Ald. Richter pointed out that as Mr. Noble was a contractor on two large city jobs, it might complicate matters if he were selected. As a result of this fact Mr. Noble's name was withdrawn. Ald. Richter further made a plea for the appointment of a plumber, such as Mr. Haslett. It was necessary in the work of the board of health that a practical man along these lines be named, as there was a great need of his services here. After some further discussion Mr.

Haslett was appointed over Mr. McPherson.

Ald. Bennett was originally included among the nominees for directors of the Western Fair, but he withdrew his name in favor of Ald. Richter, and the latter was chosen for the position. Great Britain's Poorest Will Be Benefitted by Lloyd George Scheme.

BROADER CURRICULUM

Co-ordination of Primary, Secondary and Higher Education Is the Liberal Government's Idea.

London, Jan. 12.-Viscount Haldane's forecast of the great national educational scheme, linking primary schools and the university, has attracted widespread attention, the object of the plan being to complete the eduactional ladder whereby the child of any man can climb to the top through his mental capacity ather than through cash.

Broaden Curriculum. The Daily News gives the follow-ing broad outlines of the Government policy as far as it has already taken shape: The primary school educa-tion is to continue for a longer period in the year, beginning earlier and continuing later. The curriculum is to be broadened, particularly in the direction of increased manual and technical instruction. In the secondary school room is to be found for the continuance of education of every primary school child whose capacity justifies and where circumstances permit.

Universities on the lines of Liverpool and Leeds are to be increased in number with the special object of serving local needs over an area of several counties. Scholarships or other subsidies are to be forthcoming sufficient to open the door of the university to every boy or girl reach ing the required standard. Schools For Youngest. In the new measure the recommendations of the consultative committee of 1908 are likely to be adopted. Message to Friends. "My Canadian and American friends are so kind, and their official and personal communications are so frequent and interesting that it is simply an im ossibility for me to forget the very good friends we have left behind on he continent." Thus spoke the Countess of Aberdeen at the residence Lady Drummond this afternoon, after meeting a number of leading citizens who had hastened to present their respects to the wife of a former governor-general, and a lady who for years past has taken such a lively personal interest in the welfare of Ireland, where Lord Aberdeen is still ford-lieutenant. # White Sale at Its Height This Week

THE BIGGEST White Sale ever attempted by this store is now at its very height. Each year we go into this White Sale event encouraged by the successes of the past, with -a determination to outdo all previous efforts. We would not be carrying out our business principles if we did not do so. Every season must make an advance, otherwise our progress would be in the wrong direction.

The great attraction and most important feature of this sale is the very low prices and exceptionally good values shown in the face of present high prices in the raw cotton market, caused by last season's short crop, as the bulk of the White Sale goods were contracted for many months ago when prices were much lower.

Now is the time to have your summer sewing done. The machines are already humming, and we have no hesitation in saying that there is little prospect of obtaining better prices later in the year, as there is scarcely a number which at present can be repeated at old prices. We placed heavy orders in all lines and there will be no rise in prices here during the present White Sale.

Interesting History.
The Burns plant was a local institution with a history. It had its start when P. Burns, then a very young man, came to Calgary, about twenty years ago. It is related that his sole capital was one lone beef steer. The growth of his plant has kept pace with the development of this section, and has made its owner one of the richest men in the west, his wealth being reputed to be in the neighborhood of

BRITAIN'S NEXT GREAT FORWARD STEP

When the great Gladstone ministry of 1868-74 was drawing to its close, and instance, is the greatest steel centre in having accomplished many tasks, the Government seemed to have little left city of the kingdom, a hive of industo do. The paper trust fought the by the British Government. Local reciprocity pact in company with the needs must be served by the local uniwersity, encouraged, not banned, by an intelligent Government.

