Co-Operation.

What you see in a comb of honey is a pound of perfect sweetness encased in a wax structure that is a triumph of architectural engineering. You pay twenty-five or thirty cents for this, take it home, spread it on your bread to tickle your palate and help fill your physical fuel-bin, and—

What you don't see—in this comb of honey is a little army of bees working harder than Trojans, ever worked, sucking the ambrosia from thousands of clover blossoms. Your pound of honey contains 7,000 grains of sugar. Each clover blossom provides about one-eighth of a grain, so this pound represents the sweet fruitage of 56,000 clover heads. But the clover head is composed of about sixty florets or flower tubes. To extract the hidden sweet the bee must probe each of these. This means some sixty separate operations on each flower.

If one bee contracted to gather a pound of honey, that bee would have to explore 3,850,000 of these tiny tubes to secure the material. Allowing five seconds for each exploration and twelve hours to a day, it would take this bee some four hundred days to secure a pound.

And this would represent only the gathering of the honey, not the time required for building the wax-case and storing the sweet stuff.

But there never yet was a hive with just one bee to each comb.

Nature commands pooled effort. Hundreds of bees to each comb makes a comparatively quick and easy operation of what would be an impossible task for one bee working alone.

So what we do not see in the comb of honey is the greatest of lessons in one of the greatest success-makers—Co-operation.

On every side Nature flaunts this lesson in man's face.

The seed itself is nothing. Sun, soil moisture must co-operate with the latent germ in order to produce plant life.

The most solid rock is only co-operating atoms.

The strongest man is weak alone. Only by working with others or winning others to work for him can he achieve worthwhile results.

The biggest business is bound for failure if its workers do not co-operate.

It is a machine whose parts do not work together. It may run for a short while on its own momentum, but it is headed for the dump heap.

To co-operate is to join forces and something more. It is to join hearts as well as hands, and slip a little soul in the bargain.

Not to co-operate is to court loneliness, life-rust and loss.

The a.B.C. of success is this—Be a Bee! CO-OPERATE.

Says Nerve Exhaustion Causes Airplane Falls.

LONDON, June 14—(A.P.)—Fear is never responsible for airplane accidents, in the opinion of Major H. Greame Anderson, consulting surgeon of the British Royal Air Force. From the confessions of pupils and his own experiences, Dr. Anderson said, he found that fear never asserted itself in the first few flights because the pupils were too occupied.

The chief causes of accidents to pilots, he explained were due to nerve exhaustion, which might develop within an hour after the beginning of a flight. The pilot then found himself unable to use his mental faculties and frequently came to grief on landing through inability to judge his speed and nearness to the ground.

Dr. Anderson said that since the British medical service reduced the first practice flights from an hour to ten minutes, accidents from exhaustion had been considerably lessened. They also insisted upon young pilots having a good meal before flying, even if three or four in the morning.

People who fly in commercial machines, the British expert advised, should choose the back seat as being considerably safer than the front, where there is danger of being crushed by the engine in case of trouble. He also suggested that some method should be devised whereby in case of fire the pilot could liberate the cabin, to which a parachute of sufficient strength should be attached to carry it and the passengers safely to earth.

Fear French May Check Work on Big U.S. Zeppelin.

CONSTANCE, Germany, June 9—(A.P.)—Uneasiness exists all around Lake Constance lest the French extend their occupation in Germany east to Lake Constance, and interfere with the Zeppelin which is under construction here for the United States government.

Little has been said about the machine which is to attempt flight to America. It is taking form in the great sheds of the Zeppelin company.

at Friederichshagen, and no definite predictions have been made by the builders as to when it will be ready to make a trial flight to Berlin preparatory to starting across the Atlantic.

Under the Versailles Treaty Germany is prevented from making Zeppelins for her own use, but this prohibition naturally did not extend to the manufacture of giant aircraft for France's allies and associates in the war. However, the Germans fear France will find some pretext to interfere with the building of the great ship, or to prevent the delivery of materials necessary in the work.

