The Romance of a Marriage.

CHAPTER XLII

"Fity!" she echoes. "Don't you see? You said 'sold herself,' and it is true. They have forced her to it. It must be so! I have seen him myself—and she shudders. "Oh, Rick, save her! Save her! I know that she loves you—I saw it in her face. Do you think a woman who has loved cannot tell when she sees a woman in the same case? Oh, Rick, you must save her!"

He raises, white, and trembling, and paces the floor, his hands folded on his breast with a tight pressure to keep down the storm that rages within his heart.

"Save her, Rick!" says the low, sweet voice, imploringly. "Only you can do it. I know—I can understand it all. They are marrying her to the man for his money. I have heard of him. Weston brings me the news of this wretched place—a man not fit to touch her! Oh, Rick, I did so long to make her and you happy before—before—"

She stops and covers her face with her hands, and the great drops fall through her fingers on to the fur.

"What can I do?" he says, hoarsely, with outstretched hands. "I can kill him. By Heaven! I will, rather than she should do this thing! Flossie, you—you are a good girl—I wronged you deeply—I see it now; but you have done your best to make amends. Be satisfied; you have done all—"

"No, not all!" she says, holding up her hand warningly; for her ears, keen like those of most sick persons, have caught the sound of an opening door, and the tread of feet in the hall.

"There is someone coming. Go into the next room, Rick, and—wait—"

He turns and comes to the couch, and stands besides her, his haggard face dark with despair.

"Promise me that you will not go—that you will remain there, whatever happens, until I call you, if I should call you? Will you promise?"

He puts his hand into hers without a word, and goes into the next room, divided only from the larger one by folding-doors.

Flossie lies back panting; her strength is very low, and she has almost exhausted it. The door opens, and Weston comes in and whispers, then goes out and re-enters, follow by Paula.

She is enveloped in her domino, her golden hair ruffled by the silken hood, her fan even on her wrist—just, indeed, as she left the hall; and as she crosses the room, the silver on the dress shimmers in the stray rays of sunlight.

Pale and weary, but exquisitely lovely, she comes and kneels beside the ethereal form on the couch.

"You sent for me," she says in a low, gentle murmur. "Are you so ill?"

"Hush!" whispers Flossie, putting her fingers to her lips. "I am no worse than I have been—not much, at least. What is that you have on? Won't you take it off?" and she touches the domino.

Paula, still kneeling, unfastens the knot, and drops the cloak.

Flossie utters an exclamation of admiration.

"How beautiful! Oh, beautiful! beautiful!" and in her eyes comes a gleam of the old light. "Why, that is the prettiest combination I have ever seen. I don't think even I ever looked better, even in the old days!"

"The old days?" says Paula, with a faint smile.

The pale face flushes.

"I—I mean when I wore pretty things, my dear," she says. "And you have been to the ball, of course? You look rather tired; but you enjoyed it?"

Paula smiles curiously, and her lips twitch as if with sudden pain.

"Not very much," she answers, gravely. "I don't care very much for balls. But this was a very grand one."

"And you were a great success?" says Flossie, with a faint smile.

Paula shakes her head indifferently, her eyes fixed with anxious scrutiny upon the pale face, upon which a subtle change has fallen since she saw it last. She can hear the breath cutting the words short—knows that the smile costs more than it is worth.

"Do not talk about myself," she says, gently putting her hand on the thin arm. "You are very tired yourself this morning; are you in any pain?"

Flossie shakes her head, her blue eyes fixed on Paula's face with anxious doubt.

"No, I am never in pain—very seldom. You are wondering why I sent for you? And I—I can scarcely summon courage, to say nothing of strength, to tell you," and she sighs. "But I must, and at once. I wonder how you will take it? Perhaps you will get up and leave me without a word?"

"My dear!" murmurs Paula, with a sad smile.

"No, you will not do that," says Flossie. "You are too good for that. It is women like myself who are hard and unforgiving."

"I cannot imagine you as unforgiving," says Paula, drawing the furs round the frail form, for a slow shudder runs through her.

"Imagine me as bad as you can, and the picture will not be too dark," says Flossie, slowly, gravely.

Paula looks at her. Is she delirious? To connect anything like evil with this pure, delicate piece of waning humanity would be too ridiculous.

There is silence for a moment. Sir Herrick, behind the half-opened door, can hear the laboured breathing of Flossie—can see Paula bending pitifully over her.

Then Flossie speaks again, now very low and slowly:

"Do you remember the first time you came here? Do you remember how we talked, we two, as if we had known each other for years instead of for a few short hours?"

"I remember," says Paula, gently.

"It was strange, curious, was it not?" says Flossie, with a singular smile. "Do you remember telling me—I worried it out of you—that you had been unhappy?"

Paula inclines her head.

"You did not tell me much. Suppose there was no occasion? Suppose that I knew your story even before I saw you?"

Paula starts, but her eyes do not leave the white face.

"Is that possible?" she says, with a forced smile.

"It is more than possible, it is true."

is the faint reply. "I knew you were Sir Herrick Powie's sweetheart directly I heard your name; it nearly killed me, that name of yours," and she smiles.

Paula's face grows pale, and her hand trembles.

"How do you know it?" she asks.

"Ah!" sighs Flossie, shuddering, "that is so difficult to answer. I tried to tell you the other day. I have been trying to find courage to tell you ever since we met, but I have put it off. I had better not put it off any longer," with a smile that brings tears to Paula's eyes. "Tell me—you see I know so much that I may as well know all—did you love him very, very dearly?"

Paula is silent for a moment, then she murmurs almost inaudibly, but with a steadfast look:

"Yes, I loved him very dearly."

Flossie stretches out her hand timidly, and touches the hand with a meek, imploring gesture.

"And yet—yet you can forgive the—the woman who came between you? You said that, you know," eagerly.

"Yes," says Paula, pale and awed.

"Yes, if he is happy. Why should I not? He loved her first before he saw me. And she—why should she have suffered any more than I? Poor girl!"

Flossie flings her hands before her face and cries:

"Don't—don't pity her! Oh, if you knew; if I could tell you. You must not pity her—she is bad and wicked, and it is quite right that she should suffer. You cannot understand. But think, supposing she was vile and unworthy even of your pity—what then?"

Paula draws her breath, and is silent for a moment.

"Then, even then, I pity and forgive her!" she says, solemnly. "But—"

"Wait," pants poor Flossie. "Remember what she did—that letter. It was a cruel thing to do, vile and cruel, and it was not true, for he did not love her. It was you he loved, and he came to her to tell her that they must part, and she—she kept him against his will, knowing every moment that he had come to do the right thing. Oh, Heaven! those three days!—Miss Estcourt—Paula—it was I who separated you from the man you loved. It was I. I am Flossie Hamilton, the actress—the woman who wrote that letter. You will not leave me!" for Paula, in the shock, prepared for it as she had been, has risen and stands looking down with white, strained, averted gaze.

For a moment the longing to get from the house—to be alone—almost overmasters her; then she conquers, and coming back to the couch, kneels beside it.

Flossie has covered back, her face hidden in her hands, her whole attitude that of penitence and remorse. Paula gently draws the hands away from the face, and raises the head with its short, golden curls, and Flossie, gaining courage, lifts her eyes and looks fearfully into the depths of the dark ones bent upon her. So the two women exchange glances—the sterner and the pure. Heaven alone knows what language passes between them in that silent interchange, but slowly, solemnly, Paula draws the head to her bosom, and bends and kisses the white forehead.

With a low cry poor Flossie clings to her.

"At last—at last!" she pants, faintly. "Oh, Heaven! if I had but known some good woman like you! How different—how different I might have been."

"Hush—hush!" murmurs Paula. "It is not too late."

A strange smile flickers on Flossie's face.

"No, not quite too late. There is something else yet. You—you have forgiven me, you can forgive him?" eagerly.

Paula's eyes drop.

"You can—you must. Ah, I remember. What is this about your marriage? That is not true? Say it is not true?" fervently.

Paula looks at her steadily, and a flush of shame rises to her face.

"It was—it is not now," she says in a low voice. "That is past and done with. Do not speak of it."

"No, no. Thank Heaven! Ah, no, it is not too late? Tell me—suppose—suppose that—come nearer—can you hear me? I can scarcely hear myself. Is the sea loud to-night?" And she looks wildly and wonderingly at the window.

Paula shudders.

"No, dear. It is all quiet and still. I can hear you; but do not talk any more. Wait till to-morrow."

"No, no," with a struggling smile. "I am on the boards now, and it is my lines; I must speak them," her mind wandering back to the old stage days. "Let me—suppose he—Sir Herrick—were in this place?"

"He is here; I have seen him," says Paula in a low voice. "But—"

Flossie stops her impatiently.

"Do not think of me! So you have seen him! And—and—"

"He has gone," says Paula, wearily.

"Gone?" with a look of alarm in the blue eyes. Then she remembers and smiles faintly. "Ah, I see! He thought he had lost you really for good and all. But he has not, has he? And if he were here—if what is this—the room is dark—Rick—Rick!"

Paula starts and looks round as the door opens and Sir Herrick comes towards them. He comes with outstretched hands, thinking only of his recovered treasure, his regained love—selfish as the best of men are, alas! But Paula puts up her hand, and glances swiftly at the face lying on her bosom.

"Oh, Rick!" she says, just as if they had never been parted. "See! Poor girl, poor girl! Fetch the maid!"

He just touches Paula's outstretched hand before he goes, and returns almost in a minute with Weston.

