Time of going through the Falls.

THE Falls are level (or still water) about three hours and an half on the Flood, and about two hours and an half on the ebb, which makes it passable four times in 24 hours, about 10 or 15 minutes each time.—No other rule can be given, as much depends on the freshets in the River St. John, and the time of high water or full sea, which is often hastened by winds, and in the proportion to the height of them.

water about twelve o'clock, and of course, when the Moon quarters it is high water about 6 o'clock.

At Cumberland and Annapolis it is high water at the full and change of the Moon, about 15 minutes after 11 o'clock. In five hours from the time of high water at Windsor, the river is fordable at Falmouth, and remains fordable for three hours in the summer, and two hours in the winter season. High water at Windsor about 10 minutes later than at Boston, and in Cumberland Bason and Annapolis Bason, nearly the same as at Boston.

Curious Particulars of the Customs and Manners of the English in Ancient Times.

The customs of the Anglo-Saxons (and indeed of all the northern nations) have somewhat particularly worth notice in them, as far as they relate to matrimony.

A woman unmarried was always supposed to have a 'mund-bora,' guardian or owner; the virgin belonged to her father, brother, uncle, or nearest male relation; the widow claimed the same protection of her dead husband's male relatives; the lover was obliged to buy his mistress of her 'mund-bora,' by a 'mede' or gift, the amount of which was settled by a law, that set a higher price on the maid than on the widow.

If unwisely the wooer wedded the lady without the mund-bora's consent, her person and goods were still the property of her guardian ; and an injury offered to her was to be atoned for, not to the spouse but to the mund-bora.

We know little as to the divorces of the Anglo-Saxons, altho' they sometimes appear ; but the Welch laws allowed the husband to put away his wife for behaviour tending towards adultery ; while on her part she might, on very slight accounts, separate her concerns from his ; it was a sufficient cause if she discovered that he had an ill scented breath.

With respect to conjugal authority, our neighbors of Wales allotted decisively, that, if the wife called her husband approbrious names, pulled him by the beard, squandered away his goods, or lastly, if he found her in bed with another man, the injured spouse might give her three blows with a stick on any part of her except her head. But if he should beat her more severely, or for a less cause, he was liable to pay a considerable fine.

In the education of their children the Anglo Saxons only sought to render them dauntless and apt for the two most important occupations of their future lives, war and the chase.

It was a usual trial of a child's courage, to place him on the sloping roof of a building, and if without screaming or terror he held fast, he was styled ' a stout herce' or brave boy.

Much more joyous was the ceremony of sepulture among the Anglo Saxons than that of marriage. The house in which the body lay till its burial, was a perpetual scene of feasting, singing, dancing, and every species of riot : this was very expensive to the family of the deceased; and in the north it was carried so far that the corpse was forcibly kept unburied by the visiting friends, until they were certain that they had consumed all the wealth the deceased had left behind him, in games and festivity. In vain did the church exert itself against such enormities.—The custom had prevailed during the times of paganism, and was much too pleasant to be abandoned by the half christians of the early centuries.

In private life the Anglo-Saxons were devout to the extreme of credulity; and hospitable to drunken extravagance; their manners were rough, but social; when married, each side respected the nuptial tie, and most of the ladies suckled their own children.

At table, the ranks of the guests was strictly observed; and by the laws of Canute, a person sitting above his proper station was to be pelted out of his place by bones, at the discretion of the company, without the privilege of taking offence.

Effects of Music.

The following melancholy fact, being witnessed by a vast multitude of people, can want no further confirmation to establish it. At the first grand performance in commemoration of Handel, at Westminster Abbey, Mr Burton, a celebrated chorus singer, well known in the musical world, was, immediately upon the commencement of the Overture of Esther, so violently agitated, that after lying for some time in a fainting fit, he expired. However, at intervals he was able to speak; and but a few minutes before he drew his last breath, declared, that it was the wonderful effects of the music, which had operated so powerfully on him.

Curious Anecdotes from Wood's Ancient and Modern State of the Parish of Cramford, in Scotland.

