Artesian Well to be Sunk and San! tary System Organized-May Levy Tax Rate on Property

The cottagers and land-owners a Ericau are, with the co-operation of the Commissioner for Harwwich, planning very many material improvements. A committee has been ormed consisting of W. D. Samson, Wm. Hall and Theo. Pickering, of Blenheim, and Arch. Park, C. C. Greening and J. G. Kerr, of Chatham, to take charge of preliminary arrangements.

A meeting was held last evening and the enterprise is beginning to assume tangible shape. Dr. Hanks, representing Dr. Langford, the Medi-cal Health Officer of the Township, was present with many valuable suggestions.

There is a strong sentiment in favor of establishing a police village at Erieau and the cottagers levying taxes upon themselves for local improvements, etc. It is proposed to sink an artesian well for water supply to be operated by windmill. A thorough and complete sanitary system is also to be submitted for approval and several new sidewalks laid. The Harwwich Commissioner pointed out that the cottagers allaid. The Harwwich Commissioner pointed out that the cottagers already had a neat surplus in the township treasury, and this would go to swell the tax rate to be levied.

Child Fell Into Open Cistern and Had Narrow Escape From Drowning— Help Came In Time

The deadly cistern nearly claimed

The deadly cistern nearly claimed another victim last night, in the person of the young child of A. Easton, who lives on the commons near Mahler's apple factory.

The child was exploring the yard and, finding the cistern, shoved off the cover and pitched headlong into the water. The frantic mother rushed from the house, uttering cries for help, which attracted Samuel Horne, a neighbor, who, fortunately, was at home.

Mr. Horne had a rake in his hand and with this he caught the child's clothes as it was sinking the second time. The hold gave way and the agonized mother saw her little one again go down. The third time Mr. Horne was more successful and succeeded in retaining his hold and drawaing the child to the surface.

Dr. Bray was summoned and the little one was revived.

Parents should soon-learn that the unprotected cistern is one of the most deadly sources of danger to young children, and will, perhaps, protect them before any more young lives are sauffed out through that cause. Mr. Horne had a rake in his hand loundaries Guarded With Shot Guns-Louisianians Are In a Great Panic -Threaten to Put a Stop to Train Service, and Bring Federal Government into the Fever Situation In South-Mosquito Theory Doubted.

New Orleans, Aug 5.—Extreme measures which some of the country districts are taking to guard themsel-ves from yellow fever threaten to put a stop to train service and may bring a stop to train service and may bring the Federal Government into the fever situation in the South.

The most radical action thus far taken is that of the police board of Calcasieu the second largest parish in the state. It has passed resolutions ordering that all traffic, travel and intercourse between Calcasieu and points east, north and west shall cease at once and that no one shall be personned. at once and that no one shall be per-mitted to enter the limits of the par-ish until further orders. In conse-quence of this resolution the Southern Pacific has been ordered from yester-day to run no more trains through Cal-casieu, which means the abandonment of the through service of the line to the west. The effect of the order is to stop all mail service into or through Calcasieu.

Grant Parish has instituted a shotgun quarantine, stopped all trains and shut herself off completely from mail service. Lafayette, La., has issued or-ders that only mail and disinfected freight shall come into that parish. Tensas parish has quarantined all passengers, baggage, household goods, fruit and fabrics. Precautions as radical as these have been taken in many other sections of the south and there is apparently as great a panic now prevailing as at any time during 1897, the bulk of the country laymen re-fusing to put their faith in the mosquito theory.

NOT LOOKING FOR FIGHT. Germany Desires No Conflict With the British Empire.

British Empire.

London, Aug. 5.—The Berlin correspondent of The Times cables:—The question of Anglo-German relations continues to be the subject of persistent discussion. The responsibility for the present state of public feeling rests solely with the agencies which have continuously misrepresented the motives of those who entertained scepticism with regard to the sincerity of the German policy. Until Germany is prepared to give practical proof of the sincerity of her intentions her relations pared to give practical proof of the sin-cerity of her intentions her relations towards Great Britain must remain as to-day, unless she is determined to ag-gravate the situation by open defiance. There are good reasons for believing that the last thing the German Gov-ernment desires at this moment is a conflict of any kind with the British Empire.

Wm. Kelly of Richmond Street was Knocked off Wheel and Rendered Unconscious-No Blame Attached.

FELLED BY RIG

Another unfortunate accident occurred at noon to-day—the victim being Wm. Kelly, of Richmond street. Mr. Kelly was run into by a rig, knocked off his wheel and, his head striking the curbstone, he was rendered unconscious, in which condition he still is at the time of going to bress.

The accident occurred on the corner of Queen and Wellington streets. Ben. Harper was driving along Queen St. When he reached the corner a woman and a small child were on one side of his rig, preventing him turning out for Mr. Kelly, who was coming down Wellington street at a fair rate of speed on his wheel. Wheel and rig collided, Mr. Kelly being thrown to the ground with the result mentioned. mentioned

Several were eye-witnesses to the occurrence and all agree that it was purely accidental. Bruce Reddick imnediately summoned Dr. McKed and the injured man was removed to his home.

Mr. Kelly's injuries are, undoubtedly, serious, but the chances for his speedy recovery are hopeful.

1905 CIVIC RATE IS 22 MILLS

Decision Reached at Important Meeting of Finance Committee Last Night

No Deficit will be Left by Present Council, So They Say-$17,000 to be Received.

The Finance Committee held an eventful session last eyening. As a result of the session it is practically settled that Chatham will have a 22 nill rate this year. This news is received with additional pleasure by reason of the fact that civic officials had forecasted a rate in the newhborhood of 30 mills, and citizens had braced themselves for the worst.

The expenditures of the present Council have been necessarily heavy -the electric road, the market building, the Central'school extension, improvements at the cemetery, new pavements and sewers - assessments for all of these have to be met, and the Council deserves great credit for the Council deserves great credit for keeping the rate as low as it is.

Of course, the money to be received in October from the Pere Marquette Railway—$17,000—helped materially.

This is part of the bonus granted by the city to the Eric & Huron Railway Co.—one condition of the grant being that the car shops, etc., of the company should be located here. These shops were moved by the Lake Shore Ry. to Walkerville, and the sum the city receives is compensation for the loss.

And then, it is practically decided to issue debentures for the amount to issue debentures for the amount required to put the Central school in a sanitary condition. The cost will be about $5,000, and it is not fair that the ratepayers of this year should pay the whole of a debt contracted for a measure which will benefit those of succeeding years equally as much.

The decreased rate is extremely gratifying news to property owners; both small and great, but the rate-payer already paying for pavement, sewer and sidewalk will receive it with open arms.

SHOOTING HYENAS IN AFRICA

"Hyenas are very se:com seen in daylight and only on one occasion did I succeed in bagging them then," says Robert Wright, in telling of his experiences in Central Africa. "It was in 1899, at Portuguese Chiromo, a good game country then and a famous place for lions. I shot a hartebeeste late one evening and had to leave it out over night for want of 'boys' to carry it to camp. During the night I heard lions roaring in its direction and I was up early in the morning and on my way to the bait before daybreak. As I got near it dawn was just breaking and in the dim light I could see a number of shadowy forms moving over it. Cautiously I crept up behind a small bush within fifty yards, peered round, and to my great disgust saw four hyenas. I preferred lions. As it was very late and there were no signs of rain, the boys did not set up the fly on my tent, but left it, together with the extratent-pegs, mallet and sundry odd things, in the canvas bag in which the tent was usually carried. This bag lay close to the entrance of my tent, and in the morning, when we struck camp, it was missing. Two days afterward some natives found it and brought it into the station.

"Not only was the bag very badly torn and about a yard of the canvas eaten, but some, of the wooden pegs were chewed and marks of teeth could even be seen on the metal of the spring balance. The native who was carrying the tent had perhaps had some buck-meat, probably very high," in the bag, and a hyena had come very quietly in the night, carried off the bundle, and chewed up not only the meat but everything tainted with the smell of it."

On His Feet. Hot weather and Indigestion travel

Hot weather and Indigestion travel hand in hand, each help ng to make the other more disagreeable. For when the stomach lags in its work the body grows weak, and weakened bodies cannot stand inconveniences of any kind.

The remedy is to help the stomach and the help the stomach needs is contained in Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets. Those who have used them will tell you that. H. S. Barnes, of Rat Portage, has used them and he says:

Portage, has used them and he says:

"I was a victim of Dyspepsia and reading of Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets led me to try them. The effect was marvellous. They set me right on my feet after having spent many a sleepless night suffering from a disordered condition of the stomach."

Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets cure all stomach ailments. One or two Tablets taken after a hearty meal is an insurance policy against discomfort of any kind.

JUST TEA LEAVES.

The Spectacle They Present Under a Powerful Micro

"Have a look," said the histologist. And he rose from the beautiful, delicate microscope, and his companion took his place. There was a little fiddling and adjusting of tiny screws. Then the tyro said: "Ugh! Ghastly! What have we here a railroad wreck?" "You are looking," answered the histologist, "at a part of the remains o" a Ceylonese caterpillar."

He withdrew that slide and put an other in its place.

"Another tragedy?" the tyro asked. "The remnants of a beetle," the his A third slide was placed beneath the ments of a fly, a centiped, a moth and The tyro vawned. "Histology is interesting," he said in a bored voice. "Where did you get these specimens?" "Out of a packet of tea."

"A packet of tea? What kind of tea?" "Ordinary tea." "Heavens! I am a tea drinker. Explain yourself."

The histologist, smiling, said: "Tea grows on bushes. The leaves are plucked by hand. Imagine yourself stripping rosebush after rosebush, miles on miles, of their leaves. Well, that is what tea picking is like.

"The native pickers work fast. They pick as many as twenty-five pounds of leaves a day-a bundle bigger than a man.

"Now, the tea plant is the prey of a hundred insects, and the picker in his haste doesn't pause to brush off each leaf or to wash it, for he works, as we say, by piece work.
"The picked leaves are dried on charcoal fires. They shrivel under the heat and the insect, larvae and chrysalids among them change to dust. This dust looks to the ordinary eye like leaf fragments, but under the microscope it looks, as you remarked, like an insect railroad wreck or a pygmy battlefield. It tastes like—but you know as well as I do what it tastes like."

"Tomorrow," said the other, "I am going to bring some of my wife's tea here to examine with you."

An Amended Quotation.

Miss Ida Tarbell's first journalistic experience was as editor of the Chautauqua. Her predecessor on the journal, once editor of the Oil City Derrick, had established the custom of heading with a quotation the column in which he made brief mention of the news of the day. Miss Tarbell followed his habit and bent her mind to the task of supplying suitable quotations. Once upon a time she set down, as plain as pen could set it: "The meek eyed morn appears, moth-

Then she went home, pardonably proud of knowing her Thomson so well, and at the head of the column next day she read: "The weak eyed worm appears."

A Lack of Firmness.

A very matter of fact Scotchman called to see a neighbor, an old Irishwoman, who had been ailing for some time, when the following conversation took place at the door: "And how do you find yourself today, Bridget?" "Sure, your honor, I'm mighty bad. This shocking weather'll be the end of me. I'll be a dead woman before Stow, the old historian, says that nobody wore anything else except the lord mayor of London, who sometimes donned a hat on state occasions. In the reign of King Henry VII., he says, the citizens began to wear "flat caps knit of woolen yarn, black, but so light that they were obliged to tie them under their chins, for else the wind would be mas-

CANNING FRUIT.

An Experienced Housewife Talks to a Young Neighbor.