In that moment Paula has lifted Flossie's light weight in her arms and sits upon the couch holding her almost bodily.

With a sob Weston rushes to her mistress's side.

"Oh, Miss Flossie, Miss Flossie!" is the faithful creature's piteous cry.

"Hush!" says Paula. "Send for a doctor."

"I have, miss. Oh, my poor mistress!"

Flossie opens her eyes.

"Is that you, Weston?" she murmurs, almost inaudibly, but with the old smile. "Have I slept too long? Don't let us be late; it makes them ill-tempered. I shall get four encores to-night, Weston. I feel like doing my very best."

RIVAL GOVERNMENTS. BERLIN, Mar. 14. The two Governments of Germany are now matching with the forces to gain control of the Republic. The Government will be asked to prevent the sale.

AUSTRIAN PRESS OPINION. VIENNA, Mar. 15. Newspapers in their comment on the overthrow of the Ebert Government in Berlin, show marked anxiety over the situation. Intemperate Apostles of Temperance. Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir,--Since it has pleased some of the speakers at last night's meeting, without previous inquiry, to cast aspersions on the aims and motives of those who are now seeking the modification of the Prohibition Act, perhaps the following brief explanation will be in order.

In the first place, it would be more in accordance with the Christian charity which these gentlemen profess if the Prohibition stalwarts would follow the ordinary ethical and legal rule of presuming the motive for an act to be good until the contrary is proved, instead of damning everyone who dares to differ with them. To say, as they said in effect, that everyone who opposes the present law, is a drunkard, is to make a statement both outrageous and indefensible, and would occasion very grave resentment, were it not that the very intemperance of the language of these apostles of temperance deprives their words of any weight.

It does not matter what they say, because in saying it they have shown, that they do not know what they are talking about. Suffice it to say as to the motives of the Moderates, that they are a body of citizens dissatisfied with the present law as it has worked out, and determined to try to effect a change in it, and that they will not be silenced or muzzled by anything that anyone may say or do.

They are just as desirous of forwarding sobriety and genuine temperance as any body of men arrogating to themselves the right to dictate to the public conscience, and they honestly and sincerely believe that the adoption of the plan they advocate will forward these blessings more effectively than the present system, while at the same time loosening the present indefensible restrictions on the liberty of the decent private citizen.

Let it be clearly understood that a return to the open bar or to the unrestricted sale of drink, is not contemplated for an instant; the Moderates are just as much opposed to that as they are to Prohibition.

Neither time nor space allows of an extended description here of the modifications that they do advocate, but they may be outlined as follows: The sale, importation and manufacture of intoxicating liquors, save by the Controller, to remain prohibited, but the percentage constituting a liquor "intoxicating" to be raised so as to exempt light beers. Licenses to be issued by the Controller to citizens of good character entitling them to purchase a limited quantity of liquor from him--say one bottle per week. Such licenses to be suspendable by a Magistrate on a first offence, and cancellable on a second offence.

Repeating Scout Film. The splendid Boy Scout film, "Boy Scouts to the Rescue," is being shown again in the Methodist College Hall on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights, when those who failed to see it last week may embrace the new opportunity. This film is practically the first one of its kind to be produced, and as it may be years before another is made, it behooves everyone at all interested in the Great Scout movement to see it before the chance to do so has passed. In America, as in England, the Scout movement has been firmly established, and that, in time, the same may be said of Newfoundland is the hope of all who are familiar with the aims of the Scout Creed.

Farmers Need Lime. The mild weather of Saturday and Sunday has made the snow disappear from the fields in the country. In some sheltered spots the grass is as green as it would be in Summer, there being very little frost in the soil consequently insects destructive to plant life are numerous. If we do not have more frost ere spring breaks, next season will be a hard one on young vegetables. It should be the duty of the Department of Agriculture to see that farmers can get a plentiful supply of lime at a reasonable figure.

Prohibitionists Hold Mass Meeting

Many Speakers Address Packed Hall --- Significant Resolutions Passed.

Last evening's meeting of friends and supporters of prohibition in the Methodist College Hall was very largely attended, among the audience being some ladies. On the platform were Rev. Dr. Curtis, the chairman; Rev. Drs. Bond and Jones; Revs. Gordon Dickie, D. B. Hemmeon, E. W. Forbes, T. B. Darby, A. B. Stirling and W. Bugden; Staff Capt. Thompson, S.A., and Mr. I. C. Morris, Deputy Mayor. After the meeting had begun with the singing of "Stand up, stand up for Jesus," and the saying of the Lord's Prayer, Dr. Curtis stated that he was pleased to see such a co-operation of people supporting prohibition. The call of duty had met with a splendid response, for this is a moral issue. Five years ago a great meeting had been held in this very hall, favoring prohibition. The outlook seemed very forlorn and hopeless. But resolutions were passed and he had no question that they had a very decided influence in shaping the legislation of prohibition. There had not been much need, since then, till now, to meet again. But danger threatens and in answer, the people who fought for prohibition, say with one voice, "what we have we'll hold." We don't want to have to fight the battle over again. But if it is necessary there can be no doubting the result. The people will stand where they stood before, as opponents of the liquor traffic. But there is another feature, the ladies. If we have to go to the polls again we will see that they are given the right to vote and then who can doubt the result? (Great applause.) Rev. Dr. Jones, speaking next, in moving the first resolution, wanted to know what is the matter with prohibition? The trouble is that it prohibits, and that is where the shoe pinches. The people who are against prohibition now are the ones who always were and always will be against it. Henceforth and evermore. In America there were some dry states, and the cry of anti-prohibitionists was "prohibition doesn't prohibit." But did the great American people therefore modify legislation? No, they extended it and made America, the whole continent, bone dry. That is what is wanted here. Prohibition doesn't go far enough that is the trouble. Those in whose hands rests the carrying out of prohibition legislation, are not in sympathy with the principle. Tidewaiters have been known to turn their backs while smugglers walked ashore with alcoholic drink. Even some policemen have been known to be called off their route and share a bottle with their owner. The law is not enforced and no serious attempt is made. Because the law is broken it should be modified, say the anti's. But the second commandment is broken and shall we therefore ask God to modify it? No. Rigid enforcement of the law must be our answer to those who are now organizing opposition. Before modification can come 25,000 decent-minded men will want to know why. (Great applause.) Rev. Gordon Dickie, seconding, said that the suggestion to modify the Act reminded him of the story of the Arab and the camel. The Arab was sleeping in his tent one night, the camel being outside. Presently the latter, putting his head in through the flap, said, "master, it is very cold out here. Let me keep my head inside!" Permission was given and in a short while the camel put his fore feet inside. The man said nothing and within another short period the camel came right in the tent, and there was not enough room for both and the man had to go out. Now, if this thing begins with prohibition, our opponents will soon be in possession and we will be outside. Prohibitionists do not object to the law being amended in such a way as to make it prohibit more, but they emphatically protest against any modification whatsoever. Here the motion was put and carried unanimously amidst great applause. Rev. Dr. Bond, in moving the second resolution, considered the question clear-cut and definite. There is no question of Prohibition. That was settled in 1915. Let it remain settled (applause) Who are the ones who protest? They are the ones who always protested against Prohibition and always will. They reminded him of the story of the drunken man who, going up a street, stopped a passerby and asked, "Is this the other side of the street?" "Why, no," replied the man. "The other side is over there!" "But I was over there," replied the other, with drunken gravity, "and they told me 'twas over here!" The anti's are over there and we are on this side, where we'll stay. This is the side of purity, cleanness, good family-life, better economics, clean Government, and the side of Almighty God. (Here the speaker read out the invitation issued by these manipulating the opposition to attend the meeting held last night. At the words "to secure a new, country-wide plebiscite," there was evident surprise and astonishment on the faces of those present.) They say that Prohibition doesn't prohibit. When a man will buy shoe paste, spread it on his bread and eat it, it is evident that Prohibition does prohibit! (applause.) In America, some years ago, Charles E. Hughes, the eminent jurist, was approached by anti-Prohibitionists and a cheque for $150,000 laid on his desk offered him if he would take up their cause. He refused. They next went to William H. Taft and placed a signed cheque before him and told him to fill in the amount himself. He replied, "Gentlemen, if you piled this continent high with gold, I would not!" Although nobody in Newfoundland had been given the chance to refuse such an amount, he had no doubt that there are some who would if they were offered any amount. The dope question is very simple. Certain foreigners are using the country's hospitality to ruin its young men. Some one says "put them out." I say, put them "in!" Rev. D. B. Hemmeon briefly seconded the resolution which, being put was passed without a dissenting voice. Moving the third resolution, Rev. A. Stirling referred to the Controller's Department. The old Control Board had never had access to the records of that department. In fact, there had been nothing for the Board to control. The Prohibition law has never been given a chance, yet we hear people suggesting that it be modified! We are not going back, said the speaker, we are going ahead! (applause.) Rev. Mr. Forbes seconded, and the resolution was unanimously passed. Staff-Captain Thompson, S.A., speaking briefly, said that the Salvation Army was in favor of total prohibition. Rev. Mr. Bugden seconded the Vigilance Committee resolution, which was passed. The following Vigilance Committee of 25 was then appointed: I. C. Morris, N. Burt, Rev. Dr. Jones, Rev. A. B. Stirling, Rev. Dr. Curtis, Rev. Dr. Bond, Staff-Capt. Thompson, Rev. G. Dickie, Rev. Mr. Bugden, Rev. D. B. Hemmeon, Wm. Stirling, Dr. J. A. Robinson, Alex. Robertson, Rev. W. Forbes, Jno. Clouston, H. Mitchell, W. White, W. Peters, W. H. Jones, H. J. Bursell, Jas. Billard, Elder Barrett, J. R. Smallwood and A. W. Martin. The meeting closed with the Doxology and Benediction, by Rev. Dr. Bond. Following are the resolutions passed:

