LADY IRIS' MISTAKE; Hero of 'Surata'

It was almost pitiful to see the procession that left Surata—the wagons filled with women and children, with helpless invalids and wounded. They were surrounded by a band of efficient men under the young soldier's command. They started at dawn, and all good wishes went with them. The party proceeded quietly and without interruption for some time, the silence disturbed only by the tramp of horses and men, the cries of children, and the words of command. The golden sunshine grew warmer, and the faint breath of wind that had come with the dawn grew fainter, and then died. Captain Osburn went to the wagons from time to time to speak encouragingly to the women. He had kind words for the children, and sympathetic ones for the invalids.

At noon, when the heat was intense, they halted in a valley. They had not been there long when a scout came in and told Captain Osburn that a large body of the enemy was at some little distance. Allan's first care was to place the women and children, the sick and the wounded, in safety; and it was no light task. They were lifted out of the wagons, which were then drawn up round them, forming a barricade. If silence could be preserved for a time at least, and aid procured from Fort George, all would yet be well. Allan told his men not to let the women know of the danger.

"Do your best to keep perfect silence," he said, "and we must let them know at Fort George."

One of the soldiers, who had served for several years in India, asked—

CRAMPS

Miss Marie Rasmussen of Nordlandet, Kristiansund, Norway, writes as follows: "I sometimes suffer terrible pain from cramps in the hands and feet, and have found nothing that gives me more relief than Sloan's Liniment. It is certainly a wonderful preparation."

Every day brings added testimony praising the world-famed "pain's enemy."

"But who will go to the fort? The chances are that a man will be riddled with shot before he had got half a mile."

"I will," answered Captain Osburn. "My conduct may perhaps be set down as something like a breach of the Queen's Regulations; but I have staked my life on the safety of those under my charge, and I will give it if needed. If attacked, you can defend yourself for some hours," he added. "I will make the best of my way to the fort, give warning, and return speedily with help."

"But if you are shot on the way, captain?" said the soldier who had spoken before. He knew even better than his young officer the dangers of the Indian hills.

"I have faith in One above," answered Allan reverently. "I am going to try to save the lives of these innocent women and children, and Heaven protects those who go forth on such errands. Sergeant Adams"—calling one of the non-commissioned officers to him—"you will command the detachment in my absence—I am going to ride forward without assistance. If I do not return, you must try at nightfall to reach the fort. Comrades all, I bid you good-by for a little while!"

He mounted his horse, and gave his last command—

"Keep perfect silence and wait in patience!"

He rode softly through the valley, and presently reached a white sterile, narrow plain between the hills. The heat made him feel faint; but he thought of the woman and children whose lives were in danger, and nervously he urged his horse on.

Mile after mile, as fast as he could urge his gallant horse, he rode with fearless men and dauntless heart, drops of moisture falling from his brow like rain. On he dashed through the fiery heat; for the lives of women and children and helpless men were at stake. He knew that he must now go more than half the distance now, and there had been no sign of the foe.

Lady Hutton's Ward.

CHAPTER II.

How it would have ended, no one can tell; but one morning, while the dew still lay upon flower and leaf, Magdalen went out to meet her lover. They walked for some long time up and down the broad path, forgetting everything save themselves and their own happiness, when all at once the keeper, white with rage, stood before them.

"So," said he slowly, "this is it! I have always said that fatal beauty would prove a curse. Go home, Magdalen; leave your lover with me. Stay—do not let me be rash. Is he your lover? Does he profess to love you?"

"He does love me," said Magdalen proudly; and I—oh, father, do not be angry—I love him."

She spoke bravely, although trembling with fear.

"I am not angry, child, said the keeper gently. "Go home—I will settle this."

"You will not hurt him, father?" pleaded Magdalen.

"I will not even disturb one of his well-arranged curls," said the keeper grimly. "Leave him to me."

Magdalen hastened away, and the two men gazed fixedly at each other. Stephen Hurst did not quite like the strong hands that trembled with eagerness. He was a coward at heart, but thought in this case there was nothing much to fear.

"Well, my friend," he said insolently, "don't act the virtuous peasant. I have seen that kind of thing so often on the stage that I am tired of it."

"I tell you what you never saw upon the stage," said the keeper. "You never saw a father who meant to lash his daughter's lover like a whipped hound unless he did justice to her."

There was something in the hot, angry eyes that glowed upon him, and in the low, hissing voice, that shook Stephen Hurst's craven heart.

"Do not let us make any error," he said nastily; "your daughter is a beautiful girl, and pure as an angel. I would not utter one word derogatory to her to save my life."

Donald Burns's face softened at these words.

"Have you taught my child to love you?" he asked; "tell me in one word. I will know the truth."

"She does love me," replied Stephen quietly.

"Then listen to me," said the keeper. "You are a fine gentleman, I suppose—one from the Hall; she is poor and almost friendless, but you have taught her to love you; and if you do not marry her and make her happy, I will follow you—even to the world's end—and stay you—you hear me. I say it—I, who never broke my word. Now please yourself."

He turned away without one word more, leaving Stephen Hurst looking vacantly after him.

"A very pretty price certainly to pay for a summer's wandering in these stupid woods," he muttered. "That all comes from having nothing to do. I must either marry the girl or run the risk of being beaten to death by that energetic and active keeper. Well, I have nothing to keep her upon; I cannot keep myself; but she is a beautiful girl, and I really like her better than any one else in the world. Let me toss up for it; heads, I marry her; the reverse I run away." Then he carelessly threw up a few small silver coins. "Heads win," said he with a smile. "I will wait upon the keeper to-morrow."

And that was the man Magdalen Hurst idealized and loved.

What passed when Stephen Hurst called at the cottage no one ever knew. When Lord Hutton heard that his random friend was to marry the loveliest girl in Scotland, he advised Miss Erskine to use her influence to prevent the sacrifice.

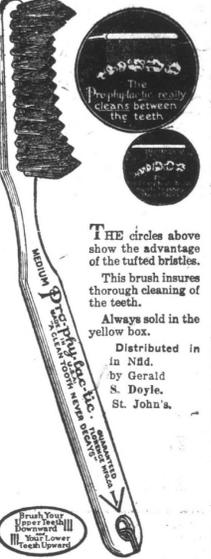

"Let the girl marry some steady, honest young man in her own station," he said, "she will have a chance of happiness then. If she marries Stephen Hurst, she will be wretched for life."

Miss Erskine tried her influence, and Sir Ralph and Lady Erskine tried theirs, but all in vain; when did love ever listen to reason? Before the summer ended, beautiful, simple Magdalen Burns became Stephen Hurst's wife.

THE HORN HONKER.

The human family is queer. It does a lot of foolish things. Too many to be printed here. We move when habit pulls the string but there's one high above the rest. Deserving of his fellow's scorn, He is a nuisance and a pest—The driver with the honking horn.

When suddenly the traffic stops And twenty cars are in a line, Hold there by semaphores and cops And none may go without the sign, Always some dull and empty mind Without a trace of reason born, Who thinks he should not stay behind, Begins to toot upon his horn.

I wonder if he thinks that we Are staying there to please a whim, Or lined up twenty deep to be A special barrier to him? 'Twould seem to any thinking man That were the roadway clear we'd go. But he will start the caravan. He owns a horn which he can blow.