The records of the Kirk Session, which begin 7th September 1651, (the Session books preceding that period having been carried away by Cromwell) exhibit many curious memorials of the strictness of discipline which prevailed in the church of Scotland, during the course of last century.

February 16th 1700, Mary Millar compeared before the Session, and on being interrogated, confessed that Sir William Patterfson of Grantoun, Bart. was the father of the child she brought forth lately, and that the fact was committed in Grantoun House, the week before Fastens even, when he came out to Grantoun, and brought her out, and stayed there from Tuesday that week, till Saturday, altho' his family then lived in Edinburgh, and nobody was at Grantoun but James Anderson, Sir William's boy; and Robert Hunter, the town Treasurer of Edinburgh, came and took away the child. The minister waited on Sir William Patterfon, who acknowledged his sin, but hoped the Session would deal discreetly with him in consideration of his age and character (he was then about 70, and held an office under Government for many years.) They were however peremptory in insisting on satisfaction, probably on account of his having been a violent persecutor of the Presbyterians while he was Clerk of the Privy Council: he delayed to come before them for some time, going to Bath and other places, but on his return to this part of the country he was again sent for by the Session, whereupon he formally appeared before them 14th Nov. 1701, and professed his sorrow for committing the sin of fornication, and his willingness to submit to the Session, for removing that scandal. He was then rebuked and exhorted to repent, and appointed to appear in the public congregation, to remove that scandal; but the records are silent as to the latter point's being complied with.

One cannot but smile at the following instance of the Parson's minute attention to the private concerns of his parishioners. March 4th 1698, the Minister reported to the Session, that he had spoken to my Lord Tarbar's groom and Mary Milligan, who did lie in one room, but in two separate beds, and that they had promised to forbear the same.

Of the superstition and credulity of the common people, take the following examples. Sept. 15th 1695, John Knight in Lauriston gave in a complaint against James Baptie and Margaret Thomson his wife, that the said Margaret had upon Sunday come in a rage, upon his wife keeping the kine upon their own grass, swearing and cursing, and using imprecations upon her and the kine, and one of them swelled and died that night. Bap- tie and his wife were sharply rebuked by the Sessiou.

January 22d 1688, a dead child having been found on Cramond Muir, near the town of Upper Cramond, and one Janet Millar having gone from thence to Corrie the same day, she was sent for, and having appeared before the Kirk Sessiou some days thereafter, the child was raised out of its grave, and she was caused to handle the body before the Sessiou and a great confluence of people; but, it is remarked in the records, with no small surprise, no tokens of blood appeared at all! She was afterwards examined several times; but no further light being thereby obtained, the affair was referred to his Majesty's Advocate, by whom she was excupated.

In June 1714, in the 84th year of his age, George Mackenzie, Lord Cromarty retired to his noble seat of New Tarbat in Rosshire, with a determined resolution to stay six years there, and live thriftily, in order to save up money that he might spend in London; but this most commendable design was most unexpectedly interrupted in its very onset, by death, who removed his Lordship from this transitory stage, at New Tarbat, 17th Aug. 1714, a few days after Queen Anne had given way to fate.

ALGIERS.

THE mole or mound of earth which connects Algiers with an island before it, and forms the defence of the city, is the fruit of the unremitted labor of thirty thousand Christian slaves for three years. It was completed in the 16th Century by Hayradin, who succeeded Horuck Barbarossa in the government of Algiers.

It was this Hayradin who went about to meet the army of the Emperor Charles V. proposed to murder 10,000 of his Christian slaves, for fear of their rising. His officers however rejected the proposition, and Charles soon liberated them.

In this expedition he was successful, but, soon after this he undertook another against them with 120 ships, 20 galleys and 30,000 men, almost all of which were destroyed. He was landing his troops and the senate or divan, were proposing to submit, when a disciple of the prophet of Medina, rushed in as a prophet, and told them to hold out, and that in a few days their foes would be destroyed—the prediction was verified—a violent tempest arose after Charles had landed his army, and before either provisions or tents could be bro't on shore, which scattered and destroyed his fleet. His troops without shelter or provisions, most of them, who could flee from the face of their enemy, perished in the storm—and Charles, the “Sovereign of Spain, Germany and the Indies,” returned with the miserable remnant of so large a fleet and army, without effecting any thing against the enemy.