- The Resolutions.
- WHEREAS, it is widely rumored that at the next session of the Legislature an attempt will be made to modify the Prohibition Act with a view of providing larger opportunities for indulgence in the use of spirituous liquors as beverages;
- AND WHEREAS, despite the respectable conduct of certain persons in the city and the country, the Prohibition Act has immensely reduced the importation of liquors, the number of inebriates and criminals in our Law Courts and Penitentiary, and the consequent deprivation and suffering in the homes of the people.
- BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED,
1. That this meeting of citizens of St. John's firmly and emphatically protest against any modification of the Act that would infringe upon the principle of Prohibition as endorsed by the electorate of Newfoundland at the polls on November 4th, 1915;
  2. That this meeting call upon the Department of Justice to rigidly enforce the Prohibition Act against medical doctors, local manufacturers, vendors of dopes, smugglers, and all others who for greed of gain are prepared to lend themselves to the dishonourable business of violating it;
  3. That this meeting urge upon the Government the importance of exercising careful supervision over the Controller of Liquors Department, especially by granting to the Inspector General of Police access to the records and by making only such appointments to the staff as will ensure public confidence in the conduct of that important and responsible office;
  4. That a Vigilance Committee be forthwith appointed, whose duties it shall be to take cognizance of any violations of the Prohibition Act and assist the Department of Justice in its rigid enforcement.
  5. That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the Prime Minister and to the city press.

Husband Found After Twenty Years.

Twenty-one years ago Israel Galipeau left Hull to seek his fortune in the wilds of Michigan. A few months after he left, his wife learned that he had been dangerously injured and had subsequently died. During the last two decades she had been mourning his loss and was supporting herself by conducting a boarding-house in Hull. But Galipeau, who had lost his memory for many years, is not dead, and has been reunited with his wife. It appears that he had received a blow on the head that blotted out his past and it was not until he was confronted with old incidents that his memory returned. Mr. Galipeau found her husband in a most remarkable manner. Last July she was struck by an automobile, owned by Charles Bellemore of Hull, and she started an action for damages against the auto-ist. It appears that the surstained severe internal and external injuries, and asked for $2,160. As there had been no legal proof of Galipeau's death the action was contested on that ground. Mr. J. A. Parent, K.C., who appeared for Mrs. Galipeau decided to make a search of records in Michigan in the hope of getting proof of the death. Galipeau, it appears, settled near Gladstone, Mich., and the assistance of the Sheriff at that place was sought. Old, musty records failed to bring out the information desired, and then a combing of the lumber industries in the State commenced. The result was that Galipeau was found, and eventually came to Hull and was identified by the interested parties. He was apprised of the fact that his wife's action for damages was held up because his permission had not been given. Galipeau gave consent to the suit, and returned to Gladstone to settle up some business. It is understood that he will move his wife to Michigan after the action has been heard.

What causes Indigestion

An excess of acid in the stomach sours the food and starts fermentation. Distressing gases form. Your meals don't digest but lay like lumps of lead. Then you have heartburn, flatulence, fullness, belching, headache, and real misery in the stomach and intestines.

A few tablets of "Pape's Diapepsin" bring relief almost as soon as it reaches the stomach. "Pape's Diapepsin" costs little at drug stores.

Everiste Le Blanc Had to Quit Work For a Whole Year

Never Thought He Would Regain Health But Tanlac Put Him Back On Job.

Almost everybody in Moncton, N.B., knows Evariste J. D. LeBlanc, of 207 Robinson St., who is book-keeper at his brother's fashionable tailoring establishment on Main Street. He is one of the oldest and most highly respected residents of Moncton.

"I was ill for about two years—so ill indeed that I had to give up work for a whole year, and never thought I should ever start again," said Mr. LeBlanc to the Tanlac representative who had heard of his remarkable recovery and called to see him at his place of business. "I suffered from shocking stomach trouble. I can never tell you all that I went through and suffered. If ever I ate anything like a decent meal, I was seized with pains in the abdomen. For hours afterwards I would be greatly distressed, and also have peculiar dizzy feelings. I had but a very feeble appetite and came at last to hate the sight or smell of food. I got very weak and thin and must have lost a lot of weight. I might also mention that I suffered quite a lot from rheumatic pains in my legs and knee joints. As all my friends know I was in a deplorable condition and really despaired of ever getting my health back again.

"I had read in the papers of so many people who had got relief from stomach troubles similar to my own by taking Tanlac, that I went along to my friend George Spencer and bought a bottle. It certainly did wonders for me. My rheumatism disappeared entirely and I haven't had pains in my legs or knee-joints since. But what surprised me even more was the way it settled my stomach trouble. I began to assimilate my food perfectly, and could eat quite a hearty meal without any distressing after-effects. My appetite rapidly increased and quickly got stronger. I have actually gained fifteen pounds in weight and am now back at my business again. My friends all say to me, 'Why, Evariste, how well you look; you are getting quite fat,' and I must say that I am feeling better to-day than I have been for years past. Tanlac has been a real boon to me and I take great pleasure in giving you this endorsement."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, and by the leading Druggist in every town.—adv.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

A SURE SIGN OF OLD AGE.

When you get to a place where you find that the presence of children and young people is an annoyance and an irritation to you, look out.

Or perhaps, I had better say "look in." There is no surer sign of old age of the heart and soul than the state of mind which makes you frown instead of smile at a crowd of youngsters or a group of young girls and boys.

Glad With the Freedom of School Let Out?

Into the trolley on which I was riding the other day crowded a big bunch of youngsters, somewhere, I would say, between five and seven. They were accompanied by a teacher and were evidently on one of those educational excursions which modern methods of education allow. (There are some reasons why one would prefer to be born when one was and where one would have liked to be a child of to-day. Think what we would have thought if we had been allowed to escape from the school-room for a whole morning to visit some historical landmark!)

The youngsters might have been a little too obtrusive if they had not had the teacher's presence to restrain them. As it was they confined themselves to giggles, nudges, low whistles and occasional pleasantries called across the aisles. Several of the boys were at that delightful age when their wide grins exposed fascinating teeth (I love little boys at this stage better than anything in all childhood).

It did not seem as if anyone could all to be cheered up by the conjunction of their "glad with the freedom of school let out" mood.

And yet opposite to me sat a woman who scowled at them from the moment they entered until the moment they left the car.

Her Actions Speak Louder Than Her Looks.

She was a woman of perhaps 45, who was evidently trying to keep her youth by careful gawing, painstaking grooming, and such aids to youth and beauty as marcelling. But she was very plain that she was not keeping her heart young—and if she had let herself frown like that, she would keep her face young, either. Of course, there are times when the thoughtlessness of youth does really cause older people legitimate annoyance. For instance, in the inn where I was staying last summer a crowd of college girls who wanted to get up and see the sun rise, spoiled the night's rest of everyone in their neighborhood.

Surely You've Wanted To.

Again, small children when not properly restrained by their parents, will often intrude seriously upon the rights of others. I know of no keener itch than the itch to spank a spoiled child who goes romping and meddling about while his parent smiles blandly at him so long as his acts do not inconvenience her.

But to resent such things is one thing. And to resent the effervescence of youth, its silliness, its lightness of heart, just because you yourself have grown more sensible (?) and no longer giggle over nothing, is quite another thing.

If ever you find yourself doing that, look out—or, as I said before, "look in."

THE BOY AND HIS DOG.

A boy and his dog make a glorious pair. No better friendship is found anywhere. For they talk and they walk and they run and they play. And they have their secrets for many a day.

And that boy has a comrade who thinks and who feels. Who walks down the road with a dog at his heels.

He may go where he will and his dog will be there. May revel in mud and his dog will not care. Faithful he'll stay for the slightest command. And bark with delight at the touch of his hand.

Oh, he owns a treasure which nobody steals. Who walks down the road with a dog at his heels.

No other can lure him away from his side. He's proof against riches and station and pride. Fine dress does not charm him and flattery's breath is lost on the dog, for he's faithful to death. He sees the great soul which the body conceals. Oh, it's great to be young with a dog at your heels!

ALWAYS SOMETHING.

THE MARCH

If one is bound to have the blues, and grumble like the deuce, then every blooming thing he views will do for an excuse. Where'er he looks he faces wrong and misery and strife; oh, something always comes along to take the joy from life. He has a small attack of flu, and it has knocked him flat; he stands around and says, "Kerchoo!" and stronger words than that. He tells his woes to other cranks, in voice of doleful pitch, and doesn't give a word of thanks that he is spared the itch. The day is dismal, and he brays, and tears his hair and robe, and he forgets the pleasant days when sunshine soaked the globe. He sadly walks the same old song, or plays it on a fife: "There's always something comes along to take the joy from life." And when one views the world like this, he is a hopeless case; he wouldn't know a slice of bliss if pushed against his face. A ton of grief upon this hick is most securely clinched, and he would make some kind of kick if he were being lynched.

Fads and Fashions.

Some of the new wraps suggest the old Roman togas.

Duveltyne handbags are both pretty and fashionable.

