Proof Positive!
 The best proof that we have been satisfying our clients rests with the disposal of our Industrial Shares. We got these as a special favor to market during the Fall and Winter months, and our clients simply grabbed them up. We had a limited number only, but only 650 now remain from which our reservations must be filled.
 WE HAVE ABOUT 400 TO OFFER TO FIRST-COMERS.
 Investors don't often get a chance to make a 15 per cent. investment in a SAFE growing company that has FOUR TIMES as much assets as liabilities, hence discerning buyers asked some intelligent questions and then bought the shares.
HOW MANY DO YOU WANT OUT OF THE REMAINING 400!

Love in the Abbey
OR,
Lady Ethel's Rival

CHAPTER X - A GREAT RIDE

In the valley and dividing her from the abbey is, of course, the river. The Lombe is a stream well known of anglers, and not unpopular to artists. It is usually as placid and mild as the stream could well be, but this morning there is a good water running, and Kitty knows that the mill—the Rose-dale mill, which grinds up more money than corn, but which is a favorite fad of the earl's—is undergoing the periodical repairs. There was never a private mill yet but wanted repairing every fortnight. I suppose it gives the miller and his men a holiday, and is good for the carpenter, and so no one needs complain. Certainly the earl does not; the mill is a pretty addition to the landscape, and affords him a little amusement every now and then. He is satisfied—almost as satisfied as the miller and his men who grind flour just when it pleases them, but draw their wages regularly every Saturday.

There is a bridge from the park, which stands on one side of the Lombe to the abbey grounds, which runs for some distance on the other, and Kitty is making for this bridge, and trying to guess how far Trap and Reginald have got by this time, when she hears the pad, pad, of a horse's hoofs on the turf following her, and turning her head she sees Lord Sterne. One glance she gives to him and the next to his horse with eager curiosity—and her face falls. After all, her plotting and planning has failed. Lord Sterne has not been obliged to make shift with some timid hack—he was almost—Kitty decided he is not quite so good—as good a horse as Bat himself.

For a moment mortified and upset by this overthrow of her schemes, Kitty is for putting Bat to it and getting away; but the fatal moment of indecision is gone. Lord Sterne tries to come within half, and in another moment he is by her side with his hat in his hand, and a smile of courteous greeting.

Lord Sterne's smile, everybody agrees, is rare, and perhaps in consequence thereof, irresistible; but Kitty cannot forget his cavalier treatment of the previous evening, and gives him the barest nod of recognition—it cannot be called welcome.

"My good star is in the ascendant," he says; "I had expected a solitary ride."

And as he speaks he looks at her with critical and approving eyes. And there is good ground for approval; Kitty is at her best in the saddle. It is not only that her habit fits her—a rarer thing than one would imagine—it is not only that every graceful curve of her maidenly graceful figure is shown off and displayed to the best advantage—but it is also that Kitty is at her best in every way; she is at home, at ease. He looks at the face, so fresh in its youthful loveliness, so brilliantly beautiful with the peach-like bloom on the cheek, the rich red of the half-parted lips, and the deep, translucent light of the pure, girlish eyes. He looks, and turns his own eyes aside with a mute tribute of artistic admiration, as he makes his courtly salutation. But his courtliness is no passport to Kitty's favor.

"Why aren't you with the others?" she asks curiously.

He looks at her with a smile half amused, half—well, annoyed is not the word for it exactly.

"Early rising, Miss Trevelyan, I regret to say, was not one of the valuable principles and habits which my parents and guardians trained me to. When the rest were booted and saddled, I was discussing deviled kidneys; hence my solitary ride—a just retribution changed by a merciful chance to a remarkable piece of good fortune!"

Kitty looks straight before her with elaborate indifference, then she looks sideways at the horse, and, utterly unable to hold her tongue, says abruptly:

"Where did you get that horse?"

He looks down at the horse and then at her, with a puzzled but amused smile.

"Where did I—Miss Trevelyan, numerous though my crimes are, I may plead guilty to a charge of horse stealing! I bought him, just two years ago."

"Oh!" says Kitty, nodding, "he's your own. I thought I did not know him. He wasn't in the long stable?"

"No," says Lord Sterne, with a little air of meditation that rapidly clears—"no; he was in the side, in a loose box. Ah! that's a good horse you are on. Where did you—"

Kitty turns her eyes upon him, and sees that he has discovered her mischief and its object.

"It is a good horse," she says, with a flush; "it's the best in the stable."

"And very properly reserved for the best rider," he says, with an arch glance.

"It wasn't reserved," says Kitty defiantly; "I took him. Why shouldn't I?"

"Why, indeed!" he echoes. "Does he jump?"

"Does—he—jump!" retorts Kitty, frowning up, as he intended that she should.

"Yes," he says slowly, pretending to examine Bat's forelegs critically and disapprovingly.

"Why—jump!" says Kitty, with flashing eyes. "He'd jump over the moon! Now I might have asked the question of that!" and she points the handle of her whip with studied contempt toward the capital hunter beneath him.

"Oh, Peter can take anything—"

"Except water," says Kitty, with an air of confidence.

"I don't think he draws the line even at water," says Lord Sterne calmly.

"He can't jump that!" exclaims Kitty, pointing to the swiftly running Lombe.

Her face—her whole attitude—the gesture with the tasty, but woman-like whip, is a challenge, and Lord Sterne knows that it is.

He looks at the stream with an air of calm meditation.

"Indeed yes—your horse has hardly sprung enough, I should fancy—"

"Watch Bat," retorts Kitty, pulling that intelligent quadruped almost on to his haunches. "He has jumped it fifty—a hundred times; he will clear it now!"

Lord Sterne's face changes suddenly.

"Yes," he says, with a smile, "I can believe that, but do not show me—I mean, is it worth while?—the stream is wonderfully fast this morning—"

"And your horse can't swim, I suppose," says Kitty demurely.

Lord Sterne laughs his rare laugh. "Have you made up your mind to take it?" he says, looking at her with the smile that so irritates her—the smile of a man of the world—amused and inclined to humor a spoiled child.

"I am afraid you have made up your mind not to," she said; "I knew that he couldn't take it."

"I'll jump it," says Lord Sterne, "if you'll promise to remain here quietly until I take it back again."

"I won't promise anything," says Kitty. "Besides, I am going on the abbey road now, and Bat wants a fly. Bat, dear," she says, pinching the hunter's silky ear, "we'll show Lord Sterne's horse how to clear the swell and, taking a semicircle, she puts the eager Bat at the water, and lands.

like a bird, all flushed and defiant, on the other side.

Once she is over, Lord Sterne's manner and mood changes. She has not known it, but all his reluctance and hesitation have been for her.

With a careless touch of the hand, he, too, in his turn, gets his horse into the stride, and rises him at the swiftly running stream.

But Kitty and Bat know every inch of the Lombe, and Lord Sterne and his steed do not. The knowledge makes, and has landed on solid ground; Lord Sterne takes it a score of yards lower down the stream, brings his hunter on the soft and treacherous platform of a shelving bank.

There is one moment of struggling hesitation, then to Kitty's supreme delight, horse and rider roll back into the water, and my Lord Sterne is in for a ducking.

With her revenge before her, Kitty raises her voice and laugh a low, rippling laugh—for how many years after will she remember that laugh?—a low, rippling laugh of satisfaction that suddenly breaks off short, displaced by a quick, sharp spasm of fear.

The horse is up and pawing at the bank; but Lord Sterne, where is he? With a smothered cry, that sounds strangely on the heels of that laugh of triumph, Kitty sees him struggling with one hand against the savage little stream that is rapidly bearing him downward. Like lightning the truth flashes on Kitty's intelligence: the horse has kicked him, and Lord Sterne is battling with one arm against a miserable little stream, that will drown him—aye, with all his marvelous genius and power—will drown him like a rat, unless Providence should stretch out a hand to help him.

CHAPTER XI TO THE RESCUE.

MOST girls of Kitty's age and position would, under the circumstances, have either run away and screamed, or screamed without running away. But Kitty is made of different material to the generality of her sex. After that one short cry, when she saw her victim—for so she has suddenly come to regard him—drifting helplessly down the stream which is gradually widening and growing more fierce; after that one cry all her mind is centered on one thought—how to help him.

She can swim like a fish—but then a fish couldn't swim in a riding habit; she can shout and shriek for assistance, but beyond alarming four cows and a pair of heifers in the adjoining field, such an outcry would produce little result. Then as she rapidly revolves ways and means of success in her mind, an idea flashes across her brain.

