A SHORT SERMON.

Children who read my lay,
This much I have to say:
Each day, and every day,
Do what is right—
Right things in great and small;
Then though the sky should fall,
Sun, moon, and stars, and all,
You shall have right.
This further would I say:
Be you tempted as you may,
Each day, and every day,
Speak what is true—
True things in great or small.
Then, though the sky should fall,
Sun, moon, and stars, and all,
Heaven will show through.
Thus as you see and know,
Do not of thistles grow;
And that the blossoms blow
While on the tree,
Grows never, never yet
On limbs of thorns were set;
So if you good would get,
Good you must be.
Your journey through and through,
Speaking what is just and true,
Doing what is right to do,
Thus one and all,
When you work and when you play,
Each day, and every day,
Then peace shall glad your way,
Though the sky should fall.

Whose Was The Guilt?

Ellis Tremayne laid his fork down with a gesture half of impatience, half of discouragement, and a frown that had no business on the forehead of a six months' married man, the husband of the prettiest of women, corrugated his handsome white forehead.
"You seem not to have the slightest appreciation of affairs, Ellis. I have explained time and time again that I am living up to my income—not saving a penny—and yet you still persist in demanding money for every trifle and taking your fancy."
Ellis Tremayne spoke more decisively than he had ever heard him, and she mentally noted him harshly, and parted her red lips and leaned back in her chair with a very aggrieved look on her lovely face.
"And yet it was lovely."
Mr. Tremayne thought as that same moment as he looked at the delicate pink and snow complexioned large dark blue eyes that had played such a havoc with his heart a year ago—at the full, exquisite lips that had only seemed made for smiles and kisses then, that now were rapidly condemning their task of discovering the day of their idol—their hearts were starting to utter words that he knew were coming, that did come.
"You are just as mean and cross as can be! What's the use of living at all if you don't have what you want—if you can't have things like other people? I tell you I do think you might let me have some money this morning; I need it most awfully."
"I am almost tempted to say that cannot be done, Ellis, since it was only a week ago to-day I handed you twenty-five pounds—a sum amply sufficient for even the most inexperienced financier on which to keep a family of two."
Darker frowns were gathering on Tremayne's forehead, but Ellis answered with a sneer:
"Twenty-five pounds! You speak as though it were a fortune! I tell you, Ellis, I must have things like—like other people. How do you ever suppose I feel when Mrs. Coddington or Mrs. Bellburn calls for me to drive, wearing their elegant carriage costumes, and I in the same dress I appear in on the street and at church?"
"Can you hope to rival the wife of a millionaire and the only daughter of a wealthy banker, do you?—you, the wife of a cashier at Whigfield & Sons, on seven hundred a year? Ellis, have nothing to do with women who are unconsciously and extravagantly in your heart."
"I am neither discontented nor extravagant, Ellis—you shall not say so. But I must have some money to get a new suit. Oh, Ellis, such a heavenly suit of prime, and you know I can wear so well and particular shade. Honestly, I have a dress to wear to Mrs. Lamar's reception."
Ellis ate his egg with very little show of satisfaction, and his silence, while bitter thoughts were rushing through his mind, was taken by Ellis as a sign of consent.
"She was not slow in pressing her advantage. It won't cost over twenty pounds, Ellis—very reasonable, indeed, for I shall make it nearly all myself, and I'm sure you won't be displeased at that. Then say yes, won't you, Ellis, dear?"