The new sleeves are very small and must be very chic.

Raffia embroidery appears on some novelty costumes.

Metal ribbons serve as string belts for evening gowns.

Some of the prettiest new smocks are made of a rough silk.

Green makes a charming lining for brown sports clothes.

The lace-trimmed taffeta dress is smart for afternoon wear.

Black pilot straw hats have draped crowns of green silk.

Polo cloth in the natural tone is highly favored for top coats.

The favorite color in serges and tricotines continues to be navy.

White fox neckpieces are returning to favor for summer days.

Brads, embroidery and laces are used extravagantly as trimming.

Checked velours and striped worsteds are used for sports suits.

Braded or embroidered vests are used on some of the tailored suits.

Many of the new nightgowns have sleeves and upper parts of net.

Should Curates Marry?

WIVES IMPOSSIBLE ON £200 A YEAR, SAYS BISHOP.

"Should curates marry?" was a point raised by the Bishop of Liverpool, at the recent Convocation of York. "The problem of the curate," Dr. Chavasse termed it, and he reiterated his view that "bishops ought to combine to stop at present the marriage of curates."

"Men are coming to me for ordination," he continued, "and I am asking them: 'Are you married or engaged to be married? Almost invariably I find the answer is 'Engaged to be married.' In that case I am saying to them 'I cannot accept you if you mean to take a wife on your income of £200 a year.'"

"I think we shall have to lay down some such rule as that, or otherwise we shall have a vast number of the young clergy in really serious straits. Of course what happens usually when I decline to take them is that some other bishop takes them (laughter.) I think if we could come to some determination not to accept young men contemplating marriage it would be a very good thing for the younger clergy of the Church of England."

Almost a National Scandal.

The Archbishop of York, who presided at the Convocation said if the members of the Church of England desired to have a resident married clergy of educated persons in their midst, they must either, in a degree not hitherto contemplated, raise the money by which they could be maintained, or else be prepared for a very drastic diminution in the number of separate cures throughout the country. It was quite impossible to put into words what the bishops felt about the present position of the bulk of the clergy of the country. It was a position of almost intolerable hardship and injustice, and only the patience and silence of the clergy themselves prevented its being regarded as a national scandal.

The Bishop of Sheffield said so many of the clergy were in financial straits that unless serious measures were taken very rapidly there would be most serious disaster.

The Bishop of Durham—PR boys have £200 a year.

The Bishop of Sodor and Man said no eloquence could adequately describe what was happening to-day in vicarages and rectories. In the Isle of Man things were even more desperate than on the mainland—Liverpool Weekly Post.

What the Sun Gives Us.

The cost of light per ounce has recently been worked out by Dr. Charles Davidson, of Greenwich Observatory. It takes an appalling amount of light to weigh an ounce, he says, and the cost, as supplied by gas and electric light companies, works out at something like £10,000,000.

The sun showers down on us 160 tons of this valuable stuff every day, says the doctor, yet we often neglect this free gift and prefer to pay £10,000,000 an ounce for very much inferior quality.

If the sun charged us for his magnificent light at the same rate as the gas and electric light companies, we should have to pay £57,344,000,000,000 a day, or about 21,000 million million pounds a year; but the sun does not charge—he gives it to us all without money and without price.

The German Coup D'etat.

The expected has happened in Germany, and a military revolutionary party has superseded the form of Government, which was supposed to be of a Republican nature. Bloodlessly, according to the despatches, the transformation was accomplished, which in itself is almost a guarantee that there was collusion between the late administration and the present one. For some time past it has been known that a movement was on foot, having as its object the restoration of the Imperial House of Hohenzollern. The chief military leaders were behind this, and apparently they have carried out the first part of their programme, and by a sudden, decisive exercise of power have subverted the existing Government, without the consent of the people by whose votes the members of the Reichstag were elected last year. Violence marked the change. The soldiers, who had revolted, marched suddenly into Berlin Saturday morning, and occupied the Wilhelmstrasse, the street in which the Prussian Houses of Parliament are situated, from which the announcement was made that the Government of the Empire (sic) had ceased to exist, its functions being usurped by a provisional Directory of which Von Kapp becomes the head, with General Von Luettwitz commander in chief of the military forces.

A peculiar feature in the Revolutionary proclamation is the mention that the Government of the Empire has ceased to exist. When Emperor William fled into Holland previous to the armistice of 1918, the Imperial Government then may be said to have ceased to exist. The Government, just now forcibly ejected from power was recognized as a popular one, in so far as it was elected by the votes of the people themselves, the franchise having been enlarged to a greater extent than under the Imperial regime. It had at its head a President, who was the de jure ruler of Germany, elected by the people, subsequent to the abdication of the Emperor, and without any appointed, must have been at least quasi-republican in form if not in reality. But the new proclamation distinctly uses the words Government of the Empire. However that may be, but a meaningless expression, so far as the revolutionaries are concerned. The world at large will be more interested in the coup d'etat itself rather than in any word splitting indulged in by the party in power. What the result of this sudden stroke of state will be is of more importance than a definition of the title of the former administration.

If it should be a prelude to the restoration of the Imperial family, then the Supreme Council will have some new work cut out for them. Even should it be a military form of Government, with a dictator at its head, the Peace Council will be obliged to move quickly, for there may be a great deal more behind this new move than appears on the surface. The action of the Socialists Party in declaring a general strike is menacing. A political crisis, accompanied by all the industrial workers going out, is a danger to any country, but more so to Germany at the moment, when the bitter feeling of the vanquished in war has not yet died out. And the situation is not one to be treated lightly. It constitutes a serious menace to all Europe, and unless handled firmly and determinedly may break out into revolutionary flame in other parts of the continent. Russia has shown what Bolshevism could do when left alone, and absolutely free to run its course. Whether the Germans intend to adopt Bolshevik rule, or whether the present seizure of the Government is part of a monarchist plot, will be told in future despatches, but the gravity of the situation is not to be minimized. The successful plotters may be reactionaries, or they may be imperialists. In either case there is trouble ahead for the other powers.

At the Majestic.

The William Fox artists, Albert Rae and Elinor Fair, are featured at the Majestic Theatre this evening in the fine picture, "Love is Love." This is a story in which is revealed woman's wonderful capacity for faith and sacrifice on behalf of one she loves, and a youth's grit in escaping from evil environment when inspired by a true heart. "Love is Love" is a picture which will appeal to young and old alike, for there is a broad vein of wit and humor running through it. There is, in addition, a Sunshine Comedy, full of laughs and chuckles. The Sunshine comedies, since coming to the Majestic, have found a safe place in the estimation of its patrons, and to-night's will measure up to the standard. On St. Patrick's Day, this week, the Select Picture, "At the Mercy of Men," featuring Alice Brady, will be presented. This is a story which sees Alice Brady at her best.

Talks by Tiberius.

THE DISMAL DWELLING.

In my last article I made the statement that poverty was a social evil and called for a social or state cure. Destitution being largely an individual matter, called for individual relief. There are, however, exceptions in both cases. There are also certain facts in connection with these matters in relation to the state, which ought to be mentioned. One of these facts forms the subject of this "Talk."

The fact is: The "State" or "Government" of "Ye Ancient Colony," but latest Dominion, makes an attempt every year to cope with the problems of poverty and destitution along three well defined lines: (a) The so-called "Poor Asylum;" (b) The arrangements through the Department of Charities; (c) Old Age Pensions. That there is some degree of efficiency in the methods of carrying on the work of charity, all will admit. Each line of activity is a demand upon the best brains and energy of our statesmen. The last named, viz., "Old Age Pensions," being a splendid example of the modern tendency to recognize the rights of Labour. More of this later.

The second one named, commonly called "Poor Relief," is hoary with age and much abused in its dotage. The first one, the "Poor House," demands our immediate attention, and will get it.

THE POOR ASYLUM—OUTSIDE.
The Poor Asylum—what is it? or rather, what does it look like to a casual observer? Let me clear the deck, however. I know the people who are endeavouring to "Run the Show." I know the people, at least many of them, who are, by reason of very unfortunate and unavoidable circumstances, compelled to live there. I also know what is being done by those "Ladies Bountiful" who go occasionally to the Poor Asylum with food and clothing and music and so on. God bless you men and women who go there to try to relieve the sombreness and sadness of that poor, miserable, Asylum for the Poor. When you so far conquer your finer feelings as to be able to go there and spend several hours with those Poor, Poor, People, bearing with the bad sights and worse smells, I say:—God bless you; it is divine love that impels you. I also want it to be clearly understood and emphatically stated: I do not blame the Superintendent or his assistants for the conditions of things which prevail there. They are to be pitied, for they have ideas and plans which are excellent, but which they cannot carry out owing to causes over which they have no control.

The following, taken from the "Telegraph," indicates the kindness of some people on the one hand; the interest of the Superintendent on the other:

NOTE OF THANKS.—The Superintendent of the Poor Asylum desires to thank those kind ladies who sent candles for the inmates.

Let us have a look at that building from the outside, and then let us ask ourselves if we would like to live there. We have no right to be a party to any one living where we ourselves would not like to live. We should do unto others, as we would, that they should do to us. If at the close of our inspection we would like to live there, then there is nothing left to be said.

VIEW FROM THE HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY.

Once a year, in the speech of the Chancellor of the Exchequer; or perhaps I should say:—the Minister of Finance and Customs; time and space are given to the consideration of the Poor Asylum. The whole of the time and space is occupied by considerations of finance, and amidst a jumble of figures, so far as the Minister is concerned, and a yawning desire to get it over, on the part of most of the members there, the following statements, or something like them is made.