A little below the spot where she had tempted Lord Sterne to the rash leap, the stream is spanned by the bridge which runs across it at its widest part. It is a rustic edifice, supported mainly by piles running into the water and bound together by some thick beams set crossways. To this bridge my Lord Sterne—England's great statesman, the hope and mainstay of the great Conservative party, the "glass of fashion, and the mold of form," is slowly but surely drifting, notwithstanding the efforts he is making with his one uninjured arm. Should he reach the bridge he will undoubtedly get sucked in by the tremendous current, and—well, he will be greatly missed in the House of Lords.

Kitty darts her eye at the bridge, and at the same moment slashes Bat with her serviceable whip. Bat, quite unused to this style of direction, throws up his head and makes for the bridge as if his own life depended on his reaching it, and in the space of a minute Kitty has pulled him up and slipped to the ground.

Then she tucks her habit round her after her own deft fashion, and jumps without a moment's hesitation into the shallow water at the foot of the bridge. Lord Sterne, coming downstream, sees her, and for a moment is overwhelmed with amazement.

"What are you doing?" he gasps out—"go back! Go back, you will be drowned!"

Releasing War Prisoners!

1,500,000 HAVE BEEN LIBERATED.

Allies Will Likely Winter in Russia---English to be Spoken at Conference---Cardinal Mercier on the Barbarians---Cool Reception for German Representatives.

PRISONERS RELEASED.

AMERICAN ARMY OF OCCUPATION, Nov. 27.—More than a million and a half prisoners of various nationalities have been released by the Germans, according to estimates based upon reports received by the Third Army. Of this number approximately 250,000 will pass through the American lines and will be fed by the Americans. The quarter of a million prisoners are French, English, Italian and American soldiers. The army assisted by the Salvation Army, Y.M.C.A. and Knights of Columbus, is shouldering the bulk of the task. The population of the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg already has been doubled by the arrival of the Army of Occupation. The question of feeding the former prisoners is taxing the American transport facilities owing to the fact that the new lines of communication cross No Man's Land and because the Americans are getting farther each day from the base of supplies.

SNOWED IN.

ARCHANGEL, Nov. 27. (By the A.P.)—In log huts and shacks made of birch, English Allied and American troops are holding the line against the Bolsheviks in the middle sector of the northern front in the region of Kadish. After ten weeks of fighting in swamps and thick undergrowth the Allies are now snowed in and are bivouacked along a stream on the opposite side of which are the camp fires of the enemy.

BRITISH ADVANCE CONTINUES.

LONDON, Nov. 27. The advance of the British army on the Western front is reported as follows by Field Marshal Haig to-day: Our forward march has been continued without incident. Last night our troops had reached the general line of Beho, Werhemont and Aywalle, south of Liege.

MEANS HE WILL LEAVE.

LONDON, Nov. 27. William Hohenzollern will have to leave Holland if his presence there becomes perilous to that country. Premier Beerenbroek is quoted by the Amsterdam correspondent of the Daily Express as declaring in the second chamber of the Dutch parliament on Nov. 25:

BELGIANS PUT TO DEATH.

MALINES, Belgium, Nov. 27. Forty-nine Belgians were tortured and put to death by the Germans during the occupation, Cardinal Mercier, Primate of Belgium, declared in an interview to-day. He added that 10,000 men were removed from his diocese to Germany where they were forced to work. Other crimes committed by the Germans, the Cardinal said, were too long and too terrible to relate. Briefly, Cardinal Mercier said he was happy to see Germany defeated. "The barbarian formula of might over right has received the final death blow. German dreams of world domination have been shattered. Honor only is paid to the right and restored. Belgium stands free and independent. The integrity of the marvelous French nation which evoked the admiration of the entire world by its unspeakable tenacity remains absolutely complete. The Christian faith has been re-established." Cardinal Mercier paid tribute to the armies of Great Britain, France and the United States. The triumph of justice is complete, the Cardinal added, and right has been victoriously vindicated.

ABOUT THE CROWN PRINCE.

LONDON, Nov. 27. The former German Crown Prince had not been seen or heard from his father for weeks up to the time he was taken to the Island of Wieringen, according to newspapermen while on his way through Holland. He said that his wife would remain in Germany. A change is coming in Germany but one has to be careful about prophesying, he replied to a question as to what he thought of the revolution in Germany. Will you return to Germany? was the next question. Yes, when the situation changes. But when? Here Frederick William broke off to testify to the excellence of the food in Holland. Many people here do not think so, some one interjected. Oh, I think the fine said the former Crown Prince, anyhow I am a small eater and do not want to get fat. Frederick William GERMANS MET COOL RECEPTION.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 27. The armistice conferences between the German delegates and Marshal Foch and his associates were early this month carried out in the most business-like manner possible and apparently without notable incident, according to a long account of the conference given the Berlin Vossische Zeitung by a member of the German party. After the French met the German commissioners they were driven for ten hours in automobiles to an appointed rendezvous. It seemed to me, says the narrator, that the drive was intentionally prolonged in order to carry us through the devastated provinces and prepare us for the hardest conditions which hatred and revenge might demand.

RELIEVED OF HIS GLOD.

ZURICH, Nov. 25. Field Marshal Von Mackensen, who commanded the German troops operating in Roumania, on his return to Berlin, had in his possession 69,000,000 marks in gold and notes, according to the Zeitung of Augsburg, Bavaria, and his staff carried stocks of provisions for their families. Ficket soldiers at the railroad station confiscated everything, the newspaper adds, and the authorities in reply to complaints made by the officers stated that the guard has acted as it did because it was believed the goods had been stolen.

INVITED TO BERLIN.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 27. The German Government will invite President Wilson to visit Germany while he is in Europe, says the Berlin Lokal Anzeiger.

THE BIG GUNS.

LONDON, Nov. 27. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—In the course of a second speech at Wolverhampton, Premier Lloyd George referring to Britain's enormous industrial effort mentioned that guns had been using for the last two years were guns nobody ever dreamed would be taken except for siege purposes. He remembered how great soldiers had scoffed at the idea that such heavy guns could be dragged to the battlefield. At the end of the war we had two hundred times as many of these guns as at the beginning. We captured sixty times as many German guns in the last quarter as we possessed in the beginning of the war. The Prussians never understood our spirit. It was a sight to see the Briton who had become lethargic and who was half slumbering like a great lazy giant, rise up and bend his back to the task and strike such a blow that the enemy reeled from his throne, said the Premier.

A GOOD IDEA.

PARIS, Nov. 27. The question of conducting the proceedings of the Peace Congress in English is being dispensed with some prospect that its innovation will be brought about. If it is, it will be the first great international congress with English as the official language, as French has long been recognized as the medium of diplomacy. For practical reasons, it is stated the use of the English language would be more convenient to a larger number of the delegates than French, for during the sessions of the Inter-Allied Confer-and said he did not know how long he would remain on the Island of Wieringen. When he reached the main depot at Amsterdam he partook of coffee and biscuits. He was quite accessible to the newspapers and said he did not know how long he would remain on the Island of Wieringen. When he reached the main depot at Amsterdam he partook of coffee and biscuits.

NEWSPAPERS TO GET REPORTS.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27. At President Wilson's personal request the British and French governments will relax all censorship on news despatches coming to the United States on the subject of the peace conference. It was officially announced to-day that despatches to American newspapers informing them of the progress of the peace negotiations will take second place only to official Government business under the government's newly acquired control of the cable lines. Official communications will come first, then news and the commercial business.

STRASSBOURG CELEBRATED EARLY.

STRASSBOURG, Nov. 27. The inhabitants of Strassbourg did not wait until the French troops arrived to manifest their relief over the withdrawal of the Germans. On the night of November 20-21 eight hundred students went to the Kaiser Platz, which is now the Place De La Republique, and pulled down the statue of Emperor William I. and carried part of it to the foot of the statue of Kleber (a noted French General who was born in Strassbourg.) The students were led by Mr. Semmeyer, an old man of 70, who has been imprisoned in Germany during the war. The statues of William I. Frederick, and William II. in front of the post office were decapitated by another group of students.

KING IN FRANCE.

LONDON, Nov. 27. King George, the Prince of Wales and Prince Albert, with their suite, left for Paris this morning. They will make a brief visit to General Headquarters en route.

SOFT AGAIN ASKS FOR DELAY.

LONDON, Nov. 27. Dr. W. S. Soft, German Foreign Minister, has asked the Allies once more for a mitigation of the armistice conditions and has requested permission to delay the delivery of railroad stock under the terms of the agreement between Germany and the Allies until February 1 on the ground of difficulty caused by bad conditions and the lack of lubricating oils.

ASQUITH'S OPONENT.

LONDON, Nov. 27. Herbert H. Asquith, Liberal, and former Premier, will be opposed for his seat from the east district of Fife-shire in the coming election by Mrs. George Hope, widow of Colonel Hope, who was killed during the war. Col. Hope was a nephew of the Earl of Rosebery, former Premier. Mrs. Hope is running independently of any party and one of her planks is a demand that William Hohenzollern, former German Emperor, be brought to England and tried for murder.