A settled white look came around his handsome mouth.
"If you care more for show and fine clothes than for my respect and the consciousness that you are my economical, prudent wife who is helping her husband save instead of almost galling him into debt, you can have the money."
"Her eyes flashed as delightedly as a child's over a new top. She had accomplished her desire, and his cold, yet touching words had fallen unheeded before that—
"You can have the money."
She sprang from her chair behind the coffee urn, and threw her arms around his neck, kissing his handsome worried forehead.
"You darling! I knew you would not say 'no,' for all you read me such a lecture on economy. Really, Ellis, when you see how lovely I shall look in my new silk, you will not grudge the money, will you? You like to see me look as pretty as I used to before we were married, don't you? And you're not angry, dear? You do love me?"
Her sweet girlish face all slight with happy enthusiasm, her blue eyes dancing with such honest delight, her smooth cheek lying against his, and her dainty little hand stroking his whiskers,—of course Ellis laid down his napkin and pushed back from the table and kissed her.
She was his wife—sweet, pretty, delicate as a mountain pink, he loved her—loved her dearly, truly, as in the days when he had won her, thinking what a rare flower she was.
He loved her, and was willing, yes, anxious to increase her happiness by every honest means in his power—only Ellis was extravagant and unreasonable in her demand for dress and style that was beyond the capabilities of the well-salaried man that he was.
So now he kissed her tenderly, and then took out his purse and laid a bank-note on the table-cloth.
"There's your new silk, dear—may you enjoy it."
His forbidding manner had so entirely disappeared, that Ellis's heart was encouraged to undertake another pet plan. So as she delicately folded the note away in her pretty little crimson Russia pocketbook, she began so quietly that Ellis was quite captured by storm:
"I was wondering if it would not be a good plan if we shut up the house for August, dear, and went somewhere. It will do you so much good, I'm sure, and there will be no expenses here while we're away. Can't we go to Hastings?"
She opened the battery very suddenly, almost staggering Tremayne.
"Oh, Ellis, no. It would involve a larger expense, ten times that it costs at home."
Then seeing that well known, martyr-like expression settling on her face, that always drove him to desperation, he added very hastily:
"If you can manage it, go yourself. I dare say some of your fashionable friends will accompany you."
"Oh, may I, may I, really? Indeed, I will manage it! I don't need many new things, I'm sure. I have enough for the silk, and with a little more I can easily get what I absolutely need. Ellis, you are a darling!"
He laughed—not very joyously.
"I'm glad you think so. Well, I'm off."
Two hours later, Mrs. Ellis Tremayne, dressed in an unexpectably elegant walking costume, started out on her shopping tour, to meet at the silk counter Mrs. Galfrey Coddington, carelessly tossing over rare pieces of evening silk.
"I'm so delighted to have your taste on my new silks, my dear Mrs. Tremayne. Do tell me which you prefer the salmon, or the pearl blue, or this summer pink? I intend to have a couple of them for Hastings."
"Hastings!" Mrs. Tremayne's cheeks glowed, and she said:
"I hope to see you at the shore, Mrs. Coddington, and in either this exquisite maize or silver pink."
"So you will be there? Do join our party—only Galfrey and sister Blanche and Nellie Bellburn and I—for next Thursday week. Have you engaged rooms? What shall you get now?"
"It was certainly very delightful to be talked to thus, but, once home, there occurred little qualms of conscience, as very gradually, she felt herself draw into arrangements she knew were far beyond her reach.
And yet she consented to Mrs. Coddington's kind offer that Mr. Coddington should secure rooms for her with his party.
She made up her mind that the elegant stock of clothes that two hours ago she thought needed only a little renovation and a small addition to make it all that was necessary, would not do at all.

And so besides the money her husband had giving her being spent in the dozen and one trailing accessories that a well-dressed toilette demands, there was folded away into a seldom-used compartment of Mrs. Tremayne's pocket book an unrecipited bill for fifty pounds, made out to Mr. Ellis Tremayne.
Ellis's blue eyes were dancing and her cheeks flushed when she was set down with her parcels from Mrs. Coddington's carriage at her door.
She had time to spare before Ellis came in to the five o'clock dinner to look over her purchases, that after all seemed very few and small considering that horrid bill in her pocket that she dreaded to show her husband, for all flashed gaily of manner.
"Ah, is there any need to tell him now?" she reasoned, as she removed her walking suit and donned a lovely black tissue. "Not the slightest use to tell him before I go away. He'll only make a fuss, and I do hate a fuss. Besides, after I'm home again, perhaps I can save it out of the house money."
So she quieted her conscience with the hopefully spacious promises, and the next day, finding it impossible to get ready by herself in time to go with Mrs. Coddington's party, was obliged to hire the services of a high-priced dressmaker, whose bill for her work she tucked away in her pocketbook also, and thus avoided the impleteness of her husband, and thus smiled when she returned.
"Ah, when she returned.
If she had only known, as she kissed her daintily hidden hand to her husband as he stood watching her off, with a look in his eyes in which was mingled love, sternness, pride, annoyance and harassing worry.