Lake Constance has been so closely identified with the building of Zeppelins that the citizens of all the towns around the picturesque little inland body of water have a keen interest in the mammoth craft which is being fashioned for the United States navy. Indications now are that the Zeppelin will not be ready for its trans-Atlantic flight before the late autumn, and possibly not till next spring.

Square Feet Worth Fortunes.
Fabulous Sums Paid for Building Sites.

The sum of £250,000 for the northern part of the garden of Devonshire House, Piccadilly, is apt to appal the ordinary individual.

Actually, however, the figure is a moderate one in comparison with the value set upon other London sites.

Large fortunes have changed hands within the last year, or two in connection with the new buildings which have been erected in the vicinity of Aldwych and Kingsway. The price paid in 1919 for the site of a cinema in the Strand was £16 a square foot.

Profitable Investments.

The Devonshire House negotiations prompt the query: Which is London's most valuable site?

Such a question, however, is not capable of definite answer, for the simple reason that there are spots in the Metropolis one could not buy with untold wealth. As much as £70 has been paid for a square foot of land near the Bank of England!

Fabulous prices have had to be paid by the London County Council to secure small pieces of land for necessary street improvements; one strip near Piccadilly cost them over £30 per square foot.

Vast yearly incomes have descended to the fortunate owners of certain London estates which were purchased years ago, as a speculation, by their discerning ancestors. There are, to quote only two instances, the sites in Bedford Square and Portman Square, East which had in certain cases been purchased for a few pounds since risen to be worth sums running into five figures.

New York's Valuable Acres.

In New York City costs are even higher, and competition for land in Broadway is fierce. By reason of the restricted area for building purposes, it has been necessary to build upwards instead of outwards—as in the case of the Singer building and other skyscrapers—and this naturally enhances the value of the actual ground upon which the building rises.

Towns and cities are always expanding, and a piece of land picked up to-day for a mere song may be worth many times its original value a few years hence. The building of new railways always adds value to the neighbourhoods concerned, but it is not possible to exploit the plans of railway companies as it once was.

Formerly the owner of land quoted his price, and the company either fell in with his views or had to go to greater cost to build round the spot. Nowadays such negotiations are mostly done by arbitration.

Blacksmith Gets Letter From William Hohenzollern.

Altoona, Pa., July 1.—The former Kaiser of Germany, William Hohenzollern, in exile at Doorn, has hopes that his luck will improve soon because of a gift sent him by Charles Gorsuch, the village blacksmith at Martinsburg, Blair county.

For years Gorsuch has forged tiny good luck horse shoes in his odd moments, and sent them to notables in all parts of the world. After forging his most recent "charm," Gorsuch reviewed the international situation in an effort to find the notable who was in need of "luck." He selected the former Kaiser and sent the shoe to Doorn.

Baron von Coern, marshal of William's household at Doorn, accepting the luck charm for his master, sent this message to Gorsuch:

"His majesty, the Kaiser and King, has very gladly accepted the good luck horseshoe you sent and gratefully thanks you for same." The reply was accompanied by an autographed photograph of the former emperor.

A Monday Morning Train.

Editor Evening Telegram
 Dear Sir.—Some hundreds of families are now leaving town to summer at Topsail, Manuels, Upper Gillies, and Kelligrews. Fully fifty per cent. of St. John's will also spend its first night of vacation there. In addition, every Saturday night and Sunday afternoon, crowded trains pull out of the city full of excursionists. Strange to say, all these Sunday afternoon folk get but four hours of stay, one of which is taken up by tea, and they even miss the lovely long Sunday evenings. They are prepared to pay a stiff railway fare and endure all the discomforts of long journeys in overcrowded second-class cars to get these few short hours. The railway has apparently never considered a Monday morning train, reaching the city at 8:15. It is quite content to see all kinds of money going to taxi men, and to lose the patronage of all those who reasonably expect more than three hours week-end vacation. At a very conservative estimate such a service would treble both the number of all-summer staying families and week-end trippers, and pour money into the Company in the form of fares. The issuing of non-transferable season tickets would also make a big hit from both parties' point of view. Let us see if our new manager, Mr. Russell, will not bring this much needed and highly remunerative service into early being.
 Yours truly,
EXCURSIONIST.

