, No. 83, Knights of Pythias. Besides his mother, he leaves his wife, Jennie Moore Smith; one brother, Lotus Smith, of Boston, and a sister, Mrs. William Graham of Bristol. The funeral will be held at the home of his mother, Mrs. Irene A. Smith, No. 75 Race Street, Bristol, tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. E. G. Richardson, Pastor of the First Methodist Church, will officiate. The burial will be in Bristol.

[The above is clipped from the Hartford Times of Feb. 21st. The deceased is a son-in-law of Mrs. M. Moore, Gower Street, this city, and brother-in-law to Mr. A. Moore, of this office.]

quick at figures. Jim Jimpson's and writes a lovely hand; he works to beat the chiggers — and yet he's often canned. He gets a situation and pretty soon he's fired. He asks an explanation. "Y o u make the office tired. You're too blamed sour and solemn; you grouch around and toil as though your spinal column were one extensive boil. You always are a-sweating, as you perform your curves; you start the others fretting, for you get on their nerves. We want a band of cheerful, contented workers here, but you, so grim and tearful, just spoil the atmosphere. We like to hear clerks crooning their helpful hymns aloud, and you, with all your moaning, disorganize the crowd." He looks as though he rested, when sleeping, in a hearse, so Jimpson is requested, quite often to disperse. And I know eight or twenty just like him in this town; they get the soup-a-plenty, and have to gulp it down; they pocket the tattered hammer and look for work in vain, because their graceless manner gives other folks a pain. Efficiency's a jewel, an' dough to win, I guess, but doesn't life is cruel!) without a good address.

World's Biggest Diamond Mine

Twenty-five miles east of Pretoria is what is known as the Premier Diamond Mine—the biggest in the world, where 15,000 Kaffirs may be seen any day digging, drilling, and loading trucks of "blue" carap, from which are extracted diamonds to the value of something like £2,000,000 per annum.

The total value of diamonds exported from South Africa in a year is about £3,500,000 sterling, and of this quantity about a quarter are discovered in the Premier Mine, the other two chief mines being the De Beers and Jagersfontein.

The Premier Mine was really discovered by Sir Thomas Cullinan, the present chairman, after whom the great Cullinan diamond of 3,025 carats; discovered in the Premier Mine, was named. It may be remembered that this diamond was presented to King George by the Transvaal Government, and was cut into eleven flawless stones, the largest of which is the Imperial Crown.

The Premier Mine possesses an area of 3,500 claims, equal to eighty acres, and at the present time 12,000,000 loads of treatable "blue," as the diamond-yielding earth is known, are dealt with every year. And such are the resources of the mine that it is calculated that during the next forty years the present annual output will be easily maintained.

At present the mine is about 350ft. deep, and it is considered practical, according to the 'African World Annual', to work to a depth of 1,500ft. The quality of the stones discovered is increasing in value with the depth, and, in order to encourage honesty among the Kaffirs, a payment of 3s. a carat on all stones found and delivered to the compound managers is paid.

In addition to the 15,000 Kaffirs, there are 1,000 whites working in the mine in various capacities. It is wonderfully equipped with electric paint and machinery, and is a fascinating sight after sunset, with "a thousand electric lights twinkling, eight great searchlights concentrating on the crater, piercing the huge cloud of blue smoke rising from the mine after blasting, and many thousands of natives rusing down the side of the mine, shouting and singing merrily, to resume work for the night shift."

James Russell Lowell's remark that Niagara Falls had nothing else to do, may remind us of the delightful Irishman who—called upon to be impressed by his first view of "all that water coming down such a height"—replied: "Why wouldn't it?" But the best of recent Niagara stories is that told of the housewife who saw the falls for the first time. "Oh!" she cried, "that reminds me—I left the kitchen tap running."

FISHERMEN!

FAIRBANKS MORSE ENGINES are made in different types, so a fisherman does not have to take an engine built expressly for pleasure or speed boats.

Type "M" FAIRBANKS is the fisherman's engine.
It has a minimum amount of parts to get out of order.
Is fitted with Make & Break Ignition, and is not affected by water. In the Maritime Provinces there are more FAIRBANKS MORSE ENGINES used than all other makes together.

The Almanac of 1913 and Others.

WHITTAKER'S ALMANAC needs no introduction to the homes, business and legal firms, Government institutions and clubs of Newfoundland.
Its fame is far wider and its information more general than that of any other "Annual" in the English-speaking world. The publishers have for 1913, at the suggestion and with the assistance of a large number of people outside of Great Britain, prepared The New International Whittaker, which provides information concerning every country on a uniform method, so that one may know just where to look for the particular subject or point desired. The International is a book of 500 pages, chock full of accurate information, largely contributed by responsible British, Colonial and Foreign Government officials. An index of forty pages gives it additional value as a book of reference. This Almanac appeals to the intelligence of every man and woman in Nfld. Strong flat back, imitation Cat-skin cover, 60c. by mail, 65c. When ordering enclose $1.00 and receive the Whittaker Almanac, Newfoundland Year Book for 1913 and an attractive Wall Calendar, worth from 10c. to 40c. All orders filled in rotation as received.