Then he went slowly, slowly down stairs into the presence of Mr. Wingfield and an officer.
"Mr. Tremayne, you are discovered in your neat system of embezzlement. O.M.C."
Ellis stepped haughtily back.
"One moment, gentlemen, if you please. Mr. Wingfield, I am discovered. Twenty-four hours later I would have been beyond pursuit; as it is, what is the difference between a hunted life abroad and this?"
"Quick as a flash the pistol gleamed in the gaslight."
A report, a heavy fall that thundered through the house like a doom, and the husband of a woman too unwomanly to bear her share in the burden of life—the woman enjoying her brief hour of pleasure on the sunlit ocean shore—the woman who had it in her power, as all women who are wags have, to go to destruction in some means or another, this husband, who was less wicked than weak, went to his reward.
And who shall say whose was the guilt?
Hes or not, who melted and sobbed over his dead face, and tried to reason into silence an inner voice that refused to be still.
Sister wives, be you careful, lest, although your hands and hearts are not stained with a crime like this—and many a wife's hands and heart are thus reddened to-day—be careful that it lays not at your door that your husband lose all their faith and trust in woman's sacred vows. Yours is a blessed privilege to share eagerly in their economies and many petty grievances that no household is without—that small that now they are, if not accepted in the spirit of patience, love and forbearance, are the little vexes that destroy the vine beyond the hope of recovery.

A DULL CLERK.

Pickernell, a successful dry goods merchant of Boston, was waited upon at his hotel by a gentleman-farmer who was desirous of getting a boy, for whom his was a "place" in Boston—of course he was an uncommon smart boy, quick at figures, strong of intuition, and every way fit, as he should "judge" to become a merchant. Pickernell thought it over, and said he would try and make a place for him. In due time the boy arrived at Pickernell's store, his broad face ruddy with health, and snappy from the morning wash, his hair sleeked, his clothes new and comfortable, and a stiff dicker cutting his ears. He announced himself as the boy, who wanted a place.
"Ah, you are the boy, are you?" said Pickernell.
"Yes, I s'pose so," said the youngster.
"Well, come in here then; I am very busy, but I will examine you in a few practical questions."
"Well," said Pickernell, suppose a lady should come in here and buy a dress of fifteen and a half yards of calico for eleven and a half cents a yard, what would it come to?"
The boy looked at his questioner, at the ceiling, at the floor, in a state of great bewilderment.
"How much calico?" he asked.
"Fifteen and a half yards."
"What price?"
"Eleven and a half cents."
"He thought a moment."
"Well," said he, "I'm darned if I believe any woman ever wanted so much cloth for a dress as that."
Pickernell put another question.
"How much would five and half pounds of tea come to at seventy-five cents and three quarters per pound?"
He received this pretty much the same as the other, and after waiting a minute, he asked:
"Was it green or black tea?"
Without answering Pickernell put another question:
"Suppose I should send you out with a two-dollar bill, and you should buy four-penn and a half pounds of beef at seven and a half cents a pound, how much money would you have left?"
The boy looked at him for an instant, then indulged in a low whistle.
"You don't s'pose," said he, "you could get beef anywhere at seven and a half cents a pound, do you?"
Pickernell gave up at this. He asked him no more questions, but sent him back next day with a letter, stating that he didn't think he would answer.

VARIETIES.

So sad, so fresh the days that are no more.—Tennyson.
Patience & power in a man, warning him to rein his spirit.
Tiny bows of ribbon are now the rage among Paris ladies for ear-rings.
The only sin which we never forgive in each other is difference of opinion.—Emerson.
A Chicago man has cleared six thousand dollars this year from eight acres of blackberries.
"I don't believe it's of any use to vaccinate for small pox," said a brickworkman, "for I had a child vaccinated and in less than a week after he fell out of a window and was killed."
At the marriage of an Alabama widower one of the grooms was asked if his master would take a bridle tour. "Dunno, sah; when old missus's alive he took a paddle to her; dunno if he take a bridle to the new one or not."
A certain Detroit would feel like kicking any one who hinted that his mind was not always keenly interested in his business. And yet, the other noon, when he locked his desk to go to dinner he dropped his key on the floor without noticing the loss, put on his hat and gloves, and was ready to go out, when he called to the office-boy and asked: "Joe, have you seen my key around?" Joe hadn't. They hunted around for two or three minutes without finding it, and the gentleman said: "That's just like one of my tricks. I've gone and locked that key up in the desk."