Social Fortunes to be Told Once More at Ten Downing St.

London, June 15.—Just as the White House got back into the social whirl of Washington when the sick and weary Mr. Wilson turned it over to the vigorous Mr. Harding, so number Ten Downing Street is expected to take on a new life now that the younger Mr. Baldwin has replaced the quieter and suffering Mr. Bonar Law. Ten Downing Street socially, however, is no White House. London's lords and ladies look to Buckingham Palace as the center of that phase of life. But Ten Downing Street is a spoke in the social wheel, and because of peculiar circumstances, that spoke has not been bearing its share of the social burden these many months.
 Ten Downing Street is the official home of Britain's prime minister and as such it has a part to play, and a prominent one, in those offshoots of political life that go by the name of official receptions. Over the tea-cups on the tables of "Number Ten" world problems are sometimes settled, as Mr. Margot Asquith long ago informed those who read Mr. Bonar Law, being a widower, and his short term of office having found him in almost constant ill health, there was little social life at "Number Ten" during the days of his residence there. But with the Baldwin regime it is bound to be different, for now the tea-cups are presided over by a new mistress.
 Mrs. Baldwin always has entertained considerably. Also she always has taken interest in the political activities of women, attending their meetings and sometimes entering the discussions by way of a speech. Since October, as wife of the chancellor of the exchequer and mistress of the "house next door," which is No. 11 Downing Street, Mrs. Baldwin has been hostess at several receptions and parties. Always the guests were pleased with the easy arrangements and the comfortable charm her hand gave the cramped quarters. Her town house in Eaton Square is regarded as one of the most perfectly equipped homes in London. Chequers Court, the country home of British prime ministers, which the Baldwins occupied through an agreement with Mr. Bonar Law long before the highest honor in the kingdom came to them, is their third home, and their own private residence in the country, Astley Hall, in Worcestershire, is the fourth and the favorite of the family.
 As the hostess of Number Ten, Mrs. Baldwin will have the constant assistance of her youngest and only unmarried daughter, Betty, who has just reached 21, and is "but" in society this season. There are three other daughters and two sons, the younger a Cambridge student, the elder, Oliver, a lieutenant in the Irish Guards who has had his share of getting captured and getting away. Once the Bolsheviks caught him and he escaped, and afterwards he fell into the clutches of the Kemalists, but he also left them unexpectedly.
 Just as pigs and pipes down at Astley Hall, and politics in London are three of the big elements in the life of the new prime minister, so china and children have been prominent in the work and pleasure of his wife. All of her homes contain fine collections of china, which she loves and selects with the care and the devotion that her husband gives to building up and using his libraries. Her children, though two of them have children of their own nowadays, are often with her, as those who look at the pictures in the Sunday papers already must have observed.

Wants Swimming Race.

 Dear Sir.—Nine years have now elapsed since the Regatta Program contained the cross-lake Swimming Race as an item, and many are asking why it has not yet been revived. Cannot the Committee see fit to reinstate the old favorite event this year? When not one in a hundred of our people can swim, the necessity of an encouragement need hardly be pointed out, and apart from a demonstration test certificate, no better means exists than the distinction of finishing in a Regatta Race. The race itself comes during the interval and it is a welcome break in the monotony to the crowds on the banks. Certainly, from the plunging in of the gleaming bodies to the last exciting spurt at the finish, no one can deny the interest the extremely varied progress of the bobbing heads causes. Entries would be numerous, for the distance is quite short, and most of our young swimming enthusiasts are simply itching to try their hands at it. The question of medals need present no difficulty for two persons at least have expressed their willingness to donate trophies. It is merely up to our committeemen to say the word—which we trust they will immediately do.
 Yours sincerely,
 SWIMMER.

couple Devote 70 Years to Passion Play Service.