"In June come strawberrles, rhubarb and cherries; July brings red and black raspberries, gooseberries, currants, blackberries and blueberries. In August we have blackberries, peaches, plums, pears and crabapples. A September sun ripens quinces, grapes, barberries and citrons. When I am planning to put up fruit I make my preparations the night before. Fruit eans and lids are sterilized by putting them in cold water softened by borax and allowing it to boil for twenty minutes. I provide new rings. A rubber which has been used once is fit only to throw away. When the cans have been thoroughly cleansed fill each one with water, put on the rubber and lid, screw tight and turn upside down on a sheet of paper. If there is the slightest leak it will show, therefore discard that jar. There is a crack or chip in it somewhere by which bacteria will enter to make the fruit ferment later.

"Next morning I rise early and go to market at 6 o'clock, hiring a parcel delivery man to carry home the This costs 15 to 20 cents, but it pays. I get the pick of the finest fruit gather ed freshly the night before, and I have it at the house ready to begin work on after breakfast. Norah washes the dishes and leaves the beds to air till afternoon; then we both begin wor2 on the fruit, getting it out of the way before lunch time. Now we have ber ries enough hulled to begin work."

"Why are you sorting them over?" asked Margaret, while she watched her neighbor separate the berries into two

Cafes and lunch-rooms are filed with men and women who seem to give all their time and attention to thoughts of properly or improperly feeding their stomachs. "It is of course best to eat slowly, but not too much," says Dr. Pierce, clief consulting plyssician to the Invalids' Hotel and Sargical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y. In this zoth century people devote so much time to head work that their brain is fagged and, there isn't sufficient blood left to properly take care of the other organs of the body. The stomach must be assisted in its hard work—the liver started into action—by the use of a good stomach tonic, which should be entirely of vegetable ingredients and without alcohol. After years of experience in an active practice, Dr. Pierce discovered a remedy that suited these conditions in a blood-maker and, tissue builder. He called it Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery—an alterative extract that assists in the digestion and assimilation of the food in the stomach—so that the blood gets what it needs for food and oxidation, the liver is at the same time started into activity and there is perfect elimination of waste matter. When the blood is pure and rich, all the organs work without effort, and the body is like a perfect machine.

When each can was filled to overflowing the lids were snapped on and hot water was poured into the boiler till it almost reached the top of the cans. The gas was lit underneath, the lid of the boiler was put on, then the water boiled slowly for half an hour. The cans were lifted out and covered with a thick towel to prevent cool air striking them. That might have cracked

It commences with our simplest morning shirts and only concludes with the smart demitoilet One finds oneself lately almost fever ishly anxious to arrive at the detail of some striking cravat or collar, and, apropos of the latter in the guise of the tiny turnover, it is difficult to recognize any other than the filmiest hand embroidered muslins. These afford fust the loveliest touch imaginable to the soft silks and foulards of the hour, the while they comport themselves

International Bible Lesson for To-Morrow.

Josiah's Good Reign.—II. Chron., 34,

Golden Text-Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth. — Eccl. 12-1.

Let Sunday school teachers bring before their classes last week's lesson and to-day's as two contrasting pictures given us by the Holy Spirit: Manasseh becoming King at 12 and controlled by the evil one; Jpsight beginning his reign at 8 years of age, prospered and aided by the Spirit of

"I tried in the morning.
"I tried many tonics, but Peruna was the only thing which helped me in the least. After I had taken but a half bottle I felt much better. I continued its use for three weeks and I was completely restored to health, and was able to take up my studies which I had been forced to drop. There is nothing better than Peruna to build up the system." "-Clementina Gonzales. What influences God used in Josi-ah's early life to lead him to act so differently from his wicked father differently from his wicked father and grandfather, we are not told; but we are told, in II. Kings, 22 — which we are told, in II. Kings, 22 — which every teacher should read—that the finding and reading of God's Book, which had been lost so long, led to a great national religious reformation. If the treasured truths of God's Book as we have it today were now studas we have it to-day were now stud-ied and practised by kings and rulers and those in authority, as per Josiah and his court, we should soon have a great social and national reformation

Very likely what Josiah did was not approved by the politicians of his time, but what mattered it when he did right in the sight of the Lord. The man who would be approved of God must not turn aside either to the right hand or the left from the ertvealed will of God. The trouble with too many of us is, that we we seek simply to obey Godin a general way, but take the liberty to turn to the right hand or to the left when it suits our own convenience. The restoration of the Temple was The restoration of the Temple was andertaken when Josiah was 26 years of age—no one who loved God could endure to see His Temple in ruins—every one did their work faithfully. ### PECULIAR SIGHT

People who passed Mr. John Mrrrow's place on the 10th Con., Harwich, last Thursday or Friday, witnessed a peculiar sight. Mr. Morrow, who is an experienced well driller, was putting down a well on he succeeded in finding. So strong was the pressure that after he had capped the top of the pipe to keet the gas confined to the well, it escapsurface, a distance of about 50 feet. Mr. Morrow discovered that the cap on top of the pipe was leaking, so he fixed it and his assistant brought a torch from the engine to test the cap for escaping gas. Everything was found all right and the torch was thrown to the ground. Without a moment's warning the ground within a circle of 30 feet was a blaze of fire. This continued to burn until Saturday, when Mr. Morrow succeeded in keeping the gas within the well by driving another pipe.

PHOTOGRAPHED MARS.

Star-Gazing Laymen May Now See For Themselves What the Scientists Claim About the Canals

Astronomers and scientists in general are deeply interested in the modest announcement made by Prof. Percival Lowell and his associates at the Lowell Observatory in Arizona recent-Lowell Observatory in Arizona recently that after several partial successes and some complete failures the greater canals of the planet Mars had at last been photographed. Hitherto the general public has been compelled to accept or to reject the existence of the Martian canals on the word of the star-gazing fraternity. But with the accomplishment of the Harvard observers in Arizona every one will now have an opportunity to see the actual photographs in proof of what has long been considered as more or less of a theory. While several photographs were

While several photographs were taken of the canals some weeks ago, it was not until a few days ago that the solar photographers were ready to announce the complete success of the undertaking. Prof. Lowell, in the following account of the achievement, is unreserved in his belief that the Martian canals closely correspond to the familiar waterways of the same general classification on this planet. Up to the present time human knowledge of Mars has been largely theoretical—the principal facts regarding the planof being that it is 141,500,000 miles from the sun and approximately 47,000,000 miles from the earth. The Martian year has 687 days. Mars is 4,230 miles in diameter, the earth being 7,918, Jupiter 86,500 and the sun 866,400 miles.

"To photograph the canals of Mars," says Prof. Lowell, "has for many years been a purpose of the observa-

"To photograph the canals of Mars," says Prof. Lowell, "has for many years been a purpose of the observatory established and maintained by Harvard College in Arizona. The first attempt to meet with even approximate success was made in 1901, when a more or less satisfactory print was made of the Mare Acidalium, or Lake of Acid of Acid.

"Yet, encouraging as that pioneer effort was, no canal could then be detected on the negative with absolute certainty. To-day we can state as posi-tive and final that there are canals on tive and final that there are calass of Mars—because the photographs say so, and a photographic negative is nothing if not truthful.

"Prior to the present time two difficulties have stood in the way of determined to the stood of the way of determined the stood of the stood of the way of determined the stood of the mining the existence of Martian canals beyond dispute—one, the varying air waves which now favor, now prevent, the defining of such minor details of Martian topography as the canals, and the other being the insufficient speed of photographic plates. "In registering such details the eye has a tremendous advantage over th camera, since it can perceive much more sensitively than a camera plate, besides retaining an image only the twentieth part of a second. It can thu twentieth part of a second. It can thus record the moment of apparition, which the camera—even the most sensitive one—cannot or has not hitherto been able to do.

"Having a knowledge of these conditions to be reckoned with, I determined, with the valuable assistance of Mr. C. O. Lampland, to have made a camera patterned after what is known in photography as a biscopic film in ora patterned atter what is anown in ophotography as a biscopic film in which, behind a Wallace screen, many successive pictures might be taken in hope of securing among them a few showing the Martian canals."

"Despite the fact that thus far we have not secured an automatic camera, ours being worked by hand only, our photographs are quite clear enough to corroborate the fact of canals being on the interesting planet floating 47, 000,000 miles from the earth.
"In my firm belief, it is only a question of time, possibly of months, may-be a few years, when we shall be able to determine the exact nature and probable purpose of the canals of our planetary neighbor. Meanwhile, we have a number of excellent negatives which have served to bring us a bit closer to Mars than ever in the past. "Owing both to the smallness of the objective planet, as shown one the ne-objective planet, as shown on the negative, and also to the absence of information on the part of the general public as to the peculiar planetary markings, the uninitiated eye can discern nothing from the pictures unfil they are highly magnified. But, for those who are scientifically concerned, it may be explained that, side by side with the plate in the exhibit is a photograph of a drawing made by myself shortly before the pictures of Mars were taken. This, of course, serves the double purpose of confirming the reliability of the instrument together with what may be called the objectivity of visual observation, and also of serving as a chart to it.

"If one were to compare the several it may be explained that

"If one were to compare the several photographs of the planet with a reliable map of Mars, the following markings could be readily recognized:

"For example, a dark triangle, in the photograph, with its apex pointing downward, is the Syrtis Major; a dark area at the top is the Mare Erythraeum, while leading off from the latter to the right is shown the narrow dark stretch of the Mare Icarium separating Aeria on the north from Deucalionis Regio on the south.
"A bent line from the bottom of the Syrtis, turning sharply to the right, is the Nilosyrtis, which, continuing westward across the print, becomes Protonilus. Similarly, through the photograph, are corresponding confirmations of the visual observation.
"Inasmuch as such fine details as the canals, owing to the air waves, play be beep with either observer or camera, it is hardly to be expected that the more delicate of them should appear in every print taken. Yet they come nearer tooing so than was anticle.

"On other plates taken—other than "On other plates taken—other than the ones indicated—other canals can be made out," adds Prof. Lowell, "notably those bounding Elysium, together with Helicon, Eregus and Hades. "The negatives thoroughly confirm the eye in showing not only the existence of the canals, but reveal them as continuous lines of tens and even hundreds of miles in length. Of course, it is as yet impossible to say positive.

whether the Martian canals are of artificial or natural creation, or exactly of what composition is the liquid or nolten substance in them. But, so far as we can at present conceive, they appear as corresponding to our familiar waterways, as classified under the general heading of canals.

"All credit should be given to the expert solar photographers who have secured these important photographs, which, besides corroborating the exis-tence of canals on Mars, fully confirm the methods found most efficient in detecting them visually," concludes Prof. Lowell.

Where does your Heat go to?

Every stick of wood, every piece of coal contains a certain number of heat units, according to the size and quality of the stick or chunk.

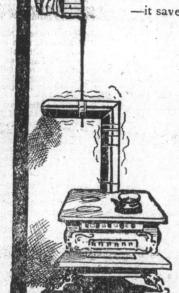

Now some ranges let these heat units escape up the chimney. Heat units which go up the chimney do not heat the oven or the frying-pan. They are wasted. Every heat unit that is wasted is money lost, money burnt. The science of range building is the successful utilization of all the heat units.

The Pandora Range is the only range that utilizes all the heat units and sends none up the chimney.

You can't put your hand over the chimney when some ranges are in use, because so much heat goes up the chimney. Your hand would be burned. That is heat wasted, money wasted, time wasted, because it takes so much longer to do your work when a large part of your heat is lost.

The Pandora Range is built to keep all the heat units in the rangekeeps them there till the heat is exhausted-it is the only range that does not waste heat. It uses all the heat there is in the coal or wood.