SOFT MAY RESIGN.

PARIS, Nov. 27. (Havas)—Dr. W. S. Soft, the German Foreign Minister, may resign very soon, it is indicated by developments during the debates at the conference of the German States now being held at Berlin, according to Berne advices to the "Petit Parisien."

The Bluff Game.

By BUTH CAMERON.

We were talking the other night about desert islands. The conversation originated in somebody's insistent suggestion to the author that he write a desert island story. The story, as suggested, demanded an uninhabited desert island about ten miles square.

The Size of All The Desert Islands In The World.

"How on earth did you happen to know about the size of all the desert islands in the world?" I asked afterwards. "I didn't," said the author, "but I knew he didn't either."

It really is amusing, when you stop to think of it, how often conversation is carried on just this basis,—one party's confidence in the other party's ignorance.

The Superficiality of The Average Rich Man's Education.

I wonder if you remember a book which came out some years ago, supposed to be the confessions of a rich man of the poverty of his existence. In the chapter on the superficiality of the typical rich man's education, he chronicles a similar conversation. At a society dinner somebody happens to mention Conrad II. "One of the guests," he writes, "expressed the opinion that he died in the year 1350. This would undoubtedly have passed muster but for a learned-looking person farther down the table who deprecatingly remarked, 'I do not like to correct you, but I think Conrad the Second died in 1337. The impression created on the assembled company cannot be overstated. Later on, in the smoking-room, I ventured to compliment the gentleman on his fund of information, saying, 'Why, I never even heard of Conrad the Second.' 'Nor I either,' he answered shamelessly."

He Thought No One Else Would Know.

The incident of the author and the desert island happened only a few days ago, but just since then I caught a gentleman who alleged solemnly that the national per capita consumption of sugar in normal times was only 41 pounds a year. Yet if I had not been on the lookout I should have marvelled at his ready fund of statistics and never questioned him.

Coal Sweetens Your Tea.

There would be no shortage of coal this winter if it were only used for heating purposes, but that is one of the few things for which a ton of coal has to do duty. It is what comes from coal that makes it so valuable.

A ton of coal contains, for example, over 10,000 cubic feet of gas, a hundred and forty pounds of coal tar, and thirty pounds of ammonium sulphate. The latter is simply invaluable as a manure, while from coal tar there comes an amazing variety of substances.

From coal tar comes the wonderful colours used in dyeing which were before the war the secrets of German chemists, but which now have been wrested from them by our own chemists. The dyes the Huns got from coal were worth hundreds of millions to them every year.

A REASON FOR THANKSGIVING.

Wherever Freedom's flag is seen, wherever kindly people dwell. To-day all hearts are bowed in prayer and grateful hearts their gladness tell.

Oh, never was a year so rich with blessings from Almighty God, Freedom and Liberty and Truth are blossoming of war's crimson sod.

The walls of blasphemy are down, the tyrant trembles on his throne, Truth reigns triumphant in the world, and happiness is man's to own.

If ever heads should bow in prayer, if ever men should turn away To voice their fervent thanks to God for all His care it is to-day. For, richer gifts than fruit of field and vine and trees are ours this year: Above the smouldering fires of war the signs of liberty appear!

"The Day"

Scapa Flow, the great Orkneys base of Britain's Grand Fleet, was the theatre of "the greatest naval surrender in the history of the world." "Der Tag" had come at last for the Germans, and with it the crowning humiliation. The proud fleet with which the Kaiser hoped to shatter Britain's sea-power and establish his sinister domination over the world, came into the British harbor like prisoners of war. It was not "The Day" that British sailors hoped for, for they would have rejoiced had the enemy given battle. But the victory of our Navy is none the less complete and overwhelming. It was characteristic of the chivalry of the British Navy that there was no demonstration of any sort when the German ships surrendered at Scapa Flow. And yet to be doubted if the Germans appreciated this consideration for their feelings. Certainly they did not deserve it, but that is the British way.

Milady's Boudoir

THE USE OF ROUGE.

You may see a woman in her own home whom you may think the last word in beauty. Yet if she were to be put back of the foot lights without a bit of makeup she could not stand the test. She would not even be good looking. Colour, changing expression, and "aliveness" play such an important part in the impression we create with people. These the camera does not get, except perhaps a little of the animation. As so we resort to the pencil and the rouge box to take the place of what the camera does not get.

Take your mouth, for instance. Perhaps your lips are thin. Without a little rouge your negatives will show a thin hard lined mouth. Or perhaps your mouth is extremely wide. The camera emphasizes this defect as it does the thin lip. A wonderful improvement will be made in your photograph if you will sit down before the mirror in the photographer's studio and apply a little lip rouge, either in rouge stick or paste form, to the centre of each lip until you have painted it a dark red.

Don't under any circumstances extend the application of rouge beyond the centre of each lip or you will succeed in making the mouth look worse. As you look at yourself in the studio mirror you may think you look so unnatural that the picture will be a failure. Instead you will find in your negative a much more satisfactory mouth than you would without the touch of rouge.

The most frequently made mistakes of women and their photographs is the desire to have their hair dressed in a different way than that which friends and relations are familiar with. A successful photograph must by all means be typical of you. So unless you are in the habit of having your hair marcelled and waved regularly, don't do it for your picture. Don't go to the hairdresser's before you have your picture taken. Instead of looking like yourself your own personality will be lost.

THE DUMP.

WALT MASON.

And now we may be told, my friends, what a conscienceless ambition ends. Five years ago the Kaiser sat, with eagles on his golden hat, the ruler of a mighty state, in industry and commerce great. The Kaiser might have said, "Gee-whiz! How prosperous my country is! The credit I'll receive, no doubt, when death has put me down and out. In future ages men will cry, 'How sad that Kaiser Bill should die! Our country's never been the same since he cashed in and quit the game; no other Kaiser's had his pep, and we go backward step by step.' They'll bless my name till time is done, and chaos shall engulf the sun." But Kaiser Wilhelm sat alone, upon his large upholstered throne, and said, "It's not enough for me, this grat of ruling Germany. It is too small and cheap a stunt for one with my majestic front. The whole damned world must buckle down and tremble at my war lord frown. My ships must boss the seven seas, my banners float in every breeze." And now we see the Kaiser's end; there's none so poor to call him friend. And men will gather round his grave, and say, "He was both fool and knave. With world-dominion dreams he foisted, and wrecked the highly land he ruled."

The very high collars on coats give them great smartness. Black silk jersey looks well trimmed with gray squirrel. Most of the fur cape novelties have deep shoulder yokes. The belts on separate skirts are usually straight and wide. The collarless round neck is absolutely the fashionable thing.

Target Practice.

(By CLAIR PRICE.)

A favourable opportunity occurring the captain of the armed yacht decided on a couple of hours at target practice. He'd already carried his gun and machine-gun ammunition with him four months, and he'd worried about it so much that he meant to use some of it.

Some of the crew set to work rigging three boys with red flags on them, and about that time the fore-gunner look-out picked up an empty gasolene-drum floating on the sea. Empty gasolene drums floating at sea lead a precarious life nowadays. They were in general quarters for it, and all the officers and crew boiled up from below, and enjoyed ten minutes of the terrific thrill that lies in the sky-rocket crack of a three-inch. So far the look-out could see, there was another thing in all the empty, silent sea except their yacht and one empty gasolene-drum.

Well, by the middle of the afternoon watch, since they hadn't seen a gasolene drum yet, they dropped over three hundred yards apart, for three gasolene drums. Then they brought the rudder over hard right, and circled back to drop dummy depth-charges (empty caasks) on them, blazing away at them the while with rifles, machine-guns, and the ex-caltibre on the three caasks, and their one machine-gun.

"Don't aim it!" shouted the captain to the man at the machine-gun. "Play it like a hose—like this!" And the captain jumped down from the bridge, picked up the gun, and let loose a long stream of deafening cracks that raised a score of little white fountains in the sea around the nearest buoy, some two hundred yards off their starboard bow. Then he gave each of his men a watch a minute at the gun, just to get them used to the feel of it, until the air was sharp with powder-smoke, and the gun's blue-black barrel gave out a curl of blue smoke.

They kept the rudder hard right until they had reached the nearest buoy, almost dead ahead, and then they brought it amidships, and the captain on the bridge-wing lifted his head. At that moment they were in the first of the depth-charges poised on the water. They watched that hand. Just as the buoy was alongside aft, the machine dropped his hand with a long "wo-oo-oo-oo!" and the dummy gasolene drum dropped overboard. It fell on the buoy just alongside the buoy. Very

Target Practice.

(By CLAIR PRICE.)

An honourable opportunity occurring to the captain of the armed yacht decides to spend a couple of hours at target practice. He'd already carried his .30 and machine-gun ammunition with him four months, and he'd worried about it so much that he meant to use some of it.