OBERRAMMERAU. June 9.—(A.P.)—Jakob and Mathilde Rutz have just celebrated their golden wedding anniversary, one more milestone in two lives which have been devoted to the Passion Play for 70 years. Rutz was the village smithy of Oberammergau until age pulled him away from the forge, and is the father-in-law of Anton Lang, the renowned playwright of the life of Christ.
 In 1850, as a babe of three, Rutz took his original part in Oberammergau's famous play. He was then called Adam's son in one of the Old Testament tableaux which feature the performances. Ten years later he appeared as an alto soloist, and in 1870 was chief assistant to the Passion Play protagonist and choir leader Johannes Diemer. During the performances of 1880, Diemer again held this combination position, but Rutz often substituted for him and in 1889 replaced the leader entirely.
 For centuries the Diemer family has furnished the choir leader, Rutz being the only person ever to break in on this otherwise uninterrupted succession.
 In 1870, when the Passion Play season had to be interrupted, Rutz was called to the colors for the Franco-Prussian war. It was an ironical coincidence that he was billeted during the hostilities with a French family which had once been his guests at Oberammergau while attending the play.
 Mother Rutz's devotion to the Passion Play has expressed itself principally in hospitality caring for many of the thousands of tourists who trek this way every ten years. One of her two sons lives here and took a prominent part in last year's play; the other lives in Munich and is therefore not eligible to the cast. Her daughter Mathilde, the wife of Anton Lang, made a name for herself in former years as a Passion Play artist.
 Rutz continues active in public life as a member of the village government and one of the Passion Play executive committeemen.

Adventures Amongst Royalty.

SIR PHILIP GIBBS.

Royalty caught unawares forgets its dignity and can be quite human, according to Sir Philip Gibbs, well-known English newspaper man, war correspondent and novelist, who describes some of his meetings with kings and queens in World's Work. Sometimes they become original in their remarks as in the following anecdote he tells about King Ferdinand of Bulgaria:

It was in the war of 1912, between Bulgaria and Turkey, and I was standing on the bridge over the Maritza river at Mustapha Pasha (now the new boundary of the Turks in Europe) when Ferdinand of Bulgaria arrived with his staff. Because of the climate which was cold there, I was wearing the fur cap of a Bulgarian peasant, a sheepskin coat, and leggings and believed myself to be thoroughly disguised as a Bulgar. But the king—a tall, fat old man with long nose and little shifty eyes, like a rogue elephant—"spotted" me at once as an Englishman, and calling me up to him, chatted very civilly in my own language, which he spoke without an accent. At that moment there arrived the usual character who always does appear at the psychological moment in any part of the world's drama—a photographer of the Daily Mail. Ferdinand of Bulgaria has a particular hatred and dread of camera men, believing that he might be assassinated by some enemy pretending to "snap" him. He raised his stick to strike the man down and was only reassured when I told him that he was a harmless Englishman trying to carry out his profession as a press photographer. "Photography is not a profession," said the king. "It's a damned disease." He talks a couple of rattling good stories in connection with newspaper assignments to "cover" movements of the late King Edward and the present King George.

One of my colleagues who had been a skipper on sea-going tramps before adopting the more hazardous profession of the press, resented being "cooped up" in the press box at Puncheston races which King Edward was to attend in semi-state. Nothing would content his soul but a place on the royal stand. I accompanied him to see the fun, but regretted my temerity when, without challenge, we stood surrounded by princes and peers of Ireland, at the top of the gangway up which the king was to come. I think they put my friend the skipper as the king's private detective. He wore a blue reefers coat and a bowler hat with a curly brim. By good luck I was in a tall hat and morning suit, like the rest of the company. Presently the king came, in a little pageant of state carriages, with outriders in scarlet and gold, and then, with his gentlemen, he ascended the gangway, shaking hands with all assembled on the stairs. The skipper, who was a great patriot, and loved King Edward as a "regular fellow," betrayed himself by the warmth of his greeting. Grasping the king's hand in a sailor-man's grip, he shook it long and ardently, and expressed the hope that his Majesty was quite well.