Some years after this the French went against them with 20 sail, and took and destroyed or dispersed their fleet. In this battle the Algerine admiral sunk his own ship, himself and crew going down to the bottom rather than surrender.

In 1683 admiral Duquesne bombarded the city with a French fleet, and set it in flames. While this was doing, the Algerines butchered the French prisoners, seized the French Consul, placed him alive before the mouth of a cannon, and discharged it towards Duquesne's squadron—The admiral, however, left not the harbor till their city was a heap of ruins, and all their fortifications and shipping destroyed. This for once humbled the pirates—they sued for, and obtained an abject peace.

The following story is related on the authority of Lady Hamilton, the first wife of Sir Wm. Hamilton, many years the British Minister at the Court of Naples.

ABOUT the year 1743, a person of the name of Ogilvie, an Irishman by birth, who practised Surgery with great reputation at Rome, and who resided not far from the Pizz di Spagna, in that city being in bed, was called up to attend some strangers, who demanded his professional assistance. They stopped before his house in a coach, and on going to the door he found two men masked, by whom he was desired to accompany immediately, as the case which brought them, admitted of no delay. He complied, got into the coach; but no sooner had they quitted the street which he resided, than they informed him he must submit to have his eyes bandaged; the person to whom they were about to conduct him, being a lady of rank, whose name and place of abode it was indispensable to conceal. To this requisition he likewise submitted; and after driving through a number of streets, apparently with a view to prevent his forming any accurate idea of the part of the city to which he was conducted, the carriage at length stopped. The two gentlemen his companions, then alighting, and each taking him by the arms, conducted him into a house. Ascending a narrow staircase, they entered an apartment where he was released from the bandage tied over his eyes. One of them next acquainted him, that it being necessary to put out of life a lady who had dishonored her family, they had chosen him to perform the office, knowing his professional skill; that he would find her in the adjoining chamber, prepared to submit to her fate; and that he must open her veins with as much expedition as possible; a service for the execution of which, he should receive a liberal recompence.

Ogilvie at first pre-emptorily refused to commit an act so highly repugnant to his feelings. But, the two strangers assured him with solemn denunciations of vengeance, that his refusal could only prove fatal to himself, without affording the slightest assistance to the object of his compassion; that her doom was irrevocable, and that unless he chose to participate a similar fate, he must submit to execute the office imposed on him. Thus situated and finding all entreaty or remonstrance vain, he entered the room, where he found a Lady of a most interesting figure and appearance apparently in the bloom of youth. She was habited in a loose undress; and immediately afterwards a female attendant placed before her a large tub filled with warm water in which she immersed her legs. Far from opposing any impediment to the act which she knew he was sent to perform, the Lady assured him of her perfect resignation; entreating him to put the sentence passed on her into execution, with as little delay as possible. She added, that she was well aware no tion could be hoped for from those who had devoted death, which alone could expiate her trespass; felicitating that his humanity would alleviate her sufferings, and soon tear their duration.

After a short conflict with his own mind, perceiving no of exitation or of escape either for the Lady or for himse ing moreover urged to expedite his work by two persons w who, impatient at his reluctance, threatened to exercise viol him, if he procrastinated; Ogilvie took out his Lancet, ope veins, and bled her to death in a short time. The gentleme ing carefully examined the body, in order to ascertain that no more; after expressing their satisfaction, offered him a p Zrchins, as a remuneration, but he declined all recompenc requesting to be conveyed from a scene, on which he could flect without horror. With this entreaty they complied, a ing again applied a bandage to his eyes, they led him down t staircase to the carriage. But it being narrow in descend steps, he contrived to leave on one or both of the walls, unpr by his conductors, the marks of his fingers, which were with blood. After observing precautions similar to those bringing him thither from his own house, he was conducte —and at parting, the two masques charged him, if he val own life never to divulge, and if possible, never to think on transaction. They added, that if he should embrace any m with a view to render it public, or to set on foot an enquiry he should be immolated to their revenge. Having finally d him at his own door, they drove off, leaving him to his refle