I've sat and wondered in a line When traffic jams, as oft it will, Just what this bird of queer design Imagines keeps us standing still. Yet ever from the distant rear, At noon or night, or early morn, Somehow we always have to hear The senseless honker of the horn.

Household Notes.

A pinnacle of savorniness is reached in adding chopped oysters to the gravy of a juicy steak.

Chopped apples and pecan meats make a delicious salad. Serve with Russian dressing and crackers.

Round steak may be cooked en casserole with potatoes, carrots, turnips and a suggestion of onion.

Small hands need warm, cheap mittens for playing in the snow. Old sweaters can be used to make them.

If the family has grown tired of the usual oyster dish—fried, scalloped or stewed—try baking them with macaroni.

Halves of cabbage heads, with the centres cut out, make attractive shells for shredded cabbage salad or cold elaw.

A few sprays of bitterware placed in the right vase would bring cheer to a dark corner all through the winter.

Never wash eggs until ready to use, as washing makes the shell porous, so that they absorb the odor of strong foods.

World Traveler Gives Tanlac High Praise.

"Tanlac has restored me to such excellent health that I can recommend it most sincerely. It brought me complete relief after I had been in the hospital two months with neuritis, and built me up in a short time from a dreadfully run-down condition. This emphatic statement was made by Mrs. Vivian Angelo Short, highly esteemed resident of 2189 34th Ave., Calgary. Mrs. Short is a woman of exceptional education and refinement. She has traveled extensively, having been practically all over the world. She lived in London and Paris several years and has visited Smyrna, recently burned in the Turko-Grecian conflict, and Constantinople.

"About a year ago," said Mrs. Short, "I was attacked by neuritis. It caused terrific pain in my knees, ankles, arms and shoulders. The soreness and stiffness were exceptionally severe. I could not walk, every attempt causing me perfect agony. I was unable to rest day or night. On the urgent advice of a nurse I began taking Tanlac. Within two weeks I was so much improved I was able to walk about the house. I took four bottles, and at present I am totally free from any trace of my old malady. I will always feel that I am deeply indebted to Tanlac."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists, and surrounding territory tonight is rapidly getting back to normal conditions. Damage to railways, telephones, tramways, power and telegraph lines during the recent heavy storm will run into hundreds of thousands of dollars, the Companies estimated.

Rosalind Tows Vessel Into Halifax.

HAD 1800 CASES WHISKEY ON BOARD.

Capt. James, of the s.s. Rosalind brings word that on the trip from New York to Halifax the ship sighted the three masted auxiliary schooner Dorin, disabled Monday morning, about 3 miles N.W. of Point Penant Buoy, which is twenty miles outside of Halifax. The schooner was flying signals of distress and the Red Cross liner at once bore down upon her. Capt. Coates asked to be towed to port. A boat was lowered with second officer Jackson in charge, and a light line was taken to the Loria. The placing of a hawser on board was accomplished with no little difficulty, as a heavy sea was running at the time. The job was done, however, and the disabled schooner was soon taken in tow. The Dorin, which reported being 111 days from Penarth, Wales, bound to St. Pierre with a cargo of liquor on board, had part of her sails blown away, her foremast under a physician's care. The Dorin was previously reported in distress by the steamship Murillo, which was bound South, and two steamers had been sent out from Halifax to search for her. She is practically a new vessel according to Capt. James, and is built of steel and is 406 tons gross. She is at present being held at Halifax by the Customs authorities pending instructions from Ottawa.

CORRECTION.—In yesterday's article "There were three Haldees" by Mr. H. F. Shortis the misspelling of a line caused confusion of sense. From line 47, on, should read, "But here is another bit of information for my friend, Mr. Tucker. There was a third vessel called the Haldee," but that was in the early fifties of the past century.

THEY CAME BACK. "You say these watches cost you $5, and you'll sell them for 4s. 6d. where do you get your profit?" Jeweller: "By repairing them."

Chinese Murder Trial.

The King vs. Wo Fen Game.

(Yesterday afternoon.)
On the resumption of the murder trial yesterday afternoon, Charles Dean, who had been on the witness stand in the forenoon was recalled and cross-examined by Mr. Emerson. The witness first gave his Chinese name and then said his name in this country was Charles Dean.

Mr. Emerson—"Do you belong to the same tribe or family as the men who were killed?"

Witness—"Yes."

Mr. Emerson—"Did you tell that at the Magisterial enquiry?"

Witness—"No I was not asked."

Mr. Emerson—"Do you know all the members of the Hong family?"

Witness—"No."

Mr. Emerson—"Did you know Hong Leon, Hong Kim Hi and So Ho Ki and Hong Wing?"

Witness—"Yes, I knew them."

Mr. Emerson—"Did you see Hong Wing after he was wounded?"

Witness—"Yes, I saw him in the bed. I spoke to him. He said Wo Fen Game came in and shot me."

Mr. Emerson—"Do you speak English the best of any of the Hong tribe here?"

Witness—"I cannot say."

Mr. Emerson—"Since the murders have you been very interested on behalf of the Hong Clan?"

Witness—"I have never since the preliminary enquiry, that was all. I was interpreter then, and when this court had official interpreter, Hong Wing and Hong Yuen came and asked me to be interpreter for them to their lawyer."

Mr. Emerson—"Were you ever at a preliminary enquiry before the one held at the Magistrates Court?"

Witness—"Yes, in Canada."

Mr. Emerson—"What did you tell the prisoner?"

Witness—"I told him it was not his trial."

Mr. Emerson—"You did not tell him he was sentenced by Judge Morris to be hanged did you?"

Witness—"I did not. He asked me several times if he was being tried. I told him several times no."

Mr. Emerson—"Did you explain to prisoner the difference between a trial and a preliminary trial?"

Witness—"I told him everything. I told him it was enquiry."

Mr. Emerson—"Do you have enquiries like we have here in China?"

Witness—"There was in my day there. It was the same as here."

Mr. Emerson—"Did you ever attend one there?"

Witness—"No."

Mr. Emerson—"How then do you know of them?"

Witness—"Someone told me. I left China when I was ten years old."

Mr. Emerson raised objection to the statement of the prisoner made at the preliminary enquiry being put in evidence. On the ground that it was a first requisite that the prisoner should know and understand his position and the procedure. He should know that he was not under obligation to make a statement. His cross-examination had shown that the procedure was not according to the evidence previously given. Mr. Emerson submitted that it seemed clear that the prisoner did not understand that he was not then on his trial, and, therefore the onus was on the prosecution to prove that the prisoner was not ignorant of the procedure. A further reason for his objection, he said, was because many of the Crown witnesses and the official interpreter, Charles Dean, and the men who were killed were of the one family or clan and further, he submitted, that Charles Dean did not understand the position in which the prisoner was placed. His second grounds for objection was that the statutory requirements of the act of 1848 had not been complied with. In the preliminary enquiry, he submitted, that the provisions of the act were not complied with.

Mr. Winter in reply stated that it was his first desire that justice should be done, and if the objection raised goes to the root of the matter he had nothing to say, but he thought that it did not make the slightest difference because the evidence of the witnesses was read over once instead of twice, since the prisoner was apparently anxious to make a statement. The sections of the law referred to by the counsel for the defence were here read, and the judges retired to give the arguments of counsel consideration. After about one hour's deliberation the court resumed, when the Chief Justice announced that the statement would be admitted.

His Lordship said the fact that all depositions were not together read over to accused does not render the statement inadmissible.

