U. S. GOVERNMENT TAKES NO ACTION TO AVERT STRIKE

Inform Both Parties No Efforts Will Be Made To Keep Peace.

WILL SUPPLY FUEL

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 23.—Semi-official notice that the federal government will not intervene further in anthracite wage negotiations to prevent a stoppage of the mines Sept. 1 today reached Atlantic City. The news was conveyed to both the policy committee of the mine operators and the officials of the miners' union who broke off negotiations for a new wage contract on Tuesday and left the unresolved prospect of a shutdown in the industry next week. The United States Coal Commission, both sides were told, could go no further in an endeavor to enforce peace, since the renewal of the wage contract negotiations which was undertaken at its intervention last week had merely served to precipitate another break.

Notwithstanding, the operators' group intends to remain in Atlantic City, at least until the end of the week in an effort to show that the employers seek every means of reopening discussion.

TO PREVENT FAMINE.

Canadian Press Despatch. Washington, Aug. 23.—Although not yet ready to reveal the full scope of its plans, the United States government is preparing to move decisively to prevent serious consequences from the threatened suspension of anthracite production Sept. 1.

Not only will the railroads, the soft coal producers and the state governments be expected to do what they can to minimize suffering and demoralization of industry, but federal officials in every agency from the White House down will stand ready to throw the weight of their authority into the balance if the coal famine becomes a reality.

In the preparations now being made for eventualities, the possibility of averting a final break between the operators and miners has been almost completely submerged. There was no indication in any quarter today that further overtures for a settlement were in prospect, although the coal commission, which already has intervened without success, continued in session.

The general lines of the administration plan for supplying bituminous coal and reserve anthracite stocks to the sections which will be most affected by the Sept. 1 shutdown, probably will not be revealed until the governors of the anthracite-consuming states meet with federal officials and railroad representatives in New York next Tuesday.

PREDICTS SHORTAGE.

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 23.—Suspension of anthracite mining September 1 may mean a coal famine, John Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, warned today.

At the same time Samuel Warriner, chairman of the Anthracite operators' policy committee declared that such a suspension would mean no more than a temporary curtailment of supply.

REBUILT AFTER FIRE.

The Thomas Alway Home for Children on Wharfedale road, which has been rebuilt after last winter's fire, again houses its little charges. Twenty-five children have already been returned to the home.

OLD LONDON BOY, EDUCATED HERE, FIGHTS 'RUMMERS' AS RADIO EXPERT

Earle S. Fletcher in Charge of Plant on U. S. Coastguard Cutter "Gresham."

CHASING RUM FLEET

That a former London boy, educated in the London Collegiate Institute and employed here for many years, has charge of a wireless plant that has no equal on the Atlantic seaboard is a fact known to very few residents of this city. Yet such is the case.

Earle S. Fletcher, the foster son of Mr. Hugh Brodie, Muncey, who was educated in this city and who was employed here by the Benson-Wilcox Electric Company, is a young man in question, and is now chief radio operator on the United States Coastguard cutter "Gresham." He is well known to many employees of the G. N. W. Telegraph Company here, and is a graduate of the London Collegiate Institute.

Mr. Fletcher continued his chosen profession after having left school, and when war broke out he joined the Canadian Engineers, to which corps all wireless operators, etc., of the army were attached. After the war he returned to his old home, and he applied for and received a commission in the Royal Air Force, acting as a pilot. After the war concluded, he did not remain in the service, but he applied for and received a commission in the Royal Air Force, acting as a pilot.

Today he is on the cutter "Gresham," combating the efforts of bootleggers, rum-runners and smugglers, in charge of four operators and the most powerful plant on the Atlantic coast.

That his work is interesting and full of responsibility is borne out by the following article from the New York Journal:

Each one of Uncle Sam's most valuable assets in the important business of catching the rum-runners, who are continually trying to slip past the ever-watchful eyes of the coastguard and land their cargo of illicit liquor. With the assistance of wireless the guard is proving its efficiency in catching the law-breakers by intercepting the messages which are sent from the ships which are anchored off the shores and decoding them in order to find out the movements of the bootleggers.

Ships approach the coast laden with thousands of cases of booze and send out radio messages to the coastguard, telling them where and when to send out boats to unload the cargo and the number of boats to send. These messages are, of course, sent in code.

Made Homeless By Fire Children Return To Home

After some months of absence from their old home the children who were in the Thomas Alway Home, on the Wharfedale road, at the time of the disastrous fire are beginning to return. Twenty-five of them are now in the rebuilt home and the others who are out in the country are expected to be back within the next few days. At the time of the fire many, poor people, were interested in the home offered to take some of the children until the home was ready for their occupation again. Others were taken into the country, and the four strong boys who were in the home at the time of the fire are now on probation from the juvenile court will be taken care of. The children are happy to get back to their old play haunts, back to the swings and the treetops.

The playgrounds lack only a wet weather shed in which the children could play in the rainy weather. If any child lover in the city could give them this they would be completely happy, as far as playground accommodation is concerned.

Fruit jars, that is empty ones are as abundant as love taps at a council meeting, and the matron would gladly accept any fruit either fresh or canned. Fresh fruit is especially acceptable, and the jars are only waiting to be filled. The S. O. S. for the refilling of the jars is out, who will answer it?

EXPECT MULOCK WILL BE CHOSEN AS CHIEF JUSTICE

Ottawa May Name Sir William as Successor to Sir W. R. Meredith.

IN SECOND DIVISION

Special to The Advertiser. Toronto, Aug. 23.—The death of Sir William Meredith makes a vacancy in the first division or appellate court.

His successor as chief justice of Ontario may be Sir William Mulock, chief justice of the newly-created second permanent appellate court.

In the event of Sir William Mulock's transfer, Mr. Justice Riddell might be elevated to the second chief justiceship.

Sir William Mulock and Mr. Justice Riddell are regarded as eminent members of the supreme bench of Ontario.

Speculation is rife. Canadian Press Despatch. Ottawa, Aug. 23.—Speculation as to the choice of a successor of Sir William Meredith as chief justice of Ontario is now rife, but no appointment has yet been made.

There were at the time of Sir William's death three chief justices in the Ontario courts, the other two being Sir William Mulock and Hon. R. M. Meredith.

Under the new organization of the Ontario court, only two posts of this rank are contemplated, chief justices of the first and second divisions, respectively. In July Sir William Mulock was appointed chief justice of the second division, and it is not probable that he may now be elevated to the head of the first division, which carries with it the title of chief justice of Ontario.

It is possible, however, that an appointment may be made outside of the ranks of the existing chief justices.

A. N. Sheldon, of Ventura, Calif., plans to walk on the sea from the mainland to Santa Catalina Island, a distance of more than 30 miles, using airtight pontoons attached to his feet.

With Mr. Skye's departure, London was left with only two men for two years has been prominent in all enterprises having to do with the city's business and social welfare. He is director of the Chamber of Commerce, president of the London Rotary Club, president of the London Health Association, which operates the London War Memorial Institute, governor of the Musical Art Institute, and chairman of the audit committee of the United Welfare Fund. He was also keenly interested in the new hotel movement in London.

Always a lover of outdoor sports, Mr. Skye was one of the city's golfers, and a currier of note. His absence will leave a vacancy which will be found difficult to fill in sports, industrial and social activities of London.

ADJOURN HEARING OF HOME BANK CASE

Afternoon, is for the purpose of protesting against the announced winding-up process suggested by the curators, A. B. Barker, and his advisors. Depositors have drawn attention to the fact that the old Farmers' Bank was subjected to the same process, resulting in huge losses to thousands of depositors.

A repetition of this alleged mismanagement is feared in the case of the Home Bank.

Invite Londoners. According to Toronto despatches, O. Chappelle, the London manager, has been asked to invite representatives of local depositors to attend the Queen City conference. As far as can be learned, however, no London men plan to accept it, preferring to leave the decision with regard to winding up the bank's affairs, in the hands of the organization of depositors which will meet for the first time in the Walker House this afternoon.

"If the Home Bank is put into liquidation to the disadvantage of depositors, some of whom fear a clean-out, it will be a case of flagrant disregard of depositors' prior claim on all the bank's assets," another citizen declared. "But we will probably hear it to the Toronto depositors, who appear to be thoroughly acquainted with the situation."

London Unorganized. From the above opinions it seems that local depositors do not countenance organizing despite assurances from Toronto that local holders were already organized for the purpose of protesting Home Bank liquidation.

It has been definitely established that by far the greatest individual losses experienced here were suffered by Roman Catholics. Many priests and other persons connected with the church had their life savings in the Home Bank, and it is estimated that 75 per cent of Home Bank stock was owned by persons of the Roman Catholic faith. Consequently, if the double liability provision is enforced, they will be called upon to shoulder losses running into the hundreds of thousands.

The cause of the accident has not been determined.

The female lobster has been known to provide 160,000 eggs at a time.

CHIEF ARCHITECT MAY RECOMMEND GENERAL CHANGES

Government Official Inspects All Federal Buildings in London—Holds Conferences.

SEES HEADQUARTERS

Recent developments in the proposed transfer of the administrative offices of Military District No. 1 from Wolsey Barracks to a point in the downtown district indicate that immediate action will be taken by the Dominion government. R. Wright, chief architect of the department of public works, Ottawa, has returned to the capital after completing a three-day investigation of the buildings that have been prominently mentioned in connection with the new headquarters.

Before he left Mr. Wright held a conference with officers of M. D. No. 1, and later looked over the "Chapter House," on Piccadilly street, the Daily Grange building, on Piccadilly, and the former Advertiser building, on Dundas street. A semi-official announcement was made recently to the effect that the Daily Grange building had been chosen, but it is now learned that the plans are still in a tentative state.

Military men in the city believe, however, that definite announcement of the place that will house the district offices will be made shortly after the arrival of the chief architect in Ottawa. The officers point out that the ratification of the plans in this regard were held up until the government had made a survey of the available locations and had made his recommendations.

