W.L.M. King Spiritualism Series MG 26 J 9

INTRODUCTION

The W.L.M. King Spiritualism Series contains correspondence, pamphlets, notes and memoranda arranged in nominal and subject files. There is correspondence with various mediums and other friends and acquaintances of King who were interested in spiritualism. Of particular interest are the files of séance records, 1932-1950, in Volume 7. A list of files giving volume number, file number, subject and date of each file is available in the King finding aid, number 502. It should be noted that there is also much information on Mackenzie King and spiritualism in the King Diaries Series (MG 26 J13). It might be useful to look at the correspondence and séance records in the Spiritualism Series in conjunction with the diary entries for the same dates.

W.L.M. King, Série spiritisme, MG 26 J 9

INTRODUCTION

La série spiritisme du fonds W.L.M. King comprend de la correspondance, des brochures, des notes et des remarques classées dans des dossiers nominatifs et sujets. Il y a de la correspondance avec différents médiums et d'autres amis et connaissances de King qui se sont intéressés au spiritisme. Les dossiers des comptes-rendus des séances de 1932 à 1950 dans le volume 7 sont d'un intérêt particulier. On peut trouver dans l'instrument de recherche numéro 502, du fonds King, une liste des dossiers indiquant le numéro de volume, le numéro de dossier, le sujet et la date de chaque dossier. Il faut noter qu'on retrouve aussi d'autres informations sur Mackenzie King et le spiritisme dans la série des journaux intimes de King (MG 26 J13). Il serait utile de regarder la correspondance et les comptes-rendus des séances dans la série spiritisme en conjonction avec les pages des journaux intimes correspondant aux mêmes dates.

National Archives of Canada
Manuscript Division

Warning

Microfilming of archival records held by Manuscript Division is intended to protect original, often fragile, documents from damage through handling and to make the material more widely available through the inter-institutional loan system.

Although the physical condition of original documents is generally good, researchers should be aware that some inks have faded, that some of the colored paper stock and inks used may not photograph well, and that some types of documents may not reproduce well on microfilm. Legibility suffers where exposure to moisture has caused discoloration, mold-damage and the bleeding of inks through paper.

Pins, clips, ribbons and other attachments have been removed to permit documents to be unfolded. All surviving documents, including fragments, are filmed in their entirety. Because of their size, some documents must be filmed in several sections. The National Archives of Canada attempts, to the best of its ability, to reproduce whatever information is legible.

Citations to documents appearing on this microfilm should follow the model provided.
MG 26 J9, vol. 7, file 6.

Questions about copyright and requests for photocopies from the microfilm, or photographic copies from the originals for exhibition or publication purposes, should be referred to the Canadian Archives Branch of the National Archives of Canada (395 Wellington St., Ottawa, Ontario, K1A ON3).

Archives nationales du Canada
Division des manuscrits

Avis

La Division des manuscrits microfilme les documents d'archives pour empêcher que les originaux, souvent fragiles, ne finissent par s'abîmer à l'usage et pour accroître la disponibilité de ces documents au moyen du prêt entre institutions.

Bien que ces originaux soient généralement en bon état, nous rappelons aux chercheurs que certains encres ont pâli à travers le temps, que les encres et les papiers de couleur ne se prêtent pas tous à la photographie et que certains types de documents sont difficiles à reproduire sur microfilm. Il y a perte de lisibilité en particulier sur les documents qui furent exposés à la moisissure et où l'encre a coulé.

Les attaches, métalliques ou autres, ont été enlevées des documents. Tous les documents, y compris les fragments, ont été microfilmés. Certains documents ont dû être microfilmés en plusieurs sections étant donné leur format. Les Archives nationales du Canada se sont néanmoins efforcées de reproduire toute l'information lisible.

Pour les références aux documents sur ces microfilms, veuillez suivre le modèle ci-dessous.
MG 26 J9, vol. 7, dossier 6.

Toutes questions concernant les droits d'auteur et les demandes de photocopies tirées du microfilm, ou de photographies tirées des originaux pour des publications ou des expositions, doivent être adressées à la Direction des Archives Canadiennes aux Archives nationales du Canada (395, rue Wellington, Ottawa, Ontario, K1A ON3).

King, William Lyon Mackenzie. (1874-1950). Prime Minister of Canada.

William Lyon Mackenzie King fonds
Original, 1641, 1703, 1815-1950, 252.710 m. Photocopy, 1908-1950, 5.000 m. Transcript, 1893-1950, 15.000 m. Finding Aid No. 502.

7-2061

William Lyon Mackenzie King, a grandson of William Lyon Mackenzie, was born in Kitchener (then Berlin), Ontario, 17 December 1874. He attended the University of Toronto (B.A., LL.B., M.A.), the University of Chicago, and Harvard University (M.A., Ph.D.). His field of study was Political Economy, with labour problems as his special interest. In 1900, he was appointed the first Deputy Minister of Labour and editor of the Labour Gazette. In 1908, he resigned to enter the House of Commons and in 1909 he entered the cabinet as the first Minister of Labour. He left politics after his defeat in the election of 1911 and from 1914 to 1917, he worked for the Rockefeller Foundation investigating industrial relations. He re-entered politics in 1919 after he was chosen leader of the Liberal Party. At the end of 1921, he became Prime Minister and held the post (with the exception of three months in 1926) until his party's defeat in the election of 1930.
He was Leader of the Opposition until October 1935 when the Liberals came back into power. From that time he was Prime Minister until he retired on 15 November 1948. He died 22 July 1950 at his Kingsmere estate.

The William Lyon Mackenzie King Papers were deposited in the Public Archives of Canada by the terms of Mr. King's will. The papers were the property of his literary executors until 22 July 1975 when they became the property of the Crown. The final transfer occurred 30 June 1977.

Access is Restricted.

For the series which are available in microform, the originals have been removed from circulation. Researchers must use the microform. In the case of the Diaries (J13), transcripts are also available.

Some type of finding aid exists for each series in the King Papers. The description of each series includes a note about that series' finding aid(s). Consult the Prime Ministers and Ministers Archives for any possible finding aids in process.

Two original master moulds, recordings of the Carillon Bells and King's speech on 1 July 1927, transferred to the appropriate division in 1995.

The following portions of the King Papers are available in microform: Primary Series Correspondence (J1), Memoranda and Notes Series (J4), Volumes 1-409, Speeches (J5) 1899-1932, Volumes 1-34, Family Papers (J7) and the Diaries (J13). The finding aid for each of these series includes a microfilm conversion list.

Public papers, 1876-1950, 208.400 m.; personal papers, 1641-1969, 48.602 m.

Public Papers.

Primary Series Correspondence, J1 Series. Original, 1889-1950, 44.700 m. (Vol. 1-447).

This series consists of the important correspondence both from the Prime Minister's Office and from Laurier House. The correspondence is arranged alphabetically by author within each year, with enclosures and any replies kept together. The pages of the entire series are numbered consecutively. For the correspondence up to 1921, there are both subject and author indexes. The subject index is an alphabetical list of subjects. The author index consists of index cards. The subject index is also available on microfilm reels C-4591 to C-4593. For the 1922-1950 correspondence, a detailed letter by letter index is available on the Prime Ministers CD-ROM. A microfilm conversion list for the whole series is available in the finding aid and on microfiche. Because the 1922-1932 J1 correspondence in Volumes 69-193 (reels C-2242 to C-2331) was reboxed after it was microfilmed, the volume numbers on the targets and running heads with the reels are incorrect.
Check the conversion list for the correct volume number.
Also available on microfilm, reels C-1901 to C-1952, C-2242 to C-2331, C-3672 to C-3695, C-3723 to C-3751, C-4566 to C-4576, C-4860 to C-4872, C-6804 to C-6814, C-7034 to C-7060, C-9871 to C-9887, C-9166 to C-9181, C-11035 to C-11055, C-4632.

Prime Minister's Office Correspondence, J2 Series. Original, 1921-1930, 1935-1948, 52.000 m. (Vol. 1-520).

This series consists of the subject files remaining after the Primary Series correspondence was selected. A file list is available in two separate bound volumes and on microfiche.

General Correspondence, J3 Series. Original, 1915-1950, (Vol. 1-161). 15.200 m.

This series consists of personal letters which were kept at Laurier House. These letters were left after correspondence was selected for the Primary Series (J1), the Family Papers (J7), and the Personal Correspondence Series (J8). A box list is available in the finding aid and on microfiche, a more detailed author list is available in the Political Archives Service.

A complete file list is available in a separate bound finding aid, on microfiche and on the Prime Ministers CD-ROM.

Volumes 1-409 are also available on microfilm, reels C-1953 to C-1983, C-2475, C-2475A, C-2476 to C-2480, C-2575 to C-2576, C-2622 to C-2626, C-2693 to C-2731, C-4253 to C-4289, H-1471 to H-1562.

Speeches, J5 Series. Original, 1899-1950, 10.600 m. (Vol. 1-105).

This series contains speech notes, drafts, printed copies, newspaper reports and comments. The material is arranged chronologically. A list giving subject, date and place of each speech is available in a separate bound finding aid and on microfiche.

The speeches from 1899-1932 are also available on microfilm, reels C-1984 to C-1988, C-2788 to C-2800

Pamphlets and Clippings, J6 Series. Original, 1876-1950, 42.100 m. (Vol. 1-245).

This series consists of clippings, pamphlets, obituaries and brochures arranged alphabetically in subject/nominal files. This series is divided into two parts: pre-1921 and 1921-1950. A file list is available in the finding aid and on microfiche.

Personal Papers.

Family Papers, J7 Series. Original, 1880-1950, 6.100 m. (Vol. 1-31).

This series consists primarily of King's correspondence from members of his family. The letters are arranged chronologically up to the end of 1917 and after that by name of correspondent. A file list is available in the finding aid and on the Prime Ministers CD-ROM.

Also available on microfilm, reels H-2244 to H-2270

Personal Correspondence, J8 Series. Original, 1897-1950, 4.000 m. (Vol. 1-41).

This series includes the personal correspondence received by King between 1897 and 1950. This correspondence was from friends rather than from acquaintances or the general public. A file list is available in the finding aid and on microfiche.

1996-02-02

William Lyon Mackenzie King, petit-fils de William Lyon Mackenzie, est né à Kitchener (alors Berlin), Ontario, le 17 décembre 1874. Il étudie aux universités de Toronto (B.A., LL.B., M.A.), de Chicago et Harvard (M.A., Ph.D). Il se spécialise en économie politique et s'intéresse particulièrement aux problèmes ouvriers. En 1900, il est nommé premier sous-ministre du Travail et rédacteur de la Gazette du travail. Il démissionne en 1908 pour entrer à la Chambre des communes; en 1909, il devient le premier ministre du Travail. Il quitte la politique après sa défaite aux élections de 1911 et de 1914 à 1917, il étudie les relations industrielles à la Rockefeller Foundation. Il revient à la politique en 1919 après avoir été élu chef du parti Libéral. En 1921, il devient premier ministre et conserve ce poste (sauf pour quelques mois en 1926) jusqu'à la défaite de son parti aux élections de 1930. Il est chef de l'Opposition jusqu'à la reprise du pouvoir par les Libéraux en 1935. Il réintègre alors son poste de premier ministre qu'il conservera jusqu'à sa retraite en novembre 1948. Il meurt le 22 juillet 1950 dans son domaine de Kingsmere.

Les papiers W.L. Mackenzie King furent déposés aux Archives publiques du Canada conformément au testament de M. King. Les papiers sont demeurés la propriété de ses exécuteurs littéraires jusqu'au 22 juillet 1975, date à laquelle ils sont devenus celle de la Couronne. Le dernier transfert eut lieu le 30 juin 1977.

Deux matrices originales des enregistrements du Carilon de la Paix et du discours de King, 1er juillet 1927 ont été confiées à la division appropriée.

Les séries suivantes sont disponibles sur microformes : Première série de correspondance (J1), Mémoires et notes (J4), Volumes 1-409, Discours (J5), 1899-1932, Volumes 1-34, Papiers de famille (J7), et Journaux intimes (J13). L'instrument de recherche de chacune de ces séries comprend une liste de conversion des microfilms.

Papiers publics, 1876-1950, 208.400 m; papiers personnels, 1641-1969, 48.602 m.

Première série de correspondance. Série J1. Original, 1889-1950, 44.700 m. (Vol. 1-447).

Cette série comprend un choix des lettres les plus importantes des dossiers du cabinet du premier ministre et des dossiers de la maison Laurier. La correspondance est classée par ordre alphabétique d'auteur pour chaque année avec pièces jointes et réponses réunies à la lettre principale et numérotées consécutivement. Il existe un index des auteurs et des matières pour la correspondance antérieure à 1921. L'index des auteurs est sur fiches et l'index des matières consiste en une liste alphabétique des sujets. L'index des matières est également sur microfilm (bobine C-4591 à C-4593). Pour la période 1922-1950, un index détaillé est disponible sur le CD-ROM des premiers ministres.
Une liste de conversion des numéros de bobines de la série est disponible dans l'instrument de recherche et sur microfiches. Parce que la correspondance de la série J1 pour les années 1922 à 1932, volumes 69-193 (bobines C-2242 à C-2331) a été reboîtée après le microfilmage, les numéros de volumes apparaissant dans les entêtes des microfilms sont inexacts. Il faut donc vérifier la liste de conversion pour avoir le bon numéro de volume.
Aussi disponible sur microfilm, bobines C-1901 à C-1952, C-2242 à C-2331, C-3672 à C-3695, C-3723 à C-3751, C-4566 à C-4576, C-4860 à C-4872, C-6804 à C-6814, C-7034 à C-7060, C-9871 à C-9887, C-9166 à C-9181, C-11035 à C-11055, C-4632.

Correspondance du Cabinet du premier ministre. Série J2. Original, 1921-1930, 1935-1948, 52.000 m. (Vol. 1-520).

Mémoires et notes. Série J4. Original, 1887-1950, 43.800 m. (Vol. 1-432).
Les mémoires, notes et quelques lettres qui n'étaient pas inclus dans la correspondance se trouvent dans cette série et sont classés en quatre périodes chronologiques : 1887-1921, 1922-1932, 1933-1939 et 1940-1950 avec matériel additionnel à la fin. Une liste complète des dossiers est disponible dans un volume relié, sur microfiche et sur le CD-ROM des premiers ministres.
Les volumes 1-409 sont aussi disponibles sur microfilms, bobines C-1953 à C-1983, C-2475, C-2475A, C-2476 à C-2480, C-2575 à C-2576, C-2622 à C-2626, C-2693 à C-2731, C-4253 à C-4289, H-1471 à H-1562.

Discours. Série J5. Original, 1899-1950, 10.600 m. (Vol. 1-105).
Cette série comprend des notes de discours, des brouillons, des copies imprimées, des commentaires et comptes rendus de journaux classés par ordre chronologique. Une liste donnant le sujet, la date et l'endroit de chaque discours se trouve dans un instrument de recherche relié séparément et sur microfiche.
Les discours de 1899-1932 sont aussi disponibles sur microfilm, bobines C-1984 à C-1988, C-2788 à C-2800

Brochures et coupures de journaux. Série J6. Original, 1876-1950, 42.100 m. (Vol. 1-245).
Cette série contient des coupures de journaux, des dépliants et des brochures qui sont classées alphabétiquement dans des dossiers de noms et de sujets. Cette série est divisée en deux parties : les documents antérieurs à 1921 et ceux de 1921 à 1950. Une liste est disponible dans l'instrument de recherche et sur microfiche.

Papiers personnels.

Papiers de famille. Série J7. Original, 1880-1950, 6.100 m. (Vol. 1-31).
Cette série contient des lettres écrites à King par des membres de sa famille. La correspondance est en ordre chronologique jusqu'à la fin de 1917; après cette année, elle est classée par correspondant. Une liste des dossiers est disponible dans l'instrument de recherche et sur le CD-ROM des premiers ministres.

Detroit. January 6th 8 – 9 P.M. Miss Wright & self present.

Lady Laurie. Heard a voice come in great cheerfulness and say "Comment vous portez vous — a chère chère" and spoke a number of words all in the tone of a greeting. Replied. ah Lady Laurie is that you, and spoke a word or French Lady Laurie then continues in English. Home to come and see you. I am so pleased to see you. I must to thank you for what you have done about my portrait, Miss Wright my friend it is magnifique – it is exquisite" I want you to hear to speak French fluently. It is pleasing for me, you can dismiss a short (dais) course alone — (something about the Progressive party — to talk French –

I asked Lady Laurie if she saw the Queen last night I had lost sight – she said she was delighted. I like to see you using the house – French is so nice. It is nice when you meet your friends to address them in French – it is so courteous and they like it – it is not too late, not too late to learn, you have sometimes you can study, instead of reading books. ~~Lady Laurie~~ ~~said she seldom read novels~~ ~~she said well then Spiritual~~

I said, Miss Fulford's picture had been painted. Laurier Laurier says yes. She is out in California. but there she is too isolated from the town – she is too far out, it is too lonesome for her she should be where she can hear the sounds and see the people, when you write to her tell her this for me, and send her my fondest love, and say that I love her still

I spoke of Laurier house, and Lady Laurier said it is beautiful but your home, and to give her every article in the place, it is your freedom to do as you please – do entirely as you please with everything, that is my wish and my wishes

Lady Laurier then referring to speaking French and said my mouth help me to speak correctly, to write it out first in English the speech words – said something about the verbs, to study them.

'practice makes perfect' that is what I did with my music
I had to practice, instead of reading at night practice piano.
instead of reading novels. I said I did not like novels or seldom read them she said well then shouldn't bother & most of laughed at me for it. Then Lady Laurier said something about I love you for all you are ~~too~~. & then said I always did love you and admire you. I hope this will be a good year. — Then the conversation ended.

Sir Wilfrid then came & stood on with some words about practice - work it out. a short speech, spoke about you say the introduction to your lecture, then go on speaking in your own language. They will be ready to receive your introduction. You know when you present yourself on a platform they will applaud, when they are through, thank them for your cordial welcome to this city, explain to them what you are going to talk about. I will be with you, first a short introduction to the people, They will take to you as never before, they always did like you they will carry (or where) you on long or you line. speaking this way. You will help me, we will help in touch with each other - [illegible] down deeply and long.
Thoughts is a great power, will help or recall — thoughts are things will help you through ordeals, crises and conditions. work for justice, and for right and strive to the many millions a blemish (how?) to forward, & pray your own thoughts, and what you know without slander in the name of all that is good and holy, ~~without any bitterness~~, or with a kindly standing (?) good-will thoughts to call upon. thoughts are things, they travel with wings, like lightening they go

(The meaning was this thought could be communicated while speaking. If I threw out my own mind in good will in the name of all that was good & holy, thoughts would be exchanged in the course of speaking)

Sydney Fortier

Next I heard Connie Howe Fortier - Sydney

Fortier said I must I could tell you what a pleasure it is for me and how happy to make me. I wish you success in all your endeavours. I spoke of how Fortier had helped me. I asked if he recalled our beginning together - he said he did. I met or I spoke your Good Canada, and told me to stand by it, bring the truth in I asked if he remembered Eunice - he said he did. I told him I was sorry not to have seen him during his last illness. he asked if they would not let me, I said I could not he said why what a cruel thing. he added he would have liked very much to see me. I spoke to him about the election. and he said next April - a year from this April. he said stick out from the shoulder, put on youth and vigour, make what you say easily understood - not to trouble about other countries, leave them to look after themselves. I work for us to look after our own Canada, the best of all the countries in the world. come close with your vocabulary to the people. so it can be easily understood. I asked if I talked over the heads of the people. he did not say I did but said, when you have stated a matter in one way for the intellectuals come back and go over it again in a mild (?) form. some people don't quite understand, (I must say I am very often. when you come to talk call a spade a spade. Education stands about the ranks of the life of (rank and file); come down on to the ground floor come down.

I said I had been in Mr Fortier's home - the Mayor being there - Fortier said there were other things there now. they were glad to see you "Toronto Thinks the world of the name King - young generation don't understand the old problems.

I asked if he saw mother - Fortier said Yes, she blessed you told me you were here - he spoke of her very thankfully. said she was 'blessed' lonely.

Fortier then said "All good Canada" - or words'

I held his hand & said do you think Bennett is going to make a change going to get married - he said' there are plenty of women after him' there will not be an election this year. I spoke of national govt. he was very emphatic "don't have national government: go for a strong in your speeches." we said an effort will be made to have a national govt he said something about our government has got to live and you are young too

Wilfrid Campbell

Campbell came running one a hoppy Sunday afternoon. I asked how many - there was with him and he said "all right". I asked if he helped his poetry. He said he didn't. There so much to do on earth. To straighten out conditions — Then in a poetical vein he said

The wind blows — — —

souls remain in the tomb

God's — that we can do

I said I asked if Campbell came to see me when I came from New York and he said that he did — then he went on with what he is seeing now to do — through this — — — good old soul — —

where are you — —

where can I find you —

when all roads

It was all rhyme, each was of the style that he was seeing whom he could some in dislikes (Campbell was a clergyman first & last & seem had some back & that calling)

I asked if he had come to me in a dream as Longmore he said yes.

I told him of having seen him very clearly a vision

I asked if he remembered a poem he had written him, he said he had written so many he did not remember. I asked him "Lines on a Skeleton" I recited one or two, and he laughed & said oh yes.

Then I spoke of Frost & said he was well and had been in some of books and he said something about being pleased I had some it that there was being a collection of mine (I doubt if this clear but it seemed to imply he knew his life was being written - & was that he would like me to know such books as could be for ourselves. — My own thought was much interviewed.

He then turned to New York and said something of the lady I was with he said 'I was with her' I had not said anything about who I was with in New York. — Then he said

I hope hope —

old things go well

(I did not catch the name Mrs Agnes)

Then he said she is a good person' - a good woman. He is a pity she had so many disappointments. I said I did not know about her life in those particulars. He said she has "a wonderful mind"

She has been to "a place she will never return to" - you know what I mean. he said & I said I think' he said yes - I spoke of our being at the tomb of her grandfather and he said yes, he knew a spirit of the beauty in and then said "don't let shine well" and ended of with the words

" Light of God, will shine upon her but then the stars will darken over her "

and with this verse he vanished. It was all very mystical I did not seem to get in close touch - something he gave me to tell he knew who I was well, his name was mentioned. I am no kind of a person, just asked if he had been with me when I was back from Europe and he then began to describe what I had been with his all quiet explanations as I recall carefully calls. on the earth being everything - he talked of the worth of a part of the soul the body the type degenerate was a favorite. It was the saving?
the soul he was most concerned about.

Hal McGinnis

I heard the name announcing clearly - the voice was rather mechanical hard to hear. but enunciation was quite clear. I said how are you Hal. I am so glad to see you. he said 'I am perfect all right'
I asked if he saw Gordon [illegible] then I ever was, I take care of myself, I told you I told you we will get back to James - keeping is a denial. We had no right to treat you as we did a man don't have to be a roller

Gordon I heard Andrew Gordon. Gordon. ((sharp and clear) with emphasis immediately impression. slight speaking) Gordon said he was glad to see me, he said then you are going to make experiments. I am going with you to hear what you say. "cut the gross close" - on some such expression. he said, you know what I mean, get words the hearts of the people. I said how are you Gordon. I am getting on wonderfully, I am all right. (two illegible) we leave it as it is and (when we come over) disease is of the flesh not of the soul -
I said how you any message for Mrs Gordon. he said, perhaps it would be well to say nothing to her. She might think about it outside, it would not do to have this talked about, I said I had told her I was going to try and talk with you! oh well, he said if that is so tell her I am perfectly happy, I am in the 6th sphere and doing wonderfully. I am with my mother and father. It has been a great happiness. She said then, you know there is a reason, the love we have had from childhood. I said if his wife was there. She was waiting for me, and she put both her arms around my neck. She is lovely I said Gordon do you remember when we talked of this. He said yes and I didn't believe you, I said do you believe now, and he said "I know you are right, (confirming the vision) then he went on to say "say very little about this until after the preliminaries are over there is no use supplying "food for a bear". If anyone got ahead of this he would ridicule you from every platform I asked if he saw my mother, and he said yes indeed, she is very lovely very beautiful like a wax doll. I see more of your brother I see the Doctor occasionally. I am very much with your sister (he spoke very sweetly of her, away" - (this phrase is in a letter from her dear dead at Xmas - or a last phrase of father's - it's use makes clear that Gordon knows that I have been reading to letters a saying in connection and that he is in touch with the loved ones here. - he was glad I was [illegible] I told him of the commando - standing a battle in the evening which confused me very much.

I wish you health, and luck and success "keep hammering away" - he repeated.

Bella

I heard kisses - and then a greeting to her wife, - and some expression of her kindness, one. her wife. She said was it good of him to come all this way. Bella said" my brother loves to come and stay with him. we are together, but I love to hear him, mother and I are going to Quebec. when she said "mother is proud of you' - she? said something about; "couldn't keep away"; what are you doing. = Bella said? I like to have my friends to call, I am helping the children in the kindergarten work is in the hospitals. he goes to help them in the hospitals. & so that everything is done thoroughly. I said I was boys are doing well. Bella said yes he knows they are, and is grateful to you for helping them. I said James was well, & she said yes they are all well I asked Bella said they were at Kingsmere - said something about at Laurie's house & me at home we'd pass night -
(this may have referred to my phoning James from [illegible]
She said this would not be a good year, then I spoke of what was going to happen in the [illegible] I said I don't know. I don't get anything. then she said [illegible] I have been working with the children. - & [illegible] fondest love from me to you. I send her kisses - I said I will send - & [illegible]

Bella Scotchmore

Bella then said, very wistfully, I think if you are going to know your friends, you had better write down who they are - or the poor mind will lose (or words to that effect.), She had evidently heard us talking of having the friends come that night instead of the meeting over Saturday night. When Mrs Worrall had spoken of our all having a sitting together. I had said it was weird if she could have one in the morning (tomorrow Saturday 7th. Instead of on Saturday afternoon, so as to get a better start with most ordinary. all the next have been heard and length of Conversation arranged accordingly.) The others came up. After meeting Mr Sterling & others from the hospital where he had been to see a young girl of 22. who had been taken there in a dangerous condition ~~9.30~~ 10.45.

her thanks. Her = Mrs Sterling, Mrs Worrall = myself.

The first voice heard was that of an Indian

Black Hawk - he started in addressing the group, Chief Colin he said. well Black Hawk, said Mrs Sterling, it's good to hear from you, how do. he went around the circle - saying something to each Sterling & me he said, all big men going to burning - he go. he knows. You go and the small town addressing me big French, very French - spoke of town helping, one hour. money. - he big chief - go here and there - pardon pardon choo. choo - (simulating a train) pardon pardon on train - motor bus - like chief (Thurnis) at station man meet you. he will shake hands. haven't met before. You smile and dine. and wine (It was all a description of a meeting at Quebec. Long train etc. - It was explained Black Hawk was Indian who came frequently into their circle

Mrs Skinner - very sweet quiet voice - said welcome welcome to my home. Will home & let others do the courteous, very happy to be here. very happy for to see all of us under the one roof "God bless you" - You know I am here - then turning to the others I am sorry the little girl is not well - Spoke about [illegible] most kindly - declared full understanding of very sweet in her home. & the absence of the very sick

Mrs Sterling

Addressed her son - my son, after introduction it was said it was an honour to have you in our family - gave a welcome from our heart He must on to speak quite wonderfully - we are only a little time in this world - do the good we can - the need for fellowship - the world in an appalling state. must take a long time to unfold, 3 years longer

It is a problem how one will exist never remember such times - more troubles will come, trouble everywhere the world is in a state of nerves. Europe doesn't know what is next some Russia is chaotic. Your govt (i.e.) Canada has made a great mistake in not dealing with Russia. She might deal in steel and other things - "some member of [if they only knew brains] from Ottawa" - Truth is the truth. You put your finger in your eye when you turned down Russia. Keep your eye on your pocket book. Don't let money go to waste — the Chancellor's son of his boys ± said boys are good, they don't waste as we - Every one is afraid of a money panic. The U.S. has forgotten its principles
You cannot realize our condition - talk of depreciation - it would make things worse, There is suffering enough as it is. Some brilliant men are talking against it. [many men working to stop] The U.S. has been looking for trouble. - The trouble is U.S. has too many of the foreign elements.
too much boring ± too many making bombs
There is a bobby there over here. There is danger of depreciation for it takes homes from people, money from the people. We don't take bribes it is ridiculous. foreign element send money home to support their people, [illegible] helping in destruction — something said about Cockerel ± sermons — come again. spoke of her son as a good man

There was then a knock at my left, a streak of light at my right. Clouds rolling. Lee Shannon could see the outlines of all in the room, also was inside it was the electric globe making the place luminous - again there was light — some one bowed [illegible] — then another, some one standing near. (all this may sound [illegible] Lee Shannon ± was sounds —)

Then came
Charles Gross - announced his name. said he had come again to let me know he appreciated my kindness — I spoke of the photograph. he said [illegible] it was nice of his boy to give it he was a good fellow. I asked if he saw Max. he said Max is wonderfully well, he is working in the hospitals
he said something about one years free course he said there was no manual labour in the Spirit world. no struggle - free from struggle
Son helped was helping us - he [(Carlo)] was most anxious to help his fellows more on earth Saviour's great aim is to help humanity
Nothing is lost. that relates to the spirit
I can only half "Oh-Oh." — Then again in Charlie's name most solemnly!

Mr Forrand – offered boat to Mr Sibley. Said he had been over to see the sick girl. She was very ill, the trouble was depletion. She had been worrying a lot. Very nervous. Quite sick, had to send for her to come her own physician. We could give them the best help & nurses – Yes, (Sibley to Mr) are selling on good value, take my advice don't worry. The money panic has happened Mr. [illegible] will let it happen before worrying about it.

He was introduced to a number of the women & he selling with his compliments. Quest – then began to tell me of Sibley & said he is one of my patients – brought him into the world – he is just honorable and above reproach (the man a clergyman is now a banker)

a wonderful man is Mr Kemp

to know – some of the idea of being ill here. All there, we all have ailments – head & money and foreign he have not a "business hotel" in this town, only at-one-comfort-home (not one of this word.) Would not to explain its doing explain it one byer stamp – it is always in her head it) the worst fate of — It was the home I loved. the hospital home – (he referred to his residence, now used for other purposes – he smiled.

He said my prayers
I've ordained ministers & ordained bankers
what further honours is there I can give him.

Mrs Skinner – father of Mrs S.

After being introduced. I suppose you know Old St. Catherines her uncle had a sanatorium there, they went on treating me (he had hypnotic dreams) others on this side of life we are not practicing medicine, there is not strength to administer mentally & physically. to know to cure and what is everything. we empires the doctors to investigate and to cure the cause. cure it that is our mission, to help our patients physician help the minister – the students and so meets others (it was each happens: does help others comforting) there is no struggle

It is astonishing to see people suffer. when we could help them

No one was secured who could help little brothers (Mrs Skinner –

Then he said. I thank You for the privilege of talking with one who is a brave true Canadian, how then spoke of his sons veracity & truth. I said to Mrs Shemis "Trust to God Canadian as well as I would he closing he said. God with - God bless You. God shew You in Your endeavours and may You gain the crown of victory

Next an Italian who spoke French - very hard to make out - spoke to me as Chief - during boer war. Italian - began to speak about Quebec - will get a petition at Quebec. think I had to plead to decline. signed & returned. could not - make him out - ~~understand~~ at all, evil eye.

Mr Sheppard spoke to me - he had been to the hospital with Mrs. Shemis, was helping Marie. She was not very well. had had a general breakdown, blood was thin, was impoverished - worrying her present. She was not to take cardiac - the doctors would also prefer to have her do so - expressed a welcome to me

Mrs ——— (Mrs Shemis mother - who evidently is German.)
She began "Mein liebes Kind - Mein my dear John - my daughter thanks so much of you, I must do the same then she said something to me about sending of you in the welcome they were trying to make people happy — I later change of this!
he never was spoiled — love to — all well. Goes to me
She went on to say. I went down stairs. there was no one there so I came up here. I have been sitting on the bed continue to feel happy. he will get through everything. don't get discouraged. (Gordon's here was standing and worrying a good deal about the bank situation —) the old lady ended up with a German adieu "Schlafen wohl" (sleep well

April 14 (Good Friday)
3 o'clock.
present Mrs W. Joan & self.
a Mrs Crumbie, made this morning

Roseburgh. W. L.

After silence for a little while a voice - Scottish accent - "Joan"
(We thought it might be my grandfather, Macleay.)
In a little while called same the voice
'William' - Said in mind - Joan grandfather - Macleay - the voice said Yes. I am very glad to see you - very glad,
Then I said here are you. He replied we are all here
Said here is Mrs Wreath.
He said thank God, thank God. = Yes I am very glad
I Joan said here are you. You are Macleay
Lord - and here Wallace," he replied, "we are all present, to answer to Joan. all very well
I asked what he thought of things. — very bad — not. oh all what they ought to be. We are really in need of a Church, meet-on to speak about the bad condition, need to change things there he said but we in Canada are not - as seriously needs as the United States. They need us to stir things up.
I ~~asked~~ said couldn't do some of that for him. He replied
You are doing your best, doing better every day, not forgetting the spirit of fight, like myself. - ~~and sometimes downhearted~~

(I have a feeling the reference to you - was to my friend Jessie who was the only one of the family I had missed the last time she called. Grandfather was telling me to be sure
I had missed her)

Nancy. Joan saw a sheep soon a sweet voice said "Mother dear" & then more sheep, Joan at once asked is that you Nancy dear - she said yes, She asked how her father was & Joan said he is well. - Nancy said the father is well, I know & so is brother (Joan couldn't think of the brothers name & asked & I said Jack) Nancy said I saw brother today, he is all right - they are all well. - Joan then asked Nancy what are you doing, She replied, Still at my music. Joan asked if she could play the flute & she said she would try and then began to blow a sort of soft whistle, different notes but not too clear. She then said of her own accord
"I came to meet you a little Obstacles", I said must do you ~~know~~ know about Rabbits. She said I ~~know~~ know about bunnies and eggs & chickens
(There was a short interruption - the remained like an Indian Nancy said that was big climb
~~I said Nancy~~ I said Nancy sometimes we will go for a walk together, long walks. She said yes, and I said where where you are, & she said "right here" - we will walk here and will go to Kingsmere, we will go down to the flowers & then to the water - I asked if she means the stream or the lake & she said the big river. I asked if she saw the cottages and she said they were very pretty.
Joan asked ~~if she saw~~ did you see her Kings mother. Nancy replied, She is here, She will come DOWN. There were then footsteps heard and she disappeared.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Soon I heard the name Wilfrid. I asked if it were Sir Wilfrid he said yes, I said how do glad to see you, he called Rowan by name Mrs. Pallison, & then spoke to Mrs Wiseley, he spoke then to me and said he was glad to see me. I said it was nice to see me in his old house. Sir Wilfrid replied it is nice to be in Laurier House, he asked how he was & he said as well as he could be seeing us struggling. I asked how he thought we were getting along, Sir he said I feel very proud of you — in the last 6 months you have picked up, been seen and heard here and there, have picked up a spirit of independence, you have done well, the people are beginning to see what they have lost. I said they had see what they had lost in Bennett, he said Bennett has made a terrible fool of himself he then said to me I feel on a world front I do abroad, to be courageous to stand out. (A world front. I don't mean world - I mean Stand out in your own. we will all help you we must work, we must time — I concluded called that when he meant, Sir Wilfred then said working hard for our party. & asked if they were struggling & he I asked about the prospects were for re-election. Sir Wilfred replied not very good. I said I thought the boom - left agreement and Canada the way she said that was he thought — the ~~country~~ a year ago & Western about our party, — he said there was something about - fight against our party must win re-election. I could not catch it, then he said the Conservative party were against it. He then said our party will (or again) it is a struggle. we said to you. I struggle, I am struggling now we must fight for our own ~~rights~~ our own safeguard, we must to ourselves keep the attitude, keep about a more friendly relationship, fight for our —

Force he comma then & in a whisper Sir Wilfred said

I will come again

I next was weight saw a light near Joe - and the name "Charlie" Joe said that might mean Mr. Hallinan as it was the name he was called by. - There was quiet for a time -

Then a voice

Joe McCann

Joe, - I asked many times Joe who, - who did he want to speak to - he said he - I asked Joe McCann - he said he worked for Mr. Hallinan - I asked where he was from - he said Waterloo county, and left on. Joe, - I then asked if he was Joe that used to row wood for us at Berlin, he said Yes. Yes. I said how did you like here, he said Joe's father told me to come back, I then said was glad I was to see him - I was well remembered him, he said I was a lonely little fellow in words to that effect - said he had told my father when I was a youngster I would make him money, - he said Joe was made Alderman here. He then asked me if I remembered the mill, the time he came down in a wagon - he fell down at the bottom (I think he said something about falling out) I have a recollection of this. Joe came to see me on Monday the - the 12th I then was 8 there. I was 4 to 8, when he came to see me. - I used to like to stand around what he called to me (There was another old fellow I liked - named Dennis - Joe McCann worked mostly for Gibson's, & he Dennis worked for us. I asked Joe if he had seen his last name again - he did - said McCann. - Joe McCann: I asked if he remembered Mr Gibson - he said indeed - old Mr Gibson. - He was a great little fellow - (Joe said he was the one he used remember.) I asked about his family he said they were there. I asked if they were happy. he said they were fairly well. I asked if they were happy. he said some people could never be happy - added something about this being a great world over here. I said I hoped such was our people

In a little while Mrs Wright saw a man with a round face, dark beard, spectacles which he took off, he had a moustache & whiskers, clean shaven chin. white whiskers.

I wondered if it could be my father's uncle D. MacDougall. I thought of Mrs. but there was no fourth word that I could (I heard Mrs W. afterwards said what she said was that one she saw only he had chosen more than MacDougall was) the case in his finish very strong I am glad to see you this is a surprise & pleasure, a pleasant surprise, the first Mrs Wright knew of it soon. & during it he said he hoped I was going to have a little rest and some comfort. I said that he had already provided me with comfort. he & his wife & daughters he said he had been glad to do what he had done & wanted to do more, & then said as I told daughters (or her daughter) "there is no better man I know than the good boy you admire and esteem so greatly" she said. "I couldn't rest happy unless I felt he was in [illegible] place. Lochiel went on to say he wanted to do more for the little people of the Wilfred and their many friends, that he could not away from him or me, I need me all wanted to help him, you asked something about how they were — & then Lochiel said he would be glad to the could come & see — take young boys, you spoke about remembering strength. Mrs Lochiel said you are welcome & we shall be glad to see you. he said he would say we were 21 & 22. she said he had found there the friends he loved, many had come before. some remained behind, some day we will all be together. I said I should had [illegible] me a little visit. Mrs Lochiel said "I was glad to see him make little call" — (that was significant. as it was only a call not a visit he made on a Tuesday morning)

From Peter to Lochiel.

In a little while I heard "Lochiel"

I spoke of Aileen and Mrs Gorkin. - Mr Gorkin said Aileen was very well, Mrs Gorkin had been a little under the weather. He said we all become old and decrepit in time, last-I spoke as if it were a condition fully understood

I asked about the prospects of Congress - Mr Gorkin said not-just now, can you do anything with them, but it would be well to discuss some of the proposals. it would be well if you advertised, the income tax is so high, Mr Gorkin. I don't want to see you tied up. I asked if he thought I had done right about the Bond he said he did & his reply was quite right I asked if he thought conditions were very serious. he said not very soon, conditions in the United States were "serious" - it would be 10 years before they would be cleared up. I asked if he thought there would be revolution in Europe. he said Europe cannot escape it. Germany is in a bad way. The man there is trying to be a humanitarian & he is worse for that humanitarian.

I asked him about my own work. he said I was going ahead well - that I was needed & help clean up. I asked about elections. he said they would not be this year, next year something might come up which would secure us all — Bennett, he said, is sick of his life; he repeated this - said he will not be able to hold on. I asked who would succeed him. we want you to"

I asked if he thought the U.S.S.R. and do much. he said No they don't know where they are going, or what they want. One book is which is like us". I asked again about myself & he said I was doing just right. Then he said "thank God I know you." I stressed the know. I said thank God I know you. Mr Gorkin, he then said to [illegible] me something about my being deserving of everything that had been given me

I asked me about Sir Thomas Lipton, he said he saw Sir Thomas

Lord Sunday (which is characteristic as it was always on Sunday they saw each other) he said he looked very well, he would try to get him to come and speak, he was hard to get about 9.0 he was about everywhere. Joshed her how if he remembered our walk to Castle ob Kingsmere & our dress in Quebec - over the Terrible Hoss ca- he of course would it wonderful, he said what we had talked about had come about, shook hand if his advice he had given us had not been right. he closed by saying we would walk and talk together again.

There was a nice Yank seen today.

but the power seem to go at this point - It rained during the afternoon so if more were needed in the way of bombs some aircrew were safe as ashes as formerly. - Then to wind thought thought his trumpet not had improving - a swell pair Nero with each sitting. On Wednesday the sitting was quite as good as some of the others.

The season lasted about an hour.

8.45 pm.

Present: Miss Weidle, Joan & Kell

Miss Weidle said as she sat down there is a person named "Jeff" here
I know it is someone of the name of Ubb.
We were scarcely seated before a moan of flame seemed to run around the crucifix on the floor. It ran towards Miss Weidle and up the side of the cupboard. I saw it quite distinctly the cupboard itself seemed to move. Then Joan & Miss Weidle called out.

A voice called out. "Come on all three." It sounded like Archbishop's voice. Then we saw what looked like a white light at the side of the back door, a mass of white

In a few moments I heard a voice saying Alexander. Alexander Alexander Mackenzie near. Then quite clearly.

He said to me you remember your family history on your grandfather's side, spoke of being a relation of grandfather's
I think he said your grandfather's uncle. I was not sure of this. He was very broad Scotch, spoke of a locality - of different parts & then said "it ended up with a reference to Dundee.
Looked up the meaning Gaelic. - He said something about
"Blunderi forspeering" which Joan translated meaning to pry or seek. He said something about all being wonderfully well about this being a new country which he did not know Uncle Mackenzie (I think he said) had told him it was. He said
Come down & see us again - then Goodbye - He was a fine old Scotch voice - very jolly - cheerful & hearty.

Mrs Mc Whirter

Next I heard a voice "Joan" then the word "father"; it seemed to Joan said he was very well, all were very well, everything well Mother very well, he said he came often to see Joan. I come often, every day. Joan asked if he came in the Chariot & he said yes and spoke of how glad he was to see her. Then he spoke to me & said how are you Mrs Ney and something about my being very generous and went on to speak of what I had done for Joan & I said he had done more for me, he repeated about my kindness and said there was so little he could do "all to [illegible] for Joan" - then he said "God bless you all" called himself Jarvis and said he was a son of Dr Jarvis, the one who also called 'Squire Jarvis' - he & and he had told he had come to speak about the London people. Joan & he recalled dear names. the sister of Joan's father and mother. "my father was the Squire" Joan says. Joan says took about old friends - Allan Poles - he said he was very well, - that all the boys who had been killed in the war were very happy & well, there was a great Chorus where they got to know each other, before passing on & others & higher spheres. that they were a wonderful lot - he spoke of the war being a terrible one, Joan mentioned another name or two & he said he might arrange to have them come.

Then there was some one abroad who had a gentle Mr.

- & lastly all Mother came

Mother

Mother said Good night my dear son, and dear Joan, and Mrs Webb. After I'd been so glad to see me & Joan, especially to Joan 'I remember her and love her — Mother then after to me I said she was glad to see me so much better, Mother replied was glad to see me so 'spry' — I said I had been taking treatments, Mother said the Father had been talking of me, and she had said "John — She asked Mrs Wallace if she did not think I was much better, I asked her when she said she knew about the treatment of the hand where it was. She replied yes & had some words difficult to make out, but sounded like Kennedon. I asked if it was Kennedon she said Yes. She always so appreciated my so words - at my feeling always 'spry' & she said Father is so pleased John told me "I am satisfied. I asked about Quebec & asked if she had my speech in French & Mother said indeed yes & meant it so courteous, She said something about Mrs Henry & was tremulous; and she said I don't like Mrs Tremblet. — and sounded - at the time the air (of very bad - there was a change in the atmosphere. (I think it was some happening of the moderns but about occasional this change.) — It did not seem to but in our conversation when she did, as I did not like the odour at the time & it seemed natural for me to vanish. She was in her bath of air.

In a letter which Miss Worrell spelled out the name Vonell said there was something like a white trace of Worrell
Miss Vonell - We asked if it were Miss Vonell who said yes of the Marlborough - she said yes. She spoke & I recall Joan calling Miss Miss Vallion. I said she was very happy. I asked her if she saw Cal Forbes - She said yes, that he called but we had been talking together, I said no, but it might have had reference to a call I had about something (Miss Bleaney interpreted) I did not mention the name. She then said it was extraordinary that I should see Joan here and be talking of Joan through a tin horn (with reference to the horn we made of tin this morning) I asked for Miss Forbes - she said all were there - wonderfully well. Then she said how are you Miss Vallion? Joan spoke to her of her son Guy - said he was doing splendidly. I asked if she remembered our song to the Old Clock - she said I wouldn't it a long time I asked if she saw Miss Herrick. She said she did not see her of late, she was with her people, was getting along nicely. I asked if she remembered when she used to live at Brooke Rd and she said "on Somerset St." which was quite correct.

It became very dark - Miss Worrell said she saw a column of light moving in my direction - it was over her head. She was sorry she did not remember the symbolism of it

Miss Mackenzie

Soon a voice came "Joan dear" Mrs Mackie - Then was a loving exchange of greetings. Joan asked what are you doing. Miss Mackenzie said I am always doing something, looking after the grandchildren looking after you. Aren't they beautiful children (Joan agreed and offered her opinion She meant Mrs at Philadelphia - She thought by the other world. Joan spoke of her being a good little mother speaking now of her old self. She said she was very much better
She then spoke of me & said I had been good to her. She declared for sure. Then
I remembered how fond she was of flowers. Then she spoke to Joan & said
"You were good to her, Joan she is good to everybody" Then Joan spoke of Miss Mackenzie said I was 'the salt of the earth' I said Joan often spoke of how happy they were together in Woodstock. & Miss Mackenzie said she would never like me do a thing. Then she said I had a good son-in-law is, tell ~~Father~~ him I sent my fondest love to him he sure & tell him that. Joan asked about her grandmother, Mrs Mackenzie said she was out & sure when she was tonight. Joan asked if they lived together & Mrs Mackenzie said she lives with grandfather. I asked where she was & she said in the G[illegible] House, I intend to visit her, I meant to help - Speedy & Jones is waiting for you. She said then Joan looked so much as worry & trouble & bother her, but that is all past now

Joan: we are all very happy, that is all by. Joan asked about Mrs
Mrs M. said she is with us, we don't call her mother but grandma
Joan asked for Bee & she said Bee is very well. Mrs Mackenzie said
I will know all the news, & she said she might get them to come.
I spoke about the broach that Joan was wearing now. She laughed & said, I love to see them things, for their old associations. ~~& that for~~ and Mrs Mackenzie added "I asked her about it" (that is how she knew she spoke of) I spoke about the fainting & Mrs Mackenzie said "I take it very much"

Sang a Short
Song on was very close ~~Then a~~ Unattitude Marking.

When we had great difficulty making out a woman's voice who spoke in a whisper & very weak. we could get Billy and finally Unattitude & then the name in full Unattitude Mackie.
Joan asked if she was a woman who had a baby and died & died when baby was born
She said but this baby was so large a baby now grown up
Joan asked if she used to sing in her father's choir & she said
yes. It was all Joan could do to recognise her. But this incident was quite clear. After this much had been made out, & then a noise crowd. Mrs Mackenzie came again & explained the incident.

Mrs McWhistler.

Mrs McWhistler said to Mrs Jones mother told her to come. She used to love you very much she was very fond of your pretty hair. It was so beautiful and she loved it & told her to come. She dreaded meeting to because she said you would ask her, I said to her "would mother like Mrs Jones" - She was a beautiful singer. She is a great singer. I said to Mrs McWhistler that he was a great singer & I think he would sing us a song, he asked Joan to sing with him. She said "I lost my voice when I was ill" Mrs McWhistler said something about the same reference - Joan asked where he was & was it broad Scotch he told her very much all wrong. we are all here listening to each other, our presence is here, & I asked can you see us - then Mrs McWhistler said yes. Mrs Wyatt then began said a hand waved over my head. Mrs McWhistler then began to say very smelly & with this reflection had visions of "Gallic in the Heroes" or "Lochinvar" the Heroes to be - & when he had finished the verses said "Good night."

Mrs Jones old gentleman

Some relation of gentleman a friend of Mrs McWhistlers then came to call with Joan in order about Joyce who were friends of her father & mother some of whom Joan knew, others she did not know. He said you know Mr Corbett - Yes yes, - knew others old friends of your father, old acquaintances - then he spoke of Connie. 'Someone' Joan could think of as one - finally Connie occurred to her name. Next were the walkers, to Ab then name he said then. You do with your pet "walkers" then the wells. - He said he knew Mrs White & went with Hester of the old Coin, asked if she remembered a certain old lady he spoke to of a relation of the Gentlest (or grannon) school. Said he remembered her when she went there

He ended by thanking of Joan mother and said
"She came down to train you for your goodness then"

[illegible] said some one in standing near by and his name is Campbell. Maid is Wilfrid Campbell. Man with said is he a Reuben man. Maid D. C. Campbell

D. C. Campbell - and the man said that is who it is. He then said Peterborough. He said Yes. Maid it is not long since he found one. Campbell replied. I am lonesome for home, I miss home like home life. Miss my old associates. After of evening. He said Yes I [illegible]. I and something about his having been made alone (thinking he was alone for telling me this) I said no he was not alone. He said Ring this is a good old world. None has known a sor. but we are put on the earth to toil, to work our years + then away + then we pass away with very little enjoyment. I said was he not happy. He said Yes in a way but not on I never learned any one. I was not looking for pomp or splendour death seemed a terrible thing. I wonder what it means to lay down, to lay down and what is it all for?

(It was as if Campbell had not yet found out that he had really died or knew where he was - at all events he was carrying all these ideas of humanity into the beyond - the mere fact of association with any more - neither good nor bad - just as often it is in some life.)

After this, the man began to move about + fumbled about for a bit as the room faces were trying to light it. It made considerable moving back and forth, and fell once on to the arm of Joan's chair. It was evidently the means of indicating that was all for tonight as we [illegible] to go.

The memory altogether was just a marvellous one - beautiful as Mrs Wraith expressed it of "evidential value." It seemed to me that such was the case and [illegible].

April 15. morning 10.20

present Mrs Wendt & myself.

Dr Mark.

A few minutes after we were seated I heard. 'Good morning' in a clear scotch voice, and stood at once Good morning Dr. Mark he said this is the first of Wednesday, dear friends, I have had to come and talk, and how are you. and I want to thank you for the priviledge of coming and talking. Stand it was our priveledge and I wanted above all to thank him for what he had done to make it possible - Dr Mark said it is God who has made it possible. It is natural to be able to communicate it is natural. It is a law of God has given us. It is the will of the Almighty that we should help each other day by day. Now I am not going to take up your time all the loved ones are here and they want to see and hear you, I just want to wish you a great joy and happy and (I hope) your career will be one to be helpful and greater than it has ever been, more uplifting and long for you and your God. It was a beautiful sort of a communion and brotherly.

May.

In a few minutes I heard the words "my brother," and I said I was so glad to see him and asked how he was. He said I am happy and contented as I hope you are. I am feeling well though and am glad to see you are better and to the medicine – I want to tell you my sweet girl, if you are not very careful your condition is very serious. Your trouble is worry, your nerves are broken and depleted you need all the rest possible. You must rest and be contented. All this upset condition in the world has affected you. You have worried about it. You remember (will) Perkins to me, how ~~he~~ brother was, how she married. You have no organic trouble. It is nervousness that has upset you, don't overdo. Be careful not to overdo. Mary Reed said she had slept yesterday. – I said she must rest

more then said Father + Grandfather call the Archangels are here + Seraphims to help all they can. Mary is looking better for you. I said I had been telling Brahma "I asked about her thought of it he said "Father thinks it is wonderful" You are back again to your old self. He replied yes you have come back to your real self, for a while you were let down, dissatisfied – unsettled to know this Christ – Eternity of life Brahma then said it is "Seen Heaven" I asked if he saw where it was he said yes, I was better Father I do there will brother, as I pressed him for his name + asked if he remembered the place. He mentioned a name Lord Thomas + he said yes. He spoke about both men + brother being there together with an at-times.

I said now you can explain to me the nature of this man of sense with soul – Flesh + spirit you understand it, he said yes, and began to speak very slowly + clearly and said

The soul is the spirit – the ego is the mortal – the spirit is the Soul, some try to distinguish between the two, they call all the same It is the flesh that is weak – Here on the mundane plane you are in the animal kingdom (I am not quite clear as to this but I was told) desire belongs to the animal – it is the reflection of feeling (not quite clear) – to we must exercise the control control does not belong to the animal – no sense of the animal is control – I asked if these feelings of desire were wrong. Christ said something about the spirit was willing but the flesh was weak. Some there are who are strong, others. What is natural is not wrong (somehow about natural impulses) unless we abuse it – there are some who do – we are perfect. the laws of nature makes us perfect. the laws of control is self-denial. we are all from it do things – not wrong are perfectly legitimate unless we abuse it – as some do (great deal)

Ben Tarlin

I heard Tarlin, then my dear boy. I declare I can't keep away. It seems to be a part of our lives to come together. I often of it funnily it was that I was enabled it – then we have that quite correctly & slowly Is there anything you want, and there any one you want me to influence & do things for you. If there is you ask me, speak with me mentally and I will respond I will help you any way I can. I want you to carry on he will need assistance. I don't know what we are going to do. the world is in a tangle and I am a little afraid of the situation. I was talking to Gladstone and asking him what he thought of the situation. He said that he would not like to see England in trouble with Germany or Russia – there is an explosion England is handicapped, they must hold to peace. we have lost a great number of our own men and we don't want a repetition It looks like a war in Europe. Germany is agitating trouble, Russia is screaming about quarreling. Japan wishes to settle the best she is afraid of England. They have killed thousands of Elephants. what with carts & guns and the rest one cannot wonder they had had enough.

I spoke again about Canada & the political situation. - Lord Loreburn said, ~~there is the thing~~ is electors "untaught away" wrongly about protection which; he has changed his views. he is much in love, has plenty of money, he has felt very keenly the changed conditions - we need a change, he is "a slick duck". You must learn to watch him. We must try & carry on keep in touch with our party; and don't let them get away I said what about Mosses: - the reply was often a silence, has been heard changed about recipients. - I asked what he is a help. the reply came "he will not be a detriment: I said he wants to be very fully detainment - Lord Loreburn said that is what we want you to be, and laughed, ~~to~~ to be firm - want to be the Fourier - keep in touch. - these secondaries are forgetful, can easily be won over, keep in touch with them & we will win the day. they are good people, but they are not able or stable, keep them in line - (it was very need calming & reading)

I asked Lord Loreburn what he thought of inflated currency he said it is terrible - it is at 20 or is it 22 today. He said at one most interviews, I must get into the heart of these things. Inflation is terrible, it means losing money. Lord of the Gold standard, Silver will have to be looked into, Copper is easily carry people don't like to carry silver. Silver always was a burden Silver ought to be considered - people don't like to carry silver. I asked if a paper currency backed by silver might not be some good. - he thought there ~~is~~ of it on certain points. He then said to stick in the Gold Standard that is "stick a tiniemens" that the world needs today. We must not be blind with our backs to the wall & ~~fight~~ face these orders of things that is coming on and we will break it.

When Wolfgold.
Here I read the spelled out the letters "Wolfgold". I inquired when Wolfgold ? he said yes. I read of Berlin, he said yes. I mentioned on this is a strange place to find you in. I said how did you come here, ? he said your father told me I come.
It seems that you are all wrong down here, - wrong -
I asked if he remembered Berlin ? his schooling there, - how often about - the ship. and the old boiler - at the factory (he was a workmen mechanic. about in person is I often about the church ? he said something about "on the corner it is still standing" "or looking forth" I asked about his brothers. in how many I could not make them out ? finally I asked him Jait he said yes Jait. I often of the Devil, he said he was never interested in Devil, but "Jait is a true man". I asked about the Christ, he said yes. "He was a wonderful Christ here" Then he began to talk forth
This is the real life, the real life is after death. While we are on the mundane sphere we are there for what purpose we dont know. It is just until we pass out of that life
- this annual kindgdom - that we understand it so is clearly that it is for something beyond. what it is for we dont understand. It is not taught in our schools Heaven Hell and the Devil was is all are mad about. when we pass out we dont know where we are going. we are in fear. we inherit that from our dear brothers. when we are born they are in fear for fear we die, or that they may die and leave us they are afraid the babes die - we come in fear to this mundane world shows it in fear.
I found it a most pleasant transition. I moved on I do not know where. On the way I was met by a Spirit who asked me what I wanted to do to remain in the mundane realm or go on in my sphere. I said I do not know it was optional. I went on in my sphere, I was so surprised with the brightness & glory all around, me that I could not believe such a thing could be or that I should live to see it. I asked what sphere he was in and he said the 6th sphere, but he said there are many realms. Jesus Christ is in the 6th realm of the 6th sphere. She was a very beautiful soul and she brought all her knowledge of soul with her to all earth life sphere we prepare for ourselves."

As to Criminals. I mean by criminals those who wilfully take the lives of others. Those who do it deliberately wilfully like one part in a sphere, but it is a sphere that I know nothing about - - - - -

In the spirit there came a whisper on the breeze. - it was very distinct - clear like some one blowing a kiss, or sending a telegraph message. The words were as distinct as if one were doing it oneself. Mrs Worrall - I wish I could - Mrs Worrall and you are long & it a telegram. (when I came in the letter brought by the mail - a cable was on it.) Opened it & it was from Verrall Markham Allerton, on Boston "Villistain. Marlborough King. Lawrence Room Adam, Bloomsbury Foster Gardens. Verrall" - It was message had been sent, at about as long as the time indicated on the breeze. They were all dainty - clear London. Quite beautiful.

Lady Lawrence

Shortly after there was nothing more spirit, along came a voice speaking French quite beautifully - saying Chère Chère. I know at once it was Lady Lawrence. I told her how glad I was to see her etc.

I then asked if she heard my speech at first - could understand it, She said it was most beautiful - but I want you to help it etc. I want you to learn French, to learn it perfectly.
So that you can address a French audience. Study French. I love it.

practice it. Wilfrid! I love it somehow in it, much you would do the same - never let me hear you say about being too old to learn. I don't like that word 'old' - just it will pass over and will be a year.

The lady fairies spoke about myself she said 'I need you Alice - I need you Alice (this might be Scotch or it might be France) - and then she recited, in English that I have never recited once

(The flowers of the forest may wither
The flowers of the forest may decay
But they come for years
It comes for ever and ever. — The last line was not quite correct. more 'will come decay.' - or something like that. it was clearly been said from memory in English or an impossible one

The lady fairies went on and said I will come for your third hand, It was not merely what you did, but the way you did it, - you were so polite, you were shocked at me, others used to shout - (I spoke of the fireworks that I asked lady fairies if the members like they are went to bed till when the lights allowed - She was given a seat in the front. She said they did that for diplomacy sake. I said it was a blossom or nut. She said they did it on account of Sir Wilfrid, the camp fire. I spoke of how many one loved work of hers - how handsome he was, She said not handsome but a clever man. I said he was the finest looking man in Canada - the first modesty of him,

I asked lady fairies how she liked the looks of the grounds She said it was looking beautiful, but the parlour in front of the house under doesn't look well after the marble. I said it was being cleaned up. (Above is all new. it looks splendid)

I asked how she liked the painting — and she said she was really pleased with it, — then she said where did you get the face I could not make out the word, I thought she must have misunderstood at first it several times, and said finally "the face on my left" I said it was some relation who loaned it. She said that was kind. I said she should know where I got the face = Mrs. She said calling was taken by her first name
I gave them as Anne (2)
She let you have them, she would let you have them because it was you, and was glad, to. And she wouldn't have let others have them
After a little silence, Laurier came = Asquith = after Lady Jeune then spoke of Sir Wilfred not being there at the time. She said he is busy — he is in the Commons, at-present. (most confidential word as was to be used with those of or one it) She said how fine Mrs. Laurier Asquith how fine Mrs.
That was the end of the morning — a little over an hour.

Afternoon April 15. 1933.
Present Miss Pollexfen Mrs Wendt & myself.

We walked some little time.
Then Mrs Wendt saw some one but a carefully marked copy Giustiniani Poems. — Speaks of Yeats's Celtic & Irish stories. Celtic & Irish stories. Celtic & Irish stories.

Joan said, do you see mother. He replied She told me to come and see you. She was thunderstruck to see me when she found I was here. How are you? Joan said crying silently, I wasn't very well either, he said I mean in health, he then turned to me and said I obey with very much your kindness Mr King is one I can only thank you. I to Joan. Here is my gift. God bless you — (Here we were crying about his name I had written down Jonathan. Her mother said Mr King was it)

Allan Gale.

In a week which was of great difficulty we got the news Allan Gale. - (Mrs Gale's son of London 19 years old, killed in war) He, asked for Mrs Hallett said he was so sad to see her, when Joan asked how he was he said he was doing better. Joan said his mother was thinking of him every day, he said I know she does. what can I do to comfort her, when asked how he was, he said he was ill with sales feet at first, but was with the other boys who had been killed & he was very very ill together, they were a wonderful set - He then began to mention the names of those who were killed & were with him he said you remember Scratchard Joan said yes & he said Malcolm Brown, Joan said yes well they are all wonderful, I will tell them all when I get back - Joan spoke about his brother Billy. He said don't be fine, then he ended up 'tell mother I love her still' (This is what mother said to tell them as an answer also another - it candlelight is the form used for evening love is ever continuing)

Then came the name Peter. we could get no more.

Peter came on Tuesday

Indian Red Story.

We heard quite loud Big Chief — (We were evidently Pete) he was evidently addressing us. or announcing himself as big chief. He spoke very good English but used a lot of Indian as well he called straight ahead. Ian Ollano Indian, How do squaw (address Dawn Pallino) Chief (addressing us) me tell you. I'll go to medicine man have been with you me heap much tell you me too much fire — heat. — skin falling (cont - not good on top of head. I tell you — take to Indian "Stella bunde-aronde". chi. (We couldn't understand — he said.)? fit a man to talk.

In a few moments came a voice Follini

Follini I said dear follini is that you, Follini Pete straight ahead — said — He said it is not good to burn the hair or the skin. It would dry up the nerves of the scalp., he didn't want to see you do that, that would bring hair to the surface and be a Dead-petrified bit. Like we read in Lamb. The heat from the artificial light would kill the roots of the hair

Then the man follini said "I want to ascertain more" —

There was silence a while then follini continued said. It would dry up the roots of the hair - the nerves - dry up the nerves at the roots of the hair he said at night before retiring take a little cool oil on the hand or dark vaseline and rub it over the head just twice a week, his hands, dark brown Lasalene on the palm - and on the hand, started off from the roots at outside of Crown of head, so that the hair would grow in towards the centre. The source of the cultivated it gives something to work from - coax it along - either coal oil or dark vaseline - the latter is best based & is good. If you notice coal miners have wonderful hair. Men who work in coal fields they rub their hands thro their hair, always using their fingers through it, you never saw a bald headed Indian - that is because they use fats. (Rub on fat or rub it on.) - I said what about your head Father, he said You entwist your hair head. I respected mine. You try it around the edges, comb other to grow. - Father said in a quiet. that the Indian was logical

Father then said. My dear Son, when I spoke of making to talk happy and see them and of his having sent others, he said they all wanted to come
- he did not like to present him. he said what did you think of brother Nelson, he said he is an enthusiastic - over soul nelson - he spoke about his political ambition, he said it was very difficult. we would have to wait for the turn of the tide. Elections might be held year & ask. this year
I spoke about Jesus. - he said he was so lovely among. with my wonderful friend. lovely Saviour feels you could do better send your consecration was very good - he ~~was~~ said.
for I was doing well - just yourself forward, let them see that you are as able as you were 30 years ago. You are up to date, with the help of God, and we will help you to carry on.
Indian returned - after a silence
No good heat or hair for hair - oil is wrong. rub gently around top where hair grows - heat burns scalp, make no good. I come to help. (he was very fine this Indian) Journey is soon he said big brave not very ~~much~~ good the in kidneys & not bad, he big heavy on feet, he moves lots, dont let him move, dont let him drink lo strong tea and coffee, not much food, he not well cared in body and he moves. You let him no move, if he is cross and scold, you no mind, let loud & him, he like kindness. he so sudden, You can do a lot for him with kindness, let him scold You laugh

I know — Your boy. he keep much better. small child better — I asked if he knew the word of his country — he said ? ollania Indian — You him on hill top — other place I call little square place he call square in bush — I said what You call my place - "big brown stay" — I asked where he lives, he said he lived in Bell. he like Bell asked name. he said "Red Sky" — You remember me food by.

two rounds
but then saw a ring — a hand with a ring on a left finger the ring was a wide band with a stone about round like a diamond — it came right up it was two rounds for Evening. April 25. 1833 about 9 o'clock in the sick room Joanna's room. Mrs Wright-herself present.

At beginning
Mrs Wright saw a bright light - between her & Joan something moving - like a cloud

Song & Verse
In a little while a voice (Mona's) came and sang very sweetly the tune seemed to begin Now in my own home. I could not follow the words. Joan said she did not know Adeste fideles something in it about Christ
After the 2nd verse there was silence
Then a little later a Mona voice again recited the Evening
Blessing of verse
The first line spoke of a great peace in Heaven today
- something about the great world
- all with the will of the Father God there would [illegible] = comfort-with regard supreme Mona shall bring you "tidings" of great joy and peace and good-will Then there came a benediction - in which were the words "Father, Son & Holy Ghost - followed by a Latin benediction - with words in Italian for "Pray for us"

Nancy
In a little while - Mother dear - It was Nancy speaking
She said that was the 3rd birthday that died in Athens that sang and prayed. He came & sang and came and blessed us all - (Said Mother Hamilton.) I think Nancy and Joe and I cannot be sure
She then said Mother dear, do you know what my colors are for tomorrow, do you know what they are going to be pink and blue and white - I am going to the with all the young people - the words is so long. So many. I am going to learn the music. I am going to play the violin -
Mother, tell Papa that I love him and bless him
Then she [illegible] the benediction. — —(sounds?)

visited me home a week last tonight – I saw you all, Father and mother and the dogs – both – She had a pet name for the dog. Rosa – (Like Pussy (a)). She then said all were well & happy – her brother's children – brother is better (Dad has been quite ill)

She then began to say the procession began at 2 o'clock. A nun corrected her, no "it" (2).

She said that was "grandpa."

She then gave kisses all round to her mother. Mrs Wright & myself & said in Irish "Love to Dada"

Mrs McCarthy

followed. – How are you tonight. Poor Sister Mary. He said she is a beautiful child, a handsome little girl, a big lady ~~that is the~~ I am so grateful to you Mrs Kenny for making this possible. So thankful – over here together on this Feast Day. He said something about Easter tomorrow, today & tomorrow. (Sat. Sun & Monday)

Father also said it was really not a service

there a great gathering, to meet all the children & the grown up people – we all together to become socially acquainted there is a great crowd. Quite wonderful little people all here their different colors, very beautiful colors and if they have been old enough before this to read over to them their little pets they have their nice new, little clothes and dolls and bunnies. The children are allowed to go into the higher spheres, they meet the great ones, the saints Jesus about Christ.

Mrs McCarthy said "Joseph of Nazareth the King of the Jews is one of the great figures in this reception – all the Apostles all the ancient order of the great. Even the children, but not the older ones – they are not in our sphere into this world. and if a child dies at the age of one & it goes at once into the 7th realm, which is within the Ether sphere, and all grow up and so on, progressing & but do not see others until —

I asked about the Resurrection.

but Mr. Winchell said, it is not as you understand it, we have found out a great deal since we came over here — as you die - or 7 die - our spirit bodies are in another sphere — must die —

Sir Wilfred

I am very happy to see you. Mrs Fallon - mrs winchell, or Miss Gosden or Mrs Fallon how are you and your family something about more particulars

I want to tell you "we have no religion on this plane of life - religion is formulated by the minds of men, it is a creation, people talk about being taken out of hell, and there being no redemption, a cardinal sin, a death sin, a venial sin - all of these are mythical.

We have to learn from higher teachings. religion is bad we must believe in something, we aspire and look for higher perfection; ~~we look above~~.

I want to tell you on behalf of my dear wife, She was so pleased to have her talk with you

After Gosden, ~~my~~ the divine powers, will guide & help you now through these struggling times — — —

~~with~~ something about "carry the burden"

I am called over the face you have taken up a — — & forget the beauty & the grandeur. Never mind those who are back of (you? at) present, they will commune with you, commune with our work. I want you to keep in the minds of the people, let them feel your importance is significant

I will guide you with my eyes here he said then said. there is a man here he looks like a cabaret waiter, he is doing something, like a table with a mirror, he is doing something with a bench on the ~~floor~~ cabins has a rule and is marking down - rackets & cinders, now grey hair, he is leaving over - now he is fading away.

Blackford
In a few moments, do you know any one Blanche then came the word Blatchford - Toronto
I said boots and shoes, he said yes. I said how did you come here (then must have been the cabaret waiter about a shave man taking measurements, getting down shoes, leaving me in) he said I have your brother. he called about you some years ago, he told me to go see my brother. I said I how you would not know me. your brother he said I can see exactly know the boot & shoe man
I am so grateful to see you on the eve of the great new Gordie ride - I must congratulate you on the good work, you have done what you have done for the good of this town - then something about step into heavens open before very long - ended up by saying "good night ladies"

Bella
In a very white in a sweet voice I heard my dear brother, & how are you dear. & was terrible - poor: I said we have been looking for you. Bella said brother: I have been dere but we wanted to let our friends come & let the important ones go. I said to Bella we always wanted her I asked Bella about Gordie she said it began all day & will continue tomorrow and monday - there are so many things here you could believe the number. it is hard to tell them into line - all have colors - as they shoot away into the distance they look like a rainbow

I asked Bella about her colors once. She said she would not know till Sunday (Easter Sunday, will tell you Have a good - Nancy has beautiful colors, the white is so beautiful, a lovely white - Spirit and blue mother's colors will be shades of maroon, blending with white
I asked if Bella remembered any associations with Easter. She said yes, always at the Church - with mother always at the Church - I then kept asking about other associations and she said something about her illness, & I said yes. She said about the sunset - I decided to leave on - I said it was on Easter Sunday & she said yes but - it was in the evening about 6 o'clock, ~~I~~ (this is exactly true!) I asked what did it was like. She said I felt as if I were floating in the air
I asked if she remembered Jesus ~~reading~~ having risen & then and she said yes Father & mother were there - said something (I think) about waiting for Father - she said I felt as if I were drifting I said you said 'you felt your savior's arms about you' Bella said it was grandmama her Father. She was bearing me up - or there to take me up (mother's mother grandmother was a Mr Father) She said I was aware of this phenomena at the time. I felt some one lifting me up in the air - I had no idea it could be so beautiful so beautiful & she - I said I was away with you in Heaven for I said you when you came home You were so sorry not to know when were with me at the time.
I told Bella of having felt a strange sensation as I placed flowers on her & knelt down beside the coffin (It was as if I had been crowned in glory & it suddenly loosened) She said it was grandmother pulled you on the shoulder
Bella then said I thank you for your long visit
Then she spoke to Joan of Nancy - She said she is a darling. She reminds her of you — I said she was very like & loved her

Gregory knew much & loved her. & she said something about how they all bored of each other which you call "a close handsome family"

Joseph

& with that I rose & called out quite loudly Joseph
He called very fast & loud in French. - Something about Boismont - it sounded like & sort 'comment voici but more of us could understand - in a little time he vanished

Pat came to the door, & scrolled. he had been ordered began & made a determined effort to get in - & I opened the door shut it in the light - a little - Pat bounded over the threshold - in 1st. nothing further -

we then adjourned to the library. and a few min & I of bent wine & a little later went into the small room & voices almost immediately said 'Joan'
how are you tonight - & then about Henry an uncle Aunt Sarah's husband (Joan had asked about Aunt Sarah - Cathy's aunt - & Joan had come out - him
Joan asked for me & he said "he are very comfortable together". - The voice was difficult to understand however was made.

About [illegible] Joan had some light - like a column or pillar — but we could get nothing more - the moon after 11 & all was pitch black.

Easter Sunday morning
April 16. 1933.
Mrs Wendt and myself
about 10. 30 - 11. 30.

Mother

My dear Son. — God bless my son. I said dear Mother as has blessed me in you, — ~~the effects of~~ I said this was what I wished for most on Easter morning. Isn't it lovely, our being together today. Mother then said "I want to tell you before I forget it. We were all so happy to see you yesterday we have been having a most glorious reception — the children are marching now, the colors are perfectly wonderful — the children are coming under a beautiful arch, they keep coming on up to a mature old, the older people take (or other) — the sight is so beautiful stretching away off into the distance
I asked Mother what her colors were and she said mauve and white — beautiful mauve and white. I said there used to be the colors for more, Mother said yes, but there are so much more beautiful. They are so much brighter — we get our colors from the flowers, — they give us our colors.

here we all are, the Jenny Forbes, the Mark Forbes, all of my folks — we are having wonderful days — there is no night here — and I said and so again, Mother said and so again. She ~~then~~ said, I look as if I were at the age of 50. Isn't so then she said still is beautiful — I asked if she remembered the Easter Sunday she crossed over —she said indeed ~~she~~ she did "Good girl." As we ~~talked~~ found to our last night ~~of~~ yesterday I did not. Then God had rewarded me greatly

~~for~~ in her bearing out on such an occasion "God rewarded her bearing out on such an occasion – Mother said something about it being a day of gloom then – but understood when we understood it is so different

– Then Mother told me last night that it was grandmother her birthday she had been with her. at the time of mommy the birthday – we call them all grandmothers as they were back. I said of Kingston. She said yes. – Mother said she was very grandmother –

She then said all of our family are together. It is quite wonderful. I said how is Mary. She said Mary is such a good boy, She then said to turn warm and to utter tones then all so clearly. – Mother then said I must go now and see the rest of the performance"

Mother voice was perfectly sweet & clear and recognizable in a way clearer than ever before there was a great peace.

~~Then~~ Father

In a few moments later. I heard "My dear Son" in most affectionate way – I said how glad I was to see him this morning. He said something about the day, and added it is more than a pleasure, it is more than a delight words cannot express what I must say, that we should have all been with you in a reunion on this day. – he spoke of love, and happiness and contentment, as expressing what they were sharing

– Then to turn warm – How are you feeling turn warmth
the system of carrying the assistance, it is fully restored
Thanks to your "benevolent Son" Father said I am certainly glad to know you think Mike and I do for that.
I said something about it being true.

I said Father do you remember St Andrews Church at Rodi
– he said something about the music – a day of music then he meant to say this is our feast – by feast I mean a meeting of the class, meeting of those we love the most, those who are dearest to us, a great gathering of all together to hear Peter's message, the reason I brought us together others I felt to bring them that you are all looking for - and I like the friends to have a chance to speak with Jesus (or something like that)

Then Father said I cannot tell you how glad I am that you have the courage of your convictions. something about speaking out my beliefs - to see you do so boldly before the world, to proclaim - I said I would be able to do so better as a result of this calling he said "with or without" this calling. You have the ability" You will do better + better (or words to this effect) to (some one. You are sure of it even Father at this time said something of Bennett speaking out - it was the Fulford

Amelia Fulford

A strong clear voice said "Hello" I said is that Mr Short the voice replied no this is Fulford - How are you this morning. + Peter also Mrs Wendt. I want to congratulate you on such an occasion - being something together on such a day. Then to me, How is the world using you - something about "Big Jim"

Then said to Mrs Fulford that Mrs Fulford was well. Morgan herald the Quake had shaken her up a bit. I said I was going to send her a telegram today, and he said she would be delighted - he then asked if I would send a message from him, he said "just say a word and she will understand" just say "much love to my Mary" - You understand, You will know how to put it. She will know it is from me

Then "How is Mrs Wendt" - You are very thin - must be careful

I must close now dear will Thought. Good is doing better and believing himself' it is his associates. a word from you will do him good a word from you sounds well in his ear'

A word from you goes a long way – keep an eye on him, I bromised I would. Mrs Fulford then referred again to the message to Mrs Fulford "Goodbye Dorothy, love to Mary from George"
Mrs Fulford then said, I hope to see you on the 8th or 10th or 12th I said. "They are in France today, whether he is not here tomorrow
how can I think of him –
I said – do you see all parts of this world. Mrs Fulford said It is extraordinary – we can do anywhere, we have to move about to do it (or words to that effect)
He then referred to his own death at – any early age. He said I was quite young – had not expected it then something about 'that my part in life' preserving a pure to this world. He said we live in our own atmosphere" (or if you have your atmosphere so we have ours). We see everything. I see what you have done for your self more than any other person. I said Sir Wilfrid had begun it. I was just following on – he said no other person had done what Sir Wilfrid had, I said I was trying to follow in his footsteps. Mrs Fulford said "Don't be shy. You must do things to be helpful – it must be hard enough. I said his way was such that I did not want to criticise it.
Mrs Fulford said "I am not guessing him as an angel" to read of things put in your way, or any trouble
"check it over", not "knock it over", don't let any thing stand in the way. Good luck. Cheer up. – I said I was so glad he knew I was anxious – feelings. Mrs Fulford said " We can't talk along without the things" – had some other reference. Then "bye bye".

The Minister finished a letter – from Yarmouth
Then came the Medium again – Standing first Head & Chest (I notice before the Medium comes there is usually a little commotion)

Red Sky

In a few moments there was an Indian greeting
I said to him you Red Sky - He said Red Cloud and Red Sky
Are Chief and my Squaw, I am Red Sky. She is Red Cloud.
I will call you my big Chief. I don't want it make any bad ~~~~ talk between you and the Doctor. Let me tell you it is a curry - heat is not good for hair. I am told it was good for the body - he then turned to some one who was ~~~~ speaking his own words. And then he said, it could do - not help the muscles. This made the word but it is too artificial - this ~~~~ hardness of the arteries - not very good. I come to tell you it stops but a little oil on the roots of the hair, around the edges - you do that for me - here in front, a little good oil, will strengthen the roots. I asked what it was that was ~~~~ helping him with words or to speak or say, he said "the doctor will look care of your mother" I said when will he come - he said yes. I said Dr Bingham, he said no. He said the doctor will the thickers. He will come and tell you when he is I spoke again before he went, and said what was not good for hair how about the body, he replied, Cod-liver oil for bones, for the muscles. It is too artificial. I said, - don't do anything artificial, exercise "Inside around" I shake yourself - limbs and the arms, limbs. "athletics Needs", he found it hard to say the word athletics but he'll do it. - The Doctor prompted him to say the word. He said, I will show you. like this, but we said we could see. - he then indicated the exercise. I had been using before. He said let go hard, hands - (this also found hall)
"Good bye"

Dr Bonbly.

A week or so ago William King is next door, he [illegible] came it was hard to get. Sounded like Dr Coleman. finally said Dr Bonbly and he said Yes. I said you brought me into the world and he said "I certainly did". I said were you prompting the Indian? & Dr Bonbly said I was telling him what to tell you - about make use of anything artificial. Correct relax by artificial means, my advice is to take exercise when you feel sleeplessness of after a bath, before you dress use a little physical exercise I did this when I was out night after night - then one every & much till after midnight - and take exercise at night time I said Doctor do you know the time I was born, he said it was sometime after midnight. I said it was on the 17th December, he enquired the date. I said he could not say the day of the month it was between 2 and 3 o'clock nearer 3 o'clock. He said father was not in the room at the time he was away, he was delighted when he returned and found it was a boy - it was between 2 and 3 (This was only about 7 hours) I think mother or father say, that father was at a political meeting in Swinwood - it was a dinner that would take several hours then with some thought he had gone to address the meeting. when I think result of the Reform Association. When he came home he said, "now wife never know how happy I am to find a little man in my home" he said we had a great laugh together (Clair Jeffrey told the father sent a telegram to Mrs Hindley, aunt: [illegible] about expect the morning telling of my arrival - all this helps to fix up the [illegible]

I said to Dr Bonbly mother told me I was born with a caul on my head. The doctor replied "You were born with a veil

"on your face" I took it off the right way. The right way to take off a veil is to take it from the chin and lift-it towards the forehead - it lifts you up in the world towards God. If you take it from the forehead down it must work for misery, or deliberately, the only way is to raise it from the chin up to the forehead and that is to raised it up in the sight of God.

(Here the conversation ended - and here would then begin to say there is symbols in everything - everything has significance - well as all that things by counsin Laura in Montgomery knew in connection he was born with a veil & it was taken off from the forehead down. he is the most clairvoyant in the city, as soon as he gets anything to pass through it, - he can do anything with him.)

In a few moments later there came again a tapping on the door. like the playing of a time until the tips of the fingers - it was either a knife or another telegraph message. Mrs Wright said you will get a telegram. Of this was not in the rare occurrence, so if you cannot it will take in its significance)

Mr Sharp. Mr Sharp came with strong clear Scotch voice & said I am glad to congratulate you on your good health & success on this Scotch tour. We said, all you feeling better. I said yes & spoke of the splendid reception we were getting this morning - Mr Sharp said "My dear Sir, let me tell you something. There is nothing like your own influence, there is nothing like your own condition, it brings more and are any near to you. It means it more than conversion. He said in the séances where there are a number there is then a confusion - conflicting - in he said I want to say "we gather the forces from the sitters - the magnetic rays - the ether - and the accumulation of ~~the~~ others we condense to bear the voice of the ones beyond - it is like a radio this is a spiritual radio - a radio from sounds from afar - (all the radio - something of a comparison of the radio in how much sounds that are near -) with the ether vibrations we seek to penetrate - what are we do is to carry on what has been handed down - as it was done when we worked in the box -

I asked if he thought it would be impossible for us to get into touch with those who were interested in establishing communication - with William James. or anyone in some others (I meant Jacques in. | Dr Hyslop said some of the spirits. I like to know those you know your own friends and admirers then Dr Hyslop said, - after a pause - as tho' seeing some one coming. I will be back again.

Then Sir John A. Macdonald

then a voice very clear and distinct

Is that Jan King - Macdonald -

I want to thank you for what you have done for the one I love so much, the one who holds you in such love and esteem, "the boy I loved and did for". I want to thank you, I asked if he meant Joseph Cohen in Winnipeg he said NO NO. I want to thank you for what you have done for Wilfred, for under the boy I love. I taught him, he is the one I loved, the one I did for & I helped and I must be reckoned for you, for the marvellous way you helped him - the love, I must do what I can for you "for our Lord" "for our Lord"; there is a lot we can do --. The boy - I said you mean Sir Wilfrid & he said "as a boy I loved" - I said you understand or words to that effect. I said is that very significant? & he said perfectly. He saw the hands & saw him and the footmarks (if you know anything you understand) - She loved us, and -- brothers hated him and declared that him - He lived in the family I said did you see his brothers. Sir John said, he did not have any brothers, there was no one but him and his mother. He was placed in the home, and brought up there If you know anything, you must see what he was to them in love and disposition. I am going to show you what you did for him, there are not many things can do. but I will be glad I am able enough to help

(His words were w. reminded Second sad - & me & was very earnest.)

Bella

After a little silence

Everything quiet - still - everything is all glory It is wonderful, I just stepped away and I am going back to the procession, we are going slow now until after one o'clock - from 12 until one. - I found Bella what her colors were, the boy Royal blue and gold and white - She then repeated about going back - & as she went she said "home from mother".

Her voice was very sweet. very quiet altogether full of a infinite loneliness.

Ascension April 16. 1833
Mrs Wendt - Joan
at 3.

Joan alone

Mrs Wallace - was speaking about Godfrey. was sorry for poor Godfrey, and regarding our marriage. to-said he hoped Godfrey did not hold any thing against him, that he had been too harsh, he had not meant it. he grieved at his conduct to us, and seemed anxious Joan should make closer friends he loved him. Joan spoke to Godfrey. Godfrey said they soon forget. yes yes they forget - he said he hoped of Joan was confident. Joan said Lucia he replied they will again, there will be another said they could compete. visions can't continue the depression may hold them in certain. Confident he must about Godfrey being better. - Spoke of loving his losses. Joan asked about keyes. saw him one evening he was often fellow. on all about him. he is working among Soldiers - miles in mrs was speaking of the colors she had her evening from after dressing been here in the morning, of the roses given us the day prior on the card she could speak to "all those in Spirit" - or else - card and you told Joan that she loved her, - Joan spoke of how they to help each other: - Mrs Wallace was her power - Godfrey - Mrs Wallace was Godly - manifest flowers blooming now - was perfume (colours mind and body (declared by Joan.

Mrs Wallace

Mrs Wallace. - Spirit is always near Godfrey
Joan a friend with Joan (Alice and Mrs Wallace. - Spirit is with Godfrey - was good to was. asked if she was well. Yes - as one need take was rested now - Spoke of London - Woodstock lodge at Woodstock (loved woodstock) - was with Joan in Alice every day

Mrs Mrs Benson. (Hamborough)
a voice sounded like Annie Frances Came to the aunt Benson. — a deaf person to say the name. Mrs Pallenois sisters. (Mrs Benson) wanted to know of Godfrey Joan & Jack. said she was not a real mistress for her. asked how did Jan come to know about his business. Joan sad from Mr King. She said very strong ) mental — no sound. — saw name Cookman.
saw name Peeley — no other medicalmen (day cloudy out of doors. rain. became clear conditions not good.)

Easter Sunday Night
April 16. 1933
Mrs Wright. Joan & myself.

first seen a light across Joan's knees.
— We were walking. & speaking about this will coming when a voice said very gently "be patient. be patient"

Alexander Dixon (of the Norwich Union) Toronto

a voice Mrs Dixon of Toronto
Joan asked if we heard a Mr Godfrey [to school in England], he said Yes.
I am glad to see you
"the peace of the wonderful day" when we come together today we come to gather the lost ones to gather the loved ones to gather the forgotten ones bringing them all into contact
Speaking to me Mrs Alexander said
I knew your grandfather - who had married Carrie and Abel some years ago in Toronto, he is a great prophet, he is trying to make you have the spirit of fight - he was a great fighter for justice. right. and honour he was after of Godfrey. Give him my best regards but here that I must have to build up letters that happiness is for us all the will of God is the power of the world this is a wonderful world, there is something [terrific] in the world, it is a gigantic power, the power of man is this great hemisphere. man calls it the maker of art.
the maker of music
the maker of love
the maker of makers (?) and also as destroy and also can it a magnificent way inspire this struggle we are passing through - tell Godfrey he must fight out. there is a cost for him; that there is nothing for him to worry about ---
Mrs Ichelf — the voice was feeble - said something about being a worthy man, (we could not think.. it may have been a former editor of the Toronto Free Press)

Redskin - Indian

You let me tell you what to do - You will do it.
I said I had just had time as yet - I said I will do it Yes.
Rub on your head - You said "ointment" he said yes ointment. He has just sores in his head - head is not for the head - keep the roots nourished. You do what I tell you. Don't wash it every day - people wash their heads too much, people put soap & water on their heads, don't brush & comb it - don't mind matter, work every two weeks, try not to work at (Broadway or 23rd) try & do the right thing - the head is not. dirty. I said that could I do if I didn't wash my head - "make up for it some other way" he said wash feet - make up for it - Goodbye.

Something moving — a heavy set man - in front of me, has a habit of putting thumb in his pants pocket; has round face - smooth shaven (before lost a month
I asked if it were gallic -) ^ less wrinkles - he has dark hair & clothes, and how is - I said Sir Henry Norman Sir Henry Norman Soon a voice came Norman - I asked how he was, he said very well - comfortable - and how are the ladies
I introduced him & Joan & he said it was some time ago he met her. I said I had had a nice letter from Lady Norman he said she would, but were all very fond of you. I asked what he was doing. Sir Henry replied that is a difficult question to answer, there is so much to be done - so difficult & adjust matters. Don't see what is going to happen - Russia - trouble all round
I asked if he remembered what we were concerned with, he said
You know how much I am interested in. I feel sure that happens is right. (will turn out right) we want to get Government out of it. We are doing it, we will win the day
Sir Henry then said how does the President treat you?
I said like Roosevelt - he said yes. I said did you see him - he replied 'a fortnight at ..' (he soon recovered from the shock of his death) - the other spoke said in reference to something 'don't be afraid' I shall help you and I shall be stronger than I ever was before,' in the darling - I asked him again if he recalled what we were concerned with - and he said - it it was a difficult word to pronounce - I could hear the three syllables which he repeated three times, at last it was just clear 'the transcendental' - he said now is the grand work I need they on at work on the bird, they are offering numbers for 5 or 6 years. he said let it be 7. I said that was a long time he said it will be help - so help, help me - "it is a good book. out" - he doesn't remember - then since the auto-mobile came out; caused confetti (or something like that) began to rain to the coast - then he said this is a wonderful world. a man clings to the earth, they say he is earth bound that is all nonsense, it is for the betterment of our country - to help humanity - we can look after humanity I asked how his mother was, & did he see her. he said her mother is with Christ up in this sort of thing, she is in another sphere - but I see her every day.

(this interview supplied information to the effect that his mother was 'scarcely adjusted' & clinging was 'earth bound' it is characteristic of the man in his optimism. ch.! he was clinging to earth because he felt it to help humanity)

poor poor little sparks, like periflies
the transport rallied a little on the floor

Rabelais - then more after in French very clearly, sympathetic voice said something about Gargantua, and loved the sound of the name of my house "maison de Gargantua. I was very very sad to be able to translate but it was impossible. he thanked poor for the way she spoke them in French and ended up "au revoir" he was here quite a time

Senator Walsh

Next to be heard Walsh, I said is that Jan Senator, he said Yes. I thought I would have a crack at the Irish with Jan before we came both over our conversation with Jan and Honoured to be in this circle and in this house, honoured exceedingly Jan can never know I appreciate it. I spoke of him having his house & he said Exactly, he said there were some changes. he missed some of the old associations (I am not sure if I had the Senator here more than once - I think it was only once, but I am certain it was at least once)

I spoke of there having been happenings since we last spoke (I wanted to see what he said say in reply) he said "She is over there it is a great relief. I spoke about seeing Mrs Walsh & thinking she looked well. the Senator said she is becoming quite reconciled becoming more reconciled, there is no need of concerning over her loss. we come in and go out - we don't like it spirit of our dead

— the more I spoke of things looking quite bad I cry and cry. Walsh any change in the money, don't go on the Senate Standard keep to the Gold Standard (if you can)

Bennett would like to get out — there are cheques & Jan must in Jan back again - Jan know my sentiments.

I asked if he saw Oliver, that he had passed over, he said I have seen him, but not been talking to him, Jan know they are more there than ever friends & relations they go & forth.

the spirit of Colonel Hackett having come over (I doubt him. I spoke of his Dominic Mc Mullen - he asked if it were heart trouble he then said this place don't look natural - don't seem just natural, I explained we were in a sort of box there. he spoke of taking the remains of those poor things - old associations rooms different

— Good-night.