The following statements were then put in evidence by Mr. Winter:—

STATEMENT MADE BY ACCUSED AT PRELIMINARY ENQUIRY. (4)

Last Christmas I gave some money to Hong Kim amounting to about $50.00 in Chinese currency to send home to parents and Hong Kim did not send it for me and gave it back to me again. Eye and eye Hong Kim said to me someone else sending the money for me. This the now started between me and Hong Kim first and Hong Kim discharged me from the work and I remained going to work in laundry. One or two weeks later Hong Kim, Hong Leon and So Ho Ki said to me I was going to get a company and open a laundry shop beside them. I said no. I had no money to me to take all my clothes and what money I gave him amounting to $50. I was cold and not sufficient clothes on me and So Ho Ki and Hong Leon told Hong Kim to keep my clothes and let me go away and starve myself. Hong Kim said nothing. That night in bed hours they had a conversation said they would kill me some day if not said I go get a company open laundry alongside me. After that I never said anything. They never spoke to me. On May 3rd I bought a pistol. What I did to Hong Kim, Hong Leon, So Ho Ki on that night because they said they would kill me before and then three you don't suit us, we suit you with man on Casey Street laundry, Hong Wing, and I said to them why shoot me and then them three start to shoot me and I shoot them first. That is all I have to say. (Sgd.) WO FEN GAME.

STATEMENT MADE BY ACCUSED AT PRELIMINARY ENQUIRY. (5)

Before that Hong Kim, my brother-in-law, sent word home to China for me to come to Newfoundland and said on letter the wages are $12.00 a week, then after two or three months increased wages between $15.00 and $16.00 a week. I took his word and came to Newfoundland. My salary in China was $8.00 a week. I landed in Newfoundland in his place worked for him two or three weeks and he had no wages to pay me for two or three weeks on account of I not know how to work. Then on four weeks he paid me $4.00. Then I asked Hong Kim what he $4.00 for. Hong Kim said for my wages. I never said anything since then doing my work just like the same. Three months later I asked Hong Kim not enough wages for me to pay interest and Hong Kim replied I will increase your wages in Christmas time. Then the row start near Christmas. During that time he did not increase my salary. I said nothing. They said between three dead ones and Hong Wing spoke about to murder me. Hong Wing's wife is my cousin. Hong Wing's boy in China went out to my place in China and had a quarrel and mentioned about an old time enemy and I was not at home at that time. I was in France but because I shot them three and Hong Wing on account of that quarrel they went to shoot me, and then I shoot them first—Hong Kim, Hong Leon, So Ho Ki and Hong Wing. That quarrel in China I know nothing about. I was at that time in France. It was when I came to Newfoundland that I heard about it. That is all. (Sgd.) WO FEN GAME.

Two translations of the letter which Mr. Winter wrote to his cousin at the King Cafe were then put in evidence by the Prosecutor. There has been various translations of this letter, but those made by interpreter Hart from the readings by Charles Dean and Kim Lee were accepted by the court. They were practically identical, and that admitted as evidence is as follows:—

TRANSLATION OF LETTER FROM WO FEN GAME.

Honorable Brother Fon Chuk: I wish you all prosperity and good luck here. The affair last night I was responsible. I did not intend to kill my brother-in-law but he embraced me and the gun went off accidentally. I am sorry, very sorry. I want to work but Ah Leon would not let me but told me to pack my blanket if not he and Wov Wing will kill me soon (tomorrow).

CONCERT AND PANTOMIME.

Last evening an enjoyable entertainment was given at No. 1 Citadel, by a number of Cadets assisted by the Life Saving Guards. The affair was presided over by the Territorial Commandant, Colonel T. Hurd of Canada.

The programme consisted of choruses by the Cadets, recitations by Cadets Morris, Goulding, Snow, Peters, Reid, Martin, and by Ruby Sainsbury; Club evening by No. 2 Guards and Cadet Hewitt; Action Song and riddle drill by the Life Saving Guards; Violin solo by Cadet Snow; Vocal solo by Cadet James; and selections by the Band, a pantomime, "Ten Virgins," was also rendered.  Inspired by his sister's remarkable work as a star, George has careered himself for a career in the silent drama. Heretofore he has played only minor parts in cinema pictures. George Stewart's growth and progress, however, under the observation of Director Ingram, who decided that he was an ideal lead for Mrs. Anita's new photoplay.
 Mr. Ingram was not misled by the declarations of those who have seen a preview of "Dad," which they declare not to represent the best work yet shown by Mrs. Chaplin, but also the growing Stewart as an actor of dramatic ability.
 The members of Mrs. Chaplin's cast are John Salmoris, John Stuchman, Irving Cummings, Edwell Brown, Loyola, Jess Mitchell and Tula

MISS MAJOR IN A TOE DANCE--WILLIAM S. HART, IN O'MALLEY OF THE MOUNTED.
 The Canadian Mounted Police are noted for their doggedness. It is a trite saying that they never give up once they are on a trail and that the fugitive might as well surrender for he hasn't a chance of escape. This forms the story of O'Malley of the Mounted, in which this great Western actor plays the leading part, and in which he is assisted by a role of well known stars, headed by Eva Novak.
 Such a story cannot fail to compel the interest of the public which delights in deeds of heroism and romantic adventure in the wilderness country. Add to this the complete Western "rodeo" or congress of wild riders, ropers and experts of the wild regions, and you have a combination that is irresistible. With this big picture, Miss Major, will give an exhibition of Toe Dancing, and as this lady has already demonstrated her ability as a dancer, in this exhibition she will no doubt add new laurels to her reputation. Don't fail to see her to-night for as it is so trying it will be the first and only time she will perform this class of dancing during her engagement.

Green's Harbor Notes.

We extend a hearty welcome to our new incumbent, Rev. S. A. Dawson, who officiated at St. Matthew's Church on Sunday last.
 Miss M. Maddock, B.A., of Carbon-ear, is at present visiting Green's Harbor, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Cram.
 We are very sorry indeed to record the removal of Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Brown and family to St. John's. Having spent so many years here, their going is a real loss to the community.
 Glad to welcome Mr. and Mrs. B. Reid, who have been visiting relatives here for the past month. They leave enroute to Canada on to-morrow's train.
 Miss M. Green returned from the General Hospital on Monday (30th). We trust that she will soon be quite well again.
 Halloween night was the occasion of a delightful little party, given by Mrs. P. Harrum to several young folks. We were glad to see Miss M. Sharpe from Blaketown made one of the number.
 The C.E. children gave a concert in their schoolroom on the night of Nov. 16th. Despite the fact that the weather was disagreeable, the room was crowded, and the affair was voted a high success. The children did remarkably well and their teacher, Miss E. G. Sharpe is to be congratulated.—COR.

Chinese Murder Trial.

FIFTH DAY'S HEARING.

(Morning Session.)
Mr. L. E. Emerson opened his defence this morning at 11 o'clock. The attendance at Court was larger than has been since the opening of the trial. At to-day's proceedings the benches were crowded and several ladies occupied seats in the gallery.