A really thorough and democratic educational system which will draw out of all quarters of the nation its! latent abilities will do for Great Britain what the revolution of 1789 did for French armies; it will make her irresistible in the fulness of her development and in the impetus of her awakened spirit. A new England is about to be called into being by the wand of triumphant Radicalism. The House of Lords pushed back reform for a moment when it beat Birrell's bill in 1908. A far wider-reaching reform is now in contemplation which no House of Lords can stop, and which will, probably, like the insurance bill, sweep away party lines in the rush of its acceptance.

AS TO WATERFRONTS.

In a letter favoring the coupling of a flat-rate policy for Niagara power with the electrification of the London and Port Stanley Railway, Mr. F. W. Daly intimates that London has no future unless she can be made practically a lakeport, adding that "if a map of the world is examined, it will be found that nearly all great cities are situated at or near the water."

London has been as close to the lake for many years as she ever will be If Mr. Daly's theory were correct, London should be Port Stanley, Brantford should be Port Dover, and Winnipeg should be Port Arthur. There was time when cities depended largely upon their locations on seas or rivers for their prosperity, but this was in the days when small sailing craft were the most advanced means of transportation, Happily today there are other factors in building up communities Although an inland city, London got a start on every other place in Western advantages of size, situation and rail- man of Canada has ever proclaimed Whatever skeptics can inquire for, way facilities. #### CHARACTER IN THE PSALMS

[By Special Arrangement With the Winnipeg Telegram.]

Now that illustrated editions of the Arabian Nights and other ancient classics are becoming so common, it is surprising that no great artist tries his hand at portraying the characters in the Hebrew Psalms. Actual ife was the atmosphere in which the Psalms were composed, and the peronal experiences of the Psalmist heroes and saints resulted from contact, with their fellowmen. Many are the figures, therefore, which cross the fleeting stretches of Israel's songs of starter, and has to be kicked around a the soul. There is no deliberate attempt at character-sketching in modern sense of the word. The is that he is in too fast a field us-Psalmist is content to make a reference to the divine or human figure, and leaves his appearance to imagination of the reader. Sometimes, in a vivid theophany, he gives touches of personal description, but, as a general rule, the characters that play their part in the songs of the Psalter are types rather than individuals. The good man is referred to constantly, and he posse ses all the vagueness and ideality of a race-hero as far as intimate touches of external description are concerned. But the psychological details are numerous and Hyde Park, Kelly's Siding, Gobles and New Sarum this fall, "Hide-Row" is graphic, so that when we observe the being trained by the Jeer's Correcareer of 'he typical good man spondence School, run by that famthroughout the Psalter, we can arrive at a very fair idea of what the ideal good man was supposed to be in the

The wicked man, the adversary, the oppressor, is also a character frequently mentioned, but details are few, he remains a type, But we cannot assert that the characters drawn by the Psalmist poets are mere abstractions; it is true they lack the analyzed richness of the here or villain of the modern Meredith novel, but it is surprising how deftly and how clearly the Psalmists in a single sentence illuminate human character. A Psalmist often tears a man's secret from his heart in simple sentence, for instance, one poet says, "The fool hath said in his heart there is no God." Nothing else is known of the man who the Psalmist had in mind, but we have got at the heart of his life; we have the key to his whole character. The Psalm ists are usually vague in their treatment of human character, but they tell us the needful word concerning the hero or villain, although there are no extremely odd or peculiar people in the Psalter, common, every-day of individuals who have swung into le life-stream of the poet and have been caught like flies in the amber of his song of sorrow or of joy, and more often still, the poet opens up his own quivering heart to our inspection, and in a cry of anguish or of trust reveals himself to us in few words, but with a frankness and directness that Lake him live for us, a man whom we have mot and who has interested and influenced us, by claiming our sympathies and ennobling our lives. * * *

In reading and re-reading the Psalms we are impressed over and over again with the fact that these Hebrew poets knew life, understood human nature, and if they had thought it needful or advisable to lift more than a corner of the cloak on their charcter, their hero or their villain, their prince or their pilgrim. their exile or their warrior, the Psalms would have been made still more entrancing with added color and movement and realism from Israel's tragic story. But the modern zest for character dissection did not prevail in those fictionless days, when real life was stirring enough without going to the romancers and character artists for matter with which to captivate the mind dulled and deadened by the monotony and commonplaceness of life.