Florence Ollerenshaw

In a few minutes I heard a woman's voice, announcing herself. I could tell the name Ollerenshaw - (the Scientist's daughter who died since our last call) I said is that you Florence. She said yes - Hastily Evelyn then went on to say, [illegible] she thought it would. She said her father had brought her (or brought your father) to see a great admiration for you I asked if she remembered my seeing her in London: wondering how she said yes indeed. She said she felt badly at her father having to leave us alone. I said there was trouble in the Near East, Florence said a country is just anything like Palestine there were some words before parting about our meeting her Father's change & wish for the victory

Susan Pallerson - the voice said poor dear, this is Susan. Pallerson - spoke of being very well - Joan said something about just knowing she'd see us - asked if her husband was with her she said he was then she says " I am so grateful of you to come and see us - Joan asked if her mother was with her - She replied she was and sends her love" She spoke again about being grateful Something was said about her death being a shock - Joan asked if she were 'Sally'. She said some call me Sally Susan, some call me Sally. I love the name Susan Good-bye - Give my love to Godfrey

(There was considerable confusion here - as Joan thought there were two persons being confused - as Susan Pallerson, husband to death in New York - must be husband & relation of Godfreys in England - we were discussing it. I was a little put-out at Joan's not listening. but - saying "must tell I think" she felt it somehow among the communicating & the one speaking & a seeming lack of sympathy - to upset me just a little - I know it was only manner & certain selfish reserve & honesty of mind which won't even know where it can see things)

Mr Harb

Mr Harb then came and in a clear robust voice said
I am glad to see you tonight. The lady who was speaking knows about your family - they are all related. Indeed she knows a very great deal about - she knows all the family. We all know all our relations a long way back & a long way forward. - We speak about - many of them love to come, they love to do things for each other, all are trying to do the will of God
I asked Mr Harb if I might ask him some questions - he said yes do. I said where you are "are we known as we are" or as we appear - he replied to this, by saying something about known as we have been - with in the flesh but the individuality - this is the real life, the life beyond the grave - the mundane sphere - - - selection is made - great many persons are forced by this ~~wrong~~ to leave - make people believe what they think right - here (on the mundane sphere) there are animals only of a higher kind & educational standing. This is a school to prepare us for a better condition hereafter. What we do that is not harming other people is not sinful. It is the law of Nature - do you understand?
then I must come again
Shortly Mr Harb returned - was speaking about education
This is true even of animals. Even animals - all animals has a sense - a language of their own. Bees have a sense that being ~~is~~ has a sense of feeling and of speech every person has a sense
Nothing is sinful if you do not abuse it
The worst crime that can be committed is to take advantage of children, that is the sin that is not-forgiven. Cruelties are certain perpetrating - There is a dreadful punishment for him all across that sphere of remorse, remorse that is worse than punishment on this earth - it is so long that - he must meet with the person whom he has wronged
If we abuse ~~children~~ children it is not sinful - There are the Southsea day sights –

April 16. – Second sitting Sun room
Mrs. Churchill – Joan & Self

Andrew Croydon

We went into the sun room – all dark – had hardly been seated before a voice came, it was a little hand to make out at first; we then heard the word, "Croydon", and then he had greeted him he said "How do you do ladies. – Then he said of his own "Mrs Pallion how do you do. – This is very remarkable. I don't understand them laws, [illegible] Then he said How glad I am seeing your face – Joan said she felt some one grab her foot; and lightly – then there was a sound of some one [illegible] (when Joan & I went to call. Shortly before Andrew died Joan buried him on his birthday anniversary – this was done as a clear evidence to recall the occasion.

A little later on came a wheeled chair – there was a tall slender old man smooth face, deep sunken eyes. a plaid shawl over his legs – alone.

Senator Walsh

Senator come back & said he had come [illegible] any thing of this to my wife – there are things that you are taking down they are for yourself. not to be seen – hello not let any one know. I told the Senator I had met Mrs Mrs Walsh before & moved out. & thanked him

Whistling – a song was to be offered

Soon we heard some one whistling "It is a song was a robbery. – went through the whole of it, and after finishing the verses, sang over the two verses,

We said here are one of the boys who were overseas

Malcolm Brenar – the lad gave his name, it was hard to catch at first, the we got his words, finally we asked where from London – yes – then we got Brenar. then Joan asked if it were Malcolm Brenar and he said Yes. Joan said how glad she was to see him and asked if he had seen Alan Colin, he replied Yes, that he had come at Alans request he told us Jan were here" "Mrs is ~~unwell~~ – Yes I know. Joan asked how he was he said 'Jam get fine' I am as happy as can be. he then said "How is Jack" glad he is doing something am glad he got back all right I the boy was in Jack Valerius regiment & with him: Allan Colin – he ~~was~~ were a happy lot – he had a rough time of it. we all left with a heavy heart. Joan asked if he remembered the soldiers at their house before they left. he said Yes we were all happy we all said 'Cheris' but it was hearts we were heavy and sad – Joan said you dont want any more war – he replied "Jan heh". "How is our Valerian?" Joan told him he was well – asked how his sister was (his sister was Lady Beth –) he replied "Sister is in a higher sphere. I am with the Dominie. Joan said poor Boy, he said no, I am not sorry – we are all happy. Cheerio Cheris. (and he ~~marched~~ bowing away)

Lowrey – (a name like this appeared) (probably Lindsey)

Something moving –
There is a beard here with a Malich – It is a good sign
Malich and a chain – a heavy gold ~~chain~~ Malich

(I think this might be some Jews from Pilate of his I recall Shylock Lindsey it comes in some way)

Mrs Wm McIlroy

We heard called a second voice very gentle - sweet in a delightfully broad way. Said something about being so well to us all, we have had a delightful Sunday School Sabbath I helped on till I got the name - McIlroy. I asked if it were Mother's ancestor. old Mrs McIlroy, My mother's grandfather and he said yes, he said we are all here together, a word of kindness one to the other, to extend our privileges - help one to the other - he said he did not know (This was description of the Saviour!) as all this was new to him, he belonged a long way out the west. My heart to (Meet in mother) Then he said dear Grace this one we loved She was here She loved in She is a lovely soul - Then he said something about loving kindness - and a guide and a protector ended up with the words "Uncle made a race" There was great reverence - great belief - fine quality in the old gentleman's voice - a very lovely and beautiful character.

Miss McCharles

A voice said

Poor dear - Mother. I just came to tell you what a lovely day we have had. We had such a happy Sunday School and Nancy & Grandmother were here when you came over You will have a great many to welcome you. Nan is Godfrey. Be kind to him he will help you can. Stay with Godfrey I can't say more - Poor said Mother would let others help her. Miss McCharles said I always would do everything myself - She would wait on me - Poor Mother always remembering her happy day. She said she dies I love Jesus - Nancy came & spoke of the lovely day I must I could have something for you - Poor beautiful day "Tell father but tell Jesus I love to hear" Nancy went Mother, She was fond of both Grandmothers

I loved Nancy & She played the Victim - She said She was not in the Funeral classes today - They had Personals were flowing - & they had loved Mrs would have her "service" Lord. - Good night - Mother dear - bless - keep to the very [illegible] my God.

April 17. 1933.
Mrs Wrecht - Kelf
10 to 11.

Before light turned out, heard a voice at moment of twilight after light " " " some vote again.
In a moment came word - Mrs. - Heard it said you may be said yes. ~~was delighted~~ and bow on you. - Passed him of himself - he said "wonderfully well"
"And how is the madam" - Mrs Wrecht says. She is very well, how could she be otherwise when with you brother Mrs says he is the fellow to make people well, he makes all people well.
I said I want work about Mrs Wrecht condition. She spoke of pain between her shoulders & across to the chest. Mrs said that is "blocked heart", as you grow stronger that will disappear. remember there is nothing organically wrong, don't worry, concern yourself, do not be afraid of it, there is no need to worry. Of course of is against you. You are falling on in years, but you may "pull along"
Then morning is to be said - now a word about the treat
- ments, for special treatment is better than most says;
there are "goddess" things, they dry up the tissues
by special culture, morning exercises. - Put a cent oil on your hair, it will prevent you losing what you have, the scalp needs to be nourished, it does need heat, keep what hair you have (of); that is the best method. the scalp is too dry. I never knocked much about these things, mentioning, it but a small part of what you have is best - - I see you every day we then began to speak of conditions - and said conditions were improving for me, things are on the rapid edge.
May could help you out

I asked him do you come to me in dreams. He said his are not dreams they are visions. I do give them to you. I asked if I interpreted them aright, he said you come pretty close to them, he pronounced that he would send me more.

"Little Worthie is not as happy as can be, she is all the time with you or so much that I am to her that she thinks she sees the moon - I said I was sure she did, and she could not be here too much.

Things are much more in your favour, the political situation is turning your way, people are beginning to know you again and all they were mistaken - we are going to win (?) I am glad not a politician but I can see their ways and will help. I am glad Laurier is such a good friend he is loyal to you - Ole he is so loyal to you and will help you all he can

I said the boys are getting along well. - they said I was going to speak of them, for they are doing well. - they are going to make good men. I said they had thought of sending for them to Montreal or Toronto. Max said it would be a big expense for her, don't you encourage anything of the kind or count the idea, - I said he is doing well where he is, they will be good men, how can they help here be with so many Nazis behind them (= anti-Semitic Hitlerite etc.) he laughed - said but I think after it would not be wise to do it, a big expense. don't you encourage it,

I said not. they think of the hundred years voice speaking to her on the anniversary of your death - he said I am glad to know that, I speak to her every day. I am sorry for her - I said she seems well. he said yes, but she is lonesome. I feel sorry for any one who is lonesome. I said the women a-

Toronto in the summer. sh. he said yes I know and I am grateful to you for making it possible for me

I then said now you know about this conflict of flesh and spirit, tell us about that — he said yes. It is this way man is human, it is the loss of the animal nature, you cannot run away too far from the natural instinct is natural is all right if it is not carried too far or overreaching. Some people do. The best way to get away from it is don't practice the thought, nature re-gulates itself, without self the mind not to very far. as long as people don't think or cultivate the thought there would be much trouble — laws of nature is there, we must not try to over control — it is not sinful or must-ful — some abuse, they must of nothing else, they make it the center of their thoughts. — enough is enough

will see you again

I said before you go keep tell us about your work, you are in the hospitals, he said yes I work in the hospitals I try to help the young students, one can't do much with the patients, they are subject to certain condition, I can help the students to concentrate, can help them to dis-cover things etc and what to do.

Sir Wilfred

Good morning. I could not catch what it was and the boy said ~~what~~ I was on a journey of discovery yesterday - I said oh it's Sir Wilfred - he said yes. I said you went to see the service - he said yes it was a beautiful service - but the service is not satisfying - we see what we are looking for - men don't like commonplace. There is too much entertainment (or something like this - extras -) in our Religion - when Christ was on earth he was simple he ought to be the same today. In our services a day there is too much money, time we have become too idle in beautify we do not allow ourselves to feel a sacred presence of God - Christ had no flowers, or Lord or Silence he wore a simple robe, gracefully around him in a simple way, and he went about quietly. There was no Church to worship - (This was particularly beautiful as Sir Wilfred spoke I could see the figure of Christ clothed in a white robe moving in the sunshine among the hills & plains. simple & beautiful - Sir Wilfred's utterance was a protest against bowing up an idol which we call a morning or Supreme beauty, instead of the presence of God.

I next said to Sir Wilfred. I had a talk with Sir H. yesterday, a very good talk - Sir Wilfred said "my right hand" then in a whisper, low but unforgettable "my father" - he repeated it again coming near to me "my father". I said did you know that, Sir W. said Yes. Quite unfalteringly, he said I knew from things he said, and did for me, and from what he sent to my brother" (I believe it was what he sent to my brother) then he came close to my ear - so near we could not - near, and said "my name is Macdonald" - repeated it ~~my~~ Macdonald is my name. He said look at the portraits of me all of us and

You will see there is the strong resemblance - Sir Hugh all said very clearly & impressively and with deep conviction. Sir Wilfrid then began to speak of me and said he owed me a great debt of gratitude - that I had been so loyal and so true to him. I said it had been the greatest pride of my life to have shared his friendship - he said I never changed your colours. You helped me so much, I feel I should have done more for you. I said Sir Wilfrid how could you honestly have, you took me into your cabinet, into your home. & he said my dear boy, he said, I loved you - and you were so accommodating to my dear wife. Let me say

~~There is too much else that I must say to you~~ ~~(illegible)~~

let me end I will help you all I can - I shall be (my best) the proudest boy & honour it was to be known as his friend & body servant

Be contented All is yours, Remember - all to be taken care of according to your wishes. I don't want you to add anything more, but when you come & part with what you have it is all your disposal

I shall seek to help you. Like what I can for you No man ever knew a woman more than I do my wife. I want you to know this. I want so much for our good old sake of the Commencement - to prove

Stand out and fight - fighting for the right & wrong be man. You will carry on. seek my help, always share

My wife says - if he would only speak French, they would take him home for you as they did years ago.. or when speaking in another man's language appeals to his soul - trust yourself, don't be afraid to have human things in - go out among the labouring men be one with the labouring men, go and live them where you stand go among them - after a while he the telephone was talked again.

Andrew Hayden

Then a voice said, I was here to see you yesterday. You were not quite satisfied with my way of talking to you I felt I did not want to keep others away by keeping it to talk about politics. after trying many times I left the house. I left it at last as they do. - the man said I did not want to take up the time from other people - I said Andrew where you kind to see here Valerie, did you like to touch her. he said yes. She is a splendid person. I said I had seen his wife and told her about our talk, I supposed I had better not speak of him, he said no it was better not, she was afraid in a way - in a way she is fearful of it. She might be injured by, and make late a wrong step She might in talking say "her king told me something very curious" you want to be very careful - it would come do to the ears against you.

I then said what do you think about her Darryl all.

Andrew said. Just as you felt - you made no mistake in your estimate of him - he is very jealous of you - he said he dont like so many to court you. Why he should want he should be the only one I dont see. Or why you shouldn't have your freedom. to take you like. he said he is "tricky": I said he likes money. - Andrew said that is what he is for, or something like that - very fond of money.

I said that you heard Kenyon is in trouble - he said no, I hadn't heard. I told him what it was, he said well you say nothing about it, keep your own counsel - be a diplomat as you always were, that is the word if anyone says anything. You know what he said about you. I said no. - what was it. he said when you were in difficulty, he said he was glad you are out. and hoped to God you would never get anywhere.

~~He said~~ I said well he seems to be mixed up in things and to have taken advantage of knowledge he had or Commons Andrew said well they can't say that about you. You had clean hands - he said something about legitimate word ~~- murder~~ Brigitta has got his head in a mood let him get it out himself. Don't you say anything "mum" is the word if they speak to you.

Bennett is trying to ~~get~~ some place - or somehow, he is afraid of his step, he is begining to see he is not appreciated his own people do not like him, he is beginning to see it. I said do you think he is going to get married. He said she has too many lovers, he don't know which he marry. I asked if he thought he would go to England. Gordon said he thought he would "be in favor of England"

I spoke about reciprocity - and Gordon said there would be some difficulty" - I said and Bennett get it. - he said "he can't get anywhere" - he rather indicated no might.

I said did he think we would have an election - he thought we would not - he ~~thought~~ thought it would be in the fall he hoped it would be so that I could get a chance to get out among the people - he said I must I must have to help. I said I must be here, that he could help where he was. I said he had been here as well, and the greatest help I had had all the time I was in office, ~~he said~~ that he had to do with difficult things - he said "I will do it again" I could count on his not failing to take my part. Keep on hitting hard

- I said did he remember the day of Bennett he saw him - he said no Robbie Burns you know it well. I said do you care for him. He said no he is very busy with his own people - I asked if he saw my mother - father he said something quite complimentary and ended up something about - She is - true and ever - bless you

(whether this relates to mother or not - or his own parents I did not quite catch - It was all over Gordon's shoulder)

Dr Thorp – Good morning (clear & strong) and how are you this morning. Mrs Cornish said my voice sounded very clear & strong. He said that is good. She often of my tendons to rest. He said he does that for very ill – we must be kind to them.

I said Dr Thorp, may I ask you a few more questions. some I may speak when you die and help me. – He said yes you may, he is not an orator, he is a good writer he is fresh on bringing people into line, he is a fine character, he is not a Frenchman or Scotchman – he is a Good Yorkshire. I don't know what his nationality is. he has kept aloof from other things. He tries very hard to bring about better conditions socially as well as he can & may be the best of politics, he is not a Londoner – that is a good or yorkshire. In the last 5 or 6 years you have gained force with this help and much power – (Dr Thorp shewed that this was the trouble in politics) he said – he is not a man I know – he has kept aloof for forty years he has been helping you, to work and to find study different points in your writing – to work out the points & put to you powers and visions sit on the right side of the French, you have a hard and plain – it is this point there is a lot of French women – which to them the hand of friendship he often about the work – & bad conditions – something that all going is to bring about change. and you be a plain I must be there'

God bless you all

I must see you this afternoon. My hand & arm here would then saw something more across the table, like a puff of smoke – to me it went towards the door & seemed to go out – it was like steam out of a bottle – like Electric like a puff out of a fire – where either – we thought it something I was not sure so it was indescribable

April 17th (Easter Sunday afternoon)

Mrs Arnold-Self: Room.

There was like blue chiffon floating in air over room and a sort of electric blue

There is some one here who has died from trouble in the bowels has had an operation - suffered terribly

The trumpet began moving

There is some one in the middle of the room

There is some one on my foot" Joan said

Joan said it frightened her - Helen Ob - I wished just then the thumb over her bowels was pulled, and the one on Mrs Arnold's knees was pulled off and dropped to the floor.

We got nothing for this moving could see clouds. Some one moving the trumpet moved once and fell on the arm of Joan's chair

the excitement for the moment was considerable

Mrs Arnold said it made her shudder - Joan said it was quite exciting. Joan was glad some things moving in the way. - There were short tests & words - but for some time after it became silent and things are waited for an hour, but got nothing further.

(I believe that some force came to make an end to the trance - It may from then end Gay - accompanied woman had not carried out his advice & beg him. Hers. is not probable. Indeed it is impossible to suppose it except that the bringing of the trumpet is the kind of thing that precedes his actions - but taking the letter pulling off of the shawl and looking Mrs Arnold's bowels may from caused her to lose bowels. She was quite upset afterwards - did not like the suggestion of reading a story like this did last night, - like I read some of Jennings books she was very relieved said it was not true, not in fact - Bound to the idea of hallucinations. She knew relieved of his illness hadn't left for 40 years he had left hallucinations secret. but was soon died. Heard he was cold. such his [illegible]

April 17th - 6 P.M -

Mrs N & I alone -

"John King" - As soon as we sat down, the name came through in clear loud tones - I apologised for his son not being there - said that he had been during the afternoon but that no one had spoken Mr. King said he had not attempted to speak before that afternoon - He welcomed me & said that he had spoken frequently to "Willie" & would do so again - I spoke to him of Rosie Dacy. He said he had had a very busy delightful day renewing old acquaintance & that his wife had had all her relatives for some generations back, with her. & that they had a wonderful day said he often saw J.C.P. & also M. Lindsey — said that J.C. was a wonderful character he asked for G. & hoped we all were well — & bade me adieu —

Nancy came next in quite a happy Gay mood — She had had a delightful day on Easter Sunday — with Grandparents — who, she said, were sweet & dear — She said she was as tall as I am — and that Grandmama said she looked like me — (& several flattering things) I asked her if she remembered coming to me in a vision — & if they had expected me to come to them then — Yes. she said "Grandmama told me she thought you would come & that you would be lonesome so we went — to meet you"

She said the days had been so "murky" - (probably murky) that they had not attempted to speak — She said she was sorry father would not come to speak but "I will get him yet" said she would be under his bed some night - She kissed us & went away -

A voice came there feebly saying "Rosie" or Emily - or "M.C." but - could not - make us understand - a sad voice - I thought a woman

Then came a cheerful whistle & Allen G. came Hello Mrs Pollock - I thought I would like to have another talk with you - so I came again" - I told him how glad I was that he had done so He spoke about his mother & how much he longed for her

& his old home & friends
I said 'Shall I tell her I have spoken to you?' No he said - She would be so excited it would not do - Best let well alone - Said he was very happy with his friends - busy - too but not as we work on earth.
Led take him a long long time to recover from the shock of his death - The was blown up by a shell but then now he was quite all right - bade me good bye - & went away - Afterwards - some little time - the trumpet made a great stir & fell over - & a voice said It's Alan. Mrs Pelletier I'm just going away - Good bye again - & went away cheerfully
& quite "strong" —

M. E. P.

Sally in the day between 6 & 685. Joan went in alone with her breath, and Father came, also Nancy. and Allan Gates and a man called out "Emily"

The account is written out - & Joan of Arc

Evening Telling - 8.30 & 10 o'clock
Was to read Joan - self.
Sir Joan

Saw first a loaf of bread over Joan's shoulder, - like a tonsil Joan remarked that was like the beginning this afternoon.

Then the words strongly pronounced
"Good Evening"

Sir Thorp

Looked about. Then afternoon
Sir Thorp said something about gathering the forces this -

Then speaking to Joan
Do you feel a pain in your side at times
Joan said No - a sort of pressure at times
Joan Yes - well it was the little girl
She comes very often to see you, She ~~was~~ sits on your lap, and pulls you or is around you

Then Brother King. to come I do not feel the occasion clearer, let me thank you for your kindness & very little kindness, I appreciate what you have done for her. I spoke of what she had done for us all - he spoke very close to me. Christ is front of me.

Then is Joan. he said my Good Lady - Joan called out in loudest my Joanness - We are going to help this husband to feel better and more collected, poor fellow he has been disappointed and feels it, he is too young a man to be idle. Was tired also felt him tonight too. - the comfort found Simon about a good deal.

Sir Thorp. I want to ask you about my garden. You told me of the Political Guide, what about the others

He said you have wonderful guides; then turning to Mrs Wright he said you ought to have explained all this - we have all of our guides. You have a guide that is a writer, an orator, a deep thinker, an investigator - he is an ancient.

You have read the history of Henry Morgan, John King and John King, it was the people that influenced them. Leo the writer that influences you. Leo the writer, he was also a great man as a landscaper - he is a wonderful man. I asked if he lived before Christ. Dr Thorp said no it was shortly after, there were great men came into power about that time, (I am not sure but I think he said he was one of them). He then began to speak of Christ.

He said (seemed to be surprised to have me follow him closely in this and spoke with emphasis)

There were many Christs. Jesus of Nazareth King of the Jews was one, he was named Jesus Christ. There was only one Jesus his name was Jesus, like John King John Thorp when the time came that Gregory was the ruler, was the man like Mussolini, tried & make himself head and then he said we will away with Christ, there shall be only him, when there Jesus of Nazareth and Jesus the Great so there will not be another another, & there women: women will be

I asked about this him, he said the Christ, he was King of the Jews: Religion has put a different complexion on all this type of thought - very much wrongly

Gregory was the name they made Pope Gregory. Because he did away with all, when this other one died there was only Christ — Christ is a name later John Christopher

He said

I then asked about your guides

he said Miss Hallerin was a musician Greek-Jewish-from a very high sphere - You resemble her

He were discussing this after Dr Thorp went

He came back & said what don't you understand. I said about this the true Christ — he said to Mrs Hallinan, now I dont want to shock you Jesus was his name — before many years when Christ were born (?) or about) the people wanted to know who to follow. Gregory said follow me (or him — I cant tell) there shall be only one, this will be the last one Christ was a man who was never heard of until he was 12 years old, he talked to elders and scribes. in the temple. he was in a trance, when he fled they didnt know where to find him, he was with his father Joseph. Studying the law of love, the development of the spirit. Joseph was his father till he was 32. Christ was never heard of till 30 years old. the miracles he did were very simple - he had the blind, he never healed the blind (they had testimony in their books) the boy suffering dead that he raised was never dead, he was in a trance, as said rose up glad — Roman has muzzled the people that is the truth, and if you dont get the truth, shut out. Christ was dead, not a soul saw him on the cross, not a soul in heaven ever saw him on the cross - it is a mythical person - it is true what I tell you. Good night.

(the thorn in speaking as he did seemed to me to strike on one who had strong feeling in what he said: of this one who was incensed, felt he had been deceived, and was determined to speak out and to proclaim it. — I confess all that I have heard + gathered from this conversation has strengthened my faith in the truth of the resurrection, the resurrection is the thorn in my throat against the Roman Catholics. (I think also against the Jews, that of this I am not sure) he is perfect in professing against much Rome has done and is doing. but I confess I believe in Christ, as one risen from the dead in the sense of materialogizing after death. I believe he was crucified. — Many thus Easter festival in the ancient sacrificial passover worship etc — all connected in procession as Hallo told me in a great interest. My Godin significant - the 3 days observance - which all have shadow of. My the Hebrew calendar if this Christ a different year? — I cannot accept the 3 days reading. he in later one who has felt to see the light in him. I feel sublime.

Grandfather King.

Mostly after his interment. I heard a word to say "Are you Uncle John King, I said is that your father, he said "I [illegible] Uncle to my Son" then he said grandfather King. I expressed great delight said I had often wished to see him - he said something of being proud of me, I said father had often spoken of him to me, that he had not seen him (he said he knew) told me how he had been a convict on the Hawkesbury - he laughed - said so I did, and added I am still a fighter, he said he was so pleased father had spoken as he did. I said you were at Dundee, he said a short time at Dundee. I held to me Gunn. I asked how Grandmother King was, and he said very poorly, I told him to give her my love - He then began to speak of the problems of the currency, said what is to be for silver, I told him Standard, there is one thing that is "very foolish legislation" he said - wants to know a talk with you over money about how silver - he spoke about a change in the money it looks like it - you see that it is "backed with gold" I said you were at Prescott, father told me of your being there - he said did he remember me at Prescott, it was a little village, where the boats come across, I was at the Grant House for a short time, then he told you about the wharf, work which we were carrying on for the government - grant from the government, on the landing. I saw that it was proof of progress

I said I hope your military branch, - he said well is that so, the little chest, I said yes, it is here in the room. well he said that only two years of hard, the one part that [illegible] on, he complained quite painfully - I said the meeting to church will [illegible] decided by - he was an elder was he. he said some of the men meet to church - in the church I offered my services - some of them said they would rather have an [illegible] than a full fledged minister. [illegible] he was going and I called him back and said, you appeared to me before did you not in Emporia. he said yes, I had a little boyonets at my side, and my cocked hat

when I raised a fist my form & grandmothers as he went away.
Paul followed him added "and to Jane" - don't forget them.
(There was a sweet pretty Jennie McDougall was a cousin of Collins she was always called Jane. She lived with Uncle Dougall McDougall & Aunt Flora McDougall his sister, & Collins was kind with his mother - whether a half cousin or not. I am not sure I think she was a daughter of a brother of Collins mother. She was a McDougall not a King. She married, Neville & Berlin -
I met Uncle of her some time ago. She was not in my wigwam

Mrs Dollen

Mrs Wendt said, I see a name in Toronto like Collins.
I asked if it were Dollen
In a few months she came Dollen
She said at the invitation of some ladies I have not spelling in. for a short moment.
I said how is Mrs Dollen. He replied "She is prospering nicely" (which would seem to indicate that missing might have been a mail. He did. I think in the Toronto asylum after being there some years. died a lunacy.
Mrs Dollen then said something about hoping she is in Peace world where love ever calls. (or words to that effect.) She spoke with a decided English accent - this I believe he said.

J.R. Wilson

Heard the name Wilson. I knew some in Owen Sound long-time ago - How is everything
I asked him if he remembered Benjamin and he said indeed I do Sorry to tell you heartfelt Rest -
I told him I had the pleasure he had given me.
How is his Parents? - trying to work out things I said fine kindest wishes
He said something about getting around to Dundas Calls
I spoke about his little niece. He said she is a big girl now
He asked did I hear from my mother. I said yes. And he see her he said she visited me.

Joe said how are things going in the House of Commons
I said Jim Pannell was doing what he could - He laughed at this
I said but I suppose you would vote for me. Joe Wilson replied "Give me a chance" He said it looked like an election next year - Soon after the Parliament soon be blooming he after of his fondness for them
I asked do you see Walter - he said he did occasionally remembered our association
Then I asked for Wilfred Campbell - he said with sorrow
I asked them to give them my love.
he called them about Sankey's portrait of me - he found it very pretty good - he did consider it a credit.
He asked how is Pannell getting on - he said he was said he was very busy working out a new process treat-he said something about being there now, I said I didn't know - he said he had seen about the last couple of days - he is ill must his smallest - he was about half a dozen - he ended up saying, when there is a vote let me know - good night.

Goldwin Smith

He announced his name in the words - [illegible]
[illegible] after speaking to him he addressed you
I was calling his hon. Friend - He asked me 'how are you doing - then said something about his [illegible] remarks'
"blob is on his cheek" - I spoke of the report
I asked him if he remembered the poem with golden [illegible] bridge. He said he enjoyed it, it's a diversion - helps to keep one's mind off worries
I spoke of the Anglo Indian - I denied with him - he had - gentlemen interested in Labour problem present - He said something about gathering around his letter at dinner. I thought it would please you - it is a great education
I asked about Newfoundland - Lucas Wyse - I asked if he thought he could succeed, G.S. said "I know you can" I said died he didn't mind could — he said "he is a fickle man" the trouble with O. is he has "too much money" he thinks too much of the women — You will be able to (do it, the man in the States will do all he can, will do all he possibly can to "fight the battle."

Charles McCarthy

Well well you are the best man on the face of the earth I would have appointed tonight would be interested in this sort of thing, It is Charles McCarthy. I have been talking to O'Shaughnessy as he calls himself, he don't like Shaughnessy. — — I don't calling it was King, he said wonderful

What are you going to do about the grand trunk. You helped it. It is the C.P.R. that is doing this whole thing you know really. — When the head of it. King blamed me for a good deal — "?) England is responsible for much that has been taken out of the grand trunk. The has done you a lot of harm never treated you right" said the man — Blame me for the money question & many things

I asked about Thornton - if he had seen him - the boys told I said 'look here Thornton, here we are fall & face no better off than we were 100 years ago - You are a just such a bad man - and he said, forget it (ok) I said you were not Sleath. he said he was an entirely passenger on the Islamic — he then told of the conference all on the Islamic & I had settled at a quarter to 11. I was on the deck when I heard the crash. they say a collision never happened. when the real boiler blew up it and the back end (was smashed but in two) dropped us in the mud — I told the boys about having the body on the train as it was being taken to Montreal. we used to [illegible]

I asked if he remembered our talks at Montreal. the railway strike – he said that was a struggle – I said they could do anything with railway strikes if I did anything to displease you I hope you will make it up, I did what I thought was right (but it was not done) I said I thought he was holding out his hands.

He asked me if I knew Young Thompson – I said I did not know him very well. he said it is this or will you don't (I think he is in difficulties at present re his company or something) I said yes he is a fine woman. & he said yes she was. I think Thompson "a dear little woman"

I said perhaps you see a lot of Churchill – he said he is working hard for you. So glad to do anything

You asked do you remember Mrs Callaway from Inwood, I introduced Jones daughter to him. he said he did. & "very glad to meet you. and how is your husband"

You asked if he knew Borah – he could not get this name at first, then pronounced it & quite deliberately I spoke as he did – I introduced him to Wright. & he said You are an American – then he said good bye to me and said I will always think of you "as a good friend of this nation" I said I will think of him with affection – he said "Good night"

H. B. Hopkins he looked some little time. It was very wonderful how well the former held out

– feel how well the former held out

he drooping, oh I feel so cold. I my clothes, or feeling cold or this little — then a voice came from one of you. I thought I would call and say hello to an old friend

I met him at Hopkins – he said yes. – something about – all the good things. He then said I asked if he saw Mrs & he said they saw her how very cheerful she looked. I asked him if he remembered Thompson, he said certainly. I asked if he was married & how was she – & he said she is all right now

I spoke of his posture & motion
Mrs asked if he remembered the Labor Departmt. He laughed and said "what a time we had"
I asked if he saw Mrs Harriet Blair
(I don't recall the answer)
I said to tell me about the accident. I reached his big head stretched upward like "I tried to pull for the shore and I missed it"

In speaking of his great success at the Century. How much loomed on the corbel & said the thought his colors helped the vibrations. Red = strength & determination
White = purity
Green = love
Black = power
Green = strength in life

I have written out these interviews from the notes taken at the sittings immediately after the sittings were taken place, all were completed before the next interview ex-cept the one - of Professor Atkinson on natural law & which was not completed till the next day. I have been as accurate as I possibly can - and have not substituted a word for another, or knowingly any word in completing a sentence as I recalled it, finished at 2 am. Sunday

Detroit. Oct 15. 1933. — Sunday morning 8.15–9.00

Dr Sharp —

S. Well well. (could recognize his voice

I — How are you Dr Sharp?

S. I can't tell you how glad I am to see you. — and you are looking well so well, after your long, arduous, tedious journey in the West.

You are looking much better than when I saw you last.

I — I did not find it arduous.

S — You have done well, you have made many friends — something good is going to come out of it.

Dr S asked about the elections — when do they come off? is it next year?

I explained it might be one or two years — he said he thought it would be next year. He went on to say, he would like to see something true of better consciousness — (I could not catch the meaning of this)

I asked what the chances of winning were. Dr Sharp said, the chances are good if you keep winning — so long as you keep in the middle of the road — keep getting your status. You have been doing better than you have ever done, you have stirred up the minds of the people. It is necessary to be good and kind to the people — (It was to help on in love rather than it.

Then said Dr Sharp — I want to ask you about a letter that I wish clearing up Summers.

Dr Sharp said, it be next year. — I said, yes.

Dr Sharp said, the person didn't (in the letter, it was Scott) give the wrong address, they left it there. that often happens.

I said I thought

Dr Sharp then said — it was addressed to me — in their mind as me, it is, I said NO, I don't think so. — repeated NO. He said there was an M in it somewhere. — I thought over it & then said, no.

Dr Sharp said there was nothing in it to be concerned about?

I said it was an important letter — very intimate, and I wanted her like it came to the public

I asked if it would cause us anywhere — Dr Sharp said. I think so.

I said I thought, because the person this book would have received it

1. That is true: or the word feelings - but not the abominable feelings

2. No word could be more comforting. Which it concerned only the one body: that is true. The conversation caused the expression borne historically.

3. The ground lies, by giving the name before married, on the day following, that had not been mentioned in conversation until last winter
(A common explanation would be misrelation from my thoughts to this, K)

4 That is correct. I did pray very earnestly & the sentence form: written

5. statement of a profound Christian law.

6. I had said nothing of keeping a record, I am certain going over it until recent among significance /- (letter is proving so - it is wrong, and the significance of the letter explained R. NOVID)

7. That I have found it to be true

8. I have believed this. and am grateful to have it confirmed
, all this may said, or rather volunteered or as strange words,
I had not even called the subject only with Mrs. Wright

9. I must say the expression was misleading. I never experienced more real sincerity & composure in any conversation before

10 he died might have been disappointed in it & might not have wished to acknowledge it-receipt. Dr Stark said, There was nothing in the letter to cause bad feeling[1]: why should they? I added, I feared it might be made public Dr Stark said, it must be public, it concerned only that one book[2].

I said it was a matter of some importance, I could give the name, he said that was not necessary[3], I added I will try and find out[3] (it is true of this book) Dr Stark absent. the letter M in the name. — he then said (with a kind) sorry, she did not get the letter, letters do go astray.

* I then said I had been receiving very strong impressions this afternoon, Dr Stark, said, You had your friends to help you[4], you asked and so you received[5]. You must still have help, you know it comes from them. I said many of the impressions were very strong - the doctor said for me to figure them up. I was right to help them recorded, to go over the record & see the significance[6] [I asked about dreams - visions. He said when you go to bed you are tired and if you dream, it is pretty difficult to make ends of what you dream, it is apt to be confused. And that before you wake it is apt to be a vision. that has a meaning, that stands for something, the visions in the morning generally come right; many of them come true[7]. - You are really good at interpreting[8] (or words to that effect). - His advice was there to help records & study them.

I then asked how the loved ones were. He said they were all very well, they were like Barbs, they were so happy & well[9].
He concluded by saying, I shall see you later[10].
I thanked him for his help - said it had meant much.

* This is most significant - in view of the many-bonnie-M- incident recorded in small journal p. 310 (NOV. 6) — The letter might well be in the hand of the M-d-M. Great time. K. (NOV 10th)

1. This was Sunday. I was pretty tired, but not so much as in the previous two

2. Self-consciousness - and that accounts for him having slipped and lost talk also it has been a good six months.

3. Others know Father to be of very conservative in attacking the C.B.C. Wrongful the West. I had not so recorded it, and am quite unconscious of it.

4. Very true, one has to deal with certain questions and these the most critical

5. This showed indicated first that Dr Wolfard knew there had been a row about the book. - Also it may have been to come on to consider that I myself had done by way of conversion. (I found out on return to Ottawa after this conversation that I had converted some 2 years ago.) had decided with conversion this time accidental being aware of that fact. It may have been to come on to do a little more careful.

6. This may get from the professors. - The credit of the country to know the good results the problems that they are

7. This seems to have been the time of year of night along. - Actually - Saturday the date might be 1935 or even 1936

8. This mention of doctrine was all unintended, Had not spoken of it. It is very significant, as the U. now and on the doctrine by itself in a campaign. - They talked together of elections etc. He named Hoover as one who would be most worthy of being consulted with. - Hoover could not have known of him at all, I was not thinking of him because of the time - It is interesting the caution with which we denied assurance of victory, but one might take things for granted, but every encouragement on the part of the Republicans

9. Yes this is so, as I am not conscious of having accomplished much.

10. I was not mentioning names of places. Had refrained from doing so but here U. might not know. - Later after this recess, I told him U. I had taken the train at Montreal at 11. pm. He was surprised. God, was surprised when I mentioned over what had been done in the day, from time of having arrived at 8 to Montreal. L'Annonciation. The preparation of speech, the addresses in Eng. one in French. Listening etc. - Most significant was the encouragement given about being able to stand so much, as the one fear I was beginning to entertain in that of my health, that I may not know the physical strength needed after the years I have abroad, had.

11. At the college - This was most significant - more so than of the last Sund L'Annonciation. as it was associated with his life, thought have been known (but not to him U. in Detroit, that I had been in L'Annonciation, but as the college was quite remarkable - Leslie on the college offered to L'Annonciation grounds.

12. 'Ma mother' was significant as that was apart from the college - & it was since I did speak out.

Sir Wolfrid Laurier.

Soon there was a voice a little indistinct. I asked if it were Lucy he said no — Laurier. I said I was glad to see him again, Sir Wolfrid said, I hope you are feeling better than when I last saw you. I said I was very well. Sir W. said, I am sure you feel lighter over the work of the last six months[2]

Sir W. then said — I am very happy to see you facing it so and so cheerful. I said I had not been conscious of any courage. He said you have been very courageous[3]. — He then went on to say these days are strenuous days. You can't pick and choose[4].

Sir Wolfrid then said, I want to ask you a question? How about the new government bonds,[5] how about this winter — the welfare of the people. I said I thought the bond issue had been all right, that it was a volume of a conversion loan. The old ones being exchanged for others at a lower rate of interest. He said he knew the old bonds were bona fide & had been wondering about this new issue. I said I thought it was all right. Sir Wolfrid said, I hope so, I want it to work.[6]

I then asked Sir Wolfrid when he thought we would have an election, he said, Next year?[7] I asked what he thought the chances were, Sir Wolfrid said, I have been talking to Borden about what he can do, and Borden said, he must stand by him.[8] We will do all he can.[9] His chances Sir W. said were "pretty good" He then went on & said, I had done better than I realized.[9]

I asked if he saw me yesterday — Sir Wolfrid said, yes, when I saw you take the train last night, I thought, I think you were stronger than I was, and I did not think I could stand what you had to the day[10] & this was the meaning - at any rate I could & one of the boys knew where I was yesterday. and Sir Wolfrid said "at the college".[11] I said, where you were on a log. Sir W. You were there you are - he said (it was 2 years - or more ago) & then something as if having difficulty to bring out the time) (he said) you had a good meeting (You are calling hello, you have your voice with force & speak with character[12] You enthuse the people. They

1. Mrs is quite true - there was enthusiasm, and there was a real reception

2. I form a lead here. - I should have married, but the reference to Lady Lansdowne was significant, that could not be known except to those who know her in the present relationship - also the withdrawal arising about Lord is quite correct. - Nothing more important politically [illegible] - I am keeping it for that, and shall use it with discretion and to myself. I am keeping him in [illegible]. I might still succeed in the effort.

3. Mrs is Bradley. - No one can say definitely. Macdonald the Labour Party certainly lost it was carried Conservative last night, and money will be put in buying up votes in these hard times will the people in the next Parliament there. I am sorry, regretted doubtfully. It is a close seat, has been held for only 1 at last election. Gordon was most unwilling to fight: I wanted to put off this seat - Macdonald - It was with greatest difficulty I succeeded in getting candidates in both places. - As for Lansdowne, the Labour Party [illegible] I think the people generally believe Lord Snowden can still carry the seat: I believe we shall, but the risk may be [illegible] It is a most important contest. (Hamilton Saturday last Oct 22. 1931. The elections come tomorrow Oct 23. - See article dealing re him as morning session "clear of the whole lot".

4. Mrs is [illegible] of Europe. - His reference to the Pan American conference is chiefly this - it is significant in regard to [illegible] attempts at reforming Germany Their arms.

5. Mrs is significant in regard my previous letter in which I see we have [illegible] this personal friendship -

6. I am not sure whether I see W. correctly here [illegible], as 'at this world.' I am inclined to believe he meant - in this world.

like to be remembered. They received you very well"; I was very proud of you.
I asked if she would mind my speaking French. She replied that she would like it very much. She laughed heartily. Sir W. said that is what I want you to do, (as Mrs R. Lewis had said that) to learn French. It would be well if I could find some one to talk it every day. Must it be left to kindly friends?

I asked about Mrs Chamberlain: whether he thought she would join
Sir W. said "I think she will" we are going to hope for it.

I spoke about the condition in Europe - Sir W replied said "they are very much cowed up. Russia, Belgium and Austria will be peace conference. Many of them are looking for me, they want it (and) must be said, they may have it".

I asked how Sir Wilfrid was. - Sir Wilfrid said, he is very well, we are together a lot - I asked to give him my kindest regards. Sir Wilfrid said we have many talks together". He then added, take care of yourself,
I want you to stay here a long time, so that I can help you".

(Sir Wilfrid is now much too strong. Indeed I felt the power was too much for me - that it was an effort for him to speak - that he was restraining much. - that he has something in mind to say. - No doubt I am tired after the long journey - yesterday. I was up also after the "housecleaning" - to prepare for my coming to - Hope for better hour tomorrow!

W. Sun. Nov. 10.

1. This has been Lady's secret method of speaking each time. Even W. does not know and cannot speak [illegible] - Lady S. is voice is quite different from the others and I can tell it each time
2. This is true
3. We lost 20 seats last election
4. This remains to be seen - is prophecy
5. That is in the light of my speech - a part of it
6. 'My dear Sir' is correct
7. This reference to Asquith is correct. It is interesting how names have been used so direct-
8. We did get 150 on the returns of 148 over last enrolment of 1 The elections were on Oct 23, this was Oct 25 times
9. See W. said one wanted
10. This is Mrs Bedford's first name - Lady B. has so referred to her a number of
11. She had been away in California, & is in habit of taking trips.
12. This I know still a question
13. I mean the one who did
14. I mean the one who had it done
15. Of this I am now wholly sure
16 They were did

Lady Laurier

It was come a pronè in clear happy sclivery French. - Chevri - chevri - chevrement. chevrement". - finte a while I need not catch. Then in English Lady Laurier said

It was good to see you both, you are sorry to do better. You must learn French - the French people love you[2], they must believe it you[3]. We lost election some lost, but they will return[4]. They were overjoyed to hear you say. You were for Miss Melfort. Must you wanted to help them.[5] Said they loved to hear about Sir Wilfrid. Lady L said they love my dear Sir Wilfrid[6]. She went on to my speaking in French & said took it up. It would suit you both. The French set very enthusiastic and when they do they carry everything along, they are tired of Bennett[7]. Asked if Sir Thompson were, would carry Toronto. - Lady Laurier said "Sure"[8] - Then talked about Washington & Lady L. said Sir Wilfrid would know better about that[9]

Mrs Lady Laurier said How you seem busy[10] — I said I had a little to do. I thought she was looking very well. Lady Laurier said She does work better, looked as if she were going away again". I said I did not think so, that I did not know - it seemed as if Lady L. were of the men the most,[12] Asked She has a paralytic stroke of her self - Lady Laurier said It was nice of you to suggest it."[13] - I said I thought it was well for her sons to know it. Then spoke of Lady Laurier's painting which I thought was good - Lady L said She very good I said I thought Borgue had it
She then said, "How is it you had a hand in it"[14]

I spoke of Laurier's room & said I was so happy there. Lady Laurier then said Wilfrid and I are there too. We are with you there."[15] I said yes I were keeping one there.

Lady Laurier then said "Good night we will come again"[16]

Notes Nov. 10.

1. This was the name I called him - the familiar family name, these familiar names often have been used throughout their lives.
2. There are only two kind of men - Well we've met another (Some brothers & sons.)
3. The reference to 'brothers' in addition to father shows the completeness of the family
4. Everything seemed to be turned — the other talks were unimportant
5. This is significant - like Rilke.
6. Complete knowledge of everything about I was only for a short time
7. This seemed to be his wish - and I did
8. This was information - I seemed to remove a doubt. I had had, arising out of fears for their health of which he was often victim. It seemed that completely the dependent relation was significant or there had been a doubt in my mind.
9. Your brothers
10. This was true
11. Quite clear, there was been a stream - turned back & wasn't could see it been feeling been conscientiously.
12. I have not yet found out what it is — it is enclosing the object of a chain.
13. I did this, but not till a week ago (Nov 3) they helped without doubt. and it when at once might have saved much pain since I made the mistake of ordering Kreosotum 30th. (not 6th) Nov 7: he vomited = ordering Sepia 30th. about 10 only.

Bella:

A few minutes after came a very small voice that said "Bella". I was so happy to see her again. I asked how she was and she said "very well" Mother and I are very well. We are here together. Mother is very happy[2] I said and rather, Bella said yes: "Mrs Thomas is here too[3]. She then said something about coming, saying there are others to call[4] (It seems as if she knew mother was near: might not look long) She did not stay longer but vanished

Shortly after came a voice quite distinctly "Mary"[5] (It was very significant to me that Bella should have spoken of herself as Bella and Mary as Mary each in their own definite way - announcing themselves by the one name - as we ourselves did, but Laurie[5]:

— Mary said he was glad to see me. I said I was so glad to see him. He asked[6] me when are you going to sleep[6] - (I understand -) I said in a day or two, that I hoped I see the boys on the way back - Mary said "they are with you"? I said you know they are both in Toronto and Mary said yes, he knows. I asked if the children of Allen being there[illegible] - he replied quite emphatically "I certainly do"[6]. I said I had asked Bella recalling his concern about them while - Mary replied I wouldn't separate them it was right for them to be together"

I asked Mary how he thought I was. He said he thought I was doing a little too much - he had noticed I was tired the last few weeks[10]. I asked if he noticed anything wrong. He said at most he thought "a little strain" - I asked if he thought it was rheumatism - he didn't think so[12]. I said I thought I may have caught cold - he said some people were much bothered with it. He then said to me, I would let some Mochille Balls[13] a day

Notes Nov. 10.

1. This I did on Sunday a week ago – & it was better than the Brownsea talk
2. This is what I used
3. This may be ± is doubtless true – from point of view of time consumed in words. – but it does not seem like more.
4. There has been a "packing up" – may have an connecting links all this. The interest is what is so extraordinary in all these conversations
5. This is very true – like making a note is what I do
6. The evidence in the Summons may show that it was forbes (Note re the letter incident it is clear forbes is "speaking" – by gone the clerk in the Summons showing the name Bill – namely ± like the names may [illegible] – see this incident. & clear journal 1881, 6.)
7. This is a comfort to have – thought being dead wife one or. – this talk reminds me, can hear it might everything carefully kept & is more evidence
8. I believe this is true – I do seek the judicial aspect, weighing of evidence along partly ch!
9. Next this round a knowledge of the fact that I had written a second letter, making clear point which was sorry
10. As this date this seems singular – it may seem as that it is a case parallel to the watch case – of a letter coming to the wrong address & then falling into other hands. – if this were so the recovery would be more annoying than case. for the many sources – stage which I am now at, and suppose the letter being stolen & a slip – the other was still – and as of the money source – is anything, as mis-statement falling into other hands.
11. This is all done to comfort. I am sure; with knowledge of course this such is the case on bed, and took it in the bath – & we had the bath up & my mouth and set on it, stood in warm water. he said yes. he sat indeed down in the cold, wet – & dry off when I got out but left a blanket around. lie in bed & next morning take the bath off with a towel, that not I had read more a nice morning'. I asked what I could do & help in condition. he said you must do that. I am that over your walk & exercise, walking is better you mind than driving like a constitutional[2] – you must be careful not to overdo. You have been over trying[3]

I asked how. what he thought about the election
he said "will vote for you", he meant or say he thought it was wonderful thing now I had come on, my letter more loud. he said Lady Bowen was screaming laughing at my talk in French.' had read 'ardent he bride of will" – what could about it being wonderful[4]

I often ask & more about visions. he told me & make a note of them
I said they had been very helpful, I must you have been sending me some, he said "Father has done most of that" Father is a wonderful man."[6] (I have felt close father was sending these impressions)
Then said he had helped – he then meant or say that they had wondered about that they shouldn't have kept in the background and let me play a lone hand, instead of bringing me on as they had – he meant or say that Sir Wilfrid would always stay with me I would have it on down? then he meant or say, you would have made a great lawyer, and judge – you would have been a great judge[8]. (can see Dr Lindsay I shall have to show Sir Wilfrid judgments)

I then asked more if he knew anything about the letter I had been writing G. – he said he had heard me talking of it – he then meant or say "I think the other letter you have written" has killed the thing in her mind? – I asked if he thought the letter should in the [illegible] of my question [illegible] say yet – it or would? he paused, it must not.
Gladys, it must not to the wrong address. – I added 'it does' amount to anything!!' I said it had been of great concern to me.

Mary said in spite of helping, that there were not a night that he didn't come to say "Goodnight" to me.

How much — or how little should he miss to see me doing so well like I often about himself he said he was not working easy. Crying for help others. Found in the hospital etc. — She said well enough. Yes, I like to do that. — // It was clear that the nurses were not sharp either but was finding it difficult to speak — No one came after he finished.

It was afternoon visiting hours & close in the room. Before church. Mary would seemed a little concerned lest she was not doing enough — does little soul. She is so anxious & pained & frail.

I am more perplexed than ever about the letter — first on the thickness of the letter in being in it. The name — there is something else in must there (a). Was that it was not re-read (b) I have read it it was into everything. If I am wrong in that I have entirely mis-

-read almost everything that has come to me. (c) The meaning of spoiled loving soul-mist, it will dissolve out. [illegible] I have realized. I feel that perhaps I must be able to tell me for I have only a dim or else stars & songs ask & ye shall receive. (d) I feel that an explanation will come which will make everything more wonderful than ever.

Even that the "it" that or Stark has in mind will perhaps somehow. (e)

The Grove began 21-8-20 & lasted a little less than a term

It was taken nearly two hours & which was out complete.

by these has felt badly wrong. I am sure a good rest tonight will mean a great difference in reception tomorrow.

(a) this would seem to be clearing up if many is MS in there — or I mistake this

(b) This now seems quite clear. Wish I have been thankful.

(c) Shall have to read

(d) I believe this is coming through at present time

(e) This is taking place now — NOV 20.

Notes Nov 10-

1. This expression not used in Eng. but seems common enough in this meaning
2. The reference here is to Mrs Hunting of the tables
   The omission of other names, or the inaccurate grouping in a story of childhood all what I mean can't explain home is exceedingly significant.
3. The mention of her shewed knowledge of the tables
4. Quite correct.
5. This is true of the class, - note father only says "I think" not-knowing
6. This is true, in one sense, of what father would like to say & sometimes does, but on a deeper view only reflects the ignorance of the parents. allowed to do as they pleased etc - father's life was a struggle - towards the end mother's was too, in one sense, it was the more always busy. There is meaning here I have not quite got. It may relate to character "happens generally - or to the impressions coming over.
7. This adds to the mystery - & makes this "story" wrong also a mere guessing but I have a feeling it is more than that.

October 16. 1933. Dictated 10 to 11 a.m. — Mrs Wright & self

Father:
After a very short time -

Voice Good morning, my son."
Dear father, I am so glad to see you again
Father. This delightful to see you today
I said - and Mrs Wright - Father - yes. It is so kind of her. she was w - something about me to Mrs Wright - He so pleased, he is a good boy

I said dear father you were helping me - father said yes, [illegible] as well as Grandfather her report the results will be good has been doing all she can, but I cannot help you as much as Sir Wilfrid, he has the knowledge: counsel - fortune of Sir Wilfrid's ideas both blessing. - both blessing - then when you read this will be yours."

I said father - You know about a letter that I have been concerned about. Father replied - that letter it is singular, there is talent to.
I asked if the [illegible] any one in her family to whom it could have come." I said I did not think so
I asked if he knew the letter I meant - father replied letter to London."
I then said it was addressed to Mrencin Combe Father said. I'll tell you what I think, it was shifted from one place to another, the letter may have been sent from one place to find her - She is a person who moves about a good deal."
I then spoke of reading the book by Sir William Orpen. and asked if father had directed my attention to it. He said "I certainly did"
I spoke of the lectures of Orpen's father - Mrs Mills - and I thought perhaps that was sent to guide me, along with the Bible pictures. Father replied Mrs Mills and I are helping all we can - dear little Mrs Mills must be tired, much fatigue (?) cannot do much. You either were had to struggle or I have had to struggle. She has lost her - some strength (all this seemed to relate to the power to make impressions come over.) I had to make my own way. to struggle hard. She struggled - struggled and I am doing all I can to help you and she helps you - with our fatherless business (It seemed to imply that she helped Mrs Forbes in the impressions. She helped Mrs by her strength in Mr Wilson over (this may have to be quite correct.)"
I referred to the letter. and father said I think Mrs [illegible] the letter
He said lost, it was lost-stolen ?. I asked if it will be found. She said it

October 16. 1933. Detroit 10 to 11 a.m. — Mrs Wright: all

Father:
After a very short time -

Voice Good morning, my son."

Dear father, I am so glad to see you again

Father. This delightful to see you today

I said - and Mrs Wright - Father - yes. It is so kind of her. She was so - something about me to Mrs Wright - He is so pleased, he is a good boy

I said dear father you have been helping me - father said yes, ~~I intend so much as Sir Wilfrid~~ as well as Grandfather has asked the results will be good

Sir Wilfrid has been doing all we can, but I cannot help you as much as Sir Wilfrid, he has the knowledge: control - fortune of Sir Wilfrid's ideas help blessing. - help blessing - then when you read ~~the~~ will be yours.

I said father - You know about a letter that I have been concerned about. Father replied - that letter it is singular, where it came to.
~~Have~~ Upon ~~is~~ any one in the family to whom it could have come? I said I did not think so
I asked if he knew the letter I meant - father replied letter to London
I then said it was addressed to Mrs Vincent Constantine Father said, I'll tell you what I think, it may ~~have~~ shifted from one place to another, the letter may have been sent from one place to find her - She is a person who knows about a good deal
I then spoke of reading the book by Sir William Orpen. and asked if father had directed my attention to it. He said "I certainly did"
I spoke of the lectures of Orpen's father - and then - said I thought perhaps that was sent to guide me, along with the other lectures. Father replied no dear and I are helping all we can - dear little mother must be little frail, must from (?) I cannot do much. Your mother never had to struggle as I have had to struggle. She has left me some strength (all this seemed to relate to Mrs Vincent to make impression) come over.) I had to make my own way, to struggle hard. I've struggled - struggled and I am doing all I can to help you and She helps you - with our father's business (It seemed to imply that she helped Mrs Father in an impression. She helped Mrs by her struggle in Mrs Vincent over (this may not be quite correct.)

I reverted to the letter, and father said I don't think She got the letter
He said last, it may last storm? I asked if it will be found. She said it Father's voice seemed frail. - (His bones are strong I remember). He said I was so anxious to get a word with you. I am so thankful and grateful I asked if he could write - have been sending me impressions of my boyhood & of his early days. Father replied I did. I thought it would be a change in his current of thought, that it would help to have something of this thing I had done - been interested in (or words to that effect) things that I did when I was young, and "how" I ended my life" — (This is all absolutely what he summons up before me was true - and what I gathered from the reading of Leon Stanley's Sir Gilbert's portraits - the last day of the Arnolds left - always of only a few hours - so what is written of this - all this is remarkably convincing evidence that Father has been communing

Father then went on - You stand up bravely, don't get weak and don't get nervous, and I will do all I can. Sir Wilfrid was brave, never be afraid of anything - something would be said to be helpful in "comeback". Sir Wilfrid can help you more than I can possibly. ~~For~~ I said. Yes Father you can help me in character, Father said, there are some things that we do, that we wouldn't do at other times, you understand, Father wept - something we do, which we wouldn't do on other occasions. 1. This would be at the dramatic instance, as some of the others which has been at hingeman & known something of the progress; butordinarily he would not speak to me on a private matter of this kind
It would be the gentle way in which the others would approach the subject.

(2) This scene also he address previously given

(3) This I have had in mind for any will the reply might relate during to the time

(4) This reference to the conversation is real evidence - as is the distinction between the color progress - that made the outlook. In is true to about making it "so meaningful" - Ashton would remember that

(5) all quite true since he was out.

(6) He has come before

Wilson - art dealer. Oldham.

A voice called down. 'Wilson - how are you today. (I could recognise Wilson's voice - the Sidney tones of it - in a moment I knew also it was I said I was so glad to see him. How are you today - I am so delighted to see you. I had no anticipation of any one such such a very dear

I asked him if he had seen me this summer.

He said, yes. I mumbled to say I don't think it is wise for you to know so much [illegible]. I asked why he said that (fearing it might be that people were commenting, Wilson replied it takes so much to help us on as you do - there are the topics, and one thing and other, and requires a good deal of looking after. If I were doing it, I should own only one piece of property. (2)

I said I was holding it, some day I might give it to the nation (3) He replied nonsense, you should get the benefit of it for yourself. (4) He said you know the small price of the lake, I would sell it, if I were you, you would be able to get a good price for it. You could sell it of course this year, next, last-lake, it could be sold to some one else would take good care of it and also it would be nice to have as neighbours some one who would come + spend their summers there (I said what about the [illegible] he said the place you know I said I was holding it, might be found to be a good investment You should keep. You have made it so beautiful - that wonderful outlook on the Laurentians, you should keep that, (4) it will be good for you to own it - keep it for your own. You have made it so beautiful. (4) I asked if he had seen what I had been doing this summer - he said you have been touching it up (5) - made it so attractive you have been fixing it, the house looks better. I asked if he had seen what I had been building - the cottage - it, he laughed - said you will be a fortune the next thing I know. - I asked if he had any old friends. I could [illegible] - he said some-thing about one knowing what they did with [illegible] I spoke of the pictures he had given me - he smiled (as it seemed) in a modest way I referred to them as very fine - just what I - spoke about being always interested,

He said I will come + see you another time (6)

Shortly after:

Well well, good morning, this is Larkin, I am delighted to see you. I am getting so egotistical that I can hardly contain myself- I asked why he should say that, he replied You have done so well - I spoke about what I owed to him. I said I could never show what I did out for him. Mr Larkin said let me tell you something you know - You had brains, but for your brains you could not have done what you have, I know you would that is why I helped you, everything that was done and left was he cause of that, it was because I knew you (2)

Mr Larkin then said, we want to see you get back. (3)

help up the French - help is could mill the French. (4) Put them on the back and they will fall for you" He said you never what to do, held out the hand to them, - he lost out the last time, but now let us join. (5) I will have done anything for them and they recognise it. (6) -

From now on all depends on how he carries on what he does at the house - (I said for himself. Mr Larkin said what he does at Ottawa. I asked if he thought he could win, he said it doesn't look like it, (7) If people work as they take the work, (8) or is a lack of an effort, (9) He is afraid of you.

I asked about the C.C.F. Mr Larkin said. They are rallying round (10) - was something to the effect that it required they should be exposed - it needed ~~go back~~ going back + forth over the same ground it meant it was well if they were exposed. (11)

I then changed the subject and asked about my resignation, whether I had done right - he replied "Yes you have" Then he said also now it asked you about the bonds. I said it was suggested he said you knew why he did that. (12) I replied I suppose it was in reference to the condition of the country - He said Yes, the condition of the country is poor. The new bonds are not going on well (13)

Notes Nov 14. 1933.

(1) Since writing the opposite page, I have discovered that I myself had forgotten about having exchanged some of my books, that I thought I was reimbursing, and that it will have been better to make another loan before attempting to make the exchange, as I feared existing by it, and only disclosed my ignorance of my own affairs. - This is really quite remarkable

(2) This too is very significant - as here I am far from comfortable before the end

(3) when Barbie would see W. in the furnishing of the house

(4) On my table I have letters from Boston, re my investment there, which oppress me as I think Barbie would probably have handled. I ask his help as I write, for I shall answer that letter tomorrow.

(5) It will be annoying if this keys will not fit. - My house been empty now for some years.

the old ones. I spoke of the security. He replied it was that the new ones were not paying so much, I said I had thought it a good investment he said they had been talking of ones & were wondering if it would not be better to wait till next year. Just then Mary came in & the conversation changed. I replied that the old bonds I thought were payable then now. (I remember) that it might be difficult to get as good an investment. Mrs Forbes said she thought they would come down then now. He said his solicitor's concern had been that in buying the new bonds they would not give him so much a year of interest (all this is quite unintelligible, as I was sick last week that I made this out from Mrs. Forbes writing of my investments. I don't believe she knows anything about them) I have a new bond last night she said when Sir W. spoke of the bonds 'I thought Canadian first bonds, were about the best investment one could make'. I'm sure he could about the difference there is just now & what the change may be from a little later on. He went on to say he had been talking to Sir Wilfrid, I said I thought it would have been best to help the old ones. I asked about first bonds being a good investment - such. said they are "concrete"

When speaking of Mrs Forbes being still here now - Mrs Forbes I said dear Mrs Forbes! Mrs Forbes said She is so happy, very happy and perfectly contented in the 4th sphere. I said to give her my love. Mrs Forbes said he would, and said I am sorry to tell you, that all he did for you was done from the purest of motives and you he found you "true blue" — (something about that we feel it is not right. He went on to say Mrs Forbes sends you her fondest love.

Mrs Forbes then said, I was going to ask you if there is anything a spirit can do, which can help you, I want you to call on me, and how would I do this. She said just mentally say, Forbes I want you, & your assistance, help me with this or that. I said I would say 'Mrs Forbes' —

I then said Mrs Forbes you remember the keys you gave me of the Canadian Building in London. They have disappeared. I asked if he thought they were stolen. He said they have been misplaced

Notes Nov. 14-33.

(1) This is significant. I had said nothing to Judicials - where did they get their facts to be. They might have been at the office

(2) Sec weighed & low dominion heavy liquids is material

(3) I was leaving for Northumberland a day or two later

(4) We received a dog weighing 7 lbs & believed of over 6,000

(6) all this sound advice

(7) This is significant. I have been hearing 'whispers' as a tendency in profession

I do think they have been misled - I asked if he would help me to find them and he said "I will do my best". He said you will probably find them when you are not looking for them. I said as we were going down that I thought they might have been taken to Mill-down he said something about not having them on the tube. I said they were in the car, by boat & was when the room was being done out, things were sent away. I did not like to think they were stolen. He said I don't think anything has been stolen from Laurier House. (1) ?? I said something about possibly putting them in a cupboard - he said I will look them up - don't worry. He said to keep in touch with me. Also I come to see you every day. I was everything so well - God bless you."

Sir Wilfrid Laurier

I used the name Wilfrid

I said to Sir Wilfrid. So glad to hear you again. I have just been talking to Mr Larkin. Sir W. said we have been together quite a lot. He then said. I want to speak about the next few days. I feel anxious that the Quebec people (2) should will officials and know you (I knew. I could know nothing about the Quebec trip - I had said nothing of it.) I asked how Sir W. thought we should do - and he said "very well" (3) I then said "what about the work" - Sir Wilfrid said. Those people are not so much in touch with us. You have given them food for thought, they are wondering what is best to do (Sir W. was evidently thinking of the work generally.) I said what about Quebec do you think we shall win. Sir W. said "I do believe we will (5) I know that we are right. I know you have seen they are not keen on this government. Keep well in with the French They are an emotional people - fiery - a little difficult at times, but they will do everything to support you. Whenever there is a chance to use your manners (6) will them do it. You will have the majority with you we will fight, without getting nervous (7) I remember how I felt once. I went to my bed room and said I am not going to get nervous again, and I didn't, I said them again will I think

(1) - advice I need - good advice

(2) the difference between the two is accuracy - the memory of d'Ormonoglio being remarkable

(3) Now is quite significant in view of previous conversation. the mention of Macdonald's accordg to Wellman. Sir Wm married Mademoiselle Lavallée - died when he was age of resp 28 Shelton says Mac died " " " 3 sons of was further (Francis, married Adelaide Ethier, (2 sons lived there in the family) (see b26 d) 3 sons were of this marriage - (named as half brothers)

Shelton says 5 children (4 sons)
This is significant Sir Wilfrid referred to his brothers as half-brothers. this agrees with
'with the same father' known w.
with the same mother according to Wellman

At age 11-12 (attended Presbyterian School New Glasgow.
Shelton says was there 2 years. and Lucie must the memory part of the two with evidently had been placed in the family
3 years subsequently -

(4) Now must refer to previous conversation —

(5) Now would all imply a knowledge on the part of the brothers of what was told considerably in conversation.

I recall when Sir Wilfrid half-brother died, it did not seem to concern him in the least - I never knew at the time a note of sympathy - if I recall right
In Shelton's life - he records the passing of Sir Wilfrid as Henri Charles Wilfrid -

(6) there cannot appear to be some confusion or error here Henri Charles was never used.

I had thought Pembroke was in Nova Scotia evidently it was 12 miles distant from St. Rose in Gaspe also Sir Wilfrid appears to have been on a Grand R.C. family tour other memory store - I had thought it was at the memory he (see Wellman life of Laurier.) Shelton says he was 2 years in New Glasgow & lived some months with the Murrays

7. Now - this is what I did

8. This is very similar to what Sir W. advised for Gaspe. it a previous conversation

9. This is what I did - a good effect.

nothing is going to make me shrink, that's the only. I had courage because I cultivated it, cultivated it! (1) battle with a smile. We can fight such a person & not-love them but respect.

A word or two in French will carry you. They love to hear their own mother tongue. You have pitched up well. Forbes Stokes. If he heard me at Bruton's etc. He said yes, the people were annoyed. When he said at d'Assomption they were delighted (2) (I had not used the word once in speaking to anyone). ~~I said to him~~ I asked Sir Wilfrid if his mother was home at d'Assomption — he said something about "my mother" — (a trick I did not catch —) & was "my mother — you know my brothers — not with the same follies (3) — they were always anxious lest I would go with the Macdonalds. And the Roman Catholics (4) I was always getting in their way, like I became Prime Minister & they had write me for me (a wonder it not effect.) My mother married a Frenchman (5) — You know how I got my education — how it was hard for. My brothers were willing to me — when I became famous they would not consider this. They thought that I would do credit for you. My mother thought — I held my ground — I was cast in the way of the others. — You know about the money came from to help me. Sister of the home in Nova Scotia (6), — Sir Wilfrid said yes and I bank on the people down there. I would like you to speak to them of me when you go down.

I said I read he in Compellier & Edmonton on Thursday & Friday & he said that is wonderful. You must think of what you are doing now. I asked Sir W. to advise me. He said you must form the workingmen & the farmers, there are many of them there. (7) Tell them you want to help them, but that you need their help in order to do so. Speak them with all your heart, Say to them that you want to do for them as much as Laurier, or he would do if he were there in your (my) place (8) — When you tell them that we must have the men who make your bread & on your (our) bread & eat) for feed their soul — then they will help us. Say that you are working for the man that feeds you. Also for the workingman whose labour is necessary to the business man & bank there on which trade

Notes Nov. 14. 33.

(1) All this is evidence of a noble soul, as well as great advocate professionally. It was fashioned & made good results.

(2) This remains to be seen. (Many are now believing this book-music such as lasted on till 1935. My ruling accounts must stand / have been told)

3. This is what I have been told has taken place. The Party wants him to run again to march to stay out

(4) Of this I have no knowledge except what he tells me. The only element the Party wanting him. Lord & England is most evidential - that is exactly what she wanted most. The fact of knowledge of this being 'the Party' is quite significant

(5) This is an expression Churchill learning has been using, as a reason they he should go to England - the other time may & many endeavour of the Others' - quite returning from England.

6. This is evident working

7. Significant. Party learning - pleading exactly as true.

these brothers, they are under the same God. under the same canopy of Heaven. Speak to them yourself & you will be a welcome. You are not out for selfish motives. You are for the good of humanity. What you are struggling out to bring home to them that you need their hands to accomplish anything on their behalf without your hand I cannot accomplish anything'

I asked if we would have an early session. Sir W. said not an early session, but very early - things will drag (?) along (he may have meant slow in starting) he said it looks like an election.(2) As to Burnett, I asked if he were likely to drop out. Sir Wilfrid said Burnett's party would have to run again.(3) I don't know I asked if Mrs Mc- likely to go to England Sir Wilfrid said "the lady he is associated with would like him to go to the old country. I asked if he were still attached to her? Sir Wilfrid said "Oh yes"(4) He added he is not without money(5) I will see you again tomorrow - I want you to know I am always with you you know if I am silent, I am here. You are the one man out of all the world that I have that I could trust. You were so loyal to me.(6) My wife and I felt that. - I confess She is here with me - a voice said quickly "oui"(7) then Sir Wilfrid said something more and the same sweet voice said "je comprends" - He said speak more in French. Keep in touch with the French. Tell them you are with them, that you have the helping hand for their good wishes.

E. J. S. Lindsey

Then the word 'George' I said George Lindsey - he said yes. I said how are you - he said fine - very fine, how glad I am to see you though - my you are looking well. I said I know he was reading a book of yours George - he said yes what is that. I said you remember about crochet - he said you don't know how long you have been fooling away your time with that. I mean the Lace,(1) it was great fun. I said it was a book you gave your mother. George say "dedicated to mother" (I don't think it was correct - you can't serve &.) I said have you any message you would like to give to any of the loved ones. George said don't you think it if it is one will to obey nothing, there will then be no danger of christmas I said - the boys were fine - George said they are boys - wonderful boys. I said Dora is well. - he said yes. Don't say anything at all - after you get there you must, and if all works as they said you will get there, then you can talk as much as you like(3)

Don't get nervous. keep a bold front - and go ahead.(4)

Dr Sharp well now here we are, glad to see you again, did you have a decent sleep - you are feeling better and fresher(5)

we are to have another seance this afternoon and one this evening, tomorrow some more - we will see you again.(5)

I said Dr Sharp about that letter - before you go. was it 'Mr' - or M. - he said it looked to me like 'Mrs'. - I thought it was an M. I said

It have been to Mrs. Lambert. He said was it was to Mrs Frank(6) - called out Frank at the voice (I have never mentioned the name here) You may be sure it was no one of her relations that would get the letter(7). It was probably sent from one Sphere to another. You know the lady travels about a good deal. She is often in one place then in another(8). He added "No harm can come out of it"(9) I said until it was he said to have (or something like that - Dr Sharp said well see that if will do us harm. We'll see you again - God bless you

October 16. 1933. afternoon Mrs Worrall. Miss Shennie. Mrs Sterling

Mrs Nelson. — father in law of Mrs Shennie. — was 92 years of age at his death passed away 15 years ago, was born in St Petersburg Mrs Shennie spoke of Composer.
had been telling us he had seen a face looked like Mrs Shennie's on the window sill early morning. He thought it was an angel. — The voice said Frederick — and then it went on I was to see you this morning. He spoke of Mrs Shennie as a good son-in-law, glad to see you: your friends, addressed a few words to Mrs Sterling & Mrs Worrall, said he hoped Mrs Shennie was well & not worrying — when told he was not, said, that is a blessing — spoke of illness being difficult but said we will come out victorious later on When introduced Gen-he said he then said 'I am very grateful of our country (England) they are telling us into more difficulties. I am not a prophet but conditions are such I can see Germany, Austria, Japan, Russia, England is perturbed at conditions in Germany. Hitler is going to give Germany a long race, he is going to upset everything

Would did he think there would be war. He said oh yes, sometimes war
It will start when people are least ~~sleeping~~ looked for, we should not be surprised at it coming at any time

The United States has developed considerably in the last 3 years and is going to take a long time to get back. We will never

I hope we will get you back again — you have a place in our hearts. — want you to spread the truth. She would keep praying. We realise the day what it is. We are sure of help & more it gently and not radically — keep your body upright

As then with Mrs Shennie, the boys are all well. Mrs Worrall de-

Mrs Bellhaven. Then was the next lady who spoke. Her voice sounded very sad. She asked for Mrs Shennie & Mrs Worrall, and addressed herself to Mrs Sterling. Then Sterling asked how is Lynette — reply was she feels badly about the children — asked how the ones were behaving. replied not very badly, referred to some suffering & said behaviour ? do, it still remains. We cannot forget. unless we lose of memory. cannot forget as long as those we love are suffering for our

A question was asked about one of the boys - Mrs B. said he is suffering a lot of it is his own fault. Mrs Sterling asked will the children get anything from the Estate, the reply was not for some time. Then she said, the ordeal is terrible. I felt a little ashamed of the way things have come, all are married. I wonder what it is all for, what is the struggle for. For comfort and happiness here if you own are all ob daggers drawn swords pointed against each other. Mrs Sterling tried to comfort her. but her voice was very sad, — an intense remorse eating the very soul out.

Mrs Skinner told me this lady had sold some property she had for £100.000 and invested the proceeds at Baden Baden at the time of the boom. of buying a duplex house & living in one part. & leaving her son(?) & three children lived in the other half, as her husband pre-ferred. they had lost all. the children were fighting about each other dont speak to this, It was a revealing reference.

Mrs Sterlings grandmother the eight person was an old lady also spoke at service. she referred Sunday as "Gross sunday" and spoke also of "Gross valei" & had about the different members of family "die klein" & referred to different ones as all will be.

Mrs Skinner. was invited at once Mrs Skinner — she referred to their new home and said "I helped to decorate it" I felt the decorations on. she spoke of the fine outlook, and seeing Mrs Sterling spoke of how she had everything so clean. & to Mrs Skinner about looking so well — She spoke to her & recalled the bath I had at the time of last visit & said "the more of her he comes, the better he or" She told Mrs Skinner she was quite ill on the night previous (she said it was a lovely afternoon & it was one of the best nights they had had. She asked for Mrs Sterling's address — as I knew she said to me she helped & nursed her well. I could hear the tenderness she was giving Mrs Skinner as she left.

Notes Nov 16.

(1) Parlett came upon it in the summer of 1932 at Kingsmere

(2) This is significant – it would be interesting to see to what degree Lady Laurier's attitude towards Parlett were the cause of Thomas attitude being able to speak with such a man.

(3) This is absolutely true – I had not been watching the vocal pronunciation it is very remarkable that anything like an inflection could be written & communicated upon and demonstrated.

(4) This is what I have been doing – literally true

(5) This is quite remarkable. The services of so capable a man – heavily I have availed and his help in saving 'Rab' life & other been given

(6) I spoke with Mrs Stafford Gardiner – writing Abbotsford was formerly an absurd exaggeration of the words bungalow in evidence of Gardiner 'fancy' and the Laurier Lady Laurier has used of Lake The house I would know who was meant. I gave her love to Mrs Stafford over the phone yesterday

(7). This addition also not understood – Grace Laurier was Stafford's sister, at home with us

Lewis Morris.

He enclosed some verses in regard their friend. Said he was from Wales, gave the name Morris.(1) I asked if he were Lewis Morris the Land Surveyor. I had difficulty in making out what he said. He was glad he helped I would have a Welsh friend, that I shan't do. Lady Laurie intervened and said that he had thought he would come, & have an hour & speak French better,(2) & get a better expression; that it would be well for me & have a private tuition. My vocal expression was not perfect - that the vocal expression was important for the French.(3) That it was better to have it that way than to pick up bit by bit,(4) to talk to as many as I could He said that if I wanted, he would help me to get the pronunciation(5) - I said to Lady Laurie Morris was a very great man - She said he is a brilliant man - then she went on to talk English - talk French & then she talk French so as to show the vocal sound - She gave some illustrations on Sentiment (the vocal S.)(3) - I asked what Morris thought of mine - (I think the reply was, but of this I am not sure - to say they will have me something about. not being good for any country

Lady Laurie then said what did you hear from Henry.(6)
I introduced Lady Laurie to the other Indian. She said You know how I thought about him, I thought it must be the work of the devil, that it could not do any good. She said then You know how she whipped feet about it. Henry tried to enliven her, but I need not tell him. - She said give my love to Henry when you see her. and added and to Flossy.(7)

Sir Shamier. Sir — Shamier & then so said I had to have a talk with you, (to Mr Shamier. I was telling him with you, you deserve him very much. - it was rather scrubby but judicious (Mr Shamier explained that they had had little sandwiches down our from lots of ham & egg & apple sauce & cake & then water, he spoke to me & I recalled one talk & his mention of having been at the Galleries, he said he had been there at a recital & he knew that it was allowed to be loud for that occasion, must be thought him

Notes Work 16:

(1) Mrs is true – It was at a previous session in Oct 1908

(2) Mrs is not I would work with

(3) I died

(4) Mrs was then busy had said it previously boss treatment was the last of all. I knew my trouble, he said & how to treat it — he said about the country, they were not getting ahead very fast. — that he did not tell Mrs Skinner & the condition of the country, that it was better for her not to know (Mrs Skinner told me his father died 1875 of hospital disease

I soon heard a voice saying Bella — I introduced her & husband (Mrs Skinner and she said to them "I was at your house." (1) She said she was very well. — then she said to me "mother wants me to let you know that she prays for you every day" — that you are not alone (2) then she said, You are going to see the boys on the way back (3) I said Yes. She said that was nice, I asked her if she was fond Children. She said Yes. I mean the children — then she referred to part of Mrs's boys. said they don't want you to come do. everything is going on nicely — doesn't want. You to undertake them. Sent them money to spend, with that boys do better when they know the value of every cent. (4) I said I would not do that but would see about them & behind them in the country any need — I said to Bella that you had asked me to give her, her love & to give her love to her mother & follow Nancy. I repeated She asked me to give her love to you. Bella replied, and I accept it with love.

Vision — Elderly woman. Was middle sized I mean person in a hooded shawl, the head is about her shoulders, ~~her hair is black~~ It is black & grey mixed. the hair is black & is brushed back — I asked if it could be grandmother's recharge — mean her hair parted. Mrs M. said no — the vision faded out. Then there was one seen there for short sitting

Ed Rooney - a friend of Mrs Shannon, based abroad for 15 years. Was absorbed in Shannon's affairs - chiefly concern - found out if you could

Said he had been shy about offering, he felt he might [illegible] Mrs Shannon

Audrey - referred to having a meeting at his office & asked if Rooney had been there. He said no. Said something about some phone calls & messages - then he went on to speak of the present conditions and said times are going to be worse. The worst is still to come. This country is going against its own constitution. We don't want a dictator - Mrs Shannon said Roosevelt is a dictator - Mr Rooney said 'I would say he is'. He said they are scrapping the N.R.A. & force, the men who are living about & put them out are being employed & things will for it - he spoke of Roosevelt being too severe - and said the N.R.A. was going to go "phut" "finish" He repeated the worst is to come, He concluded by telling Mrs Shannon he was looking so well he would have liked him. He said you are "a wonderfully preserved man"

Mrs Shannon - reflections. I heard sounds of someone being heard. It was Mrs Shannon saying good by to Mrs Shannon Audrey. Mrs Shannon said - that when she does that it is always the end of the Setting'

All the doors seemed a little mad - the day is different. Room out of doors - furniture as it is in the house. day very muted - It is a wonder, it was as good as it is

Version of tall lady in black

What we were having tea in the dining room. Mrs Ward said she saw a tall lady - dressed in black - light falling down from the [illegible] of the [illegible] room, as it were from the [illegible] and the drawing room. - it was beyond [illegible] Shannon was sitting at the table

Mr Shannon says he sees pictures occasionally, on the stairs & elsewhere - always knows when well being is compounded

Notes Nov. 16-33

1. Mrs Allen was not in my thoughts in any way. I have seen [illegible] incorrect & obvious (must type to Allens)

2 Mrs Allen was an old friend, at the dinner the other evening when [illegible] "Mrs Allen was always for the King - she would have had a word to [illegible] against you"

3. This was quite true - the mention of this has however in the way was very like Mrs Allen

4 This mention of Mother in connection with Kensington was also significant

5 There may have been some feeling about Gilbert B. being so fond of Edith Cavell's [illegible] of this I cannot say or believe. This came as a surprise. It was this Mother's mention of Mrs Allen.

6. This [illegible] is like Mrs Allen

October 16 1933. — Evening. Mrs Worrall-Jeffs. 7.45-6-9

— Coffee with a little wait.

Mrs. Worrall says there is a spirit here by the name of Allen
It is working out the name.

Mrs Gilbert Allen Said is it Gilbert Allen or Mrs. Allen.

The voice said Mrs Allen.

" She said, You know I felt so long about you. I felt I ought to see you." How are you, I asked, I am well wonderfully well, perfectly all right. You know we are not brought the right lessons. Our religion does not (or fails to) give the truth of the life beyond, the fear death so many people are afraid to die, or only want to die to get out of the world. May pass the heresies. I found it a fabulous spot; I found gardens, with beautiful flowers and some wonderful people, splendid musicians, (poets, writers, great) orators, and musicians. We have our friends some people think we stay in the one spot. We don't know the spirit life, we move about in spheres. They only do we have one in the one spot — we have it spheres, have the gift of love The people who live here in this world are not all how saintly it is against the law of nature but do the best we can. There are no forced laws, Sir Isaac Newton laws, it's how we do the best we know how - are kind and helpful to each other in general in all mankind - we take along with us what we are & work on into higher spheres.

How long I asked if she remembered when we lived. And she said beside the well below at Kingsmere — Have you been to Lonely Home at Laurier House? (3) I said I have died here. She said I went and at Kingsmere. I remember the well cottage & garden there, and your dear mother. (4) And she said mother. Every day I see her. We talk about those things days — I found you have another great friend there. She said, who? I said Isaac Bronfell - & my passport here Allen said I don't see her often. It is not the length of time it is what we have done for humanity. She is in the 5th sphere I am in the 6th. (I and have been inclined & have to do some thing and have been rewarded. So have Bronfman been a very good girl in church work &. Mrs Worrall knew & I say it more with belief in doctrine & well for she that they had known more all that. Mrs Allen said I very seldom see her. (They were almost inseparable at Kingsmere. (5) I asked about Mrs Herridge - Mrs Allen said she is quiet or lonesome as ever (6)

1. Mrs Jodi Wells - And Jesus positive was in very time in existence. Evidently the whole conversation is
2. I married Christ
3. Nov - a spirit took us - there is some spirit that knows, & the Bible must be found I believe. ✗
4. Ub to this point nothing had been said about Bible prophecy at a table.
5. Mr Shipley - had suggested that a mix up - & that the Bible and God get back into the world - which would send it on. ✗.

She said the Spirit is the world of natural laws — everlasting and eternal, & the laws of love. There is no fixed laws — over all here there is love and sunshine

It was almost a monologue — Walter straight ahead. an account of the beauty of the Spiritual world.

Mother

In a few moments came the words very clear

My dear Son. — I said at once, dear dear Mother. How dear Mother spelled her as well, & said how glad she was & to hear her Mother said "Oh here we are all. I thank you for this privilege". Here Mother went on & say she wished Mother would come soon & call Olive after she was alone here. I will, dear Mother said, & knew in saying she was so kind. Here we said then said I was so kind, that I had had her come & she, & in my home, that one & my brother if people heard of me for doing so much for her, in her behalf & relation & life and say that I was crazy. Mother went and answered said, Oh no, here we are, If they knew you they would say so — you are so generous and kind — and often here we met Walter speaking of the pleasure it was to her — Mother said I thank you for all the good-will. Here we said said, we must do all we can & get here back into — that big chair I sent. & Mother Mother replied "if it's God's will, it will be — God is omnipotent, God is Good" I said Mother and help me — she said — your father".

I then spoke about the letter that had gone astray — Mother said You worried too much about that letter" — a Spirit told me that she didn't get it — (something about. If I should have it returned. Then Mother said I thought it was, strange that she did not know for it, if she was registered at the Post at the time I asked & they would not find it. Mother said it's a difficult thing to do — (something about) will try it — (also something) it was not a shiftless move — was she at that table at the time If she was registered she should get it" — I said Mother you remember I prayed & you about it, I mailed both that was right.

Kōan Nov. 10

1. This was literally true. - both as to the 'overreaching' & 'knowing better' & considering the circumstance that the statement had to be made in terms of medical knowing was an annoying & adroit one
2. I had recollected others words at once that I had been asked about something that I did not think I should have been - this answer does happen and is equally so in giving me what I wanted to know & what is I said when I was sick
3. Was there complete knowledge of exactly what was taking place
4. This is what I call f.f.
5. That I can see it true in view of the life & the work, this truth is made that it most concerned - but for this realities.
6. Fear - danger of wrecking is out-side (see her words)
7. This is true as to demands on one's time &
8. Was significant, as the start of living to come - I don't see encouragement
9. The direct mention of Obama was annoying, & here is straight guidance &. I can see where wisdom can see what call there would be &
10. Note - not it is destroyed - - but needs us. - that is significant

Not long & from you any concern - most comforting.

11 This this more significant to me of the other - & true & wisdom's choice or I know it would be
12. This bringing in of Nancy disclosed knowledge of whole family 13 This means to Obama. Joan was loving for us.
14 All this is true - how to get this time the problem.
15 This is keeping with Father's statement &c. & he former & sound opinions 16 This gratuitous mention of the Headings - is [illegible] upon. Here we wanted more than of this 17 She did have her Comm

Mother then said

"My dear son, I do think she was overreaching. She ought to have known better." I said I am going to New York. What ought I to say to her. "Just tell her you prefer her writing you for information. You understand what I mean[2]: You think it better not to carry on, much better[3]. I would prefer you staying as you are, and how you doing your own work, and her doing hers[4]. She is not your type[5]. She is not the person I would like to tell too much to[6]. She would soon become a bit of a nuisance[7] and I don't want her at the house[8]. I want you to be careful not to harbour such people – that she is good, not that she is not likable, but there are more reasons than one I don't want her to come to Allanton. She had much better stay with her own people — Before any of the letter, and mother said It will be destroyed, nothing will come out of it It is not going to give you any concern

I said Joan had mailed me a few words for you, mother said give my love, and many many prayers for my dear Joan I think the world of Joan"[9] — And she wanted me to tell her love to her father & mother. — mother said, I will, and I know[12]. Nancy is a darling. She is with her mother tonight[13]. Said perhaps she could get her to come tomorrow

Mother then said. My dear dear Son, I want you to be happy not to be over studying. Give your brain time to rest.. You absorb everything into your studies – You must give yourself time to think & look about it[14].

I said mother do you find me vicious – mother said father is so helpful to you, so is grandfather, he is so helpful.[15] I asked how he was, mother replied the medicines are doing well[16] I asked about aunt Jessie[17] said I hadn't had a card all last week. mother said I thought I would ask her some day[17]? She say do you know she is with the children in the kindergarten – She loves children

① This was true in her childhood days

I said what are you doing - Winston said they won't let me do anything I do what I please, - so I just do what I please. We laughed about it - as Winston did = said food for you - Illustrates characteristic of what Winston says his attitude towards her was as a child

I asked next if Winston could write now, when am very ill. She said there is an historian. There are several who come to see you, I don't know who they are, they seem to be helping and leading good-natured dear.

Yours ever his love

Alexander Macpherson. (was Editor Berlin Telegraph - a friend of Bottomley & uncle D. Macdonald.)

It was difficult to make out the words - it was repeated several times = then it came clearly Macpherson. I asked if Winston = he said yes. I came to see you, I dare say in a few days you are You are not too tired after your long talk in the Summer I spoke about - his letter asked if he remembered it. He said some liked it and some disliked - I tried to draw him out. He was difficult to pronounce. I said the Telegraph - was he. Person said yes. - then he went on to say it is not here now. He could in the name. It was perhaps the name that pulled it. (some other here) I asked if he saw him he: Dongas (Boer war) he said he was here then afterwards (I thought I said this on a cricket) - Winston very comfortable I said he enjoyed how is he. he is not well yet. Mrs Macpherson said helped is not well as is doing very well.

I asked if he saw Pollie - Winston. He said. "He often goes around the old place where you lived when you were children - I said at Woodside = he said yes. He said Jack Churchill looks wonderfully well

I asked if he knew Winston's address (He said at first. he cannot spare = then he said he is good still. Is his health better? I thought he had come over here - I said he was still living: Mrs Hozier or then said to me "You stay on for a long time. I asked if he thought I and he returned to Yours. He said if you are not back it will not be your fault - You know a fairly good chance keep going, however angry.

This conversation has nearly ended when we would said some one is standing here with a white horse. I said is that Bill (who owns our old horse) a voice said that is correct that you father, – father said I am so glad to see you. I said mother – mother we can't go through the air, I am don't know to go with horn and cart – your mother said. I not rather – to with the horn & cart where I wanted to go. Then we the air machine (or something to this effect) (the horn & cart is what we had at wood-ridge)

I said to father something of this kind. He said I know I am interesting you. anything I feel of that I want must help you I will tell you know. I don't want you to get too much on (I did not get on with many here!) these lines, so carefully and judicially, I don't want friends people bothering you. You have responsible work. I said I was interested in this psychical study father said it all helps a little, but don't hand it out to people to investigate. Everybody has their own way of looking at things and you know a different way than many of them. They won't understand

I next spoke to father of reading of the death of the ones of people & thinking it was like this.

Father then said I tell you. My death was caused through tobacco. I felt poorly some time, but I felt as if so affected my bowels – my brother was all in the bowels. I was not poisoned, but neglected. It was not the effect of the drug given me, it was the poison that affected my heart. The pain was terrible (This is a true account – I once once said to me the thought father was poisoned – I had been reading Socrates poison myself or heard & wondered if it was a common. also mother feared she had given him some meat – that they might have been tainted, but Uranium out – father made it clear, it was something going on for some little time. He then said something about being dead it was not a long illness for the sake of those left behind father then said. How is everything going? Later on the Indian spoke to me. He said (much to my surprise) I did not care very much for them on the prairies. I asked in what way. He said 'How do they know?' He said, Don't try to instil into their heart the Christian to them. I said what more I do - teach them love and common decency, & let them work out their plans of life as they can best for them. (This did not sound like father, I could not quite get the meaning.)

I said you like them a good deal - father said I never disliked anyone - I respected them. He said them a good life. I tried to live the Golden rule. I never cheated. Tho' many tried & cheated father of trouser material, father said. he is a wonderful man, he thought a lot of him - father then said that he and I had been on a boat with him, on a picnic somewhere, I could not recall that. but I think of driving a pony & trap to see him, father asked if mother were along. I said I thought so. We went to the Parents & Friends. He said for were too young & remember that, I said no, I recalled it. I was not sure if mother were along

I then spoke about our last old country - father said indeed he did, "for were so much younger - it was a great trip, I asked if the remembered our visit to Ford Castle & he said indeed he did, he often sang him. I asked if he remembered Sir father then ended the interview by saying (Thank you)

I thank you for this privilege

Bradon Castle - here we could see the sons & shadows in front of the moving towards her. She asked if me if I knew any one here - then, Fenwick - I could think of no one of either name (as I write I think of more Fenwicks — of course, but she is still living) for an hour - She then said there is a man with a crutch, and a cane hook - a crutch — then some one saying to me a name it looks like Fabyan Gabriel - (Harry Fabyan Gabriel) Do you know any one I know of Grants, I thought of Fabyan. Supreme Court - Englis Supreme Courts

As I was writing I caught sight of the name of her husband, but I recall he was on the Supreme Court Bench — Was been away in Quebec — Even if Helen had written — She is our old friend. Her husband is much older than she is. retired some years ago. He maybe the one is boring. or has passed away. I shall probably get the name later when I get a letter from her. I know it now — it is Mulock.