Some of the crew set to work rigging three buoys with red flags on them, and about that time the fore-drum picked up an empty gas-drum floating on the sea. Empty gas-drum floating at sea lead a wretched life nowadays. They were in the quarters for it, and all the officers and crew boiled up from beneath and enjoyed ten minutes of the practice drill that lies in the sky-rocket crack of a three-inch. So far as the look-outs could see, there was nothing else in all the empty, except their yacht and one empty gas-drum.

Well, by the middle of the afternoon, since they hadn't seen a gas-drum, they dropped over three hundred yards apart, for target practice. Then they brought the rudder over hard right, and circled back to drop dummy depth-bombs (empty casks) on them, blazing away at them the while with rifles, machine-guns, and their one machine-gun. "Don't aim it!" shouted the captain to his man at the machine-gun. "Play like a hose—like this!" And the captain jumped down from the bridge, took the gun, and let loose a long stream of little white fountains in the air around the nearest buoy, some hundred yards off their starboard bow. Then he gave each of his men a minute at the gun, just to let them used to the feel of it, until the gun was sharp with powder-smoke, and the gun's blue-black barrel gave out a steady curl of blue smoke.

They kept the rudder hard right until they had reached the nearest buoy, then they dropped dead ahead, and then they brought it amidships, and the captain of the bridge-wing lifted his head. Aft, they waited with the first of the depth-charges poised on the gun, and watched that hand. Just then the buoy was alongside aft, the depth-charge dropped his hand, with a loud bang, and the dummy dropped overhead. It fell on to the water, just alongside the buoy. Very

They repeated on each of the other two buoys, circling carefully to bring them alongside before they dropped their dummies. Then, after an hour of it, they set about to pick up their buoys and dummies, with men following them aft with grappling-hooks as they came alongside. They rang down "Stop" as the grappling-hooks left the buoy, and instantly the chief came hurrying up from his room, his eyes full of sleep. He had slept through all the racket of the rifles, the Colt and other guns, and the ex-calibres, but the instant his engine stopped the silence waked him.

"Taking in the target," explained the doctor, who had brought his medical practice began, and now had it spread out in front of him on the ward-room table, just as if the yacht were in a regular action.

"Hades!" said the chief, and dropped into a chair in the ward-room, where he could hear the bridge-ringing down so fast, as they manoeuvred to pick up the buoys, that his engine-room had no time to log its bells, to say nothing of carrying them out.

The whole ship suddenly groaned and shook. "Going astern at sea!" he snorted. He got up to find out why she had that list on her, and he discovered they had the rudder hard right. "Fear the infernal steering-engine out by the roots!" But the doctor told him he oughtn't to mind a little thing like that. This was wartime, and he ought to be patriotic. "Patriotic your grandmother!" the chief said, and went below and effaced himself.

When A Soldier Salutes.

If Tommy is at times inclined to grouse at saluting his superiors, he may at least thank his lucky stars that he is not a sailorman: for saluting in the Navy is so complicated a thing that it requires an eight-column, full page tabulation in the King's Regulations to describe the many ways in which it may be done.

If, for example, Jack should see an Admiral approaching him, he must immediately halt, whatever he may be doing, and turn his face towards the advancing officer. When the Admiral is within three paces of him Jack's arm rises to the salute and remains there until he has passed six full paces. If the officer should be below Admiral's rank, Jack simply salutes with the hand furthest away from his superior, as he passes; at the same time turning his head towards the officer.

If Jack while doing sentry-work, is approached by an officer who has no gold rings on his cuff, he need only stand to attention and slap the butt of his rifle with his free hand as the officer passes. If the officer is a Lieutenant he must spring to attention and slope his rifle; while every officer of higher rank, from Commander to Admiral, is entitled to the "present arms."

If, however, Jack is doing sentry over any building used by Royalty, he presents arms to none but a member of the Royal family.

Would Try the Kaiser Before Military Court.

The following is the opinion of United States District Judge Edgar Aldrich on what should be done with the Kaiser.

My suggestion is that his should not be a trial in the civil courts on the charge of murder, as has been urged, because, in the circumstances of such a trial, well understood rules would narrow the issue to a single offense, and to particular intent.

It should be a military court made up of Army and Navy officers of high rank, all the Allied Powers being represented. The trial should be under military law. The charge should be general and comprehensive—that of inaugurating and waging a war of frightfulness, including the uninterrupted policy of rape and rapine, and one contrary to the usages of civilized warfare. It should be against him as the authoritative, responsible, arbitrary, military head.

The general charge should be supplemented by specific charges, enjoining them, like outrages upon women and children; firing upon defenceless women and children in unfortified and defenceless places; the stealthy sinking of ships carrying innocent men, women and children, like that of the Lusitania; the unnecessary and wanton destruction of cathedrals, churches, libraries, and works of art; the inhuman treatment of prisoners; the pollution of water; the killing, disemboweling and other maiming of children; and in short, the supplement any specific charges to include all the fiendish deeds of cruelty which have outraged the righteous sense of the civilized world.

All Atrocities Could Be Proved. Under the scope of such a trial, before a military court under military law, all the atrocities of the brutal war could be authentically proven in the Kaiser's presence and established before the world.

If the case were not susceptible of proof of specific orders to outrage women, and to drown innocent men, women and children, it would at least be susceptible of proof that his brutal armies were not admonished against it and that, under general and authorized propaganda, it was encouraged as being a useful campaign of frightfulness, and of proof that the captain who sunk the Lusitania was authoritatively and conspicuously decorated in recognition and commendation of his fiendish deed; and likewise, upon the question of general intent, instructions like those to his Army which was to invade China, to carry on a campaign of frightfulness, would be admissible.

Under a conviction by such international military court, condemnation of such warfare would be authoritatively established and that such a waging of war was contrary to the righteous sense of the civilized world.

Death Too Soon Over.

The punishment should not be death, because that would be too soon over. He should be separated from his court sympathizers and false philosophers, exiled and imprisoned upon some lonely island in the sea, that he may reflect upon the destruction, the cruelty, and the sufferings that he has brought to the innocent peoples of the world, and that he may, through his withering life, be forced to ponder on the future development of happiness in conditions of peace, under enlightening auspices.

The demands of outraged justice based upon the deep-seated moral sense of the world will not be appeased by anything less. Appropriately the place would be St. Helena, because the Kaiser has said that he was going to outdo Napoleon with his mailed fist.

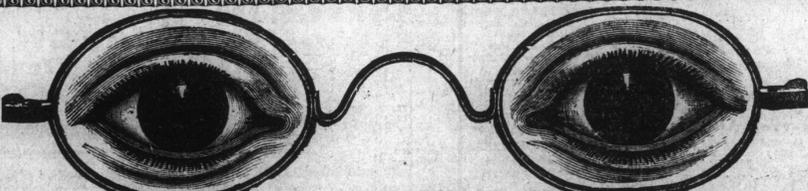

because fear of his domination of the world no longer exists. It should be upon the military outrages which he perpetrated.

If Holland should refuse to surrender the Kaiser, upon proper demand, he should be forcibly brought out of Holland by the Allied International Powers. If there is no precedent for that, now is the time to make one.

That others in Hun command should be dealt with sternly, under military law, goes without saying. Nov. 15, 1918. Edgar Aldrich.

The Labrador Boundary.

The time may be, and possibly is, ripe for the putting forward of several questions of paramount importance to Newfoundland, among which are the settlement of the Labrador Boundary dispute with Canada, and the acquisition of the last French possessions in North America by the Dominion. But, as we stated yesterday, we do not think that these are matters which can be or will be adjusted by the Peace Commission at its sittings. The prime functions of this conference will be the consideration of matters which have arisen out of the war: the drawing of new boundaries and the regulation of same, and the bestowal of the conquered territory of Germany, in all parts of the world to those who have by right of conquest won it, or the establishment of international tribunals to administer these lands. The reconstruction of a new Europe will follow the restoration of terrain hitherto held by Germany, to the countries from which it was wrested, and occupied by the armies of the Kaiser. The reversion of St. Pierre and Miquelon, and the adjustment of the Labrador Boundary are not primarily, questions arising out of the war. The former affects only the British, French and Newfoundland Governments; the latter the Federal Government of the Dominion of Canada, and the Government of Quebec. It is purely an affair for these Governments to consider, and agree upon. To suggest that it should be brought before the Peace Conference is to obstruct ourselves upon the deliberations of that body unnecessarily and unauthoritatively. At the same time there is not any reason why we should be silent on the issues affecting our own future so vitally, neither do we consider that the stating of our case, would interrupt or embarrass the peace deliberations. The conference do not have to deal with either the one or the other.