E. POOR ASYLUM—CONCLUDED.

Contingencies.

Estimate 1914-1915.
Sundries, including telephone $110 00
Maintenance.
Rations . . . . .	9 000 00
Clothing and bedding . . . . .	1 850 00
Sundries; utensils, cleaning, etc., . . . . .	1 700 00
Fuel and light . . . . .	2 000 00
Total for Poor Asylum . . . . .	18 510 00

I do not know who does the "adding up," for the Legislative House. I have given the figures as they occur in the Journal of the "House" proceedings. Do not add them up, dear reader, the figures will not bear close inspection. The total vote as given is $18,510.00; according to the details given, it is $14,660.00. The difference does not matter much now. For the sake of putting the best side out, let us take the larger figure; we will even assume a bigger thing; let us say that $20,000.00 were voted and spent on that institution. $20,000.00 to house, warm, furnish light, clothing, food, etc., and so on, for the staff, consisting of a Superintendent; assistants; (three men) Lady Superintendent; assistants; (three women) Cooks and maids; (about six persons) inmates; Hospital cases; etc., and so on; rats; mice, etc., and so on, and so on, and so on $20,000.00. Why the Superintendent should appropriate $4,000.00 of that at least, and their assistants another $8,000. The only point I want to make now is that the vote passes the Assembly and usually there is no question, as to how the balance of $8,000.00 is spent, or how the "inmates" are fed.

A few years ago a spirit of benevolence passed over the Members of the House of Assembly, or at least so it seemed, and a vote was made for the erection of a new Poor Asylum. I admit that for several election campaigns the prospective members had promised, "if elected," to represent the people in St. John's West.) that the eye sore, Newfoundland's disgrace, would be removed. It caught the vote, true, for the people of St. John's West want and wanted it to be removed. I also admit that the "Vote" in the house had something to do with that election promise. Let us give "Honor to whom honor is due," however, the vote was made, and a show of sincere interest in the project was made. For proof of my statement, read the touching soul stirring address made by my learned and honorable friend on that occasion, as recorded in the Acts of the Politicians, commonly called "Hansard." That was years ago. The Poor Asylum still stands plus the accumulated filth and wreckage of the intervening years; But where is the vote? It was copied from one budget to another for a few years and then—?

About three years ago I asked a prominent M. H. A. of that day what had become of that vote. He replied that it had gone "with the dropped balances." What that really means I did not divine; I know that it has dropped somewhere. Puzzle; find it. I do not think that the manifesto of either party in connection with the last election made any reference to the Poor Asylum. The Deity of Charity bows His head in shame; the angels keep solemn silence; the people don't know or won't care; the politicians are too busy playing the game of politics; the Poor, Poor, Poor, in the Poor Asylum for the Poor, are almost entirely forgotten, except by those dear kind souls already referred to:—the Ladies and Gentlemen Bountiful. The doleful dirge within the dingy walls of that drab dungeon drags out its deadly notes. The Poor Asylum is in the West End of St. John's. The House of Assembly is in the East End of the city. There seems to be a great gulf between. Only a loud and insistent demand note from the people can bridge the gulf. Come on, everybody; Yell out, Shell out, in the holy name of Kind Charity.

VIEW FROM THE NORTH.

Pass up Hamilton Street; past Patrick Street; past the Foundry, the Methodist Orphanage is on your front left; left turn; Halt; Behold! As you face the South, you have the Foundry on your left; a factory also on your right; the Methodist Orphanage to your right. Behind you houses and stables. About sixty feet in front of you, stands the "Pile." A flat roofed, low set, drab, dirty coloured, smoky, building. Chimney; low, large, and fat, emitting smoke; eternal smoke; It is June. Beautiful lovely June. The bride's choice of months. The green grass, very green. In the Park in front of you the gardener has succeeded in making two blades of grass grow where one previously grew. A streamlet, clear and bright on the hill, flows by the park. The Bandstand and Park seats newly painted and looking spick and span. The flower beds—things of joy,—giving forth beauty and fragrance abundant. But there is the pile. Enwrapped in gloom, the smoke not having courage to rise above the hills, settles down upon the valley where the Poor Asylum is. If the wind is East or North or South, other smokes add to the local smoke, and viewed from Hamilton Street in June, it looks as if; "Down there it must be always foggy and smoky and dirty. Open the windows please, let a bit of fresh air in; no don't please, the smoke will come in. Pity the Poor.

It looks like that in June; what does it look like in November and December?

VIEW FROM THE SOUTH.

Now take the car for city West. Got off at Victoria Park. You may not know it as a Park, but the Conductor will tell you where it is. Viewed from the South; i.e., Water Street, the Park does not look so "parkish," (that is my own word) as from other points. Take your stand at the West end of the Park on Water Street West. Look North. You say that you cannot see the Poor Asylum; why? because of that ugly block of buildings just in front of you. At one time, in the old days of open bars and much booze, ales and other inebriating concoctions were manufactured there. Since Prohibition, the buildings, never well looking, now appear as a deserted ramshackle and unsightly thing. They successfully shut off the view so that you cannot see the Poor Asylum. But even that is no relief, for you know that it is there, and psychologically you know that it is all one piece. The brewery; the dilapidation, the ugly sight, and nauseous smell, the polluted stream, and again the poor people. Pity the Poor. Is there not some connection between;—beer, whiskey, dirt, smoke, disease, dilapidation, destitution and death? The grey sombre pile stands there but cannot be seen for a disused brewery. An ancient sore on a modern body. Clean it up. Pity the Poor.

VIEW FROM THE EAST.

Stand in Victoria Park. Note the little gate leading from the "grounds" to the Park, made specially for the inmates, one ray of sunshine. There is a bench there on which are sitting some poor men from the Poor House. The bench has no back to it. Some of the men come into the Park; what a luxury if the weather permits them to stay out in the air. But there is the building. A nearer view but aggravates the scene and makes confusion worse confounded; filth worse filthier. Why not move those ashes? Why not clean up the yard? Why that rickety fence? Why that blot on our fair earth. In contrast with the grass at your feet, the flowers on your left, the Bandstand on your right; the factory behind; the sium shacks on the street below, the Poor House is poor; and you have the grades by which men and women sink, sluk into the smoke and the dirt; and;—

PITY THE POOR.

VIEW FROM THE WEST.

Just the same. Plus, the open gate and drive. I must close, and give the inside view some other time, perhaps in my next, if I am permitted to write my next. That gateway; that drive; that door way into the House; that smell coming from the house; that sight; reminds me of what Dante must have seen in his vision when he saw the place over the doorway of which were the words: "Abandon Hope, all ye who enter here." A prison of the Soul.

Fashions and Fads.

It takes a good buck to wear any costume with much ornamentation in the back.

A new overskirt is gathered like a tunic at the low waist line of the bodice and is slightly puffed at the sides.

The lovely scarfs of white Chinese crepe, heavily embroidered, are always in quiet good taste, but they must be worn with the right gown.

The Irish in Newfoundland

Their Influence in Religion, Government, Trade and Commerce.

but though removed far from that land they loved so well, and for which they suffered so much, the Irishmen of former years never forgot Old Ireland. They counted the days and the weeks until some news would be received from those they left behind them. Communication in the early days of the past century was confined entirely to the summer months, or to the happy arrival of some ship engaged in trade between Waterford and Newfoundland. A newspaper was a rarity, and it would not be for months after some important event would happen in Europe or America that the Irish people in Newfoundland would hear of it. But they never lost faith in the success of their country's cause, and their faith is being rewarded to-day. Who could have foretold that the tyranny and oppression practised under the former Georges would be abolished under the fair-minded and liberal King Edward VII.—the Peacemaker? For the first time in history the late King stated, in his speech from the Throne, his desire to see justice extended to his brave and faithful Irish subjects and I feel convinced that his no less liberal-minded and beloved son and successor George V. will follow his example. When the injustice to Ireland, for ages, has been wiped off the Statute Book completely, and the blood of the Irish race, which flows from all parts of the world through the arteries of national organization to the heart of Irish patriotism itself, will culminate in the accomplishment of the dream and ambition of all Irishmen, century after century; and the Parliament of Ireland's chosen representatives once more assemble in the historic chambers of College Green, the united voice of Twenty Millions of Irish and their descendants will raise their hats with gratitude, and from their hearts will sound, for once in seven hundred years—"Long live King George V. who him. Home Rule was just the measure calculated to enlist his sympathies and commanded his support. He was, in very truth the founder of that system of freedom in this country. Two years before the granting of Responsible Government, he rang the reviville of the popular cause in the following memorable letter written officially to Hon. P. F. Little on the 7th of February, 1852. The agitation for self-government had at that Colony, and the arbitrary rejection of the popular suit by Earl Grey, then Secretary for the Colonies, gave occasion to the magnificent protest of the Bishop. The letter is so expressive of the exalted sentiments and mastery style of Dr. Mullock, that I here reproduce it in full. It has become a rare document, and as far as I am aware, has never appeared in print before. It is clearly evident to me that Bishop Mullock must have been on a visit to the venerable Parish Priest of Harbor Grace, Father Charles Dalton, uncle of the first Bishop of the Diocese, Rt. Rev. Dr. John Dalton, at the time he penned his letter. It came to me by chance, and here is a copy, which should be printed in letters of gold:

MAGNIFICENT COMPOSITION.