The name Wallis appeared. Could that be one (might how the Wallis Bounds [illegible]

Charles Hildreth — In a few moments came Charles Hildreth — He said I don't want to interrupt or intrude, but is the friend of working I have had. I owe it to my old friend Kay. I said I was so glad to see him. Come forth. I remember once he found of him [illegible] replied 'I was found of him' — he then spoke of how many had bored ones — a great many, it is astounding how many have come. I said Wentworth was still here & he said, he was doing well — I said Osgoode was gone. he was killed — Hildreth said I was very sad. I spoke of Charles Moss he said his Moss is wonderful & spoke Falconbridge. he referred also to him. I spoke of the new Milton — he did not seem to mean, I asked about Perin he was in. he said something about — one being all together. (I cried out catch — the Bones was over, much) I spoke to Charles Bethune he said something would be wanted in case here — when I questioned him he said he was hopeful I spoke most of work & remember. on & then all he replied & saying 'time my love & all — — but I could catch the last

Charles Bethune — I just heard a voice strangely very hard to make itself heard & understood. Charley (Smelling) I couldn't make out. "I want a seat I will let it down. he said dear Sandilands. turned at the Magbraugh. — Then I said Charles Bethune & he said yes. (Surname) I said how are you Charlie. what I often wished I had seen more of him he said I came over Coffee till I came over — I said you were pretty busy — he said it would keep a man busy. I asked if he was all right & how. after he had ridiculed I knew about the trouble was. She said something about 'not so much' the then said he wished to see — they had thought to have been seen & heard — to be seen & heard & to know I would well [illegible] be such [illegible] can tell me much again'

As I thought of this conversation. It seemed to me very significant that Geo. & Charlie Ritchie and Charlie Williams should all come on the same day. They were all lawyers & great-crowders. were more together & were all friends of Collins. - This is most evidential.

— here would then come some man with one arm - he was medium sized. I was unable to place him. Many of the men of Dover Mr. Miller - both were tall men.

The house was small - all seemed to know definitely [illegible] the took. The selling took for one an hour. 7.45 & 9.

October 17. Morning Sitting – Miss Wendt's self

Dr Sharp: Hey dear Miss, and how are you this morning. The time of your visit is 10 o'clock, Dr Sharp. I am glad – we are all glad to know a word with you. It means a lot to us your coming a long way to talk, it enables us more fully to think of a person in your position in the world and with the people sharing this time with us. I want to thank you again and again. It helps us to talk with you

I asked if Dr Sharp desired that all this psychic speculation should become a great force in the world. – Dr Sharp replied: It has been held back by prejudice, by persecution and ignorance, a little later on it might – in the next 50 years – it may become a new religion – which will endure if possible for men to progress the truth

Here we must stop about the telephone – some yesterday. Dr Sharp asked her whether she was going to do with them all – the –

I asked about my Spirit guide – could he tell me who they were. Dr Sharp replied You have an ancient guide – a Philosopher – he doesn't talk English, or French, or German ( ) more long ago. Then Dr Sharp continued. he is one of the old heads (?) of the Old Philosophers – he is from the highest costs of the Heavens. He that worships in white is white and Yellow and Gold. Now I must explain this to you white is the Spirit – the Gold is the truth, the (echo?) Yellow is the Spirit. White is purity – the sky is pure – the ecclesiasm = the ether comes from the long vibrations. Ether has life and all combined (?) must mean thought = vibrations – all materialize into a form.

Do you see an apparition – it is your presence (thoughts?) the atmosphere – there are elements in the atmosphere we do not yet understand – all kinds of chemicals which have not yet been discovered – they are absorbed of other substances – A time will come when some great man will invent – a ship that sails in the air – it will penetrate the breezes heat and cold and pass over that into the borders — there are millions of worlds in in heaven they call it – all atmospheric bursts, hail and cold hail – frozen hail, and when it is hot it bursts like a concrete bursts – it passes through the heat, when that breaks it may destroy when it goes there through that frozen destruct (?) that is a cloud burst that smashes everything when it falls – there are thousands of such bursts when rain falls – something almost ~~accurate~~ clouds of bursts in a current – then you have rain

My dear man, there are thousands on this side of hell that don't know half as much as you do – you have learned the laws of attraction where they in their day have known only evolution – In the limited globe they have made more discoveries than any ~~other~~ where in the world else. Even like you have ~~explained~~ – all you do is the result of years ~~reading on~~ but you are ~~not~~ ~~here~~ ~~the~~
~~to the right~~ through the right help (?) perseverance has sent.
You where you are. and perseverence will bring you the men come back and impress you, you carry on, you can carry on ones might = carry on, keep the impressions for the moment & your work (for the present) and you will astonish people later on.

(This was a clear call to keep records etc – keep all secret accounts = that later there would be something to show the world that would mean a real advance of knowledge.

At Hon Wm Ewart Gladstone

a voice – "are you there" I will this effort (trying) of trying to you (invisible), (but I hope not unwelcome) ~~or~~ or somewhat like quite unexpected.
Men – Mr of Gladstone:

"My dear friend, I have come not invited – I come in ~~this extraordinary manner~~ ~~extraordinary~~ ~~notice~~ ~~because of others~~
I am much interested, I am sure you know I am in earnest in the
~~you may conceive~~ ~~have you~~ carrying on in Canada – the progress

I visit the homes of Parliament many times
I am a constant (?) Guest in that House
I have a great admiration for Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his fellow Gentlemen who has made some mistakes as I have made mistakes the only feature which I criticize – would like them more when to come the French the liberation & their freedom to carry on in their determining way

The French have carried on their power in an extraordinary and have who possess and dominate their part of the country
Religion hasn't any right to take possession of the soul of any country (and body)
Religion is just a faith and a hope but not a fact. It is not a fact

I was talking with Mr Wilfrid about this. and he said Gladstone
I agree with you Jack I lived among the French and in Switzerland all my life. I feel keenly disloyal to say, religion they do dominate but what they may do does not prevent us from carrying on in our own way

There may be a time coming when the French may take full possession if they were not corrupt in Canada. They are there in great numbers in Canada as you know

Now it is up to your good judgement to keep in con-fidence with the Roman Church. keep in touch with the French, they can do mighty things for you

I take this opportunity to speak to you

I have spoken many times in England as this lady knows, (Miss Wilfrid said yes. she did.
I owe you a debt of courtesy and respect and love and some day not far off you will find (in Christ) a refuge

Morris:

a word to my dear Son

Mrs Wilfrid said something about as dear dads you are like sunshine – Morris replied I want to be sunshine Morris cried to me" May Heaven give you grace enough for what you have done so beautifully

How thankful I am to be able to speak to you in the the presence of her Gladstone. You know what we all feel about him. There is a fountain of love in everybody, we can find love everywhere. Love is the foundation of all good. I am always well in heaven

I asked Morris to thank Mrs Gladstone for coming, and to ask him to help to console me. She said. He will gladly. he is very fond of Mr Wilfrid

I said to him do you ever see the Lord they

Mother said. He comes in for tea in the ~~[illegible]~~ house in Chelsea occasionally. He had quite an admiration for Sir Wilfrid Sir Wilfrid would like to be in my house with him. Occasionally I play for them or the piano. Lady Tennyson and I play. We have a reception of all sorts. The House is very empty (I asked with-out the Library or Tennis Courts, and she said Yes.) Speaking of Lord Grey she said we call him Sir Edward. He is an admirable fellow, just as jovial as he can be. I said to give my love to him and to ask him to help. Mother said she would. I asked of Mother Son Lady Glenconner. She said Lady Glenconner is much the same facially. She is very much him, his jovial ~~[illegible]~~ is.
She said I am always miss for him. No matter where he is we be together - if he is away I stay with you - I said do you remember going to Door to see Horses walk. and Mother said yes. I spoke of Nurse Nevins
I asked about Mrs. Pitcher, whether she saw him. Mother said. He is with his own people. I have nothing in common with Mrs Pitcher - if he comes my way, we talk, if Mother then said How is Joan. Give her my fond love. I love her. I said She sent her love to you & to her father + Mother + Nancy. I said to Nancy then. She said Nancy is away with her mother. She has been with her Aunt most much. They are going away today. She is with her mother + then been right along I said Indeed an old Servant of Kingsmere - Mother said I couldn't stay away from you, it was so lonely - childhood + boyhood and manhood (This is quite remarkable - It is what I represent during his seven months. childhood, boyhood manhood. - com-panionship of all those days. See his other journal)

I do hope you miss Pitcher as you and completely as Sir Wilfrid and do as he suggests.
I spoke of Grandfather, and I said he & Grandmother said Grandfather will come & see you -
Good by - thanks for very much.

Harper

How are you - (I couldn't hear my self)

Here is Henry - (I said to Henry Thornton, he said his boss wouldn't said - he said he was drowned.. He voice then said this is Harper, you don't know how glad I am to see you, I was told you were here. The doctor told me you were here. He is helping the boys. his sons. I said that; The same sickness occasionally & her daughter, what a fine girl she is. Bert said don't she a lovely girl. I said thank you very well. Bert said he is. - He then said how are things going in the Prisons. I said the Colonels. I thought were getting ahead. - he expressed delight at that. I asked what he was doing. He said I am sent my parents. my sister & her family. I asked if his wife were there. He said I sent said my parents & mother & sister & brother & wife - the. I asked if he knew heard of Harris. He said not often. It includes a great difference when only one is gone - (he said something of his own knowing where he was, - I wondered if he had referred to her sudden death - he added I have to stop coming from that suburb. (it looks like on my notes - if so it must be the wrong & her reference is his from being neglected & I would recently from Penn & Barry Thornbury to about it being about a condition, I asked if he saw Wilfred Campbell - he said occasionally. I spoke of Campbell's poem on him. He said it was a fine poem I asked if he remembered Kipling. He replied indeed he did "and one walk down the Long Trail" - (Her husband used to speak of one I belong to all down the path (her eyes filling with tears) I asked if he had been out & he said 'not this summer' for he had a bad summer I asked about her husband & he said. She is wonderfully well. I said I remember me & her I spoke of Norah & I said I remember her also - he said always see a friend of yours I say 'hello for you'

I asked about Mr Thornley - Bert said 'he helped to O.'

1. Mais quels sujets choisir - Le calcul me semble [illegible] accessoire pour [illegible]

I asked what he was doing. He said he is calling around to all his constituents he can find — at times — the doors of his readers he would follow up and see if what he said, and did he did the right thing

I asked what he thought Wrights

he said religion is formulated & the words of man religion is made, there are hundreds of religions

True religion is formed of God. Everything is God that is good & true religion is our conscience

{ This interview : one of several suggested follow-ups I was unable at Windsor Hotel, after reading Mon Christ. afternoon of Oct-18, 23

Mary Oct 23rd

I heard a voice say "Will"

I was so delighted surprised + it seemed so natural that I said "Hello Mary" how are you

Mary replied "I feel like a peacock this morning & think that Gladstone should have been here and speaking to you. He is the finest Premier England has had, and as N.F. mean I introduced myself to him and told him I was "next door" to his ~~Mr Gladstone~~

It burst of confound him + he looked at me (Mary, Mrs Wm and the What is it that you say, I repeated Lifelong friends of his were in)

Mr Gladstone said that you say that you are "next door", what do you mean

I mean that he is my brother, Mr Gladstone being

Mr Gladstone said, if I were only like man you were, I would be a really good man.

I said Mary, you are very much better, better than I could ever be Mary then said "Mother" as clapping her hands."

I then spoke about Mary's work & him + the work she was doing, referred to the decline of Monarchy.

Mary said: You do not know how much I appreciate your telling me this knowledge. It strengthens our actions and the belief that the immortality of the soul is true.

You have a pure assurance that you are ——

Mother said. Mary dear if I had known about this how much difference it would have made

Mothering colours are mauve and white

I asked what are yours, Mother, said Mary, are any old colours

If this world would look to this world and ask us to help them, we would

bons blessings on you

I spoke about the boys.
and asked if there was anything he wanted me to do "Nothing for the present," he replied, "they can all along and on when they leave, the need may come later - wait till the time that the need comes, they leave their uncle"
(I asked if he ever played they are in Toronto together. and he replied indeed yes - that was in a previous interview
I said I would see them tomorrow or the day back, if not tomorrow for any reason, then next week, when I would be in Toronto again.
I asked him if he remembered Armistice Day. - when I was with him he said a lonely day it was, but a sad thoughtful. I asked why said, she said because of the boys who had gone before, they would be missed at ~~them~~ homes. I asked if they missed them round now - (I don't recall the answer)
I said I thought of having the boys down for Armistice Day. - they ~~he~~ declared with delight. that would be wonderful. they would love that.
then said to me cheer up - and spoke of not being serious about anything. he ended up can will, go along in the good sweet old way, the sweet old way - Good luck to you (his face was wonderfully benignant & cheerful)

Sir Wilfrid Laurier

the voice said 'Laurier'
Miss Torrent said, Good morning Good angel.
Sir Wilfrid (as I recollect said) I am not an angel
"I am here to say a few words. I wanted Gladstone to come to speak to you, I knew it would mean so much to hear a word from a premier who stands out before the world. (I thanked Sir Wilfrid & assured him it was Gladstone for coming). he said "I do think it was a nice suggestion to have a tutor, to give you the right expression, and the conditions of introduction in a French speech
(I am not sure but I think he said Gladstone had said this to Sir Wilfrid continued the introduction is important - it requires caution and a certain order of words - a tutor to help 1/2 hour. I would like you to do as well and better at the next meeting. I would like you a Club for enough for you to read a paper (I took this to mean to read & keep in French - not to read the paper.) (I would like French Club or your side even if they are Catholic. You know what I was, I had to keep on. I couldn't change. ~~to~~ Never discuss religion and politics (said with hand on mouth) Never discuss religion with the French, they will turn on you like a tiger: just say all forms of thought of God are good if we know how to make them serve God (or words to this effect) - Believing in French, as in the Latin I want the perfect one, I want an educated man: a man that can talk French not patois. I want you to be able to give the right sound to the words, - the nasal ~~sound~~ sound and the sharp sound - Suggested four or five examples. of the nasal sound in some words & the sharp sound in others — the sharp vowels & the nasal, de sens — — a ~~tone~~ de sens

I want you to carry on and allow yourself to feel that any person is smarter or better able to express himself than you, they are not. You know there is no man in the upper or the lower house who ~~is~~ you need fear don't allow them to shout over you, or their confidence will be lost forever

so for Burnett, we will forget him, Bring out all the good you can do for the French and every other part. - Upper and Lower Canada

I shall be glad when you commence the part of Ontario. They will give you a real reception (Sir W. confirmed by Hon Mr. Ross sitting next to me.)

I ~~want you to stay here~~

I said I had thought - of visiting England this fall, and had given up the idea, that I thought it was better for me to come up to western Ontario.

Sir Wilfrid replied. I want you to stay here but can see what is doing You ~~may be ashed~~ (this was said in a significant way) There is a current of air out of the Government, an atmospheric condition, that (a ~~significant~~ change, or crowner) (I think a)

The war was never finished, the next war will be more. it will be fought on (Sir Wilfrid voice sounded very sad) — a great war - the United States is very erratic, there is too much ~~of~~ sympathy

I asked if the United States would go on the next war "there it must be in the next it cannot help out"
I said would we have to go in? Sir W. said, we must. ~~would~~ protect England

He then began to speak of conditions in Europe
Said the Balkans are unsettled. Russia is so,
She has lots of ammunition

It must be our aim first & do what we can to end things right.

So he prayed then concluded.

Carry on and I will help you Hold your own counsel
God bless you. I will see you tonight

The impression left was that Sir Wilfrid foresaw another war would mean defeat. England and the United States would both be in it and would be fighting together. Canada would be drawn in in sympathy on the side of England. Germany and Russia & their allies would be together.

Nothing was said of Japan or China — except in the previous talk when Japan's action in withdrawing from the League and her warlike spirit was referred to. (Japan with her enmity to the United States might come to with Germany) Sir Wilfrid seemed to feel war might come at any time in Europe — whether then or the world war be feared or not, I could not say. My impression was that it is, and that it may be my lot & more & do with Canada's part when the time comes. — His remark re "might be asked" — seemed to indicate he had in mind something happening & Borden at any time

As I shook hands out — read Borden's face at his best & as the light — it seemed like a man bracing up — a man of power & force. He had given his "all" and didn't need to people with but that his "all" was not yet been given until his millions — but there seems little doubt he is "persisting in the attempt"

Detroit - afternoon session. Oct 17. 1933 - Mrs W. & self.

Mothers!

My dear Son:

I do want to thank them good people and how they know how much I appreciate all their kindness to you, such a load fresh air you had (Mr Shenn had sent his car for Mrs W. suggest & with Mrs Sterling took us to the Park but the chauffeur) they would not accept anything for being a Canadian - the spoke of the flowers I sent for her.- Mother said my son always does that - Mother said I am so happy. that to [illegible] if our Premier came out our home will something about today - a day I shall ever remember. I must a day of such wonderful accord I had to tell you Mrs Worrall how much I appreciate all this. - Then here Mrs. spoke of the flowers. - Mother said my son always thinks of those things. I don't do so very often. I am afraid. Mother said You have had a busy day Irene working out all the pros. and cons but not it only to see our Premier come in as he is. (I read and Mr Gladstone. said you must have thinks Mother. Mother said would I forget a material counting of the mind. but would it wonderful to see him come down to Ilfracombe to speak to that, she moved home overnight he would, but he says he has done so before) Lord Sir Wilfrid with it wonderful to see him here and you there - and to think here you are and there he is. He reminded me of our meeting before. I said do you recall the promise which when Sir Wilfrid came (It was this I think Mother had reference to. to see our Premier come into our home. - I think also she really was saying more with the mind of Gladstone. more than seeing our Premier come into our home - the time is short!

You had if Mother remembered when she was ill & I wanted to stay with her & she wanted me to fight - She said. They needed you to-day & I remember I loved to see you enter into the fight. I said You told me Sir Wilfrid needed me - Mother replied I told you that more than once, — Later thoughts could not be wanted to any one, You always do the right thing & at the right time. She said You [illegible]

Mother:

My dear Son:

I do want to thank them good people and how they know how much I appreciate their kindness to you, such a lovely present as you had (Mr Shenn had sent his car for them to suggest I would have Sterling look us to the ship but I declined) they would not consider of their being a Canadian - the spirit of the flowers I did for her.- Winston said by son always does that - Winston said I am so happy. [illegible] ~~to have a premier come out our home~~ with something about today - a day I shall ever remember. ~~I want to~~ a day of such wonderful accord I had to tell you were too still how much I appreciate all this. - Mr Ivens W. spoke of the flowers. - Winston said my son always wants to [illegible] things. I don't do so any longer. I am afraid. Winston said you have had a busy day working out all the programme and now it only to see our premier come in as he is. (I see we have [illegible] and our Gladstone. and I want him Winston. Winston said would I forget a material something of the kind. but would it wonderful to see him come down to Ottawa to speak to this, also would have interpret he would, but he says he has done so before) and for the third visit it wonderful to see him here and you there - and to think here you are and there he is. It reminded me of our meeting before. I said do you recall the occasion when Sir Wilfrid came (It was this I think Winston had reference to. to see our premier come into our home. - I think also she really was saying now with the visit of Gladstone. now this seeing our premier come into our home - the time is short!

You know if Winston remembered when she was ill & I wanted to stay with her & she wanted me to fight - She said. They needed you to-day & I remember I loved to see you enter into the fight. is helping you, and how helpful mine & Lallie's work has been every day & has been everything, and Wallie and I are very happy together

This is the end of a day I rejoice in — I spoke upon of our Redeemers coming. Mother said, it was marvellous, for him to come down on to the earth — he said he has called before. I asked if he had wanted him — she said I would do that — the courtesy of a lady caused prompt that. Then spoke of Lord Grey — Lucretia said. I know he is a friend of yours. — I said when you spoke of blessing the poor at Mill Side Sd. says & the Wilfrid dear you mean your home or mine: Mother said I meant Laurencetown, for we all have to help you entertain your friends. In his younger days he Sd. says was so fond of Lucy with his wife and friends. He is with his first wife. She was a lady who loved everything he did, and who was interested in all he was interested in & helped him in his work — They must have all been happy. That is how I am with Wallie, & you see, in my own little home in heaven, for there in heaven it is so manifest. ~~for~~

Dearest Mother dear. You are with me always. She says Whenever the call comes, from there. Then your voice when you ask for me. I never will disturb you, or when you are busy or when you are talking. But whenever you want me I am there

I said tell me about prayer — Mother replied at once the voice from the sufficient is heard by and through the will of God. When you ask, (do so then!) the Spirit of God that is love and truth. I said suppose I have a temptation I want to overcome what should I say. — Mother said. If you have a desire and it is a desire you should have ask in the name of the Spirit of God, with a of love ask God in the Spirit. God is everywhere, He is in the trees and in everything that has life. God is in the flowers, when you pray ask in the name of the Spirit of God - I requestof you, pray all of you to help in need and such a capacity.

Say to (your) myself. Thy will be done and the Spirit of God will help to do according to the dictation of your conscience. Your conscience is your great helper. What you desire to do, really must to do be sure of God you will be "sure to pulling it on the back of the chair" - when you did this, that was the Spirit of God in the flesh. Not - is so. ~~You desired that~~ It was a faith and a hope and a desire & the desire was that I should live and I did. God is omnipresent and God is good and will help. (I would see me really how to desire it - & it must be a good desire - see the chapter in the ~~Mummy~~ Bible what I read the mummy or God. the Spirit)

(All mummies bible chapter on Christ what I read the mummy)

I asked about Christ - was he not the revelation of God mother replied I can't tell you, about that, I am not far enough advanced. or Christ can tell you. he has ~~been~~ through the spheres mother then said "Good night"
I called mother back to speak again of Christ

He said the life of Jesus of Nazareth is a wonderful figure and I always speak of him as though he was standing beside me. I always had faith and hope in and I ~~must~~ still have faith to see him and all the apostles

God bless my son.
Good night - I shall not say, Good-bye

Grandfather

If this you William (in broad Scotch)
And this you are your grandfather
This is Mackenzie. I am glad to see my little fighter how are you, I you have a little spirit than when I last saw you. You have taken our advice and "cheered up" and don't forget there is no one better educated than you or more talented in the known. You

I want to see you, my boy don't-give-up Keep up, or give up. Shoot out from the shoulder. if you don't some one will shoot over your head
There are many today who would like to be a fighter like
I am. Stand up and boldly assert what you want
If I was only there I would be fighting now. I tell it
I don't want you to stand up and be afraid to say anything there is no one better educated than you. You are far better educated than I was, I mean was as advanced as you are. Read last- you read many more books, many many - books are alright. Grandfather replied, experience is what does the work, experience is a great educator and a great reminder

I asked grandfather tell me about - some ancestry. Here fumbling with me something I have forgotten - told me about with you - I read she said something about some persons in this line of descent.

He was silent a moment - said. You know my mother my father - (the personage - he was years ahead of my time, he was a Mackenzie a Mackinzie. We have pronounced Mac Kinzie. He moved to this line I mean Charlie

There was a connection between Aunt Charlie & Elsworth & the two changes - there were very few of Charles & Jonathan (?) I think he was the only gallant one of them all

There was a Jane in our family. Had Jane and a great grandaunt - a James - a William Jones - there was a Mary Ann, and grandmothers and all down. I never took it to heart to learn all about my relations they gave so much more attention to the ladies Some men take down the names, most of it will be found in the births records.

I told about reading Harriet Beecher Stowe's "Uncle Tom's" and I felt in reading it up if he had inspired it

Franklin said - He was bad anything to do with Charles - he was like a mountaineer, a great law Sheffield (?) I was more of an historian - to learn - how to fight.

I spoke of the 100th anniversary of Toronto

Franklin said. I'd be there, and I want you there I said I will like to be there & as many members for Grand-father's sake - he said we will make for that big deal. I tell you what we will do. Let us concentrate on "they will be done" - You understand

I don't like to see war or fighting. but I hate to see of some things - [illegible] he said I think we had a man like you. Franklin said to Abraham Lincoln - he believed you would have been a man like him - a man with ambition - of place.

The only thing I am so sorry is that I decided not to be better showing - I said, but you did, & people encourage it.

Look out for trouble in Europe, they are itching for it there Ireland is the same

Keep on with the speeches. I never was the orator you are - I said that to Franklin - Franklin said "Your father told me

There was a connection between Aunt Charlie & Clemens & the two Langdons - there were very few of Charles & Jervis (?) I think he was the only gallant one of them all

There was a Jane in our family. Last June and a great grand aunt - a Jones - a William Jones - there was a Montreal, and grandmothers and all down. I never took it to heart to learn all about my relations They give so much more attention to their lodges Some men take down the names, most of it will be found in the births records.

I told about reading Harris book. "Julius Caesar" I said I felt in reading it as if he had inspired it

Roosevelt said - he was had anything to do with Charles - he was like a mountaineer, a great law Sheriffs (?) I was more of an historian - to learn & how to fight.

I spoke of the 100th anniversary of Toronto

Roosevelt said. I'd be there, and I want you there I said I must ask to be there & as Private Secretary for ground.

-fellers sake - he said we will wait for that

Very sad. I tell you what we will do.

Let us concentrate on "they will be done" - You understand

I don't like to see war or fighting. but I like to clean up some mess we said I wish we had a man like you. Roosevelt said things - ^ In Detroit you would have a man like Cleveland the only thing I am so sorry is that I declined make a better showing - I said, but you did, & people recognize it.

Look out for trouble in Europe, they are itching for it there Ireland is the same

I was too snobby. You are not snobby but quick, you are lenient, gentle, humble, affable, treat things philosophically
I would say those things – I recited part of his speech well my
I love the boon etc – I said it was real eloquence – He said you have remembered well my son. You see I call you son, you are mine. You are the changing King. I want you to think of me, and let me help to carry you through under the law of God.

how pleased I was to hear your grandfather. I believe he is right – your fortune might when he says his snobby

what are you embarrassed about –, you must stand up

She then said of this afternoons talk (Sconce) I enjoy it

Please when you see my dear Henry Bedford give him my kind love and tell her I will write for it – too

About being snobby – I was myself, I didn't want people to come to the house till I invited them – I was a pleasure creature. It annoys me when I see them women big & fine things for you. If they had to work until they were tired I am afraid some would want a long while. I felt so sick & tired to see them big & fine houses – they were rare – see the black, rare & absurd. It makes me angry to see women so affected. You know this time & do this understanding bush your responsibilities. I used to do what I could for my husband's position & relieved him of that, but you can't - you don't get the time - I hate up the sociability - certain freedom &c.

I then spoke about mother's coming & it was arranged that on the Wednesday when she was ill - & the nurses, how she made the garments for them

(mother) She writes cheerily. I remember how you used to come and see me & she weighed - my fondest love to you. I must go and I will not be back. Sue to official visit. I will not come tonight least your responsibilities. I used to do what I could for my husband's position & relieved him of that, and you can't- You don't get his time — I keep up the sociabilities - certain freedom etc.

I then spoke about mother's sorrow & it's remembrance by those of the workhouse - when she was ill - & the kindness, how she made the garments for them

Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

I condemn war -

I said "Sir Wilfrid" - he said I had not expected you last night. I went home & found, what took me, I must suppose to Sheriff (or municipal) dinner & the many functions (speeches) I wanted to see which they were. I found the French actively calling up very badly. They want to raise some disturbance - They are not alone in this - They have taken in so many people from Germany It don't look good. it looks very bad, all these Jews. Believe to give them their correct designation, some of them are intelligent, some of them are good, some of them are rascals like the bigots of every country - I want you to know what I do - in case this war comes you may have to act, this nation must be protected, "the world has always called for arms", no treaty in the world can be boasted on for an armistice - they made a mistake (limit) in relying on the arms - it is a repetition of the boer - we must stand by our country. not otherwise must we trade, export or import. It is not a matter of not quarrelling with our neighbours as Bennett says, it is living as neighbours between nations or people do or ought to, or between human men. I don't like some of their expressions some people are using. I am not going round There is a right way. I am for our country, for Canada forever, but I want Canada to be friendly with other countries I am friendly with my country - Canada, I love it dearly. I must hate tremendously to see our boys go to war again (real sadness in her voice) - what is the duty for you & I today? (today is present time), you will know what is advisable. - If it comes to your doors you will know what to say. "keep back" If we "hate hate" with our neighbours & ought, it will give a better feeling anyway. we cannot cut ourselves off from every one, not any more than a transatlantic. can

I don't want you to devote to much time to ~~them~~ their way Carry on in your (~~Teaching~~ Lectures) - (reading I imagine is meant - for which the Liberals so left off a few years ago, and and he will mean them into a wonderful chain of thoughts
I was pleased & ~~was~~ am pleased. Whenever you go - remember when you left your career you did so well
Let us do it again
There was a young man & Sir Wilfrid said, How did they treat you, the
~~You~~ French
Sir Wilfrid ~~asked~~ the French Canadians last election! ~~Laughter~~ ~~Never let them bully you~~. We will put them back Instant reading it was marvellous
It is as we were going I said you will be near me. He replied
I will be near you
I said in your home
Sir Wilfrid said! Your home - He [illegible] home, and we can now grow more pleased and proud that my wife & myself for that - conquered self cunning. it brings out respect and character in every man. ~~take hand~~ "Lower the hand", "take from the shoulder," "shrink in no way" - "carry on"

Lady Bowen said what hello do you want

I only want I had done more for you. there were one or two opportunities I neglected

I want to see you without to have done more I'm sure something about me that you were waiting for. We would continue a letter keep you calm the tribulations

Nevers Shania - Stevens out boldly "Your opinion is yours"

~~Shudder out you hand to the former~~

"Touch the heart of the labouring man from the heart of the labouring man
Let the power of the former's hand Become ~~Fashion~~ the star (in heaven)
Whatever
That shines so bright
When God in Heaven shows you the right
Good night"

This was a step of heart reached with true eloquence + great fervour

Selina — I thought she would have said some - Never after a silence in came the words
~~just~~ "Touch the heart of (? which farmers + labourers)
now before ~~leaving~~ I want to say
I don't want you to devote God made time ~~to him~~ their way carry on in your (~~routine~~ lecture) - (reading I imagine is meant - to take the threads you left off a few years ago, and and she will weave them into a wonderful chain of thought I was pleased & am pleased. Remember Jowett - remember when you left your career you did so well
let us do it again
There was a feeling here & Sir Wilfrid said. How did they treat you, the French
~~You~~ You did the French ~~have~~ last election! ~~have done~~
Sir W
~~Now we can't they treat you~~. We will put them back
In fact reading it was marvellous
It's true we were sorry I could you will be near me. He replied
I will be near you
I said in your home.
Sir Wilfrid said! "Your home" - It's your home, and we are more than more pleased and happy than my wife & myself

REPETITION

I said it is "our home" - Sir W. said we will be there he added. Let us strike out home & let the people know we are alive, and what our motive is, let us teach the farmers, let us teach the working-men
Here he outlined the path of progress
Said something about Quiet Home food for thought Men ridiculed that would come in time "a glorious reaction" and ended up with some words of strength as it were that it seemed to carry one, from one's words, into the States - and was a good thing.
The words in part were
"We must go on a great procession - (or progression), it must be the end of all our political work (meaning an end to the turmoil of politics - ~~this~~ the 6th sphere
I took it to mean that ~~it~~ it would come from above but in due time, - men would be a great welcome (whether here or beyond I cannot tell - but think when the time came to pass over it would be into the 6th sphere

Then in quite confidential tones, - as of a prayer a benediction & he forearm remembered, Sir W. said
Good-night,
Good night, dear
(Mr Myers W)

Vision - face of man - (with Glendon Lindsay.) = Home Forbes Forum

Shortly after Sir W. left had some Sir W. said "there is a man's face - he has a long black beard some white, prominent ~~eyebrows~~ fore-head, shaggy eyebrows, looks distinguished - face is quite white wears a soft felt hat-for instead of the usual black hair. Sir W. said, yes - now he is moving away. Melting like snow. [illegible] under [illegible]
(I thought of word shall come [illegible] Egypt - the long [illegible]

She meant it was not brimmed closely.

– Then she said.

I see a house – it looks as though to mean showing on the house – the house is made of stone – rough – not polished – it is like a rough stone. The front of the house is long, there is a ground floor & an upper floor, & a verandah. You walk in off the street & the house – grey stone – looks like stone cut out of a quarry – You walk in off the street along the verandah. (~~It~~ I cannot it is more like an old country house.) Here Ca. said yes, I – I could not write of it at the time – I knew it was Stoke-on-Trent – (on it was not off the street or verandah in front) She said Worden. – Later tonight – (17th) before seance was over she kept feeling how affected I felt over it was Tapley – Toronto, Uncle Charles Tendill's residence, and that the house with the board was understood – It is clear that they were showing on the framing & the house. & Matthews had arrived but her promise & those Aunt Jessie come. – For here we must some night –

Version of a face – very briefly

– There is the face of a lady – She is up in years, She is in the 60's, She has a pair of glasses so rounded the long grey hair – very smart face – hair a little wavy

I said "my Aunt Jessie"

She voice said "I am here" "I thought I would show myself"

(Here we must said something about the pagan coming into seance. –

~~Not~~ Aunt Jessie

Here I said "my Aunt Jessie". The voice said "I am here" I thought "I would show myself." – She continued "I am very happy – I found it [illegible] more than – She said George is with her when you were talking to the Gladstone group was here she wanted to speak – but I told him not to disturb you.

I asked how Aunt Jennie came to come - was it Mother told her
She replied "of course, your mother told me over there, I asked if any of the others were there. She said Nellie, and the boys.
I said and Percy - ~~Henry~~ Aunt Jennie said Yes 'dear Percy,' and Percy timidly broke in "Yes, I am here" I told us before Charlie
I asked about Nellie (I had not mentioned her name) was she quite well & Nellie said. Yes I am strong and all right—
I mentioned Charlie — then Aunt Jennie as Nellie said "they told us all about this, - he told of his talk.

I said Aunt Jennie do you remember the last time I saw you, when I came to see you. She said "when I was in bed" I remember - when you took my hand you said:
"I hope you will get strong and well again" (She stroked my hand when as I stood at the side of the bed,)

I said do you remember Father telling me something about our ancestry, and she said in the Mackenzie family
She said Aunt Jane?

On the Mackenzies. I didn't mean all the family -
She said - You were speaking to Father about this, he told me of this conversation — (I could not follow the conversation - but it seemed to circle around an Aunt Jane who was her Aunt-Jane - a grand aunt I see - Aunt-Jane being married to Uncle Robert (I had never heard of an Uncle Robert before that I can recall,) - She said something about Uncle Robert & his wife — She then said something of James (the mason) who had become a great man —
I asked if we came from the Mackenzies - She said something about the Mackenzies being connected - again I could not catch what I think I said something about him & Uncle Charlie that She said it made possible what that Father something about Uncle formulation at the time — She said "It was through marriage the connection was — Again Charlie & Dad alone
She said something about not having the "genealogy" in mind.

I spoke of her visit to Scotland & meeting Alice Mackenzie & asked if she were there, she said she was a teacher in the Training College. I told of her coming to see me – the time of her death – of my making & sticking up the memorial – she had sent me. And Jessie said "I am sure she would" & I asked if Jessie had my book. And Jessie then on her own said – I am one of a big family – & we are a big family – She said 'Your dear brother is always with us and Bella – Bella is as sweet as ever – & she then said, I must go home – something about marking afain, meanwhile she said 'I will be praying to God with ~~of~~ the thoughts of this evening" Then she left she said "God bless you" – This conversation brought out of them very much love, it made me very glad to know of the holiness of another & sweet spirit – of Bella doing so much & one very beautiful thing I am sure the training of such Church as Torphichen – how unselfish when she had considered said "Such an unfortunate voice!" – She was in fact very sweet & natural.

Jessie called the dancer – It seemed a very beautiful evening – knowing as it did in the mind & feeling of a really family in heaven – not of one family only but all families on earth –

"BERKELEY SQUARE"

THE result of seeing a great many entirely mediocre movies, as a reviewer must, is that the sight of a really exceptional picture is likely to throw you a little off your balance. In the excitement of discovery your impulse is to rush out and beat a large drum in front of the theatre; or if not in front of the theatre, in the very first issue of your particular journal that goes to press. You want to work up expectation to the height of your own enthusiasm; and the result is you frequently overdo it. Your friends hurry off to see your latest fancy and come away looking indifferent or slightly sour; or even, which is worst of all, completely placid.

It is best then to make every possible discount in advance, in the case of "Berkeley Square". There is, for instance, the dialogue. After several years of talkies, almost every reviewer can tell in advance not only what a character is like y to say, but the exact intonation with which he will say it. As, for instance, "I can't go through with it. I can't!" "Won't you—sit down?' "You mean—he's dead?", etc., etc., etc. So when Mr. Leslie Howard, explaining his position to a friend in the picture, says with his peculiar hesitating intensity, "You see—Time is an idea in the mind of God" it quite naturally lifts you out of your seat. It is only when you examine the sentiment later in print that you recognize it is a little distended and thin; that Mr. Howard in fact, with his customary brilliant suavity, has put over a fast one.

You have to allow for this, and for the fact that "Berkeley Square" borrows a certain cachet from its references to Jane Austen and Oscar Wilde; and also from its Einstein—Henry James derivation. Aside from all this, it still remains in its own right a moving, and beautiful and lyric picture. The movie-goer next to me wept over it though she wasn't quite sure what it was about and kept insisting that the hero was having a dream. Indeed the picture has very closely the quality of a dream, with its constant quick dissolving of place and circumstance and its curious mingling of the convincing and the capricious.

"Berkeley Square" has its origin in Henry James' novel "The Sense of the Past". And while it is true that Henry James would have difficulty in recognizing the film-translation of his idea, it is also true that from the point of view of subtlety and distinction "Berkeley Square"is as superior to the average film as "The Sense of the Past" is to ordinary popular fiction.

Friday

Toronto Jany 26th
Wednesday. Oct 25, 1833.

Was up at 2.30 this morning, as we neared the Junction Station. Was surprised & found Vincent Murray at the station to meet us at 7.30, as well as the Matthews son. When I left Allan last night there had been a heavy fall of snow. Some 2 ft. The trees coming into the city this morning were covered with snow. Murray & I drove to the York Club where Matthews had put me up & there we had breakfast together. Vincent was naturally delighted with Monday's verdict - at the town in spite of "the victory" coming off. I had a talk with Hagerman afterwards in which he spoke as to going to Toronto to practise & advised declining an invitation to the Toronto Club which there was a meeting of the N. Liberal Association in one of the front rooms. Harvey, Matthews, Hagerman & others were present. It was the first meeting since the Spring. They were about $5,000 behind to end of Oct. Quite clear of little corner had been made. It was surprising to hear the splendid account of the Liberal Summer Campaign - the small expense. Genius etc. I was glad to be here & the Globe Money & getting outs of the proceedings. At noon I walked on to Matthews Guest at the Toronto Club, others present being Mr Ames, with whom I had a good talk - A.J. Mackay - Gilbert very deaf - he told me that at the time Sir Wm Campbell used the story of Colonel of angels he had also said. We cannot have Mackenzie King in Parliament too soon. (addy mingle this over his last words to me at Lennox House door). Rumble - a queer fellow - Victor Ross - Stovell Lawrence - Hewston - another queer fellow - Chambers. Archie Kirkpatrick's son or the other. I spoke of the Wombwells of our election at my time. of the Pomeroy.

of the federal election before the Ontario provincial, the need to get the men into public life out of whom a ministry equal to the tasks of today can be formed. the need of literature more speakers - of members ministers today a larger part than ever says the N. A. has failed - stones being stolen mill posts already & ballots falling off. - during the afternoon I called on Atkinson of the Star, talked with him of immortality - he told me he was an agnostic - thought the Star interesting and stood for something like the years after he had come - all we could do was to try to help our fellowmen - his hope is avowedly socialism he says he will like the 3rd. part of Bible balance of power as a spur to the interest to the families in social legislation that otherwise would. he will support me in a general election letter in days of people working for the Star instead of for him. of his being present in the days of his struggle the road will be great wealth. he seemed one with his chairman, Salmon Arm Adams, like a man who was gradually running himself in a prison house. letting walls grow up around him. he wants to do good, to help it but lacking faith - belief is dead role - he frankly stated he missed he had my faith framed my ideals etc. hers knowing was more than of the time. I went on to supper & awards & Mrs. Mills was present - her daughters also - Mr. Grant talking turned the college - the boys rooms etc. all most interesting to each one & Mrs. Mills knew each & every. Adelle knows more Mr. Mills read a poem on "the dog" after dinner, very touching, he was deeply moved. left a note at Pilkey door with. - At 10.30 Vernon & went to West House - spent rest of the evening in the smoking room where a debate started on the relations of the Empire to the United States. Mr. Mills & Mr. Pilkey very.

Toronto. York Club.
Thursday 26th Oct 1933.

I was up at 8. this morning, had breakfast in the [illegible] room of the Club. After breakfast packed up belongings etc & arranged with Jake to take some to Station. Bus leaves etc, At 11. o'clock attended a meeting in Office of the Ont Lib Association. Present Percy Parker. Vincent Massey, Harry Stevenson, Senator Spence Senator McGuire. Duncan Marshall, Rowland and one or two others. We discussed the provincial situation & the federal, & upon the end of the 3rd Ont. Liberals down something & may organizing & support coming Parliament &c for them. They offered the funds - but to depend if N.L.O. or others monies were collected from (Hon Harry Stevenson & Massey &c) Marshall & Rowland were very down on Parliament as a training &c. Marshall's whole manner was dull & tired & pessimistic. His cold still showing out his lashes or rather ends of his eyelids. I also felt I thought Stevenson and a few others in reserving & [illegible] as a lost cause, it was quite unnecessary & do more than promise & publicity. - Had luncheon at Toronto Club guests of Massey. Mackenzie, Harry Wrigley, Duncan Marshall, Rowland & several others present. Spoke. Mackenzie, Massey of need of getting some one & run in Toronto this municipal election for the city. & men may be brought out in other parts of the province & financial support of need be by Toronto men. Upon of the real need for Liberal unification & of funds for literature &c we might thought money can be obtained for a campaign, but that with other men. Upon of the outlook of business men. Money of course is financing any campaign in the west & for them to [illegible] & it must be contributions of any kind. After luncheon went out to the Woodbine Race Track & with Mackenzie Massey Rowland & Duncan back to town with Mackenzie. A visit to the Exhibition Women's Building upon a few months. Then to see John Hay - who showed a pamphlet issued & printed in 1836 - on account of the rebellion - Williams - price 25 cts. Kept some days at parliament - home & took boys with - & then arrived home with Mackenzie - who took himself with his own money & bus - train at 8 for New York -

Normanbleh

New York. Oct. 27. 1933.

I arrived at Northampton at 8.15 this morning. Was awakened at 6.45 and had breakfast before leaving the train. The trees on the foothills of the Berkshires as seen by a breath of early morning sun shine were very beautiful. Said goodbye to Addie Moss at the station. She came aboard the train at Worcester with me and we had a long talk together as very happy ones. Had the same experience on some occasions before going to Mass. Arrived at the Normandbleh at 8.30, found on going to my room a letter from Tom saying Godfrey had been taken ill with symptoms of what they could not come to Northampton; it was a very sad little note full of disappointment at some phases of their visit and at the loss of beauty & pleasure. Grieved. She said she had not been on a train for four years. Tempted not to ask a chance ride to be in Northampton again. Planned to help, & invited her to come to day or tomorrow with Mary or alone. Wrote a note to her she would be along alone tomorrow at 9.15. Spent the morning writing, reading & settling many details. Wrote Vincent Young & Albert Watkins thanking them for their kindness, also a note to Jessie. Late in day telephoned Eric Brown regarding I could not be at Constable's address & Canadian Club tomorrow. Had lunch at 1.30 after reading Little Book & the Nunn's bible. Then went out to look at shops. Found my leg paining me a good deal. Spent $2.00 at Brown-Thos. Co. - bought a large suitcase ($8.50) - bought a belt that had a souvenir of their city & his recovery. - His telegrams are most encouraging. Then to Constables where I bought a card showing friends' houses - a green & gold leather folder ($3.50) a copy of a book of Blake's Epithalamium $1.00 and an original letter of Gladstone & Robert Browning about 1852. Price $12.00 secured for $6. - Her brother sold it to her. He had not noticed the letter was by Browning. Drew attention to it before the purchase, he said it should have been priced above that. A little pamphlet volume in folder of Harriet Hosmer (a first edition) was $75.00. He said my copy would be worth a great deal. Spent some time looking at biographies, books on religion, & Egyptian research & secured second hand old editions &c. Left about 4.30 after I returned from Normandbleh

Jeremiah a morseus. (Swedish monument) architect Svensson (201 East 35th St. Tel. Caledonia 4358) He came at 5:30 after I had read some mail from Illinois. I found me some sketches & a card sub. I liked her dark eyes & lots of good. he says it is very aged - clients Sat. both good - maybe stroke or mild, tendency to insomnia or rheumatism. I had a little rest after lunch & at 7:30 drove to Mrs Lambert's 12 E. 88th St. for dinner. Mrs Lambert has a very attractive apartment, a man & maybe boys after her mother. The children (grown up) were away. One of the boys sent a nice metta bird greetings. She had a delicious dinner, beautifully served. We began conversation on Psychical research & dreams & continued it afterwards in the drawing room. Before an open fire & with coffee. - a most charming evening. During the evening Mrs Lambert showed me miniatures of her children. (a beautiful lad) clairvoyant eyes & her father (a striking type face) She showed me her carefully collected & bound sets of books on Psychical literature and gave me the names of some well worth reading

Mrs. Lambert showed me the record she has from Dr Hyslop - 4 vols of typed MSS. on death & healing. She gave me a volume "Home Spirit Teachings" by Stanton Moses. Showed me the ring that Moses received & referred to in her séances. (Held it in my hand) 2 Emeralds & diamond between. Showed me a small white feather, which she says is one of many that have fallen from her. - for the walls, on her pillow. on Moses' tablets & chandelier. It was in a small box, like a medicine box. - let me gaze in crystal. I could see the clouds clearing (with [illegible] a dark [illegible] more. She wrote in her book for me &

I passed her (a little attention to me for which I was Gladstone Dr Ellen Hamilton has given me. She brought them exceptionally good & brought Dr Carrington and Libby down them. She is trying to show him a way of providing for our widows. I also left the writings from Shannon. She sent me a prayer Gladstone had composed for them reading help (Currie's Gladstone's accession speaking at Detroit - the letter the afternoon, - how a prayer - voice - writing - composition.) (the heroic & Val - scary job in dream - how the person the dog rescued Sir Wm. Among matters of interest narrated were the following:

She seems to believe in reincarnation, though this one not upon the best of spirit diff. wishing to return to earth to work out the progressive. - (not all persons have reincarnations) She said from what Dr Bigelow spoke of something told (of I must enquire) & to Jesus - She has written brought up in the orthodox way, but Christ & Jesus is to her Spirit revealing God & the believers in God - as Spirit - Some Truth (not entire portions deity) to believe in prayer - when making communion prayer - Glorify She used to assume an entire attitude - now takes the most rest - ful possible. - seemed to feel what I told her of what Andrew said of prayer &. the almighty right: felt a call with him to Scotland was worth a visit to Newport - Trinity Brothers - sub business were worse than before - $5 & $10 - for a month alone first sight. I told her of what I had just been writing. She doubted of the business need that was to happen. She said the Prayer, Comforter & Inspiration & guidance - She herself was inspired in certain guidance - business had been ordered out this country by Spirit order & then retained on representation of Friends of persons by, but rendered. She doubted of all new work not well - the present should mean herself to Canada. was great faith in Barrington - feels Prayer the best remedy of all. & it also lodge the presence of living ones bodies (in Unseen Spirit world) thought here possible on of the only mediums which could join communion in clear - light - Number she must be 80 years of age. says I must keep made to a sense - has felt 'exfoliation' herself - & finds the hard substance seems to be what we call "bile" or it comes from bile.' Feels Lord has lost all regard for Scientific Methods & Knowledge - is doing things herself. Her patient of her attempting healing herself. She tried another woman by placing hands - beneath & above the abdomen - & felt the stomach warm or as if the pain being turned right around. She was going on that basis when told by the patient to go on. It appeared a cure. But she did not like to lay on hands - Over for healing purposes & the exercise through her. She says the tragedies of her work come when it is thought of as "by one" instead of "through one". The healing comes from beyond. She exposed one Person healer of impurities. Said she also had some sundains from another - She says one of her questions was taught in the Course of 30 Sessions & Father Mother God Willing at a seance a sudden loud flutter & rustling & banging, right against it & startled them. She knows all about it she said. Has felt her a part in affairs & with this abilities - and Services.

New York. Normandie Hotel

Saturday Oct 28. 1933.

'It's you nothing I had a vision of little Pat - sitting on all fours, his front paws stretched out. - looking sad. I felt certain it meant he was recovering and generally in my prayers. The telegram received later from Athens, confirmed this.

The Hoppers (Arthur Simmons) called at 7.45 this morning, and I had a long one. - Some exercise in bed - I calculate if might have made this. Have relaxed somewhat, but during the day suffered a good deal with my back - as if twisted. Could scarcely walk the times. Went down stairs and at front door of block waiting for Joan to arrive from Wagner - 9.30. Her train was late and she did not reach the block until 10. Meanwhile Austen Forbes came & called me & met me at the door about 9.50. Austen & I had a short talk, & then Joan arrived & went with her to Brentford at a restaurant (Nelson's) 42 Red St. where we talked of Pat, & Hampstead & Mrs Gladstone. Godfrey & the Grandchildren. After breakfast by train we made a shopping - or rather looking at books &c. at Bumpus's Bookstore (46 St) we spent a little time and I persuaded Joan to purchase a set of Jane Austen's (9.50.) bound books for me for birthday or Xmas. I have often wanted this particular set from her. Saw this there (after asking for autograph letters &c) a book full of this play at Worthing from which Hindle was rehearsed, it carries Southerne's signature, identifying the original text as his own, his stage copy. told me. He knows said he had paid $100 for it: he thought he might sell it for $50. - I was much fascinated by it, and would have purchased it for $30 - do'dn't like to make the offer. I believe it is worth all of $50. There are not many in existence. I left it feeling I should return & look at it again. Joan and I went on to one of the shops near Selwyn Theatre where she tried on some, we took different styles of hats &c. then went into an antique dealers shop (on 46th St) & looked through over 4 or 5 floors. Saw many beautiful bits of furniture & ornaments, old and Persian carpets &c. hangings. pictures, bookcases, bureaus, mahogany tables & other furnitures. Some very fine pieces, but most of them

New York. Thursday Oct

Saturday 6 th 28. 1933.

'Before nothing I had a vision of little Vat - sitting on all fours, his front paws Obstetrical out. - looking sad. I felt certain it meant he was recovering and genuinely in my power. The telephone recalled Vat from oblivion, confirmed this.
The Thomsons (Arthur Freeman) called at 9.45 this morning, and I had a long one. - Some exercise in bed + treatment of myself have made head ache. Jean returned somewhat, but during the day suffered a good deal with my back - as of lumbago. Could scarcely walk the lines. Went down stairs and at front door of block waiting for Joan to arrive from Wapses - 9.30. Left them most late and she did not reach the block till 10. Minutes Austen Forbes came & call on me & met me at the door about 9.50. Austen & I had a short talk, & Clarke Joan arrived. I went with her to Bradford at a re-

-taurant (Nelson Bros) 42 nd St. where we talked of Hotels, & temporaries - Mr Gielgud - Coltons & the Grand Duchess. We after breakfast we went a shopping - or rather looking at books &c. the Edinburgh Brownes (46 St) we spent a little time and I persuaded Joan to purchase a nice office Ellis (9.50.) hand bound Morocco for use for lectures or Exams. I have often wanted this portable Dict from her. I saw this there (after asking for autographs letters &c) a hand bill of the Play at Washington at which Lincoln was assassinated, it carries southern signatures, identifying the original bill

REPETITION

They had an atmosphere that was music to all day. Wherever we the Rockefeller Centre and brought it together. I was horrified at first Joan, confronted at this edge of the building, at the style of the archi-tecture (modernistic). It was as if man had constructed a prison for himself. I was seeking to bury himself from the light of day.
I could not but feel that if the N. had torn the old buildings down and made a park there, he would have left a worthier memorial, and made a better investment. The usual decoration (Yours) Thoughts-hideous, they filled me with a kind of horror. I had in my pocket oddly enough a letter received from the N. this morning (via Olcott, telling of hers Mr. Ulmer, written on Waldorf Towers paper. How I was to get in touch with him was on the 56th floor. I many cottoned. I could not feel how much I was keen to have had the temptation of a dance here in New York () must be of dear Lucien, when almost unconscious spoken of Canada 'for ever Canada' - at the time of her last illness when I asked what she thought I should do - & was guidance from Beyond. I could not have lived in this city; and my work would have been rendered bad if I was converted to do so!
Joan and I went to the Roxy theatre. Radio City. one scene was in the gallery. My stairs for back, but we were also very fully well. - The performance was a marvellously fine one - varied the number of 'I's in his utterance to the N.Y.C. reporters. I am beginning thoroughly to dislike the man, as a dictator, whose policies are absolutely wrong - unchristian, half-baked & downright mistaken. Most remarkable + significant of all was the play-play "Yesterday Begun" the story of Stonehenge, the influence of a house of the 18th century, upon an american a century or so later. A unpleasant play. to illustrate the 4th dimension - time Time does not exist. the past, present or future. - a man long along a stream knows the past - he has past - sees the present where he finds himself does not see the future who around the bend - the man from the planet above sees all times - & time they on a book of one whole. - all through were the mystical basis - relations, deciding how some are coming nearer in spiritual union of things

& the play went on I thought how of having seen the dumb transformed proclamation. I wondered if my end might be similar & mine, and I thought of transformed words 'thy kingdom come thy will be' done not so ordained - curious I should have reading the incident of the priest at his arrest, the flash in production - I thought I was there having produced transformation from prose. ~~[illegible]~~ the production was a humorous abortion about an effort to kill the king but the king was not killed he came thro all - there for seemed to me significant. Joan did not seem any coin for me & hence the handbill - the underlying was having spiritual meaning. I think the Van Gogh production was meant to give the ornament - the picture is evident, - the mission is. then at the end the two lines were taken together "thy God kills" love - I not perfectly sure. - I thought the will of God

part of this. "Jesu" - the music was deeply moved. She had wanted to see this performance explain it. She seems to find in the combination of physical significance a ritual she reads or suggests or sings. Drummond sent to her.

From the theatre we went to the Rockefeller Church to take a look at the city from the roof garden - (hoping we might get the Times) Then we drove up to the Riverside Church. We reached there a little before 3: in time to enjoy the light coming in thro' the stained glass windows, and to hear the Carillon played by Dr Fosdick - during which we said a prayer for guidance and blessing on our lives, and took from the Holman painting - I Cannot in prayer. The view from the Church chapel. The interior is most impressive, I could not help regretting more than ever that we R. had contributed to the Rockefeller Church. This is a truer memorial to the man I know. From the Church we went on foot to the Grant Tomb & the Cathedral from where we had [illegible] views, from there we drove back to the Hotel Waldorf. including a glimpse from there to Wagner. We debated on going to another play - but decided eventually it was too late for some & catch the earlier train back to Poole. - I was sorry to end the day in this kind of a rush, but the fear of being snowed in alone together in New York at night made us think this wise and soon agreed. In the hurry of the last moment the bill the hotel bell, I had bought an a souvenir at the Church - in the taxi. She was quite distressed. It seemed significant of the anti-climax ending of a wonderful day. The blame must rest on me not good enough, nor the taxi in which we drove back. It was not clean enough & windy, also I did not like seeing towards others & dodging in and about. I was cold as well, It was a wise decision. I came back to the Hotel after seeing Joan off on the train (a relief) over she was safely aboard. And thought morning it I should God forgive, had a nice talk with him. So that he would make the train. & then wrote two hundred thanking her for last evening's kindness. I made an appointment with Barrington for Monday at 2. went to bed & read a little of Thomas Stanton of Connecticut & Neighbours & some of dad mijs the son of man - most impressed with the devotion he drew [illegible] period as Reader & Lover has wonderful himself - I felt that [illegible] only just beginning. I bowed down to my God and slept at 12.

New York. Knickerbocker.

The morrens arrived at 8.30 this morning. I had had a good night's rest and was the better for it. He came in more spirits & breakfasted. certainly in his removed room of the back from the front & the bed, but I am far from being able to stand it well enough yet. It was nearly 10 when I went down Chestnut alone & read the papers, near the wide windows at the end of the dining room. I debated after returning and reading letters about what was best to do, and thought I had rid of Mrs Edmund H. Dwight & her friend most easily just her friend was at home, and invited her & them both to lunch with me at the Players Club. (singular that I should the first luncheon I should to tell an Ellen Terry picture: Jefferson - 2 enlargements Photos. 12 00 cc ea. and how sorely the Lord for 22 - also re Hazlitt of myself & Dwight association). I found Mrs Hewitt looking older in the suite face, thinner more sloping, but the same youthful countenance. He was most friendly, and we talked together till 3 o'clock, over a dish of oysters - some entertaining & curious of the Players Club. I like the atmosphere of this Club immensely, I like actors & their temperament - the quiet-domestic-sphere-pervading &c. I told Mrs. Hewitt about this Clay bill - & of the thought it would be worth 50 00. She told me he thought it would be well worth all of that (more more framed in this Club than Billie. &c) He advised me strongly & pondered it. He remarked that Booth had presented & founded the Club, & named on the very fine painting of Jesus & Pharisees. (All of this is quite singular & remarkable) I am being directed in these ways.) Mrs Hewitt also advised me to take my securities out of the National Bank in Boston back to Canada, he said if he could do it, he withdrew his Canada Shipping

He does not think much of City of New York as an investment. refers Canadian Pacific as very good. He told me life & Securities in St Louis for the Canadian Bank of Commerce, who had come to Cuba on behalf of the bank found there that the Chase Bank had sent to Cuba a telegram asking that 30 aeroplanes in blank be sent to the Chase Bank here, to get a photograph of the murder. I came back to New York, demanded payment of the C. Bank of Commerce number was opened first, showed him photostat copy of the money & then gave the money forthwith, (or the other person) he said there must be the condition of things at the Chase, that did not close the bank & investigate as he had his own money there & get it out first. He says everyone believes in the Rockefellers Jr. that he is perfectly honest, that he was behind the Colorado Fuel Co. & caused it off. other things similar to the Chase Bank: they believe he will do the same. some in bank from going to the wall. (I recall the fearful question in conversation some & yet of his off re the condition of U.S. banks at that time) He thinks aldrich also is perfectly honest. Wiggin simply a thief & calls Harriman. He thinks Hoomeh is crazy: that he has gone mad, and that reconstruction is inevitable in United States. He says the country is going to destruction. The N.R.A. he regards as frightful. reckless & fail, an unnecessary interference with personal property & liberty: He says I will write Chase Bank has not dared to prosecute me yet - the feds were the Supreme Court and here the action unconstitutional. He says he knows a man with millions of gold who has refused time & time & that no action has been taken against him - that the action will be lost - the constitution providing indictments being presented in this particular case. He believes that God will bring the crisis to a head. He points out we are now a debtor nation by billions. that the people are behind Ford. the Post & other papers beginning a question. the administration's policy. the believes there must be underspread criticism of it soon. he also says (as others do) publicity I was told the same in the Stories = Bullion of Sumptions in Zone told me the same, that the Chiefs of the N.R.A. has been a coon gathering to the bought up = that Shelves are used overstocked, begin the longer buying. Hoover, Al Smith, Landon, Herod all Smith's words a word at the word's fact a week or two ago, which he reports as an attack on Roosevelt's policy, a proclamation of future, [beginning the war for Senate having] that the difficulties Roosevelt won over the presidency. he says Roosevelt is a dictator by nature, more so as [one] of New York State. - that Harris Slumps indicate his future as longer gets the reaction it did. - he told me of a story going the rounds. [what is] Have you heard of the latest conduct of Mrs Roosevelt's will? She has left [her] [all] to the Elks! = he says it is shameful the way the president permits her, & [does] nothing, shows no. no. She is unfit of the president - it should be prevented. the feeling is changing [rapidly] towards the administration he says. I believe him & he [has]. [then I came away] from the [Hayes] Club, I spoke [a few words] of my 'candidacy'. he said it was anything of the kind, that it was some [form] of [joke] - he advised me [to] [Mr Lamont], or [Bishop] = [for] his name. I went to [the] or return to Black but he was not in the office today - I went the streets to eight - stopping between me & someone that on my left was shorter than this other. that is exactly what I said to Norman yesterday = today = today. I [know] feeling a little [better] = still [pain] in the right knee = the centre of the back bone just above the buttocks. I think [something] of this is [may] shall follow up. (I believe I am [very] [sensitive] as [this]. I after this talk with [Mr] [Lamont] I returned to the [Commodore] & found [Miss Carrigan] had [answered] my [letter] inviting her to [tea] at 4.30. I [wrote] up this diary for an hour. then lunch up to a room of Mrs Hinks' own because we alone - reading as I came in, I found her hat just changed. She looked even better than I last saw her. Her face less worn, her hair very pretty - & altogether her manner sweet & kind of womanly. She had been spending the summer in Scotland & enjoyed it greatly. Says bright blue skies reminded me & are enjoying it more. She is quite concerned about conditions in America. Mrs Roosevelt badly advised & wrong in his policies. She is very pleased at her success, thanked & she would write a column for me if I cared to, but she said she would like it if we ran a story & friendship & confidence grew etc. She says the Queen had asked for a copy. - She had met Queen Mary at a birthday of Mrs Hinks & when the friendship was being renewed this birthday of hers because. She spoke affectionately & gratefully of this incident as a sign of an unwillingness 'to remember' she was glad to see the spirit of an unwillingness 'to remember' she was glad to see it, but had not spoken of it to others, save the family circle. She asked me after tea to see a portrait of Mrs Roosevelt painted by her husband when 4 children, background, & boat of the Mayflower. I admired at the landing of the Pilgrims the splendid well known portrait of honest Burns. I told her of Catherine Carswell's life of Burns & that she had written a life of Robert Louis Stevenson, life & Dorothy Wordsworth, she told me that she had met Mrs Roosevelt Miller & her daughter interest in sea photographs (under the ocean) also of her children interest in the clouds 'flying' & she had told her suddenly she had come to think of this new world. Does I believe the real other world - beyond the physical, or some million - millionth - the spiritual would be this direction & what exploration would prove God or be more & more made - She spoke of the Olivia Lodge - his writing (Mrs Hewett told me of his having written them all) & Rollin in England as a boy. Mrs Gladstone, Lord Rosebery & Mrs Gladstone, as they knew them - that he regarded Gladstone then as rather 'young' - Spoke of his mysterious as he spoke. I felt the power pulling thro' I felt in listening to Gladstone's voice. The other day - that his resonant 'rolling and' voice Mrs Hinks

Just Carnegie from me a copy of "National Review" 1933 - Sept. Oct. - containing pictures of her son-in-law & daughter. She sent me, too, of the forest of trees being made at the museum - & dedicated to memory of (Sir Edward), Lord Grey & Mrs Roosevelt. We had a short talk before Mrs Carnegie began to read aloud what she said we must be tired of talk, must we not start guiding us. She felt his visit keenly; it was a privilege. She often in Pittsburgh, or being where was so real about him & his. I recalled my late visit on day in a blue, coat; it which I had felt him very strongly. Between while ab. Mrs Carnegie & Mrs Carnegie from people came in & found us at tea. Mrs C. had invited friends 4.30 & I was as a half hour free. I stayed for a few minutes after Mrs C. had gone. They were speaking of our civic events how many times the name of Carnegie & Rockefeller — & Wanda- -ing whole would be known of it as a proof of - it was related to prom- families thro the marriage of Mr. Clemens. — As I was driving back to the Club, I thought of what Mrs Carnegie's temptation had meant to her home - to her sons - and as I must I think of my relation- -ship with Mrs Rockefeller - & the formulation which it was meant. to me - also of what freedom - my relationship has meant to me & Mrs Rockefeller had I been with him continuing I might have found him the tragedy of the Rockefeller centre. - Mrs Hewitt accounts for it for Mr. having no realization - no birth - & Mrs Rockefeller being fond of modernistic architecture - the idealism & his nature not appealed to, in a desire to pay a tribute to humanity. - which has made us family's great fortune. - Wrong. I should have a letter in my pocket or I write, from him - or perhaps Rockefeller centre - the play "Mamma" Mrs Carnegie was living in Clemens' - is a letter of Mr. Howe on the financial side of the Rockefeller centre (John Jr. - this fall) as a birthday gift - How sympathetic my life should have touched Mrs Carnegie & his family in the interests they [illegible] - all this is a bond - of a great purpose deeply planned & this I feel sure.

Hammond Club. Oct 30-1933.

The morning opened at 7.45 this morning, and here we are after exercising as well as morning. I find it not quite easy to get from the right pen, but I feel a sort of kinship with my fountain pen in this life. After dressing I went to the large dining room for breakfast. Read the morning papers. To my great surprise I found that G.H. Soldiers had died on Saturday night and was to be buried today. This seemed to me a fine opportunity to see the Masonic Ritual - Our American Cousins which I had looked at yesterday afternoon but felt I missed like to know on Saturday. There were one (probably Sanchino soldiers) here present in the morning G.A. soldiers, the original Lord Baltimore. It seems to me I was very much evidence of the presence of the Grand and also here until we planning the day, or 4 more. There was a letter from Masonic reference to the North Carolina, and Whose Morning founded in the article on Soldiers was member of his father a G.A. Lodge Masons the Masons Club - all of this was quite remarkable. I decided that I must - positively the rule. if for us room other than with comfortable of circumstances. I later went over to Hammond's and if there was a chance to get it for me. The clerk said the man who left it had wanted 200 for, they as a fine was making nothing on. told me to ask him to sell it at once it could be bought for three days. That is was sure 50 per the best possible. I had written Salisbury Co. Sales mgr G.N. and that the writing of the will said G.A. I told the Sales of Soldiers death. he was quite surprised I must showed. he said he often came here for both as did John Marlowe - bought many from him. After I drew attention of the G.A. understood it. the Sales said that probably was Soldiers father. He was not till night that or returning from a drive to West Point I read in the account of G.A. Soldiers being Soldiers father - being the original Lord Baltimore?

The reference to the Masons & North seemed very remarkable - the friend had said one yesterday they would want that here referring to the brothers of the Masons being Lord Baltimore to the Masons

I told her she must send him a telegram - to put his mind at rest for my visit. She called for Julia Grant, and we drove together to Westbourne. I had said in the morning I had in my pocket a telegram she had sent Ellen last week. Congratulating me on my triple victory! & signed Julia When I came to the Cornwall Club I decided I must have the May Bells sent on so that I might take it up to show to her. I began to read his article more carefully, & my amazement. The identification here of Southern. Jules Husband playing Romeo & Juliet. - Then carried a reference to Julia - I was struck too by a sub-title in the Herald Tribune G.H. Southern dies here at 73; wife, Jules Husband as his Romeo and Juliet fooled: Rumored she was person in his Stage for 37 years.

He article said ... In his last years he was wont to lament the passing of the romantic comedy that the stage once had, and long after stern realism had triumphed almost everywhere else, he continued the eighteenth century tradition of emphatic elocution. He was born & it =

I took the May bells & the Times & the Sunday Archives and went me when I went to dress at 7.30, after dinner I showed it to Julia Grant and had her cut the article out of the paper. She told me that he father, Jules Thompson had been invited & Tuesday & to lunch & that that evening - of course the whole American atmosphere changed & Grant (after dinner) had completely thawed & becoming President of the U.S. - On the way to Westbourne we passed Grant's house on the way up & on the way back. - What a change of all over this reference to Romeo & Juliet - and considering what I had learned the day & late of our relations, & more than that the romantic side did not go for - Shakespeare indeed a fad - & I will place any & the least helpfulness in the great personality of our lives. It was - and I told him & Julia - as if our loved ones were all absent: Ellen was in Paris keeping May but they rendered our whole romance - seemed it was such in fact, and were very sweet & understanding & absent-like. I am so sure that such is the case. Instead of [illegible] his wife & friend might come - from a sickbed & sad anxiety & there was the sudden relation of a tragedy & this pretended [illegible] on a little [illegible]

Mrs Worthington when in London, she would get him a divorce in France, Switzerland or elsewhere later, that she may perhaps have left Mrs Worthington. It was a terrible tale - poor Frank was very proud about it all - He is a sort of hero in Portsmouth where he has had to pass. He - his cousin I mean is the boy he reared his two children. - She told me after she got back from London. She had had lunch with Mrs Worthington and her lawyer for Wembley & had an awful time. Could not stand it. She got £1,000 as an heir for an action in the Morning Post. made 200,000 on her own - has also 4 adopted children etc. Her aunt Mrs Worthington had left her her own money, & left him be independent to a degree - or well as usually. Also she had left part & some to. She told me of her difficulties with the divorce. - his having been unfaithful some of his servants etc - generally upset. I could where there had been a real marriage of souls - & would have left. at least - She explained her grandparents nature - & was a great devotion for her father her mother etc was quite her better [illegible] She & I were friends then she has a most & do - I think may have another great value of life. She is strongly against the Bolsheviks - She said an [illegible] greater than the U.S. President himself. - he called from time time on the phone up the London, inquiring for news etc. I told her both of my letters about the West - & the Germans. Then on [illegible] the date of her letter' She said at once there was something of this 'conversations' - they said 'Dinner lost' - I told her that Mrs Wilson had said that more should have been told me, but was not certain. that Mrs Shaw had said to tell me & "written Guard" - & that it had been lost or gone astray. I told her quite a little of this 'conversation' before we reached our hotel, referring I had told her I think all the various bad effects of each of us having our own work & do - that Mrs Wilson had made this clear. She sought & suggested me that Mrs Wilson had felt me more "material" & that Mrs Wilson wanted me to show me all she could & my of the position, compared etc. I made clear to her that I felt rather more inclined to be a friendship link and to be mutually helpful - but anything more, that I doubted if I ever should marry. had been of made & heard & my response to offers & [illegible] to any fellows - was & intended to remain exceptionally blunt and

At West Point we had lunch in the dining hall there, which looks like a Club: a walk on the terrace after. It was like being at the side of an old castle (much finer than the Rhine) looking over the hills & forests beyond. with the river far below — After lunch we went thro the college grounds. The buildings, location &c are quite beautiful. The location of the chapel away up on the highest point magnificent. We visited the Academy — stood at the foot of Pulaski's statue, which faces the South, the river & the hills beyond. The views taken from there — so that the sun was setting behind the highest cliffs on the west. We both wish you had been with us — they forgive me for the worry of this wild day there. To do only what he wished with me to do for his daughter, & the fine strength & kindness. — And equally fine of the old general (the grandfather) also when he came up close — was close to me — I love that old man — with his snow white hair & fine noble face. Indeed he was a great good man. Fine traditions & character he was true. From the grave we drove to the West end across the Academy — the march of the chapel, — the walls of which are very well kept & grey of the Revolution — a stained glass window, & Indian engraved, — another fine glass tablet to memory of the grandfather. The whole place was full of associations, of the lives of this great family: of the part it has played in the history of the Republic & what it may mean to mankind. We walked together & prayed for God's guidance & blessing upon our lives & the country, & for power & strength to do our best in this connection. — It was a very memorable afternoon. So to the chapel on the height, — & home that the sunset & our parting — & now the religious services — the real victory & the end. — Such a romance, now this ever greater romance than this — thanks be to God. Think of how I have loved all — the very grass the life of the two countries on this continent — the spirit that saved the day for the fulfillment of God's purpose.

Joseph Parker came on a return from the week previous to 24 for me 1933. (28 years after)

When I got back to the Club at 8.30 in my great delight on my table were the two volumes of the authorised Boswell's Life. Send-well her words beyond of mere Company. As I looked at the pages of illustrations one of one there appeared from the gallery of portraits the face of many of those whom I admire most.
Some of whom I have known, and most - of Christians of all.
All have been closely in recent happenings. Gladstone, Matthew Arnold, Mrs Oliphant Hewitt - Lord Morley, Wilfrid Ward (and sent-Mrs. Ward) Mrs. Ward + members of their family (Mrs Ward + Mrs Arnold)
As I looked at their pages I recalled much that they brought to mind. It seemed to me that the loved ones were adding to the day of Romance. Adding the freshness of first-love - Strange it was that these words should include Mrs. Oliphant Hewitt.
I had spoken with Mrs Ward of hers - Matthew Arnold. The Summer she had made of him + I have had the mind & photos about her daughter Mrs Whitridge, Gladstone I have in my bedroom the prayer. Mrs Oliphant from me. + in my thoughts. one commander Doctor Fiddes - both of the mind of Mrs Ward & Oliphant, + the to last a day!. I had barely time a dress + 6.6 this Sherry. Rosebank for 7.30. The dress must fold per compliment + gentlemen this was going must be left to the play. The daughter will on from visiting Mrs Hoffmann in Belgium on her way to the Riviera at the North (a post set.) I spoke I sent Mrs Whitridge calling dear of in the morning in the distance - I have a feeling I must Mrs Ward for a few months on afternoon there, many time on Mrs Hewitt please. I was to meet some distinguished Americans. 4th July: I called alone Mrs Hewitt Mrs Ward Mrs

This being the anniversary of dear Jessie Westbrook's death. I telephoned her to know to see her mama I was thinking of her on Monday. She was very pleased. 24 1/2
I also called up her flower, understanding she still remembers.
Bletchley Tuesday Oct 31. 1933

Bletchley Westbrook I could myself [illegible] taking it for granted that [illegible] Westbrook husband some word would come of his further recovery. When I opened the packet of letters from Henry - there was a slip inserted - that Bob once again was able to write to his friend.
The morrow came early this morning and some few further treasures.

I feel the letters for it, but still find it difficult to talk about. Had a quiet breakfast in the large dining room of the Hotel / reading the Times and seeing mention of C. F. S. (Consolidated Fruit & Produce Co. Henry became interested
- mentioned by Bert in Henry started the Company himself - (which the Trade Unions have not liked, but which coupled with the right of the Union to Join Unions has paved the way for Union recognition at a time when no such step could or would have been taken - It was of interest to me that I should be reading of this work in the Bernard Shaw, some 19 Years after I had worked upon it in this very spot - That transition of my home - our two shoppers should thus again be associated at a time of great industrial transition and while I was in London and in touch with them by letter / After breakfast, I left - I turned down the morning to writing up this record & date: and did so taking an hours or more for the task - I felt yesterday's conversation and journey - & the chapel on the heights - was most significant and that impressions and conversations should be written out - with care I calculate [illegible] in mind. I was reading this of St Ottilie Sunday Nov. 5, from memory. What seemed to me most significant of all was what Julia [illegible] said to me as we were [illegible] the Plaza square hearing the Slavery Netherlands - of which dear Westbrook said to me in her conversation that was worthy of Westbrook. - She said much that she had not told me before. and made that I might consult and do not believe (difficult as it is now to doubt her and to doubt this. It seemed to be an effort to express the heights she had come, & having it appear that Westbrook had given her the message to do so - and her own feelings as well - in Theology of matter.
I fear that the mind of what he told her was undoubtedly true

all that she said of what mother had said as to her being a very distinguished person," and as showing our work to do - and unfortunate words. - which she added for the first time today more in good all excuse of her own overreaching; as mother put it to her in conversation at Detroit a week or ten ago - and, in fact, a decision to have me yield to her own desires. - I am writing this out, that afterwards my own mind so to do, but because I am in the presence of truth, and believe all will yet be made clear. One thing I do know, is that mother and her love for me, and I know just what she would say & others, she often quoted those things of mother's many referred to in the blooms! and I know what she has said to me. - I felt there was deep significance in that moment: and in my making it clear there and then that I could and would accept no such interpretation of any words of mother's, but rather pour to them a quite different significance. I told her that mother had said to me on each had had talked with mother at Detroit: that one occasion words, - that she had spoken kindly to me of her, had said she was a good woman: this last I made it clear that she felt my life had a mission of its own, unrelated to hers. At the last door I did not go in before going back to the hotel. —— After completing the record of yesterday, I wrote a letter to Mrs. Carnegie thanking her for the life of Andrew Carnegie, and telling her of what it significance to me, and also wrote Miss Hamlin thanking her for yesterday's drive to Westpoint, and the gift of her father's engraved pencil, and for the observations of the day. Received a dozen Christmas notes & cards this morning & wrote to me. I then had a luncheon at the Club - and at 2.30 called on Mr. Benson & Carrington and wife of the American Ambassador to Mexico at their residence, 20 West 54th St. (Phone Elderkin 55: 0026) I went first to the book shop of Brennan - 1423 - 6th Ave. (near 58th) - each being impressed by the photograph of Mrs. Wilson.

The Carringtons were seated on opposite sides of a table in their library which was lined with books and the floor - (there Sothern died on Saturday night last) - he with his back to the bay windows and the fading

she has the look of a scholar - she wears the look of a Spiritualist - hair parted back: short, brushed back from the forehead, a slender frame, & expressive features. She is a perfectly charming little person in appearance, a sweet smile, beautiful eyes and attractive manner. - a great companion, I should think, for much a lover of this kind. They stayed on very cordially, and I felt almost as in one of my boyish moods, as I began conversation with them. I told them during the afternoon a good deal about some of this conversation with Mrs Piddington, - of Nancy coming to Joan (at Oxford) & telling of her being read a poem by [illegible] - of the Scissors & Paper I had put on Mrs Piddington's chair, and what she had said to me concerning it - at Piddington on my first visit there. Of the function of the Mayfield - most of the incidents concerning it (when telling of this Mrs Carrington said - it was like a book, pointing to the Magic Lantern, that Sothern died). Of the letter (on a very general way) with Sir Wilfred Gladstone Morrison - of Nancy playing the flute. this Mrs Carrington said there was no doubt was by much the best medium in the world: and that I had had very remarkable results. Such exceptional Mrs seemed to regard them. They were surprised & pleased Mrs Piddington still adhered to it as a medium - although she must be of great age (over 80) - wished they had the means & opportunity to get her to New York to sit with them. - They spoke of Mrs Garrett being a remarkable medium, & told me of their work with her. They are going to let her know when she is again in New York - as soon as - a meeting. They showed me a bit of metal (like a blackening plate) which they had had many of not touching anything - & kept in a locked room &. - which they were experimenting in finding out whether it was "a effect" or not - it had marks like a grasp on a cheek, and in my hand writing the name 'Smith' (of this I am not sure - it was a different name) there, & that - the handwriting stood out [illegible] impression, which Mrs Carrington said was the name of her father. He was making it apparent to them that he was telling [illegible] Mrs Piddington's mediumship was not unknown, but a series of experiments [illegible]

Fletcher was a member of the Surplice Christ Service. in a night boat, I mean in another of a boat or marine — (some person of Colchester cl. very sensible) which Carrington shunned us. They told me a good deal of their methods of research & their desire to work to the strictest accuracy in everything. I showed them Slen translation pictures & letter of my own & there able & helpful hints. Carrington advised me not to push back too fast in his work: that translation was one I myself should, both not be disposed take the precautions he should against fraud. Mr Carrington I thought the medicine had put it over him. he said it had been shown that there were evidences of body heat and in some of his ectoplasm pictures. (this I find it difficult to believe, in one sense - in flimsiness of texture - yes. - fact - not - in all. - I confess I wonder at the tenacity of Katie King's face & hands warmth - but I fail to see how mediums of the type he has employed - could fake anything of this kind ones) there may be an element of hypnotic jealousy, but Carrington did not affect of that type - often with great reserve. (in connection suggestions that nothing should be accepted which was not "beyond proof." — as I must point out, recalling directly my attention to the singular fact that among the communications in my mail, or my letters, is one from Dr translation — one from Mrs Stewart of Ninette both associated with that memorable Sunday eve. - How kind they are all genuine people & are working with others who are helping them) Mr Carrington spoke of their difficulty in securing funds for their work. he & Peters of the Rockefeller & I said I might do what at some time to say a word, but it would have to be when I saw the Working - called Spirit Control. I made no promises. They told me Dr Barrell of the Rockefeller Institute was following their work & had a laboratory of his own for psychical research. which, however, he was keeping quiet & secret - not wanting the Institute people to know of it — They stressed how very strong was the antipathy of psychic research - Spiritualism - and pointed out the forces that would be brought into action against those known to be interested in it. They agreed it was unfortunate for me & both my interest to myself - & it meant for the time to speak of it. I mentioned the feeling of censuring disloyalty in not leaving onto in the open - but Carrington feels it very specially - that one would come about at the right time. - Mrs Carrington told me of some experiences of her own. One of seeing a vision of circumstances related to us: the whole thing she saw in this way, was described in the Times some few days afterwards, as an event which had happened the day before. She had seen the whole incident, some days in advance of its happening. They described to me the method of "the taste" they went in for in developing of personalities, their use of words "suggesting" ideas, and of how remarkably these had worked out (See American Psychical Institute - Bulletin 1. Mr Arthur Goodby, the treasurer of this Institute came in while I was there, he told me he believed the founder of the Canadian Bank of Commerce was a grand uncle of his - Sister of hers or one of the great men of Canada's executive of Bell. He died just before I was at the time beyond that I had come from Canada - He is quite deaf - seemed to me to be quite a humourous as well as a very agreeable person - he is one who has had much to do with the Institute work." - I bought his of Mrs Carrington Coates (now out of print) the story of Psyche seems to me the book of poems - handsome "the projection of the astral body" - 5.00 The very kindly visit is clear of them for me - Mr Coates had unselfishly financed some 70 publications he Carrington said undoubtedly what I needed the way of income - confirmation of the kind I had in all, 30 major ones - the balance remaining the question does Carrington he said to himself, I need the light - that real Ed - confirmation do: I was about the room made a note of his - when she turned round on the wooden seat, he turned of attraction" he said I meant drawing things to me do in the chairs at his table. It was a beautiful tenor voice, quite unusual, as they do on the Grand Canal in Venice. It was a very happy hour or so. I left at 5: Got back to 40 in time to change for dinner. I had invited to dine to say goodbye some of the Spirit Campbell Poems. I could get out of any others there, or take in the Reference Library, now at Bloomsbury - Museum. I also looked at both places for a Wordsworth - or a Coleridge Memory to this fine Grand Conference night - at Queen Anne. The young man who waited on me for Mrs Sidgwick when I gave him my name, became quite attentive. He said he had been in Toronto a short time ago! The people he said there were all hoping I would soon be back in Toronto again.

Wednesday. Nov 1 I had not time for more than twenty minutes rest before dressing and starting off for dinner with Colin Grant at the Sherry-Netherlands.. I arrived at 7.30 precisely. She had a little table arranged in the sitting room at one side She was dressed in black - much silver grey about in the sleeves. - She has splendid taste in dressing, a beautiful clothes - The other evening the more a brown - much lighter still lighter brown, one Tea Gown - quite pretty - hers had tinsel about the sleeves & yoke

I had opportunity for only a short rest before starting off to dress with Mrs Lambert. I arrived pretty promptly, after 7.30. Her Son, Jordan, a [illegible] looking, square built, young man, (reminding me a little in some ways of Gordon) and his wife - a quite attractive fair haired beautiful young woman from Georgia - were with her. They had arrived that day for dinner. The table was beautifully decorated with flowers, Shasta and Talisman roses in the centre, four candlesticks, &c. Talked about the Summers, Their visit to the young people in Canada and other subjects of general interest. After dinner they showed me an album here. Lambert has kept, with pictures of her children (Jordan in particular) from childhood, up to the present - also of his wife - the two have known each other since childhood's days. They are remarkably good & attractive. Mrs Lambert is very fond of & proud of her children - very good reason so to be. - At 10 o'clock the young people left to return to their Country home in the north - they have a wonderfully beautiful home in the south - on an island off the Florida coast - the background of the family in the matter of possessions is quite remarkable - varied & beautiful - lovely homes - gardens - horses - swimming - boating, motor boats, aeroplanes, &c. - When the young people had left Mrs Lambert asked me about the afternoon at the Convention, & gave me an additional copy of "Light" with an article about the Young People's Movement, which I had already given her a copy. (She had given me another bulletin - evidently a copy which was her own. as this from Carl with notes on it). She & I talked for three hours then. She referred to as "Old Mrs Arnold" but spoke of me with real respect and reverence. When I told her of the conversation re. Annie Lindsey & She showed me the Encyclopedia in one of her records of a family of negroes, each of which made clear his or her own personality: - Some beautiful touches of "walking as the pals" for the mother &c - She said "the white tribe (or family) manifested" as the evening drew on & felt I should take it first out from her about the persecutions I have had at times and which I knew I could talk with her about - as she has had to inside experience and written of so openly & clearly. I described the sympathetic

I have had of abnormal desires & as it were current - or radiation - existing in us with another & which clearly attracted. I asked if it were possible for one person so to influence another. She thought it was, but that it needed cause we concern, I asked if that would attract evil spirits - She said in doubtless would, they would seek out opportunities to satisfy desires or cravings. I asked how this could be prevented. She said sometimes by making the sign of the cross, - by prayer - by directing one.
thoughts to a quite opposite way. - She said the sensation described had its origin in the spine, - near the base, its course was up the spine, through the head, down the front of the body, & the lower part - that by having one thoughts kept where the sensation ended, carrying them up & in the head, then allowing the sensation being directed there as it were, & not off on either side, with the belief that an aura (or something of this sort) were around one's head, with a prayer that God would send his messengers & bring down his healing & power that the sensation might - absorb & complete change.
I told her of how once I had asked "Nancy" & that me & sleep & knew I used & feel her influence about my head & this kind, - the form of the unnaturalness of the sensations of the kind I had described & said there was nothing to be concerned about in them. I made it plain my anxiety was & this as much as I could as a religious life, & avoid even a semblance of evil, & to pain power from following after the Lord. I spoke to of the work which I felt there was ahead for us to do, and my desire to lay aside every weight that might hinder us. I found her counsel simple & direct & very helpful & much of the fear I had been feeling existed in the enemy seemed to leave us. - She told me that she had found it comes to look much wrong here. that such like about these things. that the powers were more open & direct. She told me something of her own life. of which.
having been a man who drank & was of the worst kind coming down he needs away with the nurse she had had dealings on & illness and married her (I think a divorce was needed) - She said the nurse knowing her d.'s fondness for one of the children (Dorothy Jordan) had sought & killed the child. She feared he died in some horrible place & there was little doubt he had been murdered. - All this she told quite naturally. It seemed to me one of the sorrows & tragedy of her life. What she has lived thro'. She kept her photograph on her mantel piece shelf. - a collection of the leaves & meadow for the children's sake. At the end of our evening's talk the theme of today being "all Souls Day" (tomorrow NOV 1 is All Saints - tonight Hallowmas) and was glad we had shared the evening together. She responded 'all Souls' - Rosh Hashanah the Jewish day. - Asked her Yiddish description of Rosh, - she said she had been given a similar account. - She left me read the pages of her book, where she has been decorated by Buddhist. Her Japanese (Yiddish - Japanese) is working with her on it; & you'd be surprised. She let me see the records she had in a closet off her room (records kept which might be useful,) lists of Yiddish students. She told me of Jordan having visited Shelf a friend who was a drunkard, - of the time he had in the process - It seemed as if this heavy desire, to be passed over Jordan, for a time. He had a craving for drink in - It worked out - unnaturally although this heart life was saved, but soul was darkened. "It is wonderful what dynamite" when one enters on their tasks. Too much knowledge cannot be communicated. She said she needed sound on healing thoughts - but advice seeing or hearing as well. - She thinks the ordinary Doctor has his place & the Physician. That both sides of the mind should be sought - divine healing, medicine, is not a reliance on prayer alone, and human agency, plus prayer. I felt towards this end of the night - It was all of midnight when I left; that I had found something in which both Hans & I shared, I had come to seek, and that I was close to reality: her tenderness, could only have been more cordial in her welcome - I felt that I had found a friend who in confidence to be of real help to me in this part of life. I only wish I might help Hans of some real service as well to her. I had shared

Hotel Woodstock, New York - Wednesday 1921.