"What exquisite preserves, Mrs. Smoothly! How do you have such splendid luck with everything you put up?" complimented one of the ladies at the tea-table.
"What are they, by the way?" Mrs. Smoothly is taken by surprise, but recovers herself and calls the servant. "I have not tasted them yet," she said, "and have really forgotten what I ordered the girl to put on for you. Bridget, what are those preserves?" "Thin, ma'am? Thirty-five cents a can; sorry the pickle less and the grocer take, and them big green things in the dish beyond is fifty cents for a little glass jar." Tableau of silence, and a good-hearted honest girl out of a job two hours later.

THE SNOWS OF OTHER DAYS.—There was the usual crowd of idlers at the Central Market after dinner yesterday, and it was in order to discuss the weather. They fell to talking about snow storms, and Brother Gardner arose and said:
"Gentlemen, I s'pose I have seen deeper snow than any human being in this crowd."
"What was it?" asked one.
"In Nevada," he replied.
"How deep was it?"
"Just seventy-nine feet, an' if 'twasn't I hope to die."
"Fool!" answered a doubter. "How was you able to walk around wid the snow so deep?"
"Be a little careful, Mizzer Johnson," warned Brother Gardner. I didn't say I was walking around far 'tall."
"Den how was it?"
"I was in charge of a balloon, sah, and we sailed right along as if dar was only six inches of snow on the hills. I wasn't fool 'nuff ter be walkin' when I could ride."

AN HONORABLE CONDUCTOR.—A conductor on an eastern railroad was approached by a seedy looking individual, who wanted a free ride, as he didn't have any money.
"All right," said the conductor, "go forward into the smoking car, and I'll fix you all right."
Soon afterwards the conductor appeared in the smoking car to collect fare from the passengers. He took up fare from everybody except the dead beat and another man, who happened to be the superintendent of the road. The superintendent noticed that he had overlooked this man, and asked him why he had done so.
"Why, that a conductor," was the reply.
"His appearance does not indicate it. Look at those clothes," said the superintendent.
"Well," said the conductor, "he can't help that. He's a conductor on a western road, and he's one of those fellows who use trying to live within their salaries, and that's what he has come to."
This was satisfactory to the superintendent, and the man obtained his ride without further inquiry.

Prorogation of the Quebec Legislature.

The following is the speech of Lt. Gov. Latellier, on prorogation of the Quebec Legislature, on the 28th December.

Honorable gentlemen of the Legislative Assembly:

Having been called upon to fill the important position of Lieutenant Governor of this Province, which became vacant by the decease of my lamented predecessor, I cannot allow this opportunity to pass without rendering homage to the memory of the statesman whose long career has been an honor to himself and to the country. It will be my earnest desire, as it is my duty to comply with the spirit of the constitution under which we have the happiness to live. I have much pleasure in congratulating on the zeal and assiduity which you have manifested in the discussion of the important measures which have been submitted to you.

Trust that the result of your labors will be to give a new impetus to the great improvements which have been undertaken in the Province.

Gentlemen of the Legislative Assembly, I offer up my best wishes for your happiness, and that of your families, and for the prosperity of our Province.

It is rumored in Ottawa that Hon. Mr. Fabre has been asked to accept the vacant portfolio. The Government could not make a better choice. If Mr. Mackenzie really wants to get rid of Mr. Cauchon he cannot do better than call into the Cabinet the Senator for LaSalle, for the President of the Council would be sure to quarrel with him within a week, and then there would be a chance of a much-to-be-desired appointment. The Hon. Mr. Fabre, learns the approaching vacancy in the Lieutenant Governorship of Manitoba is regarded as offering a position which will suit Mr. Cauchon. He cannot afford to be very particular now that the viceregal seat of Quebec has an occupant provided for it, and can in Manitoba do a great deal of mischief. Satisfactorily stowed away in the Prairie Province there is no knowing how great a change of heart might be worked in the odorous minister.

AN ALLIGATOR IN A BEDROOM.—A correspondent at Ajmer sends us the following curious story of an adventure with an alligator near that station.—A night or two ago, at the city of Pokar, near Ajmer one of the numerous alligators which abound in the lake there, and which are looked upon with the greatest reverence by the Brahmins, managed to crawl from the water up a flight of high stone steps into the courtyard of a house used by the European officials and visitors as a dak bungalow. It is supposed that the reptile was frightened by some noise. Turning, it missed the steps, which would lead it back in safety to the water, and entered the room in which the servants were sleeping. The astonishment of the man at finding himself lashed by the tail of the monster in the dark may be imagined. Their master, on coming with a light, found the alligator, which was ten feet long, hard up against the wall on one of the servant's beds. The Brahmins are highly incensed at this gentleman for shooting the alligator even under these circumstances, and have preferred a complaint to the Commissioner of the district. It is doubtless very necessary to respect the feelings of our fellow-men, but it does seem rather hard to object to one shooting an alligator when he gets into your servant's bed in the middle of the night.