PRISONER'S OWN STORY.
Following the roll call, the prisoner Wo Fen Game was placed on the witness stand. As he was being escorted to the box by two constables he trembled like a leaf. He did not appear able to stand erect, and all through the hearing he leaned limply across the rail. After the oath was administered the prisoner was questioned through interpreter Hart in part as follows:—

Mr. Emerson—"Where did you come from?"
Witness—"Ti Lung Village."
Mr. Emerson—"How old are you?"
Witness—"31 years."
Mr. Emerson—"How long did you spend outside China?"
Witness—"I was two years in France, and am three years in Newfoundland."
Mr. Emerson—"What were you doing in France?"
Witness—"I was a member of the Chinese Labor Battalion."
Mr. Emerson—"Did you return to China from there?"
Witness—"Yes, and came to Newfoundland in 1921."
Mr. Emerson—"How did you come here?"

Witness—"My brother-in-law, Hong Kim Hi, sent for me."
Mr. Emerson—"How long has your sister been married to Hong Kim Hi?"
Witness—"About 14 or 15 years. He came from Ti Lung Village."
Mr. Emerson—"Was Hong Kim Hi ever in your village?"

Witness—"No."
Mr. Emerson—"Why not?"
Witness—"Because he had his business to attend to, and besides the people of Ti Lung Village are not on friendly terms with the people of our village."
Mr. Emerson—"Did Hong Kim Hi send for you by letter?"
Witness—"Yes; he sent money to bring me here. It was agreed I was to receive $12 per week. In China I received $8.10 per week."
Mr. Emerson—"What does Hong mean?"

Witness—"The Hong are of the same family or clan."
Mr. Emerson—"How is it that your name is Wo Fen Game?"
Witness—"The name was given me here by Kim Lee. My name in China is Wo Kon Gen."
Mr. Emerson—"How many of you left China to come here?"
Witness—"When I left China there were six in the party; we travelled together."
Mr. Emerson—"When you went to work at the Murray Street laundry what wages did they give you?"

Witness—"They did not pay me anything for the first four weeks; then they gave me $4. Hong Kim Hi said they would not pay me more, as I was not used to the work."
Mr. Emerson—"Did you complain of the wages?"
Witness—"Yes. A few days after receiving the $4 I said to Hong Leon and the others that the wages were not sufficient. They said they would talk it over and increase it at Christmas. They did not do so."
Mr. Emerson—"When you could not get more wages, why did you not leave the Jim Lee laundry?"

Witness—"I would not be taken on at the other laundries, it being the custom that the people who brought me here should have my services first."
Mr. Emerson—"Did you leave work at the Jim Lee laundry at any time?"
Witness—"No, but last winter they fired me, but afterwards called me back. I tried to find employment elsewhere, but they all said Kim Hi spent money on my behalf and they would not do anything for me."
Mr. Emerson—"What hours of work had you at the Jim Lee laundry?"
Witness—"No specified hours. I had to work day and night."
Mr. Emerson—"Did you save any money out of your wages?"

Witness—"Yes, I sent about $115 Chinese currency, or a little less than $80 Nfd. money home."
Mr. Emerson—"Are you married?"
Witness—"Yes, I have a wife and a daughter living in China."
Mr. Emerson—"Do you remember April of last year?"
Witness—"Yes, I was sick then; it was about the middle of the month. I was sick for three weeks."
Mr. Emerson—"Did Hong Leon, Hong Kim Hi and So Ho Ki know you were sick?"

Witness—"Yes, I told them so, but I had to work all the same. I did not have the money to buy medicine; they never gave me any, although I asked them. I went to the laundry in Cochran Street to get some Chinese medicine that one of the men, who had recently returned from home brought with him. I was told the medicine was all used up."
Mr. Emerson—"Do you remember the Saturday before the shooting?"
Witness—"Yes, on that night I was not feeling well. At the laundry a customer came in, Hong Leon told me to attend to him. I was sick and went to bed. Hong Kim Hi who was outside, smoking opium, came up to my room and asked me what was the matter. I said I was sick. He said I must go to work. When I got up the next morning I made my bed and went down stairs. It was Sunday. Hong Leon was counting his money. When I looked at him he said I was trying to pry into his business. He was vexed with me. After that I cooked my dinner, and in the evening went to Sunday School. Later I went to the King Cafe for a talk. I afterwards came home and prepared my own supper, then went out again to New Dover Street. On Monday at 7 o'clock I got up out of bed and after getting my meal prepared to go to work. That evening Hong Leon went out, but returned at 4 o'clock. He scolded me and asked why I did so little work. I kept on working until 2 a.m. Tuesday. Then I went to bed and got up again at 7 o'clock next morning. The three members of the laundry then told me they were not required, but I continued at work when Hong Leon pushed me and said I would have to pack my blankets as Mr. Wong would know me in the morning."

Mr. Emerson—"Was that the first time killing was mentioned?"
Witness—"No; the first time it was mentioned was last year shortly after my return from China. Mow Wing visited our laundry, he said that owing to the state of affairs in China he would some day have to kill me. I said affairs in China should not be brought here. That in this country we should all be friends. Mow Wing did not reply but joined the other members in conversation. I overheard Mow Wing say that differences between their family and mine were as bad as ever, and it was up to them to kill me as I was their enemy. I asked him if he meant what he said. Mow Wing replied Yes, but the day was not set."
Mr. Emerson—"Was the mention of killing heard on any other occasion?"

Witness—"No; but shortly after I asked Hong Wing if his son went to China would he take two pairs of scissors home to my wife, and a pen-knife and a plug of tobacco to my father. He said he would not oblige me. He scolded me and said some day his father would have to kill me. I answered I knew nothing about affairs at home."
Mr. Emerson—"Did you hear of other threats?"
Witness—"Yes; last Christmas Hong Leon and So Ho Ki said they heard that I said I was going to open an opposition laundry. They said if I did it they would have to kill me. I said they were wrong as I had not any means, and could not start a laundry. This was the third occasion they threatened me."
Mr. Emerson—"Were there any guns or revolvers kept at Murray Street laundry?"
Witness—"Yes; they had three. Hong Leon kept one there for a while and then sent it to his brother-in-law at Caser Street. Kim Hi always kept his revolver there and every week he would take it out and play with the trigger. (At this point the witness said in evidence and the prisoner said it belonged to Kim Hi.)

Witness—"Hong Leon said that he had a revolver and was going to kill me in the morning. I afterwards sat down and had one of my meals. I went out and bought a pair of boots and a hat. I returned to Murray St. laundry and they refused to give me work. I then went to the King Cafe and spent the afternoon there. I returned and went to bed. On Wednesday I got down at 8 o'clock and went to work. The others went out to collect laundry and left me alone. Hong Leon returned in fifteen minutes. I spoke and asked for work. He refused. The others came and they all refused and said I had to go. I said if they decided to send me from the laundry it was up to Hong Kim Hi to send me back to China. At one o'clock I went to the King Cafe. They were surprised I was not working, and asked me why. My classmate spoke to Charles Fong and asked him to go up to the Murray Street laundry on my behalf. After that I went into Murray Street to buy a revolver."
Mr. Emerson—"Was that the first time you went to purchase a revolver?"
Witness—"No, on Tuesday I went in but did not have enough money."
Mr. Emerson—"What happened next?"
Witness—"Charles Fong returned from the laundry and said there was no work for me. I then borrowed $1.50 from him as I had none and was out of work."
Mr. Emerson—"Why did you buy the revolver?"
Witness—"Because I heard Hong Leon say they had decided to kill me."
Mr. Emerson—"Where did you go after buying the revolver?"
Witness—"I returned to the King Cafe, and at 4 o'clock went to the Murray St. laundry."
Mr. Emerson—"What occurred afterwards?"
Witness—"I went upstairs, loaded my revolver and put it under my pillow. I came down and tried to go to work but they prevented me. I mentioned again that Kim Hi brought me to this country and should use his influence to keep me at work. I then went to the corner of the room and sat down and cried. It was then I heard Hong Leon say it was about a nice time to kill me. So Ho Ki said he thought it would be better to wait till night, and get Hong Wing there. I went then to Hong Leon and asked if he meant to kill me. He struggled with me and tore my coat."
(The coat was put in evidence and showed a torn collar.)
Mr. Emerson—"What was done then?"
Witness—"I went upstairs, got my revolver. Hong Leon followed me. I ran at full speed and returning half way down the stairs I met him and fired. Hong Leon then ran out of doors. So Ho Ki came to me, he embraced me, that is he put his arms around my waist. I believe with the intention of killing me."
Mr. Emerson—"Why did you not run out of the laundry instead of going upstairs?"
Witness—"I don't know. At that moment I was mad my heart went cold. I fully believed they would have killed me."
Mr. Emerson—"After shooting So Ki what did you do?"
Witness—"I went to the Casey St. laundry to get Hong Wing, and after getting him I turned the revolver on myself. I then ran to get into some Strange Tales of The Bank of England.