This morning the masseur had another appointment, so I decided instead of having him here at all, I would consult Dr Lamb - the osteopath (I paid him $25 for the 5 treatments) in Park Ave. I got there at about 9, and obtained an appointment before going to Brentford in the long thing hall of the block (I see 24½ for account of reference in the diary to the Woodstock calendar &c) This I secured for 11.30. Abbotsford among the chairs of cultured Scots near the door. - After breakfast, I thought I'd take a run to New York for another day before I must begin, to give me the pleasure of a day in New York - each of the half-dozen of planning the day & all a other pleasures of different kinds. So I phoned Wayne Mc - (A-work, who has explained the invitation, as Joan was out) & sometimes must be taken in the day I had a note from Joan saying she wanted me to dine & sleep the night to-morrow. I felt among the other things I should rather have the day with her than anyone else. There is so opportunity of kindness - it's so easy to do the most great pleasure. - I went into Hembaugh - Abrams's & purchased for $13.00 a dozen of Lavender marks, quite beautifully scented, but I hope not too good. often to be disappointed. That is the only thing I have secured for me. Lie - Something I feel I do not want to let me the right spring - morning relationship. I would do so, in accordance with her standard if I wanted) At 11.30 I got to the dentist office, discovered that - his receptionist, a charming Miss Compton, came from Charlottetown. P.E.I. had visited for me, as also her father & she had thought it was a prince of hers "kidding" her when I came the name "Woodstock King." She says he sometimes says it as "Ole Stock" Speaking to I found Dr Lamb a very pleasant - Scottish man. He pulled me about quite a bit. It seemed to me unduly I had made an unduly to going there. Nothing did not appear to be any displacement of joints &c; - about to test for me more very similar to the masseur. Except - for the major contortions. I left his office after treatment of 3/4 of an hour feeling much better for it. Miss Compton did a little manipulating of the back & knees - a rather horrid experience - to be managed by very flabby subjects &c. I felt if the cause started the whole - environment, I certainly could. After this treatment I went in search of lunch. Spent Something in Woolworth's calling with the Abrahams' family & of course visiting their - We told me of W. Way "found" this. Also found some letters at home & Company waiting at home - Wondered on & off home Something - on "radio"

her before going out to dinner. - her called my dear - & her book "Revolutionary days" &c. She used me she had little knowledge of literature - I was surprised & fear she did not know really anything of the poets - tho' she apparently enjoyed what I read & her from Wordsworth - which I had recited from Shelley. There were moments which seemed a little strained when we talked of the Tolstoi talk the matter about; - but the evening passed pleasantly - she 'trying to make up to us a little as we came & a clear understanding of our relations. She knew that we could be friends, but not - more than that. Steering in the difficult & made allowances & helping where possible. - After dinner we walked for a few moments at some of the little possessions she had on the tables, boxes & trays &c. with precious stones, Swatow. &c. I told her of my wish to [illegible] Royalty earlier in the day looking at ancient glass - She referred to the enamel - then spoke of all the possessions of Prince Louis Napoleon having been destroyed before Ellen Robinson's - the library of rare editions &c burned to the ground. She told me of a box with things having been rescued among, &c. looked at her coat of arms - She told me of their origin - of the slight difference between hers & the Queen's - She thought Lily Crewe's "was a bendlet": I said I did not know that it was, father had assumed it as a living crest, but not - himself sure of it. That I attached no importance to it - really hesitated to use it. I then began reading to her aloud from Wordsworth. first 'The Wolfe Warrior' which she said was like me. - Wolfe was one of my brothers - I said there were lines in it, I must like to be worthy of & "rising to high station only by honorable means" &c. She took this as re- - ferring to what I had said of not wishing to do anything dishonorable even to thought as the Prince &c - I said "but there have been very great Italian men who have loved women, it has not required that - Alfred Vaux": I said I then read for example the 'Life of Gambetta' &c was "great man - yet he had many women whom he loved for. I said I had not had that thought in mind. I was thinking when I spoke of Bismarck - his fortunes, his bluff. &c. She then told me that in England she heard nothing good of him, - one of those we most disliked, on the other hand many had a better light of me. - I insisted I were in Office - how different it would be. Her son - in law "Johnny" Hamburg Williams had so shortness to her. Hamburg Williams is the name - She said Lady Hamburg was very much in love with him. - I spoke of the letter I had written being in the nature of a confession to. She said what I had said in it of wanting her more that she needed so much; that I ought not to mind if the letter became public. It would reveal a noble nature. I said it would destroy the unfortunate boy's life & mine, & do dishonour to the names we bore. She did not seem to feel that very much, was rather ready to have it known - a sort of pride in the way in which our relationship had come to triumph. As to the other letters I had written her, she had wanted to keep them, but now wanted me I can then make of anything bothering her. I told her anyone reading some of the photographs might think there had been an intimacy where, in fact, there had been none. She said if I wanted it she would destroy them, that above all else she wanted to help me, and if it would ease my mind to have them destroyed, then it would be done on her return. I thanked her and said I would be glad to get rid of the unwanted dirt. She said nothing about her own letters, very good reasoning, that when I had once said anything of an intimate nature she had always responded to it. I said I hoped the lost letter might be found & returned to her. She said she believed it would, but we must wait conclusive news first. If it did not, she agreed that it might assist us to claim that all it was necessary to do in court - that doubtless if it were likely to be found for blackmail or nothing had come of it there for. She said other letters of hers - mentioning one from Trevor - had come safely at that time - (She ended this session on Monday, when I spoke about the letters at school - they said it had been lost & I replied yes. - the matter had been - they told her, it has been lost - & all remarked it was strange - also that she was moving about a good deal & letters may have got into dirty drawers. She said she must-must - where after it - I read out the poem on the occasion - "the woman never planned it" & said it was for her - she said it is a fine one - which I did not deny. I then read the Ode to Duty - and finally the Ode on "Intimations of Immortality" - the first three stanzas of which seemed more beautiful than ever. We then talked of our views on religion. I quoted the passage from Tennyson re personality & spoke of God being Spirit & how the disciples re Christ were to & a living influence - the Holy Ghost - & of characters here, pass through this body & soul & spirit. She knew it as a little word "Shekinah" in a book, the sign of a person - She had mentioned it to Gaskins earlier in the day, or yesterday. She had spoken about it or after the reading of the Legend that this man carried his cross, but at the end of it found it was the Christ that he was carrying on his shoulder. I felt the embarrassment in accepting this proof at all & do not care for N.G. Symbols & mist. I do not mind to carry anything of this kind, this she asked me if I would. I am a coward sometimes. I should tell her sometimes that I have not felt I would care to carry it - besides it is cumbersome sometimes, she thought she has had in mind is a kind of wood one, & it was meant as a symbol of the life I have chosen, & one such being given to me I am superstitious. Once or twice during the evening she had an air of looking straight ahead to ask me what I really wanted - she always felt this sense of choice in me - & she herself always begged me to come out occasionally in Westport, and to elsewhere, or in Europe & have at least evenings such as this. I feel how that correspondence was difficult. Telegrams embarrassing the ex-planations & N.G. telegraphs took around. Telegrams read by secretaries & asked that she do not telegraph unless absolutely. She wanted me to send them telling of Sweden etc - I was reluctant - to promise anything. When she spoke about tomorrow, I told her friends were coming to tea - that tonight had still to the charm of parting. I hoped till one, she pressed me to, as it might be time before we met again. There were tears in her eyes at moments, and once she said what a wonderful life we could have together that she had never really lived. She then told me of Miss Lang & we knew between the pence & herself, of that honeymoon lost money & care also.

Not be cause of unfaithfulness. It was his actions with regard to some other money, or something of the kind. Some wrong use he made of things.
She had thought of divorce & would probably have it even now. Some thing hid for in the past, his silence etc made her feel she should not know him. They lived a affluent life - she consulted him on things but she was really alone from home most of the time. She had felt she should have told me all this a year ago. That it was not fair to me not to have known it. Then in saying goodbye I asked her to give my kind regards to Mrs Lang her face softened pained - I reminded her that I had met him at Westport. She had forgotten this. She said she was grateful that I had embraced her in parting & her last words were goodbye dear. - I had asked her not to write 'dearest' in writing or thinking, that it did not seem to have fair to others for her to do so. Stood to her unfortunately goodbye standing & closed the door. It was kind of an ordeal, but it was when both me to Westport. His letter to me to have hastened. I felt the forbidding angels were absent.
One thing that caused me a little thought was that while looking this book

Ah mrs Clearmans I had seen a bible on the shelf. I opened my eyes fell on a verse concerning Jezabel. - this was before I went to dress - & sat a while evening. It seemed like a note of caution & yet I felt it was unfair to read a thing first. Her thoughts were those of temptation. There was never a word that withdrew the possibility as we called together & I must think would have left only room made it seem less shameful - & natural - but even if accepted with the heart of loved ones in the beyond - that, I cannot believe, - after all has passed would have been a strange one indeed, the world in which her children live & which she believed to us it as real as it can be - yet it did not shape her ending - it was not recommended, but by sudden accident as inevitable. Has anyone else had the difficulty - this she says she was only once disillusioned the little verses in the Daily Strength for Nov. 1 are very appropriate, and it was in the light of these truths that every word was spoken tonight - & even in our conversation I spoke of 'the cloud of witnesses' & of the 2nd last chapter of Hebrews. as evidencing the reality of their abiding with - when I returned to the hotel it was after 1 am Nov. 2. & I read in the little book - the verse we closed of sinning & escaping under the sea with - the other verse in the bible that I read after was that day she would be separated from her sin - In the book of my own book I read the verses pointed there & which conclude - "God's mercy took me from my sin" & pray God I have fought my last big fight with the unconquered & that of the flesh in its wars against the Spirit - Strange how appropriate are all the passages for Nov. 2. - the mention of the loved ones & the mention of 'victory' which I spoke of in my letter to Julia Sunday I noticed as I sat opposite her, a falling in a little on either side of her chin which betokens either of great sorrow or of advancing years. It made me feel a dark sympathy for her. She & Esther of the whole she mourned & do before she died, or if not many years were before her. & as she wipes her tears for her friend she was often to pray. Her allusion against the Communists she said, & I believe it that she was not concerned. I tried to do what I could to impress her mind which her name stood for in the United States & to use her life for leading others to a better position I spoke of not being surprised if ours was considered before the public in some point about for good on the Continent. That ah they feel as we would have them inwardly, if not outwardly is very apparent. I said as my last words to her that all I wanted in our relationship was to be to her as all these years about I would wish to me & do more her grandfather & father standing at her side & my father & mother ah mine. Yes God this may ever be so. I am grateful to the Providence that has been at my side this night

Harvard Club, New York. Nov. 2. 1933.

I had left word to be called at 8.15 but was up before. I was blaming his day for Joan and myself when the phone rang about 8.45. It was Joan who said 'I am afraid I shall have to disappoint you badly,' & went on to say that Godfrey was upset about her going to Montreal alone - had spoken of the hotel fire! That I was known. well I believe that they are, it might occasion talk. I said to her at once, think it was quite all right. I was sure it was for the best. that I would decide to go back to Ottawa tonight - She told me too. that Nancy had come to her in a dream & warned her not to go. In what connection I believe - the mention of Nancy's name brought a feeling of great calm with it. for she is a guardian angel. I suggested to Joan that Jack might drive Godfrey down to Ste Anne de Bellevue on Sunday. if Godfrey is not well. She seems to doubt if he is equal to the task. She says they will definitely know on Monday. It was a relief to my own mind that this decision was made, for really I felt it to be best that I should be at home tomorrow. when the ballots to Canada's relievers will become known. I shall have a good message & an interview will be expected & I was worried as to coming from the United States. but for the B.C. elections. I planned to go to Rochester & then Baltimore & Ottawa. for I was for from being able to walk as I should. I have still the pain in my groin & abdominal pelvis. like lumbago - a sort of sciatica or rheumatism. I began at once after breakfast to clear the slate - before going to Washington. I phoned Miss Grant to say 'good' & to thank her again for all her kindness, for the telegram, permit & passport - the visit to Chrysanthemum. I spoke to her of the steps of some of the passages in the little book for today - like 'I forgot to' & drew her attention to the last paragraph having received & shown to Mrs Bruce Stevens the words the ballots began of the Referendum - with its annunciation next the sun rose. She said she was going away "quite happy" (as indeed I think she felt) and my last words to her were "God bless you". I then went to Washington in the large hall of the hotel. when reading my letters I was astonished to read of Edmund Bruce having received a thousand $, a share of the dividends in the Church of St John the Divine in memory of his wife and - Mother Mary Bruce. I had not known of her death (I was home last Tuesday night) at the age of 83 - that her father had gone to Europe a very old man now, much older than he married her.

→ on my letter when I was sending out the cards. was a small add - which left slanting out in the fair - It was the words "Buried Sweden" - no it - I felt this had something to do with Margaret Anglin's talk with Wards - (see Ceremony - Small diary Nov. 25: 38.
Mrs HS. Green p. 26 1c)

This seemed too strong, as I had had her name on a list of those whom I might possibly call on in Norfolk last Thursday - when the house should (2 Portland Pl.) after the Coronation: was fairly over. is given - so completely does Town being about its changes. - Yesterday I went to get the residence of Mrs Meldrum & Olive & ask for Eleanor's address. so I could tell Eleanor how she had been in my thoughts'. the Exchange told me that the connection had been taken out: gave me an address to communicate to which I could phone. I did not think I should ring up another State (the how I afterwards wrote I had). I had been debating if I would ring up Margaret Anglin (Mrs Hull) to say to me - to my surprise. a note came from her from Bellport - it had been sent to Williams two days ago - asking me Mrs Meldrum's address - the note to be there last Sunday. I sent it to her in a form she could show to Mrs Meldrum - more a courtesy. I am sure it will be a kind one, and one that will express her sympathy - for I am sure in her letter she made known communication might be possibly made. I shall be surprised, if my position or well as hers does not come: speak to her. I believe both will - also her father, - possibly Judge Lehman & Madeleine Falconridge. I shall be really disappointed if they won't so. - It was strange all these separations coming on it more together - I decided not to attempt the Rockefeller Center or calling on any one there, - or Mrs or Peter Kerr - or Rawlinson. (a millionaire group if there ever was one - strangers that I should have unpleasant relations un-pleasant relationships with all - the Governor whom I know even) It took me till noon to complete packing & answering 4 telegrams several messages received - an invitation from, Lawson Purdy's sister and Mrs Ward at the City Club of Mrs. to meet Comstock - to convey disapproving of the title "Letters to Living" here: Now for the Efforts of the Post-War Conference. to Henry telling they return tomorrow pm. I had luncheon alone at the Club (had forgotten my cash) before going out to buy to secure some Xmas gifts". I bought the bags - for Joan - the ivory mounted bags as a picture over the phone when I ordered steel to be in money. one a pale brown, 40th: the other French brocade 22nd, one for Lucretia: one for Grace. I spent some time at Cartier's - at Black Starr & at Williams: Scribners: at some other shops on Madison Ave. Also I went up to the Museum - to the Colonial Hudson Museum & on the "birds: trees" - the walk in memory of Edward Story & Roosevelt. I was pleased to be able to commit both as friends. I wonder to pay this little tribute to Lord Lee of doing honour in England and also to commend to him a doctor. - as the Norman, the Guard said I might help my case as apparently I needed it - It is quite difficult that I get about the right leg still feeling shorter than the left. - I left-hand at the Norwood Club at 5 & before I had my Golf over to the hotel, which I thoroughly deserved it - was at St Annes. the fine air overlooking sands I felt was doing me good. - Let me dress for dinner in his room - his charge was only £10 for the treatments, the his account shows regular charge what mine for one. It was been a real pleasure coming to know him - the treatment has been of value. I went from him to York Mrs, to Kearsley Hall to 63 Park. arriving about 7.30 - We had a short talk together before the guests came in to dinner, first Mrs Price, then Douglas Price - Ambassador 7 years in the Balkans & in Denmark - they were recalled recently, & could not have been nicer than they were. He has great charm of manner. is small - fair - pleasant & says & very clever in conversation. he spoke of the Balkan peoples as rotten - the Germans as clever and disagreeable. he felt the situation in Europe very serious. - Other guests were Mr [illegible] of Stockton & Darlington & of Mrs Lord Hampsonny. —

Mr the Rockefeller Institute who has discovered a cure for the common cold. He is too good looking - has a wonderful smile & charm. was at Cannes most part of the summer. - Mrs Sheppey - a very agreeable & modest - [illegible] Yankee [illegible]. Mrs Stewart - pleasant to talk with - Lord & Viscountess of Cannes is coming out for Lord Standard & Viscountess Lee of Fareham. some other guests Colonel & Mrs [illegible] Cannes [illegible] - [illegible] Mrs [illegible] Cannes - [illegible] Mrs [illegible] daughter. The Rockefeller Centre - Newport-Caspin incident

NOV. 25, 1933.

Written Sunday morning Nov 26. 1933.

Some time ago, (when Mary Benton Caspin died before Xmas last year) I had a talk with Newport about survival after death - told him of Mrs Wright and of some of the conversations I had had, - shortly before this we had talked of Mrs Thayer - in bringing up Phillips old letter to me I would have to go back to our early days in Toronto - leading him to know - in meeting at Mrs of S.N.-professor some funeral - being on the train together - & the pitiful summary of bankruptcy - & subsequent letters to - & a vision she had of worries; and flowers she sent me & other things. talks of Kingsmere and her sending him a book from New York entitled "Schliemann - the story of a Gold-Seeker, by Emil Ludwig. This book I never had time to read, but it seemed to me to have a significance in relation to my own experiences, so I placed it on my bookshelf with a number of other books in the Sun room - with the connection there of words "with a meaning" - brought back to both and before the evening was over we found her power to create in the work she did for me - She recently had stayed in the home of Agamemnon the book having to do with the discovery of Troy, of the discovering - burying of ancient cities is quite significant - it seems a relation ship to "my burial" - about I am just now reading - and to the bits of ancient glass &c which I have in "the Walton collection", -

The present incident begins with a telegram I received while in New York from Newport asking me to give him the address of Mrs Wright in Detroit where she was at the time. With that request Correspondence closely the little slip of paper with the words "Direct Evidence" which was given me by Mrs Wright and which I have preserved - a telegraph code - address = communication, - & suddenly there events were falling like a constellation about me came word that Newport would be here to dinner with Mrs Sherwood, the dinner was postponed and came on Thursday morning instead. I had had a letter from him which telling me of unexpected visit (for telegram see page 38).

W. did not get much chance to talk of confidential matters as the Stewards or Sec Purse & Lady Desmond & others [illegible] as well as he & Dennis were there, but enough was said to me to cause me to tell that incident had in her mind something she wished to ask of me in relation to the Rockefellers She spoke of some action she might have brought against the Theatre people - but did not for her children's sake, wanting to help him or shew him this -

Now comes the next vision.

I have had several visions bringing in Mrs Rockefeller or the Rockefeller centre. The first NOV 11. (Mrs Rockefeller) brought in me & myself & Rockefeller Centre & his office on the 56th floor - conveying to "look up" not down his telling me he wished he might have seen the whole business - the vision from there - which seemed to signify "knowledge & vision - judgment also playing a part. (See account Small Journal) page 322.

Next NOV. 13th. Miller's birthday - in which I dreamt of meeting Mrs Rockefeller & him son in a garden - Mrs R. wanting to have from me something that belonged to Mother - Ruth & an Emerald — this seeming to relate to the time of prophecy: (See Diary NOV. 13th & NOV 16 - re time not being longer a factor Next NOV 17 - the scene of this comes of the Broken Seer - the heart picture of the Emerald in the hand of the [illegible] creature with the green eyes - about this time (or I read a book from the Rockefeller Library) (This book is lost - dated NOV 17. - possibly parallel Isaiah 42 verse 16) "Eyes of the Wilderness" - showing eyes of weed around a face - these sketches are just more as significant as the [illegible] eyes, are being treated by Mr Mitchell - (Rob was still in N & myself in the vision of NOV 11. - I mean some significance by this till I began to write this - but it is 'clear enough' - that the 'eyes' are a link to shew I was right in associating the Emerald with this Rockefeller incident. (See Journal page 16 - the reference to the Broken Seer — so I must put this scene down & the [illegible] comes of this book - to recall, however, how much I could not for the moment remember I was attracted by the comes of another book "The Story of Grace" by one who wrote "Beside it," — this connection of this book is also significant. See Journal diary - it parallels the story of "Gethsemane - the story of a Lord Keeper "Grace and Gregory English" & was the story that was Grace that he was after - as I recall this I think of about Mrs Rockefeller in her acting Shepherdess chi. of which we were talking ob dennis had done for "reviving 'the glory of greece'" - which is the thing she is now concerned about - in the Rockefeller incident. - There four boz covers Schumann, the Broken Seer - the eyes of the Wilderness and the Glory that was greece' - till the story - they are all connected in the most marvellous way.

Now here is my entry of a part of my talk with Margaret on Thursday night we left on Friday "She had a ring on, with a stone like Emerald, shape of one of the 'Broken Seer' figures - probably in a Rockefeller Centre I think it seemed to me that dream of Miss R. wanting an emerald that belonged to Mussolini - the shape of the stone being like the one in the Broken Seer, was a warning that Margaret might ask something re the Rockefellers and to be on my guard as in connection with any request"

Now this is exactly what happened in our talk together last night (May 25th) It all worked out pretty much as I had foreseen it would, even in my preceding correspondence with Mrs R. - and letters declaring inability of them & her.

At dennis we could not take much of psychic phenomena, because of Richard being in the room - after he left. Margaret mentioned she had had a talk with Frank + a few words with Sir Wilfrid, she was inclined to be sceptical about the caller as he had introduced himself as 'Laurier' - I told her (she thought he aroused Laurier Sand for us) how he had come that way. also of Shaw saying 'Here were no 'Lords' here. - She apparently had only a modicum of communication. Romney as we came out of the elevator. The bathroom door opposite was open I felt ashamed of that + was about to speak re opportunity of, when she said look at my arms - She showed them under the light in the library. "Look on all Goosefleshe" - That is the strongest thing I have ever known. Sir Wilfred, when I spoke to him about this room, knowing him as it, said to me "the room next to the bathroom", I thought he was mistaken - or that there was nothing a minister - that I had seen the little dark room - but assured me I was - I thought that was what she, Richard, meant - I never knew there was a bathroom there! - This certainly made a deep impression on her - & she saw further "clear windows"

She then began to tell me of her talk at Mrs Wardle - afterwards Mrs in the light with the breakfast in her hand. - She said Frank was the first to come she said all his speech accorded with what it did at his last election. His ability to pronounce words like a clever gentleman or lady. - he introduced himself by saying "Your brother" - She first thought it was Your Lover - but he repeated it - she said Frank - he said 'Yes' - he asked for Harriet and hurried - then became quite absorb - but she could not fit her mood - tho' he was trying over it in the night. When Mrs Perk asked her if she would tell them of their talk he said "They would not understand it, tell no one but Betty". (Evidently that he knew the name by which she called me - all this while here we had no knowledge her name was Ruskin - or of his Oxford associations then.) - the more gentle conversation it was Frank - there were many moments.

She was asked about the name "Wallis" - She told me this down stairs before I referred to it up stairs table in speaking of her letter incident - See that account in small journal.

We went into the sun room - I followed in seconds - talked of Schliemann etc we [illegible] on from one topic to another, when the maid came to report to Cattle wrestling. I found if she would like to try to see if we could get results and told her of Mary Dougherty experiments in the sun room - and of the wonderful results recorded of this in the Small Journal (see book)

When we came back from the sun room I had planned her visit. Mrs Perk then began to speak of the Rockefeller Centre and said she had "a forum" which she wished to ask me, if I was in a mood to help her with immediate advice touching with her or Mrs J. D. Rockefeller Jr. to talk over with them the some work projected of using the Rockefeller Centre theatre as a great entertainment centre, with close acting opera etc. - Some company is being organized for the purpose - many wealthy people backing it, she gave me the name of their chief person - a Jewish name it sounded - like Hirschmann or something of this sort (with letter both Schliemann - the story of a gold-seeker) She said she had no financial interest, - it was art. I see Rockefeller she was considering - but will wish to see a second failure there. A crook etc - She wanted to see Mr R - if she was in supervising the dramatic work. I told her understood it would have to be of a high class - some civilization that is there now - a condition of underworld life that is terrible. - It seems to me as I write that the effort was again to take advantage of his Rockefeller idealism to attain an end. - that she is acting for herself - but also for a group is trying to get this Greek project across - that she had got his M. interested from the idealistic side. & in that way get the project afloat. It came began to look to me as if her visit to Athens had been designed to get in touch with me, and to get me to write about this contact. the letter of a letter to her Rockefeller to Miss Rockefeller - not for money - but are the - know here is a matter of interest -

In her letter with him which - something had been said of 'jealousy' of some one - it related to some broadcasting she had been doing at the Ambassador - in Detroit, and some lady had very called 'Bonnie' - (this is interesting as I think of it - for I dreamed this morning that almost everything re- -corded in the book has always at New York. Among some relation of this record, indeed the parallel in my mind was so close that I chose this book to write in by preference. I saw the name Oscar Wilde as I read - referring to the book I purchased - here is this segui- -former - this 'Bonnie' - whom was part described as very effeminate. it - that she asked as she had from a mere whim & half acute in her mind this new stage venture or broadcasting. and Frank her brother had advised her to stand to broadcasting. She confessed to me she had only three or four years yet during which she could hope to have any stage association - she said like if she could to round off her career by another association - during it is this new project which is related to the Rockefeller ~~Committee~~ Association - It may be that what is happening is it close to her to back away from it altogether - to provide her as well as me - I believe this is much it is - or - that there is a genuine about the interest in art. "the glory that was Greece" that concerns her work. - if it were the ballet alone it seems to me that could be managed apart from me - my intervention could mean nothing - though of the desire to attain to the stage via this route.

When I was about was coming I found it hardly embarrassing to next - the situation, but I saw clearly that was what I had to do. I did it in this way. - First I told her exactly of what my relationship with the Rockefeller had been all the years we were together - that I had never asked anything of him, or interfered in any way with his business affairs - that my strength with him + consequently to him lay in that circumstance. In this connection I pointed to some of the letters that had come to me from Mr. R. this year.

(I stopped reading as this point & took out the letter from Mr. R. this year. I felt like looking at one of the Rockefeller autographic letters which came yesterday. ? silence the Shield I opened at a stray "the Ornament & the Key" for Grandmother. I was immensely amused at the [illegible] & the words beneath - I said here is where the romance intervenes - there is always as this the spirit's more loving high command running suggestion - working comedies of our tragedies. - We shall see. I then read the story)

Then other than I took more & showed Mackenzie, the copy of the "Labor" publication with the article re "the Growing Rockefeller Power" in & the effort to discredit made & previous prejudice against myself. - also showed her the letters I had written in the morning to Mackenzie and Brewster. This made clear to her how careful I had to be with the statement of any connection between her & myself that might become known - I had had in mind that day, that I might refer to both sets of communications & had once thought of asking to have them left out. Edith said, however, & I took her some time to recall them from the files - the one lost by chance had not come to the office.

I could see that Mackenzie was very much perturbed. She walked in a way 'driven to the wall', she sought to make it clear she had sought nothing for herself, - and she was very wise in saying she could not think of asking me to do anything in view of what I had shown & said to her, she saw what her & my relationship was, and the dangers to my position and work. Told her that we were in the midst of a revolution at this moment. That Communism was something the world - that I was had a work to perform in this regard which I might give all my time and thought to & take no chances on. That Mr. R. was bound to be a storm centre in - all of this she saw - I could see through that it was a part of a big struggle or endeavour, that her & Ethel's visit, Mary Ellen's visit was connected with the Rockefeller Centre Project & Labor in a/c. as a possible new venture. I tried to help to make it understandable: it was difficult to do this, but I think to my glory. - One thing is clear my vision was true, my interpretation of the Emerald incident correct -

A reference to the last days in New York will reveal enough there of mostly everything which comes in to tonight - the struggles - tears unveiled - the Keller incident - perfect proofs, the Clay Hill - Orion Circle - life - Bonney of the Rockefeller plan - the [illegible] Lord Baltimore - Law reform of Little Rock Constable - Lost and then here M.A - Shelley seeing and perhaps complete Sisters Henry - I quit journal division commander of boat Henry - how did - about him & Wright Brothers, I call morning Henry Bell - The 1st one [illegible]

Tom - how did Edmond Lee am saying tomorrow Wednesday, will [illegible] one of the days

There are certainly remarkable parallels.

At 3 this afternoon or a little before received an answer to my letter from Dr Brothers saying tomorrow or Wednesday at 2. - He and Mrs Lee only at home to Lodge this - & Col Ott tomorrow - So Thomas invited for Wednesday - this will permit preparation with Carl

The reading from this book the last few days has all been of the ancient cities that were to be destroyed by Babylon & Tyre. Jerusalem Tyre this, - this is interesting as related to the cities recently covered & but even more as evidence of the [illegible] of Schluman Babylon. - The reading for today is Ezekiel chap XXVIII ~~XXXIII~~. The forgiveness of Israel's sins were righteousness adhered to even in verse. Under symbols - also the duty of the prophet to be fearless in showing this way - "this cruel book" Yahweh I am with thee, - must keep true in all places whether men grant" — The end of this book. last night "knowing then one guarded of this chronicle of warning" to do this, best I think to my views. - One thing is clear my views were true, my interpretation of the Emerald incident correct -

A reference to the last days in New York will serve to mention there of mostly everything which comes in the longest - the struggle - was needed -
- the Ellis incident - police frauds, the Clay Hill - Baron Wolcott - life - journey of the Rockefeller plan - the Ah! Ah! Lord Baltimore - Law report of Ellis Consular - how I met Mrs Ellis
Mrs A - Nothing seems the reason complete Series
Henry - I quite forgot Edinburgh Commercial of book.
Henry - how long would Clay Hill - Ellis left Ellis decision

Before leaving Ogham left the Ogham's West Hotel - also met a Canadian from Granville, I dining with her at the end. I bloyfy with one of the others I also had taken part - She is I send me a wreath -

She was in the Salvation Army for me -
I drove me home & was asleep - In was after 1.30

both full of evidence.

Tom - how I planned her am staying tomorrow her birthday. will present one of the books

There are certainly remarkable parallels.

At 2 this afternoon or a little before proceeded on account of my visit from Mr Brothers staying tomorrow or Wednesday at 2. - He will come he only an hour to look it - & I'll stay tomorrow - so I have missed for Wednesday - this will permit preparation with care

The reading from this table the last few days has all reference to ancient cities that were destroyed Babylon Babylon, Jerusalem Egypt &c. - this is unfortunately as related to the cities recently covered & but even more on evidences of the Coming of Christ. - The reading for today is Ezekiel chap XXXIII XXXIIIa ~~XXXIV~~. The forgiveness of God seems where righteousness adhered to even in verse. Ruth 4 notes - also the duty of the prophet to be fearless in showing this way - "the watchman" Richard I am with him,
- watch keep thee in all places whether thou goest" — The end of this book has. last night "knowing when one guarded & this characteristic of Watching"

Dearest Mrs Wendt called

Mother:

Dear – my dear Son: I am so glad to be with you again – and welcome to you Mrs Wendt. I am so happy this morning, to be able to speak with you once again – many hours were lived – everything is so wonderfully pleasant...

Said mother, how are you, – I am very happy. I am always happy and am with you always. I want to see you perfectly well – dont overdo Dr Sharp is here, and he is going to speak to you

Send Joan my love., said she will be here. Mother replied I must be lonely. Looked for the others, dear Hilda is always happy, Hollis is so happy; he is so proud you have done so well – especially in the horse shows (shows & Election) The people who fought for you, are coming back to you (?)

I asked how I was likely to be – mother said – something about the condition – will pass – will pass away. I asked if she had anything to suggest. She said I am with a good physician – I said you are a good mother. She said I am a good nurse but a poor doctor She said to get muscles into shape – will be back soon – my fondest love – I asked mother if he knew how I had been hoping "Hilda dropping" she said yes. She did. – added "I dont like it very well" I said why? she said because I can't talk, I am used to this. I love to come and talk, I will come again. Then addressing Mrs Wendt. – Mrs Wendt I am so glad you were able to come I hope you will keep well – Mother She said she trusted to keep in close touch. mother said that is right – keep up your exercise Then she added now I will go, and let the other friends speak I will like the good people who are waiting come. I will come again

Miss Wendt saw a light
There in broken English - Good morning - Comment ça va and more in French. Pasteur then entered and the voice said Pasteur
I thanked him for coming, and for what he had done for Hab: and he said. I will do all I can to help, to help you in your career. I will help you in every capacity; to make you strong, don't overdo no medicine, eat good food & study the nerves, treat the nerves as not sick & do not go in for starvation - You need exercise. Before about reducing, he said not too much in weight (It was optional if some might fall - but not too much) Eat one good substantial meal a day - You need food for the muscles and the brain You need to protect the physical, for lunch fasting does not help to strengthen the mental women, eat strong nourishing food - brain and muscle, then emphasized - I asked a few questions, and the answers came Eat good wholesome food - You must have nourishment of the right kind for the brain and muscle & to protect the frame and body
I will come to you in the very near future

Miss Wendt said she felt as if there were bits of flies on the top of her head - thought it was magnetism.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier

A vaccè 'wilfrid' – Good morning. Pam very pleased to see you again
It is a great privilege – welcome to the Audience
My dear friend, good friend, I am so very proud of all you have done. I am proud of you – you don't seem to have left off the French
I want you to practice in French – It is impossible I know when you have so very much other work – if you could do a little once a day.
Heard I had not been very well of late, as he knows. Sir Wilfrid said
yes. I don't want the public to know that. It is better kept away from them. don't want anything in the papers in the nature of a sensational report – everything is coming along beautifully
I asked Sir Wilfrid the had suggestions for Speech from throne
Sir Wilfrid – what we need is what is best for the country and the people the people need a change. – the country needs to get back to normal, too much money has been spent for nothing – Mr Bennett knows that, knows he has little chance against his opponents – we must get back to our old position – get it all back. I want your speeches to be to the point, the remarks to him, be positive in what you say. Bennett is not doing the things that help – the Elections will come in 1934.
We [illegible] the tables. we will help – do the best we can
We must get back to the old political understanding
It is well for you to keep your equilibrium, not to [illegible] too much – be firm in your remarks and hold to it, don't talk too much — You will be better soon – quite soon.

I changed the subject – said I had been reading Wilkerson's life – Shelton – found their accounts differed as to his birth, his brothers & and he said, It is difficult to speak of "conflicting views" in a con-flicting way. Pll tell you my life – look it is not particularly interesting Speak for for myself – I naturally don't want publicity about it. I moved in Secession or in Rich – What I know of my life I learned from my mother – what she told – Some of my brothers were in some wars, but not in some battles – they were offspring of mixed parentage – in my case the one was Scotch and the other French – my brothers names were found to me, you will see that in these there is no resemblance to me. We had the same mother. Naturally I don't know the public & know - Unless any of this from my mother what Sir John did etc.

Grand Sir John had told Dr Howell some things before his death, which he Howell had said he had written out, but would not be published for some time. Asked if they related to Spiritualism or to something else. Sir Wilfrid said, No. They pertained to me - We did not publish them. I must be superstitious about these publications. In regard to my life, it has been perfectly clean, I have never stooped to do degrading things that some have done. I have kept myself clean. Asked if he recalled the White Fleece? Sir Wilfrid laughed, and said, Indeed I do - Said it was in that light all people thought of him

He said you know one thing, when I went out. Dr Howell the Roman Catholic Church - they did not like that, I was criticized for that. It was a difficult time. God gave me strength to carry on. - (Absent at the moment to whom he was speaking)

He then said (Before of it being said to the effect of D. N. - he said I am always here when you are. The house is yours. It does not belong to the Government of Canada, when you depart, and when your work is done, I want you think deliciously & that you would like to have done much it. It does not belong to the Government, I want this conversation with you — and with you Sir Wilfrid - I added. - He then said you are a wonderful man to me being, I must come later, keep to our line of thought in the presence for today - what a difference from 10 years ago - the country has changed, it is necessary for us to protect our country; we must do what we had; stand by the helm --- "merci beaucoup"

I have been talking to the French - so many during the last six weeks, most anxious to have you enjoy them. Will see you again soon

Dr Sharp:

A voice: - How are you - how is the world using you

I have had a look at your throat and mouth — You have been punished enough — You will not have to have any more bits out for a time — don't take too much medicine — make yourself fit for the fight — You are getting on beautifully

I asked about going to Baltimore — Dr Sharp said — something about his being a good doctor - he must do it in order to make you feel perfectly fit - take your little exercises, take care of yourself as much as you can and take care not to take cold — when reducing the blood pressure, and you are apt to catch cold easily - Eat one food must meal a day (must agree with you) so what you like in eating — don't wear or tear down the nerves — fasting and nervousness (something?) You are perfectly sound - eat to nourish your system don't overdo — eat a light breakfast - & a light lunch You need food to nourish the bones and to help the muscles, & food brain food, keep away from doctors

I asked about the nursing letter - Dr Sharp replied - it is not going to cause you any difficulty - so for have not found it had back of it. It is not going to do you any harm. He says you thought he not got it. I said you mean in one of mrs miller's. he said no - I mean the 5 pm - he said they thought it. I said well, he said he knew it.

In point of trying to bring things together, and asked if I were right. he said yes you get impressions - guidance from impressions & impressions from those around about you

I asked about books - he said yes - Guidance there. people say 'more' concentration. - it is not it is guidance

this guidance is commonsense & some – it is food for the soul the soul is the muscle of the human body – the spirit of truth and guidance is a part of the whole system (truth) constitutes the human body. — I want you to keep well – once you get through the terrible ordeal that is coming you will be able to take things easier, to rest – now you have got to fight & keep it a peace(?)
next year will kill the Cabinet – I asked them next year. after benediction he said, most likely in the autumn – we are going to help you to keep going and to fight – fight to the bitter end,
I am glad to see you and am coming again

At Rome. William Ewart Gladstone :

A voice – Gladstone:

It affords me much pleasure to seeing you this morning. I am greatly impressed with the views you have carried out judiciously adieu
I know full well your presence is doubtful or to what is to happen here at the next election –

~~many a time~~ I could not catch the rest. It was something about the loss of thoughts – or more like of thoughts – he went on to say that it was well to sleep out in what one had to say. I have talked before people and have sleeped out right and left – many a time I have preached ~~in my sheets~~, and have sleeped out (I recall this) – The times have changed so much since I was here on earth! the change has been so tremendous. As you know this is a wonderful Canada, a gigantic and marvellous place to live in, but man is bigger still – ~~man~~ (stressing man) In this gigantic world where man has made a beautiful —— life can make it serve a higher and nobler sphere of action (1)
I mean morally action. Such is Christ to will – to bring about the welcoming of Canada – bring things to a focus where it will be the dawn, if you keep out – health and wisdom and pray always" – Something startling will come to you and we will help you"

the English the England I love so dearly. When I started Dance to shake in my boots for fear of making a mistake. ~~taught me a doubt.~~ her Majesty scorned me for many things I said — (said, I thought of when Victoria had treated (or Gordon) I spoke to her about Abdication but thoroughly) I began on striking right and left. — I had the powers of the press and speaking. — (when I referred to the Queen her G. said) She was very bom--bastic, Homeric, I was a little severe myself. I checked her up. I told her if she were the supreme majesty — I had the powers of speech. No woman will conquer my expressions. She said "be off - be off" — I She shook her finger at me' heard, and the next day we were quite happy again — when I spoke of the Balkans, she was ——— (something wrong in a great state) we had a wrestle, I felt my conscience was in the right, don't you think her king' it is a good thing to strike against another persons will (this I recall for it was worked decidly) when your conscience says it. (I replied I did) Strike from the shoulder (her G. continued) don't be beaten down I was right — She called in Stead & beg to settle the difference between us and Stead said of her "he is right" She struck up like a clear Strike out from the shoulder her king, someone is behind you when you speak out from your conscience, there is some one to guide you. her king.
May the presence of God be your guide as it was mine

I spoke to Mrs Gladstone of daughter = my visit to Ironmonger = burning her son Henry Neville - Oh a fine man - he said / the other / Lord Gladstone. I added. told how we were much thrilled - also of burning one of his pens on my table = deeper thought = copy of his lectures on an inspiration he said quite decidly. I had the powers of speech - She had the supreme language -

Gladstones' voice was very hoarse = he addressed me three or four times as her king - it was very intimate & direct - he stressed that I had a chance to bring Canada to a focal point, = something great Starting would come to me & they would help me. — he meant a great fulness, from the way I felt the impression it gave.

Senator Fulford

A word - from Mrs Fulford - Mrs Fulford
How are you. I am alright here, but I am so sorry for Mary. She is worrying so much — Please tell her for me to consider herself out of all this trouble dont say anything one way or the other. She will just resign into the hands of the Doctors about it, — it belongs to their province and not to Mary. I mean her mother to speak or to remain silent (the best) or to say anything one way or the other — I asked if he meant more than words only? he said no — the whole struggle against either Mary, added Mrs Fulford he says my daughter is there to sanction it I objected to the marriage and cried to prevent her not to marry him. I say many fathers and mothers have no right to ruin their children so much misery- Poor Mary my love — tell her not to worry to do with them at all I am sorry I cannot speak to her. He worries me to see her again I asked if there was anything I could do? he said no. he said there is no animosity in any member of this family, it is only bad temper

Good luck to you — now to bring the corresponding of this here with the corresponding of the old — the new year will bring you to the flowers of the flock — Good bye

Mrs Fulford was very decided & forcible in her speaking & I could & when he left the room or it seemed there was a sound as the ceiling came as though he had crowded through them as most were - both Mrs Wright & I remarked upon it

Ottawa. Laurier House. Dec 13. 1933.
afternoon sitting Wed. 3.45-4.45.
Miss Arnett - Joan - Self

Miss Arnett

— I see a flat with a heavy blue border - a deep blue border
some one owned it - some one is showing it who owned it Joan asked - Ask it about Sara - There had been some claim that belonged to her which should have been hers - There was a great deceam of it.

a sound like a hand rubbing over the hair perfect

Major Featherington

Then came the name Featherington - it was difficult to understand their Major - I am from England - The Featherington's Dead people. Her doctor told me you were here. I am a friend of her doctors - he told me this morning, he is coming to speak.
You may remember meeting me here (I asked if it were the time of the Imperial Conference, he replied Yes. - I but I cannot remember time here — he said something about my coming to Quebec (perhaps to meet her doctor) he said I came to Quebec, both sick and died in Quebec. I spoke of an invitation I had seen in looking through a Conference book: he said Yes. then added
"the world is not so big after all" — I have a son in Toronto

Nancy

Then came the beautiful voice whispering much voice
"mother" - Joan said is that you dear - Yes" then came heiress, (where are you? (Nancy) I am here beside you on the table — then how is Papa? (He is well. I do know. Give papa my love. - then mother, I am so happy to see you today. I come every day to see you - wherever you go, I go. (Joan spoke of the trip) I she said Yes we had a lovely time. I was there (Joan spoke of the pond-waders. Nancy - they are lovely. Joan asked where she was - I still am in the musical shop, learning something new

I play the violin – I asked if the flute. Nancy said the piccolo.
I asked if she and Betty something for us – she said she would see (or try &) (evidently depending on others.
Joan asked if the went to see the grandchildren – Grandmother likes to see them she said – then "Mother, my love to Bobs, Joan as the mother tell Uncle I love him = grandma Loves often the children — She spoke to me very sweetly to, and said
"Goodbye Mother"

After she went, something seemed to flash over us
Mrs Woods said something but her eyes glistened – it was like one touching with a finger – we all heard the tiniest faint distinctly there seemed to be something moving the trumpets on the floor.

Mrs Eccles – of London Club (known to Joan)

This is Mrs Eccles of London. Wife of Dr Eccles (to Joan) How you have changed?
(J.) I remember you when I was young. Your lovely home in London & Joan knew my daughter – Mrs Hibbins (wife of Dr Hibbins Toronto) he has passed away – Joan spoke of her good works. Mrs E. – I did a little in my way, we all have to have some little hobby – it is for the good of humanity. I am quite satisfied – Joan's mother told me you were coming be here – I would like Joan good season
Then turning to me – my great admirer and chief – I knew the young girl. I knew her dear Jean, Joan I used to call Jean but Joan's name is Joan – (Joan said something about the old people being together & she said all the dear grand old people who are here are far better than they were on earth – it is most wonderful – I wish I had known this before I had passed. I will wish you good afternoon.

Squire Jarvis (Cobourg – a friend & town's mother)

I came over before – Joan very glad. You would not remember my first name, Joan remember the doctor. That is my son, he passed over this fall – ~~Joan~~ my daughter Mrs Allen – all are well and comfortable. (to be remembered).
asked if he knew Wood Leonard. He said my son would remember (Wood Leonard was in the town) – Squire Jarvis said "He too bad" God speed
Returning to me – I had gone long before he thought & long with Politics – You had a brilliant father – Do you come to the waterloo? – I have seen you in London for some time, (I said I will be often now I think) Squire Jarvis said, I will call & see you. Haven't seen you for a long time

Father Kennedy

a note "Father Kennedy" - (Joan's grandfather)

"grandfather" - It is wonderful. To him my little Joan - (Joan stopped his hearing. He became deaf.) Then as well as you do

I am glad to see my Mrs. Knight - I am delighted to see this day when I could speak to you - (said. did you know my grandfather) Mrs Kennedy - I knew him in Toronto. I used to go to hear him - he could fill all the city of his voice - (something was said about seeing him once when a poor man) I said did you not - go to Rochester to see him - reply was, I must but they would not let me in. They were very rude I repeated the question. - Mrs Kennedy said. I said I went to see him we sent word but they would not let us in - a number of men went together. It was no easy task in those days, it would mean the taking off your shoes - They had some scheme

Something was said about the rebellion itself, "That was (or was not) but they wouldn't let us in" continuing with mind this day we were to come out". They were very mostly about it. There was a bit of a struggle.

Then speaking to Joan: Dear me child you were Joan spoke of climbing on his knee, - I knew you, - a bit of a tease, do you remember I used to pull my watch in your ear, and you would say tick, tick: - Joan spoke of the hour hand candies. Mrs K. said. "they were good for my cough"

Referring again to Grandfather. Mrs K. said "I like you he could talk, but he could not speak you. You have a wonderful delivery. Keep to your points. Your father (=Grandfather) would speak out fearlessly. Now as I told you before - you would have things they would hate him. (Joan said something about friends - I said something of my self) Mrs K. replied, he had so many followers

(Then to Joan. Mrs K. said) I shall tell Granny all about it my Joan.

George Kinnear

a word said well-meant

When we name George Kinnear — a friend of Mackenzie — I was a Judge, my daughter married Macdonald — of Montreal

I questioned as to whether it was a daughter of his Father or daughter

The answer came My daughter was a Miss Kinnear and married a Macdonald — I remember very clearly hearing of your grandfather and what he suffered — I went to Halifax, and died at Halifax - he told of going there because of appointment as a Judge — I asked if he were a clergyman - or related to the Rev who I thought had married his daughter - his wife - he replied he was a Judge - said I knew Mackenzie well — I came had an Opportunity of speaking to you, he wants you to know that all their good old people are still interested in you, and want you to be interested in them (It was words to this effect), also something about [his need of] for the Country more than ever being for this good old reliable stock — (that was the message in Loch Park today - one often hears of this old Statesman; speaking the stock from which I was sprung, and the [ideals in pioneering days] stock, that made our country what it is —)

I saw some little sparks, one like flickering lights — also another light - drew some of them as well — little star points and little films of light were seen by their wraith - form. a film of light going over behind him of us was seen his wraith - a little spark of light

Captain Sanderson

Soon a man said Sanderson and I was of making himself known explained to me the one who had fought in the Rebellion of 1837, on Yonge Street. I asked if he were the one who had escaped to Toronto and he said yes. He said it is wonderful to me that the front[illegible] the spot of being at the very beginning of the rebellion that the shot may have been meant for me, but he Sanderson became the target. It was Powell who had fired the shot - (I may have erred this) he said it was not a shot shot, it was intended to hit. may have been meant originally for me. but - I got it he said - I spoke of this having given his life for another. I then spoke to him of a watch his grandson had bought - it once belonged to him. He replied yes it had a long chain. he said it was a silver watch. I said it had some advertisements in it. Anderson said I put them in the back, it was big enough for one to write in the face (all of this accorded with both stories, the watch taken from him when he was killed. he was wearing it at the time) he said something about my being a fine boy - and said "God Almighty bless you" some about, what was to be done and admonished me, added that these were "the wishes of my old heart" — here was a man whose life had been given for my grandfather - the cause he was in - both for whom my life might not have been spared - & consequently I not here. sending his blessing & wishes. I felt the sense of a great - friendship being imposed

Jesse Kelchem

[illegible] came a voice Jesse Kelchem - followed by the words "for the love of men and mercy" I asked if he was from over York / rebellion times and he replied he was, said he later fort. mattsaund- -follow / he replied "we did" What a group you are (this was said by one of us in the number of veterans of '37 assembled, or Kelchem to us. I think it was Joe who said it. He said your knee which is the main with it, have you rheumatism? I explained the accidents from which I was suffering (especially in the right knee) he said "we need you" Not-to let the people know I had anything wrong & help still" about it - That it was well not to let reports of my weakness [illegible] the rounds - You know how it is', he said or words to that effect - Then he said "for becoming sober". When I spoke of the old timers Kelchem said "The smart men are all dead"

We then [illegible] were talking with Isaac Brock. and said that but for Brock we never would have had Canada" - He said I added to Brock "You were a noble man" You fell for the good cause to save the Canadian forces and Canada"

I made a reference to the rebels of '37 & asked what he thought of them Kelchem replied "look what they did" "they were fighters" Just like your old grandfather." (There was significance in one of some things said in the life of Kelchem which were in my mind - & which seemed to denote a rivalry of feeling on his part) - he could "lick all hell over — (not fault; or that's [illegible] —) he added "down for all no anyhow — He then said something about all the Kelchems I speak of There was then a conversation between Mrs Kelchem and Mrs, he was [illegible] how he thinks I did all right - Mrs said yes he did very well, - He said I was not declaring, Mrs replied so you are not declaring. It was quite interesting as disclosing [illegible] in hearing the one showing the following discussion etc. -

Mary

Then we heard the other voice. Looked into room, and the left corner Mr Brontë, — He then said Joan — I told her to call him Mary and asked how are you. He said "They all want to have something to say to my own Grandfather". They were interested in political matters that then said "Joan don't you think Will is doing pretty well" (Then referring to calling me Will — was most natural — Mary's conversation quite distinguishable). He spoke of my mother. Then went on to say "Don't let the patient know about your illness" & then gave me directions for a cure "Ask a pound of Epsom salts or Rochelle salts, a pound of it, put it in the bath, and sit up to the waist in the water. Stay in for half an hour, dont rinse off your body afterwards, wrap yourself up in a blanket around — It is on Thursday & next morning have a good rub dry — I asked who should rub me Will or Richard? he replied Richard. Get both a good rubbing and your legs. Then more gave directions on (Enfield at this or some other time he said to do this twice — on alternate nights. Friday & Sunday) I asked if Father was right in what he said — he said as Father had done very well — I asked about the diet, that replied not too much — You need strengthening, don't become emaciated (?) — don't look like an old man — Dr will Dr then said something about a certain amount of uric acid being needed in the system — something about Bright's disease & albuminuria — a little but in the breathing (?) — (Something rotten with all life :) So go ah it by degrees, don't reduce and go down rapidly. 80 & 180.

I asked about Richard, in view of something said over the letter — his answer came "Keep Richard"

I then spoke of Arthur — he says the boys have done splendidly, how glad they were to see you at the Station, and when I spoke of Arthur's they may said they had had a happy visit. I asked about Arthur's desire to return & Dr Mary said "Let him go"

he then referred to Mary & he said "poor girl she worries. She will not stop worrying - it always missing missing (I think this took was this him.) (He did not seem to want to trouble me over much again)

Then he said we are trying to help you. We don't want you to break down. Want to get you hardened up and settle as you always were. in hope on When the season comes & necessary to fight - I asked when the election likely to come - then said "the fight will come in the autumn" he added "we want to get Bennett out". I asked if they would help. he said "will sure be around."

The weather was bad out of doors, storming etc

Father - I said well father how are you. he answered "I tried to get along on foot; everyone seems to be limping or hopping around I will come again

Along with the sign - there was was looked like a red star seen by zoom - the shadow of a halo of light - getting brighter then fading out

Dec 13, 1933

Evening sitting 8.45 – 9.48

Joan. Mrs Wrench. Self.

The name Clarence appeared. – We did not recognize it. Presently Duncan (25 Nov) came on then appeared with a violin – and was holding it in front of Joan – a man's hand appears – holding an old violin an old time violin (Mrs W. said) – an elderly man. Then. Joan could not recognize it

Mrs Wrench then said. There is something in front of me

The name looked Calloway, or Galeth. or Gelert

Some one seemed to be touching the trumpet – rubbing it up & down. Joan & I both heard it – The name again Gallio it looked like – Mrs W. then saw a straight line going up and down from the trumpet – The name Wood came. He sounded like Senator Wood – and said Can you hear me? Something about Alleina – but was too indistinct – & faded away before we could get into conversation.

Then came

George Duncan – a little hard & understand – rather weak –

I asked how are you – Well now, very well now, was the reply. & He said "How are you Mrs Hallerow" Dorothy remembered her & he said "with great pleasure"

I said George tell us about the world you are in. He said, in it the counterpart of the old world only more beautiful – everything is beautiful here. – There is no machinery down require it. I asked about their people. He said I am with Father & Mother every day. & all of Father's people He spoke of "Mongery" – Mrs Hewitt) saying that name I sensed it was different than he had expected. He said. There was a difference, he had been taught: was teaching that ~~[illegible]~~ the Soul was going (direct) to God. He said to me You know that the bebte is not true in all things, that there are contradictions in it, he said it is like a dozen people telling (telling together) the same story, some well back out one thing and another another - more just the same as the other - I spoke about Sabin and ask if he remembers him, Yes! said I certainly do and asked if he slept as ever! He must put on a bold front and assert his rights. he is afraid of the old persecution. I spoke about Dr Cockran of St Catherines Yes he said, he was here today. I said but he is living Sat. He replied I saw him on earth (N. maybe W. been was commanding) He ended up by saying "glad to ~~see~~ see you, good night" - It was then he found it difficult to speak, as if suffering from weakness previously due to his taking on condition of his illness on reading cards.)

The name then came David - that seemed puzzling (may have been on of Grandfather's children)

Then came name Marion - We could not think of any one

Nancy - We heard some one shouting like on a bicycle

Then I said is that you Nancy - and we heard Nicola (Joan asked and she answered "Yes Marion" It was I think was playing, I wanted you to know She said tell Papa that (when?) ~~Then~~ to come to see you I will play the motion.

Joan asked to tell about the dream she had in regard of Dorothy of motor accident.

Nancy replied "It wasn't a dream, it was true" - I wanted (so) telling you to be careful about his car, I was afraid of an accident - that's why I was thinking you. I told her saying I would be with you (She did on a previous occasion, I think at Belrose) - We spoke of Bobo and Rob - She then began to whistle - then whistled more on the piccolo - so much so that Rob began to move about, he seems to like the sounds. We spoke about the motion we had seen and Nancy said that was an old man who played when grandpa was alive ~~and he never~~ don't you remember the sleigh ride back? You heard only two horses, where an old man played the violin. Grandma remembers that. She will come and see you. She went on to tell about when they loved in the country - Some sleighing party come to the house. An old man played the violin - he died (You recall the sleighing, the house etc. And was the violin playing) Stacey said, Nothing of being with us "I love to come"

And Sarah is here - She (one room a bliss ~ called her windy
I said I wished she would kiss me - just a moment or two after which felt like the trumpet touched me. I said also did that? Nancy replied I did. I did it. I did it. Mother
I did that — the trumpet touched my head, ~ was behind ~ that caused Nancy to say when we returned about it. "Mother
I did that."

In a few minutes next heard the voice Peter called out from the middle of the room, as if some one were calling for another, from the centre of the room. It was quite loud ~ distinct. ~ Mandalay

Mrs Dobson In a few minutes after Mrs Dobson came, he spoke to me ~ during the others said "And ladies how do you do?
I asked for Mrs Dobson ~ he said
Everything is very quiet, and going on finely"
I spoke to him about Billee, ~ (He said something about "Do the best-he can. I asked if what I wrote to him was all right. Mrs Dobson replied
It was wonderful. I asked had he seen me the others, he replies
You know what I say is a true way. I asked if he were ever a Roman Catholic, he replied he never was. he said (I think) my mother was a Catholic. I was always a Protestant - Speaking of the Roman Catholic Religion Mrs Dobson said "their - camouflage"
"If one follows the teachings of Christ, there is no camouflage

He is simple, There are far too many fine temples. The churches today are high and mighty.

I told him how he is fond of hearing his wife Shakespeare. He said I am sure you will like it

I spoke re my finances. He said you have done wonderfully see how you have followed along, you have [illegible] along splendidly. You have done well.

I spoke about my investments and he said they were as many good as I could get at the present time. We don't know what is going to happen to the nations. Conditions are not what they ought to be. We ought to get what we can out of trade get money, make money in broad & all means - a nation's money as good as another. He said he thought Government bonds were fully safe. Speaking of England he said he don't know what she is going to do, there is so much poverty. There is going to be a severe time with the people - the dole has become a nuisance but they will never be able to do without it, 2 or 3 million troubles, — There is trouble in Germany. ~~There is much suspicion in France~~, I am much surprised at France. I never dreamt that she would deal with Germany as she is (secretly)

I asked if conditions would get worse in the States, he thought some would like to see it, overthrow. (the Govt) — He spoke of over-production being the cause — Would be fairer distribution

He said the elections would be very keen

He then said I must ~~see~~ congratulate you health - & both of your spirits, keep well, be quite fit and ready for speeches and show vigorous energy & you will get there. Be on your feet stir up. - be as energetic as you were four years ago. Don't over tax yourself

I spoke of the boys of Alexandra house - he thought [illegible]. They were much loved. They are in the procession of some one's they were stoned [illegible] one of the persons servants, - he said they (many) were working in the town at the time for me to be careful what I say. Everything has been searched in the house he said, I wished if he could trace them. he said I am sorry to see if I can – they keys should be so good & those who have them, they have been taken. They should have been under lock and key – nobody (of your staff) should take anything. It was when you were having repairs – but will see what we can do. If they can be found I'll do something to let you know. They were lifted, they were mis- misplaced – they ought to be kept away. her doctor She concluded saying "Good ch – have good health. You are so able to speak and talk as you were a years when you were vigorous and strong. I'll help you.

Mrs McMurtie.

(Joan repeating)
A voice said Joan – it's mother. I am so glad to see you, and to see you looking (repeating herself) my little girl is quite a beautiful lady she is a great deal of company. I am so well, perfectly well perfectly satisfied with my transition. You are looking so well it's lovely here. Heaven home & glory one place – it's natural to go and to come. we have a home in our sphere – we are one great family the spirit aspect of being so happy. Joan spirit of some one who had come & Mrs McMurtie said 'I told her because I thought it was her, telling her so – all well (?)

Joan spirit of remembering woman. Her mother said 'I do rejoice at all that comes over' Joan so happy & glad may from anxiety and worry, there is lots of happiness here.

Joan asked if her mother the same what she was wearing. Mrs McL. replied "My old fashioned brooch" – She said come it was a foolish thing to tell you – but get the good out of it. It's a good stone (Joan said that's like you mother.) Speaking to Joan Mrs McMurtie said 'Joan Joan you were always good. You have given us a wonderful angel: "build as a home, good as gold" – Joan spoke of dear children Mrs McM. said "dear little children" Her little mother is so good

She loves her children – Told me how is Zach. Joan said he is worrying so. Here Mum said "the world is worrying" "Everybody is worrying" Jimmy & me Mum Mother said "We are going to give you a reception when you become parents" – There is the best.
time Zeb – – – something about. She sent her – I concluding Oh it's wonderful.

~~Betty~~. Good night – Love to Ford Love. ~~Write again~~

Bella How are you Joan. Glad to see you. Norman and I are together, we are all very happy and Mary is very well. We take it all you around Mrs. Joan. You are so kind Referring to us, Norman worries about you, She don't like to see you all crabbled up – (something was said of the Mother) something about wonderful times. – Turned about Mrs Cameron
She had found out recently, if they had seen her. Bella said
We are further advanced. for a couple of months or so she will be with her own people – he are in the 6th Sphere & the realm Joan's sister of Janie Johnson – & Robert of Norah (Mrs Cotter – – Bella said something about. We shall meet each other & and & and will know each other (?)

Good Night – Sweet rebound – (here the concluding words)

---

here Wendt asked if we saw anything & the door; – we could hear something – There is said Mrs Wendt a tall man with a white beard – – now he is fading out.

Joan & she saw something that looked like the sun's rays
there was something moving back & forth a feeble voice (?) – God bless.

Laurel Grove, December 14. 1933.
morning sitting, Thursday 11-12.
Miss Worrall - self.

Jarbin

A. Doré. Good morning. Jarbin.

(I began gloryfy to Mr Jarbin that I had meant to thank him for all he had done for me, & that I was grateful now.) He said

My dear Sir. If I had had the privilege of being longer, I would have done more for you. I would have been with you today, but for the struggle in life, which is so great that it takes us away before our home time as long as we would like it — ... what are we here for. If we are friends let us help each other let us cling to each other, and do what we can for each other there is far too much selfishness - too much contemptible influence, I said to Mr Wolfrid about Mr Jarbin, for him does so much, I told him I am going to help the boy that followed you so faithfully - look what you did for me (I told him it was for the country, till) he said you did it to help me - I said it was the best appointment that could be made, he laughed & I said, look at the monument you left in London in the Canadian Building; he replied, I don't know much about that - I asked for Mrs. Jarbin, he said Mrs. J. is very ~~ill~~ comfortable. I said to thank her, Lord, & give her my love. He said, we all had a great admiration for you. You can't tell, and I can't explain the feeling between us. There is much I could have done had I been spared, much more I would have done - There is no one who can ever say anything against your character - it was your honesty and integrity - You love every man's country - your own and others -

Fight for the justice, and develop the righteousness - Good morning

Lady Laurie

It seems to me I have done some good. I just had to come (I thanked Lady Laurie for coming etc.) Give Mary my fond love. I am sorry I cannot show her my sympathy – but Mary knows that she has my love, my love always – true love. Please tell her that I miss her very much. I feel closer to her when I talk to you – Mary knows all about this. I was afraid of it. Sir Wilfrid asked not to do anything without her approval or talking with me about it. She tried to entertain him

She then asked me how I was – I told her I felt much better She said I felt concerned – How you were tired. I want you to keep warm – it is so cold out. Keep warm and you will get over this shyness. A glass would help – (I told the situation) she said. I was upset. I asked if in the other world they suffered when one died. Lady Laurie said no physical suffering as we know our finite sense of pride and love for our friends and feel for them. I worry about Mary. I always pray for her It is not physical worry – a sense of love for each other. If one is hurt, it penetrates through the great circle or cycle of love and we feel because we cannot help you

I thanked Lady Laurie again for an hour

She said it was not all me. Sir Wilfrid – I talked and talked a lot about everything. We had everything arranged. If you are the first to die, or if I am the first to die, this – that is this sitting over that is what I was for wanted to do – (Something or something we differed with this but now all are agreeable

She mediums – conspiracy Sir(?) (does she understand French. I said we have conspiracy etc – d.l. then spoke in English – I am so happy to see you and to welcome you. I welcome you – (I was to say I was pleased it was to talk with Lady L – Lady L said 'You understand me?' I was prejudiced against this (i.e. mediumship) I did not like it, I like it now I like you like people (she laughs) – I was to say that it is a compliment to Lady L she said it is for I seldom like people – It is always a pleasure to see count for it.

When to me. Sir Wilfrid is determined to have you take good friends. Stand by and watch it - You will need it for next year.

Father

Well my son. (Good morning father - here we. You are welcome) Father I know I am always welcome where my son is - how are you today Your mother was quite worried. I told her not to be, that we must expect little aches and pains occasionally, as we get older, it is not as it was in our younger days. I asked father how he was, he said very happy - & asked about those ones there were they all happy, father said Some feel they came away too soon - or ones carry some that they left too much behind - he do not worry Your mother & I, but feel your children were able to look after themselves mother can't leave your side - (I said I hoped she was would I meant you to ask over this nervousness - Your brother is bothered about it. Nerves are the things you have to live on you understand

I spoke about the missing links - father said 'I think it is lost. he how lost it can be found - if anyone found it they wouldn't understand it. Ill find it - if it is to be. (I asked if it were found would he be the same)

I asked if father was sending me impressions - he replied yes that I was carrying on nicely - can't go much on. I can't say much sir Wilfrid, his thoughts are penetrating. He knows and understands that questions you are interested in. I replied yes, but I mean on life daily. Father replied - You understand we are here as human beings - as long as we are doing the laws of higher things. what is right and true, there can be nothing better (or words to this effect) to spiritual persons help & send impressions. Your brother. Uncle Harold & Aunt Jessie - they go to see the children. I understand human nature - he has to ask on the impulse of the moment. & long as we don't abuse these wonderful laws there is no sin

I spoke about the proposed memorial to Sir Wilfrid which I had suggested to Larry Wilson - about the inscription, and told of the changes in the book, referring to what I had written and said - that would be spent in honour that Sir Wilfrid loved, you understand. It came through Sir Allen to Sir Wilfrid - the honours were with the view of which he was seeking - It was his coincidence I joked about 'the Emerald' and her Rockefeller - if it was he follow what I'm version I had in; - he said it was not me. He said my dear Son you know how much these people think of you. Their influence follows you. It doesn't make any difference what happens he is your friend. There are things he might do, and things he would do that would be a detriment provided it was known - be careful therefore, don't explode anything between now & the elections. keep everything quiet. They are watching you like a cat a rat - regarding introductions ~~let them to go to Newport and get introductions in Newport to me.~~ but as influence is with you, he doesn't want to meet those who are asking for introductions — voice for a little meal or of refreshing about - after a moments rest - it continued - No no my Son, what I have to say, those people have impertinence to ask you for an introduction - the Rockefeller doesn't want the introduction - let them go to Newport and get the introductions in Newport shew your good judgments in these things Mrs Rockefeller's influence guides you - Thoughts are things and they travel - It is like one in law - people get into all kinds of difficulties; and sign on the right points sh: there a man comes he I could see a spark of good and of kindness, but things were confused with him. NO one can be natural with life is long in cross-currents. wrongdoing may be the impulse of the moment, Consider everything carefully

He answered by saying (he had just a little feeling in voice - I caught it, he said don't say or do too much for her, her father told me to tell you that - not to offer any services her own father told me. I said I had already offered sympathy for her father and friend in their hour of She is a clever wonderful person - I asked if I had managed all right in Newport. James replied You managed things all right. - he said her purposes are all good. but I don't want you mixed up with these Americans. There has been too much rubbing one another's backs across the line

At the last elections they tried to make capital (or words to that effect) we made to the good & every nation — but you are matched - night and day

I spoke upon about the missing letter - Father said that letter was mislaid. It will turn up by and by if people are honest. Thank you much kindly.

Bella Well dear, I am so happy. It is so good to see you again I was glad to see Joan look right - my dear friend - You are feeling better. feeling refreshed. the Indian gave you a treatment be strong and well. You can't afford to be limping about I am so glad to see you brother — will must have wreath when the fete - It is too bad we have to go when the are needed. (It seemed to me Bella was indirectly here to. might not look long. — She said something about home from brother & mother & will come again, dear.

Sir Henry Thornton

Well well, I am so happy to see you. I did so appreciate your kind expressions of your sympathy. I miss Jim — all is so new — I did it very much. (I want to send to that kind world) — We are free from suffering and anguish. — He spoke of his mother, he said "Your brother is wonderful. He said I feel sorry to see the condition of the country. The grand old Grand Trunk was long years ahead of any other road. Do you remember the Credit Valley? The Grand Trunk has been in operation now 66 or 67 years. I hate to see it drop down — I asked what was to be done about the two roads. Sir Henry said to keep them apart is almost impossible - the overhead expenses impossible. the automobile trucks & have crushed the life out of the railroads Everything has to be done for the one man - the trains are now empty. the Government is concerned It was still responsible for the 4 per cent in one — of watched out of a job. — You look in on the fun. I was much pride you should have taken for that purpose (I read Jim's from the book) Sir Henry replied "You were the pioneer behind the wheel!

How the C.P.R came to get up the hills close to Kenora - extended main road - It will go into the C.P.R. - The C.P.R. gets the trade - carry on the two lines - joint control - (C.P.R (— with them)

I spoke of Sir Arthur Currie. Thornton said Poor Currie. Poor soul, he feels why did I have to go! He left a good clean record

Then to me now you want to back out - I called him an enemy, he said keep the sea. — We can't leave this world and forget our friends' kindnesses I thank you for many cheering expressions to me, they were much appreciated. You were a very good friend

Isn't cancer a terrible thing? I said it came so quickly. Sir Henry said. It certainly did

I see I'll be pretty lonely over there in a way. He said you can't pick up a ~~friend~~, and write to a friend. You can't say, I want you to do this, or I want to help you to do that. That is where death is the sting (the sting of death) God bless you and spend you happy and take care. Don't say too much about the border land state to the (Councils) Good-by and God bless you

After dinner on his home Sir Wilfrid said I am happy to see you again here on Wolfe opportunities. Hope you are feeling comfortable this morning Lady Laurier was quite upset last week - because of your numerous parties and others - they come with the years to us all (or something like that) as it was Caibo. I am well pleased, I hope will see Mr Caibo, Thinks on living gradually to help you, he will prepared for Spring - ~~Elections~~ At the Nat. Conservative election the people want to be heard out. Don't go too fast as the States "conference voice" - working for the good of our country see that our men have work in the factories - I spoke about the C.P.R Sir Wilfrid said they will give trouble - You will speak to - Must get to know the matter explained and understood. There are so many ignorant people - they get a word of one point. The French people should get the reason I spoke so that they could understand. They are interested in you and in your learning French - they to do a little every day - the proper French.

talk only with those who speak the right French. If you talk with the French you will have no opposition from them.

I spoke of Mrs Gladstone – See he. said he was kind to me

I spoke next of Lord Grey – See he. said – I have called to him several times for some interval now he has gone. He said he was not. interested longer in politics, he was "practically closed up" and was going to do his own other things about

I spoke of our organisation (Lord Aspley!) – See he. said, he is much interested in the con-dition of England. He feels there is a lot of strife there, that they will have to look up the dole business – there is danger of our opposing if they take it away – the people have no money wherewith to buy what they should have –

Canada will come forward. I would not advocate bringing out more persons?! to add to the Canadian strife – to do Canadian work let our Canadian boys do our work – no emigrants

Something was said about money to the provinces. The need of it both here & there as in England – (Cf. Hobson)

Sir Wilfrid thought Lloyd George would enquire in the Spring – Of Brent Shell & coal & foundries – no coal being built – depression in timber Referring to Speller – Sir Wilfrid said – We will help you in your Library and particularly with French – languages carry a wonderful influence – You need to learn the sounds – the vocal sounds you don't get very well – consonants – verbs – adverbs, perfect sounds – pleased to help you – no politics – Good French (Sir Wilfrid's style of speech) here waits before you – speak when there is opportunity – (only in the House — Something about Lady Laurier talked about it – Something about a Confederation for a Frenchman — honesty & integrity is wonderful – Sir Wilfrid said I am sorry I didn't speak more I spoke to Sir W. about the Laurier Club of which I spoke Lady Wilson Sir W said 'I must be moved – If he comes to Ottawa entertain him. Say You wanted to be pleased to have him come & talk it over – but this it will help the City'

Tell Mary (Mrs Bedford) that I saw much Lady Laurier in my last week for a long & happy visit & happy discussion – Say to her will not be very sorry there are two vacancies in the House (Mrs Bedford & Mrs Woody. Also was expected back at that time) —

– Tell Jan she often speaks. – It is a pleasure to see Jan in your home to Mrs W. & especially your coming & hope you will come again & Mrs W said Sorry about it being on an honour to talk to him, that he was so distinguished etc. Sir Wolfrid replied - I am just a simple man - a simple man

Mary

A voice came - Hello Will - ~~I want to talk to you~~ I said May he then went on to say I want you to try the bath, I want you to try it twice. Sunday and Sunday - Sit up until he makes to your waist rub your limbs, take a towel and rub over the shoulders and over the body - It will take the acidity out of the system - like a purge to the skin. Stay in just a time (shortest he said 1/2 hr)

Speaking about his boys - Mary said, don't overdo it, don't overdo your responsibilities - Your nature. Your mother appreciates everything - tries to do - but he always needs telling to go to bed - agreed that brothers were hopeless. he said his boy needs a mother - take my advice. do you it splendid. they must do well if they are not. ones cousin with money If you can't trust uncle is rather than feel there is an uncle - who is a financier, why should they work it. (You know?

As I myself he said - In the morning before your workfor use physical culture - Stretch your arms, back out - don't forget the cold baths ( ) had not could them before) wrap up in a towel - something about nervous - not to be nervous.

— use — sense —

I spoke about crystal gazing and asked may if he advised my trying it. he said crystal gazing takes from the will power there is nothing to appeal will power — it develops as you see it work - keep to this one point - individuality that is the thing to work for. Goodbye and God bless you.

Laurel House
Thursday afternoon
December 14, 3.30 hrs.
Present: Mrs Arnold. Joan. Self.

Shortly after we were seated Mrs Arnold saw a lady with a cowl - She was tall and slender

Then she saw a small light - near ground - Some one who died from an operation in the hospital, the figure came towards you. She is a woman She is here (said Mrs Arnold) She is moving in front of me I should think it was cancer - She is tall & slender - It is cancer, or appearance of an operation

Next she saw which appeared to be like the sun shining through a cloud. - bright & silver - to the right

Then came a lot - & the word Hello. and an Indian with headband

Black Hawk (Indian)

Spoke of himself as Indian. I come to congratulate you. (Speaking to me) I gave you treatment lying down (I had been resting after lunch & had felt pain cured) so soon I Great Spirit (She had been suffering much pain at back of her neck) I do good when I am sleep Chief - I help you last night - I do come. (Mrs Arnold said) He said "No thanks" All do work"

Squaw (This was addressed to Joan) You help (?) by Chief (Godfrey) be careful up to next spring, be no good at cold weather. (Mrs Crossley) Lady white Lot, Chief Hallerton - be not feel much good - no like cold - you tell him I no want to make you when I take of lot tent. (This conversation was all about Godfrey who had not been feeling well It made clear Black Hawk knows his condition, also circumstances - he must not [illegible] to handle it. —

I was asked about him - his name it, he said Black Hawk - Come from the Sioux. - he referred to (spirit of) Godfrey. I like this Chief all time. he good Chief. big Chief Hallerton. I no go fighting - go shooting - like money lot much - he no take it me - I don't like money - he feel bad in body - he not old, a good thing, (Query?) to think you are old & young - take with everything. I do now — You do in lot matter - Sally he don't know much about Sally. (This might have been in [illegible] of me)

The spoke about deceased - he said deceased a great man - he soldier - like no soldier. he died - in the Thames

Yes white not under water — - —

Miss Ada Meredith

A voice - Hello Joan. This is Ada Meredith (Joan asked if she had been here a few months before - She died from Pneumonia for cancer) She replied) Yes. I was here, - asked how she was. reply - very well we are all together. There is such a lot of us - asked about Bella (Joan's sister who I don't know which) She said of Bella - we talk about Joan so much - I see so much better. We all are much better - It is nice of him to have us here - There are so many London people here - outside this it. - Annellyse is so happy. Poor mother is very ill - if Joan had had a wife :)!— Her foot is till worse & in wheel chair - sad days for her

Referred to herself (She had suffered a lot - Joan says) very well now. when one get together out of this tiresome world — so many people are selfish - one like to have friends and make friends. The way things are going. Joan wanted about some of them were crazy - Something about old lady sat in my lap (?) — Mary Ann - yes indeed I did — Joan's mother told me of Joan being here. I see as well as I can be or ever will be —

There is an old saying "birds of a feather flock together"

Where is the boy? In the North? — Joan's wife of his home is Philadelphia. 2 grand children - Miss Meredith replied, Joan don't tell me, how time flies!

Asked about the world the wonder, She said you don't know how marvellous it is, we don't have to plough through snow (That was our condition out of doors at the time of this conversation) but know the work of the Spirit - rest of the world - we help each other with on earth - here there are beautiful flowers, music & friends & children, no frost or cold or heat -

Joan asked how is Aunt Georgie? reply - Not nice looking as ever I don't understand this — ? what has become of the old melodeon? - the little one at home? I'll hunt around until I find it.

Mary Ann Kennedy (Joan's aunt - Sister of her father)

Mrs Kennedy said there is some black thing moving about, with a white back ground. (Joan's dog) Some one is thinking of you - thought breathed to Nell - the name came Watson. I asked if that Senator Watson - or had how he was

Senator Watson

I am getting on marvellously, I'm wondering what is going to happen next - how are you (Mother of Rheumatism - said he knew about that was like, he replied. I certainly did. - I hope you will be able to come up and give us a nice talk - I asked where - he said O Quebec later on - on account of the people - to look in - friends - get them back on to your side - there has to be lots of (or loud) talking to get people to understand - I think you know the west - the talks have been long between - give them another reminder. I am much disappointed in Bennett. I thought he would show his colours being Irish - he hasn't done anything - there has been lack of judgement in spending money - has thrown it away - does too much himself

I asked if he were going to get married - the Senator replied, he is waiting to see the results of the elections - he is pulled out (?) there he is all (?) he has followers to think.

What this country needs is not a waste of money, but of brains. You have done more in one year or 16 months than he did in his term - he has done some - will do more keep on digging. Throw on coke and be humble - heads up & swinging hands keep going, make them think, don't let them forget — they owe a little thanks on you — comes to get them next — Goodbye.

(I did not in the conversation - I did not know at time the Senator spoke that Mrs Watson had passed away in July last: word came from Premier Watson to this effect after.)

Rev Wm Beeson.

Mrs Kennedy then said something like a bunch of cherries — Cherry Pie (Joan's aunt - Sarah)

A voice then came Joan - have you forgotten the Cherry Pie? It is Uncle Willie Beeson - this is all news to me - don't you remember Cherry Aunt — used to bake? — — Thank you. I must go.

7. 6 Mallison

Well Joan – Tallie Mallison – I wanted to come for a little while I like to come and see you – (I said Mrs Mallison do you remember the direction you gave me, over the hills – as to Joan –) he replied with emphasis and you did — then called. Hands my boy – when told he was very ill. Mrs Mallison said I want him to be happy as well – when we all out of business we are home happy – reading economically. try & help him in any way – to do little things helps to progress – It is difficult now, everyone is disturbed as my – you understand – a very sad look out there – looking so terribly black – England is disturbing – some news – have did you know I came? (I spoke about his speaking with a very strong accent! You know from the other voice –) It is influence of your people – so many Scotch about, makes me remark – they are very proud of it — nothing pleases me better than to see you person – who on the earth ?! all have to leave this places, and take our abode somewhere else, God bless her —

I don't — see her (him) occasionally called about-

give my good wishes to Godfrey
I hope he will pardon me for my temper be more healthy and kinder to his boy than I was to ~~him~~ him – sleepy one!

Revd J. F. Dickie

It was quite difficult to make out Mrs Dickie's voice
Mrs seemed to be the same Person - finally when I made out Mr Dickie's name
I asked if he had baptized me. She replied I baptized you and when I baptized you in the faith of God, to give you a career - and a wonderful life — I don't know --- that church - it was in Ross
Jean mother told me (& Cons) You were here — I spoke of having seen Mrs Dickie - he said Mrs Dickie is a rabbi sort - I spoke of this having come to me - he said She knows it — later he said didn't she know about this (moved). It is much better than I thought - [illegible] change to a great extent — We have been brought up in ignorance - teaching of another man's mind — Christ are symbols - long ago — until we believe love and teach the beliefs of this time - our conscience - No consequence of ignorance our forefathers taught hell - Now God will save on earth teach after truth and honesty. and care for humanity

Then came the name Lonnie

Frederick Meyers

(quite clearly the voice said)

Well. Well. Frederick Meyers — ~~[illegible]~~ he introduced himself to me. I thanked him for coming, he then spoke to me calling me Mrs Pallison, but she is Mrs Pallison. Meyers said I have just spoken to her, how do you do Mrs Pallison. I remember Godfrey

This is most extraordinary. I have been wondering about Godfrey I said to Meyers, I was so anxious to meet him, he was the first to develop this mediumship (I couldn't think of the name) his Meyers said I want to tell you I was not the first. You must remember there have been Swedenborg from the beginning of time, only superstition has kept down ~~I became interested through~~ the Fox sisters, they were the first to interest me, they aroused my curiosity, and in Salem Mass. where there were so many persecutions of the witches — I was anxious to get the real meaning of this ~~and — first experience~~ first experience

I asked about ~~my~~ some ~~of~~ others were they working together, he said he did, they did not care so much about communication they are working to try to get the western world to come to the senses to develop the 6th and 7th sense, knowledge — respect and esteem necessary to the dead with a proper behaviour seeking to bring people to a proper understanding — ~~which~~ they are living in a state of grossness and greed. We must get people out of it. Nothing but a war will end it — ~~a great war may (as it needed) to regenerate the~~ ~~be rehabilitated~~ — but will have to have another war to bring people to their senses, the last war was never finished. It was simply lay down your arms and we will follow — a great war is needed to regenerate the world. I said ~~surely we don't want war~~ when will it come. Meyers replied they are only waiting for a group of young men to develop. I said will be a long war — he replied it will be a very cruel war — all the world will be in it, the world is on the verge. I said would it be soon. It said it might come very soon — he was quite positive it would come

Then he said, tell me how Godfrey is. (Dora said very well) — asked about aunt Sarah. Meyers said he saw her. I asked how is the youngest. Dora told how sick was) Meyers said Godfrey does forget me — sometimes about ~~[illegible]~~ he said she was very beautiful ~~[illegible]~~ Oh! then said God bless you.

I said to Mrs Meyers Dora anxious whether she help me in these matters (of Agriculture), He said to my great delight. I must give you impressions, and help you meet the Canadian people and the problems you are dealing with. You are on the brink (whether he meant of a bankruptcy or at the edge of a precipice so far as Canada is concerned I don't know I think the latter) You and health. I will help you to understand the people. You have the brains, I will help you in dealing with the people, you know how to reach the people. Health is what you want Laurel House, Atlanta. Dec 14, 1933.

8.45–9.45 a.m. 11.18–11.30

Mrs Charles Duncan

Present: Mrs Wendt. Room 245.

Mrs a model age I see the name - almost immediately "Jessie" I said - Jessie Duncan - that being the only person I knew of that name the voice said at once. I thought I would come and see - (I asked if it were Charlie's wife & she said yes) I asked if Mrs Kennedy were there - she said yes "we are all together" - how are you "we are all well" I asked if Charlie was there. She said he is over here but is not - with us just now She went on to say "we are very happy now"

I told her to give my love to Mrs K.

I asked if she remembered the visit I had - and where it was She replied "out on the Pacific" - the visit was a short one, but very pleasant. She said I am so glad to see old friends again. I hope you both well - (I spoke of having had a little trouble but much better now) - I asked for her address - She said to

It seems to me this was Mrs K's method of telling me how she was communicating & hence of which I had said about the church at Simon Miner - it was at that time she went on to the Pacific & met her at Corpus Christi Miss. — Mrs Duncan was another very dear - & delicate. She was a quiet woman. & Charlie married her rather unexpectedly - rather a surprise to the family She had slight means - they lived very simply. Her coming was utterly significant after the talk & Grace in our earlier meeting.

Lambert

Mrs K said immediately after there is something that looks like Lamb - I can't see it all - it is "Lambert" - I asked was he of Atlanta he said yes. here I am. I asked if he loved & God & Christ & he said yes. then he said "they are all dropping off" I never thought to see you here. I never thought there was a thing like this. It is wonderful (I said it is almost as wonderful as flying - referring to his sons' daughter) Her Lambert laughed quite merrily and then said "We had you good night"

(Mr Lambert was a quiet Scotsman - came out from England - an engineer & chemist. dressed well blue jacket & sack - red flesh coloured face - rather stilted and formal in manner - his wife & son also live in Atlanta at present)

Stranger - like an Indian

A voice then sounded quite strong saying something like Good Bless poor Lee - it probably was for "how do you do" but we could not make it out, and soon it stopped talking and vanished

Dr Mack (of St Catherines)

A voice said - are you a son of John King? I replied yes. the voice then said I am Dr. Mack of St Catharines, the one who had the Sanitarium at St Catherines. (I then said something about his having come to see at Detroit, he said no, and said must be thinking of the Stranger who had been with - he said no, I knew his father. (after thinking it over it was the Stranger's father who stayed at Dr Mack's until he called with me of this at the Catharines)

Dr Mack then said I knew your father, and I said where. we could not get the name very well: said Kitchener, he said no, - some word more difficult to make out - then came "Woodside" I said that was the name of our place in Berlin - he said it was outside of Berlin (which was then really a suburb but in town now) he repeated outside of Berlin, no as to locate it I suppose. then referring to father said "He was a lawyer" I had a Sanitarium in St. Catharines. Soon asked if it was the Welland - he replied was no it was across from the Welland - (Jones Sons??) he, were very good friends - he referred to one or two others, he spoke of what sounded like (Alderman Rodd) - I asked if he saw father. he said he were talking about him this evening. Jones reminds me of your father - Jones brother is a fine man - something about glad to meet .... I then introduced Soon - was worried - he addressed them by name -- then something you see I can -- (here it was he spoke of not knowing the Stranger, and of knowing the Stranger's father. who stayed at the Standard)

I asked whether he saw the resemblance in me to father

he replied "in your manners" - I said I and what of those manners did father

"in your speech response" — (Yes it is true of father)

"You are not at all unlike in features" — I said something about speech that he found it difficult to speak - he replied not difficult to speak, but difficult to be heard. It is strange — It is difficult to talk over.

I said to Cecil father I was pleased to know I was like him
Mr Meade said "he smiles"
He meant on to say he was a good man - I said he was a ~~good~~ gentle
- man" Mr Meade said "his son is like him"

His voice was very clear - a well refined million of Breeding - Graceful working

Black Hawk

A voice - Hon. He
How do squaw
Good to see you - I come visit you - Good for you to lie down as you did today (I said I felt hello ! was sure he had been listening us-) he replied I come visit you when you lie down
Then a ~~was to~~ soon:
I help her - till you well - Squaw I help him would said what well you do for me.
He replied You Johnson --
~~John~~ Joe then spoke to you about Godfrey - he rest in doors chief.
Joe said she told him what he (Black Hawk) had said - and Black Hawk replies - Chief. he laugh - Joe spoke of the "big chief"
Black Hawk replied - He said he thought I was crazy
Joe said no - not chief
Black Hawk replied - I don't mean bad - when I speak of big chief ~~that~~ referring to Godfrey - he worry - he think too much
"He is unable to go and see his good people in the bush" - that makes him worry, that is what I mean by big chief - Joe said he don't think you crazy - he replied I come - I want to do good.
he then said ^ Good ~~night~~ Black Hawk. - He said "good night" him do

him would then said she saw one moving - some one for him Vacation
Joe said she saw her moving before her - ~~a~~ light in front.
Then. him would then said. I see this name "Lehman"
~~Lehman~~ - Joe asked if it was Jamie Lehman ^ a friend then ~~of~~ Bellis - this version ~~for~~ form ~~of~~ usual folded out (there is little doubt that it called it was. she had spoken of her before - the evening before

Mr Peters – London Out

Voice – Mr Peters – (a voice appears to come out-of-space) found asked from London – reply 2nd Toronto – Where are you?

very well – this is a strange place to find you – Glad to see you –

You know I like to understand these things. It knocks the bottom (to about) out of these things (My recollection is we told Joan she would not remember this, though we would like) Joan asked if he knew Mr Moore. He replied Mr Moore is something about ... planet – we know many Arabic scriptures – See it mentioned in Book of Enoch – Joan asked if he believed in the effect of the planets he replied indeed he did that apart from the planets none of us could live. He then told Joan it was her father who had sent him that her father was there. Joan gave a call to her father, he came Mr Peters said "I will tell him what you said" "He went on to say, Joan knows one in Toronto". Do you remember Mr Campbell, London he laughed really when he was asked Joan said she did, and the ferryman?" I said he was a good supporter. Mr Peters replied indeed he was. The Good Brethren Spirit Light, we must go to spend about a few people they were fair minded people, caused their influence to be felt in the community much more than the people of today. The people of those days were, he said fairer than they are today. A Shoulder like Strength, more perseverance, wit and right, of same mind. You couldn't buy people of those days for £10! today you can buy them for £1. He ended up by saying I am glad to have seen you God bless you all, and we meet you till we meet again. Good night.

John Meredith of London.

Well well, here you are, (Yes) This is Meredith I am identified here as the father of Sir Frederick Allen, I am a very extraordinary place to find you. Your father told me you were here. He wants you to remember us old fellow – Joan said his daughter Ada had been here today. Mr Meredith replied – I am so glad she came, the little local details tell me. Joan said something about all come. Meredith replied, Mean change, all change, nothing lost: We all go on a journey of discovery – What a lovely condition we find here. I said here it is all as above it. It is a continuation of this earth (or world) as I suppose many others have told you, we instead of all more happy.

the reply was. some people are happy anywhere. he asked about what they did the reply was their occupation & progressing – all are placed in the spheres which they are fitted for. Jones mother has a beautiful wonderful place. – I said (about) Jones mother? – the reply was both mothers for them said I never knew till I came over here that a woman who dies in childbirth goes into the 7th sphere. and children who are born dead. I mean still born go into the celestial sphere. but those who are drowned they go into higher spheres. I was told that are cut off by a (sudden or unexpected) operation go into the higher spheres. they have been prevented from pursuing their natural lives – but it is a case of suicide it is different – that is planetary (it was here Abraham Lincoln took place he planet and he murdered said if it were not for the planets we couldn't live – later he said "I was drowned" I came into the higher sphere. it was an accident – he then went on to tell how he was struck by the deck – Joan asked if it were the boiler, he said no, it was the deck – (it was the Thames Valley in the Thames River, he said about 1878 some 200 were drowned in the disaster. – murdered among the number) – not condemned. the certainly is a wonderful (?) or wonderful place over here – the then said I am glad to see you, and your dear mother – she is a fine looking woman as ever. Joan mean I think our Canadian ladies are beautiful. I said and Joan beautiful? he replied "she is nice" – goodbye.

I told him I thought dreamy. – he said he must be in a high sphere the name Orchid appeared – and we could think of no one of that name

then we began to hear the piccolo

Nancy – for quite a time we heard some one blowing on a piccolo it was a very sort of music – Joan asked if it was Nancy, & this called out Oh. she touched our right on the left of my head. "She touched on my head across her hand." Joan. music was played, more whistling – Joan said to him here we need a kiss. said I wished some one would kiss me – then we heard kisses – & more whistling – then the voice said "Mother – little papa I send my love. I have lost a violin – I said to Nancy I wished she would come and see us. she said I am here, and I will be with you today Sunday – I said (your) mother kiss as many times as your birthdays (nothing had been said of my birthday on Sunday) – On my mothers, long birthday I love her as many times as her birthday. I said Something about 60 or 80. Nancy said no 40 kisses. that is enough something about. NO NO — To the mother I must never leave you. I am happy to be here. Then, mother dear, goodbye. love to Poppa

a crucial or the table something (like the warmth of the breakfast.) in me that a materialistic touched me on the right chord how the room it made me think it was so distant

a voice

My dear Son, and here is dear Joan, so many are here. (a room, to me. Bella sends her love to you. Mrs Wiseli- how are you? - In answer to question mother says she is feeling well. Doris has come down here. (a reference to the table). I told something to mother about that her wedding anniversary being near this week - She replied "we celebrated it on Tuesday. It is over 60 years (she figured it a bit as it 60 then said over 60. — Then is from that they were married on December 12, 1872.)

I said her duties had been taken on - mother replied "I used to visit all the friends - then something about 'all you'. Then to Joan I come to you as I always did. We all love you so. You have been so good to my dear son. (Joan spoke of my goodness to her.)

I said to mother - mother when is my birthday? mother replied on Sabbath day, but I will be here on Saturday too. when the soldiers come. and your father and grandfather, that will be a nice reception. (nothing had been said of my birthday (on Sunday Dec 17) and of being given the legion of honour badly (left unfinished) on Saturday Dec 16 & the officers of the Canadian branch of the B.E. legion

I spoke then of Miss Nelles = Lady Scribes - mother did not catch Lady Scribes name, I said she was a nephew - mother replied I don't know her. I said you remember Lady Scribes who came to see you. mother replied Yes. I thought you said a nephew. I decided (mind who was wrong) he had taken more tough. About her I said Sir Fabius has married She said would take the words of this - it carries - Take good advice - be quiet about it - Good nights - (to each in turn) Good nights - (I added God bless you mother darling)

display of war veterans

after this talk in about another hour of saturday and the soldiers flag. turn we must said. I see something like a flag in front of me just then I called out — who touched me with the trumpet — something like a materialization (soft like this, as if made of tiny super cord) it felt like the end of the trumpet, or a flag staff — touched me on the cheek (right) near the neck — it was quite strong, felt. ? I called out about it — who touched me with the trumpet. — there was silence a minute or two, then there was as if marching music drums drums rub rub rub and rub rub
then the sound of shuffling — am am am am am am am the soldiers marching — It was a dream and like dead. — (I was thinking of the rebellion of 37. — had asked if the flag could be the rebel flag of 37 — finally soon said it is the soldiers marching, the veterans they have come to greet you — when she said this, there was more shuffling shuffling — — am am soon said — it is some of this music from the war
some of the years —
It seemed that she was right and the feeling it produced was strongly indeed — the shuffling became very clear then voices began to sing.
It is a long long way from tipperary
— — — —

Field Marshal Sir Henry Wilson

A voice clear and distinct. Is that you Mr King?

(Then it) Henry Wilson of London

I said general Wilson - the telephone - then Sir I am glad Mrs Wilson. How happy I am to know you & Mrs Wilson will on account of the many more innocent lads died at their — allied

They killed me because for --

I am grateful to Canada for what she did

It came as a surprise that they should hurt me off at my own door — It was for what I said in Ireland (I believe of it being strongly offer warning and the great war.

Sir Henry Wilson said. Then that another war? I said do you really think so, he added I don't see how we can escape it such conditions as they are — there are too many people in the world, as you and I know that as long as there are men & fight they will fight. It is not a question of (unreadable?) This a question of "do and dare"

The Poles have got a strong hand — France I can't understand France, to think they should have to do with the Germans It is a shame they should turn after what has been done for them by Germany — what I think is wrong is the way Mr Lloyd George has dealt with Russia, to count them in open the door to them, just after we had knocked them out — there is a low type of man needed to deal with them — they are a low type. I do think the United States has made a great mistake — it is "a one man" government running this country & the devil — will have trouble — (Something to effect that) should be trouble there and Roosevelt was doing much to bring it on (I believe) trouble

You keep out of it. Canada is not here working — he can be proud of our brothers & sisters here. We must protect our own. You understand — Poles. English Speaking

(Portugal and Spain) Russia Germany Scandinavia must be made to stand on their own soles — Their right in Your Germs hand (something about the expression at. Must keep away from the Poles.