During his stay in the city, Mr. Wright also paid short visits to the postoffice, the customs house, and the federal inspector of taxation offices, but he did not inform any of the government officials whether or not he had made a survey of the available locations and had made his recommendations.

For years past the feeling has been that London should have a more modern and larger postoffice, and on several occasions pressure has been brought to bear on the government to have the matter thoroughly investigated. The lobby of the local office is much too small for a city of this size, while the working offices are none too large. The stuffiness of the stamps and larger offices has been the subject of comment for some time past, and Mr. Wright made a special point to examine the quarters, and also made a survey of the space available should the department decide to install a larger office for this purpose.

Inspects Customs House. The chief architect was shown around the income tax office by Commissioner George Tambling, and also looked into the question of adding minor improvements to some of the offices.

The remodeling of a section of the "long room" of the customs house has just been completed, and after looking over the work, he remarked that the extension of the wickets should add to the efficiency in handling business during rush hours. It is understood that the heating system of the customs house will be improved before the cold weather sets in.

Valera and Violence.

Rumors have been persistently circulated for several months past that the authorities of the Irish Free State could arrest their arch enemy, Eamonn de Valera, at any moment, but that they refrained from doing so in the fear that he would prove a white elephant on their hands.

It now appears that these rumors were entirely baseless and had their origin in the vivid imagination of certain newspaper correspondents, for the Irish government had issued a statement that the military and police had positive instructions to seize the republican leader whenever and wherever found. His apparent immunity he owed to the infinite precautions which he took for his personal safety, and he was captured at the first opportunity that presented itself, namely, when he appeared in public at Ennis a week ago Wednesday.

It was thought at first the arrest, so spectacularly made, would lead to a recrudescence of violence on the part of the followers of the noted prisoner, but, as far as can be ascertained, they do not intend to revive the policy of force for the present at least. Instead, they are devoting themselves to peaceful forms of protest and to the adoption of constitutional methods by nominating about 50 more candidates for the new Dail Eireann than they had originally intended to put forward. They are taking this step in the belief, or at least in the hope, that a strong reaction to the insurgent cause will follow the arrest of its leader. For this view they have a certain amount of historical justification, because, almost from time immemorial, political prisoners have always made a powerful appeal to national sentiment in Ireland. Whether the event in this case will justify the calculation remains to be seen.

As for De Valera himself, his election to the Dail for County Clare seems to be taken as a foregone conclusion. From the reign of Brian Boru, who defeated the Danes at Clontarf in 1014, the Dalcassians, or Claremen, have always been prominent in Irish affairs and have always taken an advanced national stand. It was the election of Daniel O'Connell to the British parliament for Clare in 1828 and his refusal to take the oath at the bar of the House of Commons that brought about the Catholic emancipation act in 1829. Clare will therefore run true to form if it elects De Valera. What will happen to him afterwards no one can foretell.

We Need More Magistrates.

Squire Hunt of St. Thomas had a ride with a motorist who, when he came to turn on his lights at dusk found they would not work.

The squire advised him to proceed to the nearest garage, intimating that if they were "pinched" on the way he would try and get him off.

The St. Thomas "squire" has about as much common sense as any magistrate, but we are to understand that if a motorist appears before him in future for not having his lamps lit, that he will get off if he pleads they were not working.

Many a motorist has paid a fine for not having his lights working, or some other part out of order, when he was quite ignorant of the defect.

As Squire Hunt says it would be a good idea to always carry a magistrate along in the car.

The only trouble is there are not enough magistrates to go around. So what will the St. Thomas "squire" do about that?

Canada's Open Door.

The announcement that the immigration department at Ottawa has completed plans for taking care of 200,000 immigrants from northern Europe in 1924 is full of interest, especially to farmers, for it is to be presumed that it is mainly with the object of following agricultural pursuits that this multitude of people are being brought to the country. But in view of the thousands of good men who have come to the country this year, and the thousands who have come to the country in years not so very far distant, it would be interesting to know what has become of them all. Have they realized the vision which rises up before almost every potential emigrant of one day being the owner of a farm and the possessor of a good bank account, or are they still working on from daylight till dusk for some other man in the hope that some day their dream of being the possessor of well-stocked barns and acres of golden grain will come true, or have they relinquished the plow and the hoe with disgust and drifted into some city in the hope of making headway as workers in some factory or warehouse? It would be exceedingly interesting if there were some means of ascertaining exactly what has become of the immigrants who have come to this province, say for the past three years, whether they are still on the farms on which they were placed or if they have "snuck their jobs" and gone elsewhere. The scarcity of farm labor in Ontario appears to have become chronic in spite of the hundreds of good men from England and Scotland and elsewhere who are distributed over the various farms each year, and the supply of agricultural labor from these sources seems to have worked out pretty much the same as pouring water into a sieve. What is the reason of this? Is there anything wrong with the system of contracts as between employer and employee? Have conditions been plainly stated to the new arrival? Is he given any reasonable hope of in due time raising himself from the position of a laborer to that of a proprietor? All these things require elucidation, for this is vital to the success of any scheme for placing men on the land, no matter whether it emanates from the provincial or dominion authorities.

Prehistoric Canadian Art.

An illustrated book dealing with prehistoric Canadian art has recently been compiled by prominent Canadian archaeologists. The purpose of the book is to introduce to Canadian designers and manufacturers the quaint arts and drawings of the original inhabitants of this country.

Japanese art, together with Egyptian, Chinese and Dutch has been, in the last 20 years, commercialized to such an extent that everywhere their motifs have been incorporated in modern fashion creations. Few people realize that the original North American Indian was of the artistic temperament, but design is response to needs, conditions and aspirations, and the Indians so well understood this that they appear to have consciously restrained themselves to the development of domestic arts like pottery.

The primitive efforts of the North American Indian are to be seen on the many pieces of pottery and tobacco pipes which have been recently unearthed. Although the designs which adorn these age-old domestic utensils are in some cases elaborate, the true Indian art is simple. From close contact with nature, the trend is toward animal carvings, which, on pipes, have been worked out into grotesque-looking figures.

The shadow effects of the simple and crude strokes of the Indian upon his clay pots is a striking one, and already, with the publication of this book, Canadian manufacturers have taken up the idea of popularizing our prehistoric Canadian art.

The Rubber Fish.

Report from Miami has it that a sea monster has drifted ashore near that point. Well, this is the season for them. The notable absence of sea serpents from this year's crop of thrillers has left the field open to other varieties of monsters. In Western Ontario we have not actually experienced the presence of strange creatures but we have heard enough about prehistoric mammoths and other bygone peculiarities to last the season out. Such information as we have obtained, however, has been based on scientific fact.

On the other hand while the list of weird denizens of the deep that have so far been washed into public prints is not long, it is choice. The one reported from Miami is not so large, but makes up for lack of monstrous size with strangeness of detail. Especially is the tail—or is it tale?—matter for comment. That steering fin, it is stated, is hinged to the body like a ship's rudder—which raises the question whether that amazing fish got its idea of steering apparatus from vessels sailing above or whether designers of the ship's rudder got their cue from the fish.

Summer is usually the season for reincarnations of Mandevilles and Munchausens to make their presence known through the medium of the press. Stories of rejuvenated prehistoric creatures found in South Sea jungles and giant butterflies with golden wings attacking whole villages apparently find larger credence during the dog days. Certain it is that imaginative correspondents for newspapers, which ought to know better than employ them, find the summer a prolific season. Anyway, tales of fabulous activities in remote sections of the earth can't do the general public much harm, but they are liable to impair a newspaper's reputation for veracity.

Note and Comment.

Japan is going to start to scrap battleships. That is much better than having the battleships start to scrap.

A California mountain has broken out in eruption, and Toronto's ghetto is alarmed by explosions of home-brew. Was the Irishman's picnic a mere coincidence?

A gentleman down south says he has a frog which warbles like a fish-crow. There is also, of course, the man who has pink elephants walking on the ceiling every night.

London has lost an illustrious son in the death of Sir William Meredith, chief justice of Ontario. He was respected by friends and opponents alike, not merely for outstanding ability in his profession, but for high qualities of character. His life is an inspiration and his death a bereavement to every Canadian.

APARTMENT HUNTING.

You start on a tour with an agent who's sure you won't get what you want for the money. Five rooms and a bath and a half—'tis to laugh. For a measly three thousand? That's funny. The floor is the fourth, the exposure is north. There's a room which has barely a niche in. The wall with a sink and a stove in a sink. So your murmur, "So this is the kitchen!"

A cubicle small at the end of the hall. The agent insists it's a bedroom. The dining-room's thin and the parlor its twin. But the ceiling is high and there's headroom. Though seldom does one get a glimpse of the sun, Yet you sign up the lease with elation; Though four flights all squeak and all creak, Well—it is such a stylish location.

Here's irony for you. A Home Bank advertisement in the Irish picnic program has the following: "Invest your money in this bank and see what it looks like a year from now."

If the French and British got as much money for their exchange of notes as pugilists get for exchange of blows there wouldn't be any indebtedness.

New version: Shall we drink out this dance?

No, it isn't that girls with beautiful bathing suits are anxious to swim. They never know when they might meet a newspaper photographer.

Some women are so hopelessly naïveté that they have to ask for what they want.

One could be more content with ups and downs in life in London if so many of them weren't just holes in the pavement.

The office gourmand says that every time he gets mad at the French he thinks of their fried potatoes and his anger passes.

Any motorist will tell you that when Justice mounted a motorcycle she threw away the scales.

THE SECRET OF HAPPINESS.

That they may have my joy made full in themselves.—St. John 17:13. Earthly happiness, the pleasure that comes from without through the senses, may be pure; but it is never perfect, and it does not last.

Happiness on earth, spiritual joy and peace, satisfies us now, and has the promise of immortality.