That's the kind of range you want in your kitchen-it is economical -it saves coal, wood, money, time. It makes kitchen work easy.

CURED BY CUTICURA IN ONE MONTH

Mrs. George H. Tucker, Jr., 335 Greenfield Avenue, Milwaukee, Wis., is a grateful mother. "When six months old," she says, "my little girl weighed a pound and a half less than at birth. When one month old a scab formed on her face, spreading until it completely covered her from head to foot, followed by boils, having forty on her head at one time, and more on her body. Then her skin started to dry up, and it became so bad she could not shut her eyes to sleep. One month's treatment with Cuticura Soap and Ointment made a complete cure, and now my child is as large, strong, and healthy as any child of her age. ### Miranda's Whims

By A. M. DAVIES OGDEN

Copyright, 1905, by 4. 18 3. Orden

It was afternoon on one of the last few hot days of summer. Through the open windows came glimpses of greenwood bespeaking a delicious coolness and the ripple of brooks, but in the schoolroom the air was undeniably close. The scratch of a pencil, the shuffling of impatient little feet, the drone of a lazy bee, all seemed to intensify the impression of heat, and the young schoolmaster stirred restlessly. It had meant a great deal to Peter Raymond, securing the village school at Wimberly, but he had not found his task an easy one. His eyes, wandering over the rows of bent heads before him encountered the glance of a girl seated near the door. The girl, one of the older scholars, with a toss of her curls. returned to her book, and the trouble in the schoolmaster's face deepened. Here was the crux of the situation. If he could win Miranda Hemming to his side the remainder of the pupils would follow easily enough. But it was Miranda herself, with her great blue eyes, fetching dimples and coquettish ways, who openly led the revolt against him The teacher sighed again. Perhaps he was too young.

From the very beginning of his work, however, Raymond had recognized the primitive instinct of hostility to the unknown in the questioning eyes uplifted to his own. Now, after five weeks, he seemed no nearer the solution of his problem; indeed, matters under Miranda's spirited guidance were becoming even worse, despite his pointed ignoring of her mutiny. He touched the bell. "First class in grammar," he said. Miranda, with several other girls, ranging from sixteen to eighteen, came slowly forward. It was rather a trying recitation. Most of the girls stum bled. Miranda failed utterly, nor did she care. To all his questions she answered with provoking nonchalance, evidently indifferent as to whether he were pleased or not. Her rebellion had never before been quite so openly manifest. A sudden line of resolution tightened the young man's mouth.

"You may return to your seats," he "Miss Miranda, I shall expect you to remain after school until that esson is recited perfectly."

"What!" cried the girl. Involuntarily she fell back a step, hardly believing her own ears. That any one should dare address her, Miranda Hemming, in such fashion! Raymond's expression did not change.

"You heard what I said," he returned quietly. "It should not take long." For a mon ent Miranda, stupefied hesitated, then she flounced indignantly back to her seat. The whole school, which had dropped all work to listen to the passage at arms between Miranda and the teacher, fairly shivered, and Tom Carruthers, a big, loutish chap of nineteen, shot a sullen look at Raymond. To scold Miranda! To the quivering excitement of the school, the time until 4 o'clock appeared fairly to Would teacher really keep in Mi-

when the others arose, Miranda also sprang to her feet. Then something in the teacher's expression caused her to sink back in her seat, tingling and abashed. It took an unusually long time for the pupils to disperse that day, but at last they were all gone.

"You need not think that I shall study that lesson," she declared with sharp emphasis. Raymond nodded. 'As you please," he answered, "Only here we both stay until you do." "And I'm not to have any supper?

"Not until you learn that lesson." "But"- burst out Miranda furious ly. Then she closed her lips with a snap and leaned back, her hands tempestuously folded before her. Raymond picked up a book.

"Take your own time," he said pleas-

But somehow the book did not prove very enthralling. Between his eyes and the printed pages persisted the vision of a willful little face set in its tangle of wavy hair. Yet he must not be beaten now. His whole future hung on this issue, he thought. The shadows lengthened, the sun dropped behind the hills. Miranda, who for some time had been stealing furtive glances at the quiet figure behind the big desk smiled prettily. "I'm-I'm hungry," she wheedled.

For an instant Raymond wavered. This new sweetness was strange and alluring. But before he could speak the door was flung open and Tom Carruthers appeared on the threshold. "Ben't ye comin' home to supper, Mirandy?" he demanded. "Yer ma sent me fer ye," darting a suspicious look at her jailer. "Ain't ye comin'? I'll look out fer ye." "Why," began Miranda feebly. Ray-mond, a sudden, unaccountable resentment surging into his heart, frowned.

"Miss Miranda is in no need of a champion," he declared stiffly. "She can leave when she chooses. You may go." And Tom, after an instant's scowling hesitation, went out, banging the door. Miranda bit her lip. "I will never learn that lesson," she repeated stubbornly.

There was another long silence while the shadows darkened. At last the young man rose and lit the lamp. "It is nearly 9 o'clock," he said briefly. Miranda, now close upon tears, looked back still deflant. "And if I say it you'll let me go?"

flung the text at him, not pausing for question or comment. And then-"I--I hate you," she cried vehement ly; "hate you, hate you! And I'll nev-er, never come into this horrid school-room again!" The bright drops shone in her eyes like dew on forgetmenots her cheeks were flushed to a wild rose pink; the girl was shaken, puzzled hurt. The village boys she had teased and ruled at will. For the first time she had found a man impervious alike to her anger or smiles. From the day that he, a stranger, had met her eyes in calm unconcern she had uncon-sciously resented the fact. Now the repressed wrath of weeks found vent.

"I hate you," she reiterated stormily. The next moment she had flashed through the door and was gone. Raymond, oddly depressed in spite of his victory, followed slowly.

The world was flooded with the tranquil glory of the moonlight as he went out. A narrow path led to the road where a row of maples lifted their leafy branches to the starry skies, and Raymond, fancying that he caught the gleam of a white dress there under the trees, felt his heartbeats quicken. Somehow he had been looking forward to walking home with the girl. Then as he turned from locking the door a dark figure rushed by the corner of the schoolhouse, there was a woman's shrill scream, something heavy struck his forehead, and Raymond fell.

It must have been nearly an hour later when Raymond and Miranda stopped at the gate of the girl's home. Hearing footsteps, Mrs. Hemming came out to meet them.

"Well," she said. "So I hear you've been having trouble with Mirandy. Tom was here in quite a state and wanted me to interfere. But I judged you knew how to run your own game," comfortably. "Did ye meet him?" Raymond, feeling the bump left by the stone on his forehead, laughed.

"Yes, we met him," he said whim-sically. "And he left us in no doubt as to his opinion of me. Indeed, I might say that he left a decided impression. If it had not been that Miranda, sus pecting there might be trouble, waited- But, after all, I do not know that I blame him much," he went on "He could not appreciate that I was acting in Miranda's best interests," with mischievous emphasis. Miranda, very shy and conscious, flushed. Mrs. Hemming lifted her-hands.

"What ever am I going to do with that girl?" she ejaculated. "Really, she's growing fairly unmanageable. If she only had a father!" The young man became suddenly quite grave. "Will you intrust the task to me Mrs. Hemming?" he asked. "I think I understand her better now."

"Trust you," cried Mrs. Hemming.
"Why, ye're nothing but a boy yourself. How could you be a father to her?" regarding him in perplexed astonishment. Raymond bent and possessed himself of the girl's slender "No, I suspect that I couldn't be father to her," he agreed, "but she has just promised to marry me."

Mezzofanti's Memory. Cardinal Mezzofanti had a memory little short of miraculous. Dr. Russell, his biographer, says that the cardinal spoke with the greatest ease thirty languages, that he spoke fairly well nine, that he used occasionally, but not with fluency, eleven more; that he spoke imperfectly eight and that he could read eleven more. Taking, in addition, the number of dialects he used, some so diverse from the mother tongue as to constitute a different language, Dr. Russell says that the cardinal was master of no less than 111 different languages and dialects. His German was so excellent that he was taken for and English were equally pure. Dr. Tholuck heard him converse in German, Arabic, Spanish, Flemish, English, Latin, Greek, Swedish and Por tuguese at one of the pope's receptions, and afterward Mezzofanti gave him an original poem in Persian and left him to take a lesson in Cornish. He knew several of the American Indian languages and nearly all the dialects of Climate and Consonants. In a book on his-adventures in Tibet Colonel L. A. Waddell writes: "One curious result of the cold should be mentioned here-namely, its effect upon the speech of the people. A peculiarity of the language of the Tibetans, in common with the Russians and most arctic nations, is the remarkably few vowels in their words and the extraor dinarily large number of consonants For example, the Tibetan name for Sikhim is Hbrasljongs. Indeed, so ful of consonants are Tibetan words that most of them could be articulated with almost semiclosed mouth, evidently from the enforced necessity to keep the lips closed as far as possible against the cutting cold when speaking."

Skulls of Dead Indians

What is probably the site of an old ndian burying ground was revealed few days ago when excavating a mound in the C. P. R. station yard at Myrtis, Ont., on the Toronto & Havelock div-sion. The discovery was made by Contractor John Bescomb's staff. The ploughs used in reducing the mound uncovered ribs and leg bones, and soon sixteen skulls were upturned. Three of skulls were sent to Ottawa for cientific examination, and one to Dr. Clendennan at Toronto Junction. Seven. were retained by a liveryman at Myrtle, but they were stolen from his stable the same night.

When the stomach is diseased, with the allied organs of digestion and nu-trition, the food which is put into it is largely lost. The nutriment is not extracted from it. The body is weak and the blood impoverished.

THE SUMMER EXCURSION.

Excursions up and down the land
That cheer the summer season
Are now pulled off on every hand
Withqut or with a reason.
They sally forth in shine or rain,
The sober and the jolly,
By boat or auto bus or train,
By tallyho or trolley.

Some cult, society or clan Cheers up and takes a notion To hire a train or forms a plan To sail upon the ocean, And then they send their ladies out

The cars are crowded to the door,
If happily it's a winner;
The children play about the floor
And play catch with their dinner.
Or, if by boat they sall away,
Before they leave the landing Enough are coaxed to go and pay So there is hardly standing.

Oh, was there ever on the earth Or elsewhere such illusion? You never get your money's worth In all the rank confusion, But that is where it is a joke,

Because the people knowing They'll come back mad and lame and In spite of all keep going.

Adaptable. "What are your husband's politics?" "That depends somewhat on the poli tics of the man with whom he is trying to make a trade."

We try to love our fellow men, But, oh, our hearts will harden If they are patrons of the hen While we support a garden!

Tust a Stub "Ever hear the story of the rabbit's life?"

"'Tis but a brief tail."

Playing Safe, "How does it come that you are able to sell these goods below cost?"

"We bought 'em below cost, ma'am." If He Had the Sand,

We fuss about the girls because
A blushing thit shows through
When they go out upon the street
Adorned in peek-a-boo.
If man were not so modest he Would wear the cool rig too.

St. Catharines, Aug. 5.-Although thousands did not see them there were some splendid contests at the Royal Henley Regatta on the course at Port

Dalhousie yesterday, but after the sun broke brightly at the commencement of the first race it stayed that way till they were over and a thousand peo-ple, half of them ladies, witnessed nine most interesting events. The success of yesterday's racing augurs well for quality of sport expected to-day.

The 19th Regiment Band played during the waits.