An Article of Absorbing Interest in Which is Related Many of the Romantic Episodes in the History of England's Famous Bank.

(Casell's Magazine.)
There is no institution that has more romance attached to it than the Bank of England. It has been nearly ruined on several occasions, it has been beset with thieves—its gold and silver stores have been robbed of over £1,000,000 thirty years ago—forgery and frauds have been practised upon it by the most accomplished criminals in history, and yet "safe as the Bank of England" is a saying which, in spite of the institution's ups and downs, is true to the letter, for only on one occasion has public confidence in the bank been shaken.

Saved by a Ruse.
Had it not been for a very smart ruse on the part of one of the directors the Bank of England would have smashed over a century ago, and if this had happened national confidence in the institution would have vanished. This is what happened. A panic sprang up among bank-note holders, a panic that spread and spread before anyone was aware of what was happening. There was apparently no reason for it beyond the fact that those were turbulent times.

One morning, just after the bank opened, an angry excited crowd thronged the street demanding cash for notes. There was actually double the money in notes in the hands of the mobs to what there was gold in the bank, and the outlook was a bad one. Gold had to be in to pay off every claimant, but that took time. So the directors sent men with notes into the crowd, whose claims they attended to first, and paid such claim in sixpence and shillings. Some men walked away with a sack of shillings over their backs, but the time gained by this method of payment saved the bank, and every claim was paid.

After this the bank decided to reassure its depositors by displaying in the bank windows and near the cashiers' desks sacks flowing with sovereigns, but the public did not know that the sacks were full of coal with only a layer of sovereigns on top!

HOW THE BANK FOUGHT A FORGER.
The man who gave the bank most trouble was one named Charles Price, and he was given the nickname of "Old Patch" because he often wore a black patch over his right eye for no reason than as a disguise. He was one of the finest engravers in the world, beating even the bank engravers. He put forged notes into circulation with surprising skill, and a battle royal began between him and the authorities of the bank.

Had he not been a master of disguise he would have been caught long before he was, but he managed to swindle the bank out of more than £200,000 before he slipped into the were staggered at receiving a box in which lay several of the most priceless securities from the bank vaults, and enclosed was a note saying that if the directors would send a man to the vaults at midnight on the same day the writer would meet him there after having broken in from outside.

Accordingly three men went down into the vaults with lanterns at midnight and waited. Presently they heard a scraping noise, and a light appeared at one end of the vaults, which vanished, however, on their approach. Then a man's voice, coming, it seemed, from right under their feet, told them to put out their lanterns and he would appear. They did so with some trepidation, and carrying a dark lantern he came on the scene. He explained that he was a sewer cleaner, and had discovered a disused drain which he found ran right into the bank vaults. He had stolen nothing, so the bank gave him a reward, which it was whispered ran into thousands, for his honesty.

THE BANK'S SECRET WATCHERS.

When you enter the bank by any door four pairs of eyes watch you, though you are unaware of this fact. Situated close to the doors are hiding-places in which are four guardians of the bank. You cannot see them, but they can watch you with the aid of reflecting mirrors, in which they can see your entrance and exit and your every movement from the moment you enter the portals of wealth to the moment you leave them.

THE MOST SUCCESSFUL BANK THIEF.

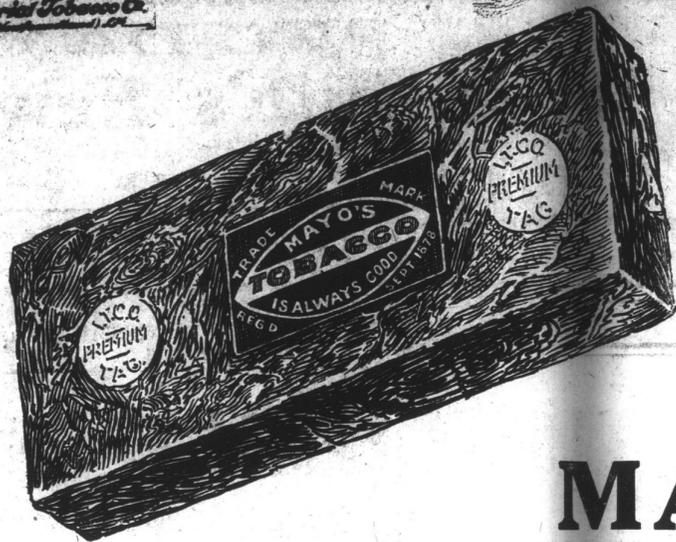

The most successful thief the bank ever had to deal with was Bidwell, an American, who arrived here with his gang in 1871. He distributed his agents all over the country, buying up genuine bills that could be manipulated, and then paid into the bank a bona fide bill of Rothschild's for £4,500, as he said he was going to start making Pullman cars in England. Following this he paid in forged bills to the value of over £102,000, and he paid the amounts to himself under the name of Warren at the Continental Bank. This great fraud might have gone on longer than it did had the delinquents not forgotten to put the dates on two of the bills, whereupon they were returned to Messrs. Rothschild for rectification. Then the fraud was discovered, and the thieves caught just as they were starting for the Continent with their spoil.

The site of the Bank of England is valued at £70,000 a year, the space occupied being about four acres. This sum, if capitalized at 3 per cent., the present bank rate, represents a gross value of £2,100,000, but this is almost certainly beneath the figure which those four acres would fetch if the freehold were sold outright.

The present buildings, with their wonderful vaults, their printing and weighing machines, are estimated as being worth something over half a million. Add to this the bullion coin, securities and unissued notes on the premises and you have a value of about 120 millions sterling heaped upon those four acres.

In its early days the Bank of England's total staff consisted of fifty clerks. Before the war the staff had risen to over fifteen hundred. It is managed by a governor, a deputy governor, and a board of twenty-four directors.

The foundations of the bank building is sixty-six feet below street level, a bed of concrete twenty feet thick. Above this concrete is a lake seven feet deep, and above that again thick plates of iron.

Anyone attempting entrance from above would find a similar bed of concrete, a similar reservoir, and similar plates of thick metal.

FORGERY AS A BUSINESS.

The first recorded forgery of Bank of England notes stands to the credit of—should one say rather—the discredit of a clerk called Vaughan, and occurred in the year 1758.