King Edward was startled by this unconventional welcome, and a few moments later after some whispered words, one of his squires touched the skipper on the shoulder and requested him politely to seek some other place. I hastily abandoned my colleague, and betrayed no kind of acquaintance with him but held to the advantage of my tall hat, and spent an interesting morning listening to King Edward's conversation with the Irish gentry. Prince Arthur of Connaught was there, and I remember that King Edward clapped him on the back and chaffed him because he had not yet found a wife. "It's time you got married, young fellow," said his illustrious uncle.

I made another uninvited appearance among Royalty, and to this day blush at the remembrance of my audacity which was unnecessary and unpardonable. It was when King George and Queen Mary opened the exhibition at the White City at Shepherd's Bush, London.

They had made a preliminary inspection of the place, on a fifty day when the exhibition grounds were like the bogs of Flanders, and when the king, with very pardonable irritation, uttered the word "Damn!" when he stepped into a puddle which splashed all over his uniform. "Hush, George!" said the Queen. "Wait till we get home!"

On the day of the opening, vast crowds had assembled in the grounds, but were not allowed to enter the exhibition buildings until the royal party had passed through. The press were kept back by a rope at the entrance way, in a position from which they could see just nothing at all. I was peered at this lack of consideration for professional observers, and worked on it, and it was a magnificent structure. On the platform at the top was a chariot carved from stone, in aisle of which were large statues of Mausolus and Artemisia.

The sixth wonder was the Colossus of Rhodes, completed in 280 B.C., and sold as old metal to the swordmakers in A.D. 663. When Demetrius of Macedonia warred against Egypt, the little kingdom of Rhodes came to Egypt's rescue and turned the tide against the invader. Demetrius thereupon gave Rhodes his undivided attention. Armed with metal battering machines called helepolis, he besieged Rhodes for 13 months, but to no avail. At last he withdrew disheartened, leaving behind him the massive engines that had brought him no good fortune.

The Famed Colossus.

To celebrate the victory over Demetrius the King of Rhodes scrapped the Macedonian battering machines, and the Colossus was built out of the metal that came from them. It was dedicated to Apollo, the protecting god of the city.

The seventh wonder was the Lighthouse of Alexandria, at Pharos, built between 285 and 247 B.C., by Ptolemy Philadelphus, and shattered by an earthquake in 1375. It had a long life and a full one. It was built something like a modern setback skyscraper, in several stages, each stage smaller than the one beneath it. It was the tallest structure of the ancient world, between 400 and 600 feet high, and on the top of it was a lens-shaped mirror which made it possible to see ships out at sea far beyond the reach of the naked eye. The fires in the tower were visible many miles away.

DEMSEY WINS. RINGSIDE SHELBLY, Mon., July 5. Jack Dempsey was awarded a fifteen round decision over Tommy Gibbons, the St. Paul challenger, in one of the most surprising upsets in the history of prize fighting. Gibbons was very tired and holding in desperation when the fifteenth round battle ended.

MORE TROOPS FOR SYDNEY. WINNIPEG, Man., July 5. Approximately two hundred and fifty members of the active Militia passed through Winnipeg late last night from Camp Hughes, Manitoba, enroute to Sydney. The contingent comprised units of the Strathcona Horse and Princess Pats Canadian Light Infantry.

MOUNTIES FOR STRIKE AREA. HALIFAX, N.S., July 5. The Provincial Government's announcement last night stated it had been decided to recruit more Provincial police for duty in the Cape Breton strike zone. Men who are accustomed to horses and riding would be given preference, it was said.

A DOUBLE STRIKE LIKELY. SYDNEY, N.S., July 5. With the miners of Cape Breton already out in a sympathy strike with the steel workers of Sydney, they voted by a small majority yesterday to strike for the enforcement of 1921 rates of wages. It is thought this will mean a strike for that purpose concurrent with the present one.

STILL MORE TROOPS. LONDON, Ont., July 5. Orders were received here last night from Ottawa to prepare further drafts of medical, ordnance, army service and other units for immediate transportation to Sydney strike area.