We must be content, therefore, with our partial knowledge of characters which the Psalmists studied, and which they have described for us in quick sharp strokes, which are more suggestive than illuminating. studying the characters mentioned in the Psalter, the types and the individuals, we must read into the Psalms our own first-hand information and experience regarding human character, remembering that no character is wholly good, and no character is

A very large number, also, are unable to afford the expense of a daily meal at even the most modest dairy lunch-room. For these two classes the box luncheon is the only alternative. There is no reason, howlittle care and thought are given to its preparation, should not be quite as breakdowns seen on every hand among women wage-earners are many and complex. That improper food and insufficient nourishment have a place among them, no one can deny. Until the foundational principles of dietetics are better understood by the general public, we shall continue to see men entering on their day's duties after a huried and insufficient breakfast, and lunching on a chocolate eclair and a cup of coffee. The business woman who desires to retain good health must have a proper regard for the needs of the body in the way of tissue renewing and force producing food. This means a sufficient, nourishing and well-balanced dietary, and taking meals at regular and proper hours.

For most business people, brain workers, the practice of taking the heaviest meal at night is the wisest one. It can be eaten more leisurely then, and be followed by rest and recreation, instead of by an immediate return to work which calls the blood to the brain, away from the digestive organs. Should Be Nourishing.

If the principal meal be taken at noon, it should be so planned that although sufficiently generous and nourishing, it contains no food that can put an extra amount of work on the digestive organs. It should most de-cidedly include something hot. This is also true of the lighter luncheon in cold weather, and for women who are delicate and nervous. A cup of hot cocoa or soup adds much to the attractiveness of the cold luncheon, It has a wonderfully stimulating effect on tired brain and nerves, besides aiding digestion by inducing greater flow of the digestive juices.

Some business women are so situated that by means of a spirit lamp or a gas burner, they can make tea or prepare the convenient "hasty lunch use. It is inclined to grow to an immense size, and unless desired for an individual plant for a large jardiniere to be set up on a stand, it be omes too clumsy and large for the window garden, and one will naturally turn to the more satisfactory dwarf rariety, which the florist will recommend as being compact, bushy and ideal for the window. The Boston ferns are also known as sword ferns. There are several varieties which have of recent sprung into vogue and are quite popnlar. They are of the plumosa form, in which the fronds are divided. The most valuable of these is the ostrich plume fern, whose fronds are broad and feathery. Another of the Bostonians which is a favorite has its pinnae or leaflets divided into points spreading like horns. At this season of the year the florists' shops are filled with the attractive spider ferns, which are favorites for the fern dish. This is due to their size, as they do not grow over a foot in length of stem. These ferns are listed under the name of Pteris. The fronds are once-divided, and the di-visions are long and pointed. CHAPTER XIV.

Two in a Garret. The next day Bella found herself in stalled on the top floor of the boardingnouse in a room next 'Gene's. It wasn' much of a room, but there was a roof to keep off the rain and a bed to sleep in, and these, after all, are the essentials. Her household goods she had brought over in a suitcase. They consisted solely of a very limited wardrobe. With a thrift based upon an early resolution never to be forced into a position of dependence upon any male, she had saved out of her earnings whatever she had not been the forced into a position of the carnings whatever she had not been the forced into a position of dependence upon any male, she had saved out of her the forced into a position of dependence upon any male, she had saved out of her the forced into a position of dependence upon any male, she had saved out of her the first hours to her with a great deal of self-satisfied pride.

"Ye see!" he boasted.

"Fine." she nodded.