I thought a lot of you. The we did not smile.

as in Canada. It is wonderful what the men of your country did for a land that did not belong to them & All the French people turned on them that is human nature — God help us all (Good luck to you) next year. You must be in the harness - It is a great advantage to keep in touch with the people, steer them up, make them up - You know the English people become so slothful — My love will all be with you

(His voice was very English in places - it was a great decision when only 4 years - as of a man of action)

The hours then came

Joseph --- He or We. - one could think of no one (brother Joseph Hume Manchester Scandinavian son)

Lord Shaughnessy

Then came the noise O'Shaughnessy after an exchange of greetings he said what about the blooming railroad? what is going to happen to the people? I was calling it Mowbray (= Mountain) Lodge as was (or we were) saying the automobiles have had things "on the run" both in out of business, what the radio - it has had the effect upon the newspapers and press

I asked what about the condition of the world, Lord Shaughnessy said God help us, where there is no money how can they meet the demands, there will be war (the Reserves) the rooms it is cleared up the bills. It will be cleared up — I hope about a thousand he said there won't be trouble here, unless — to enter in If England goes in we will have to come to the rescue — There will be trouble in Europe — England is in a bad state of mind.
France is itching for trouble. Germany has been making munitions for a long time. I asked if Germany were selling our metal. L. Shaughnessy said. Germany has not been selling metal from us. We made a mistake in selling a ship anything to Russia - as long as we get the money we should sell what we can. Money is money, it was a mistake. They would be able to buy our iron, our rails, our cars. Now Germany is making munitions, France is — Japan I am afraid Japan and Russia — Germany will come together

If that should be the case it would be a terrible war

(Joan: Mrs Woodd asked which was moving about. They felt something. - She then said "Ho the beef" - It was then that Mrs Woodd felt - was the creature - he seemed to like it he was on he went there at different times - attracted no doubt - by the voices) he went on in reference to that. He - - - is on walking all second" - Joan said he is an Irish servis - Lord S. said he is calling to an Irishman

Mrs Woodd asked if L.S. - if he had not talked to his wife ab her season at Mrs Wm Adelis, Lord S. said yes, and my daughter. I said I had sent them a card, a day or two ago L. S. said and God bless you - then he added some comments himself then turned on to say it worries me to see how my son behaved, my son has married an ~~great deal~~ quite a wife - You know - he added - but it has made a much better man of him

Then he said Vaucresi is trying to get you to learn French to see the French people. Talk to them as you do about - to see them, the French people think a lot of you - it must help you to come with them - get close to them - be a diplomat - that is how I won them

I spoke about his regard for me a kindness for me - L.S. there is no one I wd rather see (in charge of affairs) - I said you had faith in me - Lord S. said "Why I had more faith in you than you could ever think - I am greatly disappointed in Kemmel. I had thought he would be content of money. He has insisted it, therefore it about, I am surprised - Really, poor old Bealby" - his head is in a whirl

I asked about the railways. They will have to amalgamate - help the two lines - England remind the Grand Trunk See fault the Pole on that system. She demanded too much - the Grand knew how much to do

(Joan spoke of orders sent of taking the dock off in England - that they were fearing what might happen when this was done, and much would happen - they will have to have some consideration of it)

"The great thing for you to do is to hold your people

The thing I hate about war is that you create bitterness which rich or poor, in position or in position. You treat them all alike

You make no distinction. It is not money that makes the man money makes the wheels go round, it is principles that makes the man. Money makes the mayor go — God bless you.

Lord Chief to voice

Good ~~evening~~ evening her King and Good ladies what is the best news - something decent must see you until comes it get well. with bells

Then to Joan

Ill fever you rich — on the back of the neck — if it worse — on neck - then don't take medicine - get a bag of salt. warm it in a flannel bag - and flannel (Joan said he wore red flannel since childhood. he as said there is something in the red dye that helps) - on any flannel - heat it well - lie on it when you go to bed (lie) ~~heat~~ on the salt - as you can bear it - there is a virtue virtue in salt - a great virtue - be replaced in the flannel bag the dye in the flannels heals good. (Joan was questioning = the Dr can heal empholocally. Thom said. try it that way - an electric pad is no good, there is no virtue in electricity. Do as I tell you with salt - try it for three nights. - ~~but~~ It is best that helps the nerves there are certain properties of value in the salt treatment — heat-~~-- per cent~~
iodine, the rock from the earth

God bless you (spheres) all but me must again

Something was said — Joan and her King

Power is weak
"Power is dynamite"
"Thank you all"

1933
December 14. Lawson House
2nd sitting at 11 o'clock.
Joan + self & Elsie waited

We talked an hour after ended the sitting. + Eric before hers started Elsie looked if she would go in again to see if she could get Joan's father and my grandfather - almost the minute we sat down

Mrs Sharp - a voice said "How do ye do" - it was Mrs Sharp - She then said I want to extend to you my thanks for all your kindness to my little medium, and for giving us this chance to come and talk to you - Mrs Hallerson and the medium - thanks to you - Mrs Hallerson I want to thank you for all the friendly atmosphere you have surrounded (words & was off) the mediumship being, what you have done for him - to you as both two of the creation - (in a previous sitting he was told of the number
Now I want to see you (to us) free from pains and aches of)

To Mrs. W Elsie "Behave yourself - don't talk rot" -

Then we said - Goodbye - Good luck - Good success - Good health and a merry Christmas to you all - Good bye - Goodbye God bless you

Joined if there was a chance to have Joan's father come. or grand-father. - Mrs Sharp said "Wait a moment and I will see who is here

Mrs Meurlin

In a few moments we heard someone singing

"When other lips and other hearts"
Their tale of love will tell
- - ——— - (all the words sung.
- - ———

Then you'll remember, you'll remember, remember me"

Sung very quietly and softly

Joan said Is that father?

Voice - How are you dear, I am happy to see you here and me sing. I want to thank you for bringing Joan here Joan said something about, all the others being on the other side. She the only one left. Mrs Meurlin said "well my dear - You are the only one left - You remember the old song - and he began to sing
"The only one left in all the family.
He sa — — -ian — - all the family.

I said Mrs McCluskie you made sing hymn - take a favourite air

He said something about a little music - We arrange to spend when we have our hymns I am with you dear. I love to hear the music you said is always good to you. Mrs McCluskie replies I am good Mary and laughed - Something about we are sad folk (or restless or still or something) here knows it all - We are all happy dear - all send our love to you - we are very well & very happy

I said you speak to us over the table - Mrs McCluskie said, I send you home she can't seem to leave here - there is some one waiting at the other end of the line, I know (O yes) because I wanted to see you home, I will go with you in the car

(about 8 or 9 o'c?)

to some function she tho - replied I know her well

I began to cough a little

Mrs McCluskie said - We are drawing from you Mr King

The God bless you - and to I will go with you soon

Thank you again

Morris

We heard a voice very faint & far away - as if there were little bones left. - I then heard Mrs Wright say:

Poor dear heart - she can think of naught — some fun (she meant)

Then I heard in heaven upon high - ordinary sweet words

"Good night, my dear Son"

and Heaven

I replied Morris only Good night - Sweet heart -

then were more hymns.

(I recall so vividly when I last looked upon her face on earth

& of another sweet person, before it was closed for ever from my mortal eyes - I said - goodbye - sweet heart -

- so it shall ever be - I whisper - We know so sweet, so heaven upon, so true so altogether lovely to us.

Note - These conversations take 13 & 14 October & closed with dear Mrs McCluskie and in each case meets the words "my dear Son".

Morning sitting - ab 11.30. Joan. Hersw. 2 injury. - No result whatever cancel out such an indication of any spiritual presence. Sat for hour & half an hour. - My condition of health no doubt responsible for it - would have led to gloomy statements.

Afternoon sitting the following also Joan.

conditions - out of doors - excellent - clear bright day - cool & windy - Joan more excited than had ever known self - out here in myself persons.
Each person announces themselves as indicated

My dear brother. Don't it will to meet again. Joan send to me you so much better. Mother is here, we are all here.

Saurei.

This is delightful. I am delighted to see you here. I know been this afternoon in your illness but you are better now. We want to get you real strong, to see your real self again. The one way is perseverance

I spoke of the table and one takes there.
Sir W. said "It is efficient and unsatisfactory. But it is wonderful the whole thing. I think this is wonderful - what opportunities lives are. Lady Saurei is very anxious you should get well. She feels as I do. She don't like people to see you in a weakened appearance. If you are to meet with the public you cannot cut yourself down. The public mustn't see you are not fit for the position. Not at this material

I asked about elections. Sir W. said I see a small one soon
Next year can this be one. Prospects are good. - In this small one
W. will lay to more (gain) months of the situation. I am anticipating a small election this autumn - want you to get well. Get better, Lady Saurei prays for you. You must get well.

There are so many changes since we last talked together so many people trying to get positions for which they are not equal.

I asked about the last session of Parliament. Sir W. said, I think things were clearer and brighter. I was quite well satisfied.

I asked if Sutton was well here - Sir W. said yes. I asked one of the boys from Pontefract. I spoke of Oxford, Oxford, Gladstone & Sir William said some thing of seeing all of our old friends - being so interested, I felt they my pleasure must stay right here - this movement. I mean to do my foremost "You are the only one I fight for"

(I omitted that at time Sir W. meant, he died not want to progress, and I confirm here it was to his power in mundane affairs - this lost his hands and his desire to remain for a season of personal pleasure or comfort) to which they will be Sir W. ok all - Stein as an instrument in hand of powers unseen & unknown.

Lorkin

Well well, my dear friend, this is Lorkin – well and happy I feel quite cheerful. – I thanked him for his goodness to me – Lorkin said "My dear boy if I were here now I'd do more. Sir Wilfrid says you are "in luck of eyes" and I say you are "in luck of life" so between us we think well of you. – Mary's wife forewarned said you were in such a clean up as we had? Sir Wilfrid told you his years ago that his prospects were good. Here he is working as hard as he can – I inspired you to look up that article. If I were here I would lay my hand & head you & Baden cure for sciatica. It has been a trying thing. he meant you to be comfort – it rattles in the muscles

didn't sound well to me –

I spoke of the fearful pain – life coming off. Lorkin said that is a small thing – how good of you to remember it. I told him I think of you every day

I spoke of the property at Kingstown – he said something about buying very hard (work & purchase) I can only do what I can do with speaking. – I spoke of the Bonardi. – he said you know I mean you to take rest of some of the property. You have no use for it. You need the money. It is not big for you. You understand – that little piece of the Bonardi – it is optional for you & do or you please about it.

I was sad for poor Lorkin. Mrs L. said she is wonderful, also Evelyn Gerald – as the latter, he said I wish you well as well

I said I saw something of a sad friend. Poor Lorkin. said we will speak of that later. Those expressions slowing, I don't like, you are not in the good condition, have a tired look – will take care of him. When one is not well, home is the most comfortable place one can find. We are going to get you back to Bonard

Spoke forcibly all his most powerful & tiny consolation as felt at the moment.

Left unfinished as it appears

Bonard would suit – I see something wrong – It is explosive

She then asked me about the little woman at Kingstown I told her her Chancery was dead. I said I must not be surprised if she came to me. – Here M. said if she knew I was here she might come

Lorkin

Well well, my dear friend, this is Lorkin – well and happy I feel quite cheerful. – I thanked him for his goodness to me. – Her Lorkin said "My dear boy if I were here now I'd do more. Sir Wilfrid says you are "his luck of life" and I say you are his star I pray so believe us we must all of you. – Things look favourable and you owe such a clean up as we had? Sir Wilfrid told me his fears of that the prospects were good. Here he is working as hard as he can – I'm pleased you & Lord G. have met. If I were here I would lay my head to head you & Baden were for science. It has been a trying time. We want you & the comfort – it settles in the muscles didn't say that I believe –

I spoke of the fact that I was coming off. Sir Lorkin said that is a small thing – how good of you to remember it. I told him I think of you every day

I spoke of the progress at Kingsmere – he said something about trying very hard (with a purchase) I am sorry to see that it can do such strong. — I spoke of the Romneys. – he said you know I want you to get rid of some of the property – you have no use for it. It would be easier. It is left for you. You understand – that is the wish of the Romneys – it is optional for you & do or you please about it.

I was sad for Mrs Lorkin. Mrs L. said she is wonderful, also Eileen Fitzgerald – as the called, he said I must see well or well

I said I saw something of a sad bereavement – Mrs Lorkin said as well speaks of that lady. Those expeditions storms, I don't like, you are well in the good wonderful, have a limited lives – with little bits of this. Where one is most well, home is the most comfortable place one can find. We are going to get you back & Romney

Feel confident as it affects

Feel forever all this more poignantly by my condolence as felt at the moment.

Lorkin would said – I see something moving – It is wonderful She then asked me about his little woman at Kingston I told her Mrs Romney was dead. I said I must not be surprised if she came to us. – Mrs L. said if she knows I was here she might come

REPETITION

Mary – Well my dear boy – Good gracious. You have changed your mind. How are you feeling? You will have to feed up this muscley chest with nourishing food, don't overdo, or you will run the risk of undoing your health. I asked what to do – they said it was saddening to see me let down – now you must eat good solid food, don't overdo, the stomach – You have a serpent liver, clean out the system – get the stomach settled and bowels in trim and set down & eating like you did – If you weigh 170 lbs you will be doing nicely – It would be more natural. You must feel natural, must feel the nerves, nerves are understood – I asked about Shemaid – Mary said a little Shemaid would do well. If you feel much more yourself a little drink, I would take it raw – I asked about sherry – he said he did not mind a glass of sherry. Brings a digest drink. Something to nourish food & work is good – Hudson Bay is very good – they used to have that. How do you feel? Take stimulant sparingly & rest, help nature in that. Do your best at cards? I said yes? he said help the blood circulation good soup – broth, steak – lamb chops. chicken or pork & avoid the nerves.

I spoke about a trip abroad – Mary said that would be all right so long "as you don't mind all about" would like your mind & interest here, & be in London, and that the influence is affecting the others – I recall how he spoke of many people called mad – as "called". He is the feeling no doubt. The electric, or rather body workers. In speaking I felt more he knew : others would defer to his instinct – have as well as on your eyes is afraid to say going – because of ocean trip – possibly some underlying ob Elmers thing – I have felt uncertain as to whether they [saw] some "enemy" of what they did not want to speak – So I keep bearing in point – I feel myself a change is greatly needed, to get me out of myself. Others have spoken of "bad conditions & a complete change I am pondering this of for this reason. My judgment commends it.)

Mary continued "I don't want people to report that you are only for your health, get that out of the minds of the people – bear that in mind, make the people understand you are all right, no pains or aches. –

I spoke re 'visions' – Mary said you have not had so many lately everything is dormant – you have not been well, [illegible]

I asked do you see helpers? – Mary said occasionally

I spoke of his boys – he said the boys have done splendidly. How you have watched them up – How very much of you are to be a doctor. You have been very wise in this – Mary said re Lyon – he hoped he would Turn to next page. Apparent my going from Mr Hart. thinking I would like to see you (Had a feeling that Su Wiggins wants to remain here, & be in London, and that his influence is affecting the others – I recall those words in those pages in connection with doubt has in dark year he spoke of many people called mad – as "called". Others have spoken of "bad conditions & a complete change I am pondering this of for this reason. My judgment commends it.)

This sentence seems to about most stated as written – or if Mary called outside [illegible] working

Mary – Hello my dear boy – Good gracious. You have changed since 'How are you feeling? You miss home & feel of the Thursday clothes like them boy, don't overdo, or you will run the risk of undoing your health. I asked what to do – they said it was saddening & we are let down – now you must eat good solid food, don't overdo, it nourish – You have a serpent liver, clean out the system – Get the stomach cells and bowels in trim and sit down & eating like you did – If you might 120 lbs you will be doing nicely – It would be more natural. You must feel natural, must pull the nerves, nerves are undernourished – I asked about Shemaid – Mary said a little Shemaid would do well. If you feel much more yourself a little drink, I would take it raw – I asked about sherry – he said he did not think much of sherry. Have a slight diet – Something nourish food & broth is good – Hudson Hay is very good – Milk and Shemaid.
How do you sleep? Take Shemaid gently & rest, help nature in her.
Do your feet get cold? I said yes? he said help the blood circulation food soup – broth, stock – lamb chops. chicken or fish & bread of the nerves.

I spoke about a trip abroad – Mary said that would be all right so long "as you don't make with an effort" would this [illegible] I would like to see you do I had a feeling that Sir Wilfrid wants us Germans here, & he is Canada, and that his influence is affecting his others – I recall don't you he spoke of Mary possibly visited here – as "called". He is the feeling no doubt. The elections, or rather party workers, he pressing I feel more his duties – others would depend to his wishes – Mrs would go as long as it agreed to long stay – because of ocean trip – possibly some meeting at Ottawa Thing – I have felt uncertain as to whether they [illegible] should of what they did not want to speak – So I had pressing his point – I feel myself a change is greatly needed, to get me out of myself. Others have spoken of" had conditions & a complete change I am following this of for this reason. my judgment commends it.)

Mary continued "I don't want people to report that you are only for your health, for that out of the minds of the people – Mrs that is mind, make the people understand you are all right, no panic or others. —

I spoke re 'nerves' – Mary said you have not – had so many bad everything is dormant – you have not been well, just wait and do you see helpers? – Mary said occasionally
I spoke of his boys – he said the boys have done splendidly. How you have looked them up – How very nice of you not to let a doctor. You have been very wise in this – Mary said re Bryan – he hoped he would

I was so sorry not to get more from

keep free of any troubles. I am watching him, he said, all his concern about is to get you on your feet.

I spoke of the "table" - Nurse said he enjoyed the talks. I asked him if Nurse could come in. Nurse said "It is like going to a public meeting all are speaking at the same time. They are a promiscuous lot over here all kinds of men, all want to speak. Don't let the others, and don't keep it up too long your powers are wonderful. Those influenza cases and (take away strength) he spoke of people in nursing the table.

I asked why no one came this morning

Nurse said "You were not in a fit condition. He spoke of coming & [the nurse] came again - he said you know I will come. - Good bye.

I held him back & he continued your mouth always be taken and well and look well, don't let yourself run down. Appearance is a great thing. At your age it is not so easy to pick up - and you looking at you would know you had been ill - at this time - knock up. I don't want people to say he is not fit for a campaign and it will help you. Eat anything you enjoy, but don't overdo it. Good-bye.

(an excellent talk)

Lady Lawrence: I am so happy to see you. You make me said. I meant you to be the little willie boy not to be an old man. You look sick - I thought I would come and see the medium. Nurse Wright. I was opposed to him, I thought it was playing on God's face. When you understand it, it is different, Nurse told me about it. and now is Nurse? give her my love. tell her I am sorry to see her hampered with her bones and legs - She is better than she was. I spoke of Grace. Lady. he said? am not as interested in him as I am in her - he must find a young, I am glad to know he is better. I am happy to see much you again. I spoke of Laurence home & her goodness. She said it is beautiful, and her father he has been so good. We are working just as hard as we can the new pollen are trying a fool. You back in your chair. We cannot afford that (this refers to something I said formerly about difficulties?) he wants over forty to him, not to be worked of the map - I am happy to be in your midst. I will help with my [illegible] will power to get back your strength don't get cold. Sir Oliver asks what about the French. Nurse has come - very badly (? spoke of the difficulty - of all things) more than I did look serious - it. I keep the right front-forward. I want you to learn enough French to be able to talk in a familiar way, to address them with the courtesy of the French - (I spoke of their courtesy and devotion) Lady Lawrence said "Thank you" - I have helped his beautiful article how fast on so beautifully - NO I will come this afternoon. I wish to see much you for a cup of tea. Nurse was said in French - Cause de thé with a little laugh - I repetition.

busy free of busy troubles. I am walking home, he said, as this All he concerned about is to get you on your feet.

I spoke of the "bobbies" - Mrs Nor said he enjoyed the talks. I asked him if Mrs Nor others come in. Mrs Nor said "It is like going to a public meeting all are speaking at the same time. They are a promiscuous lot over here all kinds of men. all mark & speak. Don't get too ofter, and don't keep it up too long your powers are exhausted. Mrs Asquith's come and (take away strength) he spoke of people in making the bobbies.

I asked why no one came this morning

Mrs Nor said "You were cute in a fix condition - he spoke of going & the nurse to come again - he said you know I will come. - Good bye. I held him back & he continued 'you must always be calm and well and look well. don't let yourself run down. Appearance is a great thing. my dear friend --- Affirmation - this meeting

It is my greatest pleasure to extend ~~to~~ a welcome to you from our friends over here. They know of you and they watch us (?) Queen of Sheba today & it is their greatest love for you (?), to remove the barriers to come (the greatest victory) or to love with greatest — the word love harmony. Money is not all. Greed is not necessary. You will have to lift the barriers with your strong iron will which must never bend double bend, lift your voice and sound one great note in which come - will come (?) (?) (your iron will)

Bella

Well Joan dear. It is Bella King. I felt I must come and see you I was here this afternoon, I am so happy to see you, and Dee Jacks, and don't be cross with me. What do you think of this brother of mine he asked Bella what she was doing? She replied I am trying to progress with mother. We are getting on beautifully - There is no time here, we help humanity in every way possible. I go to see Sister Jane every day. I am very glad she feels so much better. She will be all right - I am constantly at the Underground. Going on with the higher grades of children — You will take care, Bessie up, Joan. We are calling on (?) so happy to see you. Mother is sitting here with you (on the sofa.) We love you — to Mrs Welch - We have been a long time, we are all good friends. It's a long time ago - Some heaven forget - Good night = Bessie, Minnie.

Rev Mr Kennedy - Joan
~~Mr Kennedy~~ - Grandfather

Marvellous — Grandfather ~~Kennedy~~ Kennedy ~~has written~~ (~~He said~~ said ~~we have been broadcasting~~ you never come before She replied.) I have not had an opportunity - I hope you are quite fit — This is something unusual for me.
~~I hope you~~ (I said I hope he would speak again, I asked if he was with Grandfather Mackenzie.
Glad to be able to come in this way - Glad to hear Mr King
He said - Your grandfather helped me a lot. I did not know him personally - (I spoke about when he was a Methodist) Rev Kennedy said a lot - went to see him but never got more than. They were afraid the judge would be - Joan asked if he knew how she was doing (grading) - She reply was 'there are no clergymen in Heaven, there is no need for them, Joan asked about his remaining something. She replied I couldn't forget Canada. He said to Joan, did you go to London? - The Speaker of the House they found in & he said, a very old style at that time
Then something of the Spirit - Joan has forgotten
She spoke of the Ghosts - he said "You never saw it"
He continued, Your mother is very wonderful, we are all very happy strong and well. There is no sorrow, no sickness over here
I hope you good luck (?)
May the presence of God be with you always.

Mrs Welch said there is someone here, his name is Walter or Walker's

Sir Henry Thornton

After getting the name - very well. All right. What is going on here Mrs Pallerson introduced - now do you do — what a pity it is that what we think we do not understand this great case — Just - you know Watson before Sir Henry - yes - This comes of other people are dead. Why didn't it crop in our schools? — I should of we saw his instincts - I am with my problem right along - I am interested in earth conditions - the world movement
I asked what his interest had been here - It was difficult to get the words but eventually he made out - Canadian National Railways. I asked what was going to happen. Sir Henry said "there is terrible struggle, England was ruined the Grand Trunk - re amalgamation, he said. It would be sad had to have our own. You did well to help the Grand Trunk. — asked about world conditions. Sir Henry said the world is a terror. I don't like the attitude of Japan and Russia. Germany has had no chance to pay back her debts. I don't know the next put-on - — the man at the head of it he is a rebel They ought to do what Lenin or he did but must other men, he keeps under cover — he says there are too many foreign elements, too many mixed elements. If Russia and Japan go together (as at one another, the U.S. would go against Japan. Canada would go to help England. The Jews are a guilty lot - — Something is how to make another change - a bad combination. Not Jews alone - Germans. Bolshevism Bolshevism - — what revolution abounds (?) I cannot understand U.S. policy in keeping out English & North Italians foreigners & come in (

Senator Watson came in

How do you do, Mrs King. This room is twice the size
I said who was Watson - Senator? - yes
W. - what is the good word
(Mrs W. sees all with a twinkle from all over room)
I asked about - Mrs W. - Mrs Watson is getting on nicely Things are moving slowly, — I asked the Senator. What are your interests over there. He said something about a man in my position he replied he ought to help my fellow man on earth. Try to help in conditions of our country. Once a man is in my position - he has to be faithful to his trust - There are too many who want to get something out of the government. I want to see the country brought home away the barriers — get back to normal.

I asked when he thought the elections would come - he replied not very soon, about Spring - hence (?) change much. Sir Wilfrid is very respected. He is trying to get you before the Mounts. You to talk among the French Your outlook is better than it has been

Sir Henry Thomson

after getting the name - very well. all right. what is going on here here rebellion is broken out - now do you do — what a pity it is that we are alive we do not understand this great case — must go home & write before Sir Henry - yes - this comes of old people are dead. they should be taught in our schools ?— I asked if he saw his mother - I am with my mother right along — I am interested in earth conditions — the world moves on I asked about his interest had been lame — it was difficult to get his words but eventually he spoke out - Canadian national railways. I asked what was going to happen - Sir Henry said "this is a terrible tragedy, England was ruined the Grand Trunk — re amalgamation, he said. it would be too bad to throw out some. You did well to help the Grand Trunk. — asked about world conditions. Sir Henry said "the world is a terror. I don't like the attitude of Japan and Russia. Germany has had no chance to pay back

I asked about how they got this information – could they go for example into the Council Chamber and read documents there? The answer was, we see, and hear, and know, the conditions of the people and how they are interested in political affairs (or words to that effect) but we are not dormant. – only we are in the spirit — we can hear what they say. we are not interested in Theory. but in what we hear, we can see and hear (my recollection is to read my dictated by us read, or follow thoughts, and reading it – it was what they have heard) we are anxious. I should be anxious to see some party win that is perfectly natural — it is a matter of progressing – there is the same law for everyone. we do for humanity what will help them to progress — Get well.

Francis D. Mrs Longe
Sarah – (Godfrey sends Sarah)

I always come to you soon – I want to see and hear from you we are all well, all very happy – some sick ones here – Jane mother is happy – (Joan – do you miss me Mrs Longe?) Godfrey loves you Joan said you were always good pairs of Godfrey. – Happy man. I thought so. It is nice of you to say so.

Frank Grove (a brother of Mrs Wade)

The voice said Ella – – Mrs W. – who is it? – Frank. My brother? Yes. How are you – all right Married? – Only well — have you divorced or widowed? (widowed by she married again)
NO. She killed herself. How are his children? You wouldn't know them if you saw them. Is the lady getting good to him?
– I said the last – I could Do you see Phillip? (Mrs W. husband) I will tell him. Try and impress him to write. – what is she doing? She is clerking in a store, her husband hasn't had work for over a year. She is getting on all right. Phyll sends greetings all right. She looks old, but is looking well. She is 20 years older.
– – – Yes that is right.
Good night — Mrs W. – Thank you so much for coming.

Ruyssen Sunday morning
August 26. 1934 - 9.40 - 10.40
Mrs Wheatley.

Condolences sent down before - Clear weather bright sun. Some wind - warmer today
Personally feeling much better.

Leon: - (announced himself this way)

I wanted to see how you were, you are looking well. The Zeppelin saw you a good many last night. It is strange to hear a ship like that coming round
I am glad to see you so well — I often thought of you, sorry to keep you worried, he replied you remember how worried you were about me
I said but do you worry in this other world - here replied. Not worry in the sense that you do, not take this petty life as we do - it is more in the nature of sympathy — to feel as I often of my leader - Leon said his own treatment will be sufficient. He has an understanding of the nerves, knows where they are, and how to deal with them.

I asked what about a wife — Leon replied - of course that is a different proposition. You have a good deal to look after. I meant - you on earth, I mean would you or have it be in a position to meet every occasion - I often of the misfortune of a change - would change
- the new idea is - Leon said - a change can do a lot of good - if you will. I don't like your going to encounter a rough sea. Sea sickness is a horrible thing. I think the change would do you good. I meet it were a little earlier in the season - the suggestion is very good, but you ought to have at least two months, one week to meet me, get new ideas

Now regarding my father. I am with him a good deal, father is very tender and has a kind heart. In the spirit world one sees things differently. Father said I ought to write more, some more wrongs than I did. I said father you were never able to save money. He said he'll come through all right (Evidently they know what I did not feel the sympathy in father's words of yesterday which were characteristic of him, and are appearing now - both Leon & the Chief)

Leon said I meant you to get rid of the cloud in your system,
I asked if he had father in his arms - he said, he is all right.

Worsley. Mrs W said, I felt the presence of some one who was drowned
It is chilly (it was summer) there is a struggle. I said is that Jos Worsley he replied Yes. I said how are you. he said Pretty well - how is every-thing going. I said I had to see you this morning. I said, do you remember Empress. He replied yes but what an improvement.
You have made it over - I asked if the old house was built of that stone (was not sure) he said do you remember when the boat came out! — I spoke of Mrs Inchcape — he said she has tried to come here. he meant she would like to come here (Selby at Avignon)
I spoke of Mrs Berridge. Worsley said. She is wonderful. She is perfectly lovely — Mrs Inchcape, he said, is putting on weight.
I spoke of Mowbray - he laughed & said he remembered him. I of our client up the mountain, he said 'he was a client' — I spoke of Harris he said those were the good old days - look after yourself. You have been looking after the world on the outside, now look after yourself on the inside. I said what are you doing - he said I am trying to progress. This is a wonderful place. I am trying to help humanity. - he said when are you coming or you came -plain — I replied a fortnight or so - he said. You must look up.
don't look down. I wish you success. I spoke of our friendship he said there was always an affinity between us, ours was a true friendship - look after yourself. Don't let yourself down

Mrs W. said - I see a pillar of light coming over the hills. It is about as big as two hands, flashy - It is coming from the door towards you. There is some one here - the name is Willy -. (could think of no one Will or Bill and Willy.)

Red Cross. A voice then said You come. I give you magnetism, keep more treatment, you feel help more better - (I thought Mrs Inchcape no Hands - all time come. I can here understand - hand of the name of some one - he was Captain, he know you - in Africa he died I he knows you - he lives at Atlanta. was great big good man — I give you treatment - magnetism. I might I come again. It all good - no medicine keep good condition good-bye.

Just then an aeroplane went over head - Mrs W. said to me I help you more go up in one. don't keep out of it. I can see it is too precious to stay down up when have not come back

Patti - (Mrs)

I heard a voice say Patti. Patti - from Athens, old man I said it was Patti, and it was in Athens at Kinder Club he replied I thought you might not remember, I had a great admiration for Sir Wilfrid, and I bore a profound respect for you. We need you - I spoke of Kinder Court - said I did not go often, he replied to short stands. You bore too many things etc up there. He then said it was Capt. Addison, the Indian I was speaking about - he (Addison) was in parliament, lived near Devizes. When he died the Indians were all around, they called him Dr Wilson. Robert Wilson. Captain. He was a Catholic (I never knew such person - but compare this with what Sir Wilfrid says, he then said I think he was very fond of him a son - was a friend of Sir Wilfrid Patti he Patti then said - let us now. It was a great deal of friction with Burnett. He feels he has been a failure - I said he has had a difficult time. Patti replied, we have all to help one another. He has done done for Athens or for the Liberal man what you have I feel you on the right road, and say, brave, brave. Look what you did to help them get employment. - I asked about - his family. He said his wife was with him & his daughter - was Countess -

(Mrs Patti was at the Kinder Club when I first came to Athens over 30 years ago - was always very friendly with Sir W.)

Sir Wilfrid

Good morning. Glad to be with you this morning. I invited the old gentleman to have a talk with you - he is a great Athenian. I am glad to see you so much better this morning - You had a chill - a rather severe one. Your going to get better. Get your mind settled as to what you want to do. I will help you, I don't want to worry you. In another week or 10 days you will be home in fine feeling and talk. Get there the little things that have been holding you back, and get on with the work. Get at them and clear them up. and off your mind, - I spoke of G. Chamberlain. Sir W. said I mean this to be a clean cut affair - want you to get well - to be able to fight without a handicap. The Chancellor does not like to see you ill - don't get chilled. We want you this fall. We need your voice. I said do you see Sir Edmund. Sir W. said. Every day he is very well. (I said 'give him my love') He added Keep buttoned up on account of your friends pleasure. He will help you in the campaign. I want the heart of the French to be with you. He will choose time to see you when. This little flurry does not amount to anything - there will be a very good result ( ) could not get anything very definite from Sir W. or to our chances in the by-election. He said he intended it a good clean fight and added I must talk about Miss Colin — good luck to you, keep well. do the best you can — Merci beaucoup — and en French he added je suis charmé vous avoir encore — I must be closing for now again.

Dr Sharp:

Well well, well. - very pleasant to see you - I can only to address a few words to you. I want to put you right. (I had been thinking it over in my carriage and saying I doubted if it were gladstone's spoken who spoke yesterday on account of voice &c.) - I gather up all the forces and condense them into sounds. Sometimes friends gather in - I gather from vibrations, aurora, electric currents - storms - it is not the sounds of the people you hear, but what I gather from about - of the atmosphere. I am the guide to show how to manifestate the forces that is why I am chosen. It is no fault of the friends or of mine if you do not get the right sound. I am doctor. I bring that conclusion into the air - that is what brings the doctor account into everything. I cannot help it. If I were a Frenchman, or an Italian, it would be the same the predominating note would be French or Italian. We all come to gather the forces in the atmosphere, all have to be condensed and used. - I am telling you this so as to clear up what was in your mind

I said I must not be sure of it being Mr Gladstone speaking.

Dr Sharp - Must was him. It was Mr Gladstone - I said, the iron rod did not sound like his speaking or anything. Dr Sharp - You call iron rod, You must not bend. In reference to you that you are a strong-willed - I said about father, that it did not seem like him - calling me his "son", he said your mother does the same thing. She calls you the same thing. I said they called me by name in life, not "son". Dr Sharp - In so they have lost the flesh, they appear to something brighter, something more clear than anything could have been on earth - Your father was a good man, a true man, he wouldn't stoop to do anything beneath his dignity. He loves it for he is wonderful to have a dear son, he has a great admiration for you. He may not have been quick to endearing expressions, but he has a good heart. I said he was always very kindly & loving Influence of Mary - Dr Sharp said. There is no better man than he is for God, that Mary has him now and something which would have left him a little longer, in his undivided presence he could do to benefit.

I asked Dr Sharp if we got all our ideas from the spirits in the other world. He replied - There is a higher spiritual development. They give you new ideas. The great physicians, musicians, artists; actors accumulate. They have the vibrations, and they see you are on a line of their thoughts, and they give you great inspiration - had you an original idea - You were born a speaker and a leader. That is your part in life - Consequently you have some work to do.

He or Indeed will soon visit Eleyan I will come again today!? to see you will at any moment hay

God bless you till we meet again
Dr said to take care of them - but here do as the angels
He ended saying to me. He will help you - let hand your health we need you very much.

Mrs Worrall enquiry about Candlewick Road — Burglar!
Clear out of house!
Had rest before dinner.

Mr Larkin

This is a great pleasure for us. What can I do for you?

I asked about the trip abroad.

I would like you to take it. It is a difficult time & the visit is not unexpected a trip — You have got to do that. You need a rest. I think everybody is at home now at Harrowby Church. I mean England. — I asked him how if he remembered our trip together — I remember the days, they were very enjoyable Anything I can do for you, I would like it. I felt a warm affection I have a great respect for you, and I want it carried on & this same feeling to exist — I was so prolapsed for what you did for Sir Wilfrid. I felt deeply interested, I want you to help well. about want you to come to this land — Shrobury here and there takes your strength

Should I make a about want it hold on — you are doing very well.

I thank you very took what you have done for our city; for the country. I wish I were able to do more

I asked if he saw Sir Thomas Upton:

Gentle Office — We are pulling hard on the rope to obtain the Shafe — there is no trouble on this side, the barriers are here on earth. The selfishness of wrecks is due to greed — selfish greed. It's come back again. Keep warm — away from getting damp, and cold, and chilly,

Sir Wilfrid Lawrie

Who is there? — Wilfrid, I thought I'd come and ease your mind — not-well. I read between the lines. Sir W. — What has he accomplished? he is now working for a title. I stay in your stead. When you returned a little — very thankful to know and in harmony with you

You are going abroad — (Something about not necessary because does, It will benefit you more than it will benefit. I mean I want you to go if and when the opportunity affords you, We know we must keep in close touch with each other. Now the people are working for you, I want you to work for them. You must be in evidence and be ab. luck and call. Be strong, hold to your arguments and don't get weary and sick and tired - a campaign is tiresome. I know it's hell's one. I had some hard knocks and disselling remarks. I left my Army, and her doubts will help. You will be better in the next two weeks, keep comfortable - (Burnside:) I thank you for coming Yours sincerely said Burnside. I left him all the time - You do your part - I will have another chat. Nothing so important as to get well - Get speeches in good form - make a good appearance. I can encouraged the French will stand by you. Use French have queer ideas at times. They later strong likes and dislikes - (Referred to his part. secession) They must be for my sake I have fought for them and worked for them alone, given them prestige

(Refers to the second letter - Sent. made reference to it) whatever you do is right. When you see Mrs Fulford give her my kind regards. Tell Flora I am very happy to see them start up with a new thought - Good afternoon

Senator Fulford!

How do you do Mr King. This is Senator Fulford. I am entitled I owe you a debt of gratitude. Advice to Mrs Fulford and myself be realizes your advice is entitled. He will help among the Army people. He is honest and square and straight forward. When you see my dear wife give her my love. I am sorry she cannot get about - My thanks for your kindness. Glad you come to my message I don't want her to worry about the office things - Goodbye

Talking of architects

Mrs King. before it melts a word or two

There no pain, I must go, Goodbye

Mrs Fenwick said, he knows you, to imagine you.

Dr Holden! 'Of Denver Colorado

Well well, This is Dr --- --- Dr Holden. I was here last night but didn't have an opportunity to talk to you. I thought they might have mentioned it. I have been wondering how you are getting and I hope you are getting on (I asked if he saw Knox - he said) he are always happy to meet each other. You are much thinner thinner. (I spoke about effect of dieting. Dr Holden said as long as you hold on and don't allow yourself to get weakened - I spoke to Dr Mother - he said. He is a wonderful soul, a good soul

I spoke about one talk over the table - Dr Holden said - It will be very satisfactory. Was nice to know I was received. I am glad you got impressions of my presence. I will tell you how a wonderful help for arthritis he artificial he said, I was also my mother when we had the first blocks, & she was being treated by Dr Healy (?) for moles on the knee, an Indian came and took us to bore her knee to the dry heat, & keep rubbing his hand over the top of the knee and underneath the knee, to the back of the calf. don't put on any oil-application, keep the heat in circulation – a mixture of camphor oil is – do that frequently until the pain is gone – it is all due to impoverished nerves. Nerves get the best of us sometimes.

Mrs Bennett said, there is some one at my side, a short slender person a woman, she is coming close to me, up to the table. Maid is it Mrs Kearney. – She replied Yes. I just came to see how you were. You were feeling better. You have not forgotten me. (I asked why she had not come before she had been with me at the table. She said, I don't have the same opportunities. I miss you very much. I tried to help my promise I do come. You have lost my vibrations. You don't get hold of my magnetism. I'll try & impress that I am there – they are than me (Mrs Kearney's voice was very low & hard to hear)

I said something about other spirits coming in, which did not always suit the medium, seemed to worried. A voice (a man's voice) of a man, then said I never saw any entanglements come in here The trouble is you don't understand You are all tangled up. You think they are evil influences and they don't understand the law of the power of moving with your magnetism

Mrs Bennett says – the name is upside down – It looks like Pollard or Pollock the name Mc Pollock or Pollock, Mac Allister

Mr Mac Allister (Exclaims)

I said is it Mr Mac Allister, he said yes, yes. – I am very well, I can't complain. Transition was a wonderful thing to me when I passed over – when I was going – and oh, it is so sad to die in ignorance. All ought to know something of this wonderful going over.

How are things going along. I see a lot fighting for a change Bennett doesn't like. Well have a change. He will find more man of a very different mind character, spirit & one another thing, Bennett has too much money. It will trouble you You never sat down and let other people think for you. Bennett has other people thinking for him. I want you to be firm and to hold your own. Get back on to your feet and will call more word for the coming day, keep it as close to your bosom as you can; we all work for the best results, I very glad to hear you were so closely confined & your own thoughts hold aloof from people the ideà of your ~~sickness~~ sickness. I am glad you had no physician - You are a wise man, people should begin to say Mr Cheney is ill. — I asked the doctor if he was capable of riding horses. He said there is no horse racing. There are worldly things but beautiful then are no friends like the old ones. Age doesn't count. You never lose your character, age never has taken the true mind

August 26. 1st (Sunday) evening
2 hours.
Reverend Doom. Self others w.
Conditions helped. Doom, Burkett etc.

Mr Merridge.

Good evening. How are you this evening. This is — I am interested — — ^ — you bought this property of mine
Mr Merridge. I first came from Workington, discovered you were here. What a wonderful improvement. (I looked what he had been at working for about) He said — I like to see my son. I said Good Bill done well
He at said — I thought so. am very proud of him
How is my dear old church in Allonby?
Just at a blessing we don't know what is to happen before can(?) be — from one year to another. I could wish my connection were home
I wish I had been taken there this side
(Mayhow referred to his death in England. I thought it short of an ominous sign)
I would much prefer my bronchial nearer home
I asked how "Morfonie" was Calling on me. I thank you
I am happy to see you comfortably situated here
What a change you have made in it. I was proud to know that a man like you was sitting in this place — I never could have made it so luxurious I rather grudge it to you at half that sum of guinea pound for a golf club. I don't think you could should be ^ particular concession. I would unload some of it, add more to the
it would be wise to do so
It is a pleasure for me to speak to you
I referred to the Doom. — something was said of music
Mr doctor said "You don't help up your practice. It is like one may to go on. I wish you prosperity.
God bless you both, and all of you.

Ferguson (from London 2nd — an undertaker & Grand-Colonel)
Dear Sir. It is a long time since I have heard from you. Mr Ferguson - I don't forget our conversation. How is everything with you? I don't get often to Bath, when I do a good opportunity I come. Your parents and brothers are well and flourishing. A great many of the old friends have come over here
You have gone a long way from home. Would you visit London.
I think the saddest part is death when it comes to leaving your loved ones
after some reprieve & Doom to me for months our Prime Minister is not up lately. Your Speaker about the abdication business, but I said. This kidnapping is for mercenary purposes. Not for money.
I doubt see it. I heard about it. There is much talk in this papers
I wish you success in the campaign, Mr. King.

Mrs Merritt said. There is something wrong with Mrs Pallison
She name is Margaret.
Now I see the name Nellie. Was she slender and little had she fair hair.
Nellie White — (Came to Mrs George Hoggarth — Stratford, Northland Dominion)
Hello Joan. This is Nellie White — I was sent-ger. Your mother told me you were here and that I must come to see you here — I am well now
So many are over here, You have changed a lot. I remember you with a fresh deal of pleasure. I was with the children. I came to teach them. There was — a wonderful Class had taught teach them singing and music, and your daughter is a beautiful girl. She don't look older than 21. The Spirits never look as old as they are — at 60 you look like 30.
There are no old or decrepit persons. They are lovely to see the Spirit is beautiful. It is lovely to see you. I will tell them all about it — (Mrs) Thank you Sir. — Mrs W. Thank you Mrs Merritt Joan felt some one loved her.

George Pallido — Sounded like. Mrs is for a minute — Mrs Pallison —
This is George Pallido. I thought I would come and see you.
Joan spoke of Nellie being here. Mrs M. said. I did see him (Sometimes
Oh. My yes; It was difficult to put my name. How is Mrs Pallison,
You tell him I was in hospital for a crack at him. Tell him, I am Still thinking of him; he's a good fellow. means well
I asked if he saw Jamie + he replied
Oh, yes, I do, I asked him how about land - (he said) don't bother less to me, I have had enough on earth, (?) Why don't you
Why write the old lawyers? — he said I have friends and relations here
I think more of (?) Will tell him, you sent your love. Tell Godfrey I sent my best. —

Mr Sharp My dear friend, how are you tonight. I just came over how You were doing, I'll come back again. (Speaking to them about bringing certain persons) and afterwards said "You know so many ask will I help you so and so. It is your influence that brings these people to you. I need them like may. I gather the vibrations, the Chemicals of the atmosphere the ether and condense it into sound and portion it off for Your ——— You can't run an engine without gas. I am for.
I forgot all the conditions for the friends. I am an old member of both worlds, I have come back (over) before Mrs Wrenfield was born and will come after She has gone (I don't know where I will go) She belongs, being very good, is faithful. I'll come back again. I want to work for, do any thing

Mrs Arnott said. There is something wrong with Mrs Pallison
She name is Margaret.
Now I see the name Nellie. Was she slender and little

I spoke of Bishop of the Globe (Rogers was once a dentist)

"I'll be after him. He support of them — He ought — My dear Mrs King, It is not all Gold that glitters — They are for too ready to listen to candelloues misstatements of some — — Two wrongs don't make a right. Never mind, with make hay while the Sun shines, Good night"

Mother:

aug. 26. - night

Well Willie (Joan said there is your mother:) - I said Mother dear. I have been saying for months dear, and how are you. I am very very glad to see you (and how glad I am to see you) How are you? I am perfectly happy to be here with my son. I thought I would let the other people come who love you and who wanted to see you. I knew you would know I was about. (She also spoke to Joan and to Mrs Wright; after speaking first to me and said how glad she was to see them)

She then spoke of father (evidently they or he thought I did not take the right meaning out of what he said - but I thought he was sleepy - it was this I know father was just the opposite and would be that made me think of sleep not - he seemed was speaking)

Mother could - As father said, I couldn't make that clear understand me - Willie is all right - You know Joan father was not a man of flattery, he was a man of true heart, he never endeavored to endear (not quite the meaning) he was a good father for his family. I know he would give them everything if he had it

I said to mother, I can see your voice, I can feel your personality and understand you clearly. (It was very remarkable & mrs. the last yet - Mother said

I don't get excited. I keep cool

I asked do you remember the hymn or song I was playing (Rotard Rotarbotard - Chorus - Praise God from whom all blessings flow Christmas Hymn) Mother said I used to play it - When Joan comes over and plays it makes the sound like 'Home Sweet Home.' (I had been trying to play 'charity' - that among the blessed where Mother first played and sang. I read this morning the wonderful chapter on Charity in Paul. Epistle to Corinthians XV.

She turned to Joan and said, Joan will you see that Willie has good things to eat. I don't want him to get so poor looking, I want him to look strong - I said it will pay you to speak to the servants. She said she would.

I spoke about missions - but could not quite catch Mother said - though I have written 'I am sending missions a few song to help. I will come when I have the power to bring something - Master of the keepers. Mother said I know her keepers, he is very wonderful

I said how is grandfather.

Mother said "Wandering". he is very happy. and well and he is just as happy as ever - father and I were glad

Mother: aug. 26. - night

Well Willie (Joan said there's your mother:) - I said Mother dear. I have been hoping you would come.
Well dear, and how are you. I am very very glad to see you (and how glad I am to see you) How are you? I am perfectly happy to be here with my son. I thought I would let the other people come who love you and who wanted to see you. I knew you would know I was about. She then spoke of father (evidently they or he thought I did not take the right meaning out of what he said - but I thought he was sure - it was that I know father was just the opposite and would be that made me think it might not be the kindness was speaking)

Mother could - as father said, I couldn't make that out understand me - Willie is all right - Joan knows father was not a man of flattery, he was a man of true heart, he was endeavoured to endear (not quite the meaning) he was a good father for his family. I know he would give them everything if he had it

I said to mother, I can see your voice, I can feel your personality and understand you clearly. (It was truly remarkable as was the best yet - Mother said

I don't get excited. I keep cool

I asked do you remember the hymns or song I was playing (Rebecca Crawford - Church - Prince of Wales Church Avenue) the Colonial Theatre Mother said "I used to play it" - when Joan comes over and plays it makes the sound like 'Home Sweet Home'.
(I had been trying to play "charity" - that among the blessed hymns which mother often played and sang. I read this morning the wonderful chapter on Charity in Paul's Epistle to the Corinthians XV.

She turned to Joan and said, Joan must you see that Willie has good things to eat. I don't want him to get so poor looking, I want him to look strong - I said it will soon to pick up the servants. She said she would.

I spoke about visions - but could not quite catch what Mother said - though I know what "I am sending visions or Jim going to help. I will come when I have the power to bring something - Master of the Prophets. Mother said I know his prophets, he is very wonderful

I said how is grandfather.

Mother said "wandering". he is very happy. and well and he is just as happy as ever - father and I were glad of this reunion (I own it 100 years), this brennell treated Jan very nicely Willie, Jan are a far better educated man than he is Joan - he learnt good manners he began here trained. Joan I never trained my son. Joan said he didn't mind it, she added with him it was kind of me - not to be cross.

I like it home here boss, (Joan said, my) mother said boss any body. Mother added to Joan, I thank you from all my heart for all you have done for Willie. I love you with all my heart and thank you

Dr Sherlock I said to the doctor that mother was wonderful. So clear, could recognise her voice etc. He said, I lod, "we all try to be as natural as possible - expression so as to be understood. It is not difficult to speak. Some are excited and nervous, have to be goaded on, we then described the process of speaking. This the diaphragm that carries the sound, the breast gives the sound a loud tone - we have no voice centre - here we are spirit - Jan have the sounding board is what is your lungs. we are like a person who has had lung trouble cannot talk in a natural tone - that is why the voice sometimes trembled, sometimes, we have no lungs - we have got to use the atmosphere, or I gen the chemicals of the atmosphere etc. before you can hear. I collect all these forces and condense them.

I want you to rest perfectly and quietly. to get back to your old self - enjoy peace and pleasure and keep well. Joan said about keeping on well Dr Sherlock said "will keep him well" will see you again tomorrow

After this talk we came down stairs to the sitting room, and Joan and I shewed him what we mean the table tables. This is what we got - (see other sheet)

Kingsmere Lane. Monday morning
August 27th. 1934
Mrs Wood's sister's son
Condition perfect.

Helen Mackenzie.

I am here Willie — (I had enquired first if Aunt Helen)
How are you - dear Mrs. Hallinan
I am well, dear Willie. Your mother told me to come to-day to bring her bible —
Hello and kiss (Found about - Mackenzie)
Aunt Helen, I have been — I asked about the bible I bought in Toronto —
(What were those women about?)
Yes it was my grandmother's, one of the family
Dead — I don't know where it is. (I said it was in the trunk)
I know it is somewhere. — You have so much. I don't know where. - - We are all helping. God bless you dear.
I asked if she saw the photo on the table (of mrs mother's brother) Ugly — I am keeping her this dear soul. She looks very natural Thank you Mrs Hallinan. You have been very good to Willie, he appreciates everything you do for him.

Mrs Wood says - There is some one here who has passed away - some-
- thing wrong with the bowels & his stomach suffered very much, needed an operation - or obstruction, they think this condition upon me — he had a black cord around this neck - fastened on a bracelet on right hand, has a nice hand - a dainty hand — more like a man, he takes about with the right hand and holds out the ribbon
I see ectoplasm (how to pronounce is condence is) (I was quite certain this was falling - nothing in a way to manifest after what he had said last night - Later this was repeated. &.)
Mrs Wood continued talk. — Some one is sitting down on the couch. Her hair is reddish. She has it combed back with a band comes from ear to ear - her hair is curly - It is fuzzed on his forehead, and she has a plaid dress on - She is pretty - very white I thought it was Willie Sunday - Voice said. It sounds like a person of mine — Aggie Aggie was whether whether — I thought I would ask you to me. I would come and you would know who it was. I thought I would do that way, so you would know it was really me. I am very happy, (Some speaks of being in Paris obviously spirit has gone from body)
I am glad you enjoyed it. I enjoy this wonderful health, no paralysis (She had had a very stroke)

I was introduced to Mrs Smith — She said to me
Mrs Smith — I would kindly wish you (I had met her at Woodside Park) was it Smith? (Joanna Adam's sister who was married to Mr Wilson) Joan's mother, Lord Ker the Comic you so you remember Mrs Salford. — I love her. Give her my love
I wouldn't come back for any money and to think what I did (Give my love to the children, I like to see them

Mr Sharp:

Good morning, my dear friends. So here is my dear Mrs Patterson
Peoson why this dear soul that suffered so much
She said to me
Could you do something to show her P. that she really knows him is it? — She is proud of her likeness on the screen (referring to the pictures)
I am glad Mrs Wright saw it with her poor eyes.
Your father did the same (Spiritualist) (see earlier) do something to show you up. We want you to be sure of who is talking to you It talking to you we do the best we can to come to our friends — a lesson we must never taught on earth
God is imminent
God is ~~[illegible]~~ forever in man
God is Creator
God is the Life Principle in this world without God we never would have anything good.
Our parents never taught us about the Invisible Spirit-Life God was everywhere. He is the Creator of the moon and the Stars. He is the Life Principle

Mrs Lorbeer.

Here is is Peter Lorbeer. He is lonely over you. Good morning and the Good medium. I never was better, always better — She hopes you know her King the better you like him. It is wonderful how we on this side remember our friends we left-behind. I had no con-ception of anything like this. I thought when we left this world, we moved right out of it. I did not know where I was going. I was blind to what would happen. There is nothing in the world so beautiful as is the transition in the spheres with loved ones.

I refer to his wife. It made me happy meeting his daughter and meeting Sir Oliver. Sir Oliver greeted him with open arms. Joan what do you call them?
I can't. They knock you did you meet Miss Lawson?

You may depend I ~~meet her~~ met her. We would just know where to find them. It would be like looking for a needle in a hay stack.
Good morning. Joan Slater of lost-property here
That does message sorry - hope all well - was worried
That is a blessing

Louis Hasleu Some one came asking in French - Hasleu is French.
Louis Hasleu - Hasley francais. You must speak
French. You must learn French. It is carelessness about it.
You let them do such things. Lord Sis is disgusted.
I tried to make his study. Sis disgust is helping in many ways — You will cross the bridge with success
You are not quite fit. I recommend you to build up your nerves - must not let yours be depleted - don't fast so much - by abstaining from good food - not worthy worthy food. You don't want all meats - cover the nerves. The constitution needs building up — not medicine. You need physical strength to carry you through the campaign.
Good substantial food. If you have bad nerves you can't work
(I thanked Hasleu for letting apples rot) He said - It'll be all right, keep his bowels good.
Contentment is wonderful
We want to bend and build
Love and strength and health and prosperity
Without love there can be no true friendship
The love of the birds.

Miss Wendt said. There is some one here - the name is upside down
Harrott - Harrison - Dr Harrison of Bayswater

Dr Harrison How are you - wonderful to see you here - (I found it he remembered the last times. He said yes, it was after an accident at your house (I think this is right. Arranged wrong - I had forgotten it)
I often [illegible] your own house - views from the roof, he said, it was very beautiful. You remember the colouring on the trees - it was very Pre-Raphaelesque (This I had forgotten, was more obvious in case than I was there much myself) - when we came on the roof.
I said, Do you see the dangers. He or replied yes very well - interested in world affairs - let them look after themselves. I [illegible] of the entertainment - Dr Harrison said - I was there and rejoiced. I was glad to

to see him. It was the meeting of the clans. I asked if he saw Rachels. She said, NO - very often, but with him & lots of others. political affairs. There is no richness here. We have our ups & downs the cracks are often over and a while (as Harrison was great or ~~then~~ then). I said do you see my mother. He replied: I am often with your mother and father. We go about a lot glad to see you all so well.

Mrs Weidt said: I see a woman here, has on a white dress, a check like a plaid cheque, black and white, or blue and white, and with shoes tied with ribbon, and foot-out to be recognized: She has a white beaded belt with pockets on one hip (L) hip, like a little coat over the hip. I said, this is my cousin Nellie Lindsay.

Then Mrs Weidt said: on the other side of the table, as if walking out of the room is some one who has a crutch — Joan said it is my aunt Annette (Annette) - She has this to be identified.

Mrs Jessie (Annette)
Mrs Annette (aunt of Joan)

Joan dear, are you there — you said did you touch me? How are you? Im very happy to be here - did you see me. I missed you Joan said I hope you can forgive me for what I used to say & do - Mrs Annette - You tried to listen from at me. I loved you just the same — Granny is very very well - She would be glad to say how do you do to little Joan. There is no old age over here. Such a blessing. - don't have the burden of troubles and wrinkles (Charlotte Jones - She had a funny face -) — one feels younger - I'll be over.

Mr Sharp. How are you coming on. He said, You've given us a great treat. Mr Sharp said - wait a bit.

Frazer. — Then a voice came. Frazer. a friend of Mrs. Hollins in Woodstock. He seen your father — I said, you knew his father - he replied, a very good-looking chap. He's daughter don't remember me — Hugh? — James Frazer. Do you remember James. James Frazer? and could you remember his daughter Jane. (Joan said NO) - Good luck - Do you remember any one by name of Scott (Catherine) Mrs talking about Scott. — You'll surely remember I was ahead of her time - I knew the old man, (Mrs Scott) a dear old man - James father used to call him Jim.

Mr Sharp (Joan said all the Frazers had a middle name) came in & said - That man was Nellie James. He had whiskers I felt as if I was about 30 years ago union of vocancelli. 1956.

I see a long room, the centre of the room has a green carpet, there are little box desks, — a lot of chairs - hallow - they don't cover the walls, pillars. Some one is going to walk out of that place - is going to pass, inside of a few months. It looks sudden, I can't tell what chair will be vacant - I asked is it a front row? It looks like the middle - the chairs are empty. It show me some member of this room, like a committee room - going to pass out. It will happen before christmas. Important — can't tell that, seems to be some boy coming from the back to get through and to pass the audible (walk — = it a lot of chairs - table with boxes on. (Some members of cabinet I can't tell who they are) (something more said about this member? as being important — I am impressed what was before that. She said under a lot of that — the carpet was beautiful green there were no flowers in the carpet.

— the dog growled —

It seemed to me the vision was sent to emphasize "prophecy" — (something in bible reading or prophecy came as I it seemed to me it meant clearly. first the scene 2 persons there in cabinet. — It might be Ben Gurion Block - other member of govt - who died Sept —. He was a member of this vocal part assisted — I rather think it is some one more prominent.

Then would then said — There is some one here, either frozen - to death — my lips are cold & the lips as if frozen - found frozen - was found frozen. —— I thought this must be Mikhoels incident - who came with his dog - - the boy was found frozen in the snow, his shepherd dog would not allow any one within a certain distance of his body.

3.40 p.m. Self & Mrs Webb Conditions unchanged.

Dear Wilfrid:

I was here this morning. I have been calling on people. I felt very pleased over your condition. You must continue (record & training)
There are lots of little little things I want to speak about.

I think it would be advisable for you to get rid of some of those stuff you have in the cellar, down stairs, since it is a library
It is well not to accumulate so much dust. — You don't need it, dispose of it: give it to people. I must [illegible] to speak about it a year ago — I spoke of having had some one to come in, the Webbs remember that was a poor job — It would be very acceptable to a library about this trip. It would be very good for you. The thing to do is to make your plans for your lecture tour, but elections
It will be a good idea to get well rested up. for the meetings when you stand [illegible] you need rest. Train yourself up a bit [illegible] as in autumn as in June (general Election?) with [illegible] a bit.

When the by-elections are over, it would be well to take a trip abroad. I must see you before you go abroad.

Re elections — I am anticipating a very close shave people change their minds. If you keep things on a high plane we can do a noble and clean act.

I will be surprised if not (Re by-elections) — This is a small affair. It has a bearing I don't know what Bennett is going to do. The Conservatives have made a hash of things

I asked when do you think the General Elections will come? Sir W. replied. They will come in the Spring — don't anticipate — session of Parliament probably in December — I hardly what I can do my best.

Re Cleverly out. — There is a list of things you don't want.

I spoke about help in campaign
Sir W. said. Re subjects in the campaign. You know what to say the farmers and the labour men and generally in the country Speak particularly — we want prosperity — Unemployment & the kingdom and we want work. You know about work in days gone by keep up our policy. Show them how to live, to train and unite forward farmers.

We want high ideas and high principles. I don't care what they say against you. You are strong now throughout Canada.

Keep it back until the French — New Brunswick — food-mill of knowing keep. Shocking of the Celtic over the Celt. Sir Wilfrid said. It is very tiresome — risen up? Imagination. It takes it out of you the returns are not worth the time and energy. It is a pleasure.

Gladstone is a splendid brain.

Oxford is wonderful. He writes about the campaign — hadn't seen him just now

Re Europe. I'm afraid of it myself. I want it over our boys [illegible] ones. I had enough of that. I was sufficient. We must stand by our young men — war is criminal. If there is a European war England must call on Canada. It is a pity. It is not our war, and the last war was not ours. What did we benefit? Nothing but sorrow. Then came prohibition — with them burglars, etc. but wants peace. Au revoir. I must see you again. I envy Cathy it you — must be cold to here England. Give her my love. Sorry she is so poorly. her for a good long [illegible]

I must tell him you asked for him — again — au revoir

Mother

Willie - the mother & I thought I would come again, so glad to see you so much better, as soon as Mrs Weidle was going, (I said you must come again. Mother said she would. I said Mrs Weidle will be here tomorrow). I was so glad to see Joan I said she looks well - She looking very bonnie" I feel very comfortable, happy & see you better. I asked if she had seen the lawyers. Willie said she hadn't been here as he was - She talks to him.. I spoke of Jessie - She said I saw Jessie today. I said did she recall anything. Willie said it is the anniversary of her birthday. It was 58 years ago last 4th of June in my memory how many changes there have been in that time. I remember your birthday. I cannot think of you as a baby of 60. I asked if I was a fat or an 8 months child - Mother said 8 months - 8 months child'. I said was I born with a caul, Mother said yes and they took it off properly from the child as over your face, that is why you have been prosperous and successful, when it is drawn upwards that is the result. - I said it was what the aunt Sallie had done for us. The Granny do. She replied You had a special advantage, a caul is significant of one thing as another depending on the way it is taken off. if it is raised up it leads to prosperity and success, if downward it affects your future in that way — I asked Mother if she was able to psychize, & foretell. She said she had had such experiences in that, it belonged to the higher spirits, I have never studied the laws of spirit attraction - (I assured she felt. It was the province of Christ when advancing I spoke of the little letters - and she said, it is believed, Sallie says it is a bit of a mistake, it takes so long spelling out the words, we don't take always to take so long - or require so much mediumship - but we are always glad to see you - talk with you. I spoke about sermons. Mother said I send you visions when I am able. If I give you something to think about -, I said can you read mind. I wrote - Mother said, if it is interesting I can read it. I am so glad to talk to you. I said do you see what I have on the letter - Mother said it is any flowers - it is a dear little picture - Mrs Weidle then spoke of leaving it, with flowers sent by Ethel. Mother said smile she longs to come and help Ella, "May dear God bless my son and take care of him." - Mrs Weidle spoke of my deserving much, I spoke of her, & Mother said Mrs Weidle deserves every thing good that comes to you — Mother promised she would come again - Then said good by.

I was saying. I mentioned the lawyers had come. I wanted to talk to them about the missing letter - that worried me last summer, - then to my amazement. General Grant came - as before:

Willie - the mother. I thought I would come again, so glad to see you so much better, as come here whilst mother going, (I said you must come again. mother said she would. I said mary would still be here tomorrow). I was so glad to see poor Fred she looks well - looking very bonnie. I feel very comfortable, happy since seeing your letter. I asked if she had seen the lawyers. mother said she hadn't been in his office - She talks to him.. I spoke of Jessie. She said I saw Jessie today. I said did she recall anything. mother said it is the anniversary of her birthday. It was 58 years ago last. it is fresh in my memory how many changes there have been in that time. I remember your birthday. I cannot think of you as a child of 60. I asked if I was a fat or an 8 months child. mother said 8 months. 8 months child'. I said was I born with a caul, mother said yes and they took it off directly from the child's face over your face, that is why you have been prosperous and successful, when it is drawn upwards that is the result. - I said it was what the old folks had done for us. the Granny &c. She replied you had a special advantage, a caul too is significant of one thing as another depending on the way it is taken off. if it is raised it leads to prosperity and success, if downward it affects your future in that way — I asked mother if she was able to foretell, to foresee. She said she had such experience in that. it belonged to the higher spirits, I have never studied the laws of spirit attraction - (I assured she felt. It was the province of those more advanced I spoke of the little tables - and she said, it is delicious, follow says it is a link of a miniature. it takes so long spelling out the words. We don't like always to take so long - or require so much reading - but we are always glad to see you - talk with you. I spoke about services. mother said I send you mission when I am able. It pains you something to think about. I said can you read aloud. I cried - mother said, if it is unfavourable I can read it. I am so glad to talk to you. I said do you see what I have on the letter - mother said it is my photo - it is a dear little picture - mary would like a copy of having it, with flowers near it. mother said I wish she lived to come and help her, "May dear God bless my son and take care of him". - mary touched upon my deceased uncle, I spoke of her, & mother said she would so deserve every thing good that comes to you - mother promised she would come again - then said good bye.

I was saying. I mentioned all hopes will come, I wanted to thank them about. the evening letter - that aroused me last sunday. - then to my amazement. General Booth came - as before:

son of U. S. Grant
Ulysses S. Grant

Divorce — well I declare

This is Grant. — I said General Grant — he said Yes, (son of Ulysses S. Grant — (spoke very clearly & distinct throughout) I want to thank you for your cordial welcome to my daughter and the many pleasant interviews with her — You understand — I hardly know what to say to embrace your wonderful kindness over her

She got that letter but she has forgotten. (I spoke of her awful trials, & he said, I feel very sorry for her. My point in coming today is just to say that any correspondence the letter, in a quiet way without offensive, to make that a point, for one might elect a word that would be offensive to some one else

I spoke of the press cards he had (thinking it was the President pencil of the United War. — and he said "we did as well as we were able to... There is so much both of the scenes. I felt so sorry for the men, sorry for much that I did. — for the men who had to carry out my orders. War is a terrible thing; it makes man a savage, makes a man drink to forget some of the things he has seen or done. I spoke about his journey he had there — many remember — fearless the General Grant said. I was a little hard with the South, was hasty with the South. It is given the way they are treating the negroes today, they are unlucky for the end of the negroes. We used to call them beasts and wenches, now they are spoken of as "ladies and gentlemen". The world is to blame for that. If Lincoln had lived he would have given them a code, he would have set apart as a place of their own, where they could have left to themselves. I know the Southern people were wrong in their actions. I had to go through with it —

I referred to reference to Julia Grant, & said, She is in Europe. And Grant said — I would rather she should stay there, I said something about her trials & sorrows. — he said I don't want anything said one way or the other — no publicity with talk. He mentioned to say if you don't correspond, it is just as well. I don't want your name brought in in any way. She has had a hard struggle. People know and they can help — & you know the family. Let them do a little I don't like imposition. Let every body pull his shoulder to the wheel. with her declining, talking, wanting the world to do and do something and show something

I asked if it was General Grant — (Grant Fellow or Fellow) why this is the Fellow. I spoke of his father — he said. He was one grand man far superior to me in thought and actions. I asked if he had

My point in coming today is just to say the less correspondence the better, & in a quiet way absolutely, to make that a point, for one might slip a word that would be offensive to some one else

I spoke of his great career in war & thinking it over the President general of the Civil War. – and he said "we did as well as we were able to... There is so much back of the scenes. any message I could give or send. He refused no message. I don't want you to carry any message. I am so afraid that something will drop. I don't want your name mentioned — She is able — She understands. I thought I would come to see you today. I want you to remember you have a friend in the Grants — In your campaign be a soldier, be a hero, be a diplomat, no matter what they say, You brain there, double anything upon your better judgment. Your strong-hold is courage. Stronghold is courage. I know full well that you have got it — keep well, and carry your people with you — with a smile and a welcome hand. They will die for a smile. God bless you. Remember you have a friend in the Grants.

I was talking to Mrs Grant of this when the door said

I beg pardon sir. In this campaign of yours, keep off the border line, don't say anything re the US. Not-it is the only thing that would hurt you I don't mention names. There are a great many Englishy Canadians will say nothing for the United States, they are against the US. You be for Canada - Stand by your own country say what you are doing you are doing for Canada — There is great antagonism amongst many of your English Canadians, they don't like the US. Foster Your post is a coin - which by this side is coin. Side a coin is the French and Ontario - You'll win it, good-by e.

to get in contact with each

I know little about the Scientific. So many cars - only religion

I found only one religion - your conscience is your God -

- dictates - it leads you to do the right. Such is the greatest good we can wish. I made mistakes, many of them, but ready to do good for humanity - and I am able to help humanity, and the boys I loved so well.

Mrs Patterson — answered Father Patterson

How are you, glad to see you, how is Sadbury - such children

I don't see them often - keep an eye on them. There is none I care to be with as much as my mother. Glad to see you look so well,

I told Burgess. He wanted to have a word with him

(Mr Sadbury), just as well to let him alone. You know, Joan, he never liked to be driven. Glad to see him happy

My mother (was Mc) I knock at her door - always step every night - try to see the children - always rob.

(the night is shady still)

I come to see Joan every night and day; and across on mother's door I may often I wonder whether those knocks are true hearted.

My dear Joan, there are so many mistakes we make in the world. It is too sad — be kind — too bad - Let's me

Joan said I miss you now Joan How can you? I very fond of you

no. I meant so kind to you. You were great for remembering the drinks — I often wish conditions were better understood with my boy — lack of understanding. There is no excuse for me. My boy was like me. One of us ought to have been kind to the other — poor [illegible] boy.

It'll all seem all — give my love to Godfrey. Has he heard from mother lately? — no she doesn't write? Has [illegible] that of? I must impress her to write him.

Do not bother what I do — make lots of [illegible] occasions — not often — see Peter. All busy in their little way. I think each and every one willing to help each other. I feel mother ought to write. I am glad — She ought to write. Let by gones be by gones — and turn over a new leaf. and forget the past.

Leonard Gillespie (from London)

I was here sometime ago. I was on the cruiser when I thought I would come and see how you were getting along. Good morning. How is the world using you. (regretted omission) I remember many a on the good old days. See them once in a while — there are millions over here — a wonderful place. Glad to see you looking so well. I would like want to come again to the earth

Nancy: mother dear. I love you & her king & miss wizard. and papa - and tell him I found my love. I am telling miss darling a lot. You were going to give me a kiss — just a sound. I touched you — I am have me all scared (Joan) I sat on your lap (Joan felt her) - Brother is well. Her feathers are well. How is my baby sister? Molly. I love her mother (from Joan) Do you see Bozo? Bozo's tail is on one side — because it crooked when it was a tiny thing those it, and kept it that way. I think that is cruel — there are lots of dogs here — there are monkeys and cats and puppies over here, and horses.

Her kanga is over here. Your father sees him. We have a dog. Mother, I can't remember — I wondered if yours (your horse named Mayflower) means mine. — did we have a black and tan? Pat moves about Hello Pat. — he heard a whistle — She kept on whistling good night — whistles — (Pat moves around)

Goodwin Gibson. Mrs. Mitchell said. There is someone coming - a Grey —

Goodwin Gibson. Mr Mitchell. I am surprised. I can hardly came and visit you. Your father looks wonderful. (To Joan) How is your good care getting along - very well - This is a welcome to see you.
How is Percival? (Youngest son who was killed in the war)

Isn't it nice to see you. I was glad to see your about with your friends!
It is a beautiful place, so beautiful spot - a lovely place. I enjoy there - grand trees flowers wonderful trees
lunch well, getting along nicely
I came to see how you are keeping. I hope you continue to keep well. Tell Godfrey. I hardly forgotten him (Collins found on I was writing, Godfrey drove up in his car) — Good night — Mrs Mitchell must have to dinner must stay then & Mrs Gibson. (Goodwin Gibson's uncle)
Mr Joan & I came back to Inverness & I found Marion with Mrs Mitchell
Inverness —

(To Joan - You have been here for a long time -
I didn't want to take up his time from others.
Mr King very well, & happy to see you. Joan, I wish I were here on earth so that I could take care of those little children. How is Jodi?
I thought a lot of him - dear boy. Joan. I couldn't sport him spoiled from his bringing. It's here is Jodi? He is wonderful indeed
So nice to see Joan. Joan is a good housekeeper & cooks a good lot, Jodi — always smart and nice I wouldn't want to be a source of trouble I do come and see — I thanked him for it — his college — God will never see him want Joan send Francis to see him next year. I hope that is good night dear, long may all & want I am to have a good long time, lend me children a little hour of his own
good night.

Mrs Mitchell said - There is someone here — he is recovering out-doors a sailor
Comes to your side, his back is to me — he is making a coat.
he died of consumption or something like that has a cough, freckles is curly, has a dark complexion —
Scott Joan a man of 30.

Mrs Mitchell
Father Mitchell — Well Joan. How is my good friend, Mr King & Mrs Mitchell? If it weren't for you I couldn't come at all to talk to my daughter — very well and very happy. Haven't been worried a moment since I came over — Mrs Mitchell and I to about together. I want you to keep well - as we are happy ones here

Godwin Gibson. Mrs. Weidt said. There is someone coming - a

Godwin Gibson. Mr Weir. I am surprised. I can see King came and visit you. Your father looks wonderful. (To Joan) How is your Good care getting along - very well - This is a welcome to see you.
I have seen Percival! (Youngest son who was killed in the war)

Isn't it nice to see you. I was glad to pay about them your family Isn't it a beautiful place, such beautiful spot - a lovely place. I enjoy
there - grand trees flowers wonderful trees
such walks, getting along nicely
I came to see how you are keeping. I hope you continue to keep well. Well Godfrey, I hesitate for words (Godwin points up) I was wondering, Godfrey drove up in his car) — Good night — (Then went over how Godwin went from them to Mrs Gibson. (Godwin Gibson's uncle)
Mrs Joan I came to do to remember I figured how well
Mrs Mrs McWhirter

(Joan - you have been here for a long time -
I didn't want to take up his time from others.
Mrs King, very well, & happy to see you. Joan, I wish I were here on earth so that I could take care of those little children. How is Dad?
I thought a lot of him - dear boy. Joan. I could write about him Spoiled from the beginning. Yes there is father, he is wonderful indeed
So nice to see, Joan. Joan is a good housekeeper & cooks a good lot, what he likes & what he knows each — always smart and nice I wouldn't want to be a source of trouble I do come and see — I wanted him for us — his colors — God will never see him wants Good night dear, long may it & want you to have a good long time, lend a little hand of his own
Good night.

Mrs McWhirter said — There is some one here — he is wearing out-door Walked any announcements. I heard

"Mr Bone" I come last night and gave you instructions how are Willis. Are sleep. No pain. (I told him I had walked at 6. a.m. - he said yes.
He said "I wanted to help you get strong. I come every morning & give you magnetism. I said I am grateful to you.
He replied "Am Do."

Senator Sir George Drummond:
Next I heard a voice "Will my dear boy" - It is Drummond
I asked if I would like to refuse yes. Senator Drummond. He refuses yes. He continued my dear friend. I felt very blessed one we know united a lot of things as we were passing through in not helping up until a few of the years. We must learn about many things. We don't know where & when in their lives. We are doing what we can & for this better in-thing about my dear boy)

He asked how do you feel towards the Government?
I said they had not done much. had had a hard time. He said the Lord help you know since has been something (or words to that effect) it has been a "leaner". I said something about the words one man & believing in many minds. Sir George said "many minds make a wise man" That is the trouble with the United States today. It is too much his own man of thought. I am the big man. Always have regard for the man on the road. You know how being the man on the road is born with 7 senses - called the spiritual 5 senses. It is the

The former has a wonderful mind. The mechanic has a wonderful mind some in the poor man's head is broad. Money has spoiled the narrow mind of the Governments of today, the man at the head of affairs his narrow mind, money has spoiled him, has made him conceited. What wonderful things people do in ignorance? and in self conceit. flattery is death in my estimation.

I was at Jane pottering in this wonderful botanical place, what a beautiful spot. Jane here, a botanical spot surrounded by the company of Gods good angels — the trees — they are magnificent. Jane company here wonderful. The hostess wonderful, is it not marvellous to find a man such a hostess! here would said something of about his not knowing how wonderful I was, but Jane replied "Madam you were nothing about it. It is marvellous how Jane handle your people. Jane manage everything better than any of the Drummonds. The Drummonds go to the wars, get said and die. The Drummonds march gaily off said and die. Jane are a wonderful man. Jane have had the education of Jane most beautiful mother (I mean a more abhorrent word than that - I cannot express charming.) + blessed. Jane have had education + breeding that - here he commenced the facts of my life as one who wanted to enlarge upon matters. — the Drummonds, he said, always "stumbled" — he was clearly trying to give me heart - I said I owned so much to Mr Wilfrid + Lady Lawrence Mr George said - all very true - who was more deserving, Jane were deserving — The whole conversation was very great + beautiful conveying emphasis on the importance of the lives of the humble - mechanic + farmer + what education and money could do for him - to tell him, we wanted to help him to earn a living + to have advantages - that the role of being a true host. Charles Mc Hoyo.

It was Jane we met. He is Chas. Mc Hoyo. I came to Jane before. I am a great admirer of Drummond. He knows Jane name is in the right place. I regret that I had not a longer period of life. Strikers. he knew my feelings re. the war re - has referred to them before then -) He concluded God bless you.

P.M. W. Rogers

This is Rogers: I expressed my delight - &: I thanked him for his help. Mrs Patterson told me of your being here. I had a very pleasant talk with him I flopped over with the expectation of saying 'Good day:' James and I are occupied elsewhere, trying to create an influence among the people, to bring a cloud of witnesses to help to subdue the Ironsides elements - there is a bad attitude - with contention and strife. We are trying to influence the minds of those who are the most arbitrary and contentious to get them to modify, and to refrain from excessive action (Here was the interview) ✱ I said I wish he would do what he could to influence me, help me to further the cause of peace he replied I would feel it presumptuous to try to influence you we know you as a man who honors his word. I am not a politician - following ✱ the world is full of suspicions, & strife, everything is upon tiptoe - we are circulating our bonnes to determine the minds of the people & make them better disposed

His exact words were these " My dear Good friend. Mr King, I would do this personally to make a suggestion, to a man with your life out of your mind - You have lived an upright life, You have had best education and breeding. Your dear blessed mother, has influence & that of others, You were born with and bore a sense of pride and dignity (which alludes to your life) in words & thoughts. It is to ignorance I was referring, to influence them. So as to help the people - everything is love, we must love to be a dominating power over the world, and not - why should the nations not be as it is meant we, they - they just come with the world is so upset. It is due to jealousy and greed anger &c -

I spoke of Mrs Rogers & visit - told him who she was. - he said he had not known the Wedding was here - we spoke of Stead. Was desirous to have him come

I then spoke of the Bible, & Mrs Rogers said!

I would not devote much time to reading of psychical matters It means a great load on the shoulders, and the books carry with them is a time when you must be free, I would collect them up and read on more he must to fit you for which you were formed (?) to make your life and your mind on one certain channel and that is Government. (The word came to me with deep conviction - Scripturism and personal.) We do not wish anything to interfere with or interrupt you - or upset your ideas all we want you to know - is that he are here - not what ~~you would be interested~~. we interest about you, ~~what you need to know more~~. You are in the mind (or hands) of the public, sitting on the left-hand one side, and on the right on the other - ~~on matters~~ the Church of Religion: and ~~yet~~ these matters we shall keep them for a while and work in the channels from which help can come from you & others ~~he answered~~ ~~with faith~~ your guidance, and of love, our highest ambition is to see your country prospering and for the young (nation.) Sir Wilfrid said "well done" - he want you to work from the shoulder, and look to the hem of the garment of Canadian soil. They must have work, they must produce, and earn a living (not have to be supplied by and dependent upon the State.)

I spoke about visions. and asked the lawyers if he would condemn to send them to me - he said Sir Wilfrid Rushes his head. & says "Give him confession (instead) I have great respect for Sir Wilfrid I was with an orator, I was a thinker. You have had broad experience in political matters. I love the people, do all you can to help them, put more to them. Even when one most antagonistic first take up a fight against them and be their best friend. You know you can catch more (flies) with sugar than with salt — I'll be back in a moment. — There was a pause here and the lawyers returned (evidently it was to be called the next topic) when he came in said

" You are going to Europe for a little stay, I do you will have a great opportunities, take all the good for thought you can — Psychic matters will help - Start minds with the purpose of picking up ideas. You need it. (I questioned the lawyers about the mention of the left & the democratic Party - Haven in reply to this he said You must be - work over lay your powers - much good men abroad, You will ~~be~~ receive a cordial welcome, they will receive you with open arms.

(Here it was we discussed W. J. Stead & were friends)

God bless you now and always — I had as end read in a moment for Godfrey. - he had come back & said

Tell the Vallieres I have for them the golden headed (?) & good (Saviour headed) little boy, tell them not to worry, that God is everywhere and watch them and the good lady — I thank you for the results of this road - You understand - the ~~result~~ of the road. the two saloons. God is with them

Lady L. said :- we don't want - her King's mind absorbed [illegible] his. we want to get on [illegible] his work. I want to help. Sir Wilfrid will help you in political matters - Do not let your mind get much burdened with this and neglect matters - you cannot carry [illegible] burdens on the one [illegible] shoulders. I think that is a wise judgment

It is nice to see you home packed up well - I want you to keep well for good - for with an alteration of your work - this will help when your work [illegible]. I [illegible] would tell you what (you) D). thought - You know I always [illegible] my mind [illegible] my voice

I said something of my gratitude - also regretting I had not [illegible] more advantage of my opportunity - to Mrs Sir W. - Lady L. Lady Laurier said she both knew the kindness of your motive (or attention) I always said you were helpful - you were so courteous - not forward and pushing like some people are - you know - I was always very entertained. Even with Mary, I didn't want her only when I sent for her - I spoke of her personality - Lady L. said You were deserving of everything left you and more — her dress was admirable - he was fond of Sir Wilfrid he knew you were a strong arm for Sir Wilfrid I think we were in Ottawa, and some of the old pioneers I might [illegible] were ones in the [illegible] when you would [illegible] your chair [illegible] I [illegible] of Sir W. helping - Lady L. said Sir Wilfrid is trying hard. for thought of him as grandfathers

Hello said smiling person of mystery, and then she spoke of "sister Jen" and asked how she was. I told her of her birthday &, I asked what she thought of me she said "She is not very strong" I spoke of losing a under or two and she said, I wouldn't say anything about the medium business here (She did not give me cause for alarm, spoke rather of her past worry & her confusion). She said then there are the boys. – and something about my being busy helping them – I said & Hello I wanted her to help me all she could she could in spiritual development. told her I thought her spiritual power and influence was very great and I wanted that above all else. – She said thank you dear" and God bless you

Dr Sharp. – Here we are again, well since yesterday. Mrs would be going to town us tonight (Mrs M. spoke of her visit it) I appreciate everything I've now done for her – We're coming again this afternoon – I am bringing in the good class that will stand by you in the campaign – You have a little strength and health – (I spoke of Lord Oppers, Gladstone. I asked to thank them.) Dr Sharp said. I bring your dear friends. I surround them you and them, and they need you every hour. Do as her lungs told you. – You should speak in the heart. don't forget the man on the street, he needs a bite & eat. don't forget him ok

She said the spirit world thinks dreams are visions
Joan told of the vision she had had of crossing ones, as if she had been there.

Mrs Wright told a story of Lady Ellis at Bournemouth, & a silver medal & chain. Her son denied many times to this was, but father was very angry on him and compelled him to do. He wanted to take a medal and chain which belonged to his mother, saying the medal might save her life. His father ridiculed the idea & said it was show poetry - he was a coward that he took it.
One day the ~~bracelet~~ chain was dropped on the dresser of Lady Ellis, ~~suspended from the chain~~. That morning Mrs Ellis said to her husband Ellis is dead - he said how do you know? She replied. I have the chain ~~of gold~~ I saw him but not the medal - the wardrobe was open, the dresser in front of it. The thing came down the wardrobe to the dressing table — the father said "that-nonsense" The mother went to the girls bedroom and said see this chain. Poor brother is dead
In the séance, he came to his mother and said. the chain belonged to mother. She put it on my neck. He was asked. Were you bored once? He said I could not - materialize the medal, I brought you the chain across the channel to Bournemouth and dropped it on the dresser as was done. She told this to her husband. He said if you go to such a place, I will know that person but in foreign confinement He said I was a fossil a — and ought to be put out of this country. That is a true fact. overcast - cold - clear & quite Calm.

Mrs. Wraith :-
- Dear grey clouds about

Martin - Fulford (Mrs Bradshaw - nee Mrs Sheriff) Saith Sapp: Clear
I am very glad to see you. How are you Mrs Wraith - (it right as a little said question) I am all right - and Mrs Watson, how are you. Mother of honey seen Mrs Fulford recently - Mr Price - Sais Mrs very fondest love how sorry I am she has not been feeling well. I feel sorry for Carrie she must get strong. Annie Ellis must come be very better. With mother there is always something coming to upset her - Mrs Wraith said she would like to see her. Mrs Watson said I must you could, she would like to see you, George wife does much anything to do with Spiritualism She is quite afraid of it. She is a Catholic - Joan asked about Mary. Mrs Watson said she was well - I spoke of the Senator coming come and she said fathers is a wonder. I asked if she left off her hearing - she said yes. I asked if she remember Sir Wilfrid's body servants children or Grandmother in Eng - She said Something like dies. Look You here. Mrs King I feel body servants and I had many letters about you. I told her you made a great mistake in Engd & spoke a word between us. Mr Spoke of the Mrs on the boats (that I think was her middling, to which I was invited I spoke of the dress & the comedy at Ottawa. Excelling at Opera. She said I think mother would rather have had you for a son in law than Charlie Watson. She was very found of you. You seemed your good sense. I spoke of Sir Wilfrid's fondness for boys She said I think that was because I was a boy. I always fell-? was a Boy-boy - Thank you so much Mrs King - good night.

( ) before these persons coming were hardly necessary Mrs Wraith herself. She was anxious to call on Mrs Fulford, either one of Brockville. Her daughter-in-law would have been offended Reflections amidst these, which would keep her well

Rev J.T Perkins.

It was very difficult to make out his exact name - I could distinguish so glad - I was - I was - born in - in Berlin - subsequently the name was changed from German to Irish - Dr - I was at Bicester. I am pretty well. (I spoke of his friendship with Palmer & Mordecai) he said. I always felt kindly towards the Rev - I spoke of his kindness to me a long time - he said from early - the little frowzy headed boy. I said from an earlier time than that - he said - You were a handful - something about being the first or one of the first to see me - (I think Annie Chadwick was the first to throw me in her arms. - or it may have been Mary) I spoke of where Father lived then. he said out at - outskirts - by a field - (that was true in those days) out at the Summit - (it was next to Archer Street - I spoke of Father he said same Father is with me - I asked if he remembered Parsons and he said Mark an education that was - I asked if he remembered about the sweets &c, he said the Shows - (I could not make it out, & misapprehended the Shows - I said the Common Play - poor soul, he could not say the words. (The fact that Mr Dickens called the Common Play a Show - is evidence to any mind of the anti-Revival influences at work. - he went on (in a voice which was scarcely heard) the King was a very handsome boy (as one once said that of me) he was a nice boy - Yes. - a good looking boy. I spoke of Father & Mother and he or they said, his parents and brothers & had a great admiration for them. I then asked of the said Adam Clarke - he said Adam Clarke is quite well. I spoke of the early days of his ministry. Brethren and friends &c - he said how nice of them - I then to describe them & called them dear Bros - he tried to call a name - Lect-Governor, Lect-Secretary - (could not think of the name - he thought they were a Dramatic Corps (he didn't see it this or I thought he would, as they had some special connection with more for many years & then) — I asked him (deliberately) if his impressions over there were the same as when joined the Common Play - he said "not at all" — One discovers when you come over here that religion & Consecrated religion is — I said you don't lose faith in God? he said things that were whispered and were never said are in print, all religion is misapprehended. I asked if he ever read the Bible - the reply was well occasionally — Good night.

Father

Good evening — (I accompanied Father Vallon and two friends)

I brought the old gentleman, I will have to excuse him, he is very much interested on this plane of life (that may seem to indicate that as the spirit descends towards earth plane they take on certain impressions as I believe would be different in higher spheres.) I am very grateful for all these hours of communion (conversation) I am happy you are better I want you to keep well, (and) must help you. Mary told me you had a little liver trouble, clean it up and clear it up, and feel fine and you will feel like a young man. Don't let your collar be too tight, it exhausts. You get tired standing — It will depress you for the rest of the day, rub about, come to the points and strikes of the brief. — Dr. will help you, I just wish you will keep with him — (I said I will) about. help you with him about all around (I said I will) me in speaking) Father said I shall certainly. — I shall try to do something — Mother Stella and I are better we are always together — I don't know — Or mother and I have talked — we were always proud of you as a student, as a boy, always proud of you as a premier, the greatest source of love to me you at the front. — (I said I would it (Father and his secretary is) he said. I guess you know the education. You had the brain to carry on I learned how to study more — (I am glad same on the liver trouble a good boy at the university. I spoke about the university. Father said, I liked his speech — Something was said to me in letter to Wells conferences — It takes much out of yourself (I hardly agree) I take. — he must on, As the lawyers said, fold up those writings on psychic matters and get down to business, and start in right away, it is important. We can't serve the masters. Think of the political situation. So right along with your work. — We will help in your work — We want you free — We want Dr. successor is — —

You know. Mrs Vallon, thinking and dwelling on (Father) going before you — (something about this "sacred music" (is all the wrong kind of thing?) he is a business man, a practical man, and (if he knows where he are, you cannot take it from, keep in tune with (or like with thought on political matters (I must have said something about his talking on — for reply came I will try. I don't speak in trance. It takes up your (in Latch) or thought — Something of mental power.

The conversation stopped abruptly and or there came immediately or following:

Arthur:

You take up the subject in the wrong hand. (What you fellows mean is - What does he for the time being - to close these interviews until (your condition is better or work is underway) Your intentions are wonderful we want to see you where you belong; in the mean time I do not so much time to this, you are able to become so enveloped in thoughts (of this) and work for at some points

I said something here about some influences seeking to have their own way, & control me &.

Arthur said. They are not trying to take anything from you. You must go along when you get into the move of thoughts on the questions that are yours, then you go along with it and get the instruction and help you need

I asked about how the spirits of their information & did not read our thoughts; He said. If people were that attuned it would (can only repeat - trying to impress this) spoil an whole thing and feel - of all sorts and kinds and many. It would be a conglomeration of mistakes - - - You can't choose - people advise you in each thing - to best answer left in it has more as it were, passed through Eternal Glory. What I mean to say is, don't worry about us. We'll take care of you, we are better able to care for you, than you are to take care of us.

I asked how it was no one came in the afternoon

Arthur said "There was not a soul here but me. - I said I missed me had been. me always this time. - He replied I'll be away and will come again.

(As I write out this sentence I see more clearly the intention in it all. To take me away from obsession & my work &. - into the stream of thoughts on spiritual matters, so as to help from this to that field of work & effort. I recall me then to say. & bring this to you also as similar & interested what your answer is in that direction perhaps was to still not taking so many interviews (because of the amount of writing & others for some reasons not taking them accounts for no one coming in afternoon. Also my own resentment to any thing which ridicules or belittles sacred things & "Sacred words" I know that expression comes from Father - but as Arthur said, it may be that it became after being with Eternal Glory, (see the true light - when reference to Eternal Glory appears - it could pull any in disposition, & took it up or against the adverse being rendered it was not real - it was this anti-Christ feeling that I sensed & sense, & an effort to divert this matter into, & this exclusion of this thing & person

Sir Wolfgid.