INTEREST RAISED. LONDON, July 5. The Bank of England today raised the rate to four per cent. from three per cent. level, which had prevailed for years. The raise was not unexpected in financial circles.

BRITISH SAILORS IN INDEPENDENCE DAY PARADE. PORTLAND, Oregon, July 5. President Harding spoke at the Independence Day gathering here yesterday, when the feature of the parade was the participation of two companies of sailors and marines under arms from the British cruiser Curlew. The President said history was being made, for never before had British naval forces marched in an American Independence Day parade.

The Romance of Electricity.

"Bearing upon current discussion of the possibilities of the greater use and wider distribution of electricity for light and power purposes are statistics recently published by the Bureau of the Census," says the Boston Transcript. "The growth of the electrical industry. Forty years ago the country's entire investment in electric light and power plants was not much more than $1,000,000. It was less than that amount in 1880. To-day it is approximately $5,000,000,000, with an annual gross return of a billion. The securities of electric light and power companies are owned by 1,750,000 persons.

The number of homes in the United States is estimated to be 22,500,000. Of this total, 8,500,000, or more than one-third, are wired for electrical service. It is service that could now be extended to 5,000,000 additional homes. In other words, present facilities would permit the supply of electricity to more than half the homes in the United States.

In 1922, approximately 1,000,000 homes were wired and equipped. The figures suggest the speed coming of the day when the dwellings without electric light and electric power for domestic use will be in the minority.

Electric traction has been largely responsible for the growth of the cities. Population of United States cities of more than 5,000 inhabitants has increased in forty years from 8,600,000 to 37,000,000. It has doubled twice in the four decades. In the same time the population of the country as a whole has doubled but little more than once. It was 50,000,000 in 1880; 105,000,000 in 1920. Now there are those who hope that the greater production and wider distribution of electrical power with the accompanying lowering of the cost of transportation will serve to check the further crowding of great numbers of people into the congested areas of the cities.

However that may be, the growth of the industry as pictured in these figures of the Census Bureau suggests fascinating possibilities of what may be expected in the future. It calls to mind also the romance of much that is being done in the present in connection with electrical development, including the triumphs of the engineers who create great lakes for the purpose of making reservoirs of hydraulic power to be converted into electricity and fang over power lines, climbing mountain ranges, suspended over broad rivers and hidden under city streets, thus making available energy which may be used in running a railroad, keeping ponderous machinery in motion, and operating a little device to save the householder from the labor of winding the phonograph.

And yet there are people who maintain that modern life has lost the savor of adventure and the inspiration of romantic achievement!

Canada Losing Her Trade in Nfld.

Several of Newfoundland's importing houses declare that Canada is losing trade to the United States for the reason that there is no trade representative in the country to represent Canada in keeping in touch with conditions.

The United States Consul at St. John's is in close touch with the business community with the result that business is going to the States which formerly went to Canada. Canada did have a commercial agent here but for some reason he was withdrawn. One importing house asked the financial Post regarding Canadian locks and your representative was able to give him the names of two companies of which he did not know and with whom he has promised to communicate.

Inquiries by the Financial Post confirm that Canada has now no trade representative in Newfoundland. At one time there was an arrangement by which a commercial agent gave the Canadian Government part of his time, but this was cancelled and all that is done at present is that a junior trade commis-soner goes to Newfoundland every few months and stays there for a short time. The matter has been taken up with the C.M.A. and laid before the department of trade at Ottawa. The department has felt that the market is one which should be developed by the manufacturers through their own representatives. It is to be hoped, however, that Hon. Mr. Robb, who has been reorganizing his department in a very efficient way, will go further into this matter to see that Canada is given such representatives in Newfoundland as justified by trade opportunities.

Young Americans Promise Well for Paris Olympics.