The secret of it is fourfold. It does not depend on what we have, but on what we are.

It is not found by direct seeking, but by setting our faces toward the things from which it flows.

We must climb the mount if we would see the vision, we must tune the instrument if we would hear the music.

We can never have it without sharing it with others. It is the result of God's will for us, and not of our will for ourselves; and so we can only find it by giving our lives to his control.

TO THE EDITOR.

THE PRESBYTERIAN WITNESS AND CHURCH UNION.

Editor of The Advertiser: Sir—The Presbyterian Witness is broadcasting its church union editorials, invadence of all over Canada. Will you, therefore, kindly permit a few words, first on the Witness, then on its statements.

During the past three years or so the Witness has cost the Presbyterian Church some forty-five thousand dollars, and has thus helped to cause the deficit in her mission funds. Another factor in that deficit is the attempted coercion, mislabeled "union." There are many who will not give to the church so long as there is attempt to blot out or end the church as a separate organization.

On the other hand the proposed new church would be itself a corporation. Its church courts are the church, and have corporate powers. This is a long, long step from democracy to autocracy, from government by the people to irresponsible clerical despotism.

A second point in the policy of the new church is the calling and settlement of ministers. A Presbyterian congregation can call a minister; the right of appointment is arranged for them by the local presbytery. If the minister accepts the call—well, if not they can at once proceed to call another. They can call both and choose their minister.

In the proposed new church they can give a call at a certain time of the year, when the settlement committee meets, but the appointment rests with that settlement committee, at a distance, which meets once a year, and can appoint whom it may choose. If the one who is called does not accept the call, the settlement committee appoints someone for at least a year. Next year the congregation may call again, and may be served in a similar way. The rule of the new church is as follows: "Any pastoral charge, in view of a vacancy, may extend a call or invitation to any properly qualified minister or ministers, but the right of appointment shall rest with the settlement committee, which shall report to the conference, for information only."

Presbyterians can both call and choose their ministers. In the new church they may call, but they have to take what the settlement committee sends them. And yet the Witness tells people that the new church is Presbyterian, and that there would be no change.

Other points might be noted, but these suffice to show the spirit and type of the proposed new church. Presbyterians who would barter for their own church would barter for the church of others. The new church is a democratic, Scriptural and free would be selling their glorious birthright for a soken of ecclesiastical bondage. E. SCOTT.

Montreal, Aug. 20, 1923.

ON CHURCH UNION.

Editor of The Advertiser: It would be a boon indeed to find some common platform where the whole Christian world could get together as one body to worth-while ends. There is not, however, very much hope that the fusion of two or more churches into one organization could accomplish much in that direction. It favors far too much of that disease for machine making; the setting up or rearrangement of organizations to attain desired results, with very little idea apparently as to the supply of necessary motive power.

It is, of course, very much easier to study and strive after the erection of new machinery, or the reshaping of old arrangements, than it is to labor at the serious work for which all churches primarily exist. There is also, unhappily, a very strong temptation to the energetic and able to fall for this disease, because of the acclamation and public notice which is bestowed upon skilled ecclesiastical machinists. It would be well if one could always remember that no amount of man-made devices can take the place of living growth and natural increase. The energy employed in society formation, or the fusing together of different churches, must leave less strength for that tending and careful cultivation of individual growth, which means so much to the healthy life and true understanding of the members in every denomination.

There is again a great danger which none but the foolish would dream of forgetting. It is that which always waits upon any great religious organization; an institution for instance like that which might come into being by the union into one body of all the non-Catholic churches. That danger is the temptation offered, the opportunity presented, of becoming a great political force, engineered and directed by ecclesiastically-trained leaders. What that may mean, the injury it can do to church and Christianity alike, the harm it can inflict on men and nation, is clearly shown in the story of the great Catholic mediaeval church.

Another point to be meditated upon by those who labor for the union of our various churches is set out for them in their Bibles: "There are diversities of gifts." All men cannot see alike in matters that concern the spiritual life, any more than they can in anything else, outside the region of tangible material fact. Different churches, with variant forms of government, formulae and doctrine minister, as they can, to those who find in one or the other that help and teaching which they deem acceptable. All churches are practically at one in the primal facts of faith and duty, but on that common foundation each builds and works, as the thought and ability of leaders and members will permit: "I am the vine; ye are the branches." In no vine are all the branches patterned alike. That would destroy beauty; replacing harmonized difference, and the richness of variety, with a poor mechanical uniformity. But each one is different in grace of tendril, beauty of leafage, the measure and value of fruit produced. Why, then, so long as all are component parts of the vine and each yielding some fruit, should there be this desire to graft the many into one great bough, on the strength of a mere theory as to possibilities of improvement? Better, one would think, to abide by the old counsel: "Whereunto ye have attained, therein walk." Where each and every church is doing its utmost in the common service, hindering upon all, there is small danger of losing that vital bond which must hold those in union who serve in the power of the same spirit. ## Your Health: Why Some Folks Suffer From Attacks of Vertigo.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.

One of the most disagreeable of symptoms is dizziness—"vertigo," as the doctors call it. If you have ever experienced an earthquake you may recall the terrible sensation of having the earth, normally so dependable and stable, suddenly become tremulous, and unstable. The very foundations of life seem to have been torn from beneath your feet.

The first time a spell of dizziness attacks you, you will have a similar sensation. Indeed, the two experiences are remarkably alike.

There are a lot of different things which may be followed by vertigo. Hot weather, especially a protracted spell of hot weather, may bring on an attack of dizziness.

Abuse of the stomach by irregular eating, or the taking of cold food and drink, may produce it. Some persons have the bad habit of gulping down quantities of ice water when they come in from the hot outdoors. This is a bad practice and among the symptoms it may produce is vertigo.

Digestion is impaired by the in-temperate drinking of ice water. Almost all the stomach and intestinal disturbances which produce dyspepsia or indigestion may cause dizziness.

It is remarkable how the circulation of the brain is influenced by toxins or poisons generated by indigestion, constipation and fermentation. Blind spots, dizziness, flashes of light, floating spots and dizziness are common symptoms due to digestive disturbance. Of course, vertigo produced by such a cause is not particularly serious, but it may indicate some disturbance in the brain or nervous system. There are several diseases of these structures which have dizziness in their chain of symptoms. We hear much these days—too much, I fancy—about high blood-pressure and its dire effects. These are uncomfortable feelings due to high pressure and vertigo is one of them.

It may seem strange to trace dizziness to the eyes or ears, but it can be done in some cases. In the inner ear, deep in the skull, are certain little semi-circular canals which constitute the spirit-level of the human body. By their position and the movement of the fluid within them, we determine our position, and they help us to maintain our balance or equilibrium. If they become damaged or diseased, serious vertigo follows at once.

If the muscles which move the eyes become unbalanced, there is produced a disturbance of the spirit-level. This has the same effect upon us as that an earthquake would have. While there is not actually a trembling of the earth, it looks as if there were, so we have the sensation of dizziness as long as our eyes are open.

The treatment of vertigo depends on the cause. It disappears speedily as soon as the exciting factor is removed.

LONDON'S SONS OF IRELAND HAVE GALA DAY AT PORT

Irish Picnic One of Best In History of I. B. Society

Boys of Erin Have Wonderful Time at Port Stanley Outing. With Plenty of Fun For All in Attendance.

Erin go Bragh!" With the spirit of this motto, "Forever" uppermost in their minds, 5,000 persons claiming the Emerald Isle as the home of their ancestors took possession of Port Stanley yesterday, when the 47th annual picnic of the London Irish Benevolent Society was held.

From an early hour in the morning until nearly midnight, the Murphys, Kellys, Rileys, Sullivans, Mulvans and other kindred from the heights of the Shamrock made merry on the heights, and along the walk, at a moment was wasted and certainly not a dull minute spent by the London Irish.

With the band of the G. W. V. A. playing the many charming airs of "Old Erin," the older persons at the picnic had hard work to keep from losing themselves into the woods and sitting shillalahs. Memories of Donbrook Fair were brought back by the "Wearin' of the Green" and "The Fish Washerwoman."

Here and there groups of jovial spirits could be heard challenging the world in song to "tread on the tail of a coat." Needless to say there were those who were willing to take the challenge, knowing well what the consequences of their act would be.

Wearing the Green. Green was the predominant color, everybody, young and old, sporting some of it, and it proved the open sesame to good fellowship. All formalities were thrown aside, and whether Irish born or of Irish descent, made merry together. No hard word was heard anywhere at the Port, and one and all voted the day well spent.

All Make Merry. Many of the most prominent of London's citizens were to be seen, chief among them being Mayor George Wenige, who filled the dual position of announcer for the costume races and for the lost and found. He stayed away from their parents, and were wandering among the huge crowd until the voice of London's chief magistrate recalled them. In-hand Revenue Inspector Cecil Webb forgot about stills and other articles of a similar nature, and mingled with the crowd with a genuine shillalah under his arm. Chief of Police Birrell and other members of the force looked on from the distance and entered into the fun of the day. Mayor McCann presided over the foundation of fun, while the executive of the society worked hard and long the whole day, and the success fully edited their efforts.

Some of the oldtimers at the Irish picnic were missing, however, and many were the revellers who regretted the absence of "Uncle Bill" Moore.

Stephen Grant, Tom Rowan and Barney Hogan, all of whom have passed away since the last picnic. The request for Barney and Tom was most noticeable when the call went out for men to dance the Irish jig.

Takes Fast Trip. One of the most amusing incidents of the day was when one youngster about ten or twelve years of age started to wander down the incline, not waiting for the railway. After a few steps he slipped and all that could be seen of him was a cloud of dust as he reached the bottom in what was undoubtedly the quickest time made for the trip from top to bottom.