The honors were pretty well distri-buted. Rat Portage, Ottawa, Detroit, Dons, Argonauts, Torontos and Hamil-

The only finals decided were the junior doubles, which went to the Argonauts; single pairs, Argonauts. Junior singles, won by Iltred Craig of Detroit, who is a splendid oarsman, with a graceful style of sculling, perhaps rather deficient in body work, but nevertheless pleasing and effective. His defeat of Graham of the Torontos was no discredit to Graham, for Craig

ATTEMPT TO BLOW UP SHIP. Dozen Capped Fuses Found In Coal-Laden Ship.

San Francisco, Aug. 5.-An attempt blow up a ship in mid-ocean has been eported by Capt. C. Touze of the nch ship Asnieres, which has arriv ed here from Swansea, England, load-d with coal. ### A VALUABLE BOOK

In the library of the palace of the Rajah of Ulwar, a city in India, there is a manuscript book called "The Gulistan," which is claimed to be the most valuable volume in India. The librarian insists that it is worth five hundred thousand rupees, which is equivalent to about a hundred and seventy thousand dollars, and declares that the actual cost of dred and seventy thousand dollars, and declares that the actual cost of the gold used in illuminating it was more than fifty thousand dollars. It is a modern manuscript copy of a religious poem, made in 1848 by a German scribe at the order of the Maharajah Bani Singh. The miniatures and other pictures were painted by a native artist at Delhi, and the ornamental scroll work upon the margins of the pages and the initial letters were done by a resident of Ulwar.

"Thank you,' she said. Then she studied a minute. I wonder who I can get to button them?' she asked."
"I don't know, lady,' I said. 'Not me.'"

The main idea is, since brims stand upward, to make your hair take the same line. Waving—the kind they call undulating—is necessary to make the right shape of colffure. Aim at fullness, a sloping line that curves gradually from the ears and the nape of the neck to the crown of the head, where the puff is its biggest. USE OF THE COMB

Twist the end of hair into a little puffed knot, which pushes the front pompadour forward. It is impossible for some women to arrange a front compadour without "ratting" a foundation for it... In this case make a part from ear to crown and only rat above the forehead, and don't have a puff over rour ears, or it will kill the neat effect which is most sought after. Your back hair has been done first, so leftly twist around the base of the knot into the latter of the latter o

Of course, the costuming lent a great zest to the preparations, and when the day came around the lawn of the house, which had been loaned for the occasion, was transformed. Tents were dotted all over it, with the sides and front and back left open, so that everybody could see the wares temptingly displayed inside. In consequence, too, none of the tents was stuffy and hot.

Booths were even more plentiful than tents, and at several were served good things, varying at each place.

These refreshments had been most carefully planned—tea was served at one, with the thiest of lettuce saindwiches; ices at another, ted coffee and the delicious layer cakes, which had made certain of the members fameus in a local way; while at one end of the lawn a gypsy pot, full of iced lemonade, hung over fagots apparently laid ready for lighting.

LITTLE CHANGES IN NEW BAGS AND PURSES A Substitute for

A demure-looking thing in the way of a pocketbook—rather larger than the ones we've been carrying all winter, but ont very large, for all that—utterly belies its puritanical outside the instant

White Blouses

HITE blouses have been having things pretty much their own way for the past three summers. This year they're trying to force shirt waists into the background and take their places as well as the place they hold by virtue of their own good qualities.

There's an occasional woman, though, who can't wear white all the time, either because it makes too much laundry work for the servants (or for her purse); or because, on shopping tours, or for business, she finds it impossible to keep neat to the end of the day. And anything's better than white that isn't at its whitest.

Another reason that this occasional woman advances is that she very much disilikes the "cut-in-half" look a light waist and a dark skirt give bjections is that she set herself to work to solve a satisfactory answer to the blouse question. Dark blouses and shirt waists were tabooed—that is, nobody wore them, yet there must be some way around the guestion.

She sat and studied over it, and then got out the suit she expected to wear most. The sight of it acted as inspiration.

It was blue, so she got-blue-douted swiss—exactly the same shade, but brightened up a little by tiny embroidered white dots—and made a couple of blouses of it, untrimmed, except for tucks. The collars were just bands of tucks, over which she wore the prettiest turn-over collars, and the leg-o-mutton sleeves were plain, except for tucks. The result was just what she had hoped—she could go to town for a day and come out looking neat; and the blouse could be pressed out in a few minutes ready for its next wearing.

The same idea could be carried out with suits of other colors (although, of course, the blouse should be the same color as the skirt), and in other materials, except with brown, which is too hot'a color, anyway, for summer. Exquisite gray swiss comes—just right for those stunning gray lines suits; and for tan, a host of sheer "natural-color" stuffs, and even for the people who are in mourning, there are materials as lightweight and delicate and more daintily stylish tha

Then inside the chain make a chain of twelve, and a double crochet stitch into the sixth stitch of the original chain; repeat a chain of six, and a double crochet stitch, until you're been all the way around. Then start a row inside that, making your stitches "sketchy"—they're only for foundations—and so on until the whole jacket is covered. Then comes the actual work, crocheting with soft fine, cotton over the network of lines you're made, and taking a tiny chain of three stitches in the middle of each division.

But that's all there is to the work—lots of time, but no particular skill or patience. The under-arm and sleeve seams are crocheted together.

The little rosettes are made like old-time "shells"—three raws, growing deeper, made and the three tacked together, then the rosette tacked in its place.

A HARD JOB.

There seems reason to believe that the peace negotiations, between Earon Komura and Mr. Witte will end in smoke, comments the Toronto Star The parties to the conference are so widely separated in their views as to what terms are reasonable that it is hard to see on what common ground they can get together. Japan wants too much and Russia is not prepared to yield enough.

The Russian envoy has given out certain interviews, in which he takes no pains to hide his opinion that he is tackling a hopeless task. His words are so cheerless that we fail to recognize the bold, resolute statesman Sergius Witte, who won the hostility of the bureaucrats and the esteem of patriotic Russians by opposing a foolish war. That the man who fought for peace so stoutly in his own country and who is still in love with peace with honor should state substantially that peace is impossible if the Japanese stick to their demands is a douche of cold water to the conference at the outset.

Mr. Witte is handicapped by his instructions. He is himself a robust apostle of peace. Evidently his opinions and his attitude weighed with! the Czar in appointing him envoy with plenary powers. But the interview with the Kaiser aboard the Polar Star intervened. Nicholas, who seems to have the stability of a leaf in the wind, had his neck stiffened. The tone of the Russian press, with its preposterous clamor for the withdrawal of the Japanese from Manchuria and Korea, is sufficient evidence that the Kaiser's counsel was for war. Under these circumstances Mr. Witte falls between two stocls. His plenary powers become a hollow mockery, consisting almost entirely of instructions what not to do instead of full authority to make the best bargain he can.

The most accomplished diplomat will hardly envy Witte his mission, which is to make a peace that will save Russia's face, suit a spineless monarch, and please an insensate bureaucracy. It is too big a job for one man, and Witte's interviews are probably intended to prepare a soft place for him to fall on.

So far as Japan is concerned, public opinion of the dispassionate sort will doubtless consider anything more than the cession of Port Arthur, a Japanese protectorate in Korea, and a moderate money indemnity as unreasonable, not to say presumptuous. The white nations will regard this as a case in which the galled jade, Russia, must not be allowed to wince too much if their own withers are to continue to remain unwrung.

Louisville is a village about six miles to the north-east of Chatham. It is beautifully situated on a curve of the Thames and in the centre of a fine country, but is itself dilapidated and gone up; and like unto a village, that Goldsmith writes of, "Deserted." Not so the country between it and Chatham. I was perfectly astonished at the advanced state of the crops along the plank road between Louisville and Chatham. Fall wheat is from five to six inches high and none of it is winter killed. Spring crops—wheat, barley and peas—are well up and thriving uncommonly. A gentleman who has lived in this neighborhood for 19 years, tells mehe has nevef seen such luxuriant crops. The farmers are all in good spirits and anticipate a bountiful harvest.

A COSTLY BREAKFAST.

When Eggs Were Worth Their Weight In Gold In San Francisco. Hens' eggs were worth their weight in gold, writes Thomas E. Farish in one of his stories of the very early days in San Francisco. A couple of young men who had recently landed from Tennessee dropped into Aldrich's for breakfast one morning. Not being aware of the rarity and consequent prices of eggs in California and having five dollars still left with which to pay for breakfast for two, they calmly or-dered their usual breakfast of eggs and toast. When the bill was presented the young gentlemen saw, to their consternation, that the amount was $10. They had only $5. What was to be done?

After a consultation together it was decided that one of them should remain while the other went out to look for Colonel Gift, an old time friend whom they knew to be in the city. The colonel was soon found, who, after hearing the story of his young friend and asking who was with him, inquired what they had had for breakfast. "Eggs," was the reply.

"Eggs! Eggs!" exclaimed the colonel. "Did you not know, you blankety blank fool, that hens lay gold in Cali-fornia?" "I did not, but I do," said our young friend. "Well," continued the colonel kindly, handing over a fifty dollar gold slug, "take this and remember after this that you are not in Ten essee, where eggs are given away."

No sport in the world is more thoroughly enjoyed than boar hunting, or ig sticking as it is done (in, India, for this is the pluckiest brute on earth. No beast has more courage than he; in fact, an old wild hoar knows no fear, not even of a tiger. The wild boar never loses his head, or his heart. Such courage I have never beheld in any four-footed creature, the has all the cunning commonly attributed to the devil, and in his ragel is a demon that will charge anything of any size. I have seen a small boar work his way through a pack of dogs, and his smaller brother, the pecary, in Brazil, send a man up a tree and keep him there. The boar looks ungainly, but the Indian species is fleet as a horse for about three-quarters of a mile. He begins with flight and shifts to cunning, finally standing to the fight with magnificent his heart. If a girl allows herself to talk only of herself; of what she personally likes or dislikes, she will soon find herself alone, as far as young men are concerned. If she wishes to be sought she must find out by adroit tact in what especial way her companions can be entertained, and talk to them about the things that are interesting to them, no matter how uninteresting they may be to her. Sometimes a man is only interested in himself, the girl who finds out this trait in him and shows eager interest in all he says about himself may be assured of at least one devoted follower. What he likes to eat, his favorite games, his favorite oat, his favorite games, his favorite books, his favorite mode of exercise, what he thinks of any subject under the sun; all of these are of much more importance to that especial young man than any of girl's likes or dislikes. Where one either is hard to please, is either thirsty, or too cold, or too hot, or too tired, or parading a grievance, there can be no wish for their companionship. ### MAKE RIGHT BEGINNING

DESIRE WHICH IMPELLED SAV IOUR AT CANA OF GALILEE.

THE FIRST MIRACLE OF JESUS

Performed So as to Reveal the Fathe to the World In the Most Attractive Winning and Impressive Way -Preacher Draws Leseon of Good Cheer and Helpfulness and Innocent Enjoyment From the Incident.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada in the year 1905, by Frederick Diver, of Toronto at the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 30.-In this sermon the preacher draws the lesson of a gospel of good cheer and helpful ness and shows that Christianity bars no one from innocent enjoyment. The text is John ii, 11, "This beginning of miracles did Jesus in Cana of Galilee."

Finding the rational causes for the inception of things is a passion in the human heart and mind. But next to it is the desire of making a right start when, after years of hard work and toil, we would give to the world the results of our labor and our investiga-When Henry M. Stanley came from his exploration of the dark continent he did not let the facts thus gained lie dormant in his mind. He at once headed toward the great metropolis of London. There, in Albert Memorial hall, before the representatives of the English throne and the greatest of scientists, he described the results of his daring journey. What he did not tell by lip he told as soon as possible to the world by his pen. No sooner did Samuel F. Morse cry as did the Greek mathematician, "Eureka!"