NEW YORK, July 1.—(A.P.)—A potential Olympic champion for the United States, that's what experts predict for Frank Hussey, sensational Stuyvesant High School sprinter, who was credited recently with equalling the 100-yard dash, a mark held jointly by Charley Paddock, Howard P. Drew and D. J. Kelly. Whether or not Hussey's mark goes down in official records along with those of Paddock, Drew and Kelly, it stands out as one of the greatest track performances of the season. The schoolboy marvel's performance occurred in the public schools' track and field championships, and was subjected to the closest official scrutiny. Three A.A.U. timers caught him in 9 3-5 and a fourth even a trifle faster, close to 9 5-10. All testified that his start was perfect, but it was thought a slight wind that blew diagonally across the track might influence official decision on Hussey's achievement.

Hussey has sprinted the "century" consistently around the 10-second mark. He was credited with two performances of 10 1/2 seconds indoors last winter, and in his first outdoor appearance was clocked in 9 3/10. He equalled this mark twice in later meets and broke the tape in 10-flat and

1 1-5 in two other races. Besides the young New Yorker, several other schoolboy stars in various parts of the country have demonstrated that they may be Olympic timber by next year.

Eugene Goodwillie, of Chicago, national interscholastic sprint champion, covered the 100 in 9 4-5 and the 200 in 21 2-5, the latter a new American interscholastic record, at the title meet in Chicago. Other schoolboy stars whose performances have stood out this spring include Hamm, of Lonoke, Ark., who set a new interscholastic broad jump mark of 23 feet, 8 1/2 inches; Kuck, of Wilson, Kansas, a promising all-round field performer who has been tossing the 16-pound shot well over 40 feet; and Paulsen, of Hill School, who equalled interscholastic records in both the 120-high and 220-low hurdles.

Mozart's Grave May be Effaced.

Unless the plans of city officials are soon changed the famous Cemetery of St. Marcus, in Vienna, known to thousands of American tourists as the last resting place of Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, will be removed as a block to progress. And, with the cemetery, so remains of the immortal composer will vanish into eternal obscurity. Mozart, who died in abject poverty, was buried in an unmarked grave at St. Marcus in December, 1791. His widow, Constanza, did not attend the funeral, and when she visited the graveyard for the first time seventeen years later the old grave-digger who had buried her gifted husband was dead. And as no records had been kept to secret of Mozart's grave was lost. Now, with the removal of all remains from the cemetery, even his burial place will be unidentifiable. The Vienna Mozart Society is demanding that the city erect a tablet on the cemetery site commemorating the fact that Mozart was once buried there.

When Tara's King Ruled.

There has been a revival of interest in ancient Irish Manuscripts. Many eminent scholars are devoting attention to those works. Among the latest who have given the public the benefit of their researches is Rev. H. J. Lawlor, Professor of Ecclesiastical History in Trinity College, Dublin. Tracing the beginnings of the Christian learning and art in Ireland he dealt in a public lecture with the version of the Sacred Scriptures made by St. Jerome, the greatest scholar in the West. It dated from the year 400. St. Jerome translated the Bible from the originals in Greek and Hebrew into Latin.

The work took about 400 years to spread all over Western Europe, as it had to be copied by hand. One such manuscript at least was in Ireland in the sixth century. St. Columba borrowed it from St. Finian of Droimn and copied it. St. Finian demanded back not only the book, but the copy St. Columba had made and the King of Tara decided the ownership with the sentence:

"To every cow belongs its calf, so to every book belongs its copy."

But St. Columba did not accept this decision and went to Scotland in 563. The Cathach was left in charge of the O'Donnells. Centuries later it was placed in a beautiful shrine, and in time it was forgotten what the shrine contained. In the last century it came into the hands of Sir William Betham, who opened it and found in the casket the Bible, which is now in the Royal Irish Academy. It was a pure Vulgate with not a bit of old Latin in it. St. Finian was probably the first person to bring it to Ireland and St. Finian the first to make a copy of it here. The Book of Durrow, containing the four gospels, was beautifully illuminated about the year 700 from an original.

The Gulf Stream.

DECREASES WHEN IT REACHES THE COAST OF NEWFOUNDLAND.

Weather experts are accounting for the recent frequent changes in temperature by ascribing them to the Gulf Stream.