One accident occurred that tended to mar the baseball game between the Jersey Creams and Smallman-gram's team, when Miss A. Percy, catcher for the latter, sustained a nasty cut on the head when hit with the bat. She was carried to the hospital tent, where the wound was stitched and dressed.

Crowds circled the rings where the dancing, baby show and sports were being held, and it was hard to find a position from where anything could be seen to advantage. The whole top of the heights was a mass of people, and all seemed to have but one object in view, that of enjoying themselves by watching others perform.

The race program of 16 events was run off in quick time with Harry Rananah acting as starter. It was found necessary to run several of the events off in heats, and then finally, so great was the number of competitors.

List of Winners. The following are the results of the Boys under 10 years—J. Phelan, J. Nash, O. Zavitz. Girls under 10 years—Dorothy Walters, Lillian Hayden, Lucy Wilson.

Boys under 15 years—Howard Pollock, J. Phelan, Bill Croker. Girls under 15 years—Iva Henry, Evelyn Trudell, Helen Barnes.

100 yards open—W. Wanless, Noton Baldwin, Oscar Lee. Married women's race—Mary Horick, Mrs. McGilivray, Mrs. As-tell.

Three-legged race—Howard Pollock and Gerald Phelan, J. Watts and George Bennett, N. Pauspe and Milton McDonald.

Wheelbarrow race—Helen Barnes and Tom Johnson, Mrs. and Mr. Horick, Mrs. Gleason and Mr. Stanley.

Blind race—Mrs. Houck and Mr. Baker, Mrs. Asbell and George Pearson, Mrs. Gleason and Mr. Stanley.

Guest race, 100 yards—Lenore Henry, Mrs. Houck, Mrs. Smith. Obstacle race—Tom Johnston, Morton Dale, Harold Clarke.

Kiddy kar race—S. Loughlin, J. E. Gelling, T. Jarvis. Horse race—J. L. Gilling, S. Loughlin, T. Jarvis.

Tilting the bucket—C. McIntyre and J. L. Gilling, Howard Pollock and George Beggs.

Baby Show of Interest. Many were the bouncing babies that were entered in the baby show, and the judges were hard put to determine the winners in the various classes. Nevertheless they finally accomplished the job to the satisfaction of all. The winners in this were:

Girls under one year—Dorothy Mires, 486 Exeter street; Jacqueline Secord, Thelma Bartlett, Lambeth, R. 2.

Boys under one year—R. A. Bradish, Glanworth; Kenneth Pettit, 589 Wharfedale road; J. W. Neville, Union; J. C. Palmer, 138 Horton street.

Girls under two years—Violet O'Dell, 718 Princess avenue; Doris Carroll, Tecumseh Barracks; Eileen Pierce, Lambeth; L. Allan 310 Simcoe street.

Boys under two years—Stewart Lang, Denfield; Jack Blair, Bridgeburg; Billie Blenthorp, 37 Terrace street; Ivan Berdan, Vienna.

Heaviest baby under two years—Colin Hindley, 502 York street. This baby would not register on the scales and was a fine specimen of childhood.

Best twins under two years—Ronald and Donald Hepburn; Hugh and Alex Watson, 122 Dreaney avenue.

Handsome mother with twins—Mrs. John Lawrence, 47 Hyla street; twins, John and William.

dozen would be performing at once. Sergeant Thomas McDonald, London's premier piper, furnished the music for the jigs and flings and carried out his duties well, having regard for the tiniest tot dancing and timing his music to suit her twinkling feet.

Dancing Results. The dancers of the jigs, clad in real Irish fashion and carry small shillalahs, drew many remarks of admiration from the crowd, while their dancing was the center of all eyes. The Highland dances drew a larger number of entrants, and much applause greeted the youngsters as they went through the steps.

The result of the dancing was: Irish jig, girls—Helen Wilkie, Marjorie Taylor, Daisy Mitchell. Irish jig, boys—Jack Kelleher, Gerald O'Sullivan, Harold Grayson. Irish jig, men—Martin Morkin, Tom Morkin.

Irish jig, boys and girls under 10 years—Benjamin Grayson, Frances Parker, Stanley Kelleher. Highland fling, girls—Daisy Mitchell, Violet Gilmore, Marjorie Taylor.

Special prize—Patricia O'Sullivan. Highland fling, boys—Jack Kelleher, Stanley Kelleher, Gerard O'Sullivan.

Shawn trews, girls—Marjorie Taylor, Daisy Mitchell, Mary O'Sullivan. Shawn trews, boys—Jack Kelleher, Lionel Goodwin, Harold Grayson, Gerard O'Sullivan.

In the ballroom dancing, many competitors presented themselves, and the winners were indeed qualified for the honors awarded them. The casino floor was right for dancing, and to the strains of an excellent orchestra, waltzes and fox-trots were danced through without one complaint being registered.

The winners in this competition were: Best waltzers—Mr. and Mrs. Wolfe Best. Best lady waltzer—Mrs. Bean, Miss Steffens, Miss McDonald. Best fox-trotters—Miss Parker and Mr. Archer.

Hold Banquet. A happy ending to the festivities of the day came in the evening, when the officers and members of the Irish Benevolent Society, accompanied by all those who were in charge of the many phases of the outing, sat down in the L. & P. S. cafeteria for the annual banquet. The committee had hoped that Sir Adam Beck would be on hand to deliver the chief address of the evening, but a wire was received from Sir Adam this afternoon stating that parliamentary business detained him in Toronto and that he found it impossible to make the trip to Port. In his stead several of the members gave brief talks.

Interspersed with uproarious Irish jokes, sing-songs, and the inimitable antics and patter of Sam Amaro, the official cheer leader, the banquet was a huge success, and each of the speakers was enthusiastic in his praise for the fine spirit of camaraderie that is making the Irish Benevolent Society better as each year rolls by.

Middlesex County Officials Hold Picnic at Springbank

Councillors and Employees Join For One Big Day's Outing — Other Picnics at Popular Resort.

Middlesex County officials held their picnic at Springbank Park yesterday afternoon. Hundreds of the Middlesex councillors, county and township officers, with their wives, families and friends came from all over this district to take part in the joyous program of sports arranged by the picnic committee.

The nippy air made the races and other competitions more enjoyable than usual, and worked up an appetite which was only appeased by supper. Following the supper a softball game was played, which provided all the thrills of a big league affair.

Dr. T. C. McNally, district officer of health, gave an address during supper time on health. Dr. McNally made a plea for the enlistment of public health nurses to prevent the spread of disease.

The members of the committee to whom the participants in the picnic are indebted for such a complete program of sports and entertainment are: Warden William Ross, chairman; John Stuart, county clerk; Capt. Tom Robson, county treasurer; John Cousins, reeve of Westminster Township, and Allan McPherson, reeve of Glencoe. Among the ex-wardens of the county who were present were J. McTaggart, T. Turnbull and J. S. Cousins.

Results were only kept in three of the sporting events, but prizes were given to many children who took part in the complete program of sports.

SUNDAY SCHOOL PICNIC. The chilly weather which prevailed at Springbank Park yesterday held no fears for many smaller groups of picnickers who displayed exceptional interest in the sports which each party had arranged. The weather was ideal for the various exercises, and evidently the committees of the Springfield Methodist Church and Elmville community picnic foresaw this, and consequently arranged a complete program of sports. Competition was keen, and the nippy air only added zest to the merry-makers. Three hundred citizens of Elmville picnicked at the river park. Sports were run off, after which a sumptuous luncheon was provided by the ladies.

The Sunday school of the Springfield Methodist Church, who chose Springbank Park yesterday afternoon for the scene of their annual picnic. Many enjoyed the sports and attractions which had been arranged by Rev. M. C. Parr and S. Brown, superintendent of the Sunday school.

The results of the races were: Children under 8—Velma Walters, Edward Brown, Alma Mills, James Paisley. Children under 12—Marjorie Paisley, Eleanor Pierce, Fred Brown.

Young men's race—Graham Sterlings, Ivan Fonger, Grant Beattie, Roy Perrie. Boys under 16—Lloyd Brown, Ivan Vernon, Edward Stevenson.

Needle and thread race—Mrs. S. Brown and Harry Mills, Mrs. S. Paisley and Rev. M. C. Parr, Mrs. H. Mills and S. Brown, Mrs. H. Klemm and Ralph Fonger.

NEAL BAKING COMPANY. The fourth annual picnic of the Neal Baking Company proved to be a wonderful success. A complete program of sports was staged, and found many enthusiastic entrants.

Following are the winners: Girls, 3 to 4 years—Jean Connelly, Jean Sharman. Boys, 3 to 4 years—Kenneth Player, Jack Nicholson.

Girls, 5 to 6 years—Shirley Hill, Bernice Player, Nola Walsh. Girls, 7 to 8 years—Mrs. S. Brown, Mrs. Plumridge.

Boys, 9 years and over—Norville Telfer, Harold Walsh, Paul Hill. Wheelbarrow race—James Davis, Verne Stinchcombe.

Needle-and-thread race—Mr. and Mrs. Telfer. Bullion race—C. McMahon. Soda biscuit race—C. McMahon.

Verne Stinchcombe, Mary Telfer. Blind pig race—James Davis and Miss Brown, Verne Stinchcombe and Mrs. McMahon.

Ball game between money bags and coffee cakes—The money bags won.

GLADIOLI CONTEST OPEN TO BACKYARD GARDENERS At the flower show next week the Horticultural Society is going to spring an innovation for the contestants in the form of the society's silver medal. This award has been purposely placed on a small class so that every back yard gardener, if it has a hundred gladioli growing, may have a chance to compete, and it is expected that there will be real competition for the new medal. Unlike the three cups which are now in competition, the medal belongs permanently to the winner.

There has been such a great improvement in the gladioli in the past five years that this year's quality is confidently expected to be above the average. There will be classes for seedlings not in commerce, and besides gladioli the show will recognize other flowers, notably asters.

