CHAPTER XXI.
AN ART PATRON.

"No," said her ladyship, pensively. "I forget what became of him. I think he got into debt, and went back to Spain. There is one of his pictures in the salon. I hope this young man is presentable. These young geniuses are often so—so gauche, and wear such old clothes."

Doris could not help laughing at her ladyship's doubts and fears.

"But genius covers a multitude of sins, doesn't it?" she suggested, and Lady Despard brightened up.

"So it does; and, after all, if he should be a little rough why, we can hint out that all clever people are eccentric. Didn't Doctor Johnson eat beet sauce with his fish, and use his life when he ought to have used his fork?"

"I think he did," said Doris.

"Very well, then," said Lady Despard, as if that settled it. "Just write a line and tell Mr. Churchill to bring him to dinner to-night. I think—doubtfully—that we'd better not have anybody."

"In case this genius should eat with his knife," said Doris, with a laugh; and presently she rose, and, going to aavenport, wrote the required note.

Lady Despard, with her head on one side, watched her with pensive admiration.

"How lovely you look in that pose, dear," she said. "You certainly have the loveliest profile! And how quickly and—easily you write! It takes me no end of time to get my sentences together, and the spelling—I suppose you can spell like a dictionary?"

"Not quite so well," said Doris, with a smile; "but, fortunately, there aren't many words of ten syllables required for this note," and she handed it for Lady Despard's inspection, but her ladyship extended both hands with a gesture of refusal.

"No, dear; I don't want to see it, and won't! I can trust to your taste and discretion, and shouldn't think of being so rude and presuming as to read it. I'm sure it's everything that's nice."

Doris laughed again.

"You are not very hard to please, Lady Despard," she said, with a little flush.

"I should be if I were not pleased with you, you little snake-charmer," responded her ladyship, leaning over her and gently pulling the tiny, shell-like ear. "And now let's go for a drive. I want you to get some roses in those pale cheeks of yours. I think you are looking better already, do you know?"

"I should be very ungrateful if I were not," said Doris. "But hadn't I better tell the butler that these two gentlemen are coming to dinner?"

"I declare you think of everything!" exclaimed her ladyship. "You must have been wonderfully trained, Doris!"

A faint flush rose to the pale cheeks, and then left it all the paler for the swiftly passing colour.

"Poor people learn to be thoughtful. The dear friend to whom I owe everything, Lady Despard, spent all his life in tender devotion to me."

"There, I've made you nearly cry!" exclaimed her ladyship, putting her arm round her. "What an awkward idiot I am! But I'll be more careful, dear; I will, indeed. And now go and put on that pretty bonnet of yours, and we'll go and work havoc with the hearts of those foolish young men who hang on the rails in the park."

Doris gave the butler the necessary information. Although she had only been three days in the house, Lady Despard had almost handed over the management of it to her, and the servants had commenced to look to her for their orders. It was a strange change from her old life of dependence and excitement, but it was a change which Doris found very grateful; the quiet of the magnificently appointed house gave her a sense of repose which she needed greatly, and but for the memory of her loss of Jeffrey, but for the dull, aching pain which smote her heart whenever she thought of the man who had stolen her heart in Barton meadows, and tossed it almost contemptuously back to her, she could have been happy.

All day long she strove to put the memory of Cecil Neville away from her, but it haunted her sleeping and waking, and a great deal assailed her that all her life she should strive for forgetfulness and find it not.

As they drove in the park she leaned back in the carriage, and—lost to all sense of the crowded drive and the long lines of pedestrians, nearly all of whom plucked off their hats to the well-known Lady Despard—let her mind wander back to Barton meadows. She did not observe that she attracted as much attention as pretty Lady Despard herself, and woke with a start when her ladyship, with an arch little laugh, said:

"I never got so much notice before. I wonder why it is? Can you guess, Doris?"

"? No," said Doris, innocently.

"Really no? Well, for a really pretty girl I think you are the most modest I have ever met, my dear."

Doris laughed and drew farther back.

"There!" exclaimed her ladyship. "I've put my foot in it again. Never mind, dear, we'll go home now; I'm tired of bowing; besides, it's scarcely fair to me to do all, when half ought to be your share."

Long before the evening Lady Despard had forgotten about the invited guests; but Doris dressed early and arranged some flowers in the small dining-room in which the meal was to be served; and thinking that it would be required, arranged as well as she could the music which lay in a confused heap in the rare Chippendale canterbury. Presently Lady Despard came down, fresh from the hands of her maid, in a costume of Worth's, with which she had been entirely satisfied until she saw Doris's simple frock of black lace with a yellow rose nestling in its bosom for her only ornament.

"How nice you look, dear!" she exclaimed, taking her by the shoulders and holding her at arm's-length. "Now I wonder why it is that you always seem just perfectly dressed? That neat little frock of yours is simply exquisite, while mine looks all furberious and fuss. Where did you learn to dress like that?"

Doris could have answered, "At the best of all schools, the theatre;" but instead, she smilingly put the question by and praised the other's handsome costume.

They were still talking when a footman announced Mr. Spenser Churchill and Mr. Percy Levant.

Lady Despard gave a little start.

"Bless me!" she exclaimed. "I had forgotten them!" and she glided forward to receive them.

Doris turned aside for a moment to pick up a flower which had fallen from a vase, then looking round, found Mr. Spenser Churchill waiting with extended hand.

"My dear Miss Marlowe," he purred, pressing her hand and smiling down upon her with a perfect wealth of benevolence, "I'm so glad to see you again. Let me introduce my friend, Mr. Percy Levant, may I?"

He stepped on one side, and Doris, looking up, saw a tall, graceful young man, with a face almost perfectly handsome; and as she noticed the well-cut and carefully severe style of his evening-dress, she felt surprised and amused. This aristocratic gentleman, with the face of a Greek god, must have startled Lady Despard, with her doubts and fears.

"Miss Doris Marlowe, Percy," said Mr. Spenser Churchill, glancing at him sideways and with keen watchfulness.

Percy Levant did not start, but the quick flash of his eyes and a certain quiver of the delicately formed lips sufficiently indicated the surprise which fell to his share.

He had imagined a girl, plain almost to ugliness; not only plain, but shy and diffident, and—as he would have put it—bad form; a dark, colourless, governess kind of creature; and this vision of perfect grace and youthful loveliness startled him almost to bewilderment. He bowed low to hide the faint signs of his discomfiture, and Doris, just inclining her head, at once moved away.

Dinner was announced, and Lady Despard, talking in her languidly glowing style, gave her arm to Spenser Churchill, leaving Percy to escort Doris.

The dinner was served on the oval table, and the little party—which would have seemed cold and formal in the larger apartment, with its huge table and splendid furniture—was made to appear pleasant and homelike. Spenser Churchill and Lady Despard did all the talking for some time, and Percy Levant only joined in occasionally; but his silence was perfectly self-possessed, and without a touch of the gaucherie or awkward-ness and want of breeding Lady Despard had so much dreaded.

Every now and then he let his splendid eyes wander to the lovely face beside him, and each time the amazement overwhelmed him although he sat apparently so calm. This exquisite creature had been sold to him by Spenser Churchill! This beautiful girl to be his wife! He caught himself once or twice looking round the room with a close scrutiny, as if to convince himself that he was awake and not dreaming. But he could not sit there silent all through the dinner, and at last he forced himself to address her.