Then she told him her scheme about the preakfasts.

"You was to start work the first hours as the first hours and the require % yard for one pair of sleeves for a medium size.

They consisted solely of a based upon an early resolution never to be forced into a position of dependence upon any male, she had saved out of her earnings whatever she had not been obliged to contribute to her sister's household, instead of spending the surplus upon either clothes or entertainment. The either clothes or entertainment. The result had been a lonely life which had further strengthened her cynicism, but it gave her the opportunity for taking her present independent stand.

Bella had no intention of loafing on here indefinitely. She had two distinct ideas in accepting 'Gene's suggestion—one was to be near enough to watch over him until her watch out this feet and he was well established on his feet, and the other was to rest for a week. She had never been able to shake off the feeling never been able to shake off the feeling which had come over her that first night she met him—that she was in some way responsible for this big, overgrown boy. He was her charge. She knew the world and he didn't, and because he had come to her clean and unspotted she must keep him so. She didn't put this into words. It was not a deliberate, well-formed plan on her part, but it was a feeling strong enough to govern her acts. It sprang, as did her aggressive attitude towards all the other men she had ever met, from a mother instinct that was strangely mother instinct that was strangely pure and vital.

Her desire for a vacation of a wee was sufficiently novel to have set her to thinking, if ever she had been in the habit of thinking about herself. This desire had come to her while she was sitting in of thinking about herself. This desire had come to her while she was sitting in the park by the side of 'Gene. There was something in the pressure of his strong arm that hed suddenly made her wish to play the stay-at-home for a few days. She had been tired all her life. She had taken it for granted that being tired was one of the necessary burdens of her sex. She had never resented it nor disputed it. But that evening he had made her wonder how it would feel not to go to work some morning. He had made her curious as to how it would feel to be half cared for just for a little while. She would enjoy the luxury of allowing him to contribute towards the meals. She could get his breakfast for him, and wait for him at night. It is doubtful if she would have gone even this far had he not really owed her the money. This permitted her owed her the money. This permitted her to play the dependant without actually being so. Any moment she did not like the experiment she could give it up. But the significant point remained that she closed her eyes to the naked truth, enough of it leaked through to make her somewhat self-conscious. She found herself uneasily happy. Her thoughts were centring more and more around this man. She took the episode in the park for what it was worth. That 'Gene should want to put his arm about her didn't mean much-men were all that way-but that she had been willing to allow it meant a good deal. It was queer, too, that she didn't mind losing her job, and home. She didn't try to explain those facts through 'Gene's attitude towards her so much as she did through her attitude towards him. With a careless smile she finally disposed of the whole matter as being merely a development of that peculiar feeling of responsibility for him which she had felt from the beginning.

For a wonder, 'Gene actually secured the job he had mentioned to her. He was to be a sort of deckhand on the ferry, and was to start work the next morning. He reported the news to her with a great

"No use spendin' good money at a hash house when we can knock something together for half the price."

He accepted her suggestion graciously. "Anythin' but ham an' eggs," he agred. "I'd starve before I'd eat any more o'

those."
She laughed.
"Don't blame you for slippin' yer trolley on that. We'll dope out something else."
That day they went marketing together. She bought a small kerosene stove, a bottle of kerosene, a few cheap dishes and knives and forks at a ten-cent store, some coffee and bread and butter, some sugar, a can of pressed beef, a pound of cheese and some doughnuts—the latter at his suggestion. They were like two happy children as they came back with their arms folded. The landlady looked somewhat askance at these preparations, but her interest ceased with a significant leer. She was not one to look too closely into her interest ceased with a significant lear. She was not one to look too closely into the relations of her boarders at a time when she had half a dozen vacant rooms on her hands. Furthermore, she could not help admiring 'Gene herself. It was long since she had seen so fine a figure of a man.