QUIET IN POLICE CIRCLES. Last night was one of the quietest ever experienced at the local police station. During the whole period of darkness the telephone rang but once and that when an officer phoned in. Up to 10 o'clock today the desk sergeant had answered but one more, making a total of two calls in 18 hours, almost a record.

And an assistant cook, and a doctor kindly supplied by Victoria Hospital, Kawanian Ed. Gains, chairman of the camp speakers' committee, provided a speaker for practically every night of the two weeks. Many members of the club visited the camp regularly, and donated candy, fruit and nuts for the camp fire gatherings in the evening.

The total cost of the camp, $608.47, includes provisions, fuel, staff, Red Cross supplies, canteen, amusements, and other expenses. The total expenditure, $281.02 covers stove, pipes, cooking utensils, cutlery and dishes for the use of the camp each year; also lumber and repairs to buildings.

The camp was conducted under the supervision of Kiwanian Frank Gray, assisted by Lloyd Houlding of the Y. M. C. A. and six tent leaders, a cook-

Special to The Advertiser. Chicago, Aug. 23.—The second attempt of the United States mail service to span the continent in night flying was successful today.

Transcontinental mail, which left San Francisco yesterday morning, arrived here in a plane piloted by Eugene Smith at 4:23 a.m., after it had been transported in unbroken relays. No obstacles such as were caused by a Wyoming fog in the first trial were experienced.

A few minutes later the mail was speeding eastward in a plane piloted by Owen Williams. Williams was re-

Says Astronomy of Value In Daily Affairs of Man

Prof. H. R. Kingston Thinks Expedition to Catalina Islands to Study Eclipse in September Will Greatly Increase Knowledge of Solar System.

The following is the first of a series of articles by Prof. H. R. Kingston, of the University of Western Ontario, who is en route to Catalina Islands in the Pacific Ocean for the purpose of observing the total eclipse of the sun on September 10th. Prof. Kingston will explain and describe the expedition in his articles to The Advertiser.

By PROF. H. R. KINGSTON.

Special to The Advertiser.

Winnipeg, Aug. 21.—Events in the sky are usually of interest to only a few people, and these folk are generally considered by the remaining large majority to comprise a very impractical group far removed from the interests of ordinary life. Now and then, however, there occur in the sky phenomena which strike the imagination of all and create a widespread interest in things celestial. Of these, the most spectacular are comets and eclipses, the most wonderful of all being a total eclipse of the sun.

In days gone by, and in some countries even up to the present time, these occurrences have not only been of marked interest, but have been regarded with great fear, as omens of coming disaster, famine, pestilence, or war. History and literature abound with references to these dread superstitious. On a recent eclipse expedition it was with difficulty that the natives were restrained from doing violence to the eclipse party and their equipment, because of the belief that they were in some way the cause of the coming eclipse with its supposed subsequent disaster. It is recorded that during a battle between the Medes and the Lydians a total eclipse of the sun occurred, striking such terror into the hearts of the contending armies that they ceased fighting and a lasting peace was established between the two nations. If astronomy had done nothing more than discover the causes of such events and remove the superstitions connected with them it would have done much for the world.

Astronomy's Service.
In the realm of history astronomy has rendered a signal service. Total eclipses of the sun are such spectacular events that they were often recorded along with contemporary events. Now that we know the causes of eclipses we can calculate back over the centuries and tell exactly when they occurred, and from what parts of the earth they were visible. In this way we are enabled to determine with accuracy and certainty the exact times at which have occurred many important events in the far past.

"But," we may say, "has astronomy any place in the practical affairs of practical men?" This question is quickly answered, if we stop to realize that every survey being made at the present time is accomplished by applying our knowledge of the stars. We could not find our latitude or longitude or the shape and size of our earth, if it were not for the science of astronomy. By a knowledge of the stars our ships are guided safely across the seas, and accurate time is supplied to the whole world.

STAGE BALL GAME

Springbank yesterday was alive with Orientals and Oddfellows. Their fourth annual picnic was held at the river park, and over 300 Orientals, Oddfellows, their families and friends, thronged the park to take part in the novel and lengthy program of sports. Visiting Orientals came from all over Ontario to join in the merry-making, and the afternoon's outing proved to be one of the most successful ever staged.

LONDON MAY BECOME CENTER FOR AUTHORS

Headquarters in Western Ontario May Be Transferred From Chatham.

It is reported that the Chatham branch of the Canadian Authors' Association may be discontinued, and the headquarters of the association for Western Ontario transferred to London. This change, however, depends to a large extent on the number of members of the organization which London can produce, and its ability to efficiently carry on the work.

The Chatham branch of the Canadian Authors' Association, which at the present time includes London in its area, was organized in the fall of 1921. The original officers were: Arthur Stinger, president, who shortly afterwards moved to Mount Pleasant, N.J.; vice-president, Mrs. D. C. Macgregor of London; (Marian Keith); secretary-treasurer, Victor Lauriston (novelist). Chatham.

Former London Girl Traveling to Iceland Describes Quaint Scenes en Route.

NORWAY INTERESTS

By MAURINE ROSS.
Miss Maurine Ross, a former well-known London girl, is touring Norway and Iceland. This is the first of a series of articles which she is writing for The Advertiser, a description of the people and places encountered.

"You will have to wait three days in Bergen before taking the boat to Iceland," said the agent in the Bergenske Dampskibsselskab office, Bergen, Norway. We were not sorry, for even the most seasoned and sophisticated traveler could not fail to find this funny and beautiful Norwegian city fascinating. Historically, Bergen is a small mine of interest, and it was especially interesting at the moment, because of the hundreds of peasants, in the gay, national costumes, whom we met at every street corner, or glimpse, sauntering through the parks. "It is the annual folk festival," we were told, and were hurried off at once to the "Nygaards-parken," where the peasant dancing and competitions were to take place.

We arrived in the midst of what was obviously a patriotic occasion, judging by the enthusiasm and fervor of the man speaking, and the martial air played by the band when he concluded. A small platform, closed on three sides, had been erected on the banks of a miniature lake. Through the trees on the opposite side, the dancers came, preceded by a man playing the Norwegian violin. (It has eight strings instead of four, the extra four lying under the others.) What started us was that the tune he played for the dancing was an old Scotch highland fling! One proof of what I believe to be true—that the Norwegians and Icelanders are closely akin to the Scotch. The red vests of the men's costumes, the red and green trimming on the black skirts of the women, and their white aprons, illumined by the flaming torches held high by the men dancers, made a really marvelous picture set against a background of purple mountains and green shrubbery.

The German Quay.
Perhaps no part of Bergen is so full of historical significance as what is called the "Tyskebyggen" or German quay. Based in the early 14th and 15th centuries, the fishing trade of Bergen was entirely in the hands of the Germans. And since Bergen was the main port for the fisherman from the villages in the north, it might almost be said that the Germans controlled the fishing trade of some 25 million of the fish. Many of the houses, used by these German traders still stand on the quay, one of them being known as the "Hafslat Museum." The old wooden structure shows many of the customs of that distant period. The wash stands, for example, while hardly as utilitarian as our present day ones, are quite attractive. They are solid brass, two pieces; one a large, shallow tray, the other a pitcher suspended in some fashion over the tray. The chambermaid, if they had such luxuries in those far distant days, would have had to be huxton to carry the unwieldy pitcher when it was filled with water. Perhaps they did not have to refill it often!

Various other objects which have been preserved in these olden times give an insight into the character of these German merchant and their ways of ruling their subordinates. They did not believe, for example, in giving their workmen any privacy, or in trusting them out of their sight. The bed in which the ruler slept had a chambermaid's bed could move without getting out of bed, and which gave him a view into the room where his hirelings slept. His fireman also slept with a sliding panel by his bed, in order that he, too, might watch. Both beds, by the way, are set in the wall, and in the winter time, in order to keep warm, since there was no heat, these German houses on the Bergen quay, both the door and window would be closed, and the sleeper would eventually be heated by the warm air he created by his own close airlessness. Today's health inspectors would have a grand and glorious chance for a regular publicity campaign, posters and all, if they could only get at these German fish traders.

Safety First.
Probably the first community kitchen was organized on the German quay in Bergen. Because of their intense fear of fire, no cooking was done in this row of houses where these haughty German nobles lived and fattened on the Norwegian fish. Everything was done in one house, quite apart from the living and sleeping quarters, and was carried in large bowls and basins to each house in turn. This same dread of fire caused the fire brigade along the quay to be the most capable and well-trained possible. It was such a distinction to be chosen for the fire duty, and the chief of each squad was presented with a brass ornament, rather like a Pioneer's breastplate. Greater honor than this had no man—no, not one!

We were quite interested to see that the ledgers used in the transacting of this fish business between the Norwegians and Germans have been kept, and some, more than 200 years old, are legible, written in a hand which would do credit to any 1923 instructor in the art of writing.

Buildings in Bergen.
Modesty is one of the outstanding characteristics of the Berganite. He is sure to begin making apologies to you immediately because the hotel accommodation in his city is not good. I am confident that not one person with whom I spoke in Bergen forgot to tell us about the fire in 1915, which destroyed some 300

Urges Rotary Take Ideals Into Business Dealings

Canadian Press Despatch.
St. Catharines, Aug. 23.—"Let us show the world that we are living Rotary in our dealings where our Rotary ideals are touched. Carry Rotary ideals into your business dealings and into your craft organizations," urged Frank Crittfield, president of the Toronto Rotary Club, in a strong address urging square business practices between buyer and seller, between employer and employee, through a simple and workable code of business methods, successfully worked out by live committees in local clubs, at the opening session of the 27th International Rotary District Presidents' and Secretaries' conference in the Memorial school this morning.

"If we advocate as Rotarians the principle of a square deal, the justice and righteousness of clean business, we can safely leave it to work itself out in our communities," concluded Mr. Crittfield.