It was only some trivial remark about the weather, but it seemed to him that his voice trembled with the emotion with which his heart literally throbbled.

Doris responded in her soft, quiet voice, and the sound of it somehow lulled the storm within him and gave him confidence. He found himself talking to her more freely, and each moment the spell her unexpected beauty and grace cast upon him grew stronger. To listen to a commonplace from Doris was delightful enough, but she could talk something better than commonplace; and Percy Levant, the adventurer, the man who "knew the world," was again started to find that Mr. Spenser Churchill's ward was, young as she looked, well read in subjects of which most women were utterly and sublimely ignorant. And yet she talked so modestly, so diffidently that her knowledge was an added charm.

He started when Lady Despard, rating, said:

"The butler knows the claret you like, Mr. Churchill; I shall leave you to his tender mercies. Mr. Levant, we will have some tea for you when you come into the drawing-room, so don't expect any to be sent in."

He opened the door for them, and then sank into his chair, let his head fall upon his bosom, and his lips tightly compressed.

Spenser Churchill filled his glass and remained silent until the butler had left the room; then he said, with a smile:

WE are speaking now of Keds—the perfected rubber-soled canvas shoes that are so overwhelmingly popular with everybody.

More appropriate summer shoes you never saw. Men work in them—women dress-up in them—children play in them.

Long-wearing, springy, buoyant rubber soles and specially woven canvas tops—real foot freedom that you will appreciate most when the sun is high overhead and everything warm becomes unbearable. Keds are especially fine for the seashore and outdoor sports.

Miners Strike Over

Falkenhyn Wants to Hold Fatherland --- Italians Will Honor the Prince of Wales.

LODGE'S OPINION.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12. Describing the League of Nations as a "deformed experiment upon a noble purpose," Senator Lodge declared in a Senate speech to-day that there were features of the League covenant which "as an American," he never could accept.

MAKING A RECORD.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12. The traditional decorum of the Senate procedure was upset to-day by an unusual demonstration of approval from the galleries following an address by Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts, Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, assailing the provisions of the League of Nations Covenant.

WILL NOT SURRENDER.

BERLIN, Aug. 12. While assuming responsibility for the decision and commands of former Emperor William from September 1914 to August 1918, Gen. Von Falkenhayn, former German chief of staff, declares he had no intention whatever of voluntarily placing himself at the disposal of the Allies. The General's statement says that if he surrendered himself to the Allies he would recognize a procedure which he considers "mocks all sense of justice."

A WISE DECISION.

LONDON, Aug. 12. The Yorkshire miners' council recommended to-day that work be resumed by the more than 200,000 men who have been striking in that district for several weeks, refusing to accept the settlement reached by the government and miners' representatives.

AND WHY WORRY!

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 13. Hall Pasha, former Minister of Marine and uncle of Enver Pasha, former Minister of War, has escaped to Asia Minor with Kritikal Talast, another leader of the Committee of Union and Progress.

MAKING PROGRESS.

LONDON, Aug. 12. General Denekine's advance is continuing along the greater part of the southern Russian front against considerable resistance, the War Office announced to-night. Kamashin, which was taken on July 28th, yield eleven thousand prisoners, sixty guns and one hundred and fifty machine guns, and an immense amount of war material.

AN HONOR TO CANADA AND THE PRINCE.

OTTAWA, Aug. 12. The Consul General for Italy in Montreal has telegraphed Sir Robert Borden informing the Premier that the Italian Government has directed the Royal battleship Conte Di Cavour to report to Halifax on the fifteenth inst., to greet His Royal Highness The Prince of Wales. The Consul General declares that the Italian Government desire not only to honor the person of the Prince of Wales, but also to express the feelings of deference and friendship of the Government of Italy towards Canada and her people.

SINKING RAPIDLY.

DOVER, Eng., Aug. 13. A wireless message has been received here from the American steamer Englewood saying, "Off Black Deep, sinking rapidly; rush help."

THE REPUBLIC OF AUSTRIA.

PARIS, Aug. 12. The Supreme Council of the Peace Conference, it was announced to-day, has advised the Austrian Delegation that the Allied and Associated Powers have decided that the new Austrian Government must be called the "Republic of Austria." The decision was taken as a result of notes from the Austrian delegation in which they referred to their Government as "German-Austria."

LLOYD GEORGE, O.M.

LONDON, Aug. 12. King George to-night invested David Lloyd George, the Premier, with the Order of Merit at Buckingham Palace.

BULGARIAN ELECTIONS.

PARIS, Aug. 12. Parliamentary elections will be held in Bulgaria, Aug. 17. It appears probable that the Agrarian Party, of which M. Stambulsky, a member of the Bulgarian peace delegation is the leader, will win a majority of seats.

ALLEGED EXTRAVAGANCE.

LONDON, Aug. 12. Alleged extravagance on the part of the Air Ministry was the subject of a debate in the House of Commons to-day. The debate began after Major Gen. J. E. B. Seely, head of the ministry, had detailed economies effected since the armistice. Twenty thousand officers and more than 200,000 men, General Seely said, had been demobilized while 210 airdromes have been dismantled and 125 rented buildings had been returned to their owners. Only 10,000 officers and 60,000 men remain in the service. The estimated appropriation for the air force of 95,000,000 pounds, the General added, was necessary to clear up war contracts. The ministers had to listen to a deal of strong criticism of the extravagance of the government in the matter of armaments, but Winston Churchill, Secretary for War, in a general defense of the Government, said he was able to promise considerable retrenchment in this direction. His speech betrayed that the Government was endeavoring as far as possible to meet the popular demands for greater economy. Major General Seely in the course of his speech made the effective point that the efficient Air Force had saved the country millions in money and thousands in lives this year in connection with the trouble in Afghanistan and Egypt where campaigns were carried out at slight cost as compared to the aforesaid heavy cost in money and life in similar campaigns conducted by Lord Roberts and Wolsey.

GETTING BACK TO WORK.

CHICAGO, Aug. 12. Steady improvement in the situation resulting from the strike of railway shomen was reported by the railway officials here to-night, after receipt of messages from all parts of the country. It was stated that the strikers are returning to work in practically every section affected with the exception of Chicago, Boston and Atlanta.

"Idol of the Regiment" Re-Enters Old School.

Lieut. Col. A. E. Bernard, with the Regiment since its formation, has decided to again join the teaching staff of Bishop Field College, and with the reopening of that institution will take up his duties. Major Arthur Raley, who joined up with the First Five Hundred with Colonel Bernard, also rejoins the Field College staff, and the addition of these popular and efficient officers to Bishop Field College must necessarily benefit. Both were masters there prior to enlisting, resigning their posts by permission at the outbreak of the war. They carry back with them all the experiences gained during five years of military life and those who have the good fortune of being their pupils will be delighted, especially those who were there while the old masters taught before.

"Dragon" Sailors Sing.

A number of people had the pleasure, on Last Tuesday night, of listening to the fine singing of several sailors from H. M. S. Dragon, who had gotten shore leave and were then promenading Water Street and enjoying themselves generally. The singing, which was by note, is said to have been the best heard here for some time, the individual singers having sung before large houses at various ports visited by them.

More Reckless Driving.

If the owner of automobile number four hundred and four is again seen by the Telegram in the act of speeding as he was on Tuesday evening, coming down Hutchings Street onto Water Street, his name will be published and the proper proceedings taken. This car swept down the street in question and, without sounding its horn, broke around the corner and went up Water Street towards the West. With the number of accidents and deaths from automobiles as have happened lately, popular opinion is strongly against this menace, and unless speeding soon ceases there is going to be trouble.