'Gene had to report for work at five which meant that Bella was forced to rise at half-past three. When her alarm clock rang her up at this time next morning, she found herself for a moment staring into the dark with an odd feeling of excitement which at first she could not interpret. Then she remembered the big man in the next room. She scrambled man in the next room. She scrambled out of bed and hastily dressed. She went to his door and kocked softly. He was sleeping so soundly that he did not wake at once. She whispered through the key-

"'Gene, 'Gene!"
"What's the matter? Who is it?" he called back.
"It's Bella," she answered. "Time to Freak Died in a Short Time—

"All right," he answered sleepily. She hurried to her room, hastily made up her bed, put away her things, and placed the coffee pot on the kerosene stove. She spread a pillow case over he small table and set the two plates no other man had ever bred in her such an unusual desire. However much she might compromise herself, however tight she closed her area to the peled that the she closed her area to the peled that the she closed her area to the peled that the she closed her area to the peled that the she closed her area to the peled that the she closed her area to the peled that the more color than usual. She opened the tin of meat and placed this midway between the two plates and then cut off a slice of bread for each of them. Then came the cups—she had almost forgotten the cups. She rinsed them out in the water pitcher, and gave him the one which was not nicked. By the time the water was boiling she was singing to herself.

'Gene came in heavy-eyed and still sleepy.

"Seems like midnight," he commented.
"I don't mind," she answered.
There was some daylight in the room, but she kept the small kerosene lamp burning on the bureau. 'Gene sat down in the only chair, while she sat on the bed. She liked the matter-of-fact way he accepted things. It made her feel as though she had been getting breakfast for him a long time. It gave her the comfort of a past. "I didn't useter mind it," she answered. She had been watching his cup, and the moment it was empty she inquired:

He handed over his cup and watched as she poured it carefully so as not to stir up the grounds. It certainly gave him a warm glow of satisfaction to be sitting warm glow of satisfaction to be sitting the with her to wait on him. It made him feel at home. It took the curse off the city. It gave him a fixed point—something to come back to. Like everyone with vagabond instincts, he had really a keeper appreciation of home than many a keener appreciation of home than many of those who never wander. He was no mere gypsy. He relished the sense of stability which comes of having a secure line of retreat. But this was something even better. He felt the pride of being the sole head of the establishment. In the sole head of the establishment. In every glance, every movement, every word of Bella's he saw her acknowledgment of him as master. He didn't try to get any deeper into her emotions than this. He was content to let the matter rest there, basing it simply on the fact that she was a mere weman and he a man. "What you goin' to do today?" he asked.

It pleased her to have him show this interest. But it raised a new question. What in the world was she going to do? What in the world was she going to do?
She saw nothing to do but to walt for him to come back from work.
"I dunno," she answered vaguely.
"Maybe I'll sit in the park a while."
"Good idee," he nodded. "Ye oughter get the air."
"What time'll you be home?" she asked.

"'Bout six, I s'pose." She cut several slices of bread and be gan to butter them for his lunch.
"You'll come straight home?" she asked,

"You'll come straight home?" she asked, without looking up.

"You bet," he answered. "This makes a feller want to come home."

She bent lower over her task. She placed thin slices of beef between the bread. Then she took and empty bottle and filled it with cold coffee, adding a generous supply of sugar. He pushed back his chair and rose. She did his lunch up in a newspaper and handed it to him. He took them without a word. "Maybe you won't like these," she said in an artful attempt to draw some word of praise from him.

A STRONG APPEAL TO YOUNG MEN

Belmont Pastor Exhorted Them to Enter the Ministry of God.

SUNDAY IN THE CHURCHES

Sermons Preached From Many Pulpits by Local and Other Pastors.

The evening service at the Wellington Street Methodist Church yesterday was conducted by Rev. A. E. Jones, of Belmont, who made an appeal to the young men to enter the ministry. He said that Christ while on earth made the preaching of the gospel his gospel was the best vocation today.