A POMPEIAN INN.—In the course of the recent work at Pompeii, at the corner of the street, a common inn has been excavated. There is the bar, with the vessels in clay let into it, and a small back room. In wall paintings are to be seen men drinking and gambling, clad in the people's costume. Various inscriptions are added to it, to copy which permission has not been given yet. A harmaid is also represented in the painting, bringing a flask and a glass to two guests, one of whom according to the inscription, says, "That's not mine!" the harmaid replying "He who likes will take it." A scuffle and scurrilousness between two men grasping each other's hair, is the subject of a further painting. A third man, pulling one of the two out by the tunic, exclaims, "Out with you! Better quarrel before the door!" In another house built and decorated in a beautiful style, a description has been scratched on the wall of one of the rooms, running thus:—"Thyrsal take care not to love, or to marry? Farewell!" In short, these fresh excavations have the effect of placing the spectator most vividly in presence of Roman life—of human life as it has been in antiquity, as it has always been, and as it is now.

Sir John Lubbock, M. P., the eminent London banker, suggests that England should purchase from Turkey the Western part of Asia Minor, as "that would secure the route to India. He thinks this can be done without great expense, and that it would open up that rich, populous and once happy country."

The first section of the North Shore Railway, viz. that between Quebec and Red Bridge, a distance of 26 miles, will be opened for traffic on the 3rd January.

Captain Nares, of the Arctic Expedition went on a visit to the Queen, at Windsor Castle, recently and dined with her Majesty in the evening.

The largest sail in the world has been made in Dublin. It is rectangular, and measures 180 feet by 60. It is to be used in raising sunken vessels.

Special.

Again we have to remind those indebted to the STANDARD OFFICE, particularly those of long standing, that their bills must be settled without delay. It is disgraceful for those who are well able to pay for advertising and job work, to keep us waiting for years; the rebuke they should receive would be to publish their names and accounts, and have them copied by our contemporaries. To our many prompt paying patrons we tender thanks.

SAINT ANDREWS, JAN. 3, 1877.

THE NEW YEAR.

On Sunday night last at 12 o'clock old 1876 passed with its joys and many sorrows, and we have now entered another year. May it prove a much better one than the last, and we earnestly hope it will prove a good one to all our readers to whom we again tender the "compliments of the season."

In consequence of being short handed, our readers cannot expect our usual punctuality in issuing the STANDARD. We are endeavoring to obtain printers—the late principal assistant, a worthy young man and an excellent workman, having removed to a larger sphere of usefulness.

At an informal meeting of a number of the business men of St. Andrews, held last evening, it was decided to call a Public Meeting of the inhabitants, on Saturday evening next at seven o'clock [to discuss Railway] Matters. It will be seen by handbills issued from this office, that a meeting is to be held in Stevenson Hall. The people are exasperated and it is no wonder,—the first town in the Dominion that originated and carried out the building of a railway.

The snow storm of the last two days was the heaviest of the season, and the strong north easterly wind blocked up the road, making travelling almost impossible and seriously retarding the railway trains. The mail stages were obliged to shovel their way through the huge drifts, but succeeded in getting through with the mails in fair time. The drivers, however, well wrapped up, must have had a hard time in the blinding storm and cold. There is snow enough, and it has been sufficiently cold enough for any purpose.

LATEST NEWS.

The Turkish question is still unsettled. Extensive war preparations are being made by Turkey and Russia.

A cargo of munitions of war was shipped last week from New Haven for Turkey.

The Russian army is said to be in bad condition, having been decimated by typhus and marsh fever.

The cold was so intense in Southern Russia, as to thirty degrees below zero. Troops could not be moved it was so cold. Austria has decided that a special armament should be undertaken, should Russia and Turkey have the war among themselves.

The Presidential contest is not yet decided. Congress committee reports Republican electors in South Carolina legally chosen. Florida also has chosen Republican nominees for office.

A Mr. Swan, residing near New York, has absconded with $133,994 of relatives trust funds. It is supposed he went to Europe.