Harbor Grace, Feb. 7th, 1852.

My Dear Mr. Little,—I was never more pained in my life than when reading the insulting document forwarded by the Colonial Secretary, in answer to the address for Responsible Government. Holding, as I do, an office of some consideration in Newfoundland, deeply anxious for the welfare of the Country to which I am bound by so many ties, I feel the ill-judged and irritating despatch an insult to myself and to my people. Nothing since the days of the Tea Tax, which raised the trampled provinces of the American Colonies to the first rank among nations, as the Great Republic, has been perpetrated, so calculated to weaken British connections or cause the people of Newfoundland to look with longing eyes to the day when they can manage their own affairs, without the irresponsible control of some men in a back room in Downing Street, ignorant of the Country and apparently only desirous of showing British Colonists that they are but slaves to the petty mercenary intrigues of a clique.

Acquainted as I am with many forms of Government, having lived and travelled in many lands, having paid some little attention to the history of despotic and constitutional Governments, I solemnly declare that I never knew any settled Government so bad, so weak or so vile as that of our unfortunate country; irresponsible, drivelling, despotism, wearing the mask of representative institutions, and depending for support alone on bigotry and bribery. I see the taxes wrung from the sweat of the people, squandered in the payment of useless officials, the country after three centuries of British possession, in great part, an impassable wilderness, its people depressed, the Trade fettered, its mighty resources undeveloped, and all for what? To fatten up in idleness by the creation of useless offices, exorbitantly paid, the members of a clique.

A tabular statement of the offices, the salaries, the families and the religion of these state pensioners will show that I overstate nothing.

did justice to Old Ireland!"—and for all time England's King will find valiant and grateful warriors, who will defend the British shores to the battle cry, so often the herald of victory—"Faugh a ballagh, Erin-go-bragh!"

What a contrast to a previous monarch, bearing the same name, who was forced in the bitterness of his heart, to exclaim, in reviewing the splendid valor of the Irish on the continent: "Accursed be the laws that deprive me of such subjects."

BISHOP MULLOCK—PATRIOT.

To me there is something more than passing significance in the fact that, notwithstanding Divine Providence divided the two islands on either side of the Atlantic—those two islands so closely connected by the ties of race and tradition—by the waters of the great Atlantic ocean, science, under the inspiration of the illustrious prelate, Rt. Rev. Dr. Mullock, overcame the great billows and the mighty deep, and, as it were, the Irish race at home, clasped hands with the Exiles in Newfoundland, and thus established that connecting link between the Old World and the New, which exists, and shall continue to exist for all time to come. Whilst all due praise is given to Cyrus Field, Gisborne, etc., no one can deny that throughout the (until then) mightiest enterprise ever undertaken, the majority of the promoters lost confidence, but the illustrious prelate never—urging them to renewed efforts with voice and pen, and infusing new life into the enterprise by the power of his own personality, the terrors of the Atlantic were conquered at last on the memorable July 27th, 1866, the unshaken confidence of the noble-hearted Irishmen and patriotic prelate was rewarded, and the land of his birth and the land of his adoption were within speaking distance, over which flashed conversation with almost the rapidity of thought. His plan drawn up sixteen years previous, and published in the Morning Courier newspaper, as embodied in his memorable letter of November 8th, 1850, was carried into effect, and after many failures that would daunt any other man but Cyrus Field and himself, the greatest achievement of modern times was consummated, and the cable successfully laid between Valentia in Ireland and Heart's Content in Newfoundland. But, while it has been conceded that the Atlantic Cable owes its successful completion to the continued advocacy of Bishop Mullock, both by voice and pen, very few of us are aware of the important part the great prelate played in the procuring Responsible Government for the Island of Newfoundland. Previous to the granting of this great measure to the people of the Colony, the country was ruled by a clique, who manipulated trade and commerce, the Courts, and every other institution to their own advantage. Dare any man assert his rights! It was only about 1839 that an Irishman or a dissenter (whether Scotch or otherwise) was permitted to build a chimney in his house. There were also many unjust and tyrannical laws passed and enforced which deprived the people, principally Irishmen, of every freedom, whether it was in his civil or religious rights. But Bishop Mullock stamped his foot, and all fair-minded people rallied to his support, and the boon of Responsible Government was granted to our Island in 1854.

ADVOCATE OF SELF-GOVERNMENT.

At this time (1854) Dr. Mullock had been five years Bishop of the Island. (Dr. Dalton was not consecrated Bishop of Harbor Grace until June 1st, 1856). From the very first he was a man of weight and power to be recognized and conciliated in every political movement. The mass of his mind leaped heavily upon the social springs. They had to be adapted to

I was anxious, however, hoping for a reform, to give the present Government, if it can be called one, a fair trial, my silence would betray the cause of justice and of the people. I hope that all honest men will unite in demanding justice, and by an appeal, not to Colonial Office, but to the British Parliament.

Lord Grey's cautious retreat on the Treasury Note Bill shows that justice be done, if demanded by a united people. Should any petition for this object be forwarded before my return, I authorize you to put my name to it, and to state publicly to the people my sentiments. I do not aspire to the character of a demagogue—everyone in Newfoundland knows that in my position I need not do so, but it is the duty of a Bishop to aid and advise his people in all their struggles for justice, and I have no other desire than to see justice done to the Country, and equally administered to all classes of Her Majesty's subjects in the Colony, irrespective of denominational distinctions, without seeking or submitting to the undue ascendancy of any class, and the people should know that Government is made for them, and not they for the Government.

The puerile threat of withdrawing the Newfoundland Companies merits only supreme contempt. Gross as is the ignorance of the Colonial office regarding the Colonies, no minister would dare advise such a suicidal act. Our present Governor, a brave and experienced soldier, or Colonel Law, "The hero of a hundred fights" knows full well that 500 Americans or French occupying Signal Hill, one of the strongest maritime positions in the world, would jeopardize the Naval supremacy of Britain in these Northern Seas. No, as long as Enr' can spare a soldier, she will never give up Newfoundland.

It is in all probability the last point of America where her flag will wave, and should the dark cloud, which looms on the political horizon burst on England,—without a friend or ally on the Continent of Europe, with Ireland biding her time, her Colonies impoverished, discontented or in open rebellion, and an ambitious and unscrupulous Republic eager for Canada, the St. Lawrence and the West Indies, not 300 but 2000 troops will be stationed in St. John's if England can find them, and the people will be solicited to accept what is now contemptuously refused them.

I remain, Dear Mr. Little, with the highest sentiments of respect for your talents, and thanks for your many, honest and powerful advocacy of the principles of Justice.

Your obedient servant and sincere friend,

(Sd.) JOHN T. MULLOCK, P. F. Little, Esq.

Considering his position, and the immense influence he exercised on all parties and all creeds in the community, this letter placed him at once in the position of father and leader of self-government for the Colony. It removed all hesitation from the minds of his own people, and stirred up the whole population to that bold, determined spirit, which at all times and in all nations is sure to achieve the ends of freedom and justice.

A NOBLE ARRAY.

This brief sketch of the countrymen of my ancestors would be incomplete if I were not to mention the names of several of the old pioneer priests, whose footsteps in discharge of their sacred duties in visiting the sick and dying outlined the roads, over which subsequently passed the surveyors with transits and chains, and which to-day like great arteries connect with the heart of the country and its capital, St. John's. Away back we had such heroic pioneers in our missionary life, as Fathers Fitzgerald, Power, Cronin, McNamara, Waldron, Whitty, Phelan, Dalton, Ward, Duffy, MacKim, Ewer, O'Keefe, Ryan, Gleeson, Hearn, Sinnott, Devereaux, Murphy, Condon, Cody, Irving, Cummins, Cleary, Troy, O'Connor, Scannlan and many others. But no names gave more priests to this country than did the Walshes of Mooncoin, Co. Kilkenny, and the great family of O'Donnell from the County Tipperary. It was always the intention of that giant intellect, and probably the most brilliant literateur on this side of the Atlantic, the late Rev. Dr. R. Howley, to write the history of the Walshes of Mooncoin, whose names are immortalised in the annals of Newfoundland. Speaking to Rev. Dr. Howley one day in the Trade Review Office, I said, "Doctor who was the cleverest English speaking student that ever left the Propaganda, Rome?" He replied, "What's the use of my telling you? You would not know him. However, it was Dan MacGregor, of Nova Scotia." I laughed, and replied, "Why, Doctor, I know him as well as you do. In fact he married me. But my reason for asking you is, that I put the same question to the Rev. Dr. MacGregor, and he replied, 'That you were.' 'Pshaw,' replied Doctor Howley, 'he was only talking a lift out of you. I was not fit to wipe his boots, nor was any other person his equal, as far as I could learn, and I am sure there was not.'"

Unanswerable.

The Hon. Arthur Meighen, who is mentioned as the successor to Sir Robert Borden as Canadian Prime Minister, told me this story of the late Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

He was the thinnest of Premiers, and yet a big burly M.P. was once maladroit enough to charge him with "fattening at the expense of the poor, deluded people of this country."

Sir Wilfrid genially retorted: "I ask the House to look at the hon. gentleman opposite and then look at me and say which of us is most exposed to the charge of getting fat."

The contrast between the aldermanic proportions of the assailant and the slim figure of the assailed was too much for the gravity of the House, and there was a general and genial roar.

Lieut. Garland Replies to Dr. Blackall.

ACTION PROBABLE RELATIVE TO PUBLICATION OF CONDUCT SHEETS.