"I have found it! I have found that a telegraphic message can be sent over the wires," than at once he applied to the American congress to help him build a line from Baltimore to Wash-He would prove to all the world, in the best and most emphatic work, in the best and most emphatic way, that telegraphy was to be classed among the "found arts."

I enter a great artist's studio. I say to Jean Francois Millet, "What are you working so hard about?" "Oh," he says, "I have consecrated my life to a mission of art. I used to be not-or the skill with which I appealed the lowest passions of life-to the evil desires of the world through sugges tive figures of the nude. I heard som bystanders looking at one of my pio-tures say, 'It is too bad that Millet, with such a genius as he has, pain's pictures like that!' I at once left Paris and went back to my old home. There among the hamlets of France I began to study the pure beauties to be found study the pure beauties to be found the face of my old grandmother w I am trying as an artist to depict the homely virtues of the French peasants. As this is my first peasant picture to be sent to the French salon, I want to make my mark in my new field, for when a man is to make a great success in any one line he must be very careful about his beginning. This is a new beginning for me as a Christian artist." To make a right beginning for his new art—his Christian art—Tissot, the former artist of the French society women, secluded himself for years in the Holy Land that he might walk and live amid the scenes where Christ lived and died. As a Christian artist he wanted to make a right beginning.

The desire to make a right begin-The desire to make a right begin-ning is implanted in every one's life who starts upon a great career for the reformation of the customs and the habits of the world. Thus, when I began to think upon this subject, this ministry began to grow and widen and deepen and lift itself higher and higher in the purposes of Jesus Christ. Why? It was Christ's first miracle. For thirty long years he led the lifes of obscurity. Now Jesus comes forth and practically says: "I have come to reveal my Father to the world. I want to win the belief and trust of the peo-ple. How shall I begin my work in the most attractive and impressive way. I will do it at the wedding in Cana of Galilee." Thus we must ap-proach our subject with awe and rev process of the first miracle is not a mere happen so. The first miracle of Christ was one by which we may catch the keynote for the onward musical movements of a perfect life.

Christ's earthly ministry open? At a nuprial song. At a time of joyful festivities. At a time when not only the young but also the old and the middle young but also the old and the middle aged are trying to be happy and to make every one happy. At a time when laughter and merriment and good cheer are making tired men and women feel for a time at least that care and worry and anxiety and dis-trust have no part to play in the great social economy. The celestial song which was sung on the morning of the Nativity was no more joyful in note han the songs we hear as we come over the hills and see the wedding party dancing upon the grass upon the outskirts of the Gaillean village of

Would you have me describe the joy Would you have me describe the joy of a wedding festival I once witnessed in the east? I did not see it at Cana; I did see it, however, at one of the neighboring towns of Galliee. First I found the wedding guests came from found the wedding guests came from far and near. As I came over the hills toward this village I saw the maidens by the score, with their hair decorated with flowers and their garments of the bright, gorgeous colorings of the east, shining in the sunlight. With their arms encircling each other's waist they were as Miriam of old dancing over the greensward and singing in time with the moving feet. The young men came there with their fleet horses caparisoned with the finest trappings. caparisoned with the finest trappings.
There were games and feats of strength for the competitors at these festivals. At last, af er days of frolic, came the wedding ceremony. Then came the great climax of all, the "wedding supper." Christ's first miracre was performed at a season of social festivities.

I am glad that Chris's Nativity was announced to the world by the overture of song. I am glad that his first miracress of song. I am glad that his first miracress of song.

was performed at a wedding. am glad we do not see Jesus at this time standing clothed in the skins of wild heasts as was John the Baptist in the wilderness. Christ came to wedding to mark his approval of inno-cent pleasure. "His at:endance upon the wedding in Cana of Galilee proves," wrote Bishop Ryle, "that true religion was never meant to make man melan was never meant to make man melancholy. There are times when it is lawful to be merry and reject. The calendar of the sinner has enly a few days of the year marked as festival days," wrote Elon Foster, "but every day of the Christian's calendar is marked by the hand of God as a day of rejoicing." Yes, by the echoing chimes of the wedding bells we know it. By the joyful sones we hear to day coming over the songs we hear to-day coming over the Gaillean hills, in the chorus of which Christ's words may be blending, we believe it. Thank God, Christ's first miracle was performed for a bride and not for a widow, at a banquet and not by a bier! Christ's ministry opens in a scene of human festivities. It does more that that. Christ came to Cana of Galileo to prove that the most imporant place on earth this side of heaven is the mar-riage altar. "Marriage," wrote Dr. Taylor, "Is the mother of the world and precious kingdoms and fills cities and churches and heaven itself. Like a useful bee, it builds a house and gathers sweetness from every flower, and labors and unites into societies and republics, and sends out colonies, and feeds the worlds with delicacies, and obeys the king, and exercises many vir tues and promotes the interest of man kind, and is that state of good to which God hath designed the present constitution of the world." That is, the right kind of marriage does all this. Therefore, as marriage is so important in God's sight and man's, it is very essen-Jesus Christ to your weddings when you are about to be married! Yet the strange fact remains that the last Be ing in the universe some of us would ever think of inviting to our weddings is Jesus Christ.

We treat Christ a great deal as som of us have treated our best earthly friends when giving a reception or a party. We take the calling list of our wives and grown daughters and sons ch them together with the names of our personal friends, both business and social. Then when the night of the entertainment comes around we say to ourselves, "Why is not Mr So-and-so here." Then we go not Mr. So-and-so here." Then we go to our wife and say: "My dear, Mr. So-and-so is not here. Did you invite him?" She looks at the list of guests and answers: "No, husband. We forgot to put that name down." "Too bad, too bad," you say. Yes, it is too bad. But, though it is too bad, this fact remains incontrovertible. You did not neglect to invite that very wealthy man to your daughter's wedding. Why? Beto your daughter's wedding. Why? Be rence. Inis miracle is not a mere lappen so. The first miracle of Christ vas one by which we may catch the eynote for the onward musical movenents of a perfect life.

Where does the active scene of them to give that wedding prominence in the newspaper. But you did negfect to invite that old time friend who has been true to you for many, many years. Thus we often neglect to invite to our weddings Christ, who is our best of all friends.

weddings Christ, who is our best of all friends.

Not only do the young people often neglect to ask Christ to the wedding, but they very often neglect to talk teahim and consul with him before they engage themselves for the they engage themselves for they engage themselves for the they engage the major the themselves for the they engage themselves for the themselves fore wants them to marry or no. These young girls will talk about their wedding plans with other girls. They will talk about them to people who are al-most strangers. But they will not talk about them to Christ, who is more interested in that coming wedding than any other being in the universe, not excepting the bridegroom himself.

Another lesson of the miracle is that othing is too small or too insignificant to do if by that act you are going to make your fellow men happier. This changing of water into wine was not done to heal the sick, or to raise the dead, or to cast out the "devila," which to the number of a legion were tortur-ing the poor maniac amid the Gadarene It was done simply and purely to relieve the embarrassment of a host and hostess whose supply of wine for the marriage feast had run out. It was done to alleviate one of those little domestic troubles with which most of us have been conversant in the days of our own homes

Cannot you see those guests gathering in the east in your own house? Your wife had made preparations for ten or twelve guests for dinner. There was just enough oysters, enough salads, enough squabs, enough figures of ice cream, for the invited guests, no more and no less. Suddenly, when you were about to be seated, the bell rang, and in came three or four friends from a distant city. You had to ask them a distant city. You had to ask them to dine. There was no way out of it. Then your wife took you and the children aside and said: "I don't know how we will get through. We have not enough food for those extra guests. Now, you and the childden have got to take turns in going without. You must refuse in turn the different courses. when the plates are passed you must say, I do not want any, thank you."

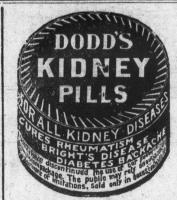

Of course all went well except with the youngest boy. Tae salad looked good that when it was being passed said, "I want some, mamma." Then face flushed. She was embarrass Every one in the room was emtrassed. Do you not recognize a 90.000 persons. nighty Christian lesson in the fact that Christ performed his "first miracle" in order to relieve a little domestic flurry of the home?

If I put myself in Jesus' place I think I can imagine the scene which took place which led to his going to this wedding. Cana is only a few miles away from Nazareth, where Jesus was then living. There is a tradition that this Cana bridegroom's name was Cleo phas, who was about to marry Mary's sister. The mother of Christ is talk ing to Jesus. "Are you going to your aunt's wedding?" she asks. "Oh, no," is the reply. "I do not want to go Weddings have not very much interest for me. But, mother, you go. I know you will have a good time, and I will send my aunt my love and benediction through you." "But my son" says through you." "But, my son," says Mary, "I do not want to go without "But, my son," says you. You should go for the family's sake as well as for mine." "Well, mother," he answers, "if you wish it, I will go. Does not this statement bear out the strange wording of this chapter, "And the third day there was a marriage in Cana of Galilee, and the mother of Jesus was there, and both Jesus was called and his disciples to the marriage?" Why was Mary's name here mentioned first if there was no reason for Christ going there to please his mother? Yes, I think I am not go-ing beyond my right when I state that ing beyond my right when I state that Christ went to the wedding, and he performed his "first miracle" there to teach us that nothing in life is too small or too insignificant to do if by that little act we can bring happiness into some loving heart. into some loving heart.

The further you go into this premise the more powerful becomes the gospel lesson. Not only did Christ begin his public gospel ministry among his neighbors, but he began that gospel ministry in a private way within the quietude of his own home. Mary, his mother, had felt this divine influence long before the outside world felt it and saw it in Cana of Galilee, How and saw it in Cana of Galliee. How do I know? The inference is clear from the chapter of my text. When the wine falled, Mary heard the women of the house talking together about the mishap. This would be most natural if the bride to be was Mary's own sisat the pride to be was Mary's own sis-ter and Jesus' aunt. What then hap-pened? Why, Mary immediately went and told Christ. Then she said to the servants, "What he saith unto you do it." Do not these statements prove to servants, "What he saith unto you do it." Do not these statements prove to you that Mary knew Jesus could extricate them out of their difficulties if he would? Ah, yes. Christ showed his divinity first in his home. It is right and necessary for us to begin our ministry for Christ among our friends. It is not, however, more important to be a gospel messenger to our neighbors than a gospel messenger in private to our husbands, our wives, our parents. our husbands, our wives, our parents, our children, in the quiet sanctity of our own homes. Christ was a divine Christ in a carpenter shop before he was a divine Christ making the water was a divine Christ making the water blush crimson in Cana of Galliee.

But we must not circumscribe our gospel ministry to our homes and our neighbors and our friends. We must not say, "Because Christ performed his first miracle at a wedding, therefore we will only attend the weddings and the festivities of the young people." We have a greater mission than that. No sooner were these young folks married and started out in the world with gospel good cheer than Christ went forth into the world to world with gospel good cheer than Christ went forth into the world to continue that ministry. He went among the strangers. He went to those who cursed and derided and ultimately slew him. He went among the stiners and the outcasts to carry to them the "bread of life." He went to Mary Magdalene and to the house of despise Zaccheus. He went everywhere where the sins of mankind were calling for the need of a Saviour. From amid the songs and the merrymakings of this nuptial banquet, will you and I carry the mes sage of Christ to an outside sinful world? Will we preach Christ amid the world? Will we preach Christ amid the cypress as well as amid the orange blossoms? Will we preach Christ under the moaning, weeping willows as well as among the singing multitude of weddings of Galliee? "It is better to go to the house of mourning than to the house of feasting." It is your duty to go to both places. But remember, oh, Christian, those who are preparing to enter another world and to be married enter another world and to be married to death need you as much as those who are about to place upon their fin-gers the wedding ring of gold which will encircle that finger after the flesh has withered away in the grave.