For centuries the Gulf Stream has been blamed for every freak development of climate, when, as a matter of fact, the slight seasonal changes that take place in its position are not directly responsible for these vagaries. Its flow does not reach within two thousand miles of any part of Europe, so that we must search for another cause on whose broad back to lay the responsibilities of June snowstorms and February heat-waves.

The Equatorial current, coming in contact with South America, splits in two, one part turning along the Brazilian coast, the other turning north to form the Gulf Stream.

Contrary to the stream making a complete circuit of the Gulf of Mexico as was formerly supposed, only a small amount of water is drawn from this Gulf, and the stream, beginning in the Strait of Florida, sweeps northward, gathering velocity until it reaches the coast of Newfoundland, where its speed decreases gradually until it becomes merely a wind drift.

Winds may disturb the surface of the Gulf Stream. Favourable winds may accelerate its flow and adverse ones retard it, while a strong southerly or southeasterly wind may blow surface water out of its course.

The prevailing winds of Western Europe are from the West and southwest. Coming from the ocean they contain a lot of moisture, which is chilled by their contact with northerly or southeasterly wind may blow of rain or snow even before reaching the land.

Floating Mountains of Ice

A Gruesome Story of 1841.
The Weather Bureau has issued a warning that during the coming summer icebergs are likely to be unusually plentiful, and that many detached bergs will probably find their way south.

No one who has seen an iceberg can ever forget the beauty of the sight—a glittering mountain of the sea with breakers roaring into its caves and streams of water pouring from its pinnacles in the warmer air.

But this sight is more appreciated by the passengers than by the crew of a passing ship. Luckily modern inventions have made icebergs much less dangerous than formerly, but woe to the ship that through some mishap comes into collision with one.

Consider this remarkable fact alone. A berg is sometimes so delicately balanced that the touch of a man's hand would upset it. This delicate poise is caused by the constant rays of the sun on the exposed portion only one-eighth of the whole, and by the corrosive action of the salt water on the submerged portion.

Risks Run by Seamen.
Thus it has often happened that Newfoundland fishermen, while engaged in cutting fragments from bergs to pack round their fish, have been killed by the huge hummock upon which they were standing rolling right over.

When a ship comes into collision with an iceberg she can be destroyed in two ways. Thousands of tons of ice can fall down on her from the exposed portion, or her keel can be shattered by the action of the submerged part.

Sometimes it happens that a vessel is scooped right out of the water by the sudden heaving of this submerged part. An almost incredible case was reported a few years ago of the Fortia, which, when sailing for Newfoundland, struck a berg, with the result that she was lifted high and dry twelve feet above the surface of the sea.

There are people still living who can recall the gruesome story reported in 1841 of an especially large iceberg seen off the coast of St. John's Island, Newfoundland. In the centre of the berg, embedded between two hills of ice, were two ships, with no living being in them and their masts gone.

MOSQUITOES

World's Laziest Man.

Who is the world's laziest man? Lord Dunraven claims the title for a man he met in New York.

"I went to see him one afternoon and found him in bed," writes Lord Dunraven in "Past Times and Pastimes" (Hodder and Stoughton), "and asked him what was the matter."

"Nothing," was the reply. "I've decided not to get up again. What's the use? I get up in the morning and have the trouble of dressing, loaf about until lunch-time, change my clothes, pay a call or two, get dressed again, and have dinner; afterwards I have to undress before going to bed. I'm sick of it all, so I'm going to stay in bed." And he did.

The Lighter Side.

She used to be sweetly appealing, but now, oh now, she is frankly revealing.

It has been suggested that New York no longer be called the Empire state, but the state of intoxication.

THE KID AND ME.

I had a silver rod and reel,
A willow basket by my side;
And fly, plus casts and silver spoons,
The things that give an angler pride.
The kid, a freckled little chap,
Had none of these of which I sing.
But just a little banded pin
About until lunch-time, change my clothes, pay a call or two, get dressed again, and have dinner; afterwards
I have to undress before going to bed. I'm sick of it all, so I'm going to stay in bed." And he did.