In order to make clear the causes governing the Labrador Boundary, and the claim which Newfoundland sets up to be the legitimate authority over the dependency, we refer readers to the Consolidated Statutes, 1892, page 1107, in which the genesis of the dispute is found in the Letters Patent Constituting the office of Governor for this Colony (dominion) where it is stated that the Governor of Newfoundland shall have authority over "all the Coast of Labrador from the entrance of Hudson Straits to a line to be drawn due North and South from Anse Sablon, on the said coast, to the 52nd degree of North latitude, and all the islands adjacent."

Canada is on the opposite side of this question, legally. Beneficially, Quebec is on the other side, for Canada has conferred her Eastern lands upon the Province of Quebec. I need not enter into this feature of the matter now, and refer to it only for the purpose of pointing out that the opportunity for arriving by negotiation at an understanding with Canada, and of getting that understanding implemented by the British Government, never seemed so good as now, when everything will be placed on London's diplomatic bargain counter.

three Governments interested. The latter would result in the most favorable and amicable settlement. If the time is now, and we believe it is, let the negotiations take place in London. The proceedings of the peace conference will neither be advanced nor hindered by their commencement, because the matter is not for the consideration of this body at all. The opportunity is golden. Shall we chance losing it by hesitation?

The Labrador Boundary Question.

Dear Sir,—There shall be a Governor  in and over  Newfoundland,  and all the Coast of Labrador from the entrance of Hudson Straits to a line to be drawn due North and South, from Anse Sablon to the 52nd degree of North latitude, and all the islands adjacent to that part of the Coast of Labrador." These words give rise to the Labrador Boundary question. The words themselves occur in the draft Letters Patent constituting the office of Governor.

What is the internal boundary line? You will notice that the literal words give jurisdiction only over "the Coast" and "the islands adjacent." But what is the coast, the broad outer line or the sinuities of the coast and harbours? Take Hamilton Inlet, for instance, does "Coast" include all the shore of that deep bay, to the mouths of its rivers.

"The Coast  to a line to be drawn due North and South from Anse Sablon to the fifty-second degree of North latitude—a distance of thirty-five miles. The language about this "line" is itself equivocal, but would imply that by the Coast was meant an area about thirty-five miles wide at this point. Therefore, "Coast" does not connote foreshore alone, but something wider.

From the point where the line from Anse Sablon strikes the fifty-second degree of North latitude, to the entrance of Hudson's Straits, the boundary is not expressly defined—it wholly depends upon the meaning of the word Coast, including the incidents applied thereto by law. In what is in that interior line, is wrapped up the value and validity of all the grants of timber, minerals, land, and water powers given in this Colony. Our ownership of the Hamilton River water power, for instance, the greatest perhaps, on this continent, depends upon the interior boundary line. The necessity for settling the question is, therefore, one of over-pressing importance.

There are two ways of dealing with this great question: (1) by reference to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, for a legal decision on the meaning of the words used; (2) by Order-in-Council by His Majesty, on the advice of the Privy Council, declaring an interior boundary line. The former way must be pursued by lawyers, acting as such; the other way is by negotiations with Canadian and British Statesmen.

Canada is on the opposite side of this question, legally. Beneficially, Quebec is on the other side, for Canada has conferred her Eastern lands upon the Province of Quebec. I need not enter into this feature of the matter now, and refer to it only for the purpose of pointing out that the opportunity for arriving by negotiation at an understanding with Canada, and of getting that understanding implemented by the British Government, never seemed so good as now, when everything will be placed on London's diplomatic bargain counter.

Such, in brief, and without dipping into minor details, is the case as it stands. There are two ways to settle it finally—one by proceedings in the Judicial Committee, which may not result satisfactorily; the other as stated already in this article by negotiations carried on between the

Must Use Substitutes.

It is well for our people to understand that they must use substitutes with flour now, or later on they will be compelled to use substitutes without flour. Only a limited supply of flour is allowed by the Canadian and United States Food Control Commissions, and if their stocks are exhausted quickly, we shall find ourselves obliged to use only the now despised coarse cereals, as these will be the only grains available. The need for food economy is as great now and for some months to come, as it was during the war. Let it be clearly understood that we are not crying "Woe!" The food situation in other countries emphasizes our need for a continuation of economy and obedience to the regulations which are made in the best interests of all.

Clark-Urban Co.

From the rising of the curtain to the fall thereof, the Clark-Urban Co's play, "The Eternal Magdalene," in the Casino, last night, was of an exceptionally high standard, and the full house was profuse in applause, clearly demonstrating the popularity in which the players are held. The story deals with a wealthy stock broker who has organized a party of reform, for the purpose of cleaning up the Red Light District of the city. Before this is accomplished, he receives a letter from one of the Girls of the Streets, who objects to his harsh methods, and dilates on what would happen to her and those with her were this cleaning up to take place. This act plays is undoubtedly the troupe's best production so far, and to-night, when it will be repeated in the Casino, will witness the production.

G. of E. Cathedral

To-morrow is the Eve of St. Andrew, and St. Andrew's will be observed throughout the world as a time of special intercession on behalf of the missionary work of the church. There has never been a time in the history of the world when the outlook for the extension of Christ's Kingdom was brighter than it is to-day. The stimulus given to the Christian religion by the triumph of Right over Might, the association of men from all parts of the world in difficulty, danger and death, and thereby the breaking-down of longstanding barriers that have proved veritable stumbling-blocks to the spread of the gospel. The tremendous capacity for sacrifices which the war has discovered in our people; and the many opportunities that are offering for the advancement of the Christian Kingdom all contribute and combine to make our age a time of extreme seriousness and bold venture and increased activity in missionary work. It is hoped that as many as possible from the three city parishes will visit the Cathedral some time during the day and take their part in this great chain of prayer. It is in this way that the church will best be moved to a sense of its obligations to its Master, guided aright and assisted in its efforts, and abundantly blessed in its accomplishment of the most special triumph and glorious opportunity.

Police Court.

Two young girls, one 17 and the other 18 years old, were before court this morning charged with being loose and disorderly persons. They pleaded not guilty. Constable Dejeux Whelan, called, deposed to being sent to the S. S. Adolph on the morning of the 26th, which ship was lying at Harvey's wharf, to remove two girls who had been aboard all night. This he did. The girls were found in a locked room, where the second engineer and steward had spent the night with them. The girls were found on the deck, having done nothing wrong aboard ship, but the officer swore that they had made certain statements to him which disproved their plea. The defendants, refusing to swear otherwise, were each fined $5 or 10 days.

Who Won The War?

Who won the war? asks the Boston Transcript. Belgium did, when she caused the German advance to stub its toes at Liege. France did when she turned the Germans back at the Marne. Britain did when she seized control of the seas, bottled the German fleet and blockaded the German ports. Russia did when she mobilized ahead of German calculations and forced the High Command to divide its armies. Italy did when she engaged Austria's attention so thoroughly that the latter could not go to the aid of Germany. The United States did when at last she mobilized the scene with men and material sufficient to administer the coup de grace to the Utopian dream of world empire. Serbia, Roumania and Montenegro also did their part. In short, and better still, we all did.

BUILT TO STAY As An Inner Tube

Instead of being made of a soft gauge rubber, Goodyear Inner Tubes are made of many thin sheets placed one on top of another and vulcanized together into a flaw-proof construction. This laminated construction guards against pin leaks, sand particles, defects of any kind. It offers a protection against air leakage approximated in any other type of inner tube. Goodyear Inner Tubes are made of better materials than ordinary tubes and last longer and serve more ably.

The 'All Highest' of these gods.

The occupation of Baalbek, north of Damascus, by British troops, recalls a unique instance of the ex-Kaiser's magnificent ruins. Among these is the ruined temple of Baalbek, with its huge foundation stones and tall monolithic columns. On the inner side of the walls there are niches, said to be "Niches for the Gods."

"When I visited these ruins in 1914," says a correspondent, "I saw among them a large and incongruous relic. It appeared that when the Kaiser made his historic visit to Palestine and Syria in 1918, and was entertained by the late Abdul Hamid, with great pomp and circumstance, he expressed a desire before leaving to erect a memorial of his visit. When asked by the Sultan what form he would like the memorial to take, he

Household Notes

Long-handled brushes and dishpans save labor. Underwear, stockings and common towels need no ironing. Stilettes are indispensable for embroiderers who want to make round soles. Nuts which have grown dry can be freshened by soaking in warm water. Fresh air and sunshine have a great deal to do with successful laundry work. If you keep chickens in a small run, be sure to give them plenty of green food. Remove the odor of onions from a soaking dish by boiling strong soda water in it.

Don't Kiss Baby.