Bertie shook his head.
"It is because they are busy doing something. The birds are building their nests. Tom is doing his duty in the stable. It is God's law that we cannot be happy unless we are at honest work. Now try it for one hour, and see how the time slips by.
Bertie's face brightened. He felt interested to see how the experiment would succeed. He went in and set himself to learn the second and third declensions in Latin, walking to and fro as he did so. By the time he had accomplished his task he looked up, expecting to see that half the time had gone. He could hardly believe his own eyes. The hand of the clock pointed to half-past twelve! He had been so busy that he had not even heard it strike the hour. — Sunday.

OUR SCHOOL"

Two Excellent Essays Written for The Planet Junior in the Gold Medal Competition, and Highly Commended by the Judges

Fifty or sixty years ago it was not the proud building which stands out so well to-day. But a rude rough log building, with mud between the logs, which served to keep out the cold. The interior was a dingy, dark gloomy place, where little of the sin and light penetrated. There was no plaster on the walls, rough boards for a floor and as bad ones formed benches. There were no furnaces, but in their stead as box stove which gave out but little warmth, and around which in cold weather, the benches filled with shivering children, with chattering teeth would be pulled, trying in vain to get themselves warm.

But those days have long since fled, and the once small school has now an attendance of from eight to mine hundred. About three years ago the three ward schools joined the Central, which with those is now looked after by one man.

The building is a four storey red bytek It has two main entrances, besides two back ones. The front yard is always kept neat and tidy. Entering one of the back gates and continuing in that direction, till the corner of the building appears and passing it, a stranger would find himself on a large platform. This is used to assemble on in warm, dry weather. Before him are two doors, entering one of them, he would find himself on a large platform. In the former are kept the furnaces and tout.

The Central school, of over fifty years ago, which was the only one in Chatham, except the select schools, bore little resemblance to the one of to-day. The first Central school was not a log building as many suppose, but a wooden one set up about three feet on blocks, with a railed platform built to the front. It was of just one room and had desks running the with of it. It was set in the lot about where the present building mow stands, and had, a swamp behind it. Two of the first teachers were Mr. Bassett and Mr. Griffith. A few of the old pupils are still living in Chatham. This building was not torn down to make way for the next, but moved onto King street near the gas works. The second Central was a square brick building composed of four large class rooms, with smaller ones off each. The second Central was a square brick building was two stories high. When the kindergarten was first introduced in Chatham it was in connection with this Central school, and a separate building of frame was put up on the same lot for that purpose, end building was found necessary to provide more school accommodation, and, the present three-storey building of twenty rooms together with there round rooms in the tower-like part, which is on one corner. When fully grown, each cormorant has a metal ring fastened around base of its neck, care being taken, that this ring, while small enough to prevent the swallowing of the marketable fish, shall at the same time be large enough to admit the smaller fish which from now on must serve as its food, since the ring is never removed.

BIRDS

The cormorant is a voracious sea bird of the pelican family, about the side of an ordinary goose, and subsists entirely upon fish, writes George Elmer Scott, in the Booklovers Magazine. The extraordinarpacity with which it devours these has led to its being frequently employed as a symbol of greed. Its clement is the water, it dives with arrow-like rapidity, and is an unwearied swimmer, keeping so low in the water that only the head and neck and the top of the back is visible.

Matrice Barrymore, the distinguished American actor, whose death was recently recorded, had a dislike for puns.

A well known leading actor—now in vaudeville—who was always more or less on his muscle when in drink, dropped into the Morton House either while Barrymore was there with some friends. He no sconer saw Barrymore than he began to rail at at him for wholly imaginary injuries, and to threaten to macerate Barrymore to unrecognizable pulp.

Barrymore, noting his fellow actor's condition, took it all in good part. At length his taunter, who really was an accomplished man with his fists, as he had shown on several occasions when infuriated, strolled over 'to Barrymore, and remarked that he had a great mind to knock his head off, then and there.

Bobby, blankly remarked Barrymore, behave. You appear 'to be burying a lot of dead to-night.

That's all right, replied the pugnacious actor, his face curving into a foolish grim, I'll Barrymore.

Barrymore gazed at the man with an expression of the most hopeless disgust for a full half-minute, and then he said:

Even the excuse of drunkonness is no condonation for such an unspeakable lingual profanation.

Whereupon he suddenly darted in caught 'the other man round the waist, lifted him into the air as if he had been a paper bag of flour, tossed him face down on the table, and spanked him in the flectual effort to regain his teet.

When the conquered and chagrined actor was at length permitted to get up he gazed weakly at Barrymore gayed away, but with modern enthusiasm, for five minutes, the prone actor making frantic but ineffectual effort to regain his teet.

Magazine. Whether he was eager to keep an appointment or had been unexpectedly summoned to a distant part of his world one will never know, but one may be certain that the matter was one of the greatist consequence so far as the little fish was concerned. Keeping his bright eyes fixed streight ahead, he passed fa corner of the reef where the coral was incrusted with mollusks and sea rehins, and where a pair of beautiful sentimental affairs, turned to look after him wonderingly through their enormous eyes. Below, in a deep pool, a school of spotted trunk-fish played heedlessly, while under a projecting plate of staghorn coral a huge grouper waited unexpectedly; but as the parrot fish, warned of his danger, turned quickly away, he gave his attention to a pair of gray snappers—great, quict, ghostly figures, that seemed like two shadows dritting slowly along, far down through the green waters.

A few feet further on and the hurrying parrot fish passed a tall seafan, around which three dainty butterfly fish, clad brilliantly in yellow, were peering into each nook and corner in their search for small prey, while a sober cow-fish, with his two conspicuous horns, looked on selately. Spidenly, the parrot fish turned sharply aside to avoid a spot where the reef was broken by jutting rocks covered with green ulva; around this a school of bright little zebra-striped sergeant tanjors were sporting, while just to the right an angel fish, whose blue body tipped with gold first attracted the attention of the mariners so many centuries ago, sail, edition and contracts so many centuries ago, sail, with a disdainful air. Rear-Admiral Wilde, at a banquett given in his bonor in Boston recently, told a good story of a young man of his adquaintance, who desired to pay his addresses to a certain young lady. So, in a frank and honorable way, he called on the young lady's father, described his circumstances and prospects, and asked if he might be regarded as a suttor.

"Well, the father said, 'I have no objection to you. You seem to be an honest, industrious young fellow. I guess you can begin to pay your addresses if you want to. Understand, though, that I put the lights out at 10 o'clock."

"All right, sir,' said the young man 'I'll be careful not to come around before that time.'"

"NOW I LAY ME."

An indulgent father, wishing to please his youngest hopeful, brought then stopped at one of the large hotels for the night.

The youngest was undressed and put to bed, and the father went down into the loby to talk business.

Then there came a jinghing of bells indicating that the bush button in the room occupied by the young man who had been left quiet in bed must have been worked to the limit. There was a rush of feet as the bellboyl scurried to the room, only to be met at the door by a diminutive but indignant youth, who said severely:

"Man, I want you to send me some one I can say my prayers to, and send them quick. I want to go to sleep!"—Colambus Dispatch."

BIRDS THAT CATCH FISH A Seattle shild not yet three years old, having been punished by her mother, called up her father on the telephone for sympathy. "Papa," was the call that his stenographer heard on answering the ring. "Why, it's the baby," she said to her employer. The startled man, with visions of disaster in his mind, caught the receiver and said: "What is it, baby," "Mamma "panked me," came the reply. "What do you want me to do about it F" asked the relieved and amused parent. "Tome wight home and b'ing me a pound of tandy." said the child.

There is a strong sentiment in favor of establishing a police village at Ericau and the cottagers levying taxes upon themselves for local improvements, etc. It is proposed to sink an artesian well for water supsink an artesian well for water supply to be operated by windmill. A thorough and complete sanitary system is also to be submitted for approval and several new sidewalks laid. The Harwwich Commissioner pointed out that the cottagers already had a neat surplus in the township treasury, and this would go to swell the tax rate to be levied.

The sommittee will enter ener-getically upon its investigation and report to a general meeting of the ottagers very shortly.

The deadly cistern nearly claimed another victim last night, in the person of the young child of A. Easton, who lives on the commons near Mahler's apple factory.

The child was exploring the yard and, finding the cistern, shoved offithe cover and pitched headlong into the water. The frantic mother rushed from the house, uttering cries for help, which attracted Samuel Horne, a neighbor, who, fortunately, was at home.

Mr. Horne had a rake in his hand and with this he caught the child's clothes as it was sinking the second time. The hold gave way and the agnized mother saw her little one again go down. London, Aug. 5.—The Berlin corres-condent of The Times cables:—The question of Anglo-German relations con-tinues to be the subject of persistent discussion. The responsibility for the present state of public feeling rests solely with the agencies which have continuously misrepresented the mo-tives of those who entertained sceptic-ism with regard to the sincerity of the German policy. Until Germany is pre-pared to give practical proof of the sin-cerity of her intentions her relations question of Anglo-German relations con cerity of her intentions her relations towards Great Britain must remain as to-day, unless she is determined to ag-gravate the situation by open defiance. There are good reasons for believing that the last thing the German Government desires at this moment is a conflict of any kind with the British

Decision Reached at Important Meeting of Finance Committee Last Night

No Deficit will be Left by Present Council, So They Say-$17,000 to

The Finance Committee held an eventful session last eyening. As a esult of the session it is practically settled that Chatham will have a 22 mill rate this year. This news is re-ceived with additional pleasure by eason of the fact that civic officials had forecasted a rate in the neighborhood of 30 mills, and citizens had braced themselves for the worst.

The expenditures of the present Council have been necessarily heavy -the electric road, the market building, the Central'school extension, improvements at the cemetery, new pavements and sewers - assessments for all of these have to be met, and the Council deserves great credit for keeping the rate as low as it is. Reeping the rate as low as it is.

Of course, the money to be received in October from the Pere Marquette Railway—$17,000—helped materially. This is part of the bonus granted by the city to the Eric & Huron Railway Co.—one condition of the grant being that the car shops, etc., of the company should be located here. These shops were moved by the Lake Shore Ry. to Walkerville, and the

sam the city receives is compensa-tion for the loss.

And then, it is practically decided to issue debentures for the amount required to put the Central school in a sanitary condition. The cost will be about $5,000, and it is not fair that the ratepayers of this year should pay the whole of a debt contracted for a measure which will benefit those of measure when win central those or succeeding years equally as much. The decreased rate is extremely gratifying news to property owners, both small and great, but the ratepayer already paying for pavement sewer and sidewalk will receive it with open arms.

SHOOTING HYENAS IN AFRICA.