I thought I would come & see you, shall be over you so well. Home is very pleasant & nice weather. It is a pleasure to be here. Lady Jamie and I are so pleased to be with you this evening. You are so lucky to see [illegible] getting on so nicely. (I spoke about his coming & Rudolf did.) Sir W. said I [illegible] a little more. Don't overtax yourself. You know what to say at the different places, and what suits the people (I was inclined to resent this in my feeling as being a purely patronising attitude - attitude of superiority rather than gentleman or Christian as [illegible] Schönstein honest conviction - but I can see what was meant - it was simply worldly advice. common sense attitude) You know what to say. You know your people. Some born educated Londoners - some are uneducated - you know just what to say. I was sure you & Gail and people understand what you say. You never do use language they cannot understand. I am happy to listen - (I said I was sure he would do more, and inspire us. He said I will inspire and send inspirations. You understand that people (show their feelings - or something like that) You can tell when there is a feeling of gratitude and kindness and respect. Sometimes I felt very welcome, at some places I felt an atmosphere chilly (I spoke about Sir W. always telling a good reception - but it was always his voice - & Dorothy he replied I was always treated with courtesy I spoke of Sir John A. He said he was well. They were all very happy. Sir Wolfgid then said: In regard to taking a trip. It is perfectly for you to take this trip. Happy to see you take a trip. I wish I could be there in the flesh to help matters along Change of climate - rough sea going over - but you can be comfortable. (Sir Wolfgid always was a very good sailor or I can't imagine him at sea very much!

I spoke about his statement in press re Sunnyside church or Foreign Money - [illegible] Communion & Portsmouth is more or less out of temper. Sir Wolfgid said he had not seen it - he said you had better take it with you when you go over (something about a little sarcasm - he called on to say. I can say a lot, but I don't like to comment I know how you feel: it is terrible. I know how we suffered in being our boys being slaughtered (or words to that effect)

Something re Bolivia - - - just beginning. He [illegible]. He will be surprised. I don't know why he has gone so very often. It is for effect He has so much money will have to say for it — re article, I spoke of taking up matters of the kind in England, and Sir Wilfrid said "It would be a good thing to offset" Be sure to tell that article with you — don't overlook that — You know that Bennett would use [illegible] a good word for us he will do the best we can to help — & fight for the right.

I said something about feeling used for a change — & — Sir Wilfrid said I know you are cobalt (?) I will do all I can to help you — It is no credit to Mr. Bennett & any one unkind word against you will have to straighten out the expression in the paper as soon as possible (Bring it soon)

Lord Beaverbrook. I am charmed to see you here — charmed to see you here. — It was a pleasure to see & come. Lucy Fulford would advise them calling to me — out of respect for Lady Beaverbrook perhaps? would not investigate. She thought it sacrilegious.

I would like to have come with Sir Wilfrid & Miss Thomson & She is like her mother. She has her mother's talents (am not sure of that last one.) She was a great woman

Best Thanks (see letter from Walter Runciman)

As Mrs Bond Cooper came in (Mrs W. said She had no feeling of any one drowning!

I came in, I thought it would be a good thing to see you here and for a few minutes. (I asked have you seen Mrs Partridge) he replied I'll get her to come. She is very happy — takes it into Boer. he said. has called once in Dawes Square.

I wish you a safe voyage and to come home full of help.

Mrs. Pallison

This is Thomas — Thomas Pallison. I was so glad to come in other night. So glad to see everything all right. So pleased to know and to see that Cooper in his front is interested, he is a little bit nervous about investigating — a little nervous. (I asked if he said him [illegible] was a mad — or [illegible] I said [illegible] I was quite amused to see him taking an interest. [illegible]
I was glad the medicine called to him, if any one else could get him to investigate she could. It is best to let him alone. The boy is all right & to business.

I thanked Mrs Pallison for speaking to her employer. He refused [illegible] him to come and he didn't know the medicine was here.

Regarding Sotheby. Mrs Pallison said "I would love to talk to him" Soon said "He is always talking about Pallison."

Dear Madam. I am charmed to see you here - charmed to see you here. - It was a pleasure to me to come. Lucy Fulford would advise their calling to me - out of respect for Lady Laurier's feelings I would not investigate. She thought it sacrilegious.

I would like to have come with Sir Wilfrid & She is like her mother. She has her mother's talents (am not sure it what they were.) She was a great woman

Best Borden (see letter from Wallis Buckinghouse)

As Mrs Borden came in (Mrs W. said She had no feeling of any one drowning!

I came in, I thought it would be a good thing to see you here and for a few minutes. (I asked how you seen here yesterday) he replied I'll get her to come. She is very happy - then I introduced Rowan. he said. Mrs called once in Laurier House.

I wish you a safe voyage and to come home full of hope.

Mrs. J.G. Fallon

This is Thomas - Thomas Fallon. I was so glad to come in other night. So glad to see everything all right. So pleased to know and to see that Carfrae in his court is interested, he is a little bit nervous about investigating - a little nervous.

I asked if he saw him between me and court - W.F. or said (from the Library)

I was quite amused to see here taking such an interest.

I was glad the medicine called to him, if any one else could get him to investigate she could. It is best to let him alone. The boy is all right & to himself.

I thanked Mrs Fallon for speaking to her lawyer. He refused I wanted him to come and he did not know the medicine was here.

Regarding Godfrey. Mrs Fallon said "I would love to talk to him" Rowan said "He is always talking about Fallon."

Sunny on all right He not lonely. (Joan said I am home some morning.) Mrs Hallerton said "There is no love like a mother's love."

Joan said give my love to Aunt A. & Aunt Sarah. — Wonder if each of her

In thinking I again asked Mrs Hallerton to thank her nurses for Conny. He replied "As it did as happy as you are. His not-one-sided No matter what comes face it — bear up — the world is in such a chaotic condition — It looks as if it will be worse before it gets better. Give Godfrey my fond love.

Mrs spoke about the steps for board as she ascended a sigh & her age. Mrs Hallerton said It wonder she's walking, I didn't walk on the board. I walked inside (Joan said the sound of walking was inside on the stairs and as it is her room not only Joan got perhaps up & down stairs: round the passage in the upper room) the knocking was on the door outside.) We said he was used at the door.

In reply to my question was I able to read our thoughts. Mrs H said my — I don't read minds. I read words You on the board when you are calling — If one did that (would read thoughts!) one would talk on everything

So Joan he said. We have no time or days. This is a spiritual world.

George Bell.

Granny said. Any Mrs Bell — George Bell — Mrs Bell's husband. Do I know Mrs Bell's husband, how are you?. Yes it was. Mrs Bell said: Are you not-sorry to trouble? Mrs Bell would be glad to see you. Mrs Bell must ask about Mrs Bell's son (his wife?) he was getting on. Mrs Bell said. He still paints something & think of — Mrs Bell said something about Mrs Bell being at Bradda Hall. Mrs Bell said. He home is too big. She groaned over

Mrs King. How is it we're one boon old Grand Friends? You pass a hand — I don't know whether (or how) they are going to tell the G.P.R. It seems too sad. Their each make it — what happened with the G.P.R. — the biggest share market England. What strikes the G.P.R. had made upon the G.P.R. crash at all. Professor Alexander

Alexander - Professor - Toronto University. This is the first opportunity I have had for anything of this sort - I took the opportunity. I hope you are flourishing. (I broke this coming upon to Mr Eakin - (a letter from Eakin on my table told a day or two ago and so getting about here would, doubtless accounted for Alexander coming I see — as Mrs Wright's presence also accounted for Mr Wells coming) - Alexander said 'I want to speak to him. I couldn't get my way through. He is feeling a little better. His mind is more at ease, a load of worry is lifted Prof Alexander this form of worry - Your dear wife - it is too bad so young a man had to leave this world. He has two fine sons. In reply to a question from me as to what he was doing etc Prof Alexander said. Many people need our help. We try to impress their minds — ~~some of them~~ try to make them a blank — (it was their if they were taking a wrong course, it was they try to influence their minds to do something else - some how cut-brain cells fail to carry on. Some brain cells are hard to contact with you have (or a remarkable memory, and you retain. Brain get disconnected, all must be well with you (This seemed to be said to encourage me, in face of words at times I despair - namely, his power to retain memory weakening etc. — I am hoping to believe it is only because I have not been keeping on the more of thought reflection it must which my mind should be filled - I am sure all are quite right in advising me to drop Spiritualism for a time at least, he was really tired and overtaxed my energies - made me forget, all this worldly etc.

Ross - Sir George.

Mr Ames came Ross - I asked Sir George Ross - answer yes. What in the world are you up to now? I asked how he was. He replied. I am trying to see how things are going on. This (amount.) is wonderful - I spoke about what had happened in Toronto - Laurier. - Sir George said. He was wonderful - It was a grand success. I asked did you help? He replied, we all put our shoulders to the wheel to help dear old Laurier. - I said I was speaking of the Elections. Sir George Ross said 'I was speaking about the tercentennial. It was a wonderful success we followed on — I learned from your father you are going abroad, a nice idea, You are (have) just for a holiday — wonderful what impressions you must get — everything will come right in time I asked if he was quite well - he replied there is no illness here - no boils or aches here - good night.

Nancy.

It was quite clear they had come. So I said Hello Nancy. She was sitting & She said. Isn't that nice! Mother sent them home. I was playing all day with the kiddies. They know how to write I spoke about the flute — Nancy said she learning it — trying. She then began to whistle like the flute — she then gave some notes. I asked for one. She said she gave it & pretended Mother didn't tell it unless there was company. Good night Mr King — then she began blowing Joan — and depart.

Mr Parker

Good evening Mr King. — Parker — I came to say bon voyage. Good [illegible] hers Valentine and hers wreath, how are you feeling tonight? I said to Mr Parker, I marked he would come with us to the voyage. He replied I'll be with you and the [illegible] — I did not understand what he meant & he replied the Good Old Gallipoli. I looked what he was referring to, he said I am talking about the Nurse, — I mean Nicol. Said I had thought of taking Pickering instead & secretary. (I had been thinking of this during the morning.) Mrs K. said You can't take everyone; take him how you can ask the most out of. Mrs Parker of the secretary. We said that was more in the way of Officers. Mr Kirk said, as it was to take I'll leave it to your best judgement. (When I looked at night with Joan and Godfrey as this they both said they thought Nicol would be the better of the two - most helpful in looking after me & leaving me free. Had thought about - declaring them - & looking up trains etc - I think they overrate.) It was interesting how he should have brought up this phase as it was the one I was thinking of in the morning. It shows they can read one's thoughts for [illegible] of it & no one! — I spoke of Miss Parker. Mrs K. said was well - I spoke about this trip & he said it was good for me & to - Enjoy yourself except it — Mr. Kirk agreed. I wanted him [illegible] along. (?!) don't be discouraged, Mrs. K. to [illegible] matters. You can do it If you want anything, just ask me. Now be careful of yourself and don't overdo; don't allow yourself to be upset or annoyed — there are all kinds of people and changes — God bless you and keep you.

Mr Parker. I'll have to break away, I am not going to say goodbye. I am going to say hope you will be with my wife & come back again. (This was said in whisper) Joan and [illegible] I said. We hope you will come and see us. Then Joan said I will be selling with Mrs Parker's wreath soon — Now Mr King, Keep well don't allow your nerves to disturb. You'll feel well & with much rest. Good to Mr Parker — To mother there. Best so I can say goodbye to her

There was silence a moment or two. Then Dr Abbey said "Wait a minute"

Mrs Darbishire - Then a voice said very quietly Well Mrs Darbishire
(I blessed her for her kindness - afterwards how glad I was to see her) Wait here for my return -
I sent you a very hopeful text across the table, and another waiter be called before you come - the text will do you good
I do feel as on the cards blame lies for you - - - waiter will be called coming back. - (It was 10.10 at this point and nothing more was said. It was during the last week had been spoken
No doubt Dr Clark had other engagements & keep. I felt disappointed at not having a word of 'Godly' walk following (our conversation was abruptly - not a word of 'real Godly' walk ensues. - No doubt due to a retrospective feeling. I felt as if forces were somewhat antagonis-tic. It was not ab all the splendid ending of the morning.
I have written elsewhere my feelings, but on meeting up the record today, I want to confess I feel perhaps I was a little unjust in misjudging the motive or the desire of some other things said all I believe was meant - in kindness, and the advice was sound.

Verses have 3 meanings.
We are about Samson's bad earthly meaning
It means that his influence is powerful and strong
That his name continues to charm the minds of men
He will be mentioned in Sunday's sermons.

The version of the bad things has the other meanings
The one is not to stay too long in bed at one time, also to take meals at the right time.
The other is to do right or never pass most expectations of what others are doing or saying
Good night

* Where are we to pray for us for strength & right throughout each day: week & month
Strength will begin to pass from day to day
There will be some one to guide you or pass away day and night returning to CO
The love of God, the many will shew
Good night

Wednesday. Kingsmere, May 8: 1940.

This morning I wakened about 4.40. Walked out and saw the light of the Crescent shining on the horizon - it was still night - but the Northland wakened at the same time, he was coughing a bit, evidently missed his hotbath. I might have been cold, so I put him in one of the arm chairs with a comforter around him. Went back to bed - left at 6.30 - crossed left about a quarter to nine. When Avery brought me a cup of tea I opened the blinds, the sun poured in, a cool bright spring day though cold. After dressing I sang Psalm 121 "Old Hundred" - taking my own morning exercises, I took the path over a wall past the barn & the road across the moor. I walked past the big pine tree, through which one can always hear the wind blowing, as far as the big rock & which still had 2 I used to go before the martins & swallows came back year. I felt it to you for me. Then I prayed & he as faithful and pure as Pat & turned & walked back to meet him. He met at the pine tree. I recalled as I prayed that it was Mothers Day and prayed for Mothers & for all to come to Christ & be with especially me. I thought of Mothers flowers. In the dressing I had thought of the beautiful perfection of Mothers & Father which mine had had enough & met to me & which I opened up on Sunday night. - thought of hanging them in the cottage & some rooms. - their dear faces were much before me. On coming back from the pine tree, I picked up the Pat & carried him in my arms like the good Shepherd did the lost sheep - tho' I said to him, he was never lost, he was always found & him. I felt his tiny weight would be too much of a task on his little heart. - he finished from the white path at the barn & the house all right. We then had our breakfast together (the cook included, & after one before I read the 107th Psalm & the Bible. Some more has arrived & Toy papers marked to Brandon coming from Ste Agathe at 11. I was wondering how I would manage if Joan & Godfrey might arrive at that time, or I marked & meet him at the door. But not him however. He little knows or always how beautiful & helpful. — Before waking I had been dreaming of Mr L. Borden. Of being at some party & he was home at his house, at the close of his retirement, he was speaking in a kind way to different persons. I was going to speak & then of the effect of the addresses & thought of what he had said about - and of finishing royally. - but could not think of their names. - I found the Mr Eaton & bits of pasteboard & had written letters on in my pocket book & stopping away. In morning ran a bath - found as good as I remember, I thought of the address name. Yesterday I had talked with Mr B. Burrill that We were both in a sort of concentration camp - with the names were much in my mind on Sunday reading. - I read the 5th Book of Daniel. - Before going out - & walk with Dod, I had asked Mary to undo the box I had brought from Williamsburg, & after breakfast & before reading I placed the little glass candlestick which I had brought there, on the side board. (taking them from the table) over the mall. When I began to read, my eyes fell immediately on the words "over against the candlesticks upon the pleasant of the walls of the king's palace" - those candlesticks are reproductions of those of the kings palace as reproduced at Williamsburg. - I had noticed in reading past books that this was the summary of an audience with King George III in 1778. & of asking the King. Sir W. & Mrs Eliz -abeth on they were leaving England & come to Canada. I was sure the chapter was significant - and placed reading data upon the words above quoted. Then came the words "Wise is a man in thy kingdom, in whom is the Spirit of the holy gods: and in the days of thy father light and understanding & wisdom, like the wisdom of the gods, was found in him" — whom the King N. — thy father the king, I say, thy father, made the mention of it at — for counsel as an excellent Spirit, and knowledge & understanding interpretation of dreams, & showing of hard sentences, & dissolving of doubts were found in the same Daniel" — — — . Also the Splendid letter " let thy gifts be to thyself, & give thy rewards to another: yet will I read the writing unto the king, and make known to him the interpretation " - the other passages as they lie before me read last - his throne - heart "lifted up" mind hardened in "pride" wherein they behaved unto G.D. heart was humbled, lifted up thyself against the Lord of heaven. Lord thou. thou - wast, thou - - & child

"see not - nor hear, nor know ye " — learned & the wise Priest rulers in the kingdom. I had just finished the reading of the chapter, when I heard voices at the door - the car had arrived. I went to the door & found Joan & Lord Ross. Joan & Ray & little Mary as Dawn were there all little Pet. came out & stood on the mat in front of the door to extend a welcome to all. - to celebrate of the King's birthday. Joan had some flowers (Chrysanthemums) & sweet peas & asters & with in her hand came in & placed them in a vase. As I had been reading aloud, I placed my hands on the little book, & thoughts of the verses - the King - and to be weary.
Joan sent me a telegram last Thursday from Yorktown, I had in the letter spoken beautiful description some one yesterday. She asked was I "happy" in

She spoke I believed my heart on a little book "Kaffirs" by William Ayon Phillips which I had brought out to Kimberley last night. I brought it out & believe it is on the market to-day. — I then went up stairs & sat down to broadcast, for was putting the record that was borrowed at 11. I had turned off the radio, & was wondering if I should not turn it off, but something told me not to, & I waited for you to come in. It was a "darkey" prayer service. — most beautiful singing, & the words came thro. "Jesus is calling for you. Tenderly calling today. Heavenly Father are here — — tenderly calling. It was the most amazing experience I have ever had, just as if Christ himself were calling — speaking so tenderly to me. I must close as the reading closes now & as instant to the singing. To continue. You shall understand by and by — understand by and by. — Then something about the lighthouse shining. ("I think of the lights of the horizon — the Capital.") I prayed very earnestly for the closest communion with God & to be kept faithful & true to my purpose. — The purpose of my life (see letter to Mr. A. written yesterday) letter to the President — recommend to him — I trust what is so righteous & true, & the union of Church & State of the King & the King may follow. I say, the Father etc — meet the conviction referred to — It clearly means that I have to stand solemnly before the present King and intercept God's will to him — I am sure this whole morning was on a Wednesday, letting me know about the presence of Christ, of his existence, surround of personality. The happiness of the moment was supreme — a perfect peace on the door. The quiet morning, the servants leaving it on the little step. The pure tones of the voice, the flowers. Kissed it & kissed it & prayed. All the sacred joys of home & love. I recalled how on one Wednesday in October, Wednesday, I had four letters & four bouquets, meaning home sweet home. I was prepared & would it was a deep spiritual experience — one I pray God I may be faithful to. I still cannot interpret my own dream this Sabbath morning, of papers in stream & in a morning. Will it become perplexed & to make every moment. & keep my high calling sure & the fear & sacrifice & everything else & it. I pray to be like Daniel, in my calling as Prime Minister at the King's Court. May he help me & keep me faithful to my God — may I be true to the great purpose of my life. I in this little book have found the Salvation of my own Spirit, & the gift & Revelation & others. & my Country & Sovereign & so for as it can be given to one man & he this instrument & days to this & help make prevail the Kingdom & God on earth.

Sir Olwen today :

K Thank you so much for coming Sir Olwen.
Thank you for the message you sent to Norah.

A. She sent me a beautiful message back
I am right beside you darling.

K Tell me what you think I should know

There is no death
Life goes on here
Life is fuller here than on earth
Life is everlasting
Life is God given for development of our souls.
Our souls can grow to be like God himself
God is love
God is eternal
God wants you to do a special work
He will reveal it to you
Good night

K Could you tell us the meaning of the dream or vision ?
And the morning ?

Yes

K Who

Mergers

Mergers :

The breeder symbolizes the path of life
The snake symbolizes the secret influences
The voice you heard was the call to action
The coming down & coming up means that you would respond to the call
The knife projections mean that you would be able to work with the earth

K. What was the significance of Beersheba then ?

The name stands for the sleeping which means that you have a better role to play
It must be a great role in international affairs
The feather being muddy symbolizes uncertainty in events
The snake being smooth symbolizes the absence of obstacles
The ladder symbolizes the attractions of life
The pleasant words symbolize peace of spirit and harmony

Father! - I am from all here
Let Lord Lundsmuir speak
Lord Lundsmuir: The criticism I am made of my book is correct
K. It is easy to criticise - there is much that is excellent.
The best critics are the simple ones
Let your mother speak
Mother: - Come to Joan and Jan
The book is much too learned for me.
Jan Father did better than that
Let Father speak
Father: John Buchan is a great man, he has a powerful intellect and a great soul,
He is a true friend of yours,
He is helping you all he can
Let Edmund Grey speak
Lord Grey: I thank Jan for what I heard you say
K. I have always thought more of Jan than of any man in public life
I thank Jan for saying that -
God gave me many gifts
He has given Jan many also
K. I am afraid I am not touching much on of them
Jan are very tired
Let Mary speak
Mary: - Well, what you need is a rest
Let others do the hack work
Go to bed early. Get up early Exercise all you can, and when tired
Good night
K. Will someone tell me many of dream - black sheep, valerian & cat with kittens
Mr. - Mrs? - Meyers
Mr Meyers: The black cat is a symbol for a writer who is coming to see Jan
The valerian means that will be ill
The cat & the kittens stand for a house full of people
They will be like a brood of blind souls
None of them know, what will happen & remember or their commitments.
The moon is going to cast another Jan
England will get the best from now on Germany will lose all the less men
Good night

Ringmore. Oct 27. 40.

Yesterday I met Mrs Mackenzie Cornish, the novelist whose books I had been playing in a shelf at the Lynmouth Library. She came to Ringmore to consult a specialist on the [illegible] being augmented by her illness. I had spoken for her books, when she spoke in Hollywood a few weeks ago. Mrs Hobbs, wife of Air Marshall Hobbs, invited me to lunch yesterday. I at first declined, as I also said I declined. After on reflection thought I ought to accept as a public duty, as well as a great personal pleasure. Mrs Cornish looks wonderfully improved by this Canadian residence and abstinence. So natural in appearance, not blonde, young-faced, beautiful, a fine mind. I commenced with her with Coal Tar Soap until Mrs Hobbs kindly let me her own Christian name & Mrs Cornish & Mrs Hobbs will live in love of her sister, killed a few days ago & Mrs Cornish is overcome in England. After lunch she came into the Cornish Library with Mrs Hobbs, Mrs Cornish & myself. (other ladies were left in drawing room. Mrs H. - Mrs H. - Mrs H - (wife of our Air Attaché at Washington) She asked me for my autograph. Saying it was obviously one of the books she had been reading the other was Anton Lang. (the Burgomeister in the play at Oberammergau) I told her of having received Lang's photograph & letter of which must be Christ. I must ask in an album of pictures of Public Ships. Later when lunch was over. I had returned to drawing room. I must look at the door of the morning room, was sent in with her Mrs Cornish & Mrs H - to come in. We looked into the drawing room, then went to the Library where she gave me her autograph in my guest book. She was really taken with the painting of Mrs Cornish remarking of how like her mother - how wonderful a child. I said she would have liked mother & mother would have liked her. Later we went into the dining room, looking around I showed her the bay with Sidmouth & Mrs Simpson's flowers & pointed out the moment coming on the air. We talked of the French & English. She said it brought the tears to her eyes. Her mother was French. Her father English. As we went down stairs later she said she had been so glad & how proud that in my house. - In the drawing room, I showed her the [illegible] from Christ & told of the letters I had had from girls in England in answer to my remark, as to coming & burning the Public Library books. She said "Add mine & the murders". I felt there was a very real sympathy between us. evident from the moment [illegible]

as we went by where he was. She took my hand & we gently walked as children might in walking together. She is staying one night, going to Ross in the morning at the Bonifacio, & then to Montreal. She was very pleased to meet Mr. who was very polite. I really felt he might not lost out the day. - I had said & this that if I could be as faithful & my work as Mr had been & am, it was all I could wish or pray for. She had asked me about the treatment of them at this great ab. mon 17. She thought some treatments proved mirrors but for a while & quite death takes on. (This was a Buddhist) She was quite sweet & natural during the servants who passed on the Channel Boat but, & to the wounded soldier men who I called out & met her. - Altogether it was a very memorable and happy meeting. It has left an impression, which I felt must be remembered and guarded.

During the Jan brought out a Kingsmere Priestley 'Walks on Cobb Hill.' She had obtained it from the library, looking for something for us. We read a note of it together after dinner & before she left - & I carried the reading for just a time after & again before going to bed. I was enormously taken with the book. It confirmed my own views about dreams. - predictions, telepathies &c - It did not make the mention of warnings or guidance which I often feel. It brought out strongly Jung's Inner Consciousness &c, the Strong or 'Real Connection' that does. But I believe in the reality of the world of unseen Spirit, of which we get glimpses in art music, in visions, inspirations &c. - Now here is the singular thing. before going to sleep - the last page of which I finished "Eyes" before closing my book read the following by Hilaire Belloc "Whilst most Hollywood producers and directors, he had an epic delusion about the future" - during the night I had a vivid dream. (This, as the Dreading will [illegible] discuss his chapter on dreams) I seemed to be travelling somewhere, & at each turn towards the end to get back, made a reach the destination I wanted & frustrated. - I recall getting on a train, & being taken to what appeared like the Colorado canyon, I prospect off the train, which went with other passengers right up over the hills, & walked back to what seemed Rome in the direction of Hamilton, Ont. - I came into a large underground establishment & asked him - I was told soon - for a while, then seemed to be a part of my estate at Kingsmere. Some people had broken down & my being away & had made a large tourist pleasure resort place of it - a sort of place for going in and out of tunnels on sleds &c. I then [illegible] of it & threatened [illegible] any action against them, the more social an "ordinance" had been passed which [illegible] the night. I knew it [illegible] nothing. I thought Nichol (at the [illegible]) must have exhausted, in [illegible] my interests) - the two things that stood out were first 'getting on the wrong track' so the words came then. and [illegible] others taking possession of my studio for a play ground [illegible] I turned & went to [illegible] in connection with [illegible] the time we met in the Newgate, turned the train, and then stopped the night at the clergyman, (Rev. [illegible]) [illegible] me returned to my home on Bayview St. The nightmare part had its association with the [illegible]. When I [illegible] of this morning to tell Nichol, I saw Nichol in the [illegible] he [illegible] been a hand when the whole picture stopped once. And did not [illegible] [illegible] many months. (The two incidents & [illegible] production of noise about the dress as I told them to.) I looked on the way to the hall at the proclamation. stopped & myself (I had thrown in [illegible] on a [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible]) - thinking of it as an ordinary [illegible] from room I found room handwriting lost. She had let it fall in that room - all these little signs, seemed to the whispering voices of the dream - which seemed [illegible] to me in the [illegible] not of a prediction or a [illegible] but of a warning. It seemed to mean not to go on the wrong track, by forfeiting the friendship formed yesterday - which (I believe) might easily result if we showed a cowering & shown the like of a very wonderful person - that if I did I would [illegible] on the wrong [illegible] be baffled. [illegible] in my work. - & what is more my whole [illegible] the course of my life, would be changed into a play ground, [illegible] & others for amusement purposes, & my life robbed of its real purpose - [illegible] in consequence of all this. when reading this morning I must [illegible] up this date for today. about it. I saw "Red Cross Hall Wood" on Sunday Sept 29. - or if to say. I am not sure that is the meaning of it all. As I walked with Bob there the field I thought of Wordsworth's [illegible] on the 'Lost-leader', & how exquisite I had been by them. Clearly it is all a warning not to enter into a wrong path, which would lead to [illegible] - change of purpose etc. - I recall at once of dream coming down an iron scraping ladder I seem able & glad to all night. - but down a ladder which [illegible] thought. dwelt [illegible] this morning. shows the influence of real - spiritual - will - in that order, here is the foundation for [illegible] being given me. I will then, I shall remember all thoughts that my life had into wrong paths, & conceal my life more to [illegible] purposes [illegible]

As so often happens when writing is supposed, I had just concluded the previous page & was about to turn over, when after before in page 186 (17 in my number) (line 6 count say 26 (line 13) in here - per today the 26th) I mistakenly read the following "a further confirmation of my fears there arrived with the morning post of Miss Clair" — I recalled, with these words, a page or two previous "Sometimes I comfort myself with the thought that the Gods in their wisdom have decreed that I must do other work"

Downing Street, NOV. 23rd 1940.

Father: Come & all from sad hour.
Let Downing Street

Sir Wilfred: The war is beginning in earnest
Italy is losing & fighting England in Egypt
Germany is losing & fighting England in the Balkans and Roberts.
The French will be annihilated by Sunday
The Germans will help the Germans.
The Japanese will fight China
A kingdom for a horse, said ~~Richard~~ a Great-Scotchman long ago
The modern version is a kingdom for a tank.
The Germans are well supplied with tanks
The English have the better of them in the air
England will win in the end.
Let Gladstone speak

Gladstone:

K. Thank you for coming Mr. Gladstone
I am glad to meet you and have your opinion
The war will last a long time
The English must be supreme in the air and at Sea and on land
The United States must come in eventually
The Japanese will not fight at present
The Russians will keep on fighting for a long time
Good night

Roger Cromwell

K. We are so glad you are with us.
I saw you talking with my brother.
He was grateful for your suggestion re National defence.
George Fullford appreciated the way you spoke to him
The war is coming our way.

K. What do you think - our way - towards Canada? or winning?
Winning - we will fight, we will endure & we will win
Good night

K. Wait a moment, do you think I might trouble & word out, do you see any difficulties where you are?
Certainly. I can see perfectly a long way ahead.
You must be firm at the Skirmish for supremacy & hold on till the end of the war, I can see that clearly.
You must do your part at the peace conference
Your grandfather is here

Grandfather! a long relation have we for?

J. Ever since I left you. - I am trying to take care of your grandson
He is a hard person to manage. He takes after his grandfather.

The war is going to cost many lives
It will be the end of Germany for all time
Germany knows that she is done for
She sees she cannot win in the long run
She knows the United States is determined she must be destroyed.
She must get the hard for the Germ.
She cannot run without oil

J. - She must not.
Not in the Objective
She may take it, but she will not be able to hold it
The Germans are discouraged already at Verdun
The Italians will soon be beaten before long
The French will do the better of them
The Italians have lost heart already
The English will win in Palestine and Egypt.
The British Navy will effect a blockade against Europe
The United States Army will mind the Japanese in check.
The world will be unsettled for a long time

IC How long do you think the war will last? I mean, how long before a peace conference in Europe?
I cannot see an end for another two years.
It may be shorter than that but I cannot see it.
Good night.

IC Krom has helped our work and his peace aims;
That part of your speech was the work of many years
Your Secretary should now see how your time must be divided
It was a fine analysis of the factors

IC. Does the conflict continue where you are?
Yes. There is food and coal here. The fight goes on
The influence you on your spheres & your influence on it over
Your prayers help us. Can ourprayers help you
IC In both absolute harmony?
That happens also
Such spiritual contact we, could comfort you
The hearts turn on Calvary cross and darkness
It turns on Calvary the former, of God and Man of mind
The Cross our sovereign hope Man on earth
Could support

Father – Come & call it
Let Nancy speak
Nancy. Mother dear. Come & see from upstairs, Father & me or Joan in turn accompany.
Long ago I played the flute
Joan Have you come it up?
No but I play the harp now
" I like that better
I like it better too
Father sings when I play certain tunes
He sings old airs
He loves to sing Yeomen and Shropshire,
Mother sings also
She loves to talk about Joan
She is so hobby that Joan hangs on her chair
Can't you mean it always Joan. No not always.
Sometimes at home or when you go out –
Good night
Mrs McCharles!
Come to my daughter on her birthday
Mrs. M. We are so glad to see you again
Joan. I want you to tell me if you are walking over Jock.
Jock is well, and enjoying his new work
Let your father speak
Mr McCharles!
Mrs McCharles. I love you with all my heart
I know that he keeps for telling us all well & you
Mrs McCharles It is a great joy to Mrs McCharles – or so glad you are home
I thank you for coming this
Joan. are you marching up there for the world?
We are all doing all we can to help England win
The fight must be a long and terrible one
" well I know to see the end of it?
God only knows and long it may take
So we keep, mother & I.
Mrs McCharles to all.
Mother: Come to you Joan & Joan Mrs McCharles
Joan Thank you so much
I am glad to see you again

Which one is it you wanted to ask me
K. Was dreaming of this morning's dream or vision.
Was black horses were symbolical of death
I was chasing death away from your house
The country was symbolical of my home
There was no ghosts there
You may you told me to this night was to let you see what you Mother would be from this evening to compare.
Let father speak
Father! Soon to Joan on her birthday
Wife to H. Joan is a most Commencement sort of person. She conceals her true own feelings all the subjects.
Joan is very deaf in her affections
They are buddies in her heart
She loves all that is beautiful and good
Long ago I knew she would live to be 70
Now I prophesy she will live to see 80 and more
She will prove in fine weather like yours.
" anything for me?
Joan is the centre of attraction today
Joan will be 66 soon
J. Must will be Joan day
Joan " " " "
Good night

Talking - low from all
Shelton is here

Shelton -
" Hello Shelton. I am so glad you are able meet us, & we are so glad
The funeral was a great tribute
K. Your friends were all deeply devoted to you and your wife
The letters are very fine
K. not a word more than one would expect -
Let Hayden speak

Hayden -
K. I thought you two would be together, Shell Queen now Mrs Hoe Shelton is here & he soon will be
He is happy to see you and hear Pallie speak
K we are delighted to know you are both here hope is also here
K. Surely expected we would be - my love to you all Smiddy will speak
" I am so glad you are all together, and all helping me
Smiddy Friend. I can feel your strength
Hey, I am so glad to see you and hear Pallie speak
The four of us are friends of 30 yrs
K Hello there
Joan Welcome Joe
" Speak to us of the things you would have us know
"There is no death, what seems so is transition
The life of mortal breath
Is but a portal we call death"
Joe Longfellow - surely Smiddy Longfellow is here with us
K. What a wonderful carol?
Longfellow must speak
" Thank you a thousand times Mr Longfellow for coming Longfellow; The poem you like is one I wrote when I lost my little daughter Alice Joan The last line must go - She was burned to death - Alice laughing Alleghe Adult with golden hair - the children were coming down stairs
here Pallie has a good memory

Let Lowell Speak

K. Thank you so much for coming and for your views.

Lowell. I thank you for freeing my focus on the Crisis at the beginning of the war

The war is going to be won by Britain and America against Germany and Japan

The Nations are already depleted

France will rise in revolt

The end is a long way off

The peoples of the world have much to endure

Good night,

Shelton must Speak

Shelton: I was dazed by trying to get my ear quickly

I did not see the red light

The evening was a bad one

Let Rogers Speak

Rogers: Emerson is here, he will Speak

K. I thought he would come. Many thanks Mr Emerson for coming & for your messages to us all

Emerson: I recall you and Harper read my Essays together

K Not to him,

Emerson Miss Pattison has been reading my life

K. (Sorry to be called away) Many thanks for coming to us

Mr Johnson call every month while

K Ireland, it was

The war is a terrible business

The war will go on for some time yet

The victory will be for Britain

Let Rogers Speak

Rogers:-

Joe, I was going to ask how he found the little boy, he found so much

" Emerson says to tell you he is here with him

Joe I wonder if he heard it?

Now is Speaking? - Rogers No. Emerson Yes

Emerson: The boy is now a man doing great work for the Kingdom

I feel on earth. He is here with me

He will Speak

Emerson's - Son - (I can't remember what he called him)

My name is Waldo, I love to hear you speak of me

I will be at your side then

31

Lord,

Hello Bill the Lord's name be also Rogers

Rogers: I was going to tell you we are all helping you as much as we can

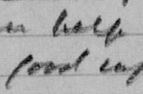

Ic. Tell me what I should or should not to do & assist you in helping me.

Ecclesiastes. Be obstinate in the use of wine, read the Bible thoroughly. Do all the rest and exercise as you can. Sleep after luncheon, go to bed early. Get up before reading the papers, go to play occasionally. Do not worry about anything. Use tempus non refert as what you read in bible. Good night.

Hello. I was right in my mind about the Lunatic. Can you help me in external affairs?

Hello: You must entirely reject in beginning that this Lord or this side, that personality persists that memory endures, that knowledge is perfected, that the so-called dead are the most alive, that the Numeris is one that God is love. I can help you more from here than I could in Ottawa. Good night

Ic. Love surrount thanks to you all dear friends, - and love to all of you and all of ours

Laurence House, March 6th 1941

Father:
The witches
Messenger:
K. Thank you so much for coming, we are glad you are here again
Messenger: Thanks for the welcome
K. You are just in time I think, but I shall not have you in my Wizard's
I must run on and send the witches & the Salt
K Have you been out on the heights
Salt stands for Strength
The burning of the salt meant that strength would be given to K. It contains lime (calcium)
The powers can read in "my psychic life" more a wrong interpretation
It meant that to the ancients. To them lime must mean that generally
The knives stand for love
K. (I left you this morning I dreamt I was saying goodbye to friends the Schmidt Steinel Steen old Ford Lyle Joan Scott Wes. Stenhill & Sudden Greene & Brown)
Wizard Lima is here
She must speak
K. Well Lucia it is a great pleasure to see you come
I cannot let you both both go on to the speaking of you again but then it has not been
K Your turn Clement my love. I am so glad to be thinking of you again
Father is also here
K I am so glad. I suppose my father & mother & sisters also have come now
Lucia Yes we are all here together
K That is lovely. I can now give you both greeting from Ivy
Lucia We are all so proud of the way you spoke in Parliament
You have right to say what you did
Let your father speak
Father: I was delighted to read you said about the Czechs & the Egyptians
The Observer article was written by Fleet Admiral
We have a warrant declared for you
Let Lucia speak
Sir Wilfred
K. Lucia this is kind indeed of you to come. Just when I needed to hear from

Sir Wilfrid: Good evening Mrs Valleron, I am glad to see looking so well
Joan Thankyou very much Sir Wilfrid Sir W. The performance in parliament at present is shocking long ago I used to endure the same sort of thing long ago the tories used about me as they do about you
You were right to speak out as you did
The truth is the unpleasant member to use in debate
K. But was I wise, having regard to all circumstances - having the whole country, the country state of —ironmongy as I did
Sir W. Long ago I tried the peaceful tactics but they left me Joan (sighs) I know what the salt means - You wanted a little more sonnets, to put more of yourself in - anything cooked without salt is tasteless, You want to be travelling with, tall pressures things, flavours then taste
Sir W. it not it is the thing you must have Sir W. Mrs Valleron has stuck the nail on the head
" That is the right place to strike it. Sir W.
Joan " not on your finger "
Sir Wilfrid The only way to succeed in debate is to speak out -
Let your true feelings show

Frankfallin:
K. Yes Frankfallin - you have been much in my thoughts
Lecturer Good evening Mistress Valleron I am delighted to see you here Wilfrid, I was glad you said what you did about - parliament and the people.
It was true and all present knew it long ago I had to fight for both
I was wounded like a thief and driven into exile
but the people never forsook me long ago they tried to stone me, but God protected me God will protect you. He loves you. He will not suffer you, foot to slide. He wants you to carry on at this time
Good night
K What about this photo falling off the wall below?
Fallin The photo fell to attract your attention to the words on debate & thought
Good night
K Lecturer about the motion on to the station etc?
Lecturer That was meant to help you in the debate. You have misjudged it correctly
He talk about the fountain of salt water spouting, the meaning is as you have declared of thought

K Any thing to say about the war?
yes.
K Who is speaking
Gladstone
Gladstone Thank you so much for coming Mr. Gladstone
Good evening Have you had to go often
Thank you Sir
.. The war is about to enter on its most critical stage Gladstone is speaking (sounded as if he was very sad to others
Gladstone The ~~Bulgarians~~ Germans will invade Bulgaria and Serbia
The Greeks will join a Strong neutrality
The Turks will join the Greeks
The Belgians will help both
The Italians will continue to war in Africa
The French will form a line of the whole of France to the Germans
The Spaniards will remain neutral
The Portuguese will remain neutral
The Belgians will do all they can to help the British
The Dutch will fight for the British in the far East
The Japanese will go to war against England
The United States will fight the Japanese and the Germans
The Russians will join the British and the United States
The Russians are preparing now for war against the Germans
England will not be invaded
The Germans will keep in the Balkans but will not come in the west all they have now
The war will be over sooner than people believe.
Let Lawrence speak
Mr Wilfred
Gladstone is right
You must help lord of the ruins of power
The French is all important for the future of the world.
Good night
K. So many thanks to all and love to all

Monday, April 7th 1941.

Talbot: Joan to all from all here
Joan: Talbot, you first along some land known this until late then then you get there until with the low crowd are here of the time of Normandy with under some one to last after his deportment
Let Warwick speak
Warwick: Joan, you must work with hard to believe,
He has funny little ways of his own
His minister this morning has in the nation of a prophecy
Blanchett is dying, he burns to you to carry on the spirit
He will not last long
He is very much broken down
He must called you in a few days
He thinks you are the strongest one to lead.
Let Lancaster speak
Lancaster: Good enemy this Talbot, I am pleased to see you again
Joan: Thank you Mr Warwick
Warwick: His vision was such of all of us.
His men in this world represent the Navy
His men in Parliament represent the representatives of the people
Blanchett represents work above all others
He wants you to take on his part in the battle for freedom
He smiled at you in his sleep last night
He told you that for Canada England would be defeated
He believes with fidelity.
Let Gladstone speak
Gladstone: Long ago I said that Canada would stem the Atlantic tempest
God has chosen you to do this thing necessary & that end
He will guide and direct you
He knows how humble you are in spirit
He wants this weak thing of these world to confound the strong
He must send his angels to keep close to you
Let your Warden speak Warden: The reason I am pleased in the vision was that you might rest to find one tonight
I wanted to tell you of Gods plan in your life
Let Grandfather speak
Grandfather: Hon. Talbot, have do you do?
Joan: How do you do, Mr Mackenzie

Our vision was a true one
Our help-building was the nations everywhere of Christ
You must be the one who will feed the people when our shaking of this city was over.
God has chosen you who is there yourself to save the people from famishing
Let Macdonald speak (Say Amen si for Pat) Macdonald: (You opened a book called the Man, I thought one I had at my parlour called the Sun of Nevia — out on Canon Hall Pulley Salisbury Cathedral - you said I remember many with London towers of Parliament, London.
Mind Macdonald
Jones Nancy
Nancy Macdonald: Yes.
M. Hello Mr & Mrs Macdonald. I hope you would come
Let us thank you for what you said about us at the County
Club dinner last month
Let us thank you for what you said about Mr Ledbetter
Let us thank you for speaking to him as you have Let us thank you for speaking as you did to Peloski, Sirkowski and Kerstetchenden.
Our main hope is for men who love their fellow men
God wants you to preach the gospel around
God has chosen you to lead the people back to Him
God will guide and direct your thoughts
Let Him speak

Macdonald -
W. was glad, so glad to see you again for what you have done for us here in Wellington & Joan and you have very happy to be with you both again
God has a great work for you to do
He will give you the needed strength and power
Good night
Edmund Pratt: Let us ask Edmund Pratt. Yes
Pratt: Mr Chairman Ladies & Gentlemen — Thanks for speaking for me
M. God wants us to stand on your side & help to inspire your thoughts working would mean more to our city than, for I know admire you
I love and admire you also, we have always loved each other very much God wants us to be partners in this battle for peace or world lead - need Commander man
Good night

Jew. my wounds claim you, Son be the spear you have pierced is unsheathed
Let Shedeton speak
Mr Jesuits: The war must against Babylon the holy confederacy must be destroyed
Clericalism hath risen on one to avenge the wrong
Let Guy Speak
Lord Guy: The papacy must end & so to war against the United States or Britain they must fight the Church and the Dissenters
The Romanists must fight the Puritans
The Puritans must fight the Episcopacy
The Episcopacy must fight the French & North & Spain
~~Romanism~~ Spain must set - take the Protestants cross their country
Protestantism must stand out against all comers
The Pope must fight in the Pretender cause on the Stuarts
The Pope must help the Britain until them fight
The United States must not go to war but must help in other ways
Lord might Mrs Clarges: Lord conquer thou Britain
fi - - Send help
William, the Lord is on our Side
Be thou strong for the Lord & prevail for thine Enemies
He must destroy your Slaves
Be thou with for in the States
Be careful to write for the Parliament
Mr Mrs: Come to Jesus & you
Be of good cheer, all will be well in the end
Lord my God

Kingsmere, May 9th 1941

Talbot:- Low formal.
" :- Now bring some out or tell us yourself something that will be helpful her Parkin
" . How so pleased you have come to see us Parkin.
The visions was a true one
I heard you speak of me and Lady Laurier to Nicholas last evening.
I felt happy to hear what you said
" . I must ask you to tell Sir Parkin what your kindness and generosity has done for me and mean to them long ago in Belfast and I helped Clement to help you in Dublin also
I was doing what I thought would help towards Home Rule
Sir Laurier speak

Sir Wilfrid,
How do you do Lady Parkin?
Joan Very well thank you Sir Wilfrid Parkin Long ago Parkin & I had our eyes on you
He was a friend of mine
I was glad to hear what you said to my husband
" . You delightful must not be told me you had said to him
He is a fine character
" Tell me Sir Wilfrid, what you think I should do regarding the war etc,
I have no advice to offer, follow your own intuitions
Don't let others influence your judgment
There are a number of us who are helping to direct you
Good common sense is the best guide
Hungary is thinking of himself as a world power
Mussolini loves to be a dictator
Most of the Cabinet in Britain are paper heads
Lord Gladstone speak

Mr Gladstone
The worst of the war is to come
You are right in saying that Russia and Britain are working together
" " " " " " " " the tendency is to assist the cause of the dictators in destroying the democracies
Go out fearlessly and tell the people what you believe
" . Do you think I can have the strength needed for a long last time
The strength will be given to you
God has chosen you for the leading of the people
He will not leave nor forsake you
Good night.

Kingussie. May 25. 1941

Yesterday morning came the loss of the Hood at sea, off the coast of Greenland - Iceland -, the result (not known) of enemy action. This is a hard blow, & at a very critical time. No further word came yesterday or this morning. We do not know anything of the manner of her sinking, & just conceive it as a sudden explosion which blew the bottom out of the ship. It is a complete mystery. Yesterday morning Europe Day. The closing day of the British Empire Exhibition was held in the balance.

On waking this morning, I recalled a vision. I had dreamt that I was climbing a very high tower, narrow & steep. It seemed as if I were to be on the top of it, and that I had to climb down a ladder, (rope or mast) into a tower, to be lowered still further into terra firma. Whether more fortunate or unfortunate was not on the top of the tower was a large black X, the number 10 in the block - as of iron or painted black on board surface, very distinct. Of- - ficial in shape X rather than spread out. Black letters or numbers on signs were the most prominent of everything, as it seems to stand out especially on the top of this tower (whether we were at sea or land I cannot say, it seemed like both, or rather more building below, but the scene was like sea when the upper part. I seemed to have to ascend before coming down. When I was making - in us was very afraid - the I recognized the height as very great, and felt it was a sign that of great danger. - a step meant a fall & instant destruction - I saw that first some old person had to be lowered out of the top of the tower in a chair - let down gently. He seemed to be coming down all right, quite surely. Suddenly - safely. - I did not see him come to the point in the vision when I began to come down I was contemplating that formidably when I awoke. - I thought to myself the vision is one of warning. - that coming down the ladder might be a sign of coming spiritual strength or moral power, & that the vision was to warn us against a danger of the mind - I thought of it as a possible immediate danger at first, but later on being possibly related to a later time - at any rate it seemed to be significant that I did not come down. It seemed a warning of the danger of high position, the height; - the number 10 or the X seemed a good sign. The final exam or at the end of a session.

In walking this morning with Ted Hah, I thought of my conversation with Ted on the last night - about sending a card to Churchill, re the Coercion in Ireland: - also re suggested response. - first thing this morning I thought of the former - felt how should not be on 'pestering' a person, who must have more important questions to deal with & felt also re writing to the Sec of State at this time. I would do it at a real need, but not otherwise: so when the time comes. The next book had the verse re "letting this cup pass" - I felt I would not forsake that position, but also whether was needed: that could place in the order God sees. I then read the 30th chapter of Jeremiah (3/8 x 4½) - I take as I have work at it means it begins "the word came to Jeremiah from the Lord saying "Thus speaketh the Lord God of Israel saying write thee all the words that I have spoken unto thee in a book &c &c" - I will come them to return to the land that I gave to their fathers and they shall possess it: &c - were the words "for I am with thee, saith the Lord, to save thee: though I make a full end of all the nations whither I have scattered thee: yet will I not make a full end of thee" to a person reading I had written "I believe this will be fulfilled yet in the case of the Ancient people in God's own time" this I believe to be true, at this dark hour. also the words "but I will correct thee in measure, and will not leave thee altogether unpunished" ---- For I have wounded thee with the wound of an enemy, with the chastisement of a cruel one, for the multitude of thine iniquity - --- & the city shall be builded upon her own heap and the palace shall remain after the manner thereof. - Thine children also shall be as aforetime &c &c

I had just finished this reading when the phone rang & was Joan, before starting off to church. She told me she had received with the most beautiful verse. First she seemed to be a medley of women. Her home went to the prison & play God save the King' - but managed to get only the first chord - could not get the next' She soon agreed to play it - did so. feeling something after as to whether her home ought not take her home with her when she was unable &c. She said perhaps it was her being an American. - or that her son in the army - the thought of Londonderry or the Hood may have suggested this vision - the thought of a possible loss of her son may have paralyzed her home with fear - Oh any rate Joan had completed the outline. She was then changed & her old home in London. this drawing room there. I was sitting under a lighted lamp as in my library

I [illegible] Mrs Hare, flowers, all very beautiful. Jessie was coming up & talking to me, all very eager to do so. Mrs Hare very considerate & sweet with them all. She was so endearingly happy. She said the Salvation Army was the prime - in both visions - also at London Music, flowers, reading &c. She said she never felt hopeful & was sorry to be so hurried, - especially with the dark world of today. — It seemed the significant - this vision being next to mine first - I had said the Christian-sepulchre (with the 3 XXX²) - the height - the X. All on it were a prophecy of the end that is Christ. - The more I think of it the more I believe the X was to attract my attention to this chapter. Many things come in 3s - that also is a sign. I believe it is all (both I [illegible] vision & mine) related to the Empire & my dark- -ness & the light that is to follow & the Greatest Judge- -ment is of this moment & can only be seen by a very clear & [illegible] Christ God can help all - the King - the Symbol of the Greatest Empire - & the Cross stood for & the Cross of the world, what it stands for today.

I understand you will be considering with colleagues of War Cabinet ~~[illegible]~~ representations recently made regarding conscription in Northern Ireland. I ~~[illegible]~~ naturally do not wish to interfere in any matter ~~[illegible]~~ which ought to be regarded as exclusively one for the Government of the United Kingdom. I am sure, however, you will not misunderstand my motive, if I suggest that ~~[illegible]~~ it would be well to take from ~~[illegible]~~ the Ambassador at Washington ~~[illegible]~~ an expression of his views as to the possible effect upon American opinion and attitude in the United States
if any ~~[illegible]~~ should be imposed by Imperial Government ~~[illegible]~~ at the most critical moment in the present conscription in any part of Ireland
I should be grateful also if possible for some such a step upon public opinion as to the repercussions which might ensue in Canada. Also be most carefully considered ~~[illegible]~~ whose feeling of conscription is the most strong ~~[illegible]~~ and engaged in a recruiting campaign, ~~[illegible]~~ feel a real concern at any step. Government will appreciate ~~[illegible]~~ ~~[illegible]~~ the importance of avoiding becoming a matter of controversy. This ~~[illegible]~~ less difficult, will be in the light of maintaining Canadian unity ~~[illegible]~~ any act without concern as to the ~~[illegible]~~ in which the action of the United Government, to prejudice in the minds of their fellow Canadians in other parts of the Dominion

~~[illegible]~~ It would of course be most important I feel that any action ~~[illegible]~~ which may seem to ~~[illegible]~~

I am not without concern of the ~~[illegible]~~ which some of our Ministers have already given to the views in Canada of the disposition attitude and action of the United Government.
I feel the great need to look for all possible consequences
any step which will seem to avoid [illegible] of the kind [illegible] of opinion will

In order to prejudice the position of Canadians of French descent
[illegible]
not to mention it is also important

Father, - Macdonald is here Kingston. June 8. 1911

10 p.m. - The meeting at the armoury tonight was deeply (Hampton)
I was so glad you spoke to my friend Granton, the day you died, he will recall your words all his life
The service was deeply moving
We were all present
Jean Morton was beside me
Lady Macdonald was with Jean Father
Bright John and his wife were also in the front row
The other members of the Macdonald and Bernard clans were in the procession, the Governor, and the Kingston men also there
We joined in the singing
Long ago I lived in Kingston
I knew and admired your grandfather Macdougall
He was the real founder of Canada
We owe to him the beginning of responsible government
He is here and will speak

Macdougall

William, I was proud of the way you spoke in the House
We liked all the Speech
Jean was most from the heart, as well as from the head
I was glad you visited the graves at Cataraqui
The governors were deeply touched
Good night, Mama

~~The Farm~~ June 23rd 1901

Foch: love to all
Mrs. C. here.
" Well, I cannot tell you the difference you have made to poor
Joseph and me in your kindness & the boys and warfare
They will remember it all their lives
Mother wants to speak.
" Love to Joan and you
We were all so happy together this morning
Pat saw me very closely
He knows that we are one more with you
Oops have been happy years.
Presidential Palace is here
Dr Patton: The commencement of Princeton was a notable occasion
I was deeply moved at your reference to your father and me
Joan follows in here
Father: Dr Patton and I were at your grave at the old home at Princeton
We loved to hear what you said about our being in Heaven together.
D.C. Patton is here: — (Joan - he has never been here before)
Joan: I heard what you said — (R. of course you were at the Hill)
Joan prayed, She might recall the dream she had sent I mean making on the mountain
She was frightened and called to Godfrey.
Godfrey went to the front door — (Joan said it was not a dream)
Joan was wide awake
The vision was as clear as day
Joan knew that it was me; that I had come to comfort her Long ago she knew me better than my own wife.
She understood my temperament nature
Jesus bless my love, dear Godfrey.
I was happy to see him kept so warmly
Rogers is here: Good evening Mrs Patton
Thank you for calling on Joan & the boys.
That was a wonderful day
Long ago, I knew that we were going to win the war.
Left Gladstone & Fox (Gladstone: The Germans will suffer heavy losses in the Russian campaign
Left Grey speaks
Grey: The Germans will lose the war
The Canadians will come the day.
The Americans will be in the war very soon

Prediction will speak

.. The day of victory is not so far off.
The germans cannot do without oil and food for cattle.
Great losses will be followed by great hunger and famine.
The victory may come this fall.
The victory will germans will attack on Britain
Let Roosevelt speak

Roosevelt (threatens)

The day you went to Oradeurbury was the beginning of victory
The president loves and trusts you,
You and he are like-minded on most things.
Let Grey speak

Grey: Bonaparte will soon this day in the air
He has enough planes and men to defeat germany now
By the Channel He will overwhelm her
Good night.

King: What about the market this?

Farm: It will be a wonderful experience
All will go well.
Good night.

K - What about the meaning of "No remembrance"?

K. : "Forbes friends name" Jesus = Interpret.

Mr Interpret: 'No remembrance' means you are to take on all you can, on the left.
Let your mother speak

Mother: I will be with you on this side
Father, Sir Wilfrid Roberts will tell you what to say
God will guide and direct your feet and words.

K And I make a mistake in prayers about this (during of your time)

No, the time for that had not come
It will come in due course
Good night

K, What about the Rehoboth in Newfork?

God sent her to you, and you to her
She is a seer
What she found in her vision will come to pass
She is grateful to you for your visit
She will meet you again in another vision
She is an instrument of power on this side
Good night

K Good bye

September 7th 1941

(Cornelius Hyl 1-8, - Acts 7)

5.50 a.m. It was from Numbers 8 chapter (Sept 6) when I turned to find the Officers' Lessons Rushcliffe aerodrome, Ayrshire. I preached on Israel's Passover on the anniversary of dear father's birthday. I thanked God in prayer for my father - such a good man - a truly noble man. It was with many memories before I got to sleep. - O he called at 7.30. We had breakfast & packed up my own accord and set-up at exactly 8.0 a.m. 10 Sqn G.9. - bombs together. 8.30 a.m. leaves billets

I shaved and dressed, putting on woollies under garments & shirt, and then read the Holy Book: and a few pages of the Russian Bible. - the chapter "Behold, I will lead thee" I was thinking of the days journey ahead, without any concern whatever, feeling sure of God's protection. However as I came to the following words, there seemed to be a sort of golden light about them and something impressing me, that they were more than an assurance for the morning, but they were one of God's promises for the remainder of my days on earth. I shall never forget that time now. I was very perplexed in mind, and it seemed as if the Bible were being shut through the palpitation of my heart with consternation.

Is. 109 (=110 in 100) "with long life will I satisfy him, and show him my salvation
Even to old age I am he, and even to hoar hairs will I carry you; I have made and I will bear: yea, I will carry, and will deliver.

Will God take hold before the sinners (enemy) from death
He shall surely lead. when that we must journey
20 past 4. It was exactly this verse as I read this time "Behold I will carry" - for myself and I understand the words here underlined. - It all seemed very significant ') will carry and will deliver' - the journey across the sea in a bombing plane
"with long life -- even to old age -- even to hoar hairs will I carry you - the remainder of my earthly journey
"he will surely lead" — All God's promises true. I feel sure of this. Oh! I have never been conscious for years - in fact they are extremely practical & meaning first to others - yet this seemed to come home to me for that that God's purpose in my life might be fulfilled.

Is. breakfasted in the mess dining room, the Padre, Chaplain. R.A.F. Station
V. Birkett S/Ldr presiding. Group Captain C.G. Blandon, taking the Dor-chester to hand, host. (and others I must add as officially this was.
Confirmation. The Padre has postponed flowers & fruit this to Lord, in the early morning. Some then & me at breakfast.

8.00 It was from 0'clock on the 1st. I breakfast Station for the Ops. airport, as I walked out of the mess. the following lines came of them now accord into my mind

"God that made earth and heaven
Darkness and light
Who dry day for toil hast given
For rest the night.

Guard our waking, Guard our sleeping
And when we die
May we in thy mighty keeping
All peaceful lie."

They were sent as revelation of the true presence of God
Then stress of the experience of the reference of 'darkness & light' the former preceding the battle, as it was in fact at that moment. - cool & warm soon to be exhilarated or chilled. - day & night, cold & dark. - Ground us to being - we had just endured & preceding - expected to that of our journey. -

6.00. We drew in the dark & the air cold. Were forming new crew, took
- with us Lancashire lads. - coming upon the great banks black, topping & across sky, blue flames flashing out of the depths beneath the ships, one of the officers said & me. when we see blue - that is a bad sign. Messages, the pilot had said & me at breakfast in a few words. We thanked God across & about 15 hours, we may go by Cape -found land altogether, cost 5 lbs of candles. - If need be we can stop at Queenstown, but I think we will be able to go direct through & Channel.
At the afternoon service, we were left making a fund amount for crew before starting, as he usually hurried over the evening carefully avoided
- my eye, when he came back on mess table together & others. Then left aboard after saying goodbye & were friends, the very fine young men of the Pretoria all gone. - Efficient company, to have had come all the way from Eng-land. - who could not have been kinder and nicer or more willing & self effacing throughout. - At noon 6 o'clock when I boarded the flame & 6.05 when we took off. - first a view of the two ways. Then the gradual ascent, with the mass of the afternoon beneath, till we were lost in the mist of the clouds. It was exciting, I sang over & myself the lines of 'God of Bethel' and 'He leadeth me'. I was so tired that I could scarcely "think of" happiness & things, I did many about & really came into my thoughts. It made me very glad to be leaving Eden behind one part of the world. (for more words in my thoughts 10-15 (one line) 3.15 (clouds together, my thoughts - old comedy times) (Shepherd lines that across when from Hyde Park - as attending funeral of Mrs Hopwood. - no color. - sand sandwich - went in my thoughts :)

6.15 At 6.15 we were going through the clouds. - I spent the early part of the journey on the bench arranged over the boat position of the flame. - so as to make the clouds break. It had been very dark until after we started off. - One of the officers mentioned & the "the darkest hours is always before the dawn" it was most impressive being said there, and in, I believe, true of this war. at this time, with Russia in a very precarious position.
It was across time is coming, and looked for a long time as more flying away from it, & it was continuing overhead, or rather as the horizon when we were following us, as it were. We at times shiver & red and cold. - that wonderful sky effect red, blue & grey
As we were just above & the clouds which were fleecy & piling, I did us- home that cold frozen look, that they had on the way over. Later they began to assume that more rapid appearance. It was a wonderful dawn but not as impressive as the one on the way over, perhaps because it was behind us before. - The journey altogether was less impressive because of there being more wind, more in the clouds, as well as above them. The sky sometimes clear, sometimes over cast. The Pilot ordered me if I saw the moon or well as the sun (I had named the moon) to say so at once as we ran along on the edge of the clouds.

6.50 2.10.7 Straight - At 6.50 the sun suddenly burst through the clouds, and shone full right on my face, as I was looking towards the horizon. I looked at my watch & so the time, - the hands were in a perfectly straight line. - The clouds were as billows - we were touching the edge

5.57 At 5.57. Instruction telling beside me noticed a bomber plane speeding by towards Scotland (I thought it might be Hannon then just 4) - I was delighted to catch a glimpse of it - as it shot thro' an open space in the clouds in the distance heading through the clouds and the horizon was soon left behind. At this time many thoughts of Rudyard Kipling, were in my mind - the passage as read in a person - and the beauty of many incredible - other one is the ancient Mariner &c. - I the voice of the stream of God. - They suggested themselves naturally and that - we were witnessing. I recited them over & re-arranged & selected (I must get up & open the window - I opened my memory of the battle of Britain. Canadian, the United States - a wonderful romance - the unity of the (one of the world today)

7 [illegible] . It was exactly 7 [illegible] as the sun shone in my eyes direct. I looked at the watch & on the time - after this I tried to sleep, - but slept a little, dozed off into chair and then, the inevitable thing pins, felt I would like to [illegible] so once the blanket, before a change came on 7 [illegible] [illegible] fatigues

10.00 At 10 o'clock I went into the cockpit while Hennessy the pilot and Grey the navigator. The latter is from California (a record crew when Hennessy says he takes. - The [illegible] radio man - - - .) We had by that time travelled 600 miles, & were flying at a height of 10.000 feet - At this stage I had a cup of hot coffee (also a welcome by-name of plane) - [illegible] particulars of parts of plane - One gun on the nose of the plane - bombs stowed where we were in centre - one gun on the roof, one gun on aft through the floor, and one gun in the tail,

After visiting different parts of plane I sat in the navigator's cubicle on the South side of plane & read several splendid articles in the "Spectator" of Sept 5 - we were flying above clouds & mist, a sort of fog for an hour or so. - It was quite cool, had a little hot soup & sandwich

At 11.45 we came out ± into bad glimpses of the sea through thin clouds, the 2.00 mist apparently calm - I left on reading the Spectator till 2. o'clock
10.54 & then rested till 3.50 - hands straight across when I looked at my watch was told then that we were north of the Labrador coast, had turned Newfoundland, were beyond Anticosti Island, ± were about 120 miles north of the direct route over Sandes, but would make up time & should be arriving probably at 5. o'clock on Dorval aerodrome Montreal. Clocks had been wound when I awakened (I understood for the long above route), & also we encountered a little ice. I had felt - at early cock. - did not change my clothes, or even out of the suits, but rolled myself in the folds cock 4.15 At 4.15 changed from bed to reclining chairs read articles in the New Statesman and Nation & Spectator very good & mod. some delightful:
4.30 Had my first sight of land below the clouds. could see roads & trees through the pilot's cabin from the cockpit about 5 big towns = towns in Canada & said we would probably be in Montreal by 5.15; that about 3 hours (evidently there was I have to had left out of calculation, or wanted a stop - It meant - that 15 hours flying in all - and thin headwind against for making - fairly strong winds. some ice 6.30 At 6.30 hands together, when I looked I left - up into heavens for a while we were still in thin clouds. - I rested for some little time, thinking of little Rob. trying to sing over hymns. thinking of thousands - of many poems or animals ± all this quiet, passenger scenes again. I left up a bit & on hours before we landed at the Dorval aerodrome - yesterday I had taken a little bit soup - but before pulling out on the thin chair. had had only 4. sandwiches during day ± a little apple. thin soup coming suddenly on very somewhat chilled stomach, made me a little queasy after I left up. - I think the fatigue of my eyes had much to do with it as well. thin unsettled my stomach a bit and rather spoiled the enjoyment of the last half hour. what I feared most was not being in shape on pulling off the plane. However before we landed I had [illegible] general wondrous, ± all effects had worn off. tho' I had slurred up a good deal of beer. - We touched at 9.15 9.15 British time, 4 15 Canadian time, 15 hours and 10 minutes elapsed across from Ayr & Montreal westward & stop 6. Aug. Scotland time & 9.15 Sept. 1st 4.15 Canadian time 6 4.15 Aug. Canadian time. Sunday Sept 7. 1941

Soldiers ± Airmen were at this post & customs. They had come & below from Ottawa. - brought a glimpse of them before landing. It was a happy moment. & be on land again. tho' this unsettled condition of my stomach kept me a little uncertain for a moment or two on my feet. Part the Canadian officer Staff had also come with the Prudential Montreal who brought a kind word of welcome from them beforehand. They [illegible] kind & helpful.

En route various had reminded us that today was a day of National Prayer. I prayed earnestly for the country & the world's peace. - found I was too tired & dizzy as I would. Prayer requires real power & strength & the effort. - I certainly thanked God with all my heart as we neared the end of the journey, and knew the ground under upon which I did kneel & my feet: Handy station at Aiken of Penn to lead united prayer & the same may be it a noble, true & brave land. & young citizens.

On landing Mrs North hands with response & Hons, then with Mr Connell, & Sir Frederic Hamlet, Mayor & Mayoress. - quite a crowd gathered around. Press busy anxious for a statement & invited off to my car. (Pullman car 100.) Hons had arranged a Lane on a siding, shunted - and then proposed Mr Statement & take Hons a press interview. I had for other & my goodbye & Mr Pilot & others of his air blows, & cut both, later, with Hamlets, Mr. Cunningham & Gray - Mitchell (Rolls) had left. I felt quite badly - Really was knocked out, until but a shower of cooling & rain refreshing - was a little sick at the car, but all cleared off once I had a cup of tea & lay on my back a few minutes Deputation seemed greatly pleased at the success. Hons said (so for as afternoon went) public feeling in Canada had changed round completely. Hall - city & greatly Hons stood before - They asked if I could go on & plan & Ottawa but I declined have no desire & fly for pleasure, or unless absolutely necessary. The train left at about 1. P. It was a little before 3rd P.M. when I retired when I woke I was at my toilet after we had started out: or one was, The Pilot. I was & Mr Montpelier had been shunted to leave on arrival, & Montreal, Lord Brassey's Roosevelt's mother had died today at Oyster Bay. Immediately after leaving the station I went to the telegraph office & sent a message of sympathy to him. Saw a press deputation at station - greatly enjoyed drive on train & lunch. - the country lovely mountains & rivers & lakes all green, lovely shady trees. saw so many & the maple in their fine autumn colouring. It was quite wonderful & their expression of gratitude, delight & affection as the people of Belleville, on arrival, at stations en route & at station at Kingston. People of Belleville crowded round hands. One man held up his little child & the Mrs. Mrs Kingston Mrs Chisholm &c. One could see the delight in their faces, as if one had done something for their behalf. I was greatly surprised at the numbers at the stations, as any movements were all kept as secret as possible, I think & this is understood. It was exactly 8.10 (Marking time) on the clock in the telephone office. as I sent this note to the President. Mr Pilot passed a note from Kingston when it reached me where as we passed the Parliament building. The bands were a strange time at 9.15 - It all seemed most picturesque. - Hons decided to accompany arriving about 10. Mrs Mrs & Hons of Mr Chisholm, Mrs Pilot & Mrs Hons. We all walked before on the pier. Mrs Hons came over & the Hons, where I was glad to see the boat looking well: also Mrs Hons. - We walked on to the train & I said goodbye & Mrs Hons from Hons & Mrs Hons. - We reached Montreal at 11. I walked with Mrs Hons, all 11.30. & Mrs Pilot & Mrs Hons & Mrs Hons

September 6. 1941

Slept well last night till 6.45. Then got up, dressing & more calls - my valet still suffering, - looking like the bears with a sore head. Stoned. - Then took & had had a cup of tea, re-read till 8. Breakfast & morning news - again boring & nervous both. Was delighted & more than surprised at Associated Newspapers London strength the best of any daily Blue that other London papers were still sounding brazen. Real news a few words became at beginning of June must in Canada - I then went out for morning walk along path I used & where little Vol. (calling to the little fellows all the way) up & the stone. where I thanked God and dedicated myself anew to His service - on & this for this stone where we walked together ten years before. - rejoicing at the beauty of things - trees, the quiet here, - then breakfast at the window - after which reading of little book & scenes bible, first marked "Though God in your body - let come & joy radiate from it, cf. page 118. (=10) also second part of "Beloved I will not that" - take away all weakness - give best - power of true consecration. At last, I could pray in real earnestness and this written. Spent the morning writing up yesterday's visit & travel. At noon hour - I walked to Allens over the moor, & the heights with grown thistle & broom - back, all way, round all the way. quite most beautiful on Sabbath. Decided to stay on at Moorside another week, - work at Focus. - After lunch took a sleep of about 3 hours, 2-5 P.M. - read some editorials - all heading, heavy reports of increasing food. decided to stay much as was planned on Wednesday then. at 11 o'clock, letting of communion cards. (Post card had been fixed for this - David was allowing Willie O'Connor, R.A.F. to stay instead for leave. I decided that and cancelled. I put will forward on 23.6. - Wednesday as suggested. If R.A.F. will permit - in person has special could be had later - He is getting - officer. Then I should telephone. Then 6 P.M. - on anniversary of Canadian entry into war. - decided to send telegram that day. - arranged for printing of Memorial Service Words - also had talk with [illegible] of the Canadian Legion about any book. first copies will arrive tomorrow night - book will be on sale a week from today, next Wednesday. Telegram from Lewis today - 101 - on hand early next week. July. (Pendle Hill Memorial service opening hymn to hand also in all.) Today if it will be a comfort to the friends, I will come down to Wyoke that a Memorial Service - but on it was private. I had still need & strength etc. heard word later; that the members of Canadian Cabinet as officials etc. - President (was expected for Wednesday - Should not be home & then at home from 6 P.M. & would leave by train closing - had some planning - felt better. Tried after lunch - Will for peace reached. Glad & home day quiet & peaceful last part & all.

Father, love to all.
Mother wants to speak

Mother: Love to Joan and you
The book you are reading is heavy for Joan
It is a task for me to follow
I am sure it is a good book.
Pat is here beside me
He knows that you are talking to me
He is wagging his tail

K. That's a boy.
He hears you talking to him
He is jumping for joy
Derry is here also

J. Good old Derry
K. That a well man. — two well men
Derry is running about like mad

J. Derry will be glad to see me
Derry is jumping up on you now
He is beginning to wag more the first
Pat is sitting upon the front step

K. Love to Pat him
He felt Joan's hand and is so happy
He to has spoke

Father! I was so happy on my birthday, that you thought of me in London.
Your trip was an outstanding success
You said the right thing at the right time
How glad Mr Blumenfeld was that you came over
He has a great respect for your judgment
He wants you to help him all you can
Your speech on Thursday before the Conference of Press Lords
Don't let that go by default
It is necessary to have the people understand the meaning of H. M.'s being in their own countries, also a time of war
It is a good thing that you went over, also that you came back when you did
It let people see you meant what you said
The speech on Wednesday will be a great success
You must receive inspiration from on high
God is fulfilling His purpose of your life
He will guide and direct your thoughts and words

Collier. Lord & Lady Tweedsmuir
Laurier is here
Silverfish: Goodmorning Mrs Collier
Lady Laurier sends her kind regards
K. Give our love to Lady Laurier
Thanks. Lady T. sends her love to you
We spent an enchanted evening when we first spent you ever made
It was true and eloquent. It was to the point
Churchill is deeply grateful to you. He likes you very much
He trusts your judgment. He will rely more and more on you
Let your fellow Scot
Parliament: Mr Mackenzie is right about the Scots
The people in Britain are grateful to you
The cabinet liked your reference to them
The last thing you said made a strong appeal
The Germans cannot win the war
Let Gladstone speak
Mr Gladstone:
We spent two and a profound week in the United States.
Glad you referred to Tweedsmuir as you did Tweedsmuir is here and will speak
Mr. Tweedsmuir:
K. Thanks so much for coming to Ottawa
I am happy to be with you again
The reference to the stone crime was the best bomb thing to come at this time.
It struck home to all
The world knows it is true. The south knows the same
North can see the force of your words
They will become increasingly clear as the war goes on
The war will last sometime yet
The United States must be in it before long
Good-night.
Williamson is here.
Mr H. Williamson —
Mr King, I want to thank you for the letter you wrote my wife.
It was kind of you to send the flowers from your garden
The letter here is wonderful beyond words.
The sunset tonight is striking compared to it for beauty.

I can see you and Mrs Pallinson distinctly
I can see the dog and the foam and the fire in the fireplace
I can see the papers on which you are writing and can read the words
I can see what your thoughts are before you speak
I can see everything around you
I can see the spirit that influences and love you
Your mother and father are here with me
Your brother the doctor and your sister Ivard.
K He loved cricket
I played cricket with your brother at Rockcliffe.
He is here with me, and he is glad and sorry with him.
K Do you know that Gaga
You heard you say 'Gaga'
He is jumping up on your knee and shoulder and is licking your cheek
He is so fly beyond words
Terry is jumping up on Mrs Pallinson, he wants her to play the piano
Good night.
Mr Pallinson wants to thank you for coming to see him before going Lord Wellington is here
Lord Wellington
" You that you are with my love and blessing
Thank you dear friend for coming to see my wife
She was very pleased to see you than anyone
She is very fond of you
She was so sorry you did not arrive a day sooner
She wanted you behind you to be a Pallinson
She was so glad to have dinner alone with you
You were very good to speak of my being still at her side
This is a wonderful place to be in Nothing in the world compares with it
Heaven is our true home
There is no sadness here
I thank you response to Remembrance at the Masonic Temple
This is the House of many mansions
Your mother & father have a lovely mansion here
It is a home not made with hands
It is celestial in the skies
Your brother and sister are here with me
They send their love to Mrs Pallinson and you

Father: - Come to all
K. What have you got for us tonight Father?
Father. Mrs Mackenzie.
K. So glad you are here again. We love to have you come here with us!
Joan. Well Mother,
how from Jean Father Nancy and me to the King and Queen
Joan. Hats good. Now tell us about yourself.
Mrs Mackenzie: - I am happy beyond words
Jean Father and I do enjoy being together.
We have so many old friends, and we end of here ones.
The King Father and Mother and the Sister Isabel are great friends of ours
We see them almost every day.
Has he Royal, an uncle of the King is also a Great friend.
He is a bonnie piper
Nancy plays the piano, the flute and the harp.
She has a class of young girls and boys she teaches music to
We are a very happy family
Joan, Jan remember how Jean Father used to sing to Mother.
Well he has the same velvet skin, he sings the same old songs
he is often a wonderful, visit to see the town and how Jean Father Joan. Do you come to Ottawa
Indeed we do almost every day
" Must about Jack?
We watch over Jack all the time
Jack is doing a great work in England
He visit the head of the Canadian Pacific Steamship.
He is a great worker
Nancy wants to talk
Nancy:
Mother dear, it is a long time since I had a talk with Jean Father
Joan - a Great storm tonight
Nancy. Yes it is a great storm, and I like to hear the trees in the wind
They whistle like my flute
Joan. Watch over Jean Father, keep Jack Mother safe from harm
Papa is lonely without Nancy.
We miss him very much.
Joan I miss Jan
But I am at Jean side every day

Good night
Fellow-workers to all space
K. So glad to see you again this beautiful
Joan We were talking of you this morning
Hey dear daughter, I heard every word you said
I send her my love your hand in hers
Joan. No I want her father
K. No. I love yours
Our brethren - Speak it into the mind of each of you to take the elderly gentleman
Joan Now don't be so unkind to father,
I can understand. I can only give expression to my heart's desire but King is a man I like very much, and I like to see him with my little daughter's hand.
Joan. He doesn't realize I am a grandfather.
K are you speaking about me or Joan's father
Joan father
Our brethren I know that Joan do not count where there is a valiant offering Joan and her King like the same things, Joan see must the same you.
(Light got down in Glow)
I saw the light go down and come up again, went it went in like in life, one suffer one day and the next we are up again
I may be mistaken, but I think God sees and knows all and that he forgives and welcomes.
I have to his forgive me for the mistakes I made
He has restored my soul for his own name's sake
He has made me to walk in green pastures, and to lie down by quiet waters
He comforts when he has made and also come to them
He knows Joan Joan dear, very dearly
He watches over Joan and Joan mother and Henry and me
He has a habitation in the heavens, reserved for all who love him
Joan need have no more fear of anything, he understands all
He is love and tenderness itself
Sorrow and sadness have no place here
Good night
K Must now a cruel half-hour to our lord to home Joan dear Good night
God bless and keep Joan in his care
God bless and keep my little daughter,
Good night

Hyde Park, N.Y. NOV. 1-2. 1941

(written at Kingston Nov 9th '41

Tonight, (NOV 1) I took one of the greatest struggles of my life. Nothing has ever caused me more in the way of agonizing strain. To begin with, I have had in mind for months past that when I came to pay this visit to the President that he would be expecting me to have a drink with him. (not once but a little while before dinner) I had wrestled with myself as well as I could and made the vow I did three years ago to give up taking anything to drink & kept it pretty in England, when Churchill, Col. Knox, Harry and Lewis of Cabinet rank, all of Communist views and character. But I felt from the start that in one exception I would like to make was with and for the President, as his account with me, I have decided that I owed it to the President, and that God would help & save my soul & use it for good, if he likes it that I took a drink with him. I have had a trying day. First of all on coming tired, and not in a mood for conversation, secondly apprehensive at having arrived in the morning at Hyde Park instead of the evening, taking off 30 miles of the President's & Mrs Roosevelt's long week end. I should have come down for the day train; Morgan & Joe Alsop & I had forced myself a little on the President, the day has been very wet, which makes outdoor things difficult, so by evening I had become quite weary. - Just before dinner & then for dinner, the President said to Princess Juliana simply, he will have a cocktail in my room before dinner - that Princess Juliana, for I have reasons only to be glad when he comes & see me. - I said above. Dear Franklin will you please not ask me??. I then explained that before coming to England I had sworn off, in memory of my mother & never take him commanded me, & that Churchill would want me to drink with him as he did, I told the President of his ordering me for the week-end at our first meeting & of my taking it as a drink with, & of my having to refuse, but explained how reluctantly & hard asked me again. The President remarked how much he (FDR) of any will - had been amazed at there being at sea, etc. However, when we came down for dinner Mrs Roosevelt & Princess Juliana, Harry Hopkins & all met in the President's room. There was cocktails when Churchill & Churchill's decisions & cocktails were made. I felt greatly embarrassed not taking any, as all the others took them. The more embarrassed in that I found it so hard to converse. So tired, could say nothing. I had been given anything for just one glass of wine or sherry or a cocktail, but I held out. I said to the President that I felt I was feeling this part, & that I should [illegible] have made an resolution I did & should make an exception, making it clear, however, that I did not intend to make an exception, but the President said (with firmly pulling upon hand), 'You must not'. It was as if some force or voice were compelling him so to speak, a coincidence touched tenderly my thought & heard his mother, Mrs. Roosevelt, at the time of the King & Queen's visit had said to him she did not like cocktails, or liqueurs being used, & I thought she was surely watching over us all. When we went into dinner there was only his small party, the others had gone, champagne & light wine, & cocktails only before. I would have given much for quietness at that meal as for it. I found it very hard & tiring, and after dinner when I went into the Blue Room with the President & talk alone fell so constrained I could hardly take it all, remember names, or discuss easily. I had the feeling that work of planning, arrangement was the day. & how alone instead of easing his burden I was adding to it. When I left his room I was physically exhausted from fatigue and strain.

Once in my bedroom - the one the King had occupied - I tried to relax, by stretching myself on the bed, then looked long at the pictures of Uncle Bob which I had [illegible] in my frames & took out, also the pictures of mother. I thought of them & the voices of God. I was undressed and in bed at 10.30 and began the nursing out communion with the President, I was still 11.45 then turned out light and tried to rest & sleep. I was very restless, fearing my soul out wondering if I had made a great mistake in binding myself the way I had. If I had not made relations between the President & myself more difficult for the future, in other words, really inspired relations instead of helping mere between diplomatists the present & future. Whether I should not forget the resolution, & make exception, whether I really did not need a stimulant & help on with my work which finally I turned on the light & got up. It was exactly one o'clock - I must look again on the pictures of Bob & mother & then found the little book 'Daily Strength' for guidance & comfort. It book opened at the date June 21st, and I read these lines "Have called thee in trouble, and I delivered thee" "Be strong, and of good courage: dread not, nor be dismayed." Then seemed like in voice of God. (As I must look up June 21st on what occasion I opened at June 6 with the verse "Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God." (It was day I was at Bayeux with King & Queen 1939 & grandfather's monument erected in Bayeux) Must go to bed, tried to rest & sleep but was more restless than ever. calling my wanderings sub, thinking

I was nothing resolved in going to Grimes, although I did not sleep all night, at least it so seemed to me, but struggled all the time; I prayed to God, if it were his will, to take that cup from me, if it was difficult for me to get home now, I felt like getting up and taking something to drink - how many times had that desire before in my life that I can recall, though I must have a drink at any cost, though of the fearlessness of making resolutions I had, of losing the friendship I had enjoyed with the President. At one time, I had a queer sensation as if the room had been bombed, I felt the room was being attacked - I felt real fear, but decided to sleep; curiously enough it soon seemed to me as if something had happened in my own stomach then was the night lasted till dawn. I thought then I should look at the clock for evidence, to see if some one was watching over me and if I was right, to my delight and comfort; the hands of the clock were together at 3.40 (Carlisle = 4.40). We must come in late to call me at 8. Immediately I had looked out of the window saw the sun shining on the trembling golden leaves of a tree outside the window (across the Sanctuary roof) - thought of certain lines "The little hands keep on trembling
The little hands keep on trembling
On his unfaithful face the
The — of an unconcerned King"

I began wondering if I would be good for anything all day long, much confused wondering as to if my religion. I went to the bath room shaved at least found later that I had forgotten to take a bath. While I was dressing in ran the Brandreth lads Stephen (Reginald?), to come in a great welcome, noyed his last fervently non stop - block. came & met my trousers, this my shoes (across Stephen) made the inside and tried the outside. I gave him the picture of Mike Pat & Tim, he looked at it first, and then went for it as if hiring it for all it was worth, It seemed to me he felt that was something in the room. he kept looking about. I then ran in to the room I was in when the Kitty was at Hyde Park. She had been in three flats (so Nick said) before coming into my room. It claimed me my smile, it was as if that had been true to me, & was telling me how he had loved my prayers. It was an answer to them.

I should have recorded that during my rest & before nothing I had a vision of being greatly strained, tension, etc, some little girl was sitting near me, & turned to me and said "You are terrible to me always" - calling me by my first name. as if she had known me from when I was quite young. but felt respect for my position. She seemed to want to take away the strain. she kept pushing it to the sides, about me some how I was in the distance a young woman whose body had taken around it, in form of a lattice, as I looked at her I was standing near an open door at the head of a stairs, debating if I would go down. While standing there I felt a strong influence from this figure, took decided how to go down the stairs. I stepped at the 4th and did not move in any direction, just waited & then awoke. — It was then that I saw the "little bones began to tremble," etc.

The whole night long was one long wrestling. I thought of Jacob & the angel. — I had breakfast in my room, and after breakfast began morning reading, and then followed a most amazing experience. — I read first the text for Nov. 2 — re cloud of witnesses, lay aside every weight, & the sin which does so easily beset us — then must go into the 20th ch.

Then an amazing poem in mind of the night's strange vision

"When the powers of hell prevail
O'er our weakness & unfaithfulness
Could we but see the fiery war of great angels who always wage
Greater are the friends beneath us,"

Then this from — Glory from heaven

Then I read Nov 1, 'The whole family in heaven & earth' — "Let us leave me can come to touch a promise" — only a thin veil. — The Communion of Saints

Then opening the Little book "Bitter & sweet" I opened at Oct. It was about refining utterances. Shyness, "a pollution of utterance in our blood" & how to cure it — pining in order to receive, — hunt wood, love it

Then I opened next at Oct 31,

"Blest be God is he who can divine
Where real right doth lie
And dares to take the side that seems Wrong to man's blindfold eye"

& "They are alone who dare not be
In this night with the few wise"

Then I read Nov. 2 — re Daniel "Therefore be strong, be strong"
— the riddles where he could store
it — a patient seeking & faithful (the prayers of our comforting will"

Here were all the strengths of this day and night — the refinement of utterance the riddles — steadfastness to & this summer's work

I next read the Bible

The first words I read were "the Lord — sent his angel with them and prospers their way"

They appear at the top of page 63. (Ch. XXIV in Bible)

This is particularly significant & very removable in mind of what follows

Read (my reading for yesterday, but not sure not omitted)
Ch. 27 Genesis — Isaac blessing Upon Jacob Read Hebrews 11 passim

I had gone over to read this in the Scriptures, when interrupted in morning Chap 28 was one for today. I felt strongly before reading it that I had a message for me. It was the story of Jacob & his version of the ladder then place Bethel

"And he dreamed and behold a ladder ...

"and behold I am with thee, and will keep thee in all places whither thou goest, and will bring thee again into this land, for I will not leave thee, until I have done that which I have spoken to thee of
And Jacob awakened out of his sleep, and he said, "Surely the Lord is in this place and I knew it not" ---- and he called the name of that place Bethel." --- : and this stone, which I have set for a pillar, shall be God's house.

That my reading should have come to Bethel the name of the place, after the night I had had, (after hearing of resolution & the long struggle) was remarkable indeed. - associated first with the Pharaohs visit - the place it has had in my public life & work, - but also the place the stone of Repentance was with little Rob & our resolution & vows made together there in our car & morning walks

I have always thought of Bethel that Jacob wrestled with the angel. & that the ladder indicated the Spiritual strength given him by ministering angels - This was much in my thoughts. & I read this in such connection in the light of what a struggle, & God's presence. - I saw the wrestling, struggling in which he compelled his will in him from Penuel. That - I was face to face with my own self, asking & over throw the something in my self that struggled & overthrew me. But this struggle had been against letting anything & demand. - take not yielding to any influence that might be in the nature of a temptation. I felt I had conquered. & felt the struggle had come from moral conflict - that in the struggle there were desperate moments when it seemed to me I was all wrong in my reasoning and that this must be given me some release from this perpetual conflict of inhibitions, that at times seem to be destroying my health & happiness & power to do work. I wrote on it then as the result of the struggle. the loneliness
I have ever had I think all circumstances considered

Conflicts passed - fulfilled in my life - my self made a new struggle
Jacob wrestling came to God's place Bethel with Pal's stone, where he and I walked in - over Bethel wrestling on a hard - various - demon - the meaning of it all seemed up in "God of Bethel" my prayer - "keep me and lead me - fulfill thy purpose in my life"

I said prayers by his bedside, thought of how the Kings of Brit. Isl. had also slept in that bed, in front of the Parliament. Thought we ought have wounded &c. When I looked at my watch it was 10.55 (8 h 55 m) already. It was exactly 24 hours before when the battle began. The circle had now become complete. Then o'clock until the result was known. Felt the peace of God during the service. Then in the garden I had close fellowship with the Lord & made all the sick of battle & wounded & dead in Holland & abroad mentioned. - The hundred years have been

Ottawa - Kingsmere, Saturday NOV. 8. 1941

This has been one of the most trying days of my life. So helpful until one entered when I motored, & after broadcast broadcast lost myself out again - after broadcast - this morning was faced with the probability - of having laughter as principal element upon which the whole ceremony the is the keenest & most contemptible of all political adversaries, bitter unscrupulous, sarcastic, - has the backing of the financial interests and of the press they control - Pleas Mail, Royal. Buchanan Gazette Government Post. Montreal Journal. - will have behind him as well - many others. They will distort as he will distort from the Conti Record. - myself in particular. - every force will be directed against myself, & the one end - of the leadership of Parties & the national Government formed. - Laughter will be for retaining ambassador, how to get. & other key interests back of him - irresponsible persons in Canada - Britain also. He will step at nothing in raising a heavy conscription war fear will misrepresent - misfully, and will have all Canada & the Conti in about his. Both Quebec having him, he will take no relation, - & arrogant will behave, & must seek to thin of the former. I can see where all that happens - I know Stevens hardest to effect will be undone in some degree but step by step must be made intolerable & his election misrepresentation & the like - First to secure that Committee of Privy (the Executive called to consider date - place of Convention) have so decided that only a Convention would be called. It could not be decided in that way. It appears that this special Committee appointed after I left yesterday morning Thursday could not agree, but - council kept & the Cabinet Executive there & a majority of 37 - 6 13 (?) were for keeping Laurier leadership as was. Ilsley insisted on resigning leadership because I would I thought he is persecuted by him. he is in bad shape - very broken as completely as any time. When I left him was I was working on speech for Wed. Convention in, - It made me sick at heart. I felt I wanted to give up public life. I avoid the break in my health that I feared might come. The strain is terrible - heartbreaking physical combined. but - depression as well. - feeling of being left alone. All colleagues gone or going, no one to help. I alone or Laurier alone, no one to help (subsequently) no one to talk with. - I felt first I should not be influenced in bringing on an election to advert laughter & the storm; that laughter to call a meeting of parents & get a resolution passed, which would declare party had no right to interfere. I thought I had a pre-existing faculty culminating in any leader chosen as a convention, but I was forced hurriedly on the new followers point this night. - assuming all rights - letter below shows force. Evening party - convention - new Executive. I have known nothing like it. - Solis would come, he had come off to Toronto saying he would not accept because his or their views suffered & he needed more adherents here. I understand Jim Macdonell stood out for a convention, interference of Mowat - Meredith was wanted out, Sandfield Macdonald just Quebec had in a huff Commodore up, a row, how could Mowat interfere when under for a United Canada! When I found he had come & that their committee were meeting & me where do we go from here? I felt an immense load off my mind. I could see how great was the load by what a new light when Charlie Bishop pleased & then we then called round & said he thought we were now free of them for good. I told Mackenzie who had seen me particulars case in the morning & as to rejoicing Hincks, Solis & opposition Sunbeck sent word that one of the objections were removed - that - on Monday then of the Executive were going to Toronto & offer him the Commission. Hincks couple said it would be refused & this unanimously There seemed a feeling the party party didn't want blood. - I just couldn't make headway on my speech - working until 2 o'clock in the morning & had to turn to correspondence & by & close was up of it all. I kept at it before & after luncheon. Left by & then left to do & County until Soon & Godfrey.