Should babies be kissed? Certainly not! That seems to be the unanimous opinion, not only among medical men, but also among women hygienic leaders who have the welfare of the children of the country at heart. As one doctor put it to the writer: "I can conceive of no surer way of conveying disease—consumption, influenza, skin and mouth diseases—than by allowing babies to be kissed promiscuously by visiting friends and relatives. The mother who does not guard her baby against such peril is risking its future health and happiness, and perhaps its life." America long ago recognized the peril which lurked in the baby kiss, and carried on a campaign against kissing. Artistic signs bearing the words "Don't kiss me," were hung about babies' necks. A State Government lecturer was appointed, whose principal work was to lecture on the evils of kissing. He held meetings all over the States, and in a very short time was able to announce that he had secured the assistance of 2,000 mothers, who had become anti-kissers so far as their babies were concerned. At one time it was proposed to make baby-kissing a criminal crime.

The Five Hundredth V. C.

The leader of the gallant little band of the Highland Light Infantry who gained such fame at Moeuvres, where they held out for forty-eight hours when cut off by the enemy, has earned a notable distinction, as well as a decoration.

Corporal David Hunter, whose V.C. was gazetted recently, is the 500th fighting man to receive the highest Service honor since the war broke out. When so many of our great heroes give their lives in deeds that result in the bestowal of medals, it is a satisfaction that the 500th V.C. of the war, like the 1,000th recipient of the honor since its creation, should live to receive the little piece of bronze from his Sovereign.

Only another score or so of Crosses need be won for the war to have produced more V.C.'s than all the campaigns that preceded it in a period of sixty years, from the Crimea and the Mutiny to Somaliland.

Lancashire holds first place among the counties, no fewer than forty-six of the 500 obtained by the three Services having been given to officers and men of the seven regiments associated with Lancashire. The Fusiliers claim fifteen of the number—five more than any other line regiment in the British Army.

Keep on Eating Fish.

The signing of an armistice does not mean the end of the war. It is but the preliminary of the hardest phase of the world struggle—the reconstruction period. Patriotic Americans will not slacken a whit on their policy of self-denial. In the line of food, their sacrifices must increase rather than decrease. The men abroad and the villian populations must be fed by America until reconstruction abroad has reached the point where the people of Europe can care for themselves. For food for the long, hard winter now beginning, they look to America. Hence, it is up to every real American to save every possible pound of food available for export.

This means, if you have been eating meat six times a week, it is your duty to replace it by fish at least three times a week. Now is the sacrifice. It will benefit your health and have a surprisingly good effect on your pocketbook.

Fads & Fashions

Torpedo turbans are still with us. Terra Cotta is a fashionable and conservative style as are lined coats. Open squares ornament the new velvets. Fox furs predominate, but in quieter colors. Paris is making hats entirely fringed ribbon. A very supple velvet is called "as foam." They are trimming velvet with dyed lace. Grosgrain ribbon is best for every purpose. Checks and plaids are in for sports skirts. Brilliant satin is used in making smartest suits. Buttons are not considered on evening wraps.

Unusual Responsibility

CONDITIONS brought about by the war have placed many women in positions of unusual responsibility, involving mental strain and anxiety. Think, for example, of the girls who have been placed in tellers' wickets in the banks, and whose duty it is to handle each day tens of thousands of dollars.

It is not as though such positions had been reached after years of training and development, for in many instances the new teller has had little experience, and the strain thrown on the nervous system is enormous.

But similar conditions apply in many lines of work, and whether the overstrain is mental or physical the result is the same, for vitality is exhausted and sooner or later health gives way.

The rapid spread of influenza and pneumonia is largely due to the low vitality of many thousands of people who have been living under a constant, unusual strain of mind or body.

In a state of continual fatigue you have practically no reserve force left to fight disease, and are, therefore, easy prey.

There is only one way to restore feeble, wasted nerve cells, and that is by supplying to them the vital substances which nourish them back to health and vigor.

This is exactly what Dr. Chase's Nerve Food does, and that is why it is in such enormous demand at this time when so many people are living under such unusual nervous strain.

A dead nerve cell can never be replaced, but an exhausted nerve cell can be restored, and just here is where Dr. Chase's Nerve Food comes in to cure by means of the building-up process.

One of the first indications of trouble is headache, and then sleeplessness—you fail to regain at night the nerve force expended in the day's work and worry.

You get up tired in the mornings, and your work seems a burden to you. You get discouraged and lose confidence in yourself, and as the nervous system weakens the worry increases.

There is no light ahead for the person suffering from nervous exhaustion, but, fortunately, there is help in the use of this well-known restorative—Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Take all the rest you can—get out into the fresh air and use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food regularly, and you will soon find yourself on the way to health.

Dr. Chase's Medicines are sold by all Druggists and Dealers in St. John's and the Outports. Wholesale quotations from GERALD S. DOYLE, Water St., St. John's, Sole Agent.

WHAT PRICE DICTATORS? HONOLULU, Nov. 27. Cable advices received here to-day by the Nippon Jiji, a Japanese daily newspaper, stated it was reported in Japan that Admiral Kolchak, the dictator of Siberia, has been assassinated at Omsk. No details were given.

NO ESCAPE FOR GERMANY. LONDON, Nov. 28. (via Reuters Ottawa Agency.) In connection with the movement for the division of Germany into its various states, to be ruled as republics, the Western states are replying to the possibility that in the course of peace negotiations, the Allies may have to face a situation in which the legal personality of Germany may have undergone a complete change, and Germany like Austria may have fallen into fragments, "that cannot be allowed to alter the main fact of the situation, namely, that Germany as a whole must be held responsible for the consequences of the war, and the German states whatever their form must pay the bill."

THE FLOGGERS. LONDON, Nov. 28. (via Reuters Ottawa Agency.) A Reuter correspondent, who visited U-boats at Harwich, where the surrendered submarines are lying, states that the average crew of a U-boat is 40 men. The submarines are towed to either side in batches of three and four. Officers, who are not the wharfbosses of their flags, said their flag was a red one. The correspondent visited a submarine of the Deutschland type, and saw a blood-stained cat-o-nine-tails, which a British sailor had found under the captain's bunk.

ANOTHER REVENUE PRODUCER. MELBOURNE, Australia, Nov. 28. (via Reuters Ottawa Agency.) The Federal house of representatives have passed through the bill imposing thirty per cent additional on Federal income tax.

HOW ARE THE MIGHTY FALLEN. AMERONGEN, Holland, Nov. 28. Friday—the former German Emperor went for a drive this afternoon with his host, Count Von Bentinck, accompanied by the usual police guard. He almost ran over a woman and a child, and was drenched with mud, but as often before, he was not concerned. He was accompanied by a number of officers and a number of ladies, and the latter were seen to be in good spirits. The Emperor's carriage was surrounded by a crowd of people, and the Emperor's carriage was surrounded by a crowd of people, and the Emperor's carriage was surrounded by a crowd of people.

ONLY TWO DAYS MORE. CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 27. (By the A.P.)—Two transports from Odessa, which the Germans had expected to come to Constantinople, have not arrived. If no transport is available before the end of November, 15,000 Germans and 3,000 Austrians will become prisoners of war in accordance with the terms of the armistice signed by Turkey.

GERMANY MUST PAY. LONDON, Nov. 28. German States, whatever their forms, must pay the bill and Germany as a whole must be held responsible for the consequences of the war, says the Western states, in discussing the situation that has developed in Germany.

LABOR'S DEMANDS. LONDON, Nov. 27. In an election manifesto the British Labor Party warns the Coalition Government against opposing the new European democracy, and demands the immediate withdrawal of Allied forces from Russia. Besides free trade, the nationalizing of lands, mines, railways, shipping, armaments and electric power, the party also demands that taxes be levied on capital and that there be a complete abolition of conscription.

WANTS TO ESCAPE THE PENALTY. HULL, England, Nov. 27. British civilian prisoners arriving here from Rullleben, Germany, say that when they were leaving the prison camp there, a long written document was handed them by the German authorities, appealing to them to intercede with the British people in behalf of the people of Germany, "who have freed themselves from the chains of a barbarous system," and not to hold the German people responsible for the deeds of the former autocratic rulers "who are now utterly powerless."

STATUS UNDEFINED. AMSTERDAM, Nov. 27. William Hohenzollern did not attend divine service Sunday. He made a short excursion with his host around the environs of Amerongen to-day. Because of French and British newspaper criticism, the Handel-Blat demands that the Dutch Government exactly the former Emperor's position, and the extent of his liberty of movement here, as nothing official so far has been made public, except that Count Von Bentinck, at the Soviet request, extended his hospital-to the refugee. As regards Frederick Hohenzollern, the former Crown Prince, the papers say he undoubtedly is a military person, and has been interned as such. Wierden was selected for his abode, because its remoteness as an island excludes contact with members of the old regime in Germany.