"Hyenas are very seicom seen daylight and only on one occasion did I succeed in bagging them then," says Robert Wright, in telling of his experiences in Central Africa. "It was in 1899, at Portuguese Chiromo, a good game country then and a famous place for lions. I shot a hartebeeste late one evening and had to leave it out over night for want of 'boys' to carry it to camp. During the night I heard lions roaring in its direction and I was up early in the morning and on my way to the bait before daybreak. As I got near it dawn was just breaking and in the dim light I could see a number of shadowy forms moving over it. Cautiously I crept up behind a small bush within fifty yards, peered round, and to my great disgust saw four hyenas. I preferred lions. They were tearing the carcass to pieces, growling and snarling at each other, and they had not the faintest suspicion that any one was near them. I watched them for awhile and then opened fire. First one went down like a log, The others started at the shot but did not move, then another dropped, and the remaining two began to move off. Other two snap-shots in rapid succession hit them both, but they got away into

As it was very late and there were no signs of rain, the boys did not set up the fly on my tent, but left it, together with the extra tent-pegs, mallet and sundry odd things, in the canvas bag in which the tent was usually carried. This bag lay close to the entrance of my tent, and in the morning, when we struck camp, it was missing. Two days afterward some natives found it and brought it into the station. "Not only was the bag very badly torn and about a yard of the canvas eaten, but some of the wooden pegs were chewed and marks of teeth could even be seen on the metal of the spring balance. When Hats Were Unknown In ancient days hats were unknown, men having hoods attached to their outer garments, which they wore or discarded at pleasure. Stow, the old historian, says that nobody wore anything else except the lord mayor of London, who sometimes donned a hat on state occasions. In the reign of King Henry VII., he says, the citizens began to wear "flat caps knit of woolen yarn, black, but so light that they were obliged to tie them under their chins, for else the wind would be mas-ter over them."

Death by Lottery. Among other complications of Chinese law and its execution is a unique and rather racy method of dealing with prisoners by lottery. Once a year the vermilion pencil of imperial authority is waved over a chart on which the names of convicted criminals are written, and those which it includes in a haphazard sweep are executed forth-with. The rest are either reprieved altogether or their executions are post-

CANNING FRUIT.

An Experienced Housewife Talks to a Young Neighbor.

"In June come strawberries, rhubarb and cherries; July brings red and black raspberries, gooseberries, currants, blackberries and blueberries. In August we have blackberries, peaches, plums, pears and crahapples. A September sun ripens quinces, grapes, barberries and citrons. When I am planning to put up fruit I make my preparations the night before. Fruit cans and lids are sterilized by putting them in cold water softened by borax and allowing it to boil for twenty minutes. I provide new rings. A rubber which has been used once is fit only to throw away. When the cans have been thoroughly cleansed fill each one with water, put on the rubber and lid, screw tight and turn upside down on a sheet of paper. If there is the slightest leak it will show, therefore discard that jar. There is a crack or chip in it somewhere by which bacteria will enter to make the fruit ferment later.
"Next morning I rise early and go to market at 6 o'clock, hiring a parcel delivery man to carry home the fruit. This costs 15 to 20 cents, but it pays, I get the pick of the finest fruit gathered freshly the night before, and I have it at the house ready to begin work on after breakfast. Norah washes the dishes and leaves the beds to air till afternoon: then we both begin work on the fruit, getting it out of the way before lunch time. Now we have berries enough hulled to begin work.'

'Why are you sorting them over?' asked Margaret, while she watched her neighbor separate the berries into two CLEMENTINA CONZALES,

The Love of Eating.

IS THE AMERICAN BECOM ING A GOURMAND?

Chicago, we daily see more attention given to the inner man. Cafes and lunch-rooms are filled with men and women who seem to give all their time and attention to thoughts of properly or improperly feeding their stomachs. "It is of course best to eat slowly, but not too much," says Dr. Pierce, chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. V. In this 20th century people devote so much time to head work that their brain is fagged and there isn't sufficient blood left to properly take care of the other organs of the body. The stomach must be assisted in its hard work—the liver started into action—by the use of a good stomach tonic, which should be entirely of vegetable ingredients and without alcohol. After years of experience in an active practice, Dr. Pierce discovered a remedy that suited these conditions in a blood-maker and tissue-builder. He called it Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery—an alterative extract that assists in the digestion and assimilation of the food in the stomach—so that the blood gets what it needs for food and oxidation, the liver is at the same time started into activity and there is perfect elimination of waste matter. When the blood is pure and rich, all the organs work without effort, and the body is like a perfect machine.

FREE! Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of customs and mailing only. Send 3 one-cent stamps for the book in paper covers, or 50 stamps for the cloth-bound volume. Address Dr. R.V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Fresh berries were added as the fruit sank into the can. Into the bottles was poured the ruby colored strawberry sirup.

When each can was filled to overflowing the lids were snapped on and hot water was poured into the boiler till it almost reached the top of the cans. The gas was lit underneath, the lid of the boiler was put on, then the water boiled slowly for half an hour. The cans were lifted out and covered with a thick towel to prevent cool air striking them. At a rose luncheon, for instance, the decorations would be of roses; the dishes figuring on the menu would be chosen, as far as possible, in shades of pink—lobster, tomato and so on; the hostess garbed in rose color; crystalized rose petals in the bonbon dishes; a Beauty rose, tied with pink satin ribbon, at each place, and, in fact, everything as nearly as may be couleur de rose, including the lamp shades, if they are used, as is sometimes the case at "swell" luncheons.

International Bible Lesson for To-Morrow.

Josiah's Good Reign.—II. Chron., 34.

Golden Text-Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth. - Eccl. 12-1.

Let Sunday school teachers bring before their classes last week's lesson and to-day's as two contrasting pictures given us by the Holy Spirit; Manasseh becoming King at 12 and controlled by the evil one; Josiph beginning his reign at 8 years of age, prospered and aided by the Spirit of Gad.

What influences God used in Josiwhat influences trou used in australia and searly life to lead him to act so differently from his wicked father and grandfather, we are not told; but we are told, in II. Kings, 22 — which we are told, in II. Kings, 22 — which we have too to the search of the total and the total total and the total area. every teacher should read—that the finding and reading of God's Book, which had been lost so long, led to a great national religious reformation. If the treasured truths of God's Book as we have it to-day were now stud-ied and practised by kings and rulers and those in authority, as per Josiah and his court, we should soon have a great social and national reformation

The restoration of the Temple was andertaken when Josiah was 26 years of age—no one who loved God could endure to see His Temple in ruins—every one did their work faithfully. Verse 12—Our King restores and purifies the soul and makes His people fit temples for His presence.

This is what God requires at our hands to-day, faithfulness, or we shall not hear Him say, "Well done, good and faithful servant." The Temple will again be rebuilt, the Zionist will yet see it and its services magnifi-

CANADA THE PIVOT. Between Great Britain, France and the United States.

London, Aug. 5.—(C. A. P.)—The Evening Standard, in an editorial on the proposed alliance between Great Britain, France and the United States, Britan, France and the United States, says: "It might be supposed that the term 'British' was a stumbling block, for it is or has been our clear impression that not much love was lost between Canada and her neighbor, but we see no reason to fear any insur-mountable objection on the part of mountable objection on the part of Canada to such a proposal. On the contrary, it must be agreeable to our French-Canadian colonists, who will see their way to draw nearer to the motherland of their origin without any sacrifice of the advantages of British citizenship, or any loss of their pride and confidence in the might of the Brit-ish Empire, and this is a consideration that may, perhaps, weigh with France."

PHOTOGRAPHED MARS.

Star-Gazing Laymen May Now See For Themselves What the Scientists

Claim About the Canals Astronomers and scientists in general are deeply interested in the modest announcement made by Prof. Percival Lowell and his associates at the Lowell Observatory in Arizona recent-ly that after several partial successes and some complete failures the greater canals of the planet Mars had at last been photographed. Hitherto the general public has been compelled to accept or to reject the existence of the Martian canals on the word of the star-gazing fraternity. But with the accomplishment of the Harvard observers in Arizona every one will now have an opportunity to see the actual photographs in proof of what has long been considered as more or less of a While several photographs were taken of the canals some weeks ago, it was not until a few days ago that the solar photographers were ready to announce the complete success of the undertaking. Prof. Lowell, in the fol-lowing account of the achievement, is unreserved in his belief that the Martian canals closely correspond to the familiar waterways of the same general classification on this planet. Up to the present time human knowledge of Mars has been largely theoretical of Mars has been largely theoretical— the principal facts regarding the plan-of being that it is 141,500,000 miles from the sun and approximately 47,-000,000 miles from the earth. The Mar-tian year has 687 days. Mars is 4,230 miles in diameter, the 'earth being 7,918, Jupiter 86,500 and the sun 866,-400 miles.

"To photograph the canals of Mars."

"To photograph the canals of Mars," says Prof. Lowell, "has for many years been a purpose of the observa-tory established and maintained by Harvard College in Arizona. The first attempt to meet with even approxi-mate success was made in 1901, when a more or less satisfactory print was made of the Mare Acidalium, or Lake of Acid.

"Yet, encouraging as that ploneer effort was, no canal could then be de-tected on the negative with absolute certainty. To-day we can state as positive and final that there are canals on Mars—because the photographs say so, and a photographic negative is nothing if not truthful.

"Prior to the present time two difficulties have stood in the way of deter-mining the existence of Martian canals beyond dispute—one, the varying air waves which now favor, now prevent the defining of such minor details of Martian topography as the canals, and the other being the insufficient speed of photographic plates.

"In registering such details the eye has a tremendous advantage over the camera, since it can perceive much more sensitively than a camera plate, besides retaining an image only the twentieth part of a second. It can thus record the moment of apparition, which the camera—even the most sensitive one-cannot or has not hitherto been able to do.

"Having a knowledge of these condi-tions to be reckoned with, I determin-ed, with the valuable assistance of Mr C. O. Lampland, to have made a camera patterned after what is known in photography as a biscopic film in which, behind a Wallace screen, many successive pictures might be taken in successive pictures might be taken in hope of securing among them a few showing the Martian canals."

"Despite the fact that thus far we have not secured an automatic camera, ours being worked by hand only, our photographs are quite clear enough to corroborate the fact of canals being on the interesting planet floating 47, 000,000 miles from the earth.
"In my firm belief, it is only a question." "In my firm belief, it is only a ques tion of time, possibly of months, may-be a few years, when we shall be able to determine the exact nature and probable purpose of the canals of our planetary neighbor. Meanwhile, we have a number of excellent negatives which have served to bring us a bit closer to Mars than ever in the past.

"Owing both to the smallness of the objective planet, as shown on the negative, and also to the absence of information on the part of the general public as to the peculiar planetary markings, the uninitiated eye can dis-cern nothing from the pictures until they are highly magnified. But, for those who are scientifically concerned, it may be explained that, side by side with the plate in the exhibit is a photograph of a drawing made by myself shortly before the pictures of Mars were taken. This, of course, serves the double purpose of confirming the reliability of the instrument together with what may be called the objectivity of visual observation, and also of serving as a chart to it.

serving as a chart to it.

"If one were to compare the several photographs of the planet with a reliable map of Mars, the following markings could be readily recognized:

"Regions—Syrtis Major, Mare Erythraeum, Mare Icarium, Hellas, and the North Polar Cap.
"Canals—Nilosyrtis, Pyramus Casal

raeum, Mare Icarium, Hellas, and the North Polar Cap.

"Canals—Nilosyrtis, Pyramus, Casius, Protonilus, Pierus, Vexillum, Astaboras and the Thoth.

"Oasis—Lucus Ismenius.

"For example, a dark triangle, in the photograph, with its apex pointing downward, is the Syrtis Major; a dark area at the top is the Mare Erythraeum, while leading off from the latter to the right is shown the narrow dark stretch of the Mare Icarium separating Aeria on the north from Deucalionis Regio on the south.

"A bent line from the bottom of the Syrtis, turning sharply to the right, is the Nilosyrtis, which, continuing westward across the print, becomes Protonilus. Similarly, through the photograph, are corresponding confirmations of the visual observation.

"Inasmuch as such fine details as the canals, owing to the air waves, play be neep with either observer or camera, it is hardly to be expected that the more delicate of them should appear in every print taken. Yet they come nearer doing so than was anticipated.

come nearer doing so than was antici come nearer doing so than was anticopated.