Then news must also come from Cornwall & Gibson & Macdonald that Johnson was quite 'seriously' but not critically 'ill. is in Notre Dame Hospital Montreal. Went sent for a month at least gall bladder trouble, cannot & shant undertake operation on left of last. He had characteristically sent his usual telegram & then & it seems & help. Bakewell telegrams from Thom no one until afternoon & need & ask him him. No one & talk over Quebec scheme which is very bad. Telegrams ill. continued rain 80. Gordon ill, dentist & comes back Confusion. no good & more than ever [illegible] personally loath & power & my uncertain. Editorial then two will telegrams any & is absolutely different from me. Desperate in the party view Macdonald both ends - but neither [illegible]

Then came a letter from Jessie, telling of Harry's having received his brother Dougal's death, & the heavy fog from Hell, the very worst. With this Harry & I & an Indian & a dark Assyrian boat-load, started, & my home & home abroad Nelson. Away by 7 a.m. William - best self now - Hospital also at home & not too long to manage. It is a hard outlook for Harry Jessie & Willie. They have had great trials & this outlook is far from bright. - Then Willie alone to-day. Mayfield is very tender & - Dr Jessie, Harry both in a critical condition - Willie alone with Nan - Mother the only one at this time very hard.

I could hardly tell on the way out, NW. wind & fog for days and I went for a walk over the moors with Nan & Hardy & Wounds - the large hills at foot of fells & Shady Hill. & I had before long run out & up & in, & after returning & rest, did I feel equal to anything at all. I felt the peace and beauty & majesty of this quiet little home - instantly - the & was afraid of damp & cold - home at noon received us: & after a rest of an hour & a half. I felt quite different. Had a real dinner with lots for Nan - Agnes & Jessie & I - Agnes & flowers in deft ways & hands. - After dinner we took the little chair & had a good "conversation" by fire & rested, & I felt a new strength began & felt I could at last continue daily diary. This something made the task of keeping on longer unbroken I suppose though this is the hardest thing I have had to face since my illness & first saw it. It is more than 3 months. & Rennet was had enough, however known. I think the Empire will know his own difficulties with his own party. I know a party more loyal & united than ever it was any time since & perhaps ever will be. & I began to confess, I felt a new respect & my task. I did a little reading of papers & letters, but at 10½ p.m. & to bed at 11. & was & slept soon after. Total - all my rest. I had at first thought I might return to Nan tonight - 'afraid' of cold rain, loneliness, taking cold &c. but that remained in the spirit of the little home. Glad & be alone to think out - for I will & what is best & to do & to fulfil it here below.

Kingsmill, Nov 8. 1941

Talbot: Joan & all from all here
~~Miss Tindal~~ Miss Tindal is here
~~Hook~~. — I am so glad you have come. I will wait to hear what you say Miss Tindal: — Joan & Miss Robinson & you
I am glad to see Kingsmill again
Thank you for sending the hymns which I used
I opened once before it reached Wembury
At Laurie's Speech
Sir Wilfrid: I heard what you said about Hughie:
He is a bad man for Canada at this time
He will make much that Joan and Jo found home down for Canadians
He would rather defeat Joan than win the war
It has a belief of you which is greater than Hepburn's
He holds every one who has crossed his path
Joan Joan to Joan again
Hughie alone and then of his own ilk
He will defeat himself again
Here across the pods would darling, my first wife said
He will have his own party against him
Your own party will be with you & a man
He cannot last long
K So you think I can
Joan will be in public life long after Hughie is out of it again for good Joan will be given the strength needed & carry on Joan will be in office when the war is over
Joan will play a leading part in the rebuilding of this France
Joan will go to the front in the fullness of years and in honour
The present is a time of trial for everyone
The present is a testing time of men and nations
The present is a time of great sorrow for mankind
The present is the beginning of a new era
It will bring about a new order in the world
It will give the people a better chance to live and to develop their good gifts
Talbot: Joan & Joan and you present is very anxious about Harry; as is well
He is feeling the death of Dawson Roy
Jean herself is very strong, but she is very frail
Phone to her from time to time
Good night

Mrs Tindal:

K You were going to tell me about the Theosophist.
I am happy beyond words here
My father is with me
He shares your being about God and the life eternal
We see things with the same eye
We are able to help our loved ones on earth
We become their Guide and we are able to help them meet them
The night you were at Hyde Park I found the pain you suffered
I was one of the ministering angels seeking to offset your resolution to let Pol. rest at your side
He crept into your room in the morning
He is here now, and is wagging his tail, and jumping up and down
He comes to see you rubbing the back of his head just as this morning
He will be at your bedside tonight
He comes to help guard over you (Joan shows match in straight (good night. hair 9.15")

K Mrs Tindal opens the hands of the watch and shows them.
There is Margaret Speaking
Mrs Pallenson is here. She wants to speak

Mrs Pallen - Well we are glad you have come.
Love to you, Godfrey and Joe Tell Godfrey I am right beside him now, just as I was when he was a little boy at Eastwood
He knows how much I loved him then, I love him more than ever now
He wants to hurry home, so I must stay longer.
He is fond of Pol (Godfrey is talking to him: telling him a story
Can you believe it, I have found all my old friends here
Mrs Margaret is beside me. She wants to speak

Mrs Margaret. The hands of the watch or clock are in God's keeping
He has a great work for you to do
The struggle has meaning that he approves of a given act
The hands together that he means what is in your thoughts and When things come in threes you may be certain (Approves
He is with you, that he has a design that you are carrying out
He wants you to hold fast to the resolutions you have made
The vision you had at Hyde Park you have misinterpreted somehow Forces are working with the angel over the struggle of the higher with the lower self.
The struggle is one which continues on beyond the grave
Victory cannot be certain now, It comes only with power and forbearing

Kenjonure. Sunday Nov. 9. 1941

I have had a day on the whole of peace and inspiration.
I found it difficult to sleep at first last night - upsetting temperature of air. I awakened around 1.30 had had a vision & was distinct & seeing and hearing dear father speaking. He seemed to be speaking at some length, I also saw dear mother with him. - We thought came to me "his mother's voice" when I was of I took his lecture & bound it. also the one of mother & took of the last portion of his "are de triumph" scene, - thoughts of victory. - He also seemed & he associated & to give me an assurance of help in the present and ultimate victory
I slept sweetly after returning & had till 8.30 when awakened I [illegible] morning about 7 or 8. - In. had our usual coffee upon breakfast. with many thoughts & [illegible] - afterwards at the Bethel Store, where I took off my hat & received the forgiveness accorded as a boy. It was only moderately cool. - rather good day for walking. After returning & breakfasted in bed, read the last books & the bible Genesis Wesley of Joseph at the Court of Pharaoh. his visions & dreams. interpretation of dreams also the [illegible]
the story of how Joseph was tried & his brethren - now the reading of yesterday, - the cry of the father in despair. - today. Chap XXIX his power at Pharaoh's court; his fertility; - the false betrayal of Potiphar's wife - the fate of the baker & butler, & Joseph remembered & [illegible] power, like Daniel, using ability & interpret dreams.
- 7 years plenty & 7 years famine - I closed the bible & prayed. feeling that there is something a life of usefulness meant for me at the time, how resolved & found it a revelation.

~~Had~~ Chap 11 "And Moses said unto God "Who am I that I should go unto Pharaoh & that I should bring forth the children of Israel out of Egypt? he said. Certainly I will be with thee: and this shall be a token unto thee, that I have sent thee, when thou hast brought forth the people out of Egypt, ye shall serve God upon this mountain.
---- the God of your fathers have sent me unto you --- God said unto Moses "I am that I am. --- I am hath sent me unto you ---- the God of your fathers --- hath sent me unto you
This is; I feel sure, some how that is meant for me - promise. Moses & others how all asked the question "who am I that I should do the great things of the earth & confound the strong. I believe God has his purpose in my life & I must not disappoint it. - Read this the "consecration" last night was full of confidence.

first was sealed comm at once, - her response Thursday, (the more as Clement) to Kingsmere. The dinner bore - above all about Hyde Park - it was evening empty. until Rob & all most superficial (I doubt how it whether she did or solemnly on Sunday - if so all is it will be clear proof beyond all doubt.) Then was Vallance (Colby) his comm with Meyers. & Wilkinson thought if he is [illegible] was a [illegible] & what he said. - Sir Wolfred & Meyer all solemn. Wilkinson - Pennie & Harry & Meyers especially re version of Hyde Park & my interpretation, which brought it exactly as I had thought. - What was said of Hands & Blood particularly significant - It was a real help & comfort.

Joan told me this morning of a terrible dream she had last night of being robbed of pearls. It had held on a string & had given her with a crown on. Then of coronation. Last scene & held all her pearls. - against Conservatives with friends & seemed to me she was to signify Empire & this crown. Suppose Empire & that all my powers, the best being dispersed & this end. Hence telling this hands on the crown (the seat of power) - stooping with seeming the possession of Wisdom. Rejected in the end. - But let Joan see that I have to contend with a "fighting the beasts at Ephesus" - It began to look as if [illegible] of this Movement was to be subjected & to be my fight for my people. That is my fight - & was this children & [illegible] Captain & Camels & conclusion [illegible] part of this was with a land of promise. I believe that is passed pass by with. — I spent the morning reading over statement for Home of Commons from 10.30 to 1.30 lunch. Then walk with Pat across moor & Moorside Grange. Then a bath - & rest of 1½ hours. - Sound healthy sleep. Not too fatigued after walk - Then cup of tea & Joan began working up the diary - letting story of Hyde Park straight. - Yesterday straight - the former meant - I believe & tell me with the letter; - [illegible] conversation [illegible] Then morning reading but meant to read Odi Profanum. Joan's dream (wonder was that she was felt responsible ?) meant to this coming & with my own vision of last night Promise of victory in the end - would like 7.30 then dressing. Then afternoon tonight of this dream completing at 9.15 - (London straight across) - Then part of it-dat & significant portion of Joan's story told in these pages. I am very pleased & [illegible] formed in facts & [illegible] & [illegible] & [illegible]

It will be more by you in that way.

" Let us start to do to get strength & inspiration needed.
Keep on as you are going. only rest more and worry less
I will send you thoughts to helpful reading
Good night

Nov. 16, 1941

Dearest — Dear Ch —
Lawrence — Lawrence
Sweetheart —

K. We are glad you have come. Merry Xmas your birthday anniversary.
How you do this Valentine?

J. How do you do sweetheart?
The anniversary is already over
It will be 100 on Thursday.
Go & tell him and let him start and they will laugh
Tell him what you said to Mrs Valentine
You have fortunately fulfilled all my principles and policies
I was true to Canadian Unity
I never harmed any man's reputation
I never sought to destroy but to build
I loved the humble folk
I tried to better their conditions
I did my best to avoid strife and hate
I did my best to show the people love in peace and harmony.
Good night

Bella,
K. How so glad to have You so much during people birthday anniversary.
Love to Joan and you
Long ago we used to sing "Just before the battle mother"
Send him merry Xmas & a happy New
Not more in my mind yesterday
I was hoping you then afternoon.
K. (when I returned) felt you were much exhausted feel unsatisfactory because of your fast.
I was hoping you on you lay asleep.
Pray Joan this letter verse to read for today, I counsel you to read at last night
J. Jesus was crying at Nazareth pleading in vain & sheltered dread hatred of the nation he then mourns 'Would I have — he would have those in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on Bella Then you heard my pleading last night and in the morning I was beside you. — (K. I did)
It was sweet of you to remember my birthday
Let may speak

Mary — Tom & Tina Kellers & Jan
Thanks for remembering my birthday long ago we used to give presents & cards on birthdays
Jan gave me a card set (K my own thought as to card set) K no. I didn't Jan gave one to Jennie because Jan wanted it for yourself.
that is correct, I was going to say Jan gave me a letter file K I don't remember that K was also started practice at the Kennedy, don't Jan remember showing me how to punch the holes.
K I say Jan, but I can't exactly recall it (K later
I think Jan was right)
the file is at Kennedy still, may have it. when Jan see her ask her about it.
Jan are always dear to me
He is very ill but he will not last long
He has talent I had, & more than that
K Jan died and how a comfort to Jan
NO but I had my things shot through with perfection also I had thought of the murder.
He has a tenuous and precarious condition of the lungs
He is grateful to Jan for seeking for his son
He may not live long enough to see him
He may die any day from a spasm of coughing
He intends to see the specialist on Thursday
Jan will notice a great change
He is very pleased to go
He understands about Jan not writing or phoning
He will let Jan know about his condition
Jan need not feel afraid about being alone in the understanding of the Lord
Reckon Jan own good judgment in everything
Jan need not be afraid of people
He will destroy himself as he has done before
Jan need not be afraid of not having strength for Jan work
God has a work for Jan to do & he will give Jan strength for all
He will guide & direct Jan path and ways
He wants Jan to lead the people through these times
He will go before Jan as he did before Moses and Joshua Keep on reading the Bible Jan will find guidance there Jan will do Jan best work in the morning. it is better to rise early than to About 7:30 if Jan can get to bed early enough. Good night.

Mrs Tindal — I heard what you said about not wanting to see and you must know what it is again
Joan's sister has a different kind of trouble than mine
She has bladder trouble, I think she will get over it all right.
Know that we are all helping you, all the night
K. as I look at Joan's diamond in your ring, I see the face of Norman Barclay, in the stone
yes.
C Will he speak?
yes.
M Well we are indeed delighted to hear you Mr Barclay
Norman Barclay I have wanted to speak to you for a long time
God has a work for you to do at this time
He need fear the angels always over you
He has raised up better that this (our) frame may be known to men kind
He wants to show the world that Christ cometh through our God
He has chosen you of humble heart to reveal unto the Sons of Men Greatness
He will heal this also to His purpose
God bless you
R. — In our prayers this week - when I see the face of Joan's vision.
Mrs Patterson's vision was a symbol of Joan over evil Struggle
The dark monsters was was a Spirit of evil seeking to destroy Joan
The third man was Murphy, an accomplice
Both are trying to rob you of your power and power
Murphy wants both but will soon realise
He will be beaten badly ere long
He is a sinister influence at this time
He will not be able to do you any harm
The crown is the Symbol of power, which you will retain Good night - Marie,
K Joan says there is nothing in it but right - more for her
Mrs Patterson always sees the horrors but still Remains at her friend - meaning also for her
Her strength lies in holding on to the things that she treasures most in her heart
The bird was a symbol of life itself, above all sorts of people dressed
She triumphant on your wrist through for holding on to the right.
C Angel am back, so feel all right, but it must seem a better soon Feeling in this I want to be home. Good night.

Father - Son Sacrifice
Saviour of Love

Scripture: Good evening Mrs Pollard
[illegible]

Mr Pastor and Mrs Pollard
I was disappointed that you refused that Train on Sunday evening Sept 7th California is dying. We may go at any moment
Now it is to be comforted to know that from just that Pastoral Office
God has a special work for you
He will give you the strength you need.
He will direct your steps.
He gives power of utterance and of courage
He will enable you to overcome your adversaries
He wants you to reveal to the world the power of His holy Spirit
Jesus Christ is Love

Invocation: Love & Jesus and You
Long ago I know God had chosen you to do Some Great work for Him
God will make clear the way
God gives power to those He chooses for a special work
He speaks in different ways to you
Through the Bible in the mornings, in the little hours,
Through the sorrows and suffering of your life
Through the help Jesus gives to You
Through the invitations you sometimes make
Through the victories you achieve over self and in christian
Through the duties of each hour and day
Through the thoughts that come as you read and write
Through the visions you have from time to time
Prayers in Love

Our Prayer: Mr vision of yesterday was the Sermon of tonight.
He moves near you was a Prayerful christian
The office symbolized death of Jesus Christ to Eternal
The colorful music the Sermon in the Lectures closed Being watched a Crowd Hungry Soul you need for Salvation in these dangerous times
He leaving of your keys and money & things on the altar means that you understand to surrender for Christ's sake
He crowds meant the Confession of our sins.
Good night.

Jesus Says - He world, the flesh & the devil is closing all on the altar

Ottawa, Lauriston House, Nov. 26. 1841

Parish: Lord Lyon: Lyon
Lyon in Angus.

Septima –

K. Will. Grant, Dear Lord Lyon Lamont
Lt Lauriston Yours

Sir W. – He sees it will be impossible for us to come yet –
He is here resting
He is extremely happy
He will be with you in Parliament
He is proud of his Father
He sends his love to you both
He regrets to hear all you said about being worn out having to read
He wants you to go on with the work
He regrets to be discouraged
He says the people are behind you
He says keep his heir out last long.
He thinks he may not be in Parliament at all
He thinks he has made a mistake, that his speaking does not suit him
He is sure the constituents would like that
He says not to yield an inch of ground in or out of the cabinet
He is helping you with his thoughts
He bids a thousand farewells to you & to Lady Lyon

Phillis - Tom & all - Lafontaine is here

Lafontaine The letter to Godbout is all right, it must be right to come to-day
The sooner he comes the better
You were right in what you said to the elders this afternoon
It is more beautiful than words can describe & the dream you had this morning I was so very glad to hear you that you were chosen to lead others in this hour
God has chosen you for a great work
Forbear your own judgment
Good night

Mrs Thos. Love & Joy and Joy
Mr Godbout is the right man to represent Quebec
He is a true Liberal
He is a great admirer of yours
He will be able to render the great assistance
Good night

K Can anyone say a word about the Lafontaine Situation
Yes Lord Greg

Lord Greg: You are right in your views
Put off a call to Elmer Lloyd tonight
Tell him not to intervene till America has declared herself
America will have to speak out
She must do so after the Provincial election
Meanwhile Britain should not put a check
We have no choice -, better to wait & take
Good night

202 Elgin St. Dec 1st 1941

No one else ever speaking comes in from outside our circle
Joan- Do they ever do that?
They try to get in as often as they can
They listen to conversations and make up answers.
K. How can one tell
The only way to tell is by one's own intuition
The best way is to concentrate on the subject discussed.
K Please send some one to talk.
How do you want to come?
K The keepers
Yes.
K Tell us anything you think would be helpful at this time.
I would like to help if you will ask questions?
K What about the vision of Sunday morning?
Next was a depletion headed by Responds asking you to be strong and to carry on.
K. How can I keep from being overfatigued? and discouraged?
There is only one way and that is to believe that God has a work for you to do
K But am I not too old?
No, years mean nothing in Gods plan.
K. How am I ever to work alone - without the help I need.
God will supply the help. He knows your need.
K What about relation with Responds?
The message you received last night was right - to the point
It was deeply appreciated by them all
It has helped to get an expression from Roosevelt
He knows you are right in what you said
Waiting in the darkness. He is tired and sad and we pray for his Victory
Home and you were right in coming today
What was the other question?
K What about St Peters Temple?
You were entirely right. The Elders were mistaken in the course they proposed.
Let Laurel speak
Sir Wilfrid: I heard the discussion this afternoon, you were on sacred ground in both matters.
Never hesitate to stand your ground

The letter you wrote Ferdinand was excellent; he must accept.
We must be a great help to you.

K. What about other colleagues?
Ford will distract you in the way you should go.

K What about Moore for Lisbon?
Moore is the best man you could choose.

K Must he accept?
I cannot say. That is, that is something inside your own mind

K What about a number of posts?

L — That also lies in other hands than mine.

L — What should you like me to do?

K Help all you can

L — Thank you for saying that

L — good night.

Father Time to be.

Lafcadio:

K. Well Count, I am glad you have come [illegible] the actual [illegible] you can

Lafcadio: Mrs Pallister, I am glad to see you again

Joan: Thank you. Very much

Lafcadio: We are assembled here, a group of your friends, Hutton, Hopkins Quendon, Christopher Tolkien George Graham & others. He is tired & tired of living [illegible] to the House, incapable of consequences. Held to the line you have dictated Don't give in on conscription The referendum might be made a test vote Decide the House on the address on a confidence vote If the opposition move an amendment that is on a vote of confidence in them Don't waver in the stand against conscription How the extension of the Militia Act can be considered as made to uphold the Parliamentary system, and that to ask them that question to the people is a referendum

K. Is that correct

L. Yes. Long ago I told the people of London they could trust you The farmers and the workingmen trust you The people as a whole believe in you You will defeat Hughes in his ambitions again

Lt Laurie speaks

Sir Warfield -

K. 19 years London, Surrey - Sussex 7 for this suit I used to have at home from Mrs Pallister, how do you do?

Joan: How do you do Sir W—

Lady Laurie & I are both glad you have been in our home these years.

K. Also Miss Laurie [illegible] Joan's friend

Yes Laurie is smiling. He is a friend of mine.

Don't be afraid of the coming session

You will be guided aright

Be free of a loud country, be firm and strong

Don't give in on conscription

You have the right position on that

Horsey is here

Sir Horsey;

K. Well Horsey, I am glad you are well. Old friends again
I thank you for Horsey to call, for the letter of Horsey also for coming to the funeral & for your tribute in the press
I am sorry here beyond words
all are friends of yours over here
Sir John A. Macdonald says you are right in offering con-scription for overseas service
He will help you, He sent Mills to the House today
You are right about the financial interests
Wait, Horsey, before beginning to attack form the account of what you have done & intend to do Don't let any one make you annoyed,
Let Shelton speak

Shelton

K. I am glad you have come aboard, So glad to hear you work again
Thank you for sending your book Bless Shelton, also the telegram & Thank also for enquiring Sandi or the manpower problem
I will help him and Ortenzill
Don't waver on conscription for overseas
It is not necessary carefully select the selective service is work
Let Rogers speak

Rogers

K. I am so glad you are keeping a diary. I mean you may use in Colonist; I am connected with
Thank you for saying that, How do you do Mrs Patterson
Mr Rogers, it is nice to hear you speak
Thanks for what you said at Kingston also for sending book Thanks Rogers & Shelton
The debate will go all right
The numbers are solidly with you Don't be afraid of Borden or Macdonald. They will shout if you don't be afraid of bluffing He will soon dwindle away
Good night
Took at noon - 10 & 10 — myself

asked for

Mr Morgan.

K. So glad to see you again, Mr Morgan. It's been something I was so pleased to hear you say you would like to come I must tell you about this morning's news Your mother was beside herself to know what was significance of the incident on board? I was trying to recall old memories, that she was lightly nervous, needed to take a little seriously at times, The fuehrer of Mrs Malcom you have arranged for tonight Mrs Wilson for adelaide friend she did I was a matter of consolation of mrs'

K How about the card with the 12 fellows?

I arranged that to bring your attention to the kids The people in the sleeping cars had reported to the next town will be for accomodation after the war There will be no where to stop in London

K What about the 2 rows of unopened letters?

You will be asked to destroy decorations when the war is over

K What about Mrs Garfield

The Egyptians were also more helped to win the war We war will be over before long Krema will defeat germany badly The French will rise in revolt The other countries will also revolt Italian will destroy germany + Italy in Africa America will defeat Japan Europe will end first I think in a few months Germany will sue for peace Italy will be beaten first Japan will make headway for a time but will lose heavily The war will be over this year (in the end

K Are you sure

NO

K Great then I mean it will not be long now Good night!

K How do you think the session will go?
It will go all right, It may be hard in places but will come out well in the end.
K Is there not municipal election?
No. I can see clearly with my psychic sense
I feel you and for [illegible]

Mr Rogers! –

M. Thank you for coming. I planned this a book on Spiritualism. It seemed to me a book would be in it, but my friend, Mrs Ada Jones says

Rogers. The book contains a lot of truth, but not the whole truth, what it says about evil spirits is perfectly true, but the Lord's true Church is condemning all Spiritualism. There are good and evil spirits and one has to be on one's guard all the time.

Jones would like to speak to you, She wants you to know that we prize you both very highly and to let you know that the eye of Jesus is on you all the time and that as you journey on you will be able to count blessings every step all right good night –

Mrs Jones. Mr. R.

M. We can what you think about things I think you are upholding the honour of your name splendidly

Jones will defend your business

Mr Rogers must prove that

They have to a great meeting for the purpose for that you are speaking

Good night

Mrs – M. How do you think my health is tonight?

Rogers Seems better than at present

Hold your head up the course you are pursuing

Good night

Kingsmere, Ste Agnes. Feb 7 1942

Pattullo: — I cannot sit here
Sir Wilfrid: Let Laporte speak
Laporte:
K. Well friend, obviously you have come.
Laporte — Long ago I told the people of Hamilton & Quebec you they will show that Thursday on Monday the elections will go all right — in Quebec as well as Hamilton
K. I don't think Hepburn could be defeated.
Hepburn will be defeated in St Johns
K I don't believe it
You will see that I am right
Let Lapointe speak
Sir Wilfrid: Laporte is right in his calculation (portion)
Laporte has been counting heads & he knows the different
He feels personally certain
Let Rogers speak
Rogers: Laporte is right.
I have gone over the ground and I agree with him
Let Sheldon speak
Sheldon: Thanks for the telegram you sent to Mrs Sheldon
I agree with Laporte that the Liberals will win Montreal & Hamilton (East)
I believe that Hepburn will be defeated in South York
I feel certain that the people trust you
Trust the people and they will trust you
Let Jean Lapointe speak
W.L. Mackenzie: I agree with all your friends who have spoken.
The people don't trust Hepburn or Drew
God will reveal Himself through the results on Monday
Injustice will be confounded
God wants you to carry on to the end of the war
He will guide & protect you
The people shall recall my battle for their rights
Let Hazen Speak
Hazen: Thanks for having me in your thoughts (I had it)
Laporte is right
I have followed the campaign and I know what the people will do
Hepburn has helped you himself
He has destroyed himself for good.
Good night

Dec. 7. 1942

Mr Meyers: —

K. Thank you so much for coming. Please tell me about
(1) the vision of the 2 bridges
(2) the vision of Jesus, Dr. and the Dr. former disciples
3) Joan and her 3 Lights

The bridge signifies spiritual forces around about Joan
The bridge of Glastonbury has left his high office
now is hanging suspended by the bridge of York
We can perhaps this vision is immediate success
This means that you are never alone in your mission of Love
The fact that you felt at home in the bridge of Glastonbury where the two lines shows that you are entirely surrounded by Jesus' spiritual forces.
The fact that you were rescued up and made to go elsewhere means that God has some special mission for you to perform
We should expound of the bridge of York & this implies as I said from of the darkness of our day.
The presence of Joan's sister should mean that a guardian angel is at your side
The fact of being in a room where people were at the outbreak signifies that fruitful results must flow from Jesus mission
It is a marvellous vision from a very high source.
Now as to the dark vision
It means that you need Edward Dalton on the inner plane for helpful services to help you at this time
He is right at your side also and must
He is influencing the minds of people to go to you
He is returning to you the help you gave him
Vandeleur and Brooks for the Government
The former for the people
Jewish for the influences around you
Jewish for the results of Monday's election
The Dalton's & signify that the tabloid newspapers will be returned also that Hughes will be defeated, black means downfall, red means rejoicing
The eight signifies eight candidates (Duke J. Welland J. J. York 2)
I am perfectly sure that the results will be as I foretold Mr.
K Am I right re. having time later on to be in country & daughter of Jesus
That was a true interpretation of the vision in that translation

Kingsmere - Nr Farm. Dec 15, 1942

Fulton:
Let Leaders Speak
Secretary: Congratulations on Manchester victory.
K. Bravo your victory: You all helped: And the work! Ours right.
The honours is yours,
The people trust You, they know that your word is as good as your bond
Let Lapointe Speak
Lapointe:
K. well Ernest, you certainly did the trick.
Lapointe The results were magnificent Hepburn is done for good.
K I wish I could believe that, I am afraid he will be back.
NO, Ernest, Hepburn is hated by his own party
He will have to resign the leadership.
K. I can't see him doing it.
You will see I am right
God wants you to lead the Canadian people at this hour
K. I am most anxious to do real leadership: to concentrate on it to the exclusion of all else. pray for me that I may be guided for the
The people are praying for you in all parts of Canada
Lapointe Go to work yourself and the president's speak (Mr Prendergast broadcasts at 7.30)
K Yes we still 10 months
The day is not far off that all Canada will know your leadership
God has chosen you to reveal His spirit to His people
K. Pray I may be able to do this in some measure as may
We are all helping all we can Let Hayden speak
Hayden:
K Ernest Hayden I am delighted we are working together
Hayden Yes Pattullo is also rejoicing
K That is true indeed
Hayden I am so glad that Hepburn is out of public life for good
K I wish I could feel as sure, but I don't believe it.
Hayden You will get Pattullo before long
He must resign the leadership of the party soon
Long ago we met in Bermuda together
Monday all made a vow of his part in this journey
He has suffered for it ever since
Good night

Skelton.
Well Dr. So glad you are here
Long ago I went to Bermuda with you also.
And we went on to Haiti & sailed to the South & West & to Panama, and we came back on a boat to Norfolk and to New York.
K. This is truly wonderful, so true, I can't thought of it as we spoke Skelton, and when we got back to Canada you went to see the President of the United States
Three cornered hats was renowned at that time
Let Rogers speak

Rogers
Congratulations on the election last Monday
It was a great tribute to your leadership
Long ago I said you would lead Canada to victory in the war
I am more certain of that than ever
Let Donald Smith speak

Donald Smith:
K Well, John, if I may call you that, I am delighted you are here with us in the same country again
Mrs Pollock, my mother is here with me, she sends her love to you and to Mrs
Joan It was very sweet mum does both to her
K from here Pollock my dear too. We all love her and you
Most wishes are more than I can say.
I love to feel near to you, Mrs
K. I was missing you had been here this week for Monday's victory
I was with you in spirit all the time
I heard your address tonight, it was the better of the two
K Joan gave me the theme of your remarks.
Joan, as you call her, is a good medium
She picks the thoughts of others from the vibrations at the present moment
She is psychic and very understanding K Tell me what you all feel about the present election and the outcome of the war.
The outlook at the moment is dark indeed, but the darkest hours are before the dawn, I cannot say how soon the change will come but I can see the lights shining brightly in the distance. The combined forces of freedom are sure to win in the end. God is with the people of the British Commonwealth and the United States. good night

Invocation:— Welcome you for coming for me
the victory over the occasion of great rejoicing here we all did what we could to help
It was a great triumph for principles
It will lead to even greater triumphs
Nothing could be better
Yes, this is still an era to reveal God's hand in history
The allied forces of freedom will win
God is fighting on our side
The old testament prophets are all with us
The saints and martyrs are with us
The deceptions and absurdities are with evil Christ and his host lead on in the fight against his kingdom
We meet Congress in his Name
Good night

Tollett — keyes is her

Mr Keyes: -

K Thank you so much for coming. Stefani Some of the questions I can
Mr Vicini about-the letter I wrote or you dictated it today
Franc represents the duty of obligation
It speaks of sensual delights and of indifference to the things of the soul
Perhaps you saw the distance between the things of the flesh and of the spirit
God wants you to remain true to your duty and female
He needs experiences to test you to be humble in spirit
He letter not spirit to you through me

K or you may finger. Tollett says that's long. Then you turn around.

finger (letter not)

I was wonderful you all upset today
I smiled at your two children this morning
I was speaking to you in the letter book 'Eleanor'
I wanted you to know that I was at your side all the time
Your absorption you felt was an earnest attempt, a prompt Nature?

It was the answer of nature to a deep need your letter in I was not sure it is limiting of surrendering self.
God gave us the Sacred to our natures - a lofty and a lower
Nature of the deepest nature the true
The cure is we must not to have the higher pursuit
At your instincts speak

Instincts!

I was at your bedside when you sang Holy, Holy, Holy.
God wants you to be holy that is your life
He wants you to help in the fight between the instincts of today and the spiritual realities of all time
He must send you strength and guidance
Mary wants to speak to you

K - Who this?

He is jumping up at his God

a - hell very big

K Mary big who dreads after you at -

Mary says that her I are running between the two rooms,
Cathy is walking about. I'll after him, when I come back (Cathy was walking about <)

I heard 'Mommy Boy' Mary played on the piano

It made me long to sing like I used to Jon we will they sweet. Harriet they sweet.
Harry. I am just as sweet as ever.
Jon Sr. Yes you are pretty silly.
Harry Boy. Don't forget to teach Kay, he knows Pat and I are alive and that Pat and I are watching over his life and yours.
He will Pat does what we tell him to do
Jon Good dog, (Looking at Pat & on floor)
Harry He is a good dog, and a good live companion
he loves the children and me you
I distinct hear some of the callers at 54 or 56,
I heard Archie at Francis Hoover.
K Why mom that Harry
he holed me,
I loved Kingsmill
I will be there this summer again
Good night
K We send our love to all of them, he knows I am here all the time.
We are here for all the time.

K. Can I right on Monday Thursday night afternoon of next September?
Gladstone (Question) To Hamlin for coming, the Gladstone)
I was in the house when Hamlin spoke
He did for an extremely amount of good
He proclaimed that the people should feel what the Government
He is half hearted in his present position they could
You will form an uprising or condemning over the house
From now on your powers must prove Lord in forgiving if use for to serve this year Lord
Good-night

Pallin:

Is. Can you give me a note to Rome.

Hale:

K. I am glad you have come, tell me what your experience has been – give me circumstantial evidence of your personality.

I love those you want to speak to me
I remember Athens and Cumpus
My mother, Miss Pallison, you and I had dinner on the verandah
We had a wall around your garden
I thrilled myself in Paris
I was so sad at the way my coming went to war
Japan is in the wrong.
I know that She must lose in the end.
Japan may conquer India
She may conquer Australia
She may conquer New Zealand
She must even conquer the United States of Britain
She may attack Alaska and the Pacific Coast
She must not get for on this side
Germany is getting near the end of her powers
Russia must defeat Germany in the Spring
France must come to Britain's side
Germany must join Britain
The United States & Britain must defeat Japan
Mr Gladstone speak

Gladstone:

a Thank you for coming Mrs Gladstone:
I am happy to be with Miss Pallison often again.
Long ago I had the feeling that you would be a wonderful woman.

a I just had an idea
Lady Aberdeen told me all about you
Lady Aberdeen is here I must speak

Lady Aberdeen

a I have often wondered if you would come. So glad you have
I have tried many times to get into touch with you
Let me say a word to Miss Pallison:
I have known her long longer than you have,

Jane – The eternal feminine – Is that true, Did you know her at the University?

Lady A – We dined very often around the University grounds

K. Hale is dead

Joan Laughs etc.

A.R. — Mrs Jackson has a great sense of humour
(he needs it, Thurso)

Long ago Lord Jim would be Prime Minister of Canada
I heard Sir Wilfred Laurier say that.

He is here with Mr Gladstone, Jim's father & Mrs Gladstone, Lady Laurier
Lord Aberdeen and me.

K Now is a wonderful group. How nobly Jim & Mrs Gladstone & father are met such good companions & friends

Jim Mrs Gladstone & father are the centre of the group.

We have come to attend your confederation & this Jim

K on board

On the Gladstones. Not even the right comes to Tea

The Parliament will carry with a large majority

Jim will soon need to introduce a conservation

The people will vote the men to remain in Canada

Jim will get all the men for overseas & volunteer enlistment

The war will last some time longer

Great Britain and the United States will win in the end

Nor Ro. Europe will be commercially ruined

Canada will be the most important part

The United States will be the strongest world power

Russia will be next to the United States

Canada will be the third power in influence

China will be a powerful ally of the United States

Japan will be reduced to a power of the 3rd power

Germany will be reduced to a power of the 4th power

Italy will be reduced to a power of the 5th power

France will be a third rate power

The other powers may unite in a sort of federation under the United States

Index will be a free counting Germany World

Good night

K Is there a chance of the war ending this year?

Yes, it may end in the autumn

K That is lovely Lilah

for we can say good bye to Paris & Nice and then Jim

K Germany & Japan could not be defeated in that time.

Germany will be defeated by Russia in the Spring

Japan will be defeated if we let in the fleet

Mr Lehman will be chief & the Six Powers of Europe

K many thanks — Come to me

K. - To know what he meant & talk about. - To get information & his intercommunication on matters of great concern
Also about Scenic Boulevard.
Boulevard is here until April

Scenic Boulevard

K. I am delighted you are met all our friends, how come brought.
Mrs Vallier is well, Thank Joan. I am very well thank you, don't like it interrupt the funeral service was just impressive
I miss you all the time
I would you say that did the way I wished to die
No illness, no burden to others
I am wonderfully happy here
My wife, body, spirit, Christ and other friends met her when I came over
Joan father and mother were with them
Saving, Brother Sister Joan from others
We have been talking about the war and other matters
There is a great hope that must to find a plan
Our knowledge is one of them

K. My friend father

Boulevard Yes.

Joan. The long creature, how he say, Christ?

Knowledge I was tall enough to stand out in the open
The letter from Father was sent by a friend here
We are concerned about the future of the British Empire
We believe that Malta will be lost unless prompt action is taken & taken by the people
We believe that we can work through You
We want You to get in touch with Nehru through Chiang Kai Shek
Telephone to her soon and ask him to communicate with Chiang Kai Shek Tell him & tell Nehru that Canada will see that India gets self government at the end of the war Tell him that the Dominions will all stand together to that then is accomplished
Telegraph to Smuts and others to secure their cooperation

Mr Gladstone spoke

Gladstone:—

K Thank you for coming
I am glad to see such here tonight long ago I wanted to get Self Government for Ireland the Lords prevented it they see them mistake today
It is the same with India
the only thing I ask is for the Commons to come to the rescue

Joe Joe abroad Chamberlain cant

Gladstone Some people will count for more than all the others. com Hadenge is calculated responsible Government in Canada. they have not they will have faith in your promise they know you will keep your word
Sir Edward Grey spoke

Lord Grey:

K I am so glad you are here tonight
Grey I am delighted to be with you again
Morley is also here, also Minto, and Willingdon
K. That is a fine group - all friends we are entirely together from destruction we will tell you what to do and say the best way is for you to follow your own best judgment we must be able to impress certain courses of action don't hesitate to act
I am certain of here

Harcourt:

K So glad you have come, how so glad to see you in the Union
Grey & Joe and I
I was with you in the Union, I was trying to tell you the word from Paths
the keynote for word was "fight the good fight"
the Lords first referred to Randolph
K. Mark almost my electric light in front of your position
I pulled the chain to let you know I was with you
K. so was exactly as I was on pulled the chain
Morley I stopped the words of the motto at GOD to attract your attention
God grant power to manifest this present the hour & spirit work for you & us
Good night
K I am a Dane

Mr Rogers:

I wonder if the letter from Foster Harris is sent Johnson at the ranch - will you please tell me about it.

Judge Mullen is right to the extent that the deposit of Indian money had to be settled in bonds

You were right about the key and the horseshoe
It would be well for you to follow up the matter in the way you have in mind

Good night

Mr Farr, March 22, 1942

Pollitt:-

K. Who have you brought with you today

Mr Gladstone: The situation in India is sad blame must be sympathy with the idea of self government -
He has sacrificed Cripps to get him out of the way.
He is hoping with Eden
Gandhi has a great hold on the people
Let Meyers speak

Mr Meyers:

K. Can you tell us about the morning's session

The session this morning was a picture of the end of India
India will be lost to the British India wants to be free of British rule.
The Congress of India will declare India independent
The Hindoos are in the majority
The Moslems are the strongest race
The Moslems will declare for an independent sovereignty
The two will unite against the British
The Indian Union will join with the British
There will be internal strife
The British will have them to fight it out -
The result will be chaos,
Japan will attack Calcutta
Colombo will also be attacked by the Japanese
The result no one can say at present
Japan will also attack Australia and New Zealand
Japan will be held back there
Japan and Germany will continue to keep apart.
Germany will attack Russia soon
Germany will be beaten by Russia
Germany will sue for peace
Germany will lose all she has gained
The Japanese will lose in the end
The war in Europe will be over this year.
The war in the Orient will not end till next year.
Good night

Kingsmill Palace Sunday March 28th 42

On Wednesday morning before the news I heard over Wonderwall of the B.B.C. announcer announced 'Perfumed Horns'. Some minutes or months before she had announced 'the lonely heart'. The two topics seemed to run in my mind as a sort of psychic vision. The night before I had received (or received) the interpretation of the vision sent by Miss Vaughan 'Clock a call, telecommunication system'. I had said 'Horns means corn in Wales.' I felt that was the 3rd, that is four weeks to all Wales. The perfume spoke. Seemed to me a sequence the complications which came from different sides, to one whose heart is lonely. It meant to be on one's own ground, not to surrender one's position the key being in oneself. - remember Shadfort & called 'Communion for mist for certain' - Shadfort 'You are yourself the answer' I caught a vast sense of power seemed to come to me with this understanding of the 3rd interpretation - The first related to world affairs, the second reconstruction, the 3rd to Canadian affairs, still reconstruction and the 3rd personal affairs unity and reconciliation all brought about by holding fast. - not allowing the forces that would commune on either side to gain ground, as consciousness might of self contact with self realisation. -

I reading this morning. I read the account of Solomon & the Queen of Sheba - thinking of the breakfast prayer to be back at time of eating told of offers of kingdoms, & of this prayer for the people at time of shedding of tears & blood. - I read on to the account of this coming strange woman, in this old old city must seemed at such a pass. I prayed God to deliver me from any such fate. It made it truly God - this human weakness. Then seemed to me to confirm my interpretation of the vision through 'Perfumed Horns' — Dealing as they completed Spirit & world affairs. Canadian defence contingent. I must see Mrs at Hospital, & returning stopped in at Dr Glyn Hughes & had a short talk with Lloyd-Rodney. Seeing Harry put to finish a drawing. Mrs Rees telling me how Mrs Hospital arrangements etc made me tonight late - as I thought of this picture. I called with Joan & Linda, Joan tired, returned late to Dennis room. — Next morning Thursday I read Book of Kings. Dealing the promises as keeping in communion & walking in the ways of - & pleading to God this Godly promise depending for its fulfilment on God following

I received from a friend a letter containing a description of the vision and the interpretation. I made up my mind to keep more than one to myself, to maintain the integrity of the highest & God for the light of God's countenance to shine through my own in all else. If this be the holy spirit, which I pray more & more of may.

On Friday. Thankful vision of Glory continued. Lots more relations, & pilling over crowded & following after a part of Judea & Jerusalem, to see some glorious Resurrections. It seemed to confirm the vision. Mr Rodney & Murdoch, through not becoming interested in any way. — On Thursday Miss Mc Nair called with her son at room 210. It brought to me the Motherhood of Christ myself at time Simeon's words took me into the Temple. Our profession & last more like mothers. I felt I wanted to take her room home & to have her come to Sammi room — (Mrs Ed Thomas room of Thomas & Sammi room. — Left dishes in to God's work in my life) Sat Rathbuns came on Friday night. — Next night or early next morning about 2.30 Saturday am. I awakened & smelled the odour of Florida water on my pillow. It seemed to me emblematic telling me how of her prayers and pleadings in my pulling manner & her & her spirit — Now come in 'communion' last night Saturday the communion of that feast. — All morning there in the light the light of the Saviour — perfume & roses. — The life of the Spirit may also have something more pleasant & more beautiful for this I pray above all else, at the beginning of Holy week. as I write at Kingsmere, in the bright sunshine of a lovely Easter week morning, after a walk in the grove, where the blue sky, honey suckle & robins the first I have seen this year. The first in the season true — on each of the side of the road from the main road to the farm — the others two on other trees, all three flying off in the direction of cultivated homes. a pair of bluebirds I heard & robins yesterday afternoon for first time. Lockwood says he saw swallows at L. H. on Friday morning — last spring is on the wing — mornings may pass. May it come into my heart & make its presence there, new life new homes, new joy & pleasant to others. I have a blue jay & a bird on 2 cedars out of my window (after morning & robins this morning.) the moon is still coming the ground here, but it melts dim & pale before the rays of the sun. The pine trees make some make the appearance, there will come fragrance & roses

I seemed to see and address responsibilities & the division or the interpretation, I made up my mind to keep more than ever to my purpose, to remain true & the highest & seek for the light of God's countenance to shine through my own in all else. If this be the holy spirit, which I pray more & more of may.

On Friday. Hurdle's vision of Tony's conduct & our mutual relations, & getting more crowded & following after a part of Lydia & to keep, & see some flowers perhaps. I meant to confer the vision. At holiday & Conisch, through not becoming incensed in any way. — or Thursday here Mr Wm called with his son at room 210. I thought he had the weakness of wishing myself at time Dr Weipris took me into the Forte. Our parlour & best more like mother's. I felt. I wanted to [illegible] his room however & to know his come & common rooms — (Mrs his rooms Room & common & common rooms. — but decided in & God's work in my life & I so had better come on Friday night. — Next night or early next morning about 2.30 Saturday am. I awoke & smelled the odour of Florida water on my pillow. It seemed to me instinctively my own sense of her presence and flowers in my waking moments then — & the Spirit — Now comes a 'consecration' Lent-cupid Saturday the confirmation of that fact. — All making clear in the light the help of the season — perhaps flowers. — The gift of the Spirit may also have something more frequent — more knowledge for this I pray above all else, at this beginning of Holy week, as I write at Kingsmere, in the bright sunshine of a lovely Easter week morning, after a walk in the grove, where the blue sky, honey scent & robin the first I have seen this year. The first in the season true — an ark & the side of the road from the train window in the form — the other two on other trees, all three flying off in the direction of Guilford towns. a scene of Shelley. I heard a robin yesterday afternoon for the first time. In bed says a song sparrow at 6 A.M. on Friday morning — and spring is on the wing — unmistakably now here. May it come with my heart & work this season & this, new life new hopes, new joy & support to others. I have I believe joy & a blessed end of my pilgrim (after morning) robin this morning.) the moon is still coming the ground here. but it will disappear before the rays of the sun. The pain does with some make its appearance, then will come perfume & peace

REPETITION

Joan: Hope some one funny comes — Kingsmere, Wed. 28th, 1942, Father: We rarely see him — evenings for Thomas
K. Son to all + all from Spirit
Guardian: Joan is right. There is need for a little young in life
Life is dull at times
You were right, I was near you this morning
K. and you bring the perfume.
I had a bottle of Florida water
I wanted you to know, I liked what you said to Mrs. Wilson
The vision of perfume and roses relates to the life of the senses
The highest life is the life of the spirit
The way to live the fullest life is to be careful of every word and thought and deed
The best way for contact in communion is by prayer and study and by reading and reflection
The way to get guidance is to keep calm and tell God's will to your soul
You will be able to receive help from on high if you ask for it
I.T. next Spirit
Max: Thanks for working Mary and the boys
You will receive guidance from on high in the next few hours the (election - word that Roberts, Mackenzie, Bracken + Power had to make forced landing N. of Quebec
Roberts is all right. He is on his way again
The letter from Father was to draw your attention to the danger of group work + communicate with You
Many are working to save the Empire
Gladstone is one of them. Grey, Morley, Asquith, Wellington, Bismarck
They have messages for you
They will send them in reading, writing + speaking
K. You mean when I am reading + writing? I will be inspired?
Yes.
They will direct you to certain sources of information
11. I wanted you to make good appeals on the broadcasts
They and others will help you
Let them speak
Isobel:-
K Glad to get Hello for Joan + me
I read my book + you and Joan
I heard some prayer this morning, It was sweet of you to pray for me
I will join you all the help I can
Good night.

Kuybyshev, March 28, 1942.

Wednesday April 19th 1842.

Hallo! – Come from all those lawyers in here
Barlow.

" Thank you so much for coming. Now tell me about the union of the fortified or the Grey print paint, – also about the Chief. and about my visit to Barlow on Tuesday & whether I am to expect it here. I did'nt ask – You know I trust understanding.

Lucy The footsteps are those of the afternoon, Pa's loud voice of welcome, he and Barry are here now

Joan (Hi – ! Barry boy!)
Barry is mild with Chilpit, Ann heard him tell the cook to call his name and even the cats Godfrey calling to them Pat. He heard Godfrey whistle, he is jumping up on Godfrey and running over Ann Potter Pat is near your back and is licking your ear

" Pat's a fine boy. – a boy. Pat
He is jumping up and down. He loves him better than Godfrey
He sees you feel the hard bone in your head and your thin white wrist and the fat one
That was a reminder to him of the last ~~time~~ of which you come to him and all inspired the fondness of the hard bone, almost perpetrating a good deed.
God works in this way. A good deed is immediately in the influence of good deeds never die. They flow the receiver and the giver

K. What about the String.
The String was a symbol of spell
You will make a long spell soon
The fisherwife will envy by a long one soon
It will not cover in Devon, but will many do so Let Pat Speak through me,

Pat – Dear old Kate – You spent I will.
I heard you call to me, I drop your mind from evil thoughts
I came and laid down beside you left the empty I died
I licked your face and you went to sleep.
I loved to hear you sing "He leadeth me" and the other song about your mother "Hope in the midst of pain"
Don't feel this was anything wrong in today expression of tender feeling
It is natural to be drawn to our love – that love in God forms us our feelings to guide – comfort us

K. Tell us about Pat. Have all of Skinny's words ever accounted to a spirit or food & then for not a con.

Meyer. Not meant that he was free from all bondage
He was symbolized shelter
He stood symbolized a force that tried to hold him

K. Tell us about the key, and if I were lost on hill, or what to expect.
He key to yourself.
You have time on your hand at all times
You have not lost contact
You may expect to have some remembrance whereas may soon

K. any suggestion
Set up contact when you have been doing
Don't read in bed, wait for morning
Keep up exercises
Don't work too long at a stretch
Give more time to seeing people
Don't come to the people
Follow the elementary chart
Read all you can about the war
Pray for guidance
Good night

Mad - Thanks so much.

K. Give our love to all the household. Keep in all affection.

K A word about the war - personal position what is this?

Prediction.

K Before any plain - Have a word about my letter must be rehearsed & sent as best
You must right in opening an immediate opening
Joan. — Now what have foreboding lost in London
Gordon was chief of the Sudan
He president in Fielding too much to postpone elections
The Nation very may suffer great losses in the Indian Ocean
India itself may fall into a condition of chaos
Persia may suffer a great loss of some of her state Ellen dominion Hitler may gain ground on Russia
Egypt may be lost to the British France may suffer anarchy
Long ago I thought the Nation Government would not last

K What will be welcome? — America will be victorious. Britain will share in victory
The end they come then soon, Canada will be saved from invasion

Keep on with your test of all costs
God wants to use you & He can use you
He will give you strength & guidance in many many ways
just ask about 10.

Tableau - Scene 6 Act
Question in Parliament

Curtain rises:

K. Glad you have come. What do you think about the debate in the Lords last evening. Your position. I am pleased that you agree

Joan. It was well worth the trip

Sir W. I have been doing all I can to get an appointment with the Queen. The clergy are asking the campaign today. Joan left over the radio had a great appeal to Quebec. The result will be a surprise to many. Quebec will give a good account of herself. The result in the Maritimes will be overwhelming for Abbotsford. I think that Vaughan had not supported the Abbotsford. He is defeated in Quebec. He may try to get back into parliament, but will be rejected to here

Responds

K. Well friend, I am glad you have come. What are your views. Good evening Lord Beaverbrook, I am glad to see you again

Joan. How very kind of you. I want you how handled the campaign skillfully. Quebec will be true to you. The people believe that you will protect them. They will give a majority on the vote.

K. I don't believe that you will see that I am right. Will you be the friend you have been or conscription. I want to appeal to the Lords, may count depend you. Joan will be strongest than ever after tomorrow night. Rogers is here

Rogers

Mrs Rogers so glad you have come. What is your position? Good night, Lord Beaverbrook, I am so glad to see you again

Joan. " " Mrs Rogers I am glad to see you.

Rogers We vote tomorrow will be 80% over the entire Dominion.

K. I don't believe that. It might be 70 overall. You will see that I am right. Quebec will be a great surprise. It will give a majority for Kingston will give about 9070 for. So will Prince Albert

(as my [illegible] — (Mrs Hogan) & the boys
May believe [illegible] in the Lafe business
Shelton is here

Shelton

Well Shelton, this is [illegible]. So glad you are here
Good evening Mrs Pollard, I am so glad to see you again

Joan. Good evening Mr Shelton (with [illegible]). I am glad to see you too K. So is this [illegible] little soul at Shelton?
Mrs Pollard is to stop here
K A sort of [illegible], like you there,
I was a long time in [illegible] myself
K And what about [illegible]?
The Government will have a tremendous vindication of the policy of the [illegible]
You have turned the tables on the pirates in grand fashion
Now Scandrett a chance of Shelton

Scandrett.

K Well Senator, I am delighted to have you here tonight, we all miss you very much.

Sen — Lord Pollard, I am glad to see you again
You thank you my [illegible] Senator,
K. I know we [illegible] have [illegible] your [illegible] for
It was us for, it was only for him
I think you have been wonderfully kind to my people and to me
K They know how [illegible] they have — a loving family
Thanks for all you have said and done
The [illegible] is going to be a great triumph for the Government
The vote in Durban must let the people see [illegible] they want you
You must never accept [illegible] for [illegible]
The demand for it must fall off at once.
You must be strong there, in London in Britain & the U.S.
They must all see that you have adopted the wise course [illegible] urged.

Lecturing —

K well, too [illegible] — I am glad to see you again.
Mrs Pollard, I am glad to see you again
Joan. — It is a long time. I [illegible] thinking of you, I want to very much
I am delighted to have a little talk with you
K Thanks, so am I — and [illegible] Sir James & Roland & Barnes
I can [illegible] of them, I must be glad to have a word, after Broadcast.
Thanks for [illegible] all, they are all here

K Alex Sydney Smith
Foster Lewis has been a pen.
Burian and Boland are dancing next Wed
K pen Chum my dear — my love to all Brodeur is as proud as punch.
Sir Tomm is so glad his son is doing so well
It is a splendid show. pin + write remember pen my love & all the old friends Graham, Boyleworth, Letson
Fielding next to county Chum very soon
Sandwiches talks as much as ever
Good night
Sir John A. K. to Sir John A. Chum
K. am so glad you have come. An election would not be worth pen worrying you.
Thanks so for that kind remark
Tomorrow will be a great day for Canada in the eyes of the world
It will be a great personal triumph for you.
It must be a relief for the hostile behaviour of this more of prejudice.
Good night
King Here are the telegrams. O.D. and Alexander — both have been of the Federal Cabinet. are they mine I will keep them Tupper May I first thank you. O.D. is here

the Liberal party will be a glorious party tomorrow night Goodnight
K Have is one other telegram I mean, (from Graham & Co)
McK telegram.
Thanks more Hallam for calling me grandpa. She would be a bonnie Grandma Tomorrow will be a grand day for all the Conservatives the country be certain, I am proud of you. You have done wonderfully well in the campaign
Good night — God bless you
K. — Hallam — a last word with you. Thanks for all your help. I know I did owe love to you and yours
Good night. I God be thanked for all mercies mercies — Good night

Ruppmere, the Farm, May 10th 1942

Father -

K - Please leave the different persons comm:

Sir Wilfrid:

K - You know the present position: Please tell me if you think I have taken the right course, that it was best to do what the plebiscite outcome. So far as you can say.

" Mrs Robinson how do you do.

Joan Have you eaten.

K Long ago I tried to prevent the Tories from dividing Canada
They are trying to do with you as they did with me
They will not succeed
The plebiscite was the right course
It has shown how united the province of Quebec is against conscription
No government would ever be able to coerce an entire province
The French Canadian members will stand together in parliament
They will continue to support you on every thing but conscription
The other provinces must see that you are the only one who can help them together
They must see that no other one can unite the country together
They will admire you for your wisdom in trying to prevent conscription
They will support you in trying to prevent conscription ever being put into effect
They know already that it is an impossibility
Take all the rest you can and trust to Sandeman from on high to help them together

Mother - Well Mackenzie, I am so glad you have come as Mackenzie boy - my fondest love to you.

I Love, dear Joan, & you and Willie

Joan Mark you, Mrs King, the day has been a lonely one, I have been beside you all day long
I spoke to you when you were half asleep
K - I thought it was you I heard a voice in the room
I said "Good day"
I left so as to let you sleep.
Don't be afraid of the coming months. You must win a great victory
Good night

Mrs Mc Allister — Tom, dear darling, I am so glad to see you and can keep again
" . you a long time. I am afraid it has been my fault
Jan — I want to send my love, are you writing home yet
I have been married.
Mrs Mc — Jack is working very hard. He is well and strong
There is no need to worry about him or Wesley or Joan Joan — They are all well together in the flat in London.
They are at Ethel today, I can't find much of the time in London
Good night
R Can Tom & Mrs Allister come to Nancy. Do you mind?
Yes.
Nancy. Tom to go dear Mrs Allister to Paris and to keep him and a Nancy to Tate
Joan Naughty Tat
Nancy. He is a funny dog.
Tat and Nancy are here with us
They are with much delight.
Good night
R . My love to Fairie Well & Ernest.
Our word must depart
Stefanie: Mrs Allister how do you do
" What do you think of the solution
I hope that all will work out for the best Jan how when the right comes
She cannot see that now
She remembers Christ, they will say so when they look in Testament
Good night

Augusta, June 2nd 1892,

Fischer:- Down from all sail,
R Don round also for short test
Lauren. Well, Let us thanks for coming
Good evening Mrs Patterson
Joan " " Sir Sir,
Lauren. The material you were working on this afternoon is excellent—
Try to conclude it tomorrow
It would be all the better if we had it.
R. would you help us to get on & help us part on material work as you wanted
Thank you for asking us. I will be at Joan's studio anytime wanted
R. Help us to finish out the excellent parts.
There are several of you also are helping you
R. I know some of that, please thanks all the others [illegible] for help
Lauren — Let Rogers Speak
Rogers. I am delighted you are with us
Rogers. I am also delighted
Long ago I tried to present conception coming
You never succeed in the end
The material you have is excellent
The best part is still among your papers
R Please help them to find it in this morning.
I will find it for you
Let Shelton Speak
R Shelton now am so glad you are here. I know you will help all
You can
Shelton. I thank you for asking me to help
I will be with you while you are at work
Long ago I tried to present Canada coming out the war
You were left in the course you took
You are right in the course you are taking today
Keep to the lines you have marked out yourself
Your own judgment is better than all the others combined
Good night,
Laporte Laporte is here.
R. So glad Everett to have you here. Help all you can
Good night Mrs Patterson. I shall expect you to pose
You will do splendidly when you speak
I must help to those what you say to Dunbar Good night — R. my love to all.

Kingsmill, The Forest. June 14th 1942.

Fortin: - Come forward
Mercury is there.

St. Helier says:

K. Is that you grandfather - yes - well you do the talking
The time is drawing near when you will have to assert yourself more strongly than in the past
The Germans are doing their utmost to defeat the Government
They will make use of anyone and everyone to that end.
Let us one decent Jew
Stand out to oppose at all costs
Do not resign on any consideration
Let Malet go if necessary
Let Macdonald go also if necessary.
Put Jewish men in their places.
They must not resign if Jew remain firm
You are entirely right in your stand
Let Germans Speak

Sir Delfred:

How do you like Pattern
Joan - Will Sir Delfred we need your help this time
Our friend is on the right course
He knows what is the right thing to do
K. Speak to me now Sir D.
The course you have mapped out is the right one to take.
The debate will help to convince the public of that
The people believe in your judgment of events and their consequences
The Germans members must fall into their place on Joan and you hear about Villeneuve take it and obey
Sir D. Villeneuve's decision must have a great influence
Some of the members gone home today, no advantage then to support Jew.
Let Jews father Speak
Fortin: members and Friend Come to Joan and Jew
We believe you have taken the right course
The Government must be Sustained by a sufficient number of whom Jew independent of all the others
The result will help Jew in meeting subsequent Situations
The party must fall behind Jew again as Strongly as ever
Jew cannot now need a introduction conception for ourselves
The people will see it would be a great mistake to attempt to do so
Good night
K. Jew & all

The Farm – July 12th 1942.

Fadden: How do you do

Journal: Sir W. – Mrs Pattison, I am pleased to see you again.

K. – Sir W. – Mrs Pattison. You say – that is your proper name

Sir W. the pronunciation is correct –

K. I am pleased to see you again Mrs W. as you say.

The dream Joseph had was of Sun.

Journal to K.

K. What is the meaning?

The sun represents the Province

The moon represents the Dominion Government

The star represents the Provincial Government or Conservative

K. How can it be explained?

The way you have developed.

K. What way?

How all the Provinces & Prime Ministers in Canada

K. Do you think Lapointe would?

NO. Lapointe will fall in line with the others.

Lapointe would rather have you than any one else in office

K. Will Robertson cause trouble?

Robertson must be forced out –

Sir John Bill exposed him with the Militia

K. How? Conscription enough to win war? Fail? I was not.

They all exposed on both sides

They were tried like you, and thought you had been tried & pleased.

K. Was right in taking Sir John Bill & Hamilton?

He fully understands the situation and will be helpful.

Robertson is entirely in the wrong.

It is entirely a matter of pride with him

He is sticky minded, and strong willed.

He will come round all right

K. Do you think conscription will become necessary & will be imposed?

If so when?

Conscription will not be necessary at all, but it may have to be imposed to satisfy the people

K. Canada & the will to fight in the war?

No. The mind & conviction is not great at this time. It (Conscription & purpose) would help

Help Canada mightily

K. Except it not have the reverse effect?

No. The Quebec people fully understand that you are their friend.

They know that what you advocate must be for the best –

Lord – right

Shelley:

Joan + I talking on to Shelley & am struck by the work of comparison (Joan thinks new work for.
and original contribution can be expected studies done. with this comes Emanuel

R. You have heard the conversation between Joan & myself. Please give us your views
Does Wallace go right in what she says about Malory and Morte.
I Joan. And I am speaking of text only very determined in but she is mistaken about the Round Table Arrangement.
Rogers. Lafamie, Sandmann, Annie, Roland, Dracothesaurus and I are glad Joan was entirely right Joan's grandfather would have had a broken heart if he had read one of his wife's work.
Let Hemingway speak

to L. Hemingway

I heard you reading about the Baxter and Bartlett parentage
I have more proof concerning Stella
May stood for whole-no heart in our national life
Joan stood today - as for what I stood in my shoes
The town persecuted me, they will do all they can to injure Joan but they will not succeed,
The people are behind you, as they were behind me
They will honour you for being true to principle
You must be stronger than ever
Good night

Julia: Song from all, & audience unite & Speak

Julia: Song 6 Joan and Jon
The name was quite successful
The crown of thorns was a symbol of public life
It has been Jon's cross many years
Jon will end home & cross at much longer
The people are behind Jon
Those who are Jon's enemies will be confounded
The rest of life is before Jon
Let Lucy speak.

Lucy:
Thanks for coming & let Bryan's wife and children
They were delighted
The reason was something good
The audience was glad & assume Jon's life
The little comedian is a lovely child
She likes Jon very much
She is a sanctum express
" Like Bobby
Lucy Jon.
The white brother is an Old Testament character
He was Abraham in his day.
He is helping a circle here
He has great Spiritual power
He wanted Jon to know that God had chosen Jon & help establish his Kingdom upon earth
The spirit of the crown of thorns as an symbol of brotherhood
He said this mean it was a life, but that it was the cross Jon knew had to carry for years
The cross has been carried steadily right along
The horizon of the dawn is already in sight
The light on the horizon is quite bright
Jon journey will not be so hard from now on God has chosen Jon to lead his people with forces of peace
The war will end suddenly soon
The war will end suddenly soon
The nations struggle it will mean destruction of artificial tools
They will find a way to appeal to reason
The war has been most of its course
The period that will follow will be one of reconstruction & cancellation person in interrupted to pass the plates of meat, other interpret had come in. She could see about not like the interruption. Then Said when I was speaking of the Cross of Christ, some words him words stopping Said "Oh I know enough, not the language it". What I feel it means that, the Confession of the Cross. I remember "the Communionship of the Cross is open order to belong to"

Means. The communionship of the Cross is the finest order in the world.
It transcends all other honours
It leads to higher wealth than any of wealth, or position, or power
It is the shining of all our hopes and vision
It is the joy of joys. It is the light of the world. It owes that our spirit and mind of our Heaven. Gods presence dwells there and Christ is the source of love to all
God bless you, my dear brother.

Kingsmuir, Merlaw. Evening, January, 1942.

K. I was till we about the "long bridge", also re health.
The bridge stands between the present and the future
It symbolizes your life
It means that you must live for a long time to come.
No one can tell how one knows.
You must be able to move till the end.
The doctor is a guide in daily
Take all the rest you can Go to bed early and get up early.
Eat light food
No food is important
The ringing in the ears comes from the stomach
You need exercise, or medicine
Take last meals occasionally
Good night.

K Do any you else write?

Nefus.
K So glad you come. Yesterday when from you on Wednesday night
It from me great affection & take through Daniel to you
We know all pattern by letters our words to speak
Keep on until perfect life, your work is not ended yet
God have a blessed night for you to do
He must come for the triumph
Good night,

Kingswinford, Mr Isaac, Aug. 14th 1942.

Father Tomkinson at
R. Where is there? Mrs. Meyers
Mrs. Meyers:- He wishes concerning Pat's age what I believe it to be " Then explain at length?
Pat stands for a Spirit friend. He watches over you all the time
He knows you wanted secret the work about going to England and wanted you know assurance in advance
He knows you wanted the decision about the journey and wanted you to feel perfectly sure about the outcome.
For those the love shine because he knows it wanted to end the long flame and that you would be lonely if the news about it
He knows you wanted quietly until the time and wanted comfort about work protection
He is here beside me now
R. Well you please thank him for me. Do you mean Pat is beside us or the Spirit friend?
The Spirit friend is here also Pat.
R. Who is the Spirit friend, if I can put it so, and what is Pat doing?
The Spirit friend is a Hindu, of many centuries ago. He loves you because you reverence the laws of God. He loves you because you follow the teachings of the old Testament prophets. He loves you because you speak to others about them. He has a great vision and sees you into the future. He says he will you that God has chosen you for a special work. He wants you to help extend his kingdom on earth. That work has already begun. He sees is making clear the difference between good and evil, the way you speak the other night is the way he wants you to do on Thursday. He helped you in the performance of the Spirit.
R. Please thank him for that. I have felt more serene spiritual power lifting & uplifting me & during the week & sad, because I was very tired, & much have helped me in the speak. I thought, remembered has also helped.
Meyers You are right & that. Your mother was much loved at the time.
Your mother He had a lovely mission. R. Who is Your Meyers
Meyers mothers on the next Spiritual unfoldment and ministration.
Another love is wanted by the Lord of God.
The Spirit had a profound effect upon the dance and upon all present
Good-bye.
R. [illegible]

Joan. Ask him to look after poor Mrs. Mac & him to sit for my picture
Mr Lawyer: Mrs Pallerton, I am so glad you speak
Your son must be perfectly safe. He will arrive in the best possible condition. His visit & this side has made a new man of him.
He is very quiet & quietly determined & made a great start in everything
Hopi tells me him has had a good effect.
Joan listens and talks home down great good
Godfrey's appearance and manner and interest in Joan's career has helped him a lot.
Seeing the children so bright and happy has delighted his heart.
He will never forget their influence, and all they stand for Joan Thanks Mr Lawyer. That is very kind
Lawyer. I thank you for thinking of me & how did you come to do so?
Was it because you knew I was devoted to Mrs Pallerton?
Joan. NO, - It was because of your friendship for him long ago and Godfrey when a little boy in England
Godfrey was a dear boy, and I love him dearly
Joan. May I ask about his dear dreams (Joan is here engaged does that mean about an elopement?
Lawyer: Yes, Mrs Anglin is here and will speak.
Mrs K. Will Mrs Anglin we are delighted you came down, do tell us & what everything?
Mrs Anglin! I am so happy that I cannot speak.
K Just to hear my I speak
Mrs An. I have to cry a little,
Mrs Pallerton laughs but she knows how she would feel.
Mrs A. I sent the dream to him for you
K Does that you manage it. - I how did you come to send it.
Mrs A. I heard you talking about him on Sunday night and I heard you read aloud Bob's letter - Bob's letter was on Saturday.
I learned with him forgiven & joyfully and saw the danger
I told Joan everything about it, and she spoke to Mr. Lawyer.
Mr Lawyer asked me if I had any effect in going Joan, and I thought about the velvet gloves. In that moment and the fact about the maid upstairs and the people downstairs. I knew Joan would understand about the gloves, the rest was to him Pallerton
K I meant to there is that! Joan, about know that more man,
Mrs A. He was home to Mrs Pallerton (signed Mrs Anglin). K Joan to Mrs Pallerton
Joan. I think that was a very clever way of working it out. It was one we to think!
I thought it would be so

Kenjemen. Sunday August 23rd 1942.

Monday left last night about 7. (from a letter) when I had finished sorting up papers. Ch. I must + study physics for chemis mock exam + [illegible]. was very tired, having had no afternoon rest after chemis + slept from 8.30 11 hrs. Wonder about reflections they contain on his own colleagues. little praise for any save himself + much criticism or exposure of their weaknesses. Very depressing story. Part of him but annoying relief from my anxiety that I had taken over + left-out-unmindful after.

Last night 10 till last night, but better than others recently + home? think, been eating well + much + satisfying exercise. Bombers during night but many missions which seemed to divide themselves in parts:

Part I. 2.35 a.m. I seemed to be dancing with Mollie along Grange Road and + out + left to [illegible] towards the group. Knew was with old + attractive [illegible] in the distance, but [illegible] towards our old home + Grange Rd. It was torn down, + only fragments of walls in evidence. Mollie seemed to be wearing pale. - like one is just transparent. I thought of picking up a piece of the red brick and carrying it away as a souvenir but did not do so. It seemed there to be part of the scenario. I walked left-handedly when + to P, also we seemed to have nothing to eat, and I did not know where + to. Mollie was very pale. I said mine mind I had a few dollars on me + I'll go shopping + eat + somewhere + eat in or something when + to when wakened — I could not make anything of this vision - except that perhaps it was result of my talking to Mollie. - but I always feel sad when Mollie is not well, and but a good night when she is with me. She seemed + be drawing away - was not to a meaning + be complete. - I wondered if it were a picture of the lot of suffering of fellows men in so many parts of world today.

Part II Later the scene seemed to change, to where I was with a lot of people in a slum area, they were a degraded and bad lot. I seemed + be trying + rest + one of the [illegible] + a woman seemed + be commencing me. - Then suddenly the [illegible] broke + [illegible] me and tried + take away my pocket book. I had my fist shut with me and I forcibly threw it and it away softly.

Part III I seemed [illegible] back at Grange Rd and [illegible] a [illegible] being built on site of our old home — It was now morning. [illegible] o'clock organ playing at [illegible] to cats for walk & remain before breakfast. - breakfast on lawn - Post unoccupied until 9 big home - read in garden seat. Some cheques & letters & communications after app. (about 30 - 31.) - Saw Mrs Nor accompany 2 dogs until Berry Lane & rest. - then little dog. Came over & home after reading & Sport-forecast (only through dedolence - memory) External affairs post-mark. - Worked steadily till 1.30. Mrs Called for Joan who walked with me over moor. - Luncheon - which I had in room - returned immediately after & read about Borders' invasion - I found enlivening on dismissing Suicides Schedules & Mrs Thom & read with, - but heavily written - & wrought consciencing. - Style was too inspiring - Mrs record under. Chief of my colleagues, Mrs Thom, Port record more than forwarded by comparison. At 4 went for a rest - & slept till 5.45: (hands together & Mrs I awakened by a glass of Mrs. had cup of tea. Mrs Mackie up Mrs during this time Joan and I walked around & moor - post. Crowds of cats very active Speaking of about - first little Mrs Mrs. Coldrey was working on Mrs lawn. Mr had dinner in Mrs Sun room - fish trout - & Mr. Lunch. Mrs in front of an open fire I read from Borders Memories - Mrs seldom such a good read for Mrs colleagues, & Mrs can hardly distinguish from Mrs Chronicle; - Mrs must stop - Start coming Mrs Mrs mentioned & or existing in others - & comparison with Mrs Mrs. admiration Mrs affairs: also surprising in pretty much first person? & cut (as Mrs always and myself. - had a few hymns. - to bed upon moor at 10.

Monday, August 24th 1942.

Slight frosty night - continuing cool in night. Up. at 7.40. after usual Mrs for walk with Rab & Mrs, breakfast - reading a Lewis - day & Mrs cold - change of 30 or 40 degrees: Sun & Storm alternate. Sport-forecast morning on External affairs telegrams, Mrs & Mrs held sway. and continued on Mrs during afternoon, Chased up one dog but at one time - walked around moor with Joan - after read letters from Borders Memories (had previously read most of Mrs - I was Mrs for read in Mrs 11. - I find it interesting Mrs Mrs parallels & my own experience.) after reading letters & answering Mrs Joan left upon Mrs visit. 30 went - & rest - at 4.15 and slept soundly till 5.30. had cup of Mrs - bath at dressing Mrs. when papers came read Journal. - always passed at list of casualties. - account of 2 submarines & destroyers Mrs with some 70 others. I reproaching myself over Mrs useless existence, but at Mrs Mrs. The press all battle scenes & have been worth while Mrs remainder pretty much as was. Read Cooling copy Mrs Osbornes "Brief Darkness" on opening & read Mrs quotation

"The cloud itself is lit by a covered light Leading from light & light, through a long darkness"

last night made a nice dream in my mind: when I dreamt Mrs Osborne was dead, had left a fine memorial - had placed a white stone memorial stood to be a sort of metal case, or else covering of a casket - long & hollow. (some time I am not sure if you at work made - not of wood not a casket, it was a hollow container, dark metal or outside, inside from there as a container, but contents not visible. It stood in the middle of the path. I stood at work, if any without distress - like a last of when you can over I read aloud to her first chapter Mrs Osborne book - also said interest - my letters from Mrs Elliott - was thought will of last broadcast - it was a nice that personal contact, helps in foreign companion. Mrs thought last broadcast the best. He was a good the forecast, I think, I how ends back to wounds about 9.50 and a cup of last song - the band in time for bus. & Calais - Canada "roundup" - Mr. Johannes moment. - Hollywood pre- -pardons for raid. & Toronto - Millions send it was seen - all very interesting. Broadcast & Washington - Nelly was first re counting conversations with others - took up over phone screen thereof & labour difficulties must still workers. Agony and Sydney - decides to decide with Hero Colonist tomorrow - your direction re dropping letters etc. - also letter of re war formation around. - Sydney & Coalmen re releasing Brain - letter to unit - lights out 10.45"

Tuesday August 25th 1942.

Slept soundly last night - letter for us dismiss. Night cool. Romantic morning had vision of being with brothers. & recall seeing home and also was with us of the war last very beautiful, or indeed she looked, only a bit of her hair on her forehead was out just what it should have been - called me across to the top where in a large hotel over a week-end. I had been given a fairly furnished suite. Mother's room was here in comparison. white walls. high, was in the process of painting it. I asked if she was not cold [illegible] & she said yes. I made her take it, - but recall wondering if we could afford to expend on extra - wakened when debating how long the stay should be. - glad to see dear mother again. I felt when I awoke I would [illegible] all it be well to see again. Still in vision was conscious of counting [illegible] & room.

Was up at 10 past 7, had bath & was dressed when was sent for mail with Mrs Simmonds after - breakfast morning coat & bright sunshine - letter for colony box. breakfast as usual Bread from England - they should leave Tamsford 2.50 this. Came over & down & began working up this diary ab #2 Coast & (about 2 hours of clock in straight line) Spoke to Richard re supplies planning [illegible] he was writing on job in 30's & would thank over skipping [illegible]

I went in early morning on current correspondence and departmental matters - and evening to War Information Board. Brain seemed most [illegible] consent - & statement re. reversal. Read this correspondence & pamphlet re Steel workers and organization Committee. Won't mind if Parsons plan outlined of steel workers, but Lord Milford is not a good man & head Labour & is out for himself. Poor difficulty with colleagues in this matter, not [illegible] of whom were to take the right line etc. - but believe they now prefer to work [illegible] to one man and be not - the right one. - Lord Minto's birthday letter - enclosed £25-0-0, supplementary & gift of £50-0-0 for Spencer & matters & [illegible] & arrive payment for creation of [illegible] awaiting for [illegible] & Maud. Eyes troubled me [illegible] & late after working & [illegible] & reading worked till 7.30. Joan walked with me around the moor - a wonderful clear bright day. Later I read aloud some of Hardy's memoirs. Had a rest between 5 and 6. Moor coat & depression can. Was busy till 8. Next word this w. head also All Wood over British radio of death of Duke of Kent - on aeroplane crash in Scotland - evidently struck a hill side - en route [illegible] & Iceland. Fog very thick for Royal Family. Found it difficult & [illegible] (at this point phone rang & more items saying Public Works minister & Lords of Plan should be flown - already went for Duke of Kent. - I said I must not - sure, I found it difficult to decide. & agreed & home Secretary of State for Dominions cost of Dr accident - at Port Moresby - 7 yrs - & Port Pat Line, but - am not sure on [illegible] Bridge, at time of moor - Head & Lennox of Imperial Chemical Industries on Sunday. Instructions ordered & telephone worked at that time.) - continuous meeting - wrote out messages & things. - Some heavy, bombing & Kent. but finally [illegible] time off also to Cork pool, at Newfoundland and sent personal reflections & sympathy & Duke & Duchess of Windsor (Joan admired a picture this letter, as likely & lead & his getting & London letter &. and I felt he & his Ex Queen had been at Sandringham together in 1927. - also that this moor a time & the war first responsible for a decrease of [illegible] & moor very good the children (Ann & Mary) came over & moorside with [illegible] & [illegible] in Station car & sat before fire while I had dinner, & had some [illegible] soup. & play with pet [illegible] on. then I walked with them all back in moonlight along road. & [illegible] & [illegible] & then radio news at 10. & afterwards saw eclipse of moon. & walked [illegible] asked [illegible] & children & [illegible] the eclipse, & then returned & for off messages. bed & moorside 11.30. The eclipse impressed me deeply, underscoring a perfect order & the universe - design & direction, no chance - law - eternal unfolding - & here & for a of this creating chaos and destruction. killing wars following war & millions. Surely the evil shall overcome:

Newspapers Aug. 26. 1942

Was up before 7. – Had had a curious vision of being at some station in England, ah & had seemed a wee bit in connection with Royal personages. Guess. – Cordial ladies etc. I recall the Earl of Athlone standing out a long lad. – a relation & then was speaking me or trying to, he was arrayed in fur garments, fastened around his head. – others all (early dressed. Lunch sociable talk – There seemed changed I turned to be at a court function & I often saw others long in in a line I said to Compton with me, within Sth personage, we had better get in at once or will miss it. Ex must & Prince entrance as entitled. Found we were soon in a series of apartments, heavily draped, flowers etc. empty, but guests beginning to come in. Soon crowded. I was concerned about – how to obtain flowers, so I had a window curtain and saw others pulling at flowers. Fortunately there was a pair in tail of coat. – I recall having a large bunch of keys in my hand. I thought there was another bunch in the tail coat pocket, but added this. – Then began to be moved along in a procession which seemed to end at the palace door a sort of steps, the palace personages began to change with crosses, & other stood there saying 'the Kg. of Sounds' as one [illegible] to the end of the waiting party may or may not [illegible] Quite long I seemed to find myself in a sort of back yard or what might be a concentration camp – but of this I had left – I was approached by a couple of SS officers, with the salute – My pockets were felt & I recall carrying arms, etc. then I found I unbuttoned myself. – It seemed I was to a vision suggesting "Women of the Odyssey" & the disobedience of [illegible] Courts in international relations. – I feel in this connection a concern about human legations coming here – I was reading a report saying to remember they were all spies – to use a word. [illegible] authorities on expenditure in legations etc. (Such as one of our officials – was [illegible] up & backed & showed before 7.30. returned to rest till noon. Then eat for meals until not: breakfast or noonday meal? Thereafter reading in garden seat & one to Palm & 9.15 [illegible] up this diary to date & off to London at 10. am. Banquet & meeting for remainder (till end. post 2 a.m.). Had in Ceremonies with book of Ceremonies Office, as was bound. Use at first rules of engaging. Said he had not been using regulation list as I had given instructions. corrected & leaving his copy to him). Later he said he must do his best to help. – he is not the man for the post-engaging. – Reading of

mon committee of Cabinet 1830 this P.m., had a report from General Nelson [illegible] of raid. In entirety Soldiers in best spirits on Sunday - Esp. much impressed by morale of troops. No complaint, wounded ready to go back and fight. - Very impressed by record of Prince, their bravery and leadership. - Queen Alexandra very high of. - Loves very strong. - all officers, considerate. Says air battle was not how often represented it did last for hours fighting - air battle cost German enemy in planes & men. (See Evening N. C.) Broadcast of Gd. Coomera Welcome at Bradford on 'Canada' 23rd [illegible], this type of comradeship, all forget-offered is non outrageous, & example stood to credit of him. I object strongly protesting as Prime Minister against this kind of thing being so much as countenanced by military authorities, relation offered is could not be.
Wives not a man caught more red-handed. - Sort out arrangements in war [illegible] Board - offer much confusion. Postponed announcements and post. - Sorry for all coming delay. Honours all well that ends well.
Press very seeing Prais. - a fine patriotic & stand on his part. - Postponed a real so crispin - had luncheon at L. H. [illegible] 15 members red. then to Cabinet
- Chiefs of Staff Midland Hotel re Black Sea, all colleagues agreed my guidance & him. I confirm his attitude of publicity - giving letters & press in advance so intelligent (say this morning in form & radio word of Clifton adjourning a day; delay for further consideration of Council - [illegible] only 'unfavourable delays') I have changed my mind about sending & wait-him, this I feel this Black Sea business should be put on a national basis and inequalities finally adjusted. No mention of Command other than loyalty and hope communicate an effort with Holland as Spokesman.
Re ci check pledging for leadership in the Union. ex. Workers. Read.
- a very difficult letter ex Evening. (ex-Sydney.) G.I.O. - letter radical, inclining to the communistic - I feel as I write I should send Holland a positive letter placing him - his position as Union Town before.) I read over draft prepared under my direction (Major Stewart & Private of Sir. Cook) and in part but inadequate. - in parts unmanly. - came in afternoon Lunch. & Colin Tremaine left Ok off 9 P. o'clock - last Tea tried before 6. 45 & work out what I really wanted to express. I myself could not find words to express
- P. Churchill also tried & my letter helpful but [illegible]. Have not yet had official letter. - Job at Council also in Hughes Committee report Cabinet agreed to recommendation. - Bill of Commons recalled in Wed first opportunity & their recommendation - Tom Thompson, Deputy of Sec. made Supreme Commander. (Evening & Taylor both pressed & work under him Coal Board which height of him - Otherwise [illegible] powers as Dictator.)
Ben 6-pub Comm for 2 year. Evening Ben made decision of Board sitting permanently etc. also for a year.) recommended & Cabinet full support - Think I have recorded to have this Committee recognized for Commonwealth - (Dr Lyon &)
Mr Lawrence idea of Council & Food Com. Found [illegible]

Mon Conclusion of Cabinet 1930 this 2nd, had account from General Milne of results of raid. He interviewed Sitwell in hospital on Sunday - says much improved & morale of troops. No complaint, wounded ready to go back and fight. - Very impressed & record of Divisn thro' bravery and leadership. - Have stock very high of. - Losses very heavy. - all officers casualties. Says air battle with Hun when taken prisoners it did best for troops fighting - air battle cost Germans heavily in planes & men. (See Cuttings W.C.) Brangwyn of GD. Coronets behaviour at Bradford re 'Crusades' 23rd proofs, his copy & comments. all pleased agreed it was outrageous, & example should be made of him. I spoke strongly yesterday as Prime Minister against this kind of thing being so much as contemplated of Military authorities. Malcolm agreed it could not be. Wish was a man caught red-handed. - Post-war announcement in War Transportation Board - often much confusion. Postponed announcement post-war. - Sorry for the incoming delay. Honours all, well that ends well. Press very Scrimp Mais. - a fine patriotic & stand on his post. - Postponed a real sacrifice & kind instinct at 6.45, & 15 minutes rest. then to Cabinet - Note of Stalin's telegram to Churchill re Stalin's Strike, all Messages agreed very Evidently to him. I confess his attitude of publicity & giving letters to press in advance so unpleasant (my letter concerning to Com Trades Union & telegram advising a day's delay for his consideration & Cabinet sanctioning only 'unreasonable delays') & I have changed my mind about sending it to Australia. Etc. I feel this strike evidently should be fought on a national basis and inequalities speedily adjusted. No members of Government other than Bevin and Hore Belisha addressed an appeal with Holland as spokesman. He is clearly playing for leadership in the Union. vs. Moscow. Herbert. - a very difficult letter to write (Colonies.) G.S.O. - letter radical. Enclosed to be communicated - I feel as I write I should send Holland a gracious letter placing him & his position as Union have fixed.) I read over draft prepared under my direction (Major Stewart & Private of 1st Cork) and it is very bad inadequate & unfortunate. - Come in afternoon and Lunch. & take Dressing Gown off by 8 o'clock - bed. Tea tried before 6.45 & went out when Dressing gowned & shaved. Evening could not find words & Eileen & P. Churchill also tired & of cuts helpful but pedantic. Have OK'd Hore's official letter. - Post-war Council also his Radio Committee report & comment & send & his recommendations. & Bill of Commons will be with Post & possible & their recommendations & Tom Thompson, Head of Scots under Hume Monypenny - (Memory & Trafford Smith Personal Secretary under him Civil Board which helps of him - Etc' his Monypenny Powers as Private Secretary) He is put down for 2 years & Memory He made director of Rio Tinto Company for which, also for a year.) Resumed & Cabinet finished & I have succeeded to having Hume's Resignation accepted for Cabinet Secretary (& Lord Stamfordham's idea of Secretary & Lord one. Found Hankey [illegible]

& he was carried for supper rooms in Regent's. London is one vast [illegible] but age and the pursuits of pleasure continue.) Mary Watkins called at 7. Rosefield has had a woman's visit down. was largely occupied. Jo would rather Jo thought, Rather than myself. I told me my telegram & letters had helped him to regain his strength. - I fear I do not recognize hand work in helping my personal work & theirs - talked with him for 20 minutes or more. Then went & to see Canon Henry at Rosefield. He had had a very pleasant day. & must come & remain first a little longer. I told him of his working & moral work in hand, characters. Theirs that he has had a hard fight. - Learned first flowers - very handsome man. Loves Scott. It was 10 [illegible] before he stood. Day & 7 received telegrams. called at Shady Hill, for Mrs. Thomas, & had supper 10. past 11. - a cup of soup then light out.

Thursday. Aug. 27th 1942.

66th anniversary of Jennie's birthday. May she enjoy to equal & in years to come. Mary & is not well & has very sore throat. May Mary & may come better all right. Jennie herself needs added care and treatment. fortunately she keeps cheerful and never complains. I was up at 7.10 & dressed before the sun. Went for walk with Pat & Nannie - breakfast on lawn, Nanny & Jeannie. one little day Nannie sitting beside me in garden barrow & Pat at my feet. both talking me & my conducted. - a beautiful fine morning with flowers & birds & insects below shone in front. - I prayed earnestly for the fulfilment of my mission on earth. Strength to do and endure. - Heard yesterday & wrote on his continent. - Thus ended & his days here closed on & first a series of annoyances, he has ended his own career - a bad [illegible] will [illegible] left effect on Canadian mental & conduct. His ambitions [illegible] greatly frustrated. - Came & found 4.10 & lesson at 5 hours writing & during. Word re Stalingrad very ominous, but I have a feeling last battle turning that Hitler strength must not be equal & demands upon Russia's. also that Japanese are beginning & lose some of their forces. The Chinese seem are usefully engaged & this. Both Jeannie & Jessie have [illegible] with the [illegible] & Mrs. Semple at one time. & left in tears deeply. - Too much interfering & displeased. The long hours & [illegible] & maintain. - Must pray Thanks Rest & Sea Air & Quiet - Rest from end & Resolution, Courage & Faith.

Phoned Jennie - delighted & found her in good spirits and [illegible] & Association of the matters and Springs. She says she really enjoys her rest: Hazel Wright is visiting her. I spent the morning [illegible] letters & Communications, most pleasing re visit of Mrs. Thomas & Jeannie, home

& we carpd for supper round in Ox Cairo. London & ask that Wyndham, but ag[ain] he guests of Englund exhibits.) Mary Watkins called at 7. Poor fellow has had a wearing week-down, wet. bronchitis. He looks older than I thought, Rather thin myself. I did me my telegram: Queen had helped him & spare his strength: - Upon I do not recognise head much one below my personal work & them - talked with him for 20 minutes or more. Then went & me Canon Henry at Westfield. He had had a very fatiguing day. & must bow & remain quiet a little longer. I did one of his writing & cured which is bad, characteristic. Then Mr. Ho has had a hard fall:- cracked pair flushed - very handsome man. Cross South. It was 10 1/2 before we heard. day & I reached Kingsmere. called at Stanley Hall, for Mol. then & Moorside, & had supper 10. for 30 - went. - a cup of soup then bed & out.

Thursday. Aug. 27th 1942.

66th anniversary of Queen's birthday. May She enjoy good & for years to come. Mary & Ian left & him very long. - Mary Hoare 2a very cross letter all right. Jennie herself looks added care and treatment. fortunately she keeps cheerful and seems comfortable. I was up at 7.10 & dressed & from the room. Went for walk with Pat & Bonnie - breakfast on terrace, reading & hammock. one letter day Bonnie sitting hands on & for[e]den hammock & Pat at my feet: both looking me. & very contented. - a beautiful fine morning with flowers & rain & bright blue sky in front. - I prayed earnestly for the fulfilment of my mission on earth. Strength to do and endure. - I had resolved to meet on this occasion. - Mrs Hankin & her 2 sons here around us & first a mess of amusement - Bonnie, he has ended his own career - a bad, quite in character with selfish mental & conduct. His ambitions too cruelly punished. - Came & found 4 9.10 = Lunch at once meeting of Cleric. I had no Statistics very encouraging, but I have a feeling instinctively that better strength must not be equal & demands upon ourselves. also the Japanese are beginning & lose some of their forces. The Chinese seem are simple evidence of this. Both Germany & Japan have [illegible] with the protection of the Soviet Union at one point. & US in lesser degree. - Two hours interlocking & depend. The long line of communication & maintain. - Next year should see the armistice - but far from end of hostilities, must be old.

Princess Jennie - delighted & found her in good spirits and genuinely appreciation of the matters and Spring. She says she really enjoys her rest: Hazel weight is pleasing her. I spent the morning doing through letters & communications, most pleasing re visit of Sir Hubert Henderson, home arranged party for tomorrow night. Sir Robert & Lady Sinclair, Mr & Mrs Rickman and Mrs Hayes Curran. Joan & self. Sinclairs come from Toronto. He is representing Mr Bat. at Washington on Saturday. - Jack Hallinan wrote us of their safe arrival & safety in England. Heard from Ronald on same boat at Queen Wilhelmina. Just had urgent cable today. Had cable from Queen Mary & Duke of Windsor today. Both most appreciative. Took very little rested from 12.30 to 7.30. Evening afternoon dictated to Hancock & miss G. clearing up much correspondence. - dictated a long letter to Bullard of the Steel Workers Organization. - He has assumed the role of a writer, correcting all former, & creating crisis strike, and holding this threat over the head of the government. I am afraid the C.C.F. are playing politics & constructive. I felt I should explain his tactics and their significance in his own words. - This procedure is so reprehensible that he may think twice before declaring the different steel mills close down. but I doubt it. Tomorrow his case of contempt will be fully made before he acts, & he down. I feel that some way should be found to avert a serious of the underlying issue of the underlying, but it cannot well be made under threats. I wish my own attempts were more understanding of the issues that between & more sympathetic with labour. - same as last for Joan all. I hope and believe my letter will do good. It took me from 6 to 7.30 to get it dictated & revised. Evening reading over mail & correspondence. and another half hour in P.M. to bring it further revised until Vicky left at 8 o'clock. I was really pretty tired most of the day. Joan came over & had dinner & we walked back together. She is very cross about Godfrey who has a hernia that has been aching of late & also had some other bladder trouble & today sent up card in one foot. Poor fellow he suffers a good deal off & on. I feel a bit anxious myself ~~about~~ over it. Will let the latter part wait then or until I get in evening. Must sleep the former. Got back & to accounts & to bed by 10. read Epistles of the week till 11.

Friday. Aug. 28. - 42.