Prince Lays Corner Stone.

His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales and party drove to Buckmaster's Field, LeMerchant Road, at 2 o'clock, Tuesday afternoon, for the purpose of laying the Corner Stone of the New Methodist College Hostel. Not many people were there to witness the ceremony.

Girl Meets Accident.

A domestic with Mr. C. Buckley, grocer, Water Street West, while witnessing the display of fireworks near the Colonial Building, was injured by the dropping of a rocket, which ignited her hat and penetrating through inflicted a nasty scalp wound. She was taken to H. Peddregrew's to have her injuries attended to.

Baseballer Breaks Leg.

As a result of slipping when attempting to slide to second base, in Tuesday evening's baseball game, Brazie, the popular ballman, was most unfortunate in breaking his ankle. He no sooner fell than a large crowd of fans ran in onto the field and threatened to tread the injured man underfoot. Dr. John Grieve, who was amongst the spectators, quickly diagnosed the injury, and Brazie was placed on a door, taken in J. B. Orr's automobile and driven to the residence of J. M. Brown, Riverhead. Drs. Campbell and MacDonlad attended him there, whence he was conveyed to the General Hospital by ambulance. An extraordinary thing was brought to light by this accident, and that was the absence of necessary first aid equipment in the pavillion. Such equipment is supposed to be there, but, owing to somebody's negligence, was now missing. Brazie is a good player, well liked by all, and general sympathy for him in his ill-luck is felt.

Woman Missing.

A woman that was missing with her husband for the street car at the junction of Wolloway and Duckworth Streets yesterday, strayed from him. He having soon missed his wife, set out in search of her but to no avail. Late at night the wanderer was reported safe with some friends whom she had visited. The woman is of unsound mind and the husband had a certificate issued by Dr. Macpherson some two weeks ago for her admittance to the Asylum.

The Nocturnal Illuminations.

St. John's experienced its brightest and most brilliant nocturnal illuminations on Tuesday night last. Everywhere the light was dazzling and far into the night the crowds of citizens who paraded the streets were awed into silence by the splendour of the scenes that met their eyes. The arches were lighted up, while public and private buildings were illuminated and added their brilliancy to the night. The Court House windows were filled with lighted candles, the waterfront was ablaze and the shipping in the stream was magnificent in contributing to the general celebrations. On the Southside Hills bonfires flared skywards, while on the streets skyrockets and fireworks kept everybody looking up. Without doubt the most brilliant and magnificent of the several arches was that of Sir John Crosbie, Mr. H. D. Reid's taking a close second place. There were more people on the streets on Tuesday night than ever seen before, and old people and young people, cripples and lame people, big and small, and all classes were represented.

Prince of Wales Presents Medals to Florizel Heroes.

On Tuesday afternoon at three thirty o'clock the heroes who had performed such meritorious services in life-saving at the time of the Florizel Disaster received from the Prince of Wales the medals that have been awarded them in recognition of their great bravery on that ever to be remembered occasion.

The presentation took place on the steps of the House of Assembly, guards of honor from the regiment and police being present. Dignitaries from the House of Assembly were present, while the Prince's staff attended him. Hon. J. G. Stone read from the official compilations the individual acts of gallantry for which the medals had been designated. A military officer then called the names of the heroes, each stepping forward to have the medals pinned on their breast by the Prince. His Royal Highness spoke briefly to each recipient, complimenting him on the gallantry of his conduct and then shook hands. Cheers were given by the assembled spectators, after which the Prince conversed for a short while with half a dozen or so men for whom the medals had not yet arrived from England. Cheers were then given the royal visitor after which the party drove to Government House where a Garden Party was to be enjoyed.

Tight Collars and Bad Tempers.

Women, who wear tight collars do not drain their brains properly, and often suffer from bad tempers, according to the dictum of Dr. Leonard Williams, in a lecture on "common-sense," delivered at the Peace Nursing Exhibition, in London. He says that since women have given up high collars and are wearing garments which give freedom to the neck they have become sweeter tempered. Dr. Williams believes also in well-fitting corsets. He says aboriginal man was a four-footed animal. The abdominal construction was intended for that posture. Since human beings have taken to walking on their hind legs the position of these organs have been thrown out of gear. Healthy out-door, living athletes might get on very well, says our authority, but people who live in a sedentary life require some kind of support such as corsets give.

Couldn't Be Done.

He was a nervous man. Most men are when they find themselves in the dentist's chair, but he was exceptionally so.

The tooth that had to come out was quite a small affair—from the dentist's point of view. From the patient's it felt about the same size as a cottage loaf.

He decided to have gas. The dentist tried to persuade him to do without it, but he was determined. The doctor was, therefore, telephoned for.

The dentist in a fever of impatience waited for the victim to lose consciousness, but the nervous man insisted upon keeping one eye open, although he had had enough gas to float an airship.

Unable to contain himself any longer, the irate toothpuller exclaimed, "Let yourself go, man! Shut your eyes, you idiot!"

Somewhere in the back blocks of dreamland the patient murmured, sleepily, "Can't—it's glass!"

Do You Seek Better Tyres?

The thing you want most in a tyre is the thing The Good Year Tyre & Rubber Companies try hardest to put there.

That is great mileage at small cost.

The Good Year Tyre & Rubber Companies do put it there, and make sure of it by guarding every step of manufacture with jealous care.

To start properly, The Good Year Tyre & Rubber Companies own and operate their own rubber plantation in the East Indies, their own cotton plantation, and their own cotton mills.

To continue properly, The Good Year Tyre & Rubber Companies insist that other materials they use shall conform to the same high Good Year standard.

And they pursue in the same critical spirit every one of the processes of tyre-building—they watch and weigh, test and try, up to the moment of wheeling the completed product into the stockroom.

By fitting Good Year s to your car, you will, we feel certain, enjoy better tyre service than ever before.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

THE FATAL HABIT.

"There is the difference between the tongues of some as between the hours and the minute hand; one goes ten times as fast and the other signifies ten times as much."
—Sidney Smith.
Wasn't it Mark Twain who told about the steamboat that had such a big whistle that every time they blew the whistle, the engine stopped—because there wasn't power enough for both. I think one sometimes meets people who make one think of that steamboat because it takes so much power to keep their tongues wagging that there isn't enough to supply their brains, etc.

He Must Have Fuel To Keep The Fire Going.
What a deadly thing this habit of perpetual talk is, anyway! Every time I find myself with less liking for it. It wastes such a lot of time and energy and makes so much trouble. For the man (meaning man or woman) who, from force of habit, simply has to talk all the time, is sure to say things that aren't worth saying and that he hasn't any right to say just because he must have fuel to keep the fire going.

Different types go to different extremes in this search for fuel.
There's the man who tells you all about his family affairs. I remember the example of this type who used to tell out a most painful family skeleton when he thought interest in his perpetual flow of talk seemed to flag.

So He Throws in Other People's Private Affairs.
Then there's the person who throws in other people's private affairs when the fire burns low. "She told me not to tell this to anyone, but I know you won't tell," etc. "Never in your life tell any of your secrets to a person who has the talk habit! He won't seem to tell, but he must when the talk habit strikes."