Soldiers' Conduct Sheets and Medical History Sheets.

The public are disgusted at the action of the Star in publishing the conduct and medical history sheets of Ptes. Milley, Doran and Tracey. However, as steps are being taken to bring this matter before His Excellency the Governor and the Premier, I shall only point out the difference between the Civil and Military Law. In the first place, the Manual of Military Law states:

"When a man is discharged from the Army, his conduct sheet is destroyed."

The Manual of Military Law also states:

"The object of military law is to maintain discipline amongst the troops on active service. Offences which in civil life would be punished by a small fine, are in the Army dealt with as crimes, and render an offender liable to heavy penalties."

After the signing of the armistice a deputation of three officers from each unit in the British Army held a conference in London, to arrive at decisions in matters relating to repatriation of prisoners of war, soldiers' conduct sheets, etc. They decided that a soldier upon discharge from the Army would be given a clean conduct sheet.

Why, then, should these rules be departed from, as in the case of Ptes. Milley, Doran and Tracey?

The Star states that Pte. Milley had ONE conviction for drunkenness, and as he was over four years in the Army this record is favourable, as a soldier is not fined for his first offence. The Star goes on to say Pte. Milley had four convictions for minor offences. These are not serious crimes, as a soldier can be convicted for having omitted to polish his boots, failing to shave, or for being five minutes late on parade, etc.

S. C. E. Committee.

Now I am going to present my own case so that the PUBLIC MAY KNOW AND JUDGE IF I have been treated fairly or otherwise by the Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment Committee.

About the first week in July I applied for a course, which was granted on July 28th. I proceeded to Halifax on Aug. 23rd, my course starting there on Aug. 23rd, nearly two months from the date on which I applied for my course. (It is known to me that a soldier can apply for a course here on a Thursday, have it granted on Friday of the same week, and start same on Monday of the following week.)

As soldiers whom I know had been paid for the period elapsing from the application for course to the commencement of same, I applied for this money which is the equivalent of one month's S.C.R. pay. My application was rejected, the lame excuse being that "the delay while unfortunate, was on the whole unavoidable." Thus, the Committee did not explain why it took from the first to the last week in July to grant my course. Now, at the Civil Re-establishment Committee meeting Feb. 27th, Dr. Blackall stated that he was sick during the period July 28th to Aug. 6th, that being the reason for no communication being sent to Canada until Aug. 6th relating to my case. In a letter after the meeting of Feb. 27th, the Committee informed me that a small number of soldiers had been paid for this period, but for particular reasons. It is up to the Committee to explain these peculiar reasons, and let the public decide if they are any more peculiar than the reason which Dr. Blackall puts forward for not communicating with Canada re my case previous to Aug. 6th, although he had a staff of about ten assistants in his department. Before proceeding to Halifax I told Dr. Blackall that the Canadian rate was higher than the Newfoundland rate. He assured me if such was the case my wife and self would be paid Canadian rate. On the completion of my course, I applied for the difference between the Canadian and Newfoundland rate during the period of my course, and this also was refused, although other soldiers had been granted it. My wife and self were paid Canadian rate for one month, due to the S.C.R. at Halifax sending instructions to the Halifax Branch to pay same. Later Dr. Blackall sent instructions to Canada to pay Newfoundland, and not Canadian, rates in my case. A married ex-soldier who served with the Newfoundland Regiment, applied for a course and was granted it at Halifax. He and his wife were paid Canadian rate of allowances. Let Dr. Blackall explain why he was the means of cancelling the Canadian rates in my case, while at the same time forwarding instructions to have the Canadian rates paid to the above-mentioned. I also made application for bonus on completion of my course, as several Newfoundland soldiers taking courses in Canada had been paid this. Again my application met with refusal, though the Halifax S.C.R. wrote me to the effect that I am entitled to this bonus. Let the Committee explain and let the public decide. These were the questions which I put to Dr. Blackall at the meeting of the G.W.V.A. on Jan. 12th. This extract was taken from the Star of the following day:

"At the close of his lengthy address, several questions were put to him, some of which were not answered to the satisfaction of the questioners, and from the tone of the questions and answers it was evident that all the soldiers were not as favorably im-

Dr. Blackall's Letter.

It evidently suits Dr. Blackall's purpose to discredit the statements in my letter. The men taking courses at the S.C.R. school assure me that the facts I stated in reference to their petition are perfectly correct, only Dr. Blackall chooses to refer to it in different terms. Dr. Blackall did not in his reply to mine refer to the assertion which I made to the effect that Newfoundland soldiers receiving bonuses in Canada were receiving higher allowances than those taking courses in Newfoundland. Again, Dr. Blackall states that the Committee is not made up of ex-soldiers, there being only two on the Committee. When I referred to the majority of the Committee being ex-soldiers, I considered that as I am an ex-Lieut., so also should they be ex-Cols., Capts., etc., as the finish of the war dates into the second year. The following is an extract from the Daily News of Feby. 28, and was written by one of the Committee present at the meeting of Feby. 27th, and was one of those who considered my case:

SOLDIERS' RE-ESTABLISHMENT

Committee Had Busy Session Yesterday.

Hon. J. M. Kent presided over the regular meeting of the Civil Re-Establishment Committee yesterday afternoon, when 54 cases were considered and 48 were granted. The following members were in attendance: Rev. Dr. L. Curtis, Lieut.-Col. G. T. Carby, Major Parsons, M.C., Major Butler, D.S.O., M.C., Capt. Leo Murphy, Major J. W. March, M.C., Capt. J. B. O'Reilly, Capt. G. J. Whitty, M.C.; Dr. W. W. Blackall, Vocational Officer, and Capt. G. Byrne, M.C., Secretary.

Dr. Blackall says the statement which I made regarding soldiers who, having parents in influential positions can demand and GET courses, is not true. I will leave this matter for decision to a Committee which I hope the G. W. V. A. will appoint and at an early date. Dr. Blackall says no one draws a salary as a member of the Committee. Will Dr. Blackall say he does not receive a salary?

The Daily Star.

Will the Daily Star explain why the application of an ex-soldier for a position in the Customs Dept. was considered by Mr. Brownrigg, and subsequently filed, and finally given to Mr. Foley, a civilian?

If in the matter of pensions, S.C.R. allowances, gratuity, etc., the Daily Star will point out to me that Newfoundland's obligation is less than Canada's: that Nfld. is not in a better financial position than Canada; that the people of Nfld. don't want to pay their sailors, soldiers and dependants these allowances, then I would take it that there were some logical reasons for not increasing said allowances, etc. I am not aware of the fact that payments made to soldiers on account of disability are greater in Nfld. than in Canada. The Star evidently refers to an extract from a Canadian paper, which stated that when Canada increased the disability pension, she lowered the rate of percentage, which is denied by the Canadian pensions department.

The Gang at Tucker's.

VISIT A SICK FRIEND AND ARE ENTERTAINED NOT WISELY BUT TOO WELL.

Tuesday night I visited the abode of the Tuckers and found all hands on deck as busy as sailors.

Looks as if all hands are working overtime says I as I took a seat in front of the Bogie.

The "Cute Man" having finished the list of prominent citizens, who were chronicled as being sick.

Tucker objected to accepting the invitation giving as his reason that if all the Gang went the neighbors would think that Hipditch had passed in his checks.

What's the latest, says Mrs. Tucker, as she scraped the dough from her fingers.

Not much, say Delaney, I hear Sam Hipditch is pretty low.

We're just about to go up to visit him says Mrs. Tucker. Wait a minute till I get my togs and away we go.

We all went out in single file, Mrs. Tucker leading the way, followed by the "Cute Man," Delaney and me.

Up the Hill we went, Mrs. Tucker going into a store to buy a crock of Jam and a few oranges.

We arrived at Hipditch's and Delaney knocked at the door. A minute passed and no response.

We heard you were very sick Hipditch, says Mrs. Tucker, and we came up to visit you.

So I am, says Hipditch, sick enough to make my will. Come in says he and he switched on the light in the hallway.

Mrs. Tucker again led the way making a beeline for the kitchen.

ing a beeline for the kitchen. But Hipditch intervened and switching on the light in this select apartment.

When seated Mrs. Tucker enquired about Mrs. Hipditch. Sam said she and Matilda had gone to the show at the Majestic.

Mrs. Tucker's eyes blazed with indignation. Hipditch sick and his wife and daughter at the show, was the like ever heard of in any christian community?

How do you complain, says The "Cute Man" as he cast a sympathetic glance at Hipditch.

Terrible pains in the back and head says Hipditch, and no sleep.

That's a complaint that's going, says Delaney.

Hipditch started in to describe his maladies more graphically but Mrs. Tucker stopped him by asking what did the Doctor order.

That settled it. Hipditch made a bounce for the kitchen and returned carrying a half-pint bottle of medicine. He handed it to Mrs. Tucker and asked her to taste it.

Delaney pretended to taste it and handed it to me. I held it on until they started in talking again and escaped tasting it.

Bitter stuff says The "Cute Man," I'd say there's barks in it. Never knew any one to taste medicine says Mrs. Tucker, that didn't say there was barks in it.

While Hipditch was talking about the Doctor and the medicine. I took a glance about the front room. There was sufficient furniture in it to start a young man in business, in fact there were so much crammed in the room that it was impossible to move about.