BRITAIN'S PEACE STAFF. LONDON, Nov. 27. The British Government will have a staff of 400 persons in Paris for the peace conference, Assistant Secretary Towle, of the Food Ministry informed the correspondents to-day. He said the Government had taken the Majestic Hotel for this staff and would have a corresponding force of servants.

THE KING IN FRANCE. BOULOGNE, France, Nov. 27. (Havas.)—King George, the Prince of Wales and Prince Albert, landed here at one o'clock this afternoon. They were welcomed by the military and civil authorities, and later partook of luncheon at the officers' mess. The King received a warm welcome. After luncheon King George and his party left by automobile for Brussels, where they will arrive in the evening at the headquarters at Montreil-Sur-Mer.

ECONOMISE TILL FEBRUARY. BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 27. War time restrictions on every kind of consumption of sugar, both as they affect the consumer and the manufacturer, will probably be removed by February first, Assistant Food Administrator Ratchesky announced to-night.

GERMANS CROSS AAR. LUXEMBURG, Nov. 24. (By the A.P.)—The Germans crossed the Aar in force Sunday, bound eastward.

ALL SAVED. BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 27. The 2,800 troops were safely transferred from the transport Henderson to a destroyer, in the submarine zone during the night of July 2, when fire which had burst from the German steamer threatened the safety of the ship, was made known to-night in a communication from Secretary of the Navy Daniels to Ensign Bradford Ellison, of this city, one of the officers who preserved order during the transfer. The destroyer made several trips to another transport which had been held in the vicinity, to receive the men. When all the crew and a number of officers had left the Henderson, she put back to port, and although leaking badly reached Philadelphia safely.

So he fung his graplin in the Bay And he said I shall furl my sails to-day; Then he scanned the landscape spreading wide And said "On those slopes I would abide shades where the grass grows green."

Then he chose a neigh where the fir trees rise Purple-black against the evening skies, And he marked the spot where his home should go— But Murdoch the Great had yet to know That more than the grass grew green.

He sought the Halls of the Mayor and his men, He found them busy with brain and pen. He asked them Questions, he got And rebuffed the Great was greatly huffed, And over the grass grew green.

Then he planneth a mighty Plan again, But the mightiest Plan is vain When the City People march No. Then Murdoch smith a final blow, And over the grass grew green.

Then the Judges met and the Judges sat And they sat, and met again that day, While the Council huffed, and they're huffing still, And 'tis evident—very, that huff they will.

But ever the grass grows green! Where shall it end, this farce sublime? That would crowd the stage in this tragic time. When we try to think of the Kaiser's fate Or our Premier's lot 'mongst the wise and great, And the grass o'er the world grows green.

NOV. 28, 1918. SUNNY JIM. Brutal Murder GUY McDONALD KILLED AND ROBBED. North Sydney, Nov. 25.—What appears to be a most brutal murder was discovered on Saturday afternoon, when two workmen, Thomas Hicks and John Gouthro, on their way from Sydney Mines, came across the body of a man lying about 12 feet off the road on the bank of the river. They immediately notified Coroner A. R. Forbes, who with Chief of Police Daniel Cowan and Under-Sheriff W. D. Doney, proceeded to the spot, and removed the body to Dooly's morgue, where it was quickly identified as that of Guy Edward McDonald, a young man of about 24 years of age, a native of St. Stephen, N.B., but for several years on the staff of the Western Union Cable Co. here.

McDonald, known among his friends as "Baldy" was a very quiet, inoffensive young man, well liked by all his acquaintances, and the news of his tragic death has caused a profound sensation in the community. When the body was covered with the victim's own top coat and had the appearance of having been placed there, as his shoes were quite clean and marks of a wagon, which had been driven to the spot and then turned, were plainly to be seen. A superficial examination would seem to indicate that the poor lad had received a rough handling, one particularly bad blow being on the top of the head. When discovered he had no money on his person and his watch and chain were gone.

A jury was empanelled by Coroner A. R. Forbes and met here on Sunday afternoon in the court house, but after a short session adjourned until 7 o'clock Monday morning, when the report of the autopsy being held by Dr. M. T. McLean of North Sydney and Dr. Bruce of Sydney, would be delivered.

being marked on the map. The third stage has already been reached, and encroaches upon the Rhine country to the west of Frazz, between Meric and Sarreguemines, and comprises Sarrelouis, Oulx and Sarrebruck. It seems possible that this encroachment may have been made with a view to attempting the annexation of these territories to Alsace-Lorraine. The protest of the members of the German Commission has not been considered. The German Government makes most solemn protest against all attempts to deprive Germany of these territories. The German Armistice Commission has again presented argument supporting a delay in the evacuation of territories west of the Rhine, claiming that the economical situation there supports Germany's views.

TO LAST THREE MONTHS. PARIS, Nov. 28. (Havas.)—At a meeting yesterday to the sitting of the delegates to the Peace Conference, it is announced, committees will be appointed to study different phases of the problem which will be involved, and present reports to the conference, whose deliberations will by his move be of a more definite character. The conference, it is believed, will last for three months, and it is not expected that a Treaty will be signed before April. Premier Lloyd George of Great Britain will arrive in Paris at the same time as President Wilson.

THANKSGIVING DAY IN U. S. WASHINGTON, Nov. 28. Deep feelings of gratitude and thankfulness, greater than come to a nation through prosperity, pervades the observance of Thanksgiving Day in the United States to-day. Peace with victory, after nineteen months of war, gave the day much added significance.

Huffing. Murdoch the Great sailed over the sea, Unto an Isle of the West sailed he, He saw that the land was brave and fair, And he said, "I shall cast my anchor here. For I trow that the grass grows green."

So he fung his graplin in the Bay And he said I shall furl my sails to-day; Then he scanned the landscape spreading wide And said "On those slopes I would abide shades where the grass grows green."

Then he chose a neigh where the fir trees rise Purple-black against the evening skies, And he marked the spot where his home should go— But Murdoch the Great had yet to know That more than the grass grew green.

He sought the Halls of the Mayor and his men, He found them busy with brain and pen. He asked them Questions, he got And rebuffed the Great was greatly huffed, And over the grass grew green.

Then he planneth a mighty Plan again, But the mightiest Plan is vain When the City People march No. Then Murdoch smith a final blow, And over the grass grew green.

Then the Judges met and the Judges sat And they sat, and met again that day, While the Council huffed, and they're huffing still, And 'tis evident—very, that huff they will.

But ever the grass grows green! Where shall it end, this farce sublime? That would crowd the stage in this tragic time. When we try to think of the Kaiser's fate Or our Premier's lot 'mongst the wise and great, And the grass o'er the world grows green.

NOV. 28, 1918. SUNNY JIM. Brutal Murder GUY McDONALD KILLED AND ROBBED. North Sydney, Nov. 25.—What appears to be a most brutal murder was discovered on Saturday afternoon, when two workmen, Thomas Hicks and John Gouthro, on their way from Sydney Mines, came across the body of a man lying about 12 feet off the road on the bank of the river. They immediately notified Coroner A. R. Forbes, who with Chief of Police Daniel Cowan and Under-Sheriff W. D. Doney, proceeded to the spot, and removed the body to Dooly's morgue, where it was quickly identified as that of Guy Edward McDonald, a young man of about 24 years of age, a native of St. Stephen, N.B., but for several years on the staff of the Western Union Cable Co. here.

McDonald, known among his friends as "Baldy" was a very quiet, inoffensive young man, well liked by all his acquaintances, and the news of his tragic death has caused a profound sensation in the community. When the body was covered with the victim's own top coat and had the appearance of having been placed there, as his shoes were quite clean and marks of a wagon, which had been driven to the spot and then turned, were plainly to be seen. A superficial examination would seem to indicate that the poor lad had received a rough handling, one particularly bad blow being on the top of the head. When discovered he had no money on his person and his watch and chain were gone.

A jury was empanelled by Coroner A. R. Forbes and met here on Sunday afternoon in the court house, but after a short session adjourned until 7 o'clock Monday morning, when the report of the autopsy being held by Dr. M. T. McLean of North Sydney and Dr. Bruce of Sydney, would be delivered.

25TH ANNIVERSARY.—Yesterday Councilor Mully celebrated the 25th anniversary of his wedding to Miss Barnes, granddaughter of the celebrated sea hunter, Harry Andrews.

Railway Accident Enquiry.