The odd side of the matter is that the offender seems to have committed the forgery rather as a matter of curiosity than of crime. He was showing a note to his lady love, and pointing out how easy it would be to copy it. It would appear that the lady dared him to copy it, whereupon he brought her a bundle of twenty counterfeit notes, and gave them to her. She promptly took them to the bank.

What happened to Vaughan is a matter "wropt in mysty." Some say he was hanged. At any rate, he never did it again.

Forty years later, in 1797, the bank began to issue pound notes, and then forgery became a regular business. Whereas during the previous six years there had been only one execution for forgery, during the next six there was no fewer than eighty-five.

Matters went from bad to worse, until in the year 1820 there were no fewer than three hundred and twenty convictions for forgery.

It was realized that the death penalty was useless, and on a petition signed by certain prominent men, it was finally abrogated.

STORMING THE BANK.

For many years, at the end of the eighteenth and the beginning of the nineteenth century, the bank's annual loss by forgeries amounted to many thousands yearly. The two greatest coups were those of Aslett, who, in the year 1803, secured no less than £342,000 by means of forged Exchange Bills, and of Fauntleroy the banker, who, in 1830, got away with £360,000 by cleverly forging powers of attorney for the sale of Consols.

Fauntleroy was hanged at Newgate. In the autumn of 1830 this country was in a very serious condition. Rioting was going on all over the home counties, and at night the countryside was lit by blazing ricks.

During the first week of November small bodies of armed men were slipping into London from Kent, and on the evening of the seventh a huge procession marched through the city, waving red flags and chanting the "Marseillaise."

Shops were quickly closed, the streets were barricaded. The bank set to work to make preparations for defence. Muskets were brought out, bayonets sharpened and stores of powder and bullets acquired. Bullets being somewhat scarce a quantity of old lead and pewter inkpots were melted down and cast into bullets. All the clerks were kept on the premises, and provisions stored for a siege.

THE LATEST ATTEMPT.

That an attack was planned upon the bank there is no doubt whatever, but the preparations averted the mob. They presently dispersed, troops cleared the streets, and the danger passed.

The only occasion upon which the bank was in real danger was in 1790, on the occasion of the so-called Gordon Riots.

Having stormed Newgate and released all the prisoners, the mob, thousands strong, marched on the bank. But the "Old Lady" was ready. The riots had already been in progress for twenty-four hours, and the bank authorities had utilized this breathing space to arm all their people.

As the mob marched up they were received by crashing volleys from invisible marksmen on the flat roof. Twice they broke and twice they reformed, rushing to the attack with savage cries.

Once more the bullets volleyed among them, and over a score fell

Educated to Sing Like Nightingales

BREMEN.—After 10 years of experiments, a Bremen bird fancier has succeeded in producing canaries with a nightingale warble. The cross-breed was attained by using nightingales as "singing masters" for young canaries, and rearing the latter entirely removed from the sound of any other bird note except the warbling of their "instructors." The breeder's chief difficulty was at first found in the fact that normally nightingales sing only during two months of the year, and his purposes required a longer uninterrupted period of instruction for the canaries. He was finally successful in changing the moulting, or non-singing, period of certain nightingales so that some sang from May to July, others from June to August, and still others from August to October. Using these birds he kept newly-hatched canaries continually within hearing of their warble. Several generations of breeding resulted that birds reared from the offspring of students instinctively possessed nightingale warble, and that "instructors" could be dispensed with the offspring except for "polishing their singing."

ANOTHER ONE.

The young wife came out of her pantry. "Jack," she called to her husband, "I want you to be sure and bring me a mouse trap home to-morrow."

"But, darling," said he, "I brought you one yesterday."

"I know, dear," called back the young bride, "but that one was ready."

Wedding Bells.

HARSANT-MILLER.
 A quiet wedding of much interest took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Miller, Dicks' Square, on Thursday evening at 6.30 o'clock, when Miss Jean G. Miller, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Miller became the bride of L. G. Harsant, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Harsant, of London, England. The ceremony was performed by Rev. R. E. Fairbairn, Pastor of George St. Methodist Church and only the immediate friends of the contrasting couple were present; due to the illness of Mrs. Miller, mother of the bride. The bride was given away by her father, and wore a green gown of Roshanara Crepe, while her sister, Mrs. Hubert J. LeMessurier, the matron of honor, wore a gown of black henna satin. The groom was supported by R. W. Miller, brother of the bride. The grooms gift to the bride was a fur coat, to the matron of honor, a gold wrist watch, and to the best man a silver calendar and ink stand. After the service the bridal couple motored to Donovans' where a wedding dinner was served by that well known hostelry and congratulations extended to the newly married couple. Mr. Frank Hamlin proposed the health of the bride, which was responded to by the groom, while Mr. R. W. Miller proposed the health of the matron of honor. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful and useful gifts, including cheques, gold pieces, cut glass, silver and linen. Following the pleasant evening spent at Donovans, the happy couple left by automobile for Torbay where the honeymoon will be spent. Upon their return to the city they will reside at Robinson's Hill. The Telegram joins with their numerous friends in extending to the happy couple many happy years of wedded bliss.

Chinese Murder Trial.

 of my friends, but only got as far as the door."
 "Mr. Emerson—"After you fell what happened?"
 "Witness—"Yes, I also told about Hong Leon attacking me and tearing my coat."
 Cross-examined by Mr. Winter began at noon. In answer to the questions prisoner said his father was alive and one of his father's wives was dead, but the other was living. His sister was married in Ti Lang village to Hong Kim, whilst there was a feud on. This feud began about 120 years ago. My father arranged the marriage. It was made possible whilst the feud was going on because in our country women are not counted very much. The threat of Hong Wing to kill him was a result of the feud, but Hong Wing was not intimidated by anybody, but he said that it was his duty to kill him as the people at home were killing each other."
 "Mr. Winter—"Are there any other people from your village here?"
 "Witness—"Yes, only three. Two of them are in the King Cafe. Charles Fong is the manager of this Cafe. He belongs to the Fong tribe. It is not my tribe, nor is it the Hong tribe."
 "Witness—"Do not remember anything until I was taken to Hospital."
 "Mr. Emerson—"How long were you in Hospital?"
 "Mr. Emerson—"Do you remember writing a letter?"
 "Witness—"Yes, I wanted to write to my mother in the King Cafe, telling him I was about to die, so that he would write and tell all to my wife."
 "Mr. Emerson—"Was what happened at the enquiry told you?"
 "Witness—"Yes, Charles Dean told me it was a preliminary enquiry, and then I was going to go to the Supreme Court when I would be told I would hang. The first time I knew I was not being tried was when Mr. Emerson and Kim Lee visited me at Hospital."
 "Mr. Emerson—"Did you tell the story to Charles Dean as you told it in court this morning?"
 "Prosecutor—"Are the Hongs and Tong friends?"
 "Witness—"I cannot say."
 "Prosecutor—"Was there any talk of killing the others who are in the King Cafe?"
 "Witness—"At the time the two at the King Cafe were recent arrivals and nothing was said then."
 "Prosecutor—"Was there any ill feeling between the villages when you were home?"
 "Witness—"When I was at home things were very quiet. I was working before going to the village for a few weeks at the dock in Hong Kong."
 "Prosecutor—"When you were first threatened did you not tell the others?"
 "Witness—"No, I did not because I did not want to frighten them. I was frightened, but did not tell the police, because I did not know how to speak English well enough. All the people here knew of the feud between the families at home and they did not want to interfere."
 "Prosecutor—"Did you ask Kim Lee if these 4 men were going to kill you?"
 "Witness—"No."
DRAMATIC CLIMAX—PRISONER COLLAPSES.
 Before the cross-examination was completed, the prisoner collapsed in a heap in the witness box. Dr. Murphy was called and injected morphine. The doctor stated that the prisoner is suffering from nervous

Protest Against Swarm of Officials.