A snow storm prevailed West the latter part of the week, with north-east wind.

The Quebec Legislature was prorogued on the 28th ult. by Lt. Governor Latellier.

The Sultan of Turkey has refused to accept the proposals of the Powers regarding provincial reforms, and the Marquis of Salisbury has ordered off British fleet now in Turkish waters. This gives a grave aspect to the Eastern question, and may ultimately result in war, unless the Turks are brought to their senses.

The strike of the Grand Trunk locomotive engineers is becoming serious. The strikers have grown belligerent, and yesterday assaulted the engineers who had remained at work. Negotiations are pending between the company and the Canadian Government for the military protection of the road.

Additional details of Friday's disaster at Arhtabua, Ohio, disclose a loss of life of one hundred, and upwards of sixty wounded.

Several Eastern people are among the victims.

The Commission appointed by the President to report on the Inter-oceanic Ship Canal across the Isthmus of Darien are of opinion that the work can begin within two years.

It is probable that the Heads of Departments will have their annual Reports ready for presentation to the Legislature early in the Session. We fully expect that the Surveyor General's Report, will show a handsome surplus for the past year, as we are aware he has been most remitting in his devotion to the Department over which he so ably presides.

The Valuator's List will probably shortly be published, as those gentlemen have been for some time engaged visiting the Parishes and correcting the list.

THANKS to our respected contemporaries for their kindly notices of the STANDARD having completed its forty third year, and entered upon its 11th. We wish them all abundant success.

CALENDAR.—We are indebted to the "St. Croix Courier" for a very handsome calendar issued from that office. The whole execution is a credit to the Province, and cannot be surpassed in the Dominion.

Telegraphic intelligence states that many serious fires have occurred in the United States, and several vessels and lives were lost during the past fortnight; the weather was fearful and the accounts of wrecks are heartrending.

Thoughtless and unfriendly statements of ten lead to the injury and affect the credit of those for whom they are not really intended. It is quite unfortunate enough to meet with losses, perhaps through no mismanagement, without having the circumstance and name of the person paraded unnecessarily before the public gaze. Sympathy can be expressed without personal allusion.

We have been led to this train of thought from noticing in a Provincial sheet, reference to contemporaries, whom, we believe, can tell our hard times to everyone who has not a money reserve; and we are safe in saying that few if any of the newspaper proprietors have any large reserve, simply from the fact that they generally expend the larger part of their earnings in stocking their offices with new material, and paying incidental expenses. An experience of upwards of forty three years in connection with the Printing Office, warrants us in thus commenting upon such thoughtless references to contemporaries. Our object should be to help one another, and while differing on questions of public policy, let us by all means observe the amenities of society, and avoid personalities, which are decidedly low, mean, and contemptible.

A practice, we regret to state is becoming common of naming the editors instead of the newspapers which they control. Now this is altogether wrong; the views expressed in a newspaper, may or may not emanate from the editor, he at all events is responsible; but the public care not who writes, it is the matter, correctness and ability they look at. In the another country the name of the editor or conductor is never given, and consequently when writers differ on any public questions they do not allude to each other by name, but refer to the journal under their management. None of us are perfect a word and we have done. Let us a lot the golden rule of "doing unto others as we would they should do unto us." To all our brethren of the Press, we heartily wish a prosperous and a Happy New Year.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.—The cablegrams referring to this question, give no correct idea of the feelings of the English people upon the subject. A careful perusal of British journals shows, furnishes the desired information, and it is apparent that leading statesmen and administrators, express their opinions in terse and forcible language, having a thorough understanding of the subject, they "agree to differ" upon the question. The Premier concluded, "that a race so admirable as the Turks, a religion so like that of the Old Testament, and inferior only to corrupt forms of that of the New, ought once more to be defended by British blood and treasure as in the Crimea." This it should be remembered is the deliberate opinion of England's leading statesman, but there are others equally as well informed, who entertain opposite ideas, who believe that the gross Turkish outrages in Bulgaria given in Mr. Scuyler's second report as harrowing and painful as those which his first report laid before Europe, demand punishment. Sir J. St. Aubin speaking at Plymouth, said "the acts of the Turks had afforded sufficient pretext for the course which Russia had taken in the Eastern question. Unless the Turks were prepared to give good government to the Christian provinces, an occupation of these provinces was perfectly justifiable. England should endeavor to go hand in hand with Russia to secure reform, and the Turks should be made plainly to understand that we were not going to fight for them."