He asked his hearers to get in touch help them as much as possible. His opinion is that if the church did this frequently allowed their morals to give they would find that the strangers were not so very foreign as supposed and it might turn out that they were similar to Canadians. He said that it would not be very difficult for the foreigners to assimilate our ideas.

To bear out his assertions he described a meeting held a week ago at which a Russian evangelist from Toronto spoke to about 150 of his fellowcountrymen. When questioned as to their approval or disapproval of his preaching to them, they stated that they would be very glad to listen to The evangelist advised them to take advantage of the opportunities offered by the board of education for the study of the English language, and also advocated that they spend more money on sanitation, and not live in such rowded houses as there are at present. Many great deeds had been accomplished in the past by small bands under capable leaders, and much good could be accomplished by the church if the rank and file had trust in the leaders.

A Lambeth Preacher. Rev. R. J. Garbutt, of Lambeth, preached at Askin Street Methodist Clayton J. Moorehouse, of Ilderton, occupied the pulpit at the evening service. Both speakers dealt with missionary problems.

Rev Mr Garbutt spoke in the morning from the text: "And one man shall be as a thousand." He stated that at the present time in business and economic and mechanical affairs one man is now doing the work that many men did in the past years. The same principle could easily be applied to church work by the members giving more money and doing more work. If this scheme was followed out, the speaker said that there would be a great impetus in religious work, and one man would be able to do as much work in the missionary fields as was done by several in earlier years.

In the evening Rev. Mr. Moorehouse, basis today as it was in early times. Large congregations attended on both occasions, and were rewarded with earnest, practical addresses. His text in the morning was the verse, "If a man compel thee to go a mile with him, go with him twain.

Mr. Hawkings applied this text to the life of man and stated that the first mile referred to in the verse was the equivalent to a great deal of Christian service, which is done through a sense of compulsion, not for love of the task in hand. anv

"Many people keep their religion down to the irreducible minimum, said Mr. Hawkings. of the Royal Northwest Mounted Pohart. lice, who is now residing in South London, addressed a large meeting of the dist Church Sunday morning on his experiences in the Hudson Bay district, where he spent five years.

The speaker was a member of a detachment of twelve sent north to colect customs, and also on account of American Governments as to whether the Hudson Bay was an inland sea or gram of speech and song. The party sailed from Quebec and stopped at various ports on the coast of Labrador and Hudson Bay before arriving at Fullerton, where was stationed. The squad which Mr. McArthur belonged to was composed of picked men, and no member of the detachment was a user of liquor, as the climate in that country is such that it seriously affects those who drink alcohol in any form.

A Wild Place. Fullerton is about 500 miles north of Fort Churchill, and one trip was made each year to get the mail and orders. He said that deer, wolves and bears were plentiful, deer particularly. On one occasion the party had to stop for two days to allow a herd of deer to pass. He corrected the impression that the natives of that country liked raw meat, by saying that they did not like it any more than white people. The country around Fort Churchill is suitable for growing potatoes and other kinds of vegetables, while at Split ten," which first drew Dr. Barnardo to Lake, between Norway House and Fort Christian service. Superintendent H. E. Wilson, of the City Mission, spoke to a large audience last evening, and the close of the service there was one conversion. The subject was "The World of Chaos," and the text Genesis 1 and 2. stated that the condition of the world before the coming of light was a picture almost impossible for the people of today to imagine. Nothing was in the shape or form that are prevalent today. The human soul was very much Eve. He leaves a widow and infant similar to the world at the time of creation. God saw the possibilities of the world, and He also sees the pos- ing interests and had come to spend sibilities that lie before man. #### CHICAGO CANAL DECISION IN CANADA'S INTEREST

Washington, Jan. 12 .- In an elaborate opinion, dealing with the principal points advanced in the long series of arguments which were held last year at the War Department, Secretary Stimson has denied the application of the Sanitary District of Chicago for permission to divert from Lake Michigan 10,000 cubic feet of water per second instead of the 4,167 feet at present

In denying the petition, Secretary for War Stimson says he has reached the following conclusions:

First.—That the diversion of 10,000 cubic feet per second from Lake Michigan, as applied for in the petition, would substantially interfere with the navigable capacity of the navigable waters in the Great Lakes and their connecting rivers.