"On other plates taken—other than the ones indicated—other canals can be made out," adds Prof. Lowell, "notably those bounding Elysium, together with Helicon, Eregus and Hades.

"The negatives thoroughly confirm the eye in showing not only the existence of the canals, but reveal them as continuous lines of tens and even hundreds of miles in length. Of course, it is as yet impossible to say positive.

by whether the Martian canals are of artificial or natural creation, or exactly of what composition is the liquid or molten substance in them, But, so far as we can at present conceive, they appear as corresponding to our famil-iar waterways, as classified under the general heading of canals.

Where does your Heat go to?

Every stick of wood, every piece of coal contains a certain number of heat units, according to the size and quality of the stick or chunk.

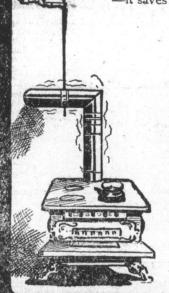

Now some ranges let these heat units escape up the chimney. Heat units which go up the chimney do not heat the oven or the frying-pan. They are wasted. Every heat unit that is wasted is money lost, money burnt. The science of range building is the successful utilization of all the heat units.

The Pandora Range is the only range that utilizes all the heat units and sends none up the chimney.

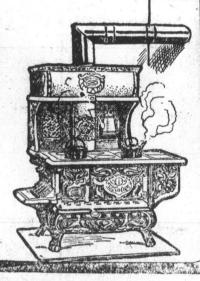

You can't put your hand over the chimney when some ranges are in use, because so much heat goes up the chimney. Your hand would be burned. That is heat wasted, money wasted, time wasted, because it takes so much longer to do your work when a large part of your heat is lost.

The Pandora Range is built to keep all the heat units in the rangekeeps them there till the heat is exhausted-it is the only range that does not waste heat. It uses all the heat there is in the coal or wood.

That's the kind of range you want in your kitchen-it is economical -it saves coal, wood, money, time. It makes kitchen work easy.

CURED BY CUTICURA IN ONE MONTH

Mrs. George H. Tucker, Jr., 335 Greenfield Avenue, Milwaukee, Wis., is a grateful mother. "When six months old," she says, "my little girl weighed a pound and a half less than at birth. When one month old a scab formed on her face, spreading until it completely covered her from head to foot, followed by boils, hav-ing forty on her head at one time, and ing forty on her head at one time, and more on her body. Then her skin started to dry up, and it became so bad she could not shut her eyes to sleep. One month's treatment with Cuticura Soap and Ointment made a complete cure, and now my child is as large, strong, and healthy as any child of her age. The doctor's and drug bills amounted to a large sum, and my baby grew worse all the time. Then we got Cuticura Soap and Ointment and cured her at trifling expense."

Miranda's Whims

By A. M. DAVIES OGDEN

Copyright, 1905, by 4 B. B. Coden

It was afternoon on one of the last few hot days of summer. Through the open windows came glimpses of greenwood bespeaking a delicious coolness and the ripple of brooks, but in the schoolroom the air was undeniably close. The scratch of a pencil, the shuffling of impatient little feet, the drone of a lazy bee, all seemed to intensify the impression of heat, and the young schoolmaster stirred restlessly.

It had meant a great deal to Peter Raymond, securing the village school at Wimberly, but he had not found his task an easy one. His eyes, wandering over the rows of bent heads before him. encountered the glance of a girl seated near the door. The girl, one of the older scholars, with a toss of her curls, returned to her book, and the trouble in the schoolmaster's face deepened. Here was the crux of the situation. If he could win Miranda Hemming to his side the remainder of the pupils would follow easily enough. But it was Miranda herself, with her great blue eyes, fetching dimples and coquettish ways, who openly led the revolt against him The teacher sighed again. Perhaps he was too young.'

From the very beginning of his work, however, Raymond had recognized the primitive instinct of hostility to the unknown in the questioning eyes uplifted to his own. Now, after five weeks, he seemed no nearer the solution of his problem; indeed, matters under Miranda's spirited guidance were becoming even worse, despite his pointed ignor-ing of her mutiny. He touched the bell.

"First class in grammar," he said. Miranda, with several other girls, ranging from sixteen to eighteen, came slowly forward. It was rather a trying recitation. Most of the girls stum-bled. Miranda failed utterly, nor did she care. To all his questions she answered with provoking nonchalance, evidently indifferent as to whether he were pleased or not. Her rebellion had never before been quite so openly manifest. A sudden line of resolution tightened the young man's mouth.

"You may return to your seats," he "Miss Miranda, I shall expect you to remain after school until that lesson is recited perfectly." "What!" cried the girl. Involuntarily she fell back a step, hardly believing her own ears. That any one should dare address her, Miranda Hemming, in such fashion! Raymond's expression did not change.

"You heard what I said," he returned quietly. "It should not take long." For a mon ent Miranda, stupefied, hesitated, then she flounced indignantly back to her seat. The whole school, which had dropped all work to listen to the passage at arms between Mianda and the teacher, fairly shivered and Tom Carruthers, a big, loutish chap of nineteen, shot a sullen look at Raymond. To scold Miranda! To the quivering excitement of the school, the time until 4 o'clock appeared fairly to fly. Would teacher really keep in Mi-

when the others arose, Miranda also sprang to her feet. Then something in the teacher's expression caused her to sink back in her seat, tingling and abashed. It took an unusually long time for the pupils to disperse that day, but at last they were all gone. "You need not think that I shall study that lesson," she declared with sharp emphasis. Raymond nodded. 'As you please," he answered. "Only here we both stay until you do."

"And I'm not to have any supper?" incredulously. "Not until you learn that lesson."

"But" - burst out Miranda furious-ly. Then she closed her lips with a snap and leaned back, her hands tem-pestuously folded before her. Raymoud picked up a book. "Take your own time," he said pleas

But somehow the book did not prove very enthralling. Between his eyes and the printed pages persisted the of a willful little face set in its tangle of wavy hair. Yet he must not be beaten now. His whole future hung on this issue, he thought. The shadows lengthened, the sun dropped behind the hills. Miranda, who for some time had been stealing furtive glances at the quiet figure behind the big desk smiled prettily.

"I'm-I'm hungry," she wheedled.

For an instant Raymond wavered. This new sweetness was strange and alluring. But before he could speak the door was flung open and Tom Carruthers appeared on the threshold.

"Ben't ye comin' home to supper, Mirandy?" he demanded. "Yer ma sent me fer ye," darting a suspicious look at her jailer. "Ain't ye comin'? I'll look out fer ye."

"Why," began Miranda feebly. Ray-mond, a sudden, unaccountable resentment surging into his heart, frowned. "Miss Miranda is in no need of a champion," he declared stiffly. can leave when she chooses. go." And Tom, after an instant's scowling hesitation, went out, banging the door. Miranda bit her lip. "I will never learn that lesson," she repeated stubbornly.

There was another long silence while the shadows darkened. At last the young man rose and lit the lamp.
"It is nearly 9 o'clock," he said briefly. Miranda, now close upon tears, looked back still defiant.

"And if I say it you'll let me go?" "Certainly. With rapid, choked utterances she flung the text at him, not pausing for question or comment. And then—

"I—I hate you," she cried vehement

ly; "hate you, hate you! And I'll never, never come into this horrid schoolroom again!" The bright drops shone in her eyes like dew on forgetmenots, her cheeks were flushed to a wild rose pink; the girl was shaken, puzzled, hurt. The village boys she had teased and ruled at will. For the first time she had found a man impervious alike to her anger or smiles. From the day that he, a stranger, had met her eyes in calm unconcern she had uncon sciously resented the fact. Now the repressed wrath of weeks found vent, "I hate you," she reiterated stormily

The next moment she had flashed through the door and was gone. Raymond, oddly depressed in spite of his victory, followed slowly.

The world was flooded with the tran-quil glory of the moonlight as he went narrow path led to the road where a row of maples lifted their leafy branches to the starry skies, and Raymond, fancying that he caught the gleam of a white dress there under the trees, felt his heartbeats quicken. Somehow he had been looking forward to walking home with the girl. Then as he turned from locking the door a dark figure rushed by the corner of the schoolhouse, there was a woman's shrill scream, something heavy struck his forehead, and Raymond fell.

It must have been nearly an hour later when Raymond and Miranda stopped at the gate of the girl's home Hearing footsteps, Mrs. Hemming me out to meet them.
"Well," she said. "So I hear you've been having trouble with Mirandy. Tom was here in quite a state and wanted me to interfere. But I judged you knew how to run your own game, comfortably. "Did ye meet him?" Raymond, feeling the bump left by the stone on his forehead, laughed.

"Yes, we met him," he said whimsically. "And he left us in no doubt as to his opinion of me. Indeed, I might say that he left a decided impression If it had not been that Miranda, sus pecting there might be trouble, waited- But, after all, I do not know that I blame him much," he went on. "He could not appreciate that I was acting in Miranda's best interests," with mischievous emphasis. Miranda, very shy and conscious, flushed. Mrs. Hemming lifted her hands.

"What ever am I going to do with that girl?" she ejaculated. "Really, she's growing fairly unmanageable. If she only had a father!" The young man became suddenly quite grave. "Will you intrust the task to me, Mrs. Hemming?" he asked. "I think I understand her better now."

"Trust you," cried Mrs. Hemming "Why, ye're nothing but a boy your self. How could you be a father to her?" regarding him in perplexed as-tonishment. Raymond bent and posessed himself of the girl's slender hand. "No, I suspect that I couldn't be a father to her," he agreed, "but she has just promised to marry me."

Mezzofanti's Memory. Cardinal Mezzofanti had a memory little short of miraculous. Dr. Russell, his biographer, says that the cardinal spoke with the greatest ease thirty languages, that he spoke fairly well nine, that he used occasionally, but not with fluency, eleven more; that he spoke imperfectly eight and that he could read eleven more. Taking, in addition, the number of dialects he used, some so diverse from the mother tongue as to constitute a different language, Dr. Russell says that the cardinal was master of no less than 111 different languages and dialects. His German was so excellent that he was taken for a native of Germany, while his Fro and English were equally pure. Dr. Tholuck heard him converse in German, Arabic, Spanish, Flemish, English, Latin, Greek, Swedish and Portuguese at one of the pope's receptions and afterward Mezzofanti gave him an original poem in Persian and left him to take a lesson in Cornish. He knew several of the American Indian languages and nearly all the dialects of

Climate and Consonants In a book on his adventures in Tibet Colonel L. A. Waddell writes: "One curious result of the cold should be mentioned here—namely, its effect upon the speech of the people. A peculiar-ity of the language of the Tibetans, in common with the Russians and most arctic nations, is the remarkably few vowels in their words and the extraor dinarily large number of consonants. For example, the Tibetan name for Sikhim is Hbrasljongs. Indeed, so full of consonants are Tibetan words that most of them could be articulated with almost semiclosed mouth, evidently from the enforced necessity to keep the lips closed as far as possible against the cutting cold when speaking."

Excursions up and down the land

Are now pulled off on every hand
Without or with a reason.
They sally forth in shine or rain,

By tallyho or trolley.

Some cult, society or clan
Cheers up and takes a notion
To hire a train or forms a plan
To sail upon the ocean,
And then they send their ladies out
As skirmishers or pickets
To put both friend and foe to rout
By loading them with tickets. The cars are crowded to the door,
If happily it's a winner;
The children play about the floor
And play catch with their dinner
Or, if by boat they sall away,
Before they leave the landing

Or elsewhere such illusion?