Sir George Campbell has written a pamphlet—termed by some A Handy Book of the Eastern question? Sir George is said to be a practical administrator and writer, who spent last autumn among the races in South-Eastern Europe, and his statement of facts is reported to be very valuable. He gives a detailed statement of the grievances and aspirations of Slavs and Greeks, and of the hopeless corruption and incapacity of the two or three hundred Turks who grind them to the dust. His long experience as the eldest Governor Bengal ever had has enabled him to give a masterly analysis of the evils under which the Turks are perishing, and their Christian subjects are prevented from prospering as they would do were they allowed. His opinions bear weight as he not only governed but reorganized a similar country with four times the population. His facts tend to the complete autonomy of all the Christian districts except that round Constantinople. The latest intelligence is contradictory, on the question; if a Times correspondent says, there is no immediate rupture apprehended, while others state that war can scarcely be averted.

The last issue of our old contemporary, the Fredericton Reporter, contains the Valedictory of its proprietor with a review of its long and useful career. The establishment has been purchased by Fisher & Fisher, who will continue the paper. The memory of father and son, who so long and ably conducted the Reporter, will remain green in the memory of their many friends. The members of their families have our best wishes.

Ministry Service was held in St. Andrew's Church on Sunday night last. The church was well filled, and the service impressive.

The Watch Service in the Methodist Church was largely attended. The service was conducted by the Pastor, the Rev. Mr. Richardson, Minister of Greenock Church, read and gave an exposition of Scripture. At the conclusion of the service the bells rung old 1876 out and ushered in 1877.

Storm.—Early on Saturday morning last a heavy snow storm took place which made the going heavy, as the wind drifted the snow into great banks, rendering travelling very difficult, and stopping the trains on almost every line. No mail was received here from Friday evening until Sunday afternoon, when it came in its stage.

The Hon. George Brown has gained his cause. Justice Morrison was of opinion that Mr. Brown was not guilty of the alleged contempt of court, not having been uttered in the presence of the Court.

THE TEMPERANCE QUESTION IN GREAT BRITAIN.—Ten years hence, temperance legislation will be the most pressing subject of the day. Every week it becomes more prominent. A year ago the "London Times" would never have thought of giving, as it did lately, a column and a half headed, "The Temperance Question," with speeches by four prominent men—Mr. Chamberlain, the Bishop of Manchester, the Archbishop of York, and Mr. Barclay. Two years ago we should not have had those speeches; for men are now ceasing to lament over the evils of drunkenness—they have got beyond that stage; the evils are so great and so universally admitted that there is no need to dwell upon them. The next stage is to devise remedies. The third stage will be legislation.—London Correspondent.

A REMARKABLE CITY.—One of the most remarkable cities in the world is Bangkok, the capital of Siam. On either side of the wide, majestic stream, moored in regular streets and alleys, extending as far as the eye can reach, are upwards of 70,000 neat little houses, each one floating on a compact raft of bamboo; and the whole intermediate space of the river is one dense mass of ships, junks, and boats of every conceivable shape, colour, and size.

It is said to be the intention of the Canadian Government to renew its efforts for the colonization of the Anticosti Island—the narrow strip of land which lies between the coast of Labrador and Quebec. The surrounding waters are alive with fish, and the land in most parts is said to be very fertile. A few fishermen live in cabins on the island, and earn a living by curing fish, which they take in skips to Grand Bay. The Dominion Government will act wisely in doing what it is supposed to be its intention to do.

It is now authoritatively stated that the British Government has consented to a removal of the extradition treaty with the United States. In doing this it foregoes what it considers to be a strict legal interpretation of the treaty as justifying the position it has assumed in the controversy, and consents to the renewal in view of the interests of both countries. The announcement is received with general satisfaction.

POPULAR WOOD ALLEGED TO BE FIREPROOF.—Many despise popular as a timber, but it has one golden property—it will not burn. Some years ago a factory at Nottingham took fire on the second floor, and burned to the top furiously, but not downwards; although the floors lay a yard thick with hot cinders and melted machinery, yet it did not get downwards, because the floors were of poplar.

The official statement of the national debt of the United States on the 1st inst. has been issued. It shows the debt to be $20,000,000 being an increase for the month of $47,000. This is not a very encouraging picture, viewed in the light of preparation for a resumption of specie payment.