(Continued.) Lance Corporal William Knox, sworn and examined by Mr. Mews, B.L.—I remember the accident that happened on the railroad on Tuesday, the 24th September, 1918. I was in charge of a squad of soldiers proceeding to Port aux Basques for guard duty by that train. We were supplied with first class tickets. On going aboard the train, we found the first class car was full of passengers, and the conductor told us that we could not ride first class as the car was full, and he told us to go into the second class car when she would be connected up with that train. He said that after a while, perhaps, the first class passengers would drop off at near stations, and that there might be room for us in the first class car. The order for our departure was not made until 12 o'clock that day. It was a hurried departure, and we only got our tickets at about a quarter to one o'clock. When we went to board the train there was no second class car there, and I asked the conductor what the cause of the delay was, and he said there was no second class car, that they were going to take the second class car from the incoming express and switch it on this train, which was then going out. The incoming express arrived and they coupled up the second class car with our train, and it was getting up for 2 o'clock when he left the station. By the time we got to Clarenville, we could have shifted back to the first class car, but we preferred to be together for company, and we remained in the second class car. We had some delay at Topsail, which was caused by some cars being held up at a mile outside Topsail, and the morning shore train and our train were hung up at Topsail on that account. We were supplied with tea about a quarter to five, a little earlier than usual, and the train got away from Topsail while we were at tea. Nothing happened out of the way as far as Clarenville. I was in the second class car, and was just walking out to the lavatory to have a wash, just before tea on Tuesday afternoon, when I felt the car bumping up and down. It looked as if the car was going to leave over on the right or lower side, and I came back in the car and held on to the seat, and whilst I was holding on to the seat the car turned over on its side. Before that, of course, I felt the car was going over an embankment, but it went so quick that it seemed as if no time elapsed from the time of its leaving the track, and its falling over on its side. When the car turned over, it seemed to me as if it turned completely over and had rolled over the embankment. The windows and the side of the car were then falling in, and we found ourselves sprawling on the windows and all huddled together. I was hurt on the hip and down my side, but I did not know it at the time. It came against me about half an hour afterwards. I then only could get around when the train was stopped. I went to myself the first I saw was Private Kelly. He was standing on the window, which had then become the floor, with blood streaming from his face, from a cut which he had received in the head. Kelly said he was not much hurt, but I paid attention to a child in the car and helped to get it out through the window. I and the others who were not injured helped to get all those who were injured out of the car; we got them out through the roof. When the car turned over on its side, the two ends rested on the ground, leaving a hollow space under the middle of the car, and it was possible to get out through the windows that were resting on the ground and one man helped his wife out that way. I brought the injured passengers of the car up as far as the track where they were taken charge of and taken to the house. After the passengers were gotten out of the car, I found myself unable to get up the embankment, due to the injury to my leg, and had to be assisted by a couple of men. I gathered my men up to the house to get accommodation, but the house was not able to put us up, being filled up with other injured passengers, and then we got word that we were going to be sent back to Curling, and the agent there was to look out for us. A relief train came up from Curling and we got aboard of her and went to Curling along with the rest. After the accident, before we went back to Curling, we made no examination of the track to try and find the cause of the run-off, but we saw the ties bunched up and we saw the forward truck of the second class car on the road bed with the forward and after wheels of one side inside the rail and the forward and after wheels of the other side outside the rail. There was nothing about this truck that attracted my attention. The other truck was down over the embankment by the second class car. It was disconnected a few feet away. I went up with Government Engineer Hall from Curling a day or so afterwards. I took a look around. I went down the embankment and went into the car. I did not learn anything more of the cause of the accident.

Cross-examined by Mr. Higgins, K.C.—I was continued to travel in the second class car entirely at our own choice. Myself and the squad of men with me knew we could have gone in the first class car just as we arrived at Clarenville, but there was more freedom for us to have a smoke and chat in the second class car than there would have been in the first class car, and so we remained in the second class car. Help was immediately rendered the injured passengers after the accident, and the conduct of the train men was good in the sense that they did everything they could to relieve passengers. So far as I could see, there could be no possible complaint of inattention to the needs of passengers after the accident.

Private James Wall, sworn, examined by Mr. Mews, B.L.—I was sent to Port aux Basques with Lance Corporal Knox. I was on the train when the accident occurred on Tuesday, the 24th of September, 1918. About a quarter of an hour before the accident Private Dover and I went on the platform on the rear end of the second class car, and we were there standing at the time the accident occurred. I first felt a bumping, and then the car ran off the track and began to tip over. When I felt her going to tip over, I jumped across to the platform of the dining car and caught hold of the rail and held on there. The car was going down the embankment while I was jumping across, and when I next turned around, the car was lying on her side at the bottom of the dump. When the car went over the embankment, Private Dover jumped down in the dump and raced ahead of the car. I did not exactly see him do this, but he told me afterwards that was what he did. He also told me that when the car tipped, the roof of the car just missed his back. I never saw anything to cause the car to leave the rails, and I don't know what did it. I was holding on to the rail of the platform of the dining car until the end tipped down over the embankment and she tipped over on her side. I was holding on all the time till she struck the ground and then I lost my hold, but I was not hurt. I helped to get the passengers out after the accident. After the accident I looked at the track and I noticed the rails were spread broad and the ties were bunched up. The front truck of the second class car was on the road bed. Two of the side wheels were outside of the rails on the lower side and the other two side wheels were between the rails. After the accident, I was taken to Curling in the relief train. We went back afterwards from Curling to the scene of the accident, and I went in the second-class car looking for the boots and puttees of Corporal Knox. The berths were jammed tight and we had to prise them open with a bar of iron, I and another fellow prised open the berths. We then went back to Curling. Mr. Higgins, K.C., does not cross-examine. At 5.30 p.m. the further hearing was adjourned till to-morrow afternoon.

The Beverley Enquiry.

Jas. Kelt, examined by Mr. Hunt, gave evidence as to his being a draughtman employed by the Reid and Co., and to having seen the Beverley while she was undergoing repairs in dock here, and also as to having prepared the plan submitted by Mr. Kemp as to her alterations.
To Mr. Howley—Her stability had been increased by taking the deck houses off. I was acquainted with Capt. Wilson. I was also acquainted with Mr. Stewart, the engineer.
Cyril Tessier, examined by Mr. Hunt—I was one of the original shareholders in the Beverley S. S. Co. I was interested in the negotiations for her purchase from David Simpson of New York. She was built for and engaged on river service. I understand the deck houses were put on after she had been running on the coast service. I think the upper structure was put on after she had been running in the river service. The negotiations started by Captain Jesse Winsor getting in touch with David Simpson of New York. We were only acting as brokers and were later taken in as shareholders.
To Mr. Summers—I am agent for American and English insurance companies. We had some insurance on her hull before Munn became the owner. I only saw her in the harbor and did not examine her.
Jos. Roper, examined by Mr. Hunt—I adjusted one of the compasses of the ship. I found it impossible to adjust the one in the wheel house. The bridge compass was pretty correct and adjusted the day before the ship left. It was not a standard compass.
To Mr. Howley—The captain asked me to adjust the wheelhouse compass. I think it came down from Mr. Barry's.
To Capt. McDermott—The compass in the wheelhouse was so far on the port side I was unable to adjust it. I refused to have anything to do with it but I don't know how much it was in error. The bridge compass was in error on some points but it was fairly well placed. It was an old-fashioned compass.
To Mr. Howley—I think it was as her when she went to Montreal.
To Capt. McDermott—The house was so high above the compass that if the ship were coming west you could not get the sun. You could get bearings from about eight points ahead on either side, but not about Wilson was a first-class navigator and one of the finest masters we had in the country.
To Mr. Howley—The house extended so far behind the compass and the bridge itself was so far above the compass card that you couldn't take bearings. I wouldn't consider it for a standard compass at all. I wouldn't supply her with such a compass. The wheelhouse compass was new one made by the makers for the U. S. Admiralty. The derivation table of the compass was normal. At 5.30 adjournment was taken till 4 p.m. Saturday.

PATRIOTS AND PATRIOTISM.
Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir—Now that the war is over, for which we are all, oh so thankful, and as things will soon begin to get down to normal again, perhaps you will give me a little space in your paper to tell of a little conversation I overheard while making some purchases in a store on Saturday last. The conversation was between two women whose husbands were working in the Harbor Grace Boat & Shoe Factory. Mrs. A. thought it was a useful mean of the manager of the factory to stop the pay of the help on the Tuesday that we celebrated the ending of the war. She said that seven members of the band were working in the factory, and these men were always only too willing to help on all patriotic and other good causes, and it was the essence of small-souledness to make the men pay for their few hours off on this eventful occasion. Mrs. B. was not so much surprised as Mrs. A. and she explained it in this way, with slight modifications of my own: "Oh, well, what could you expect. If a man claims exemption from the army because his wife's mother is a widow, his patriotism cannot be very deep-rooted. He may shout for the Star Spangled Banner, the Union Jack, and all the other flags of the Allies, but that is mostly done when there is a crowd around. But dollars count, and his patriotism is greater in words than dollars." I was telling this to Tom, and he says it is a pity this could not be placed before the company, who, he thinks, would not tolerate this injustice to the help, who are always working for the good of the trade.
Yours very truly,
MARY.