URGES NIGHT CLASSES FOR ARTIST AFTER AID

Mayor Wenige Has Practical Advice To Give To Ambitious Young Men.

A letter from a married man of 26, who describes himself as a commercial artist, possessed with a large amount of ability and a minimum of the mayor's aid, was read by the mayor, after giving his reasons why he thinks he will make a success of commercial art, requests certain pecuniary assistance to allow him to take courses in the work.

As he states he is working all day, the mayor suggests that he take advantage of the night classes in the Technical School. "These classes," said his worship, "are very cheap, some $5 a season. I believe, and I should think any young man with the average energy would be able to find the time and money to attend them. That's what I shall tell this young man at any rate."

It is a finely constructed building, white stone, about half a block in length and four stories in height, situated directly in front of a boulevard, and evening to either an excellent concert or an exuberant merry-go-round, the one for the "grown-ups" the other for the children. The food at the Norge is good, too, and the prices are moderate.

THINKS DEATH OF RUSSELL SOLELY DUE TO ACCIDENT

After viewing the body of Edward Russell, who died in Victoria Hospital yesterday afternoon after having received a fractured skull when he fell from a C. N. R. train at the Colborne street crossing, Dr. Cameron Wilson, coroner, stated that he thought the mishap was a pure accident and nothing else.

Dr. Wilson has called the inquest for next Monday night at the police station, and an effort will be made to determine whether the man was attempting to alight from the train while it was in motion or whether he was seized with a fainting spell and slipped off the steps.

DECLARES COST COAL PRODUCTION IS NOW DOUBLED

U. S. Commission Shows Labor Charge $1.62 in 1913 and $3.97 in 1923.

MAKES CLOSE STUDY

Associated Press Despatch.
Washington, Aug. 22.—The cost of labor in production of one ton of anthracite increased from $1.62 in 1913 to $3.97 in the first quarter of 1923, the United States coal commission announced today in a report giving the result of its exhaustive study into production and costs of the hard coal industry. The report called attention, however, that while labor costs formed 61.8 per cent of the sales realization price in 1913, they had dropped in 53.5 per cent in 1923.

Based upon sworn reports from 140 producers, representing 98 per cent of the total output, the commission's study considered in great detail every phase of the financial side of anthracite production. Separate analysis were made of operators classified as railroad companies, larger independent and small independent, a final comparison being made of the returns from 13 companies who supplied comprehensive reports for the January-March period of 1923.

Margin Increases.
In the case of ten railroad companies, the commission found the labor expense factor to be $3.92 for the first quarter of this year, compared with $3.90 in October-December 1922; supplies unchanged at 71 cents; general expenses 21 cents, compared with 87 cents, and the total "f.o.b. cost" $5.64 compared with $5.48. With a sales realization of $6.53 per ton, this gave the companies an understudy a "margin" of $1.04 a ton as compared with $1.01 in the final quarter of last year.

Net Operating Income.
This margin cannot be considered "return to the operator," the report said. "It is practically equivalent to net operating income before payment of interest or federal taxes. It is not a profit, but a margin for arriving at relative profits of different operations."

New York, Aug. 23.—A strange scene was enacted in a dimly-lighted funeral parlor on the Upper East Side just before dawn today. The showmen and women, the freaks of Coney Island, stepped from behind their hideous masks and passed the bier of one of their most renowned. The face they looked upon was that of Captain Frederick Walters, one of Barnum's original attractions. It was Barnum himself who advertised Walters as "The Blue Man," taking the name from the indigo that discolored Walters' body from head to foot.

Strange Career Ends.
In his death a strange career came to an end. Here was a man who, according to his widow, might have had the title of Lord Granville had he chosen to wear it, a runaway from home, a trooper in India, a captain in the Duke of Cambridge's own lancers. It was while soldiering that he received an injury; afterward his body turned blue. Barnum saw him and nabbed him.

Jail Authorities Protest Transfer of Convicts From the Penitentiary.

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 23.—Pennsylvania's "Hard Boiled Crooks" from the big cities are not welcome in the smaller counties even as occupants of their jails. Citizens and jail authorities in about a dozen such counties are up in arms today over the proposal to transfer them from the famous Eastern Penitentiary at Philadelphia.

Jails are Unsafe.
But it has come. Protesting jailers contend that the jails are unsafe for skilled craftsmen, highway robbers, murderers and other desperate men. Moreover, the jails themselves are too small to accommodate the county prisoners and state convicts at the same time. Then the jailers have drawn the line at playing hosts to such a motley crew.

Ordered Investigation.
The curtain went up on this play shortly after Tuesday. Philadelphia assumed the reins of leadership in Pennsylvania. He ordered a sweeping investigation of affairs at the penitentiary, and a hearing on the subject. Just what the ultimate climax will be is still a matter for conjecture.

THE JAY-WALKER.
If there is one characteristic attitude of which we Canadians ought to rid ourselves as quickly as possible, it is the habit of saying:
"Oh, let's take a chance."

Taking a chance is what is to blame for most of the automobile tragedies the country over—chancing a grade crossing, chancing a sharp curve without slowing down, chancing a skidding ahead and passing another car too closely. The trick of taking a chance is to be avoided. It is crowded thoroughfare without waiting for the traffic cop's signal known as "jay walking" is responsible for the long lists of street accidents printed from year to year.
Not long ago, standing on a corner at the curb waiting for the signal for a change of traffic, I noticed near me an impatient little woman who grasped a small boy by the hand, he was fretting and fuming, muttering to herself that she'd been standing there ten minutes at least.

The Million Dollar Doll

By C. N. AND A. M. WILLIAMSON.
Authors of "The Lightning Conductor."

Old Harky Is Won Over At Last By Terry's Simplicity

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY.

Teresa Desmond (Terry), lovely and unbelieveably innocent, is impersonating her beautiful half-sister, Juliet Divine, known as the Million Dollar Doll, whose sketchy career is unknown to Terry.

Miles Sheridan, Terry's "Dream Prince," furnished the money for her convent education when she was a child. His wife is making him wretched with her infidelity, and in order to facilitate her obtaining a divorce, Miles offers the Million Dollar Doll $20,000 to take a yacht trip with him, stipulating that he will not "trouble" the girl. This, he knows, will give his wife sufficient grounds for divorce. Juliet is unable to take the trip herself, but working over her little sister's gratitude to Miles, she persuades Terry to go in her place. Terry is an exquisite counterpart of her sister.

Betty Sheridan, Miles' wife, is deeply in love with Paul di Salvano, a handsome Italian. Eustace Nardo, a wealthy Greek, who does not know of Terry's relationship to Juliet, is in love with the younger girl.

Poor little Terry, unaware of her sister's reputation and of how she must appear in the eyes of the world, starts the voyage with Miles, who does not recognize in her the little girl he befriended so long ago. Mrs. Harkness, his old servant, is sternly disapproving of the Million Dollar Doll.

Harky is slowly won over by Terry's sweetness and charm.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

The Taming of Harky.
The taming of the old lioness had been slow, almost imperceptible at first, and had come about through a series of small shocks, little surprises. She had expected that the spoiled hussy would be exacting of her time and patience, but the creature never asked for any service.

How it managed, Mrs. Harkness couldn't conceive; but it did fasten them. And it never put upon her the expected indignity of lacing or buttoning its shoes.

Instead of leaving its room in a state of utter disorder, its belongings were so tidily disposed that even half a gale couldn't upset them.

Instead of making Harky's head ache with a deluge of rich French perfumes, the expensiveness used to account at all, except the delicate iris sachet in the padding of its dress hangers. All this made the Irish woman admit to herself that these "vamps" were not quite so offensive in their manner as she had imagined. And the thing seemed such a baby! Its eyes were so big and soft, with the look in them of "oh, please don't be so cross!" Harky could not stiffen herself against that look day after day.

Then came the climax when Miss Divine fell down the three last steps of the companion-way going below to her cabin, and wrenched her ankle. She made no fuss about the affair at all; that was what touched the old woman's heart.

A gale was blowing, and the girl hadn't minded it, apparently. She went up on deck to walk as usual, while her stateroom was being "done," but the yacht had suddenly dipped, and the girl had been caught by a wave.

Drenched to the skin, she had started below to change, had lost her footing as "Silverwood" gave an unexpected pitch, and had come down with a twisted foot.

Mrs. Harkness had not yet finished the girl's cabin, when the door opened to admit a dripping figure with a very white face.

"A nice mess ye've made of yourself, miss!" reproached the old woman, who was already on easier terms with her charge than at first. "Ye might have gone overboard by the look of you!"

"Oh, it's nothing much," said Terry, though she had need "an good deal startled, and at the moment was feeling sick with the pain in her ankle."

"I'll change my things, and be all right again. But I'm afraid my dress must be dried. I'm sorry to make you trouble."

"You're mighty pale," remarked the Irish woman. "Maybe ye're a bit sea-sick?"

Terry said no, she was not sea-sick. Still Mrs. Harkness lingered, and took the drenched dress as it was peeled off. "My gracious, ye've torn the heel from your shoe!" she exclaimed. "And yer ankle is swelling up. What have you done to yourself?"

"Twisted my ankle a little, that's all," Terry replied. "I don't think it's going to be very bad."

"I do believe you'd never have mentioned it if I hadn't seen for myself," said Mrs. Harkness. "Why no, it wouldn't have been worth while," admitted the girl. "I can bathe it if it gets worse."

But having forced help upon the young person for the first time, and got off her clothes (what a child she was to look at in her little kimono!) the relenting woman brought liniment and lint.

"Good thing it's not a broken bone!" she grumbled, "as we've no proper surgeon on board. Though for that matter, the master is what you'd call a natural bone-setter. He was always that, even as a young boy."

Folks used to bring him dogs with broken legs, and birds with broken wings, and he'd mend 'em as good as new! He might have made a livin' that way if he'd need to make it.