And then there is the person who tells you about things you already know, repeats what he has said once, goes into all kinds of boring detail because he must talk and he hasn't anything else to say. I know one man who reads his newspaper through in the morning and then says to you (who have also read yours), "Did you see such and such a thing?" You say "Yes, but he goes right on and repeats the whole article to you. Now and then you may interpolate. Yes, I read that," but he does not care if you did—he has to talk.

What The Proverb Makers Say About Talk.

It is interesting to see how the proverb of all nations sum up the evils of the habit of talk:
"A great talker never wants for enemies," say the Chinese.
"Long talks makes short days," say the French.
"Great talkers are not great doers," say the Dutch.
"They always talk who never think," say the English.
"Talk little and well and you will be looked upon as somebody," say the Spanish—
Which is such a very good keynote that I think I'll leave you right there.

Just Folks

When a youngster's on his KNEE.

When a youngster's on his knee, Man's as good as he can be; Then it seems his soul takes hold Of his tongue and turns to gold All the words he utters low Telling tales of long ago. Then his thoughts are always clean, Never selfish, never mean, And his touch grows gentle, too, As he runs his fingers through Silky curls like once he had When he was a little lad.

When a youngster's on his knee Man's as fine as he can be. Then the strong arms that have fought Bitterly for things they've sought Throb with tenderness and love, Just like angel arms above, And he's proud that he can place Kisses on that little face, And his sweetness bubbles up Just like wine within the cup. For those few glad moments that His is innocent again.

When a youngster's on his knee Man is what he yearns to be. Then he turns away from strife To the happiness of life Turns away from selfish things To the joys which kindness brings; Changes in that merry hour From a man of force and power To a teacher, wise and good, Talking, living, as he should, Man's as great as he can be With a youngster on his knee.

A Jolly Good Reason!

Some delightfully human—and humorous—stories are told by Mrs. C. S. Peel in her newly-published book, "A Year in Public Life," concerning her experiences of welfare work.

One such concerns a girl munition worker found hugging a male fitter affectionately while seated side by side eating their dinner in a corner of the factory.
As tactful as possible (writes Mrs. Peel) it was suggested to the girl that this was scarcely the time and place for such a display of affection.
Whereupon the girl looked up with a sweet smile, hugged her fitter a little closer, and remarked, with charming frankness: "But I loikes it!"

Gentlemen,—I beg to let you know that I have used MINARD'S LINIMENT for some time, and I find it the best I have ever used for the joints and muscles.

ENVIRONMENT.

I hear men say, sometimes, "Great Scott! This the village God forgot! There is no chance for me to rise, in this old burg of moss-back guys." Then they go forth, upon a day, to fairer pastures far away; and there they find things just as bad as in their own abandoned grad. It cuts no ice where genius dwells; we'll always see it wearing bells. The man who has the goods may go to desert waste or arctic snow, and there hang out his roodest sign, and he will find that trade is fine. Ours is a quiet dreamy town, but it would hold no fellow down. If some youth shows the proper fire, with wrench or hammer, brush or lyre, men drop their work for half a day, to help him upward on his way. With proper stuffing in your head, there isn't any town so dead that you can't cut a swath right there, and nineteen kinds of laurels wear. And in the dearest, grayest town a man may win a world renown. If you, fair reader, where you are, can't hitch your wagon to a star, you couldn't do the trick in Cork, in Boston, Joplin or New York.

The Cost of Living.

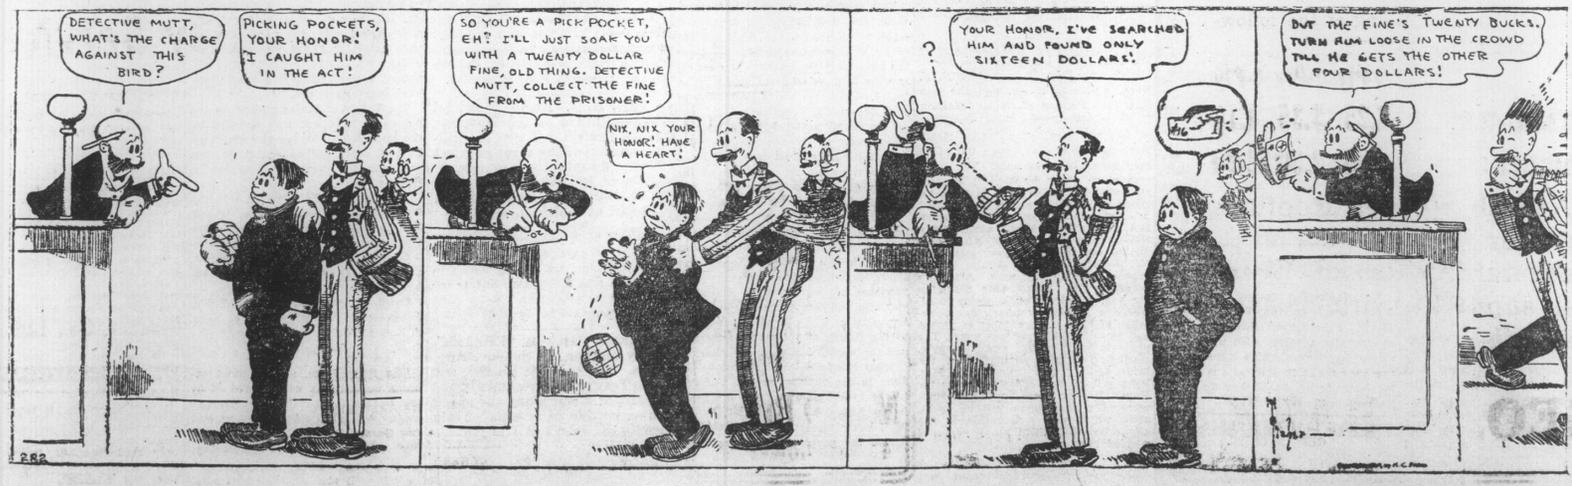

(From Fibre and Fabric.)
It is not the cost of food and rent that is the trouble. It is the cost of high living—autos, and all the luxuries. The average laborer has not materially changed his living, even to the extent of moving to better homes, under the present high wage. But he is splendid picking for the takers in all lines, and it is in dealing with such that his troubles begin and end and brings the situation to one of the cost of high living instead of the high cost of living. It is the middle-class man who is getting squeezed. He may average 10 to 20 per cent wage increase while the laborer is up over 100 per cent. These middle-class workers are numerous, they are disturbed, and once aroused they will start things that will result in new occupations for hundreds of law makers in Washington, as they will do their work with the ballot and institute a general house-cleaning and start a new deal. Then we will get some laws for the people against all others.

Marlborough's Greatest Victory.

The battle of Blenheim, in which Marlborough defeated the French on August 13, 1704, after an unexpected march from the Low Countries into Bavaria, ranks as the Duke's greatest victory. Not only had the French 60,000 men to the 52,000, to which at least Marlborough's force was raised by a junction with Prince Eugene, but they occupied a strongly entrenched position, and enjoyed a great superiority in artillery. Yet Marlborough, notwithstanding the opposition of many of his chief officers who advocated delay, forced on the engagement, and, after many hours' hard fighting, routed his opponents with a loss of 40,000 killed, wounded, and taken prisoners; while the Allied casualties totalled less than a third, or about 12,000. The Duke's despatch was a letter to his wife, scrawled hastily on the back of an old bill "I have not time to say more," concluded this interesting epistle, which is still preserved, "but to beg you will give my duty to the Queen, and let her know that following the rest. The bearer, my Her Army has had a Glorious Victory. Monsr. Tallard and two other Generals are in my coach, and I am following the rest. The bearer, my Aide-de-Camp, Col. Parke, will give her an account of what has passed, I shall do it in a day or two by an other more at large." It is signed "Marlborough" and is a modest summary of a triumph, for which the credit was due to the Duke alone. For, not only the battle, but the strategy by which it was brought about must be ascribed to him; and in fact, the latter was executed in the face of almost insurmountable difficulties created by the hesitation of the Allies, particularly the Dutch. When you want Steaks, Chops, Cutlets and Collops, try ELLIS'.