Second.—That being so, it would not be appropriate for me, without express Congressional sanction, to permit such a diversion, however clearly demanded by the local interests of the sanitation of Chicago.

Third .- That on the facts here presented no such case of anent necessity is made evident.

Fourth.-That the provisions of the Canadian treaty for a settlement by joint commission of "questions or matters of difference" between the United States and Canada offer a further reason why no administrative officer should authorize a further diversion of water, manifestly so injurious to Canada, against Canadian protest.

The Only Really Illustrated Bible

Heretofore the word "illustrated," as applied to a Bible, meant merely a few allegorical "pictures" of Biblical events taken from any source and "conveniently" placed in any part of the book, merely as embellishment inserts, but not directly alongside and explanatory of the verse intended to typify or make plain; but our publishers, at an outlay of $50,000, prepared accurate illustrations DESCRIPTIVE of the VERSE which they accompany, and placed directly next to the verse of the scene described - the only place it can be looked for or found quickly, the only place the illustration is a help to you-making this the FIRST and ONLY complete ILLUSTRATED Bible.

$50,000 Spent For Illustrations

More than 600 beautiful art pictures, by the world's greatest artists, are printed with the type matter, where they at once explain the subjects which they accompany. These magnificent illustrations alone cost $50,000. In addition thereto are fullpage plates of the world-famous Tissot collection in colors. These beautiful color engravings are also carefully selected, with the object of further making plain obscure passages in this greatest of books. It can truthfully be said that never before have illustrations so vividly portrayed their subjects and embodied in them the spirit of living reality.

BOTH CATHOLIC AND PROTESTANT EDITIONS presented under the same terms as shown in the free certificate printed elsewhere.

Hamilton Club Is Practically

Ousted From Rugby By

O. H. A. Action.

Toronto, Jan. 12.—The Canadian Rugby Football Union held its annual meeting at the King Edward Hotel yesterday when delegates from all clubs affected were in attendance. It was decided that the incoming executive should appoint a committee to look into the affiliation of this union with the A. A. U. of C. and report later. It was also learned that the committee appointed to look into the abiguity of the rules made no definite finding. A new committee was appointed.

The difficulty was evinced on the standing of the Alert Club in its connections with the O. R. F. U., now that it has been turned down by the O. H. A.

The Alerts were officially dropped. A debate was precipitated as to the real meaning of being "dropped" or "expelled." The original motion was that they be "expelled." Two rinks of London Curling Club QUEBEC NOW LEADS.

Quebec. Jan. 12.—In the presence of 2 record house, and after the finest display of hockey seen in this city for a number of years, Quebec defeated Canadiens last evening by a score of 4 goals to 3, and made themselves leaders in the N. H. A. It was a battle of giants from the first sound of the whistle, and kept the spectators guessing all through the match.

Curlers left this morning for Paris, Ont. where they will take part in the Colts' Bonspiel, which opens in that town this afternoon. The London Club is the only club in London entered in the Colts' event, the Thistle Club having decided not to play this year. The following players will compose the two rinks:

The St. Thomas club then challenged and they succeeded in capchallenged, and they succeeded in cap-turing it. The London Club then chal-lenged the St. Thomas club, but the later would not accept, claiming that two challenges could not be made in the same challenges could not be made in the same season. However, they forgot that the Thistle Club had accepted two challenges for the medal, and had lost it on the second challenge, which, according to St. Thomas, they had no right to accept. The local clubs feel that some rules should be drawn up concerning challenges for this medal. This would do away with all disputes in the future. In the meantime, the London club have a challenge in, and it is up to the St. Thomas club to name the date when the match is to be played off. Five rinks from each club take part in these games.