"But he hasn't, more's the pity, not even with the pictures he paints, which they say are so wonderful, after the new style. As for doctorin', I'm not bad, hand at it myself, for simple things."

Terry neither shrank nor winced under the manipulations of the strong old hands. When her ankle had been bandaged she insisted upon dressing again, and would have tried her luck on deck once more if Mrs. Harkness hadn't said that it was no weather for lame people, and the master would be angry if he knew she'd run such a risk.

Terry became docile on hearing this. She imagined that Sheridan would be annoyed if she fell overboard, or hurt herself so seriously that she could not go ashore with him when the time came. The trip would, in that case, have been wasted, and she would have done him no good at all.

But Mrs. Harkness put it down to sheer, good-child obedience that the girl should submit her will without a struggle. Her gentleness, her courage, her reluctance to make trouble combined with the necessity to act the nurse for her, softened the last hard edge of the old woman's heart.

"She found herself thinking of her charge as 'the child,' instead of 'the creature.' She had to remind herself that the girl was what she seemed, and that she was not a simpleton."

No, the girl simply could not be what she seemed! And yet—Mrs. Harkness no longer thought of "the young madam" as who had been "fooling as 'Silverwood' gave an unexpected pitch, and had come down with a twisted foot."

Mrs. Harkness had not yet finished the girl's cabin, when the door opened to admit a dripping figure with a very white face.

"A nice mess ye've made of yourself, miss!" reproached the old woman, who was already on easier terms with her charge than at first. "Ye might have gone overboard by the look of you!"

"Oh, it's nothing much," said Terry, though she had need "an good deal startled, and at the moment was feeling sick with the pain in her ankle."

"I'll change my things, and be all right again. But I'm afraid my dress must be dried. I'm sorry to make you trouble."

"You're mighty pale," remarked the Irish woman. "Maybe ye're a bit sea-sick?"

Terry said no, she was not sea-sick. Still Mrs. Harkness lingered, and took the drenched dress as it was peeled off. "My gracious, ye've torn the heel from your shoe!" she exclaimed. "And yer ankle is swelling up. What have you done to yourself?"

"Twisted my ankle a little, that's all," Terry replied. "I don't think it's going to be very bad."

She burned to tell "Mr. Miles" about the accident, and the way the victim had borne it. Once snubbed, twice shy, however; so Harky held her tongue, but for the first time she resented her idol's attitude toward his guest. Unconsciously she ranged herself against him, on the girl's side.

The Young Chuck Learns the True Character of Robber the Rat

By THORNTON W. BURGESS.

The young Chuck, who had crept under Farmer Brown's barn, sat and stared at Robber the Rat with eyes that were round with wonder and admiration. Robber was boasting. He saw right away that the young Chuck believed all that he was told. Now one trouble with a boaster is that he never knows when to stop boasting. It was just so with Robber the Rat. To have heard him you would have thought that he was the most daring fellow in all the Great World. You would have thought that he had been everywhere, and seen everything, and was afraid of nothing.

Robber was making the most of an opportunity. You see, he is an outcast and despised by all the people of the Green Meadows and the Green Forest. None of them will speak to him or have anything to do with him. So Robber was making the most of this opportunity to appear all that he was not. He saw the admiration in the eyes of the innocent young Chuck, and it tickled his vanity.

For awhile the young Chuck drank it all in, and believed every word of it. But though this young Chuck was innocent and knew nothing of the Great World, he was by no means stupid. As he listened to the tales of Robber the Rat he took notice of everything around him. At first he hadn't paid special attention to Robber's appearance. But as he sat staring at Robber and listening to Robber's stories, it came over him that Robber was a very dirty fellow. His coat was rough, and looked as if no care had been taken of it. He smelled unclean.

"Goodness!" thought the young Chuck. "What a dirty fellow he is! He looks as if he spends most of his time in dirty places, and this is a queer kind of a place for one who has been everywhere and is afraid of nothing to choose for a home." It was right then that doubt began to creep into the mind of the young Chuck.

Then just in the middle of one of Robber's most boastful stories there was a slight noise just outside the hole through which the young Chuck had entered. The young Chuck looked over. There was a pair of greenish-yellow eyes were glaring in. They looked so fierce that the young Chuck felt little shivers of fear begin to creep over him. Then he remembered that Robber the Rat was afraid of nothing, and the little shivers stopped. Of course, he was perfectly safe with such a brave fellow close at hand.

But when he turned to look at Robber he found a great change in the boaster. My, my, it certainly was a change! "Don't move," whispered Robber the Rat. "That is Black Pussy the Cat. You stay right here, and don't move. She can't get through that hole, so there is nothing to be afraid of."

The young Chuck looked back at those glaring eyes, and he hoped with all his might that Black Pussy couldn't get in through that hole. He turned to ask Robber if he was sure of this. Robber wasn't there. No, sir, Robber wasn't there. He had stolen away without making a sound. The young Chuck blinked. "He is afraid. Yes, sir, he is afraid," muttered the young Chuck. "He ran away and left me here. He is a coward. That's what he is, a coward. Now I don't believe a word of all the things he's told me. Ugh! I don't like this place. I don't like that fellow. I don't like dirty folks anyway. I'll get out of here as soon as I can."

Mothers and Their Children

By C. L. Funnell.

One Mother Says:
The baby, and even children a little older, like to brace the feet against the table and tip the high chair or other special children's chairs backwards. The baby can't do this if a wire brace is used. Simply bend a wire frame around the chair and turn the ends to slip in under the feet. The brace is fastened in the bottom of the table at baby's place.

Miss Hopper sometimes I think there are certain things about men's clothes that are almost as funny as women's and take a letter to the Nifty Needle Tailoring Company, Swagertown, Pennsylvania. "Gentlemen, please dash paragraph."

About that four-piece suit we ordered for our customer, Mister Plowett, in gray tweed you can bill us for the extra pair of pants the knee ones and make our customer up another pair of long ones, making them a full suit. The knee ones are to allow for a temporary lameness on the left leg, because when he first ordered the four-piece suit he asked what the fourth piece was and we told him an extra pair of pants which he understood to be long ones and when the suit was delivered he kicked about the fourth piece being knickerbockers saying he would not be caught butchering a hog in them and anyway he hasn't any socks long enough to reach his knees and demanding a new suit at once paragraph.

We, of course, wrote Mister Plowett at once suggesting that the knickerbocker pants were just the thing to wear around his country estate hoping to appeal to his pride of possession but today we got a letter from him telling how he tried them once and we will have to make the adjustment above because Mister Plowett states that when he wore the knee pants out doors Sunday afternoon Brutus his registered bull mistook Mister Plowett in the knee pants for a summer boarder and kicked him out of his own woodlot causing him to fall over his rail fence which made a temporary cripple of Mister Plowett in the left leg and killed of the pants period.

'THE DAILY SHORT STORY'

HEZEKIAH'S GIRL.
By CLARISSA MACKIE.

"So all your boys and girls are married," remarked Uncle Peter Philbin, just home from a trip to China.

"All married or to be married," amended his sister proudly.

"Mother Adams! course pretty Victoria. You forget Hezekiah." The youngest Adams lifted his dark head and tossed back an unruly lock of hair.

"What about me?" demanded Hezekiah fiercely.

"You haven't even got a girl!" teased Victoria who wore a flashing diamond on her third finger.

"I have!" contradicted Hezekiah, his face quite white.

"Hezekiah Adams!" shrieked the entire feminine chorus, while his brothers winked at one another and his father smiled paternally.

"Who is she, Hez?" asked Robert lazily lighting a cigar.

Hezekiah scowled loftily and left the room. "Wait until tomorrow!"

Uncle Peter Philbin grinned sympathetically as his youngest nephew left the room. "He's got a good spirit—looks just as I did at his age—and scared to death of the girls."

"And Hezekiah is considered very handsome, Uncle Peter," said Emily.

Uncle Peter smiled in a superior sort of way. "And so was I—in my day," he exploded.

They all laughed. "You were handsome, Peter," agreed Mrs. Adams, then turning to a ruddy-haired girl who was preparing to leave, she added hospitably, "I thought you were going to stay all night with Elsie, Maud; can't you stay?"

"No thank you, Mrs. Adams, mother has just telephoned that my father has been called away and won't be home until tomorrow, and of course, she cannot stay alone."

Maud Evans made her farewells, and Elsie accompanied her to the front door, where Hezekiah had left his motor car. As usual the youngest Adams boy was tinkering with the engine.

"Hezekiah, dear, will you take Maud home?" asked Elsie diffidently, knowing that Hezekiah was used to his girl friends, as he called it.

"Thought she was going to stay all night," he uttered blankly, as he emerged from the gloom, wiping his hands.

Elsie explained. "Of course your girl won't mind," she added with a smile.

"Ready?" asked Hezekiah in an icy tone, as he opened the tonneau door.

"Please may I sit in front with you?" asked Maud, and Hezekiah, having finished with some apparatus of pleasure, Maud entered the car. Hezekiah followed, and with a farewell hoot of the horn they jumped down the driveway into the darkness of the highway.

"Hezekiah," she said timidly, "what is the matter? You don't care if they tease you, do you?"

"Of course not, Maud—only I'm in a mess now—because I am such a fool, I suppose."

"What is it, Hez? About your girl?"

He nodded. "Truth is, Maud, I haven't got one. The only one I ever fancied is too pretty and clever for me."

"I don't believe that. Why, you're going to be a great agriculturist, same day, Hez!"

He turned a glowing face. "Do you believe that, Maud?"

"Of course I do—and you are not only honest and upright, but you are clever and handsome." And with the last words, the car stopped and Maud opened the door and jumped out and ran into the house almost before Hezekiah had lifted his hands from the steering wheel.

"Maud," he called after her, but there was no answer, not even a hasty "thank you" for the ride home. Puzzled beyond expression, Hezekiah alone home in his car, pondering the matter of his quandary.