The Community Pageant

People of an enlightened age may scorn the pageantry and paraphernalia with which the medieval monarch was wont to array himself; they may smile at the Field of the Cloth of Gold and at Caesar's triumphal entries; they may ridicule the tawdriness of the London Lord Mayor's show; but the growing popularity of the modern community pageant, with its quaint portrayal of other days, betrays a lurking fondness in the democratic breast for things of pomp and circumstance. But the pageant, refurbished as it is to suit modern tastes, is not all frolic and fun. Indeed, it is fast assuming functions of no little significance in the progress of society. Who knows whether it will not some day become as deeply embedded in the social system as the guild pageantry of another age, when, with solemn regularity, black-faced Herod of the Mysteries would ramp and rage each year across the humble craftsmen's stage, while the comic element of the play waxed facetious over grave matters?

There has, in fact, been found much scope for the pageant, both as an expression of art and as a form of community enterprise. The possibilities of it have been studied by the artistic fraternity to such good effect that the meter of pageant-master has been definitely established. Thus a community is able to undertake a pageant, even when no promising impresario is available in the locality, by enlisting the services of a professional producer experienced in all matters of pageantry, from flounces to flash lights. The result is that pageant-planning develops its rules, and the rules make for finish and satisfaction. The pageant has its natural mise-en-scene of green sward and foliage, perhaps amid mountains, or mingled with masonry. It is a setting that unlooses the imagination of the spectators with greater ease than the cleverest stage-craft of the indoor theater. The performers, deployed over the extensive foreground, fill readily their allotted roles, which demand but little histrionic address, each individual merging into the one graceful picturesque whole. Thus, by division of labor and unlimited help, a community may attempt the sublime without approaching the ridiculous and create with unequivocal success a spectacle of fantasy and charm.

But however brilliant and artistic may be the pageant, from the spectator's standpoint, the social functions which it performs are of greater import and usefulness. How many well-known and little-known townspeople, men, women, and children, move in those stately tableaux, some as Indians, with sleek hair and feathers, prancing around with tomahawk; others in Puritan knee-breeches and square-toed shoes; others in hoop-skirts and ringlets. And with what enthusiasm have they met, day by day, to drill and to rehearse? And what unseen hive of industry has stitched and dyed the fluttering robes of dancers that glide, noiseless as nymphs, through the steps of the ballet; and prepared the quaint jumble of dress of all periods that form links in the great panorama? How much time and thought has been cheerfully devoted to the designing, the music, the endless equipment? Indeed, the pageant has few equals in its manner of drawing the townsfolk together in friendly and disinterested co-operation. Citizens ransack their musty records for historic incident that formerly was left for the delectation of men of research; school children discover that history is not confined to parchment and pipe-rolls, but is staring at them from every acre of their district, while local literateurs are taught to find themes or the pen in plenty all around them. Moreover, the unwonted labor called for from a host of performers and workers reveals talent on all hands that, until then, had remained latent.

While the future development of the community pageant is still uncertain, this form of enterprise has already established claims to increasing favor. It has demonstrated that there are better ways of promoting good will and public service than by mere attention to business interests; it has proved that there is much to be gained by a community that finds time to provide its own recreation; and it has fostered the idea that the summer pageant need not form the only field for community amusement, but that other artistic methods and other seasons may yield equally happy results.—Christian Science Monitor.

Living Compasses.

CREATURES WITH MAGNETIC SENSE.

We often talk of a sixth sense which animals are supposed to possess. Some curious experiments have been made of late which go to show that this is a fact beyond any dispute, and that the sense is a magnetic one enabling the animal to know instinctively the points of the compass, or, at any rate, the direction in which it is travelling.

Rats were trained to traverse this labyrinth until they could go through in a few seconds.

The contrivance was then moved through an angle of ninety degrees, yet the rats went through in the same direction as formerly, but not, of course, through the same passages to which they were accustomed.

A blind bat was turned loose in a room across which had been stretched a number of fine threads. The bat flew in and, out among these threads with as much apparent ease as if it had been in full possession of its sight.

Small birds, as we know, cross great stretches of sea, frequently flying at night. They can have no possible landmarks by which to fly, and it seems now to be beyond all doubt that they possess this sense of direction which human beings completely lack.

Potato salad is better when made with hot potatoes, because the flavors blend better.

Lemon is better than anything else for removing fruit and vegetable stains from the fingers.

Mythical Millions.

It is amusing to look back, reminded by one of this week's anniversaries and see what a scare was caused by Peter Melusson's will.

Of Swiss descent, he became a London merchant, and died on July 21, 1797, leaving $500,000 to his wife and children and the “residue of his estate” to accumulate until all his children and grandchildren were dead, when his eldest great grandson should get it in a lump. The residue was about $5,000,000, and it was calculated that in 70 years this would have increased to $100,000,000. The sudden placing of that sum at the absolute disposal of one individual, as people feared, would be a grave danger to the state. What would they have said if they could have foreseen the fortunes accumulated by a Rockefeller or a Carnegie?

Anyhow, the hundred millions never arrived. To begin with, Peter's family contested his will, and the case was carried up to the highest Court of Appeal. There was another law suit when the last of the testator's grandchildren died in 1856, to decide whether his true heir was his eldest great-grandson or his eldest son's grandson and the latter won. But instead of getting a hundred millions, he came in for little more than the original $3,000,000. It had been kept from growing by law costs and defective management.

Meanwhile, the scare had roused Parliament to decree in 1800, that all bequests for accumulation over more than 25 years should be null and void.

Where Females Run the Males.

AMONG INDIANS.

The Seri Indians, an aboriginal tribe of unmixed blood inhabiting Tiburon (Shark) island, in the Gulf of California, off the coast of the State of Sonora, and due west from the city of Hermosillo, afford an interesting study. In the first place, they present one of the lowest types of human head in at least one respect--they have no local habitations, no permanent shelter of any kind, but wander from place to place as the whim seizes them. The nearest approach of shelter is made by gathering the limbs of scrubby mesquites together and fastening them at the top with a strip of palm fiber, or what not. But this is a great hardship, since the climate is of the mildest, and rain seldom falls.

The one feature of this tribe's life stands out sharp and clear in contrast with that of all other aborigines of the western hemisphere, is that the women are the heads of the families, and rule the men, if not with hands of iron, at least in the most determined and effective manner. Some see in this novel arrangement the foundation of the old legend encountered by the Conquistadores of a land far to the northwest of the Aztec kingdom inhabited by Amazons, and this indeed may be correct.

Mother Fixes Marriage.