England's Lord Chancellor and Mr. Taft to Attend Convention. [Canadian Press.]

Montreal, Jan. 13. - A convention in this city, to be attended by the lord chancellor of England, the Right Hon. R. L. Borden, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, ex-President Taft, the president of the French Cour de Cassation, the bottonier and distinguished members of the Paris bar, such is the function which will take place in Montreal next September, if the carefully-laid plans of the American Bar Association materialize. The association, as had already been stated, has definitely decided to hold its annual convention in this city and it is proposed to make the event one of the most memorable in the history of the organization. At the present moment, Frank Kellogg, president of the association, is on the high seas, bound for England and France, where Frank Gibbs saw him for the he will get in touch with the leading with a view to insuring their presence at the gathering, while Frederick E. Wadham, secretary-treasurer of association, after spending the day here, left last night for Ottawa, where he will interview the Prime Minister, the chief justice, the leader of the Opposition, the Minister of Justice, and other distinguished gentlemen resident in the capital.

gratulate the cluzens of London on their good judgment in this matter, and wish to impress the council with the fact that it is our duty to carry out this project to a successful end.

I advise the city hall committee to at once consider the question of making the larger building in the Spencer block (now owned by the city) into fit condition to house the different civic departments now quartered in the present hall, what the cost would be, the time it would take, etc., so the council can decide the advisability of vacating the present building at as early a date as possible.

County Buildings.

The alteration and improvement of these buildings are now at a standstill awaiting an agreement between the county and the city on further expenditures. To complete this work the matter should be taken up when the county and

This possibly more directly affects the people as a whole than any other question. It should be followed up very decidedly, taking up different sections one by one and completing them; get a paving plant of our own, particularly a concrete plant, the latter, in my judgment, being the best and cheapest kind of road to construct and maintain. # THE SEVENTH IS

Not Counted Among Those That Sell Best, But Its Circulation Exceeds All Others.

Much is said about the "six best sellers." This refers to books that for the time being are most popular in the public eye. Books of fiction usually outrank all others in the list. It is interesting to note that during the year 1911 the combined sale of the six best sellers amounted to only a little mee than half a million copies. But there is a seventh best seller, which should be placed first, for during the same period the Bible had a sale of more than a million and a half copies, or more than three times that of the six best sellers. The Advertiser is presenting to readers an illustrated edition of the Bible, which is pronounced by all authorities to be the most wonderful work ever published. Besides the choicest selection of colored engravings from the magnificent Tissot collection, this Bible also contains up ward of 600 pictures printed in with the type, every one a work of art, and each particular picture illustrating the verse which it accompanies, Such pictures illumine the text. They make plain the obscure points and give to the reader many new meanings. London Stock Exchange.

LONDON, Jan. 13.—Money was a shade easier today. Discount rates were steadler, although it is expected that the Bank of England will get most of the $5,900,000 gold offered in the open market. The stock market was dull, with a reactionary tendency. Gitt-edged shares declined on new issues of securities and the political situation. Copper stocks were flat, owing to the cut in the prices of metal, and Paris sold its favorites on the cabinet crisis. The feature of the day was the slump in National Telephone stock, which fell from 141 to 109 after the decision of the railway and canal commission awarding the company $62,576,320 for its system, which was taken over by the Government on Ian 1, 1912. city, who defended the men. Murray, so the Kingston story states,

Fairburn stoutly maintained that he was innocent, and that he did not meet Murray until shortly before they were arrested in the bar of the King Edward Hotel. Both were intoxicated and attention was attracted to them when Fairburn attempted to extract a roll of bills from Murray's pocket. The latter appeared to be merely a farm hand, and the first idea of the authorities was to afford him protection until he revived from the intoxication. However, it was learned upon his arest that the money in his possession