The grate was as black as the ace of spades and the room was heated just enough to prevent one from being frostbitten, by an oil stove. Photos by the score adorned the mantelpiece, and here I made the mistake of the evening. You have a nice lot of Photos Hipditch, says I, more to keep the conversation going than anything else, and immediately Hipditch started in showing us the Photos.

Now look here Hipditch. Take a friends advice. The first night you are strong enough, steal away at midnight and drop that Music Box over the nearest wharf. You'll find that you'll be a happier man. You will have your children around you and your wife to comfort you.

Don't get vexed Hipditch. You are no exception. Every man that owns a Gramophone thinks 'tis the best Gramophone in town.

We all filed out. More tired than words can tell. And resolved never again to visit a sick man, without first ascertaining, if he is strong enough to wind a gramophone.

Oh yes, says Hipditch, why I was almost forgetting to tell you about it. I won it and a hat-box full of records in a lottery that Din Aspell ran off last week. In a jiffy Hipditch was winding it up and then making a dive in the hat-box selected a record and put it on.

See you got a gramophone Hipditch, says I, just to get him to forget the Photos of his relatives "Now in the States."

Mother Lobster.

THE PERILOUS LIFE OF A POPULAR SHELLFISH.

The old woman who lived in a shoe is familiar to all, but the old woman who lives in a shell will take more recognizing. She is a very wonderful old lady, and can do what we mortals find impossible—jump out of her skin, and this she does regularly every year.

She is a very brave old fighter. She will fight with rival lobsters, crabs and any fishes that come within her reach. She has a mighty claw for grasping, a mightier one for crushing, and six pairs of jaws, so, you see, she is well armed.

Her shell is attached to her body by muscles and nerves, and she moves by the aid of her tail. With one backward sweep she glides quickly forward, and a good pull will send her scudding backwards underneath the rocks. If you go near to her and frighten her, she will throw off her claws at you, hoping to scare you away. In time she repairs this damage to herself by growing some more claws.

She lays her eggs in August and September, each of which she attaches to her shell in a wonderful way, and for the following ten months she carries them about with her. This instance shows why she only casts her shell once every twelve months.

A New Shell in Six Weeks. Her husband and children are more extravagant in the matter of clothes, and go through the process of moulting twice a year. It takes six weeks to complete the making of the new suit, and while it is being done the poor, soft, defenceless lobster retires to some secluded corner amongst the rocks out of the way of sharks, skate, cod and other hungry fishes. As soon as he is resplendent in his new suit he emerges from his hiding-place, and feeds and grows and swells like a caterpillar.

It is a very funny thing that, although the lobster can grow a shell on nothing but sea water, it cannot make the shell go on growing, but he has to cast it off when it becomes too tight.

When the shell is about to be "slipped," the flow of lime to the different parts of the shell is stopped, and the lime that the shell already contains is absorbed by the lobster, leaving the shell horny, thin and elastic. After a time, when Nature is ready, the softened shell splits down the back, and the warrior must come out. It sounds quite easy, but if you have ever noticed how well the flesh of the lobster fits into its claws, you will wonder how it is possible for it to manage all this by itself with only an opening in the back.

How to Hypnotise Lobsters. But Nature comes to its aid, and the fleshy part of the claws seems turned to water, so that it can pass through the tiny joints in the claws. Shivering and afraid, the lobster creeps into some rocky pool, and there it waits until it is fully armed again. If the lobster finds that it has not enough lime to complete the coat of armour, it eats its old shell.

This moulting goes on again and again throughout the life of the mother lobster. Before a junior lobster is two inches long it has changed its suit fourteen times. After six more moults it is six inches long, and by the time it reaches the age of four years it is ten inches long, and has cast its shell twenty-five times. Until the lobster has moulted four times the claws do not pinch, but after that period its joints are supplied with what is termed a "breaking joint," with this enables to cast its claws away at will.

It must take a great deal of patience to keep on growing these new claws, as the lobster seems to cast them away on the slightest provocation. If a thunderstorm occurs while a number are in the "pots," they all immediately throw off their claws from fright.

Lobsters can be hypnotised by stroking their backs, if you can get the chance. When under the "stroking" influence they will not cast off their claws, but will stand on their heads or tails, and only on being thrown into the water will they regain their habitual ferociousness. — Pearson's Weekly.

Heart of Polish Patriot Returns to Poland.

The embalmed heart of Thaddeus Kosciuszko, the Polish patriot, which has reposed in a bronze urn in the little chapel at Chateau Rapperswil, near Zurich, since 1837, is to be returned to Poland. It will be kept at Zugwil in the Swiss canton of Solothurn in 1817 his heart was removed and retained there when the patriot's body was taken to Cracow for burial. The heart remained at Zugwil until 1837, when it was taken to Rapperswil, where it was given a special place of honor in the Polish Museum. Successful Military Revolution -- Powers of the State Usurped by Doctor Von Kapp -- Unprepared Though Warned Government Unable to Offer Resistance.

PLOT EXPECTED, BUT NOT FIRMLY PREPARED FOR.

NEW YORK, March 13. Cables received early this morning before an announcement of the fall of the German Government indicated that the plot to overthrow the Government was foreseen, and that attempts were made to meet the move, apparently without success. A press cable from Berlin, early this morning reported that General Von Luettwitz, commander of the 1st Reichstag Brigade, was summarily removed from his post by Gustave Noske, Minister of Defence, yesterday; and that units of military organizations were being held in their barracks ready for instant action in order to put down the reactionary plot which had been discovered. This morning's reports state that General Von Luettwitz had been appointed Commander in Chief of the military forces by General Director Von Kapp, who has assumed the office of Chancellor. Official bulletins issued from Berlin last night declared the plotters had planned to move on Berlin and with the aid of Doberitz garrisson overthrow the Government. Dr. Von Kapp, who is evidently the central figure in the new government, was mentioned in this despatch as being among those involved in the plot. Capt. Babet was also declared to be one of the ringleaders. Both of these men were formerly identified with the brigade commanded by Von Luettwitz and were prominent in the fighting in Berlin during the early revolutionary period. Von Kapp has been a prominent Pan-German propagandist. Troops recently returned from the Baltic States are also said to have been implicated in the conspiracy. The earlier cables indicate that the conspiracy was not taken seriously by the people of Berlin, probably because the Government made no effort to minimize the danger which is faced. Inquiry in official quarters by correspondents last night, failed to elicit any information beyond a statement that the Government was warned in the light of the attitude of the Pan-German press to expect a monarchist plot. The impression prevailed last night that the Government exaggerated the critical nature of the situation.

B. I. S. Adopt Resolution of Condolence.

The adjourned annual meeting of the Benevolent Irish Society was held yesterday morning, Mr. W. J. Higgins, the newly-elected President occupying the chair. Five applicants were admitted to membership. Mr. J. C. Pippy, Vice-President of the Society, paid a graceful tribute to the memory of the late Bishop Power, and proposed the following resolution of condolence:

BE IT RESOLVED, that this Society record its sentiments of profound regret at the loss suffered by the Church and the country through the demise of this distinguished Prelate; and that an expression of the Society's heartfelt sympathy be tendered the family of the deceased Bishop in their great bereavement;

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that a copy of this resolution be transmitted to His Grace the Archbishop, and to the Rt. Rev. Monsignor Sears, Administrator of St. George's; that a copy be sent to the family of the departed Prelate, and that a copy be inserted in the minutes of this meeting.

The resolution was seconded by Dr. V. P. Burke, supported by the President and passed.

Arrangements were finalized for St. Patrick's Day parade. The Society will meet at the Hall at 9.15 and attend Mass at St. Patrick's Church, and the panegyric will be delivered by Rev. Fr. Connor, C.M., after which the customary visits will be paid to the Presbytery, Government House and the Palace. The C.L.B. and C.C.C. bands will assist in the parade, which is expected to be an unusually large one.

Irish Night at St. Joseph's.

The Irish Night in St. Joseph's New Hall promises to eclipse anything hitherto seen in East St. John's. For the past month Miss Francis Ryan, ably seconded by Mr. Dobbin, Mr. Pall Ryan, Mr. Jardine, Miss Ida Howlett, Miss Monica Ryan, Miss Vinnicombe and a large chorus, has been preparing a programme suitable for St. Patrick's Day. Miss Ryan's long residence in the United States, and her experience in high-school entertainments have fitted her admirably for amateur theatricals, and the performance she will stage on Wednesday need not shame a professional.

Nor have material comforts been forgotten. Teas will be served in the afternoon, during the children's tableaux, and at night. Mrs. Mackey, whose candies are famous, will surpass herself on this occasion; for she is making some Soda Feln Philtres, and Home Rule Marzons, whose innocuous sweetness will convert to rebel courses the most ardent imperialist.

"Sordello" Arrives.

Yesterday morning the D. P. Ingraham arrived in port having, in tow the A.N.D. C's new vessel Sordello. The Sordello is an auxiliary three masted schooner and was launched last year. Whilst being towed from Lewisporte in December, the towing rope got caught under a pan of ice, with the result that the schooner was driven ashore there being a snow storm prevailing at the time. Shortly afterwards the Sordello was refloated and was anchored in a very unsafe position. The Ingraham started towing the vessel to this port on Thursday and sheltered at Seldom during the night. Wesleyville was reached Friday and a stop was made there for the night. On Saturday the last lap was begun and the tug with her tow reached port without further incident. From Rocky Bay to Wesleyville a lot of ice was passed and numerous seals were seen. The Sordello is 600 tons gross register and is loaded with pulp for England. The schooner is berthed at A. Harvey & Co's pier.