While of marriage ceremony, there is little or nothing, nevertheless their customs in this respect are a trifle odd and interesting. When a young man wishes to marry a girl, he makes application to the mother. The father is ignored--it is none of his affair. If the mother be disposed to look with favor upon the match, the youth is at once for all the wants of the family of his adored one. He must be the hewer of wood and the drawer of water, likewise the killer of sharks and the purveyor of food of all kinds. He is not allowed to associate with the family, not even to recline in the shade of the particular mesquite bush which they may have selected as a temporary abiding place, but must keep at a distance and under the shelter of his own special bush, where he cooks and eats his own food and otherwise comports himself in the humble manner of a suppliant for a great favor--the acquisition of a feminine "master." At the end of a year, if he shall have proved himself a good provider, he is accepted as a member of the family without further ceremony and the young couple begin life together under another mesquite clump.

A Bloody Massacre.

These Indians occasionally come to the mainland and even visit Hermosillo, the capital of the State. Old residents tell a bloodcurdling tale of the wholesale massacre of a party who had been induced by the authorities some thirty years ago or so to come to the mainland on an assurance of peaceful treatment, but which was merely a subterfuge for the attempted extermination of the tribe. This undoubtedly accounts for the timidity of the present members of the clan and their determination not to permit strangers to visit their remote island home unless properly attended and vouched for. When they do visit the mainland, they are objects of curiosity to all. Their island is in the pearl oyster district, and they bring many pearls with them which they trade off at a fraction of their value. Many of these pearls are taken by them from beds of "dead" shells, and without value, but occasionally they become possessed of "live ones" which they have no difficulty of disposing of, since they have little or no idea of their real worth.

Whether any movement has ever been inaugurated on Tiburon island for the introduction of "male suffrage" is not known. But judging from appearances and from the accounts given of the "mistressship" of the women, it would not in all probability be especially conducive to the health of any mere man who undertook to introduce such an unheard-of innovation.--But-falo Commercial.

A Great Reformer.

Miss Florence Nightingale, the heroine of the Crimean War, died at the age of 91, on August 13, 1910, at her residence in South Street, London. In 1854 (she had been trained as a nurse) the harrowing descriptions in the "Times" of the condition of the hospitals at Scutari stirred her to the heroic effort of her life in the Crimean War. In November, 1854, on the very eve of Inkerman, Florence Nightingale landed at Scutari at the head of a band of Protestant and Roman Catholic nurses, not trained women, but the best that could be got, and with full powers from the Government for the reform of her own branch of hospital administration. At one time she had as many as 10,000 men under her care. The hospital was in a state of chaos. The commissariat had broken down, there was no proper food, change of clothing, medical comforts, or hospital comforts. The rapidity with which order was restored and dirt banished was simply amazing, and in a short time the death-rate had fallen to two per cent. The poor wounded had clean linen instead of filthy rags; good food instead of badly-cooked rations; tender treatment instead of clumsy efforts of untrained hospital orderlies. As an example of her difficulties and her methods, it was told how some stores arrived from England, and from the want of them sick men were dying. They were locked up until the official inspector arrived. Florence Nightingale called a couple of orderlies, led them to the door, and ordered them to break it open. The stores were distributed. Before she returned to her native land, Miss Nightingale, in the summer of 1856, began to be embarrassed with honors and awards. The most valued of these was a magnificent jewel sent by Queen Victoria, with one of the most touching letters that a Sovereign ever penned to a subject. The jewel bore the inscription, "Blessed are the Merciful." The Sultan of Turkey presented her with a bracelet. In England, subscriptions were opened for a national testimony, and £50,000 was collected; but at Miss Nightingale's request the money was devoted to the maintenance of a hospital for training nurses; while she herself had, where once three nations met in battle, a gigantic cross erected on the hills of Balaclava, which shows clear against the sky, bearing the inscription, "Lord have mercy upon us" the only memorial she wished. On her return to England she spent a fortnight at Balmoral as the guest of Queen Victoria. One can hardly fail to sympathize with the Australians and New Zealanders who object to the commercial use of the name "Anzac," a puzzling word until one knows that it is made of the initial letters of the "Australian and New Zealand Army Corps," and its wide appearance on bottles and in advertisements. Yet it is doubtful that any vigor of objection can legally prevent the abuse. History offers a parallel case in the word "Yankee," which has been applied to a long and miscellaneous list of objects that were expected to sell better under that title. Perhaps they did. The important thing, as a suggestion of comfort to the Australians and New Zealanders, is that the word remained superior to such uses, and is to-day as honorable a term as anyone can desire. So it will probably be with Anzac, and those who meet it in commercial use will be constantly reminded of its finer and permanent meaning.

self. It is a story of a telegraphic code as a matter of fact, for Anzac was merely Sir W. R. Birdwood's code word, chosen by him to serve as telegraphic address for the Australian and New Zealand corps when he took command. He may not have realized that, in coining a word from the initial letters of important distinguishing words, he was following a well-known method of advertising experts in devising trade names for goods of particular quality; nevertheless, the Anzacs were "the goods," and they deserved, as they received, the name which they, and nobody else, could make famous.

(From London Blihty.)
A young man entered the village shop and complained to the owner that a ham he had purchased there a few days before had proved not to be good.
"The ham is all right, sir!" insisted the shopkeeper.
"No; it isn't," insisted the other.
"Its bad!"
"How can that be," continued the shopkeeper, "when it was cured only last week?"
The young man reflected a moment, and then suggested:
"Maybe it's had a relapse."

DON'T BUY SO MANY BOOTS

SINCE "Hi-Press" has come on the market fishermen are putting many a good dollar back into their pockets that used to go for footwear.

This wonderful boot actually gives two and three times the wear of the ordinary kind. And it's mighty good-looking and comfortable in the bargain.

Here's the idea--"Hi-Press" Rubber Boots are made in a new and vastly better way. They are molded--like an auto tire--INTO ONE SOLID PIECE! They CAN'T leak or peel and there seems no wear-out to them. Millions of fishermen, miners and farmers won't wear anything else. Try them yourself.

Whenever you buy an article of rubber see that it bears this trade-mark. The wreath and the "G" is the sign of Quality and assurance that the House of Goodrich stands solidly behind its products.

Cab Overturns.

Yesterday morning the occupants of a cab came very near suffering a bad accident when the cab overturned and threw them out on the street. The cab went down Rennie's Mill Rd. and, turning swiftly into Circular Road, swerved sharply and overturned. The driver was caught before he could rise from the ground, after being thrown out, by the front wheel and pinned down. The four other occupants were also thrown out but neither of them were injured. The cab was owned by James McGrath, a returned soldier. A second accident occurred to the same cab yesterday, when McGrath was driving down Theatre Hill, immediately following the first overturning. The cab was rattling down the hill at a clipping pace and collided with great force with a motor car which was coming toward it. A man Howell, who was on the cab seat, was pitched to the ground, over the auto, and was picked up quite unconscious, placed in the car and rushed to hospital where his injuries were attended to. Howell regained consciousness at the hospital this morning.

An Open Insult.

"Will the Hon. Alfred B. Morne when kindly informing the public as to whether the Prince, who is about to be properly received, has sufficient German blood in him to justify his internment had he attempted to (visit) Newfoundland while the war was on?"—(Daily Star, Aug. 7th.)