VIENNA.—When the new boundary line was drawn between Austria and Hungary last summer the little Burgenland watering place of Sauerbrunn, not far from Vienna, fell to Austria. Now its inhabitants have petitioned the Austrian government for relief from the burden of officials thrown upon them. They state that under Hungarian rule one official administered the commune, while now they have 500 Austrian officials and their families as rulers. They declare that these officials have requisitioned the hotels and many villages and while formerly the resort averaged 8,000 visitors every season, this summer it had only a few hundred.

A Clerical Granny.

The Christian World of London is authority for the statement that a mother with an infant a few weeks old recently entered one of the English churches as a guest at a wedding. The babe had neither hat nor bonnet on and before the ceremony began, the clergyman sent the church warden to inquire whether the child was a boy or a girl. If a girl, the babe must be removed at once, as the church forbade a woman to be in the church with head uncovered.

Guns of Clay.

Some time in the next fifty years a great change is to take place in the manufacture of guns, ships, buildings, and so on, according to the Head Research Engineer of the greatest steel firm in the world, the Carnegie Steel Company of America.

He says that common clay will be used to make all those things which are made of steel to-day.
 Clay contains iron, aluminium and a substance known as "silicon"; and it can be made as hard and as useful as steel, when dealt with in the right way, which is by using oxygen. The price of this gas makes this process impossible for the present.

When clay is used, ten-inch guns will be fired by four or five men, as they will weigh no more than a large log of wood; and buildings will be made with girders that are no heavier than bamboo poles.
 Clay has another advantage over steel—it does not rust.

SIDE TALKS.

By Ruth Cameron.

CAN YOU BELIEVE IT?

Some people make me tired. (Of course I know I probably have the same effect on some people.) The particular some people I am thinking of to-day are the people who find some small evil in some big good and go about panning the good because of that inevitable medium of evil. I won't blame you if you refuse to believe what I am going to say next. It is true but so incredible that I am hardly sure I believe it myself. A man once wrote me asking me to say something in condemnation of the scout movement!

Yes, actually! Behind A Million Ears. Asked me to condemn the movement that has made millions of boys wash behind their ears when no argument on mothers' or fathers' part could push the water line back that far.

Asked me to condemn the movement that has made millions of boys believe that cleanliness of mind and body and speech, instead of the reverse is mandatory.

Asked me to condemn the movement that has taught boys all the fine helpful joys of woodcraft.

Asked me to condemn the movement that has stood for manners and civility and good citizenship and honor and integrity, and yet managed not to frighten away with fear of ploy or priggishness that shyest of all creatures where such things are concerned—the growing boy. I don't believe there are many people in the world—no rulers, nor inventors, nor statesmen—whose labors will bear any more good for the human race than the labors and visions of those who founded the boy scout movement.

That's my condemnation of the boy scout movement. Playgrounds, Too! And just the other day I was asked to write against playgrounds because the writer who lived next door to one had seen some unfortunate things take place for lack of proper supervision. If there had been no playground she would doubtless not have seen whatever it was that took place because it would have taken place in a vacant lot or a dark alley. And probably such things would have taken place ten times as often because where there is a lack of healthy happy normal amusements such as the playground supplies, the void is filled in some less desirable way.

Just Want to be Different. I suspect that in this particular case the fact that she lived next door to the playground supplied some of her moral indignation.

But in most of the cases where people shut their eyes to a big good and inveigh against a minor evil, I should say it was a case of moral astigmatism. Or perhaps just of wanting to be different and not approve of things others approve of.

Some people make me tired. And even if I do have the same effect on them I don't seem to care very much.

Household Hints.

Mashed parsnip balls are delicious. Dip them in egg and crumbs, fry in hot fat and sprinkle with finely chopped parsley.

Canned pears, drained and sprinkled with grated cheese, are delicious served on crisp lettuce leaves with mayonnaise.

Now that the weather is cold, be sure to keep a jar of hand lotion or cold cream above the kitchen sink and apply frequently.

Polished furniture should be wiped off twice a year with a cloth wrung out in warm soapy water. Polish with a dry cloth.

Bake sponge cake in a round pudding pan, placing a cup in the centre to form a hollow. Fill with sugared fruit and top with whipped cream.

Garnish squash and tomato soup with cheese balls made with fine crumbs and grated cheese moistened with beaten egg and fried until brown.

To make a good "bean roll," put one pound cooked beans through the meat grinder; mix with half pound cheese, breadcrumbs and salt. Make into roll and bake.

Desolation Island Objective of Small Hunters.

PARIS—Kerguelen Land or Desolation Island, in the Indian Ocean halfway between South Africa and Australia, is soon to have one of its infrequent visits from the white man. A French expedition now being organized for a six months stay, bent on making the biggest possible killing of sea-elephants and sea-leopards, two types of large seals found in those waters. Opposition to the trip has developed among humanitarians and scientists, for the sea-elephant in particular faces extinction. The last expedition in 1908 killed 2,248 sea-elephants in ten days' work, and brought back 150 tons of valuable oil. Kerguelen Land has a curious history. Captain Cook, the British navigator, while cruising in the Antarctic Sea suddenly came upon this dreary island, covered with moss and unproductive, although long thought to be underlaid with coal-beds. He landed and was about to take possession of it in the name of his King, when he found a French flag flying, raised by De Kerguelen shortly before, probably about 1772. The British sailor swallowed his disappointment and in his log-book recorded only that he had landed on "Desolation Island," ignoring the Frenchman's visit. Years later an inquiry reached the French naval office, asking for information about the island of Kerguelen. The naval department searched its records, high and low, but found nothing. The question was referred to the British Admiralty with a request for an answer, which came in a few days. The island was identified by the British as the one registered on French charts as Desolation Island. American whalers visited the island early in the 18th century, for old blubber stations with cauldrons marked "New London" were found there in 1828.

Divorce and Prohibition Denounced.

(From The Catholic Register) A warning against the marked increase in the number of divorces throughout the world, coupled with a denunciation of the principle back of prohibition legislation, was sounded in New York by the Most Rev. James Duhig, Archbishop of Brisbane, Australia, on his way home after a visit to Europe. "A tremendous social and moral danger in our day is the loosening of the marriage tie," he declared. "Divorce is becoming shockingly common in most countries. The very facility with which it is obtained encourages people to contract marriage lightly. What I mean is the divorce law is much more frequently a road to freedom for the ill-disposed than for the oppressed." Prohibition is wrong, the Archbishop declared, because: "You cannot make men sober by act of Parliament. Australia was amazed at America going dry," he said. "What we need is a reasonable control of the liquor trade, not its total abolition. Extremes are always dangerous and I consider prohibition an extreme course."

Compliments the Senate.

"Another reason why I want Edwards in Washington is because it is so damn lonesome in the Senate fighting prohibition."—Senator Stanley in the Democratic mass meeting in Krueger's Auditorium, Newark, N. J.