The lie he had exploded in the midst of his family did not then trouble him as much as did the further explanations he must make to them.

In the middle of the night, an idea came to him. "Perhaps Maud Evans would pretend to be my girl for a few weeks—we could break it off, if I don't tell 'em who it is the family will tease the life out of me."

He decided poor Hezekiah, for mean that he was in many ways, in the midst of his family, he was the youngest and still "the kid."

"Maud likes me a little bit, and perhaps she'd pretend to be my girl, and let me take her out in the car. If she only knew, though, she wouldn't do it—gee—" and he went to sleep with a twisted smile on his good looking face.

Late the next afternoon, Hezekiah Adams, dressed in a new suit of gray flannel, with a glistening straw hat on his handsome head, drove a brand new motor car up to the Evans's front gate. He saw Maud sitting in a wicker chair under a wide spreading oak tree that was the glory of the fine old place. He came up behind her and sat down before her cross-legged like a Turk.

Maud lifted dancing eyes. "You curious child," she mocked him, "to creep upon me this way!"

"I didn't creep—see how I came. Maud—your car outside—and I am not a child—I'm four years older than you."

"Indeed!" Maud was admiring his new air of independence. "Really, Hez, have you a new car? Let us go and see it."

"Wait a moment, please—I want to ask a favor of you. Hezekiah, I am surprised to find that your honest eyes did not waver."

"Of course, Hezekiah, if it is anything I can do," she replied, hoping it had nothing to do with his new "girl."

"It is this way, Maud," he said, leaning over and placing a dancing gleam in her twinkling eyes. "I've promised the folks to bring this girl to supper tonight—I know I am a fool to let you do this, but I am in a scrape—and I don't suppose you would—you would—"

Hezekiah blushed and grew very red.

"I would do what, Hezekiah?" she prodded gently.

"You wouldn't pretend that it's you all the time, would you? And come to supper tonight?" he ejaculated, glad that his nefarious scheming was out at last. He had risen to his feet and now Maud was getting up from her chair. He thought she looked pale—perhaps she was very angry with him for suggesting such a trick.

"Do you mean that, Hezekiah Adams?" she asked.

He nodded.

"Pretend to be the girl you love so that you may be saved the gibes of your family?"

"That is enough, Maud. I am a fool. Forgive me for asking you to act a lie. I will tell them outright: the whole thing, and I will feel a whole lot better after it. I can tell you."

Very pale and still was Maud's face as she listened, and when he had finished, she said slowly, "I am glad to hear your say that, Hezekiah, and I must tell you that I would gladly go home with you and tell them we were engaged, if it were not for her telling had brought a wave of color."

"If—what?" he gasped breathlessly.

"If I were the girl you really loved," she almost whispered.

"You asked me, Hezekiah, there is no one else in all the world," cried Hezekiah.

"And to think that I never guessed it!" sighed Hezekiah, and he pulled her to him.

"You nearly broke my heart," she said, and he kissed her.

"I will devote my life to caring for it," whispered Hezekiah.

SUMMER COMPLAINT CRAMPS and DIARRHOEA

There is no other kind of disease that comes on so quickly and with so little warning as an attack of bowel trouble.

One may retire at night, in the best of health, and before morning be awakened by the terrible cramps and pains in the stomach, followed by diarrhoea, dysentery, summer complaint or bowel trouble in one form or another.

At this season of the year, when bowel troubles are so prevalent, we would advise the precaution of always having on hand a bottle of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, so that you will be ready for any and all emergencies. You will find that a few doses of this valuable remedy, taken promptly, will be the means of preventing a great deal of unnecessary suffering, and many a time save life.

Mrs. W. H. Judd, 174 Catharine street, St. Hamilton, Ont., writes: "Last summer I had a very bad attack of summer complaint, cramps and diarrhoea. I tried many different remedies, but they did not seem to help me. I heard of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, so I decided to try it. I only took a few doses, and in a short time I was better."

Price, 50c a bottle. Put up by The T. M. B. Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.—Adv.

The Energy of Youth

He feels younger every day! He's always in the pink of condition, and because he is overflowing with abundant health the blood courses through his veins with all the vigor of youth.

You too can be a picture of cheery fitness and vigorous enjoyment if you learn and practise the Kruschen Habit of Health.

If you find you are not as well as you should be, there is probably something wrong with your internal system. Perhaps you are tied down to the busy life of the city, where you get little fresh air or exercise, and are often obliged to snatch hasty, unsuitable meals. Consequently your liver and kidneys lose their vigour, impurities find their way into your blood stream, and sleeplessness, depression, a thousand and one ills follow.

Kruschen Salts will alter all this.

Just enough to cover a 10 cent piece taken every morning in your breakfast cup of coffee or tea, will make all the difference in the world. All impurities are removed from the body, the blood stream regains its purity, the whole sluggish system responds to its energising influence. You work better, play better, live better when you take the little daily dose.

Try it yourself. Get a bottle to-day and start the healthy Kruschen habit at once.

Tasteless in Coffee or Tea

Put as much in your breakfast cup as will lie on a 10 cent piece. It's the little daily dose that does it.

Kruschen Salts

Good Health for Half a Cent a Day

A 75c bottle of Kruschen Salts contains daily use is "as much as will lie on a 10 cent piece" enough for three months—which means bounding health for less than half of coffee or tea. Every drugstore sells a cent a day. The dose prescribed for Kruschen. Get a 75c bottle to-day.

MANY THOUSANDS MAY SEE PAPYRUS RACE BEST IN U.S.

Prepare For 100,000 Spectators When Derby Winner Meets American.

DISPUTE TITLE CLAIM

Special to The Advertiser.

New York, Aug. 22.—Preparations are being made by the directors of the Westchester Racing Association to accommodate 100,000 spectators, when Papyrus, winner of the English Derby, meets the best American 3-year-old at Belmont Park on October 20.

Grand stand facilities will not permit of such a huge gathering, and the infield will be open for the thousands that will be willing to stand to see the biggest race of modern years in America.

Hardly had the negotiations been completed with Ben Irish, the owner of the British horse, when some objections began to be raised here and on the other side. In making the announcement of the race, no mention was made of a world's championship race, but it got in print, and it did not make a hit on the other side.

Raise Objections.

British turf men are not willing to admit that Papyrus is the best horse in England, and Frenchmen, who claim that Epinard, the French horse, is the fastest horse in Europe.

Some minor difficulties also have been encountered here. It is reported that the owners of Zest, the great 3-year-old of the Rancocas stable, do not want to start him in the trial of the world's championship race, which has been proposed as a means of deciding the American color-bearer. They believe that Zest should be the American representative on his season's record.

Several other owners of horses not mentioned in the five or six candidates are also howling that they should have a chance to win the big prize.

No American Champion.

Objection of British turf men that Papyrus is not the best horse in England should not hold, however, as the same condition exists here, where there has been no 2-year-old of such outstanding ability that it could be accepted and run as the official American champion.

Papyrus will carry the colors of England as a Derby winner and the best of the biggest race of the season, and the American horse selected will be one that opinion more than anything else declared is the best in the United States.

Regardless of arguments that are rather political, intense interest has already been aroused in the race, and if the officials are able to make room for 100,000 spectators, it is certain that they will see the race.

Rooster Routs Turkey Gobbler

Special to The Advertiser.

Dutton, Aug. 22.—Although cock fighting is against the law in Ontario, a farmer of that tract reports that he witnessed one recently that for excitement had any fight he had ever been present at beaten by a long way.

The farmer had a turkey gobbler, which until recently was boss of the barnyard. A good-sized rooster was newly-admitted to the barnyard, and Mr. Turk immediately sallied forth to give him battle.

For the next few minutes the Great War was a love spat compared to the battle royal that waged in the vicinity of the two birds. Finally Mr. Turk decided that discretion was the better part of valor, and the rooster hopped upon a log and crowed lustily, announcing to the barnyard in general that a new king was on the throne.

FARMERS INSPECT INDIANA WONDERS

Essex Agriculturists Are Surprised and Delighted As Trip Proceeds.

WORLD'S JAR PLANT

Special to The Advertiser.

by a Staff Reporter.

Marion, Ind., Aug. 22.—Wednesday dawned beautiful bright, with a cool freshness in the air which prompted the Essex visitors to bestir themselves to effect an early start. With streamers flying from every car, the cavalcade of 23 motors pulled out of the town of Hartford City at 7 a.m.

The first stop was made at 7:30 at the Renner stock farm, where the motorists had been invited to visit the model farm and herd of polled Hereford cattle of Stimpson & Sons.

This visit was particularly interesting in that the polled Herefords are a breed of comparatively recent origin, and were quite a novel sight to the Ontario farmers, none of whom had seen this breed before. The animals offered for their inspection were excellent specimens and combined the finest points and features of the Hereford breed with the added feature of a hornless beast.

In addition to the Polled Herefords at this farm the tourists had an opportunity of seeing the finest herd of large-boned Poland China swine in the state. One boar interested the Essex farmers particularly, having won the grand championship and sweepstakes at the Chicago International Show last winter. As an example of the values to which stock of this calibre can run, this animal's value is placed at $20,000, and some of his get also runs well into the thousands.

Vaccinated Hogs.

From the Renner stock farm the tourists retraced their route through Hartford City and motored out toward Muncie, stopping en route to take in a large hog-raising farm, where over 1,000 hogs were seen in one place where they are fed entirely on raw city garbage. Mr. Green, the proprietor of this plant, explained that it would be quite impossible to carry on this wholesale feeding of garbage had they not taken the precaution of vaccinating every hog against cholera before turning them into the feeding lots.

The last stop before lunch hour was made in the town of Muncie, Ind., where the party was conducted through the glass factory of Ball Bros., said to be the largest fruit-jar factory in the world. It covers slight-