For some considerable time past the leading members of the present Government have been subjected to the most unwarranted exhibitions of abuse and scurrility by the Opposition Press, their social standing and business affairs have been misrepresented and dragged before, not alone the public of St. John's, but the world at large, to gratify the petty spleen and malice of a few disappointed politicians and their hirelings, who are utterly unable and unqualified to discuss the affairs of the country in a gentlemanly and courteous manner. If all our faults were written upon our foreheads, very few of us would occupy front pews in the churches. Heaven knows the tone of the Opposition Press was low and degraded enough when confined to our own public men, but when advantage is taken of by the Star newspaper to hurl an open insult at His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, our future King, the climax is reached, and the perpetrators should hang their heads in shame, if they possessed the least semblance of that commodity. By insulting the Prince of Wales, the Star has offered a double insult to His Majesty the King, the late King Edward the Peacemaker and Victoria the Good. We have yet to find in any newspaper published in the English language in British possessions such an insult directed against the patriotism of the reigning House of Windsor. Even Bradlaugh in his most virulent and obnoxious charges against Royalty, in years gone by, never stooped so low. Then how can our public men such as M. P. Cashin and others hope to escape the venom of such a modern Therites—that snarling and scurrilous fellow amongst the Greeks,—when the son of our King has his ancestors dragged up from their resting places and subjected to cold-blooded insult and uncalculated insinuation. Must the name of His Royal Highness, who has come amongst us as the representative of his father our King, have his name dragged into the cauldron of Newfoundland politics? His Royal Highness has come amongst us to fortify himself with a personal and practical knowledge of our country and our people, which will materially assist him in doing all in his power to advance the interests of Britain's Oldest Colony, when, in the natural course of events, he shall be called to rule over our vast Empire. When a newspaper, which one would suppose, was established as a teacher of youth, prostitutes the noble calling of the Press to descend to such low, contemptible and disloyal tactics to bolster up a party cause, what may we not expect from those who have not had the advantages of education, and whose loyalty to the Throne may be shaken by such remarks as those published in the Star on the 7th inst? How disordered must be the mind of a man who would permit loyalty and respect for our future Sovereign to become subservient to the requirements of a political campaign. The people of the neighboring Provinces are vying with each other to see who will do the most to honor our future King during his visit to their portion of his Great Empire on this side of the Atlantic. Instead of having assisted the authorities, as loyal subjects should do to give a hearty and suitable welcome to the Prince of Wales, the Opposition Press has done everything in its power to hamper their efforts, without having made the least attempt to assist them by suggestions or otherwise. It is the simplest thing in the world to find fault with any great affair that may be initiated or carried out. The greatest curse to any community are the critics and fault finders, and when in the future the members of the Opposition Press of to-day peruse what they have written in their back files they must be even more depraved and disloyal than their present conduct marks them out to be, if they do not curse the day they were carried away by jealousy and malice to insult His Royal Highness during his visit to our shores. Our contemporary may be a star, but it is unquestionably of the Sirius order—judging from its snarling during one of the most important epochs in our history.

Rev. A. H. Sykes Discusses His Wife's Troubles

Believes It His Duty To Make Public the Facts in the Case.

It is seldom, indeed, that men of prominence, especially ministers of the gospel, willingly express their indebtedness publicly to a proprietary medicine. However, when a medicine obtains of the singular purity and efficiency that is shown by the uniform preparation, Tanlac, statements from such citizens are to be considered thoroughly commensurate with the good that is actually being accomplished.

Rev. A. H. Sykes, pastor of the Watkins Park Presbyterian church, Nashville, Tenn., prominent not only as a minister of the gospel, but popular as Sykes, and citizen, who has been true to his friends and every trust, said recently:

"For the past ten months Mrs. Sykes has been in very delicate health, suffering both from stomach and kidney trouble, which gradually developed into a general nervous breakdown. At best citizens are to be considered thoroughly commensurate with the good that is actually being accomplished.

"In fact, she suffered so long and so much that I feel it my duty to let everyone know what Tanlac has done for her. For several years her condition was such that she had to remain in bed and when Tanlac was placed on sale here several weeks ago I was very much interested in what I read in the papers regarding the Tanlac treatment and decided, as a last resort, to give it a trial.

"I am a conservative man, continued Rev. Sykes, and have always been skeptical regarding the use of proprietary medicines, but this case has certainly proved an exception. I am now very firmly convinced that Tanlac is a medicine of great power and extraordinary merit. I do not think I have ever seen anything give such prompt results.

"Mrs. Sykes had only taken two-thirds of a bottle when we began noticing a marked improvement in her condition. In less than a week from the time she began taking it she was able to sit up and to-day is able to assist with the household duties.

"Before she began taking Tanlac she had fearful pains in her side and suffered constantly with sour stomach and indigestion, and was entirely nervous. These distressing symptoms, I am thankful to say have entirely disappeared, her appetite has returned and she seems to relish everything she eats. She also sleeps better and is gaining flesh and strength rapidly. I think it is only a question of short time now until her health will be fully restored.

"Tanlac," concluded Rev. Sykes, "has certainly proved a remarkable remedy in her case and will do all you claim for it. I cheerfully recommend it to all of my friends and will take pleasure in giving anyone who is interested full details regarding my wife's case."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, under the personal direction of a special Tanlac Representative.

Tailor Assaulted.

Being assaulted by a person whose name he would not give the police, a city tailor received injuries yesterday morning that necessitated four stitches being made in his head. Calling at the police station about eleven o'clock, accompanied by another man, he explained that he had been struck by a man on Duckworth Street and knocked against a hydrant, thereby receiving a nasty wound in the head. Being unable to find a doctor he came to the station for aid, and Dr. J. S. Tait was immediately sent for. From that the injured man was driven to his home in a cab.

Sir Vesta Tilley.

Lady de Frece—or shall we say Sir Vesta Tilley—was very pleased about the knighthood conferred upon her husband, Sir Walter de Frece, when I congratulated her. "But," said Vesta Tilley, "I'm having a heated argument with myself! You see, Lady de Frece thinks she should retire to private life, whereas Vesta Tilley just hates the idea of leaving the stage and the public she loves."

During our chat Sir Walter de Frece came in and told me this story. "Mr. MacTavish attended a party where the hospitality of the host knew no bounds. In the midst of the celebration Mr. MacTavish rose up and made the rounds of the company, bidding each a profound farewell.

"But, Sandy, man," objected the host, "ye're not goin' yet, with the evenin' just started?" "Nay," said MacTavish, "I'm no goin' yet. But I'm tellin' ye good night while I still know ye all."

China Becoming Westernized.

China, which is becoming westernized every day, now boasts two department stores, both at the city of Canton. A conspicuous feature of these department stores is the hotel annex where western food is very popular. An enormous business is done in wrist watches, which are worn by both men and women. The Chinese women are very fond of jewellery, and in place of expensive millinery, decorate their heads with gold, silver and jewelled ornaments. It is no uncommon sight to see one woman wearing a wrist watch and one or two pendent jewelled watches besides.

New Words and Phrases.

(From the Ottawa Journal.)

The war brought us many new words and phrases but already many of the new terms have fallen into disuse. The coming of peace has worked still another change in the language. We have not spoken of an "essential" for many months. The word "drafted" was practically coined to avoid use of the term "conscript." In a few months we may have to think twice in order to recall what a "drafted" was. "Camouflage" was a new word that suddenly became overworked and finally passed into the discard as a well-nigh nauseating expression. The word "Soviet" is having its fling but the hope is expressed that it, too, will soon be found only in revised dictionaries as obsolete.

Wise Men Say—

That many a straight face hides a crooked mind.

That a fool is never master of himself, much less of people and wealth.