Honest confession is good for the soul. A booze pleader in the United States Congress is a lonesome figure, and whether Senator Stanley intended it as such or not, the fact is that the statement above credited to him is a high compliment to the character of the Senate.

Halifax, N.S. Minard's Liniment Co., Ltd. Gentlemen—have found Minard's Liniment and have found it a good remedy. After the explosion I was pretty well shaken up having quite a number of bruises and cuts, but thanks to Minard's Liniment I am my old self again. It healed the sores and bruises and gave me much relief. It is true to its name as the King of Pain, for it stopped the pain almost at once. I first noticed the ad in the Montreal Standard and decided to invest in a bottle, for which I am not sorry, but can say with truth that I am thankful for it having done all it claimed to do, and in my case much more, and a satisfied customer is the best ad one can possibly find. That is my view of it and I think you will agree with me too. Yours very truly, (Signed) ALFRED BLAIN, 184 Agricola St., Halifax, N.S.

Municipal Council.

WEEKLY MEETING.

The weekly meeting of the Municipal Council was held yesterday afternoon. Mayor Cook presided and Councillors Martin, Vincicombe, Collier, Ryan and Dowden were present. The chairman of Schools Benevolent Irish Society called attention to the necessity of having repairs made to the retaining wall on Queen's Rd. Owing to the lateness of the season, the Council cannot have this attended to, and the matter was therefore ordered deferred until the spring. A number of applicants were received for positions in connection with the Sanitary Department. As there are no vacancies, the applications were ordered placed on file.

Mr. F. W. Smeaton complained of the unsanitary condition of McKay Street. The matter was referred to the Sanitary Supervisor, who will give some attention.

Mr. James J. Phelan asked permission to erect carriage shed Merrymount Road. As the plan submitted shows the building will be extended to and have a frontage on Summer Street, the matter was referred to a special meeting, as there is likelihood of objections being raised by adjoining property owners.

Mr. H. Adey will be given permission to erect garage, rear of residence, Cornwall Avenue, provided he installs ventilator in the building.

The Engineer submitted a report of work done in connection with the various departments for the past week; also a list of pressure taken since the alteration of the high and low level service, which showed an increase of from ten to fifteen pounds all over the higher levels. The Central Fire Hall pressure gauge registered 80 to 85 lbs. He also reported on estimate of cost for water and sewerage connections for the Battery Road. A further report on the matter was requested. The Council, in any case, can do nothing in the way of improvements, owing to the advanced season of the year.

The report of the Health Officer for the past week showed two new cases of Diphtheria, six of Scarlet Fever, and two of Typhoid.

The Engineer submitted a showing area required to widen the "Blind Corner" at junction of Mundy Pond and LeMarchant Street, and a plan for further improvement of the line of the Waterford Bridge.

Both matters are to be left in the hands of the City clerk to attend with the owners re expropriation. Departmental reports for the week were tabled; accounts presented and paid, after which the Council adjourned.

"Britain's Shield"

IS A WONDERFUL NAVAL DISPLAY
One of the most wonderful naval displays ever shown upon the screen is without a doubt the picture, "The Empire's Shield," which opens at the Majestic Theatre Monday.
Lieut. Edwin Smith, R.N.V.R., who is in charge of the picture, will lecture and explain in simple but forceful language many points of the production not apparent at first glance to the layman.
British men-of-war of all descriptions are shown under actual war service conditions, films having been taken as official Admiralty pictures for the war office library.
It is next to impossible to describe the grandeur of the massed feet actions displayed, but some idea of the thrill can be given by stating that wherever this picture was shown frequent and enthusiastic bursts of applause marked the progress of the film.
In addition to the famous warships of the Empire are shown, wonderful stunts of the Royal Naval Air Service and other branches of the Empire forces during the war.
The thrilling effect of the film itself will be heightened by the special orchestra programme, which includes "Rule Britannia" and other familiar British sea tunes.
DIDN'T SLEEP QUICK ENOUGH.
The mistress was reproving the new maid for being late in the morning. "Don't let it happen again," she said firmly. "I suppose you've slept your self?"
"You see, it's this way, ma'am," the girl said: "I'm a slow sleeper, so it takes me a very long while to get a good night's rest!"

Conference.
LAUSANNE, Nov. 12. (Associated Press.) The complicated Near East problem which constitutes perhaps the most important remaining in the political arena, is to have a diplomatic gathering of the importance beginning here to-day, which may continue for several weeks. Invitations to the conference, which has come to be known as the Near East Peace Conference, were issued in the names of Great Britain, France and Italy to the governments of Japan, Rumania, Jugoslavia, Greece, Turkey and the United States. The same governments also invited Bulgaria to send representatives here "at a later date." In discussions in the conference, the most important subjects on the agenda. Primarily, the plenipotentiaries will seek to end the war between the Near East between the Greeks and the Turks, which has been simmering at times assuming more serious proportions, ever since the treaty of 1920 informed the world his presence was no longer needed in Europe. Actual military operations, in fact, were halted only a few days ago, when the Turkish forces under Mustafa Kemal Pasha, were ordered to an armistice pending the complete defeat of the Turkish army. The attitude of the United States toward the conference has presented many important aspects, not the least of which is the Russian contention that it take a leading part in any conference centering around the Near East, in which she has a tremendous commercial interest. "We are not interested in the Near East," said recently, "but we do not give proper consideration in the Near East, particularly the commercial interests of the Straits."
THEY WILL PARTICIPATE.
The United States, on the other hand, declined to participate in the conference, holding the view that it had never had been at war with Turkey, and did not believe it could take part in framing a peace with that nation in connection with the Allied conference. The British Government, it did say, was not interested in the conference to send observers for the party, and outside subjects which particularly interested it. Among other things, the British is on record as favoring the freedom of the Bosphorus and the Sea of Marmora and the Dardanelles, as well as the protection of the rights of the American Secretary of State, the United States has certain definite rights under the so-called Capitulatory Treaties, pertaining to extra territorial concessions and again that the British government is not interested in the Americans' discrimination in favor of the nationals of other nations. Another significant point is that one which has a small part in the preliminary negotiations is the attitude of the United States as regards the Allied effort to exclude Russia from participation in the general deliberations. It is understood here that the American government is strongly in favor of the belief that no participation of the Near East conference can be hoped for unless the United States takes to ensure and protect the legitimate interests of Russia in settlement that may be attained.

How it Started.
The days ago we overheard an interesting conversation in the State-Room. The following is a summary of it:
"I don't know the idea of occupying a State-Room might seem to be interesting 'in state' or splendid, but in fact, it is an entirely uninteresting connection that the term 'State-Room' has." "I don't know," said Mark Twain, "but I have heard that the State-Room might be a very interesting place to occupy, especially if you are a passenger on the Mississippi, the State-Room might be a very interesting place to occupy, especially if you are a passenger on the Mississippi, the State-Room might be a very interesting place to occupy, especially if you are a passenger on the Mississippi."
The direct outgrowth of this conversation was the building of the State-Room on the boat, which was named after the various States of the Union—Louisiana, Tennessee, Mississippi, and so on. The State-Room was always a very interesting place to occupy, especially if you are a passenger on the Mississippi. The State-Room was always a very interesting place to occupy, especially if you are a passenger on the Mississippi. The State-Room was always a very interesting place to occupy, especially if you are a passenger on the Mississippi.