That when a man is willing to admit he is a fool, the chances are he isn't.

That jumping at conclusions is about the only mental exercise some people take.

That it is almost as hard to live up to a good reputation as to live down a bad one.

That experience is what a wise man gets at the expense of others, and a fool at his own.

That the man who has done his level best, and who is conscious that he has done his best, is a success, even though the world may write him down a failure.

That carelessness loses more jobs, spoils more careers, causes more failures than incompetence. One moment's carelessness may end a lifetime of painstaking effort.

That the life that is sharing in the interests, the welfare, and the happiness of others is the one that is continually expanding its beauty and in power and, therefore, in happiness.

When Lawyers Struck.

Policemen are not the only instruments of the law who have been known to strike. Some years ago the barristers practising in Sierra Leone were so dissatisfied with the judge who was acting as substitute for the Chief Justice while the latter was on leave that they unanimously elected to give up pleading before him. Legal business in the Colony was, therefore, at a standstill until the Chief Justice returned.

France, too, affords an instance of a legal strike. One of the judges at St. Amand accused his colleague of deliberately promoting disputes in order to fill their pockets with fees. Thereupon all the lawyers in court departed in a body, declaring that they would not return until this insulting statement had been withdrawn. Eventually the judge apologized, and the lawyers resumed practice.

Saw An Airship.

Dear Maple Leaves:—It is a long while since I have written to our most interesting club, but I read the letters every week, and think they are very fine.

I think the Editor has something new and nice to say every week in his letters to the club.

Two of my brothers enlisted in the army, but both are home now. One of my cousins made the supreme sacrifice on the field of battle.

Yesterday there was an air-ship seen here, and if the war wasn't over I guess we would have been somewhat frightened.

I joined the Maple Leaf Club when I was nine years old. I am now 15.

I would like to correspond with either you, or Garnet, or Martha Stacey, or Sound Island, or Placentia Bay, Newfoundland.

(This letter appeared in the Family Herald and Weekly Star, correspondence column.)

"How's That, Umpire?"

The man who stopped a ball with his head and was given out "leg before" had a double grievance. He was, in fact, dodging the ball when it struck him; but the umpire said it would have hit the wickets if his head had not been in the way, and as "head before wicket" is not in the Rules, there was only one course open!

At a recent Music Hall Artists' Fete there was a cricket match between the Has-Beens and the Never-Ought-To-Have-Beens, and there were, among other eccentricities, several new ways of being "out." One was "afraid to go in," another "sleeping at the wicket," another "looking the wrong way," another "caught napping," and last, but not by any means least frequent, was "kicked out."

During a cricket match in Flanders somewhere "behind the lines," a man was given out "run out." Seeing that he left one of his shoes in the mud it would probably have been nearer the truth to have given him "stuck fast."

Princess Mary as Nurse.

One of the first questions that mothers ask when they go to fetch their children from the Great Ormond Street Hospital is whether Princess Mary has washed their own particular baby.

The Princess has been working at this hospital so long now that she is equal to any work that a trained nurse can do.

Her remarkable keenness is an example to the rest of the staff, and she resents strongly any attempt to save her the trouble of doing her share of the cleaning and other rough work of the hospital.

She spends much time in reading all the books of instruction on her profession, and is now quite an authority on the minor ailments of children.

For their part, the kiddies themselves love her, and there is great competition among them to come under her charge. She has the charm of manner and the understanding which appeals so strongly to children of all ages, and there is no task which comes amiss to her.

She will never allow herself to be waited upon or fetched and carried for but takes her place among the rest of the V. A. D. staff, and works harder than any of them.

The Ocean 90,000,000 Years Old.

How old is the ocean? Standing on the shore and looking out over the expanse of water, the ocean seems a fixed and eternal fact, but the seas had a beginning and will have an end. Scientists say that when this time comes the last drop of water will have been absorbed in the earth's crust, its surface will be a desert and all life will become extinct.

The age of the ocean has been estimated by a leading authority, Professor Frank Clarke, of the United States Geological Survey, at about 90,000,000 years. This, of course, is only an approximation, but is based on carefully studied scientific data.

All the water was once contained in the vapor that surrounded the glowing, slowly cooling mass which is now the earth. After the gases combined to form water the process of making the ocean salt began. This was the work of the rivers. Mineral salts were extracted from the rocks over which they flow and deposited in the sea.

Each year the actions of the streams is said to make the ocean slightly more salty and this is the basis on which its age is calculated. The amount of salt carried by the rivers to the world is computed by the scientists and compared with the total quantity in the ocean. After evaporation and the velocity of currents have been considered, it is possible to calculate how long it has taken to make the sea water as salty as it is to-day.

About three and a half per cent of mineral salts and ninety-six and a half per cent fresh water make up the oceans. Three-fourths of the solid matter is common salt.

The Passing of Wilhelmshaven.

(From the New York Tribune.) Wilhelmshaven, the German Plymouth, as enthusiastic Plottener members sometimes carelessly called it, is no more. At least, is emphatically and distinctively not what it used to be. Simultaneously with the news of the scuttling of German warships in Scapa Flow the German papers announce that the once proud base fortress of the imperial German navy has been sold by the Government to a private syndicate. The latter has already started work on converting the piers, wharves, warehouses, etc., for the use of mercantile shipping. Thus closes the career of one of the most formidable naval strongholds in history. It is a sad and—for patriotic Germans at any rate—incongruous ending. The proud words with which von Roon, the Minister of War of the old Wilhelm I, baptized the newly built port are well remembered in the Fatherland. "And so I announce and proclaim, on the strength of the order of His Majesty the King, that from this hour on this port and the city which is to rise around it shall be called Wilhelmshaven until the end of time." This was exactly half a century ago, on June 17, 1869. How could von Roon then know that the eternity to which he dedicated the new fortress would not last fifty years? Like most of the institutions of the Hohenzollern empire, Wilhelmshaven was not the spontaneous result of a long organic development. It was simply made to order, like the statues of the Siegesallee or the books celebrating the silver jubilee of the Kaiser. The site of the harbor and city originally belonged to the Grand Duke of Oldenburg. From him it was purchased by Prussia in 1853, and the construction of the base began a year later. It was a desperate struggle against the sands of Friesland, against wind and sea and climate, and the German engineers had the right of priding them-

Watches Bigger Than Saucers.

The first watches ever made were as big as soup-plates and as heavy as they were cumbersome.

The Emperor Charles V., for instance, had one which weighed 27 lb. The watches of that day were very much like ordinary clocks. They were cylindrical in shape, finely chased, and had a hinged lid on one side to expose the dial.

A costly and elaborate watch was made for Sultan Abdul-Medjid by Messrs. Hart and Son, of Cornhill, in 1844. It was made of 22 carat gold and was 5 in. in diameter. It chimed the hours and quarters but was without a bell, the striking parts being made up of wires. It possessed a powerful and resonant tone, was exceptionally harmonious, and sounded like a cathedral clock. Twelve hundred guineas was its cost.

DISEASED GUMS AND TEETH.

Of all the poisons taken into the blood, the germs and pus contributed by the diseased gums and teeth are the most destructive to the human system. If every red blood cell is forced to fight against numbers of germs to the cell, the blood cannot attend to the building up of the body, and if allowed to continue the system is bound to break down and eventually you are an invalid. Kidney, stomach, heart trouble, rheumatism and many other diseases are brought on by diseased gums and teeth.