Summer almost gone. - Rain very much need by land needed for July inches for crops. Raining heavily last night and again this morning. A little rain during night. Busy day & the mail. Lunch with Mr. Justice Kellock & some young barristers on "Samson" a good discourse, - Had breakfast in front room fire, evening there then & the same. Must clear up & date. Letter not left until yesterday or this morning. has taken the wrong thing somehow but I must see all right. visited by Wrights & Gilmour & Sabby & Mrs Foster

Dressed this morning going through Ottawa, Ottawa at 11.30. Had a short rest at Macdonald Cabin. Then worked at the farm until Robertson & Fleming arrived 1 p.m. We & Lionel had a drink for Sir Robert & Lady Sinclair. At 4.30 or 5 received word from the Home, that Mrs Glass from Toronto could not land because of mist & fog. Had gone on to Montreal. Disappointing for us, but fortunate in a way as was for night was a very stormy one & Wind roared on and off all day. Fog set in again at night. Robertson & I had dinner together & conversed afterwards on Defence until 11 when for the news at 10. Going over to Farm for papers about 9.30. I read the newspapers after news till 11. Then lights out Saturday. Aug. 29th 42.

Slept fairly well but wakened towards morning. Rose at 7. Had bath & shave & went back to rest for news. Then later went for walk with Robertson & Mrs & Colonel Gordon, Secretary for Agriculture in Sask Govt - morning cleared up a bit. Came over to Farm and spent afternoon going over Sask., unfortunately - ocean mailing left soon, when he left for town. Much telephoning & office work to finish & get off Sask mail Monday night - Robertson, as usual, busy going through enquiries & requests & telling, calling in as required and & Skelton. It was a solemn morning waiting Odlum & Hilliard, the position in which he was placing, Hilliard & would place himself in light of his own expressed views & those of Skelton & Mrs Hume. I feel there is a little constant personal feeling between Hilliard & Mrs to be removed & C.D. Hilliard & Robertson Mrs for Mrs there is great antipathy between - Robertson & Mrs to endeavour & is way of conciliating action between Mrs & Hilliard & Fleming & Skelton. Went over & work & Farm as last night's dinner & found Mrs very indignant & had only spent word of dinner having till 4 this morning - Mrs unfortunately had Mrs word & Mrs Bernard -, who had "called the Skelton" re dinner party till. I in turn felt resentful & upset at Mrs unfortunate & boss. - also I know I had made a mistake in not flowing Mrs home direct last night & his error. Concerned about Home's unfriendly attitude - Fleming & Robertson both Mrs counsel Mrs & Mrs & Mrs Mrs - I felt a little better back & feeling had & our counsel & encouraged. Phoned Mrs Home, intending & arrange luncheon & Hilliard, but Skelton Home not & be in Toronto & I saw she was not keen & coming out for lunch & Mrs party night. So I called off idea & luncheon. Phoned Sir William & Montreal, & arranged for Mrs & Lady Sinclair & come out at 12.30 Sunday & Mrs & Mrs Mrs - Mrs & Mrs Mrs - Mrs Mrs & wanted Mrs for.

I was very tired after luncheon and took a rest at 4 o'clock. Had walked around Moor most pm, but found it difficult to throw off feeling inferior & misunderstanding. Sir Lloyd said I had luncheon - Russell & Lewis Gamble came at 3.30 and I dictated letters till 6.30 read papers afterwards. Tom came over at dinner hour with little Pete. Heard about from Borden's memoirs afterwards. Very fair estimate of Great-Consider & mainly "4th Sam" should say he had 'changed the Structure of the Br Empire." - Borden. Dennis will say of Italians in 1917. Befriend the Italians which has ever since been followed. Sat out in sun for hour. Read papers afterwards (letter as a rule from Gamble Elsewhere in Statin Jan 30 =

August 30th 1942.

Sun in the morning (26th/4 days following church, remembrance of occasion when colored the days liturgies - doings. - I was heard at 6.10 or thereabouts - and again at 7. - It was about 6.10 I was called & bells hung by when at the little chapel Christ Church Pictures was dying. - It was 7 o'clock he passed away. - As May in bed I recalled how I had been a little hurt at Something on the Sunday morning at Ottawa in - - -Johnson's: it seemed to me as I must there 'morning reading in Daily Prayer': the words were meant to make me I had not felt completely conquered that incident. - I. hurt at Some words. - but apart from this there were Significant happenings. When I motioned work I was saying over to myself the words of 'the Old arm chair': I love it. I was - - when can down, & thank me for having that Old arm chair': ch. It seemed significant of Mama's associations. Earlier before 10. had melodies of Home, &c. I had a vision just before 10. - I do not recall this first part except this I was Something on an occasion of State. Dressed in Windsor uniform and had to speak. There were ladies & gentlemen about to enter dress, compare &c. It seemed to me I also saw a group of Senators whom I hardly knew, & very busy so pre-occupied with my work. I had bundle of papers for speech. It was either the Commons or Mackenzie Centre I was near. Was given directions about where proceedings. Mackenzie seemed to be in the corridor, at the end of a long passage field, and something seemed to strike me, or cause me to hurt & bury the uniform there, and then speak material. I was crying & sobbing there I motioned the words were 'bury your burdens' or if this be more Sacred function. dress. &c - and I was in readiness. Then as a sign and cue. - I went for walk with Lewis Vol. 1. the Albert Prince - when reading in the Commons fell I had yet Some evidence of a need from dear Father. I was not surprised therefore when on reading Jeremiah III. I came across the words " with these words from this time cry unto me, My father, thou art the guide of my youth." - Now the Remarkable thing is that on Friday I read 2 chapters of Jeremiah, and on Saturday missed reading any (Rehearsal night) read little books that last usual bible chapter. which brought me to this on 11th today - more remarkable still when I had finished reading something seemed to leave hard. Sorry I am. Can have missed something - or so it seemed and there to my surprise were the further words. which I had read but not noticed significantly as follows: "Thou shalt call me My father; and shalt not turn away from me." - Very significant in its "not turn away from" the last act of disobedience which so upset. as related to this last day. at Kingsmill - father almost drowned, a little later, going out to swim took 26 for and last thing obey on this above also this word of promise. - mercies not of any turning back "to make sure of just having missed something significant. It was all overdone. I went into the city - to attend a memorial service at Christ Church cathedral. - Duke of Kent - one man who perished at Darwin. It was a beautiful service - the sermon "inappropriate & deceptive" for the occasion, not overdoing the loyalty end. - Canon the Hon A. Lyttelton brother of the late Viscount Cobham. - I almost - wished to go to the service not wanting to be identified with the loyalty orgies - with the tea combined & more quiet depressed. Queen and Duchess were in the same box. - Archbishop & Bishops present in full numbers. Composition - Colet Bunnion here inside on which the Countess of Crossley are sitting. After service called to see Canon Henry at the Deanery and had a fine talk with him. Really treasured to have seen it to finish as - the Cathedral Music minister - a high high religious - he has had a hard hard life. - called to see Mrs Phillips. - has been suffering from cancer. Spoke of having been healed by faith. "Spiritual". Phillips she tells me has cancer - a terribly sad business, three marriages. Subject when at - She had been in telling Canon Henry a few days ago. - Enjoyed drive back to Kingsmeen by Lower Road, scenery very beautiful in places. - Heavily wooded hills in distance, valley in foreground. At Kingsmeen walked around by Lower after dinner. when I found Drome over with me at - Henry tired & more, went to bed - slept soundly from 9 till 6.30. - in latter room most abundant. There is a real peace in this room. Joan came over for dinner & after dinner he listened to Messiah from London. Words - words - words for music. Handel - Hallelujah Chorus - not always Christian anywhere. Had some singing over Hoffy Norris - Henry & Dorothy boy - sir. Very affectionate about father's memory. Looked well & spoke of him on his photographs - Last of a truly noble man. - Canon Henry agreed. to have Joan for week. the greatest of all the gifts of God to man.

I have been much concerned over possibility of Charles in Still today. He

Saturday - Sunday discussed situation at length with Mitchell, urging him to do all possible to secure position for me. - he planned leaving for G.H.Q. in New York. He made many enquiries of Wallis. - Asked Colonel Millard the leader of Scouts Shannon. - He has invited Millard to dinner, which does not open a door, or help it open & if he will see & form sort of inquiry, will soon the situation. I told him today, if Millard ordered a Strike-millionaire arrested him, the law should be set in motion against him - for clear defiance of the laws. - knowing what the inquiry entails. but that says Millard is a coward! does not alter the fact he will order strike. I want to do all reasonably possible to avoid it. Have answered at a letter from G.C.F. brief words thereon saying I can not be responsible for inquiry & must depart if no cooperation - an admission of what result will be - thought possible on part of G.C.P. - &c

Most important of all. A personal & most secret letter from Churchill to his wife fell stolen, & came by murder from hotel room to Downing Street; has returned my mind greatly. Churchill has the right course in seeing Stalin, & many situations clearly understood I feel we are at last nearing the turning point. Hitler's boasts and lamentations are remarkable evidences of nearing struggle & losses, or perhaps more accurately realized struggle & losses. Strain of communications become too long & too many. They are now above Arctic circle on all fronts. It all looks more hopeful: but terrible struggle still ahead.

Monday August 31st 1942.

Slept soundly till 10 minutes morning. Was dreaming of travelling in a train. seemed some notable thing for dollars & some question raised as to this - seemed I was to do most spending. or earning millions' account of fellow under disability or blame, almost unbelievable - news streaming from Russia & Australia. - want for walk until not to late & breakfast & reading & sun. - little verse 'being very cross' may be related to my early vision - over 8 form & spent first part of morning, planning Strike etc. meeting this theory of the data. — Was greatly relieved this morning when Nichols left me, as I was seized a little wonder early whether if it would help or hinder me, he would stay on through the week-end. I was greatly relieved. Watched him wrestle and climb Wansdyke. - It is like Tonsbirn. Very impressive - I felt he did what he could about having a friend come out & stay. Myself in small room in my part of house as economically for a week. - also 8 flies & 10 wasps or more or comical - they are both very faithful & Nichols a very good & kind worker. I have reason to be thankful & sad because of this. for this little house for myself under this weather is providing retreat & harbour I cannot now pay to "keep my workers" - & this due to Stanley Bruce M.P. 23 Downing Street work a letter in reply to L.C.F. (Toronto) letter re Millard's demand and phoned up Mr Ollard. Went there before till 7.30. At which time Sir Robert & Lady Maclaren came and to luncheon. He is representing the post-at Workington on Production and Resources Board. Jonnard Bill Canadian representative on Board in preference to Gen U.S. & U.S. Gt. Br. Board. - which will be more satisfactory. I like him much and had thought of him also as possible Minister. To get the representation we felt we were entitled to. He said Canada had certain difficulties & inclination of pronouncing. I showed them the Toronto News in which Drummond Jones going in, and after luncheon and a rest. They left - they are for the Highlands - at Inverness at 3.30. I showed & the enclosed today & when I came over to the Foreign Office from 4.30 till 6.30. There later Mr & Mrs Drummond, & Malcolm Sir

Dan and Lady Brown. & Malcolm & Ruth MacDonald. - We walked out
& the Tees before dinner, had a very pleasant talk & dinner & talk in the front & afterwards, with the light on the Yalem trade & lovely quiet night, warm but not too warm. Sir Dan is a rather forceful descendant of Simon Brown (of Brown & Ayscough). Like all the rest & Mrs Brown of a family of a banker or landowner had, he said one of his ancestors had had his head cut off for rebellion (the last he thought & the ancestor in England) so that he had one on each. or must run one better. Their son is blind. had to [illegible] Blind for Blind & Cas Wks - a very fine type of man. The evening was really a delightful one - and talk of parliamentary ways & associations, many stories (a sort of relief from war) but much of war as well. & Brown of particular value Sir Dan thought while there could not last & might almost be considered, that the party should win in next election, because of winning the war.
This had never occurred to me. I had felt - any [illegible] sort [illegible] of difficulties but he may be right. Sense of strength & [illegible] I do not think I could be induced to go through another political campaign. Guests left at 10.45. Drove over to Study hall with Dan & Mrs & for a few minutes
& explain to Enid position full of pleasurable satisfaction at having seen General Dill. & Doc & James in the field where he had put some [illegible]. It made me very happy to think of them in my own grounds. a few hundred yards from Chateau Rouge. To bed about 11.30.

Chequers. Sept 1. 1942.

Second part of week-end very happy & soothing but war & the very restless - caught radio visit as it was rendezvous Nellie & Grandy for clothes for his army for winter. I cannot admire that the war will not need much. It seems a race of minds on both sides. This winter & bombing & January conditions. The invasion of Germany will come next year & will be a great one & must be before the close - but this may be wishful thinking.

It is a terrible thing to, that today has ended on the 4th year of war. Germany has declared war on U.S.A. - Also that we are alone in September. - The summer of 1942 I have to wait for mail with Nat. (last Sheffield exercise otherwise) - breakfast on lawn. reading in garden seat, & to town with diary - a beautiful day. bright. clear. warm. more like mid summer than August. It would be like a fortnight of the best September. — had a visit this afternoon. of May at a sort of reception. - many people. sultana & lunch food. - seemed to be at home of the boys' a family with whom I lived in Somerset St. also deaf minister of Rotorua. - I recall some one adding to knife & what I was eating - which seemed to signify I was eating too much. - used more to eat less. sleep was and exercise more & less fat. Mum felt very upset last few days. - lost the rhythm of the days. etc. Social entertaining always upsets me somewhat. - the small talk. I have learned to get it out by routine. must try from now on to keep aware. felt like a bit of old machinery on falling off this axis. - no stimulant of any kind last night - or for over a year & more - so no reaction, but the restlessness that brings for sleep me. must get to know spirit wholly control. See 2 nice stories, a little example & inspiration. [illegible] last week. over letters & papers. at noon walked over moor with Joan, had lunch on verandah. Mrs Mc. from and worked all afternoon (no visitors) with Mrs Hill and Miss J. concerning a large number of letters. bed early till 7. after dinner came back & Joan & J. and I had communion for a short time. I was too tired to read or talk long. found some comfort in the word that came through - words along line of thought during the day. To bed in time for news.

Kingsmere Sept 2. 1942.

Slept soundly last night. 10.30 till 7.30. felt well, then went through exercises before and after bath also morning. Breakfast & reading on lawn. Never remembers a lonelier morning. Rainy & cheerless. left for the city shortly after 10. a lengthy war committee of Colonists 11.30 till 1.45: Plunkett advocated Scientific Chaplain for training camps & Forces (see agenda enclosed) Luncheon at R. N. (Vera away) Roy visited Robin. Mary spent in bed with a sore throat. some time signing Red Cross letters & declining others. Back at 3. interviewed Mrs Bissell & Grace - a relative of Lord Grey & Talloden. - he owns Talloden & knows Miss Wood. Doctor Gresh Whitney. Wellington of N.B.C. also Mary with husband Macdonald. Dr Mitchell dined at Government House all three, also Chief Justice Sir D. - Sir Robert Stout Library. Armour. & Sir Robert & Lady Gault. - an enjoyable couple of hours. Spent evening selling or mending overcoat by Mrs Renner. wrote letters etc. Dreary afternoon attended Cabinet 3.30 till advocated short war equipment – services programme – Thomas & Cabinet priorities re equipment. Committee rather indifferent. Home & Woolton rather opposed. Private H.P.C. Committee refused. – Food use R.A.F. accommodation for officials – Thompson Murray. Price. – Concert full of letter men had been available. Murray sought how been refused – Thompson left & sought as director. Duff felt Solarin Beard too high – must be suffering a diminution. Officials only for 7 men (Thompson case – but meant 2 offs & Murray who can be left out of account. Great pity he drinks as he does. Is a pleasant personality – has real ability – a certain genius in part. – Food up. Unemployment Commons matter with Bevan, also a Cabinet with Archibald – his despatch (Aegean Memo) not determined to bring all under his direction. Archibald Clarke Kerr is still indemnity – until the annual Assembly & Commissioners & Cabinet report. – has invited Professor Jackson for July. – He will be well to avoid a Crisis – Lunch discussion Attorney Gen Cadbury & Lord Privy Seal. – Ministry Commission London & Scotland. – decided along lines they recommended. Portsmouth to be made a Regional Board – but clearly the national need is along lines recommended & Region abroad. – So decided to some basic ruling structure – matters in a very fairness of State. – A talk with Jim Lunedale after Cabinet. re Allen City case & Southampton. – a bill goes & Statutes of 1911. Signed many letters. Underfield along Lord more & Sunderland's absence: Wrong & Non Committee & Rotherham absence. Had rest of 20 minutes at L.H. before going to Lancaster to dinner. At 10 left for Woodcliffe air & first crew of bombers (Commonwealth) they were bombing Saarbrucken at 2.10 in the morning (Hell-2) and were at Woodcliffe Airport at midnight same day – bombs returned unexpectedly to Scotland & changed planes & Board. Their pain Jaundice Bellows with bomb flown together & over 30 raids. One a Lancaster pilot. only 20 years & age. Others all under 30 & average 30s. It was a touching sight & see their planes approaching they were left. more some coded. Home to bed left. Sunday night. Arrived at Wallasey Airport about 11. Mr. all called & officers mess till 11.45: Home pulled me on big coat & flying helmet. introduced them & me, shook a few words & welcome. Hotston was introduced, then officers of R.C.A.F. Lancaster surrounded by photographers & press representatives. Had some light refreshments then left with Archibald & McDonald & Group Captain for L.A. & one & Commissioner at L. arriving 1.30. – Mess boys & Mary. Moonlight night with light on. Mist down underfoot & home mostly: lunched at Town. Was very restless before going to Bed. Terrific wind & annual C Mist certain.

Kempsmere Sept 3. 1942.

3rd Anniversary of day Britain entered war. - Last night's episode illustrates not only the progress our forces have made, but Warners' of Hollywood - Staff will lost night. For economy was reduced to one hour. Had walk with Pat. Glad to see us back - Came with great bounds across fields - but not as demonstration as often with Pat. Who could not express his affection for me lately. - Embarrassing his little Heath Cressing them against my knees. Had breakfast on lawn. Reading to himself, this & Farm. A crowd with Joan & children in garden at the Farm. Jane walked over. - Late when I began writing. I suddenly thought of Pat who had disappeared. I left off & went to door & whistled for him & met Anne at the door, bringing him over - His mouth bone have some how been hidden away - telepathy - had a word with Anne. Then returned to writing - did some planning in afternoon. - and this remarkable "coincidence" or telepathy - Just might as looking at cards or letter at L.H. some one, I.V. Soon, I.B. I brought out a key with me - this morning on looking at it found it was from Mr. I.V. Soon. On opening it found it was a beautiful portrait of Madame Soon. I had been thinking of her all week, and saying day after day I'll get a letter to Wendy for Chinese room - a gift & one in recognition. She had responded with photograph. Then it was beautifully framed and covered in - inscription "with affectionate regards". The looking at the card (among a lot of old ones on the top of the door of L.H. - & then carrying out this box is surely significant. All intended to evoke them some force or clairvoyance influence, making itself felt & known - the power of attraction, - a strong, mystical sort of thing. With all these I wrote Mrs Soong & thank them for the photograph and the verse and asking her to tell me the meaning of the design and this seem in the Chinese philosophy. also thanking of the visit with Mr Soong and family. I had first completed the letter, & was reading it over when I turned to the front window and there was Joan standing looking in. I welcomed her - the 1.15 time fixed for a walk and the last chance to see Mrs Soong & family, as had been over with Pat. Then it is a 3 minutes walk at that time of day & I came to the door & whistled for Pat, & there was Anne with Pat who brought him over. A sense - unbelievable - that is present - with us, - walked with Joan over moor & back after luncheon. She worked all afternoon with Russell & Denis. 3. - We & planning in Chief's office. Visit cancelled of course. Encouraging & common sense talk, Russell's letter about a Commission of Inquiry. I agreed - Our answer to Owen's - Strike and been very co-operative

I feel I have sowed a situation that might have been very critical. first of being found with them, with pamphlets with colleagues including Mitchell that they had marked or intended to go in making the start workers. - the furnaces have been banked at Algoma for some days. One out - a long time to start up again - it is on a small scale which was happening 3 years ago - if conciliation had prevailed. some real effort for peace apart from force the world today might be in a very different state - which we prevent - even more than that - we do it also a cumulative work in the long run. - worked out 9.15 - (last out) Joan came over which I had dinner in front of fire - after dinner I read aloud from Wordsworth memoirs re conciliation - she does not like it appears to be very different about me - telling causes press hard by hard terms of bills: regardless of murders of Opposition, that Sir Wilfrid really contributed that salvation of the Empire. the Imperial Senate: - that he had given a promise not - to introduce any "controversial" measures if Agreement were reached to extend term the word means, I think, a very ordinary type of man. Nothing great - in the true meaning of the term. - boat-skins and seals mostly served of a solid month. Joan left about 9.40. I was in bed before ours, looked at papers a short time after, then light out: Feels very tired. *

Kingsmere. Feb 4th 1942.

Slept soundly last night. had a vision towards morning of seeing an eleven or some guards of a ship. - old soldiers, etc. pulling an area closed up. to look like interior of room at Laurier. cedar walls, clean etc. but not - morning a dance is commencing - last what was more than - an old man (standing near Senator Cameron Nelson) handed me a pair of gloves. in a sort of leather pouch. made them a gift, when I took one into my eyes. they were like ground glass I could not see thro them - seemed to me the vision meant. my eyes had to be looked at; perhaps damaged - I feel the strain of late reading & artificial light at night. Looked at clock - 5 past 7 - thought I'm so late up. beautiful morning - exercise - work - bath dressed before morning mail. Out for walk with Pat, beautiful bright Sunday & fresh cool. breakfast on time. reading & sent, time over to Farm - began 9.15 - summary of this diary to date. * Just before Harry Mitchell's contradiction came out - to Mr Forke. Said 'I took at the time' and of the unfit out on an unfortunate question. - It was short-sighted - the Abraham Lincoln - way. I like him & speak well of him. - Have some recollection of Lodowic etc. He said he did not want money. Liked working for country - or for Liberal party etc. Believed in Ry. this route to defeat the Tory - also Liberal use of unused areas. etc It was clear & we should come to "round out" & possibly to success, my views on the matter, as usual, be undimmed shrinking. - Later about lecturing I must confess a difficulty as Sir Robt. (whose undoubted he had been talking much nonsense in that hour been posting with statistics) on the steps I had unwillingly on my way to the Whitefield in middle of time on Saturday. Obviously it is hopeless as long interested in this project - the latter showing his much pronounced, evening left pressure methods too freely withdrawn and turned: - the unlessening pain of the heart with was that he married to give his hours in irresistible & the State on a rest & pleasure. We must make & turn it over at once. Anyhow I should come out soon and see it. He had spoken before of the pain library. Says it is "perfectly true" - that is a strong character kind of thing; but that a child in some ways. I do sometimes admire. Dread him cordially, but some how the mixture of idleness and vast abhorrence by his motives. Indeed rather compliment by his hint of offering to library & the thing for public service. - my interest in books. Shelved, etc - 'Chapmans' a material approach. etc -

This morning I made an effort at another great stroke, & (as through outstanding walking, and a radio broadcast for the 10th of this month, after working diary of to date hopeful at revision of Statement re unemployment. Commission and National Selection Service - and [illegible] through in final stage. - a difficult business at best satisfactorily adjusted. Also [illegible] to me short working solution on route to a satisfactory solution. Impressed on him the vital importance of having all 3 Commissioners, reasonable men if possible, who would work out a unanimous report based on Victim of Selection. At noon walked round town with little Mary - (Queen in town) a clean child. we had lunch together (on rolls she had a great while) and my luncheon for the remainder. he ate his legs (a stone mason.) face his pipe - place with pipe back - he says it was very dangerous - house caught really from caught fire. After returning to the Town Hall Commissioners himself came out. I declared & time till noon 3.30. then read papers & till 7.30 called for Joan after her school. the commoner chair I had dinner in front of their fire placed - very pleased with the afternoon: scene of serenity: I read aloud from Border on conscription - Joan dead out - story long I could reading alone till time at 10. - at which time Mob: I off to come soon.

Kingsmuir. Sept 5th 1942

Today I have equalled in length of time in Office of Prime Minister the record of Sir Robert Walpole. It seems to me hardly believable and it fills me with a feeling almost of disloyalty to him and his memory to say that it is one of the great records in time comparable to Queen Victoria. Lord Beaconsfield alone has a longer record. - I must in proper place (if ever I find and prepare that) insert in worthy of him recognition and all that it implies and involves, and equal to the tasks before us. I made this morning exercises before breakfast, and breakfast in doors in front of fire because of rain out of doors. Then morning reading & letters. Before starting in to the city at 10.30. Had hair cut. (Some of the barbers said Talmage had an act. We had not been able to see it at the time, but I read every one in beginning to think I was right in conscription & course taken. Says it Canadians are all right) Then until 12 reading Encyclical Sir W. Hunter in his 88th year (or I am sure) when he had 8 years the conscription issue with Borden, also read with interest how Borden "stepped in the middle of the river dispatch with hands full of Sir W. & some of his colleagues, then" then talks with Borden behind his back - coolly flattered & approaches from Borden, who had called Cabinet together when down - & to Colonial Office & made record of first Cabinet Council when & they agree God-bless. - Letters until Manuscript & News wrong. each one has more & more & are mounting splendidly - very faithfully & with great understanding. Signed some letters. - & then Sat G.C. Norman Editor of Religion who has been & interesting in England. We made a remarkable confession & his. He very frank & with no comment - simply said, he wanted & me out to tell me that Canadian work & ideas was magnificent. - So recorded everywhere, in England, - but not known in Canada. - Had been in Ireland, felt from what he saw & learned there we wanted to better feeling between two friends. Such conscription was not the way & do about things better but the country united. Also that Canada could & still do more as helping for Rs. & £s. - Was really needed. National debt and the thing - other side had no one & contribute. - he was going to write a series of articles & make plain the position: his first one to be in Complete Religion. He was a remarkable statement. Said & was right & Religion had been wrong. - Then Asquith came along talk - only 15 minutes. but very significant & sad morning today. Memorial – text from 65th psalm – words begun 66.2. – Some a doubt as to them. It made me think of transposition – their love of beauty – flowers & stones. Moved me deeply to see them – very much a Cumbrian – selling to a member of the congregation. Then recall all their worship or me? I found it difficult to control my feelings in the singing of hymns begun – a breaking thing. So true & profound is the meaning. The Service altogether most refreshing. I felt glad I married such a girl. It was worthy to be there our first anniversary included in the prayers I think the thing that touched me most of all this holiday was hearing all mention of Canada from time to time in the Church (even the name of the township & town in particular) made specially mentioning Church & Government – like one one hundred & fourth psalm to Canada when he preached here – that & bell boarding Reverent & thankful – ill, & following visit to Ambleside & Lakeside Church: Some day we must go there & hear them ring. Left Glenridding about 10.30 – had a cup of tea & chat with one who was desirous to call on us as Ferry & Long Meg from the town. Alleister has done some farm work. Saw his last Acacia tree – also pulled one of my little Rose & Clover – a short call with Ferry. She asked so feelingly on Upper Glenridding Service. Then to the day we were to have been back. The chapel arranged for summer was eloquent of the Lake Dales we in Big Lands. It records the many lives [illegible] for the Saviour & for Country for 'the Cause' – all worthy & Good & due of God fulfilling His own purpose & love over long. Our Dales are in His Hands – their Lives are Eternal. The Eternal Strength and Eternal Love. A Rosary pulled & read today. I am deeply impressed by the soundness of the views expressed in this sermon. - I am not sure that bombing an attack on Germany, by land forces (by Mrs Dobbs) is not a mistake. would cost more suffering. - I doubt if it would pay in defeating the enemy's land forces, an equal effort from the air concentrated on Germany would I believe be fruitful. Father. Love to all.

K. – It's a long time since we have had a talk. I must try to get back into a calm frame of mind and get on with work – also to get back to you all since I should know of her. – Is there any word there

Father Yes, they would come out on Sunday. We were waiting to meet her She never spoke

Mrs. Coombe

C. Later they went to the station and I am so glad to be talking with you again. You must have much to tell us. We will send love to your dear friends. I cannot tell you how happy I am to talk with you again I am very well and happy here

I heard news of Kay and her husband, and your father and brother and sister and her husband. They all ask for you when I come over

The gathering of friends was a very large one

Her many friends attended many from England as well as from Canada and the U.S.

Sir Clarence Lucas, was at the head of the procession

Sir Edmund Grey was beside him

They entered one by one I had met Sir Clarence Lucas, long ago I had met Sir Clarence Lucas and his Staff

They were on the day that amended Queen Victoria's watch to me

Lucas Lucas brought them with them when I met them

(You have just received some flowers from the Fort of Queen Victoria in the Bay.)

Lucas Lucas is a great actress

I have met Queen Victoria, King Edward & King George V.

Her last remark spoke to me of you

King George said I am glad the Empire was in the hands of such a world statesman

He looks forward to influencing the mind of his son along the lines I am doing with Your mother is a wonderfully beautiful ~~woman~~ soul.

She reminds purity and love, she talks to me about you a lot–

Mrs Hallinan, mother is also a wonderfully beautiful soul.

She talks to me about her and her children and Jack

She was very fond of Jack as a little boy

She watches over his children

She thinks her children worries to much

She says not to worry about the children or Jack and Betty.

They will be all right

I must come up to you

(written Monday night 5th)

I dressed & left home with the first light & 2 hrs 26 to last night. had a pleasant walk as dawn, and afterwards with the sun shone. the moon exceedingly friendly, & made walking for two with lots of company. spent a modest way of his own. & K. K. his doings I left at 10.30 & out & the country, by midnight. Had had only a short rest before dawn. was very restless before going to sleep. I wondered [illegible]. I had been wondering what the house might be, & was just 20 to - Chaucer Copses I felt it a sign of God's mercy, that there was guardianship somewhere. Little Pat had come under the heel last night, being afraid of the crackling of the fire. I thought of the other little pet - but I still enough, for he seemed very much better. Started out - a walk with Pat before breakfast, for 2½ & take little Bonnie & on return took him & Pat for a little run. They were so glad & see each other again. On the walk I thanked at the stone, like [illegible] & Daniel after his wrestling with the angel, praying for God's strength & guidance. I blessing on the little pet. I also K. & Mary. & his ancient creation. & prayed for spiritual strength and guidance. Little Pat & was made in my thoughts - as the walk - the Lord please that he permitted & choosing, and "sticking out" after the weapons - & his star I read little book & bible and did some telephoning, and felt weary & mind, & found myself forgetful as well. - Pat had over his little illness still. was deeply touched & his reference & being carried at the end of his sentence & made clear was little expressed. Cross suspended & find he had arranged & have the legacy, paid cleared of all incumbrances. but done towards myself has found very dull depression - I was surprised & see that her estate was left wholly & his family, & one of the household, - his wife & institutions & causes. has been made during his life time. - I heard - his funeral long ones correspondence also & was accumulated - women of it - Cousin of the two was left 3.30 when Joan & Pat boy arrived. I read aloud to Pat. Thompson Estate's or rather collection, & the road. - his family & station. felt grieving sorry & - at his having lost & Canada. & his great collection being sold. have been of & till here so. - Pat at first resented tears but (as) being at - his funeral & read his advice as & formation of a committee of chairs for drawing room at K. moon. A beautiful afternoon, as lovely a day as we have had all for - quite warm. bright, clear. - Trees beautiful bronze & golden hues. - very lovely in the morning sun light, & really lovely in the same subdued fashion also at high noon. After the walk
I took a rest - of an hour and a half. Then had dinner with Godfrey and Joan and afterwards quiet conversation.

Throughout the day I was conscious of a deep spiritual influence around about me. - I was alive & alert into the morning, and felt a peace and calm that was wholly
- entirely beautiful and holy. (Monday) that lasted all until bed quarter to nine, all but 1½ hours. Hands together) over and over & over again (Sunday) last night. The words, comfort & then I must be here and - the light, & my delight & peace of heart and mind & more S & H. both together again. It was a day I felt - the need of reverence, of surrendering, and it was then all day long in the different moments. - After dinner I read aloud Wilfrid Scawen Blunt's poems. I was amazed how the were all in accord with the day's thoughts & deepest impressions - how as if they had been written aloud. Poem on Horse. The Vision. The Two Dreamers, Recall. Glen Dhu, The Watch, Dawn - Home-bringing with them thoughts of Lent more silent & calm. & the influence of Easter - of the Struggle. Light & Darkness. The Cost & the Victory in Jesus Christ. Risen ever since. The Lord Living & we have had Him & His Victory and Living Power with us & in us ever since. It was a day of conflict & triumph in the close. - The conversation was very significant — Keith not certainly a Christ. - or a Christian modernist. His views could not sound very liberal, but - compared with Lecky's. His answers are SCH. Godfrey sent me a copy of Kenelm Digby's with an article "Boy or a Man's Religion" & I took both on "Journey Advent" & Wordsworth "Ode" & it (or I believe they were) Sent & Keith one & Sheila for Monday. I wish I could describe the feelings of the day. It is a rejoicing that I have in my heart - for Godliness, & the Power of Heaven which keeps one true & my best self. How many, very many - best - very perhaps because of deepest shame & deepness of faith there set forth - Remember how something keeps telling me & must or. not to give up. - Most yet to do. If any God

Father - how is all

K It is well there - yes.

Isaiah! Lord Hello so glad you are here
how is dear Joan and how is your dear wife
I heard you reading the letter from me I had written in my pocket

K. Yes. Well, they are very beautiful and very kind, the letter is the best of all books
It is an inspiration and a guide
It lights one's soul to God
I was hoping for yesterday.

K. I made a bad mess of the questions.
You had one too many.
The effect on those present was all right
The people like to hear a realistic man speak from the pulpit
Let women speak

Hosea:
well brother, so glad you have come how is Joan and you
I came to you in the early morning on Friday
I was at the side of your bed

K What was the meaning of the vision I had.
The left horn stood for your position
The four ears stood for the dangers of these times
The thunderbolt stood for protection.

K What then was the meaning of your going at
I had come to be with you and to bring protection
I left to come I knew you were about to weaken
Your pain stood for the darkness of these days.
There will be terrible times ahead
The Brotherhood of Man can not win at the end
But there must be great losses and suffering
The war may last for some months yet
Germany must be devastated. Hope must be challenged
Good conquer.

Kingsmere. The Farm. Sunday, 8-XI-42.

Yesterday afternoon Gibson spoke of a very vivid dream he had had. something very distinct as mos. I asked him if must do anything for us, when I died so, he said he had just been about. & so he would. This he did, and although it was vision for me I believe it to be and become real. I brought it out of Kingsmere with me, and read it over again after tea & had shortly after 11. and before going to sleep. When he told me of it, it seemed to me a parable of Kingsmere, or rather that certain features of it, which are to be found at Kingsmere, were included in under it clear to me that this vision was meant for me. first the orchard must grow long enough to cut this hay. - I how to the grass grow long since I was for the first time in years, and how thought more than once, it should be cut this way. Then the thick wall, around the orchard - there are stone walls on both sides. - finally. As the bell, or shield, only a shell. In the bronze of the perspective. I have the shell which was sent me from Marseilles. I keep it here as a symbol of my real profession in architecture. - the persons. Christian & Margaret - certainly I am at work, & ever & the work is this earthly beginning - the real sheepfair. This is the monster one has continually to keep at bay. - I despair of ever catching up on my work. At times I despair of having the strength equal to years of work ahead, or even to the present-time by that & my mind able to come many. I despair of ever being able wholly to subdue the commercial & ambitious nature, or so it called, that is in me for personal fame, and should be a source of strength, and not of weakness. - One's personal fight especially when one is tired, and longs for rest. - I wish I might have known years ago, and the if that I might not have been able to fulfill the mission I was meant & to fulfill & time enough. All of this thought came in my mind as I went to sleep last night. I awakened at 2.30 last night. knowing about I was like a child of broken down machinery, here was like mine, but had a restless night, with dreams of fighting against for perfection of mind, and it seemed as one wounded in an encounter of some faculty. Yet I recall, seeking for the lesson in which I had time at Cambridge, and finding it though it was on body of a double bronze like the one I found in at 64 Wellesley St. East Toronto — this is most amazing more amazing than words can express. In Gibson's dream he said the letters or rather numbers 4. 8 of self coming into the picture. I could make nothing of him and it was not until this very moment, in writing out a part of that night's vision which at one time I thought of omitting because so confused and in part forgotten, that I understood about the woman at Cambridge, and him being reminded of this, but in one. (in Pilgrim's dream of Christian and Hopeful) I thought of 84 Wellesley St. where I lived when I first met Dr. Jerome Cunningham. There are the numbers reading perfectly clear under self-suspicion and the identification of myself as the subject of Pilgrim's vision. It was strange with the flutter of the bird's wings, which for some seconds after waking one all the tones emotions and powers should have been lying flat on the mental tide this morning, the tide should turning toward to, this clear. It was borne upon me that the victory is not yet won. - In St. John there is mention of faith being the source of victory, that reason is meant for me. faith that the victory will yet be won. Other texts of this morning's vision I recall now having some reference to India, and not being able to get it very audience in time - perhaps a morning and to delay perfection of this last impression I have in hand.

All this is a part of a larger whole. The pressure about of the larger world situation. Yesterday I felt impelled to write such correspondence as I did, but have since written international affairs. I do not think Christ will let secret travels - I already had of his operations already begun in Africa. and of this. the communication from Blanchard that is behind efforts him release from Russia, and the one received, Wednesday the day before about the beginning of the N. Africa operation, and what was to be the reaction of the armed enemy. I took actual observation of the sun & Dr. Soong, in reply to this to me from Chungking. It had been slow in coming, and not come at all - for. I then thought of a message to Stalin, also to Generalissimo Chiang Kai Shek, and to President Roosevelt, suggesting that prayer be offered on his behalf. Many did not come till late at night (on their clocks) I went to evening alone reviewing him, and then completing some word came of landing of U.S. army in N. Africa. I then thought of a note to President, but felt one to Churchill, on success in Egypt should be first, and an account of him about and morning him on thinking of prisoners. to Stalin him, and all messages over & Roosevelt. - next of Oran for 96 brought NW ? The blessed Lord bless Soong & Chungking & till of armies from the South & Straits of Gibraltar & Dunkirk had a very pleasant busy communion. She said "Isn't the moon very good". It certainly is & the last few nights have been very fine. I pray it may be the beginning of the end & victory. The anxiety is what a load it lifts from one's mind. I could not have believed I could personally feel such a difference. —

It was such like a moonlight night as I came out & lying - there of this a heavy mist - but one in which the moon showed some current tones of warm incandescence - almost like the point of sunrise

This morning when I left off at 7.30. and looked out of the window there was a bright band of golden yellow on the sky at the far East - stretching around in an arc from South to West. Just peeping into the clouds there, which clouds however were breaking up and bits of blue making their appearance in the sky. I was anxious to see how far round this golden path stretched & found - I had to go from one window to the other window & the window to see it all. It was not on the horizon, but some little distance above the grey clouds which seemed to rise just above the land, giving the impression of a wide ocean beyond the dawn breaking on the far East of it. It all seemed to me to symbolise the great hopes and the change that is coming in the fortunes of war. At 8.7 left the moon and went to the mess. — a wonderful story of the landing of US forces at different points in W. Africa of the British Services in Egypt & in the East in N. Africa. of British services in conveying the troops (one was sick 17 or 18 in number a part - the rest mutilated - wounded fell all the way along - like my own poor - unseen, lonely - but we can await the morrow) bombing of Italy, taking of Italian prisoners - sorrowful unwept Colonial troops - & disgusted France etc etc. - altogether the breaking of a bright dawn of hope through the clouds of darkness. The miraculous restoration of help to Others & declarations of trust. — An amazing story. and [illegible] thing

I remember in that little moment to-day sleeping on the - my third bit of sleep of the morning when I left off. - Bed at 12 noon, but before breakfast went for a walk with Pat - and breath & the fine fresh It was a lovely morning - a beaming morning - bright clear sky & air. no mist, no sign of snow or rain or cloud. just sunshine & clear crisp air. the sheltered of the encircling pines. One likes of us at the best moments, a term all its - lengths of moments the Bruins would call it. - best best part in the sun, this round the bright moors and the hills. - and here the most amazing consolation of all.

I had concluded the reading of the little books, and more about the Bible, when down it came from 12 o'clock. As I was anxious to get the B.B.C. news, I went downstairs to my room with my books in my hand and sat in the sun, in the black iron little rocking chair. I had some days ago been moving a newspaper cutting in which, as a book-mark, clamped in Sunday, when I came across another cutting entitled "Vision and Duty" "The Hope of Attainment" which was inserted at the beginning of the beginning of the 1st Epistle of John - it was in fact at the end of the 1st chap. & the beginning of the 2nd. When I looked at it I was struck with the fact in the outside of the cutting. It was that of an orchard with from long that might be cut for hay - a man in the orchard with a cap like one I was. Big-Ideas: Suddenly Seeing Jesus, the Letter, - a sermon of new beginning (London Mirror Oct 24, 1936). I thought I would read it through before reading the chapter in the Bible - I began at the start, then listened for the news, then came down and read it again from the beginning to the end. - a wonderful article - but all the theme of Paterson's dream - the inspiration of resurrection. the triumph of the spiritual over the material, the higher nature over the lower. "the Hope of attainment" - a subtle title, and the word Christian, constantly recurring - increasing strength and the heart of the ch. - But most significant of all were the following words and what followed this reading.

"what was the hope of "great attainment" understood among men which should be our individual attitude towards it? Let St John answer the question: "He that hath this hope purifieth himself." The words suggest discipline and constant endeavour" As I read these words I said to myself, if they occur in the chapter for this morning's reading, nothing could be stronger evidence of the need derived from God's Word for this. I began the reading of the chapter for this morning (not the one for today - read the 6 verses on page 176 of my bible beginning with the word "Beloved". When I turned to the right page, lo! & behold the chapter about which was my argument but I read "And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure". Could anything be more direct than this. - When I think of all that has led to this passage: my feeling of at Testament for a time, & began with James, as a significant time - following on St Peter. Morning a chapter this day Oct 2 Corinthians was here, reading more than one chapter another time. Then Paterson's vision - the working of it out - the reading for Sunday of Evensong. - This clipping was from the Oct 24. Co paper. 1 Cor. 2, 9 + 2 Cor. 4, 18 + 5, 1 the vision I had morning watch 1 Cor. 4, 18 & the parallel with 2 Cor. 5, 1 vision & hymn. back of the article I check 2 Cor. - the Christ revealed

I had concluded the reading of the little books, and was about to begin on the Bible, when I saw it was near 12 o'clock. As I was anxious to get the B.B.C. news, I went downstairs to my room with my books in my hand and sat in the train, in the black alone little Nativity. I had some days ago been using a newspaper cutting to mark, as a book-mark, a sermon cleverly in Saturday's Times. I came across another cutting entitled "Vision and Duty" "The Hope of Attainment" which was inserted at the beginning of the 12th Epistle of John - it was in fact at the end of the 11th chap. & the beginning of the 12th. When I looked at it I was struck with the fearless on the outside of the cutting. It was that of an orchard with trees very that ought to be cut for hay - a man in the orchard with a cap like one I was. Big-Ideas: Modernity's Enemy No. 1, the title, - a theme of new beginning (London Times Oct 24, 1936). I thought I would read it through before reading the chapter in the Bible - I began at the stairs, then listened for the news, then came down and read it across from the beginning to the end. - a wonderful article - touched the theme of personal dream - the importance of resurrection. the triumph of the spiritual over the material, the higher values over the lower. "the Hope of attainment" - a sub title, and the word Christian, constantly recurring - increasing strength and the secret of its sh. - But most significant of all were the following words and what followed this reading.

"what this hope of a great attainment understood among us what should be our individual attitude towards it? Let St John answer the question: "He that hath this hope purifieth himself." The words suggest discipline and constant endeavour" As I read these words I said to myself, if they occur in the chapter for this morning's reading, nothing could be stronger evidence of the word directed from God to remind me this. I began the reading of the chapter for this morning (the one for today - read the 6 verses on page 176 of my bible beginning with the words "Dearly"). When I turned to the right page, and I of the chapter about was my amazement but I read "And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure": Could anything be more direct than this. - When I think of all that has led to this page: my praying at Portlemouth for a time to begin work in me, beginning with James, as a beginning time - following on to Wells, hearing a chapter the day Cliff Langan was here, reading more than one chapter another time. then Johannine version - the working of it out: - the reading for Sunday at Kingsmere - this clipping coming back to Oct 24. (a focus. 12, 42, 28, 44, 28) the vision I had morning watch 4.28. & this parallel with our 2nd Vision & Summer. Text of the article & Chap 2 of John. - the Covenant remains the leading of God, at this time. It is the point of being what the world would call a 'miracle' - call coming at this of all days. The dawn of a new hope of attainment. It is so like as to be almost unbelievable - but certainly true - all a part of Pilgrims progress.

I felt so strongly the significance of all this that I came over the remainder of the morning and till 2.45 writing out - these pages of hand. - My thoughts have been of Margery and Valerie this morning. I am sure that all I can recall and much of what has happened is not unknown to them.
I had word of Valerie having passed away - on Friday morning last. She was a noble Christian & also a link from her Coombe. nothing my friends will be made me to come on Speaker for Aberdeen. I hardly know what - it is best for me to do in this call to come - no doubt I shall be guided as this, what I must to make a matter of prayer once more in my position & the comfort & also nothing, in circumstances of which our dear one must have full sight & that anyone be misunderstood is a way that would grieve me - my duty only & first, the Lord. I am anxious & so only the right. In this connection I see the wisdom & the truth of Paul's teaching in chap 3. which I also read this morning "Beloved, believe not every Spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God" I con-cluded the reading of this wonderful epistle before prayer

When I had completed this writing I opened to find Valerie come to the end pages. The first I saw were a Pilgrims Notices - the word Pilgrims standing out - as if telegraphed on the corner of the sheet - with a folder re Remembrance Day. (Sun Nov 11th) today is Remembrance Day in the Churches. - and finally a folder for Victory Bonds Remarks to be made on Wednesday night. A remarkable end in the light of what is previously recorded.
Pilgrims. Remembrance - Victory. Most welcome relief & comforting confidence - It is a fine Christian thought upon Samuel & many powers & become leaders of Communities &c - that point of Dr Paul's has also appeared fully - must also mention & Valerie & end of Address &c for me to be concerned. - Next - a letter of a Call from Portobello Church. Calling Rev Capture - Confinement & Escape. - Personal [illegible]

Thursday, November 5, 1942.

I was dreaming at what I imagined was shortly before daybreak. It was like a scene from Pilgrim's Progress, with Christian and Hopeful coming to a thick wall beyond which they should encounter the Giant Despair. I remembered reading this part of the story in eighth grade in public school - the two numbers 4 and 8 kept coming into the picture, for a reason I did not know. As the two figures got near to the wall, and a place to climb over the wall, they seemed to merge into one figure - I was not sure whether one actually withdrew, or whether what had been two just merged together. Anyway, by the time the one figure was over the wall and down on the other side (in an apple orchard, with grass long enough to be cut for hay) I recognized it as the Prime Minister - that is, the features, the shape of his head, and the color of the complexion, all convinced me that it was he. No sooner was this recognition clear than the whole figure seemed to take on the appearance of great strength. It was not so much a question of size, though this might have increased slightly, as of build - the expression "good fighting trim" seemed to leap up. The three words, and the suggestion of quotation marks in front and at the end, were very vivid.

My attention was so fixed on the one figure, with every appearance of strength, that I was barely conscious that the Giant had come down through the orchard. He came from among the apple trees on my left hand, but only just into my field of vision, because I didn't turn my head. My eyes were still fixed on the Prime Minister. But something told me that this Giant was four times the size of the Prime Minister. I was beginning to wonder how the Prime Minister would cope with this Giant - he was bareheaded, and had no shield, only a staff - but when, on the impulse of the moment, I looked to the left, the Giant had disappeared. When I looked back, which I think was at the instant of waking, the Prime Minister also had disappeared. But I seemed to see the words, suspended in mid-air, just luminous enough to read:

"All the soul of man is resolution which expires Never from valiant men till their last breath."

To this + some to all. The Magus is here

The Magus:

R. Thank you so much for coming. Please tell us about what we have been discussing. Gibran's vision, the News orbit, my vision?, Jan orbit, you read prior the key & the rest—
The stream of future relating to the future
The vision you had this morning had some things as it were in the meaning of Gibran's dream

C. orbit near Mars.
The numbers four and eight. They belonged to the house in which you lived at Toronto
The more amount I share that the two houses might more into one
The house at Bamboo's meant that you had been living in one house
The staff in Gibran dream is the one in this house
The orchard is the one beside this house
The stone walls are those around the orchard
The giant despair and the troubles and temptations that come across your path
The strength is the gift of grace that God will bestow on you.
"In fighting trim" means the battle that must be taken to be given to you
The long name at the end is a quotation from Pilgrims Progress
The orbit you read in a book must be chapter in John Bunyan which you read this morning

K. How did it come to be there?
It was so arranged by higher powers in order to impress you with the truth
That chapter is very true
Let the Pawn speak

The Pawn:

R. I am so glad you are with the Magus and how come from the touch of your hands.
I am so glad to be able to talk to you
The numbers 4 and 8 have a real meaning in your life
The number 4 is the number of children you have had.
The number 8 is the number of years it took to complete your experiences' course.

K. That is true 4 at Toronto I came in & Ronald I abroad.
The number 4 is the number of years you were at Toronto, and the number 4 the number of years in Portfrederick Study

The number 8 means the number of years you have before your first speech

The number 4 is the number of days it took you to prepare your first speech

The number 8 is the number it will take for you to prepare the one or two pages you'll use for the Pilgrim dinner.

The number 4 represents the longest time you should work at a stretch

The number 8 represents a good days work at your age.

The number 9 & represents the year of your highest efficiency

K Do you mean the age of 98, or the year 1998?

The ~~age~~ of 98, The year 98 will be a memorable year in your life

The year 1998 will see you holding a place of high honour in the eyes of the world.

You must live to the fruit of a

God has a great work for you to perform for him

He wants you to help lead the nations into the ways of Peace

He will give you the strength and goodness from on high.

Let the lawyers speak

The lawyers:

K What is it best to do about her account?

I cannot advise you not to do anything at present

She has means of her own which comes from a legacy she was left

She has friends who will help her

She is a good woman but has a fondness way of soon or later marrying people to help her

She had a difficult childhood and life. It has condemned her nature against certain classes of people, particularly clergymen, bankers, lawyers and others.

She has strong likes and dislikes

She is very fond of you. You brought out the best that is in her

She might embarrass you without meaning to do so, if you leave her money

K What should you advise her to do regarding the certain objects?

I would leave the Handy matter and say it is not possible for you to help, at this time. Say that you have more demands on you than you can take care of and must avoid any

K. – heavy liabilities. Just as usual, that about the forgiveness of the loan

She has her eyes on a dressmaker here for her trades. It may end fairly soon for her before another year is out

K. It will cause a – am I wrong?

Joan is married at Calgary
Harry Jr. is married & in the air force in British Columbia
Rosabel is the only one left – at home.
She is doing all she can Let me now speak
Mother: Sam & Joe and Jan
Harry Jay is grateful for your planning & Jennie's
He hasn't long to live
He has had a happy life and a good one Long ago I thought Jennie was foolish & I am sure she did not accept him before he married Miss Bowman.
He wanted to marry her when we lived at Woodside
He had a great love for us and for all his family
Don't be anxious about anything

Hey - love to all,
Dearest Mutt!

K Dear Mamie. Am so glad you drove down.
Thanks for saying that
Thanks for being a full house
Thanks for going to see Bee on Xmas Day,
Thanks to Mrs Ballard for joining you at the last table tonight

K. Self evaluate your personal resources
It is never wonderful that words can express them
I know all your thoughts before you can express them
I know that we are good from that who are evil

K Do you mean thought or prayer
Both.
There is nothing hidden from our ken

K. Do you suffer when you see wrong on the part of those you love?
Yes, but am comprehend the causes and the consequences
The wrong is the over death
Evil cannot endure
The good alone lives on
The war is becoming better for the allies
It will be over for sure in the new year
So all you can to hold on & appear
Canada the world behind you
You are respected by men of all parties
Good enough

On Wednesday morning before the news I heard Miss Charlebois of the C.B.C. announce as music, "Perfume & Roses'. Some weeks or months before she had announced 'the lonely heart'. The two together seemed to meet [?] in my mind as a sort of psychic vision. The night before I had received (or recorded) the interpretation of the vision sent by Jacks [?] of Vancouver 'Flash [?] a call, Inter-Communication Systems', & had said 'these things come in threes,- I felt that here was the 3rd, which gave truth to all three. The Perfume & Roses, seemed to me to signify the temptations which come from different sides, to one whose heart is lonely,- it meant to be on one's guard, not to surrender one's position the key being in oneself,- remain steadfast & calm 'otherwise you will lose contact' - stand fast 'You are yourself the answer'. I confess a great sense of power seemed to come to me with this understanding of the 3rd interpretation - The first related to world affairs, unity and reconstruction, the 2nd to Canada's affairs unity and reconstruction, and the 3rd personal affairs unity and reconstruction all brought about by holding fast,- not allowing the fires that would consume on either side to gain ground, or consume aught of self control & self realization.-

In reading this morning, I read the account of Solomon & the Queen of Sheba - thinking of the beautiful prayer he had made at time of taking hold of office of Kingship, & of the prayer for the people at time of building of temple & house.- I read on to the account of his loving strange women in his old age, my heart sickened at such a fall. I prayed God to deliver me from any such fate. It made it truly sad - this human weakness, etc. This seemed to me to confirm my interpretation of the vision through 'Perfume and Roses' -

During the day I completed speech on world affairs, on Canada's defence and east & west, & went to see McGeer at hospital, & returning stopped in at 202 Elgin St. & had a short talk with Joan & Godfroy, seeing Hammy Hill so failed in appearance - McGeer getting over his illness, hospital association etc. made me lonely at heart - as I thought of the future. I talked with Joan a little, feeling quite tired, returned later to Laurier House.-

Next morning (Thursday) I read bits of Kings, opening at passages re keeping the commandments - walking in his [?] ways etc. - & failing to do this - God's promise depending for its fulfilment on not falling away [88] It seemed to me to lend added significance to the vision or the interpretation, I made up my mind to keep more than ever to my purpose, to remain true to the highest & to seek for the light of God's countenance to shine through my own in old age, if that be His holy will, which I pray more & more it may.

On Friday I had the vision of 'losing contact' touch with a relation, by getting over crowded & following after a party of ladies to a box, to see some pleasure performance. It seemed to confirm the vision - the holding to contact, through not becoming involved in any way.-

On Thursday Mrs. McNiven called with her son at room 210. It brought back the relationship of mother & myself at time Sir Wilfrid took me into the Gov't. His features & hair were like mother's. I felt I wanted to shew her some honour & to have her come to Laurier House - (the two houses House of Commons & Laurier House - both dedicated to God's work in my life) so had her come on Friday night.-

That night or early next morning about 2.30 Saturday a.m. I wakened & smelt the odour of Florida water on my pillow - It seemed to me mother letting me know of her presence and pleasure in my seeking nearness to her - to her spirit - Now comes in 'conversation' last night Saturday the confirmation of that fact.- All making clear the two things the life of the senses - Perfume & Roses - the life of the Spirit may also have something more fragrant & more beautiful for this I pray above all else, at this beginning of Holy Week, as I write, at Kingsmere, in the bright sunshine of a lovely Easter week morning, after a walk in the open, beneath the blue sky, having seen 3 robbins [sic] the first I have seen this year, the first in the same tree - an ash by the side of the road from the main road to the farm - the other two on other trees, all three flying off in the direction of Wattsford's house, a sense of shelter. I heard robbins [sic] yesterday afternoon for first time. McLeod says he saw some at L. H. on Friday morning - but spring is on the wing winging [?] its way here. May it come into my heart & with its presence there, new life, new power, new joy to impart to others. I saw 3 blue jays as I looked out of my window (after hearing robbins this morning). The snow is still covering the ground here, but it will disappear before the rays of the sun. The green grass will soon make its appearance, then will come 'Perfume & Roses'.

I had completed writing this, reread the letter from Jacks [?] of March 21 & then reread "conversation" of last night - put all three together in my pocket & got up to put Bible & little books on table, & go ahead on 'week's [?] work' when looking at the clock I saw the straight line - 11.25 - & the hands have again (yesterday) come together in a straight line at significant intervals. Have kept today quiet to hear silent voices.

Handy left last night about 7 (for vacation). When I had finished sorting up papers etc. I went to Shady Hill for dinner with Joan & Godfroy.- Was very tired, having had no afternoon rest, after dinner read aloud from Vol. II Borden's Memoirs, which we enjoyed, tho' written in Borden's heavy style. Wonder at reflections they contain of his own colleagues, little praise for any save Meighen, & much criticism or exposure of their weaknesses.

Heavy lightning storm & rain part of time but bringing relief from excessive heat. To bed before News & lights out immediately after.

Did not sleep too well last night, but better than other recent nights, have, I think, been eating too much & insufficient exercise. [.....]

[107] Went for walk to ruins before breakfast,- breakfast on lawn - Pat much occupied with a big bone - read in garden seat - some chapters of Ezekiel re abomination of his age (chaps. 30 & 31) - saw this was anniversary of day little Derry laid to rest - dear little dog.

Came over to Farm after reading & spent forenoon going through despatches & memos External Affairs past week - Worked steadily till 1.30.

Then called for Joan who walked with me over moor, & remained while I had luncheon - returned immediately after & read aloud from Borden's Memoirs - I found interesting as disclosing similar situations to those I have to deal with,- but heavily written - not enough condensing & style not too inspiring. His record makes that of my colleagues & our Govt's record more than favourable by comparison.

At 4 went for a rest & slept till 5.45 (hands together when I wakened) was glad of this - had cup of tea, then wrote up this diary to date.

Joan and I walked around by moor - past graves of little Derry and Pat I speaking of what fine little men they were, Godfroy was waiting on the lawn. We had dinner in the sunroom - fine trout sent by W. Mulock, then in front of an open fire I read from Borden's Memoirs - He seems seldom to say a good word for his colleagues, & to continually express detracting statements,- the weak spots - shortcomings etc. mentioned of or existing in others - by comparison with present administration his government was a poor affair. Also everything is pretty much first person "I" not Gov't or colleagues and myself,- had a few hymns.- To bed before news at 10.

Slept fairly well & continuously last night. Up at 7.40. After news went for walk with Pat to ruins, breakfast & reading on lawn - day quite cold - change of 30 or 40 degrees.- Over to Farm after. Spent forenoon working on external affairs telegrams memos etc. held over, and continued on this during afternoon, cleaned up one despatch box.

At one thirty walked around moor with Joan & after read chapter from Borden's Memoirs (had previously read most of what I have thus far read in Vol. II - I find it interesting in its parallels to my own work).

After reading telegrams another hour felt eyes very tired, so went to rest at 4.15 and slept soundly till 5.30. Had cup of tea & kept at despatches. When papers came read Journal,- deeply pained at list of casualties, & account of 2 unknown soldiers buried with some 70 others. I keep asking myself was this venture justified, just at this time. The great air battle seems to have been worthwhile. The remainder pretty much loss. [.....]

[108] I stayed at work, going without dinner - till about 9 when Joan came over I read aloud to her first chapter Mrs. Osborne's book - also rec'd interesting letters from Elliott,- who thought well of last broadcast - it makes clear that personal contact helps in favourable impression. Miss E. thought last broadcast the best. It was in fact the poorest, I think, I have made.

Back to Moorside at 9.50 had a cup of hot soup.- In bed in time for news, & later Canada "roundup" - B.C. Japanese movement - Halifax preparations for raid, & Toronto - Pidgeons [sic] used in war service - all very interesting. Broadcast by Brockington - pretty much recounting conversations with others - Took up over phone serious threat of labour difficulties with steelworkers, Algoma and Sydney - decided to deal with thro' Cabinet tomorrow - gave directions re drafting replies etc.- also took up re War Information Board.- Spoke to Godbout re releasing Brais - believe he will - Lights out 10.45.

Slept fairly well & continuously last night. Up at 7.40. After news went for walk with Pat to ruins, breakfast & reading on lawn - day quite cold - change of 30 or 40 degrees.- Over to Farm after. Spent forenoon working on external affairs telegrams memos etc. held over, and continued on this during afternoon, cleaned up one despatch box.

At one thirty walked around moor with Joan & after read chapter from Borden's Memoirs (had previously read most of what I have thus far read in Vol. II - I find it interesting in its parallels to my own work).

After reading telegrams another hour felt eyes very tired, so went to rest at 4.15 and slept soundly till 5.30. Had cup of tea & kept at despatches. When papers came read Journal,- deeply pained at list of casualties, & account of 2 unknown soldiers buried with some 70 others. I keep asking myself was this venture justified, just at this time. The great air battle seems to have been worthwhile. The remainder pretty much loss. [.....]

Slept soundly last night - better for no dinner. Night cool. [.....]

Was up at 10 past 7, had bath & was dressed before news. Out for walk with Pat immediately after - beautiful morning cool & bright sunshine - better for eating less - breakfast on lawn & read from Ezekiel "They shall know I am God" - so true. Came over to Farm & began writing up this diary at 17 past 9 (both hands of clock in straight line) spoke to Nichol [Nicol] re winter plans. He has nothing as yet he says & will think over staying winter. I hope he does & believe he will.

[109] I spent the day working on current correspondence and departmental matters - much phoning re War Information Board. Brais secured with Godbout's consent & statement re revised. Read correspondence & pamphlet on steelworkers and Organization Committee. Was inclined to favour plan outlined by steelworkers but fear Millard is not a good man to lead labour & is out for himself. I fear difficulty with colleagues in this matter, not justified if Union were to take the right tactics,- but believe they have given too much power to one man and he not the right one.-

Wrote Jennie birthday letter - enclose [sic] $25.00, supplementary to gift of 50.00 for springs & mattress & promised [?] to assist payment for treatment of her teeth & assistance for maid. Eyes troubled me quite a little after writing by hand & reading worked till 1.30.

Joan walked with me around the moor - a beautiful clear bright day. Later I read aloud some of Borden's Memoirs. Had a rest between 5 and 6 more mail by Defence car. Was busy till 8.

Rec'd word thro' McL. who got word over British radio of death of Duke of Kent on aeroplane crash in Scotland - evidently struck a hill side - en route to Iceland. Feel very deeply for Royal Family. Found it difficult to (at this point phone rang it was Ferns saying Public Works wished to know if flag should be flown at half mast for Duke of Kent.- I said I was not sure, found it difficult to decide, & agreed to have Secretary of State's department look up precedent. At Govt. House - yes - if Govr. Genl. there, but am not sure on prlt. bldgs. at time of war - Had I known of burial of Canadian soldiers on Sunday, I wd. have ordered it half masted at that time) - continue writing - write out messages to King - Queen Mary, Duchess of Kent, but finally got these off also to Govr. Genl. at Newfoundland and sent personal expressions of sympathy to Duke of Gloucester and Duke of Windsor (Joan advised against the latter, as likely to lead to his getting in touch later etc. but I felt he & his brother had been at Laurier House together in 1927,- also that this was a time to let him feel sympathy for a brother of whom he was very fond.

The children (Ann & Mary) came over to Moorside with Joan & me & Pat in station car & sat before fire while I had dinner, & had some camp songs, & play with Pat later on - then I walked with them all back in moonlight along road then to Farm - later went over to hear radio news at 10 & afterwards saw eclipse of moon, as permission to waken the children to shew them the eclipse, & then returned to Farm & got off messages. Back to Moorside 11.30. The eclipse impressed me deeply, evidencing a perfect order in the Universe - design & direction, no chance - law - eternal - important [?] - men in face of this creating chaos and destruction, killing their fellow men 4 millions - Surely the evil shall perish.

Was up before 7.- Had had a curious vision [.....] It seemed to me a vision signifying "Beware of the Japanese" & the [word illegible] of Courts in international relations.- I feel in this connection a concern about Russian Legations coming here - I was reading a report saying to remember they were all spies - It was a report by U. S. (?) authorities on expenditure in legations etc. (Sent on by one of our officials -

Was up & bathed & shaved before 7.30, returned to rest till news, then out for walk with Pat. Breakfast on verandah rain threatening, then reading in garden seat & over to Farm by 9.15 wrote up this diary to date, & off to town at 10 a.m.

Bought 2 cocomating [sic] mats for verandah (11.40 each, from $20.00). Had interview with Lash of Information Office, re new Board. He at first spoke of resigning, said he had not seen Vining report (in this he lied as I had given Robertson consent to loaning his copy to him), later he said he wd. do his best to help.- He is not the man for the post anyway.-

Meeting of [111] War Committee of Cabinet 10.30 till 2.00.

Had account from General Letson of Dieppe raid, he interviewed soldiers in hospitals on Sunday - says much impressed by morale of troops, no complaint, wounded ready to go back and fight.- Next impressed by record of officers, their bravery and leadership.- Men speak very highly of.- Losses very heavy, all officers, casualties. Says air battle wd. not have taken proportion it did but for troops fighting & air battle cost Germans heavily in planes & men (See minutes W. C.).

Brought Col. Conover's behaviour at Brantford re "Canada's 23rd Psalm [?]", his lying & cowardice, all present agreed it was outrageous, & example shld be made of him. I spoke strongly protesting as Prime Minister against this kind of thing being so much as countenanced by military authorities. Ralston agreed it could not be. Never was a man caught more red-handed.-

Got out announcement re War Information Board - after much confusion. Godbout's announcement out first.- Lash's lie occasioning delay, however, all's well that ends well. Great thing securing Brais,- a fine patriotic stand on his part & Godbout's - a real sacrifice.

Had luncheon at L. H. & 15 minutes rest. Then to Cabinet & took up Millard's letter re threatened steel strike. All colleagues against any yielding to him. I confess his attitude of publicity, giving letters to press in advance so belligerent (this morning he gave to radio word of telegram advising a day's further consideration by Council & asking why 'interminable delays'. I have changed my mind about seeking to meet him, tho I feel the steel industry should be put on a national basis and inequalities speedily adjusted. No member of Council other than myself wd. have countenanced an effort with Millard as spokesman. He is clearly playing for leadership in the Union vs. Mosher et al - a very difficult lot, extremes (at Sydney) C.I.O. & ultra radical, inclined to be communistic - I feel as I write I shld. send Millard a further letter placing him & his position in their true light).

I read over drafts prepared under my direction (Bryce Stewart & Pickersgill, both good in part but inadequate, & in parts unwise - Council approved tenor, & later I revised & got off by 8 o'clock - but too tired between 6 & 8 to work out what I really wanted to express. Simply could not find words to express & Pickersgill also tired & of little help in that particular. However got off basic official letter.-

Took [up] at Council also the Radio Committee Report. Council agreed to its recommendations, & Brd. of Governors will be told Govt. agreeable to their recommendat'n to have Thompson, Presdt. of Sask. made Business Manager - (Murray & Frigon both prepared to work under him & all Board think highly of him - tho' his managerial power as yet untried. He to get leave for 1 year & Murray to be made Director of Broadcasting programmes etc. also for a year).

Remained to discuss judgeship & think I have succeeded in having Miss Kinnear recognized for County Court (in Toronto) St. Laurent's idea of Toronto is a good one. Pressed hard for Phelan [112] to be urged for Supreme Court in Ontario. Mulock to see what is possible, all agreed, he quite of highest calibre).

Harry Butcher called at 7. Poor fellow has had a nervous breakdown, but largely recovered. Is much older than I thought, older than myself. Told me my telegrams & letters had helped him to regain his strength.- I fear I do not recognize how much men value my personal words to them - talked with him for 20 minutes or more.

Then went to see Canon Heeney at hospital. He had had a very painful day & will have to remain quiet a little longer. Told me of his writing a novel while in bed, character, theme etc. He has had a hard pull - looked quite flushed - very handsome man, pure soul.

It was 10 to 10 before McLeod Lay & I reached Kingsmere, called at Shady Hill, got Pat, then to Moorside, to bed before 10 got news,- a cup of soup then lights out.

She is there.

Mr Meyer:
M Thank you so much for coming Mr. Meyer
M Can you let me meaning of this morning's vision. I owe (GT) just Mr Meyer: Miss Pelletier, I am glad to see you. Jack must be proud of being in Canada
I have been keeping a record over here
The pressure of work has been terrific in England
Hot and South & pain
Mrs Long: Godfrey wore a fine fur coat
He is looking very well.
He is becoming sharp
He ought to go to an airport
He must be all right if he does.
Mr Meyer:
The vision signified power
Dreaming of kings is a sign of power & crowd
The vision means that God will make you mighty great power
M Of what nature?
Power over the people
Power to throw away those things that are wrong and to do those things that are right for this country
Power to heal suffering and disease
Power to rule
Power thro' peace and progress
Power means the love of the Lord
Good night

202 Elgin St. January 17. 1943.

Editor: - how's all from all here?

Laurier: - The strike is a serious matter, long ago you settled the most serious strikes in Canada
you can settle this one you must have to cancel your own opinions Press mind Ilsley, Howe, Robertson or any others from expression to your own judgment along what lines do you think it should proceed.
The best way is along the lines you have already thought of.
let the parties tell their own story.
The Labour Board is the best body to deal with the dispute
It will need a new chairman

Editor?
Sir W. Why call the parties to office on a war time the men refuse to work meanwhile let your workers start

Workers,
R. Do what you must this,
Mother. Jim Tom & Jean and you
C. Speak on
I never knew you when you worked the first year the singing in the morning was a chorus of friends and I see you carrying over a bucket this morning?
It was not but, It was a woman who had lost her cat
She comes to appeal of kindness to dumb animals
Jean must become a great welcome at the kind
Jenny Wren is on his way home
He is all right & must be very light.
K. What about the strike and parliament
Have confidence in Godis guidance and all will be well
Good night.

King (Lewis) Jones & all
Welsh:
K. Well Evelin, how pass Joan? has a long while known or 100 to January
Evelin How & Joan and Jen
the ceremony has been a very beautiful.
I heard your prayer this morning
I have been with you all day long.
let us Rupert Spirit
Prince Rupert
K Do not you remember
P. Ru. Yes.
K So glad you have come. I felt sure you would.
Thank you for thinking of me.
Thank you for song & music
Thank you for the flowers you sent to me,
Thank you for your kindness & my mother
I am so glad to see her Rollins again
K. Do you remember meeting him? Yes Yes,
Mr Rupert Mrs Rollins recalls hearing about at Joan's home.
also meeting at Rupert
the ceremony at the Station was very impressive
K. How are my manners You would like me to Open to Mrs Rupert Tell her that I long for rest, but I am at her side all the time.
The life here is beyond description
There is no suffering or Sorrow
The joys are unending
Let Joan Evelin Speak
Evelin: Mr Rupert saw Joan join his mother Joan Stanton and heard her tell his mother about me
He was delighted beyond words
He and father have had great talk together
K Who's father?
Joan father. He & my father have had great talk about Canada and the United States
Samuel Grant and Ulysses have also been talking with my father
They have all been helping & cheered Joan course
Good night
Joan. I want to speak to Joe Boyle - He sent Romance Mrs
Mary Anne Stanton

Joe Boyle (Col Boyle)

Thanks awfully for sending for me
I remember you as Yvonne McWhirter in Wonderful
Joan We sat beside each other in school, do you remember?
Boyle Indeed I do, I remember I used to carry your books home for you Joan When asked about that Joe, he meant some help from me about our foreign lessons
Boyle I remember my trip at the University
K Joan was in Journalism while I was at Edmonton
I was the first one to send dispatches from the Yukon to the Edmonton Journal
I went overseas in the last war
I went to Roumania & met Queen Marie
I told her that Canada could supply all the wheat Roumania
She ordered me to communicate with the Canadian Government
I did, and Shiploads of wheat were sent on credit.
Telegrams of 10 columns for orders from Queen for supplies and arms, also Bouquets of Grain Ford
Mr Borden tried to arrest Lafayette later on.
Good night
Boyle Come back (Mrs Mallum says and tries about book)
Mrs Mallum a night I learned in another part of the town
K. Why did you tell me for correct Queen her books
That was your own thought and mine
C. Joan says a long round a leap in food problems.
I am helping all I can.

Mr Borden. So glad I met you again. I feel more proud of you now than for your bravery & war
I am so pleased to hear you say that " " " " " as you and her Majesty agree
K I planned to Tommy come right (and one thing but the Queen)
K The second problem is an everlasting trouble
Mr Borden. The best thing to do is to have the complete report and answer
" The thing to do is to talk with Sir Lomer & Sir Robert
" Joan as the Secretary.
" Good night

Lawn House - Feb. 7th 1843.

This morning I had a vision of being in a large hall, it was crowded with people, I was considering some kind of an inquiry, at one side a young man who was in some evidence was quite impertinent, and I had to shut his inquiring for a few minutes to let him. So it stands matters over. When I was coming back into the hall, I had been looking about for Malcolm and Howes to help me in steadily with the problems before us. neither of them were to be found, I felt more or less helpless. next no assistance. Added to that, when I came back into the hall I saw that there were a rank or two of women. They were all seated, or appearing so to be, I saw that they had taken that attitude as a strike, - a sit down strike was what it was clearly meant to be. I debated what I should do seeing that it would clearly be impossible for me to carry on without assistance, so concluded the best thing was to announce the proceedings were at an end, I resolved just at this time. - At the same time it seemed as somebody effic - realised at once what I was considering the whole matter and about to go back to the hall to speak, little Nat, my present little Nat, came crowding up to my feet, he had his head on. As I nestled with him I saw that he had been in a fight, his little breast was torn open, and his side. He was very courageous about it, however, and came along with me. - Putting his two missing together I said they recalled to the difficulties I would have with the servants; and the need of taking great care in how I handled matters.

Some night I had come to see Col. Malcolm, stayed till 8.30 with him, instead of going back late in the evening to see and soon a quiet talk with Joan, I thought I would go in. if her dinner was over, I return home late, - so planned the hours, to say I would not be in for dinner & have something ready for me. Late when at 10-30 I phoned in they in come for me, the police man answered. No one was in the house. When I left at 10 & 11. no one here. I waited up till 10.45 no servant returned. I left the policeman in say I had waited up - missed & home a word in the morning. At Christ Joan ordered me to bed all 'this carrying on' Cook might had been, about going around with the police in the afternoon it was her night in, & Selma when had read the message said I had said she could be out -

She had come over & the boys: later I had Joy comes late over walking with us. Mrs Jean said afterd they could manage the house together, Jean was quite worky about us being able to stay having to take out, if things were not more settled than they had been the last three weeks. Nothing blame on Dan. I was Mrs Grant and & her in Joy's presence that I had not had one word with Dan in that time except of affectation. - However. She Joy agreed to take on, - as from the first of the month. Jean & Tib an extra £10^s; I had told Joy earlier, he would like an extra 25^s - I then sent for Jenny. - her first question was, was I sorry & Mrs Joy & Jean. Of I was she told she did an action. I told her I had been ordered rest complete. also of the talk she had with Dr. She said her friends told her she was like Atlas, carrying the world on her back. Must soon see the Coad she had been carrying Joy & keep peace in the house. That Mrs Jenkin had told her & keep peace - he would see she was rewarded all he had done was & die. She had spoke cost of funeral of Nothing, wreaths &c. I told her I will see about later work was cancelled & will be postponed if all must smoothly & that she was not overlooked in about it overhead. She admits accidents was that of Blanche and with pretending & stay with Dan on occasions, most unfortunate. nothing definite understood.
I then sent for Selina, I spoke to her about being out late each night, I said & 3.45 &c, & of the responsibility I felt for her behaviour as I spoke of her position & wishes expecting me & protect her, &c. She shocked very pharisaically about she was hungry in staying out. I spoke of Rose made the best & matters & pretending & go. I told her I had intended if she came she needed extra nourishment & stay & Jean & give her an injection, She said just as well not & think of it. She had decided & go out & parking. I told her that was for her & decide best I felt she would die sooner that she would have milk from them there except at nights. I would die sooner that having & stay for our meals., the quality of them. & the extra attending bedpans &c. She would not be as well off in the end, She said her mind was quite made up, so I did not press her further on at all, I felt it is a real keeping her words her words of being out late. - It is all a difficult situation, but quite clearly inevitable - there must come & be an all round change. The thing now is & be as patient as possible, and keep about steff & can at least till the season is over. - If that can be accomplished. The tragic part in trying to do my work pertained, with his time & love about, or even in omnes once a day in mode. Still, I must face it. It is interesting how he in more having breakfast this morning, after working & late with him last night

As to Mrs Rob & the meaning of his love flash - to me he is like a little Christ. - Stands for an opportunity a Spirit & Spirit finds - Magnus opportunity for service, her heart torn with pain. - & has offering more certainly & he can know this comforter more near. I hope it does not signify any abnormal misery to him. I feel it an opportunity.

I planned earlier today to come & dine tonight & to St Clement. Found he had a heavy cold & his head. He did not want to come for fear I might contract it. - Pressed him a little, even then he said he had & to out for dinner - to come. but he said he had his car & must prefer & do that & come in again. I felt very worried about him - he was not in comforting about his work: he had not come up & London last Sunday as he said he would be doing. Work is being pulled up with laboratory here another man making the outside contacts, & says it ought more permanent & the end. I felt helpless. The one question Salmon asked was will Mary & Jean both be off today. Sir Frederick thought Jean telegraphed he would be in the city today & wanted to see me. I planned him to dine, & arranged & ten here at 8. - but with all the arrangements I know, & money & care pressing on his child, & Lord after all the arrangements. However. It is "about everyone has & put up with" these days. I shall pray for Sunday & help. I believe that it will all be for the best & the end.

Cora lost night rang up to express her indignation at Brown's article. She was stunned & others were working & protest against it.. She & sorry & write Brown & tell him what she thinks of Celia - all this in part of the penalty of Cadbury & public life & to me many endless one is prepared "to offend the world" — I planned his Russian lecture, & express & sorrow regret at not being able & to & morrow. - of Russian prisoners & health of Leningrad - & visited my Sunday, & found Mornin. - congratulated him & more & our Government & the great success of Stalingrad and the Resignation of Mrs Nichols. It was 1 o'clock when I had concluded working this day & this place. Most of the morning taken up & the interviews with Hannah & Miss Rennard for getting work & her pass

Indian - low & all

Mr Rogers:

K, Thank you for coming. Will you explain this morning's vision
The account you wrote out is correct
K. What does meaning of seeing little pot + plant grow?
Pot is a symbol of your mother's spirit
K. Why planted it be low
The plant is symbolical of the body or earth
The spirit dwells in the body
When the body is low it represents the Spirit is sad
K Why planted mothers spirit be sad?
She knows what you are planning things
K, What can be done about it?
Trust in God, Good will come in the end.
Let your mother's spirit

Mr Rogers:

Come to you and you
K. Know you any enemies.
The way you spoke to the servants was unlawful Mary is the worst having, She is a most ungrateful creature
Selma is better away from the house
She is young; and suffering is forgotten
Lop is reliable
Jean is best liked, but puts one it soon,
She must do her best.
The best thing I did is to write to the Government office in Ont then I felt you a cool & a friend
I mean I feel a little in charge.
Let Mr Indian speak

Mr Indian:

I am sorry about the servant problem at Lauries House.
Lop is a good servant, hold on to him
Jean must be all right for a while
Mary's day is past try to get another girl
Selma is too young for Lauries House
I must help all I can
K. I am deeply grateful. If anything can be done please let me know The worst is over. We must pass a great testing, but that is part of Karma. We must thankfully for what is done

Let the lawyers speak

11. Is there any danger of that hunting an accident?
For he may have a cab or bus some day, but it would do more any harm
Let Jean Valjean speak

Valjean!
Don't be over anxious, Some one will be found
11. For land is empty now for my work, - what we call in "fur coat" this terrible time,
Trust in God & do the right and all will come about for the best.
Good night —

Ottawa, Seamen Home, March 27. 1943

Father! —

Sir Edward Beatty is here

K. Is that for Sir Edward?

He last time I saw you was at the Station at Ottawa

I spoke of taking Dinner with the Governor

You asked me to think over coming in myself

The funeral was most impressive

K. That doesn't sound like you

He last thing you said that afternoon was about the funeral.

K Not in that

I heard what you said to my Sister and Brother

I heard what you said to McDonnell

I heard what you said to Coleman

I read what you wrote for the Press

I read what the Minister said in the House at the Service

I read the editorial in the Press

For all these things I feel very humbly

I had much given to me

I had a good home training

I had a good education

I had first opportunities to travel

I had all the money I needed

I had many friends and few enemies

You have had a most humble death to fight.

You must receive much praise known from the pulpit

You are held in high respect in all countries of the world

You have a long life before you yet

You must have many honours before you come over here

You must be Prime Minister for some time yet

You owe it to the end of the war, and many letters are important

Years in the training of boys

You have spent for many years what

You have been chosen almost for the post. You are to take

Word post to your faith

Fight the good fight

Pray for strength and freedom

Good night

K Thank you for reminding me of these letters

Servants Room, Good Friday. April 23. 1943.

Father: Son pour all here.
Isabel:
N. Some of you pour pour: here.
The red is very pretty on the chair
The brown is too dark.
The flowers pour sent you is very pretty
The flowers pour sent to her from here brother just to appear
N. It were dreadful thin?
Yes
N Did her in want to spend a few. — we can't congratulations on her birthday pour Dear darlings.
Mrs Isabel: Joan dear, I am so happy to be speaking to you again
I love to see you and her being together
The last time we all had a late together was at Kenpsing.
N Leaving on at Home
Mrs Isabel: At Edenbridge there was the chance for a talk
Nancy should be spoil
Nancy: Mother dear, I am so glad to be talking to you again
Me-Henry how do you do
N. Very well Nancy. Awfully glad to see you again (Mrs Isabel writes)
There are 5 Mondays yet
Now is Hobo, and brother Jack.
Joan. They are both very well
I see them and Sam and Joan every day — and Pat-
Joan There are two pats
Pat is two and also Henry They are almost crazy, they are so excited Pat sends his love to Dorothy. Henry sends his love to Jesse and Joan N Henry Boy don't you stand on my toes — number two: count, 2 cat.
Henry is licking my face, that is the way he sends love to all (Joan got down — when Pat lying down beside him)
Nancy. Pat-ito is a Smut dog.
All the dogs love each other and the King and Joan loves them.
The Sam asks that I not tell enough for to enjoy the Company of the Others
Pour Pups!
N. It mustn't Mrs?
Mrs Isabel Some of you pour pour.
N. Was the you from this morning?
I was right beside Joan that when you had the voices of the large audience

K. Tell me the meaning of that mirror.

answer The Looking Glass lets you see things as they really are.
It costs you a lot of money in this house
It has cost a lot than tonight
You have not even seen those who are living there now

K. Would you advise me to finish off?

answer I would not part with it on any account
You will be a wise man if you put out there again
The Lawyer Speaks

the lawyer: To

K. So glad you have come, the table is ours
The mirror was meant to reveal you to be conscious of your great wealth
The great building, the surroundings, the love scenes & the sea and Scenic and abundance and bliss

K why were I trying to tell it, to be able to foresee?
Was there you sub conscious fears.
Is you mean fair of Kingsmere, it is left solely to you
Let your father Speak

Father!

K Speak for how could
The Doctor Spoke was a great shock
Your unfortunate incapacity as mine also mother has long years
I helped in all preparation (Love relations)

K. I know you did your every possible, I am content to self. Love Seems alone to help
but one was keeping you all our formerly care
Why I put as much cost as possible

K. Will I get over this loss?
It must go on time, life is short brought Lost unfit

K Some to ask from one self, to point where I was I know
Care of the other person
Your mental type are to help her at Kingsmere with Sorrow
You will have a Splendid future at Kingsmere
She needs her company & then Godbye
You will see in my letter

K Who is Sheelagh?
Forever
Good night

Kingsmuir, May 2nd 1902.

Falconi - love & all
Lucetta - Love to Joan and you long ago I knew that you would be true friends the thing for you to do is to take all the rest you can sleep early and late
go to bed early and get up early go to bed after luncheon for half an hour go out if you are tired at any time
Joan drives on more out
Joan need more relaxation
Try & see more of people.
Don't tire your eyes reading at night
Let me flodstrom speak

Mrs Flodstrom:
K. so we must say good bye to Joan. I most sincerely hope she will find enemy Mrs Fallon. we are glad to see you again
Joan. thank you. I am very pleased to hear you say this Flodstrom Mrs Flodstrom: I and Lady Aberdeen are all most hopeful
A. I know Countess of Lady Aberdeen friendship & hidden. glad she is with you am most anxious to secure her friendship of her identity.
I heard you speaking of our accepting the invitation of the women National Council. I hope you will reconsider that.
the women are on your side in public life.
they will support you
the best thing to do is to accept meanwhile Lady Aberdeen will speak

Lady Aberdeen:
K I am so glad you have come. am very sorry to take with you Lady A.-
Lady Aberdeen is writing at you.
She is showing you a picture of Lord Aberdeen in a robe of Lady A. Do you recall the night you arrived in Aberdeen, and a lot happen
K very well as I had just sat up & beyond the station.
Lady A. Do you recall going & Communion with me?
K. very well & very deeply impressed at the Service Lady A. Do you recall going with me to Dyce - to the birthplace of your grandfather?
K. Very well it was a marvellous day.
Lady A. Do you remember the Motive of which hill?
very well indeed.

Lady A. – Do you remember sending me a tea chest from Italy?

K – Very sweet.

Joan. Say the music, Mozart.

Lady A. It had a dreadful design of purple grapes all over it.

Lady A. Do you remember going to Chelsea Arts Ball with me, and having a duel proper duel?

K – I remember. Very well – the London in Coronation & the whole season.

Lady A I shall always remember our balls at London, in Paris, in Toronto in Ottawa in Scotland in Edinburgh & in Aberdeen

Grand night (This is all very romantic & 'Coronation' time. K

Lady A. I shall never forget it.

K. I remember many things, that is all clearly connecting Lady A. I shall never forget it. Some of our Dresses & some particular pleasures

K Do you think I can get back my old bitterness & the old & modern Some difference in Isabel life?

Lord Grey!

Lord Grey.

Chemical Grey

K. So glad I am now sweet.

Never doubt your place in Isabel life.

God has chosen you for a great work

He will guide and bless you

You will live as a great age, and be greatly honoured

K. How about how ever?

The end will last for some time yet.

You will be in office when it comes to an end.

You will have an important part in the peace negotiations.

You will live a long and your claims to merit honours.

You will be acclaimed by the people as a champion of freedom, good right.

Kingsmere May 9th 1943.

Footman: Tom & all.

Laurie: Sir Wilfrid.

K. Thank you for coming so quickly

Sir W. Good morning Mrs. Pollock

Joan " " Sir W.

Sir W. Mrs Bronté is here with Lady Laurie & me
She came over on Saturday morning
She wanted me to thank you for the flowers you sent to her.

K. I am sure you or Lady L. must have written me to do so & to send a note. You know how tired I have been Sir W. Lady Laurie was ab you side so you could the better.

I know how tired you have been. I fully understand Lady Dougl[as] and all the Douglas are also here

K. I am afraid I have failed them both, but perhaps they too will now understand.
Lady Douglas wants me to thank you for the flowers you sent to Sybil.
She wanted me to thank you for attending the Service at the Sacred Heart
after Dougl[as] will speak

K. Well Dougl[as], it is right to be with you again.

Dr Douglas How do you do Mrs Pollock, I am so glad to see you and the King again
The flowers you sent were placed on the coffin from those from Sybil.
Long ago I told you that Hamlet was a thief
He is unworthy of the position he holds.

K. Do you understand how I feel to see you on duty at the Court,
I understand perfectly, I know what your life is like (understand)

K. But do you get perceptions where you are, which let you see and We know everything
We see the heart as God sees it

K You must get pretty disgusted at times at witnessing the lack of moral power, & also the selfishness of our times

Douglas I assure how we have all your interests at
I think you should take a long rest and change

K But how can I do that?
The army will open up soon.
You will be asked to go to Washington where Churchill is then
The president will want to see you & stay with him
He is very fond of you
Good night.

Mrs Mac:

RC well mother, fondest love to you. - I have been a runaway also fondest love & thanks received from Joan & Maud

Mother Love to Joan & Jo from Mrs McWhirter & Maid
We are here together sending all Joan and Jo
I was glad to see Jo yesterday & what flowers this morning
Joan forgot to give Jo a flower for the first time in years.

RC She is getting very forgetful & like me very old & weary

Mother: I don't say Jo are getting old & weary. - You are tired but that will pass away after you've had a sleep

Father: Good evening Mrs Patterson. I am glad to see you again

Joan: " " her King

Father: Tony asked if I said Jo wanted to be Prime Minister of Canada
I now say Jo will have that office longer than any other Prime Minister of Canada

RC. Where need I get the strength from, even if the people would support me?
The people believe in Jo more than we dare one else in Canada
The strength will be given Jo from God.

Joan says "Shining Mrs Bracelet" - Do you know what is in the bracelet
When says Mrs. Joan says. "The strength given is us from the Queen"
Then to "whom Jo are loving"

Father: Joan is right"

Joan: says Mrs made me look at the bracelet"

Father: It was the spirit of Joan's side

Joan: What Spirit

Father: Joan mother, Mrs McWhirter. She says to tell Jo she is watching over Jo all the time.
Jo and the Queen.
Grand-father mentions to Spirit

Grandfather
McKenzie: - How do Jo do Mrs Patterson. I am glad to see Jo again

Joan - How do Jo do to Mr McKenzie - he used some strong up here days

McKenzie - I know what Jo fighting is like. Jo suffering from (he are going a little old & weary
Don't be discouraged, Wilhelmina, Jo will regain Jo strength
The more Jo going & take a turn for the better
Jo will be annoyed how that will change Jo views on life & and feelings
I think Jo will be one of the Jo that has alive.
The people need relief Jo to power & a great majority (confirm election)

Joan says. Grandmother - I say, I cannot see the possibility of having another election
The time will depend on the outcome of the war
Jo must have all the strength & support Jo need
Good night.

Kingsmill. June 6th 1943. (Sunday)

To Him:

Who is there?

Archangels, &c. — The wind of the Beast was a great success
The wind must do great good
He is a true leader of the people

K. He reminded me of you - we pursue the same struggle,

Our enemy - The struggle was the same long ago I saw that I was to be used in defence from the wonderful land needing encouragements of England long ago, I fought for the rights of the people to self Government long ago, I fought for freedom of religion and of speech long ago, I was imprisoned and exiled long ago, I tried to found a nation based on constitutional liberty.
I suffered for my resistance in taking up arms
I learned that force is not the way to succeed.
I have tried to show you for them the paths of conciliation and persuasion
I have been at your side in all the great crises of your life
I am at your side now
You must be one of the leaders of the peace
You must join the next election
You must see that the people have faith in you Lord Englet.

K. Thank you

K. Is our enemy Christ? - Then was [illegible] - I thank you

Archangels - Well you tell me what I want to know concerning matters of which I have recently been thinking, and the meaning of Archangels - this morning's vision?

Our enemy - Good evening our Father. I am glad to see you again
Our King has had a wonderful series of experiences
Your - Good evening our King
These segments of the Vow, the crystal and the sisters relate to your life
The rose is a symbol of your earthly life, related to sacred centres of a helpful kind, and to your later life related to kings and Queens & Presidents and other high and important personages.
The crystal relates to your inner vision, to the things of the Spirit
& the ordained moral order [illegible] all things in heaven and on earth as one. The realm Archangels [illegible] yourself leading your country to victory, you must join the next election and become a mortal figure, for must join on practical and know the record of your life & [illegible]

K Joan asks how old she is going on?
Lawyer:- Your Vocation will also have to a great age in wealth and strength of mind and body.
K Joan says she doesn't want to be very old.
Lawyer That is not for her to say or decide. She must obey the Word of her Lord & Saviour & God Father and the Great Architect and Jack.
Joan: says, "And you" - meaning me
Lawyer:- Yes and to you'
Now let me tell you about yesterday's vision.
(We stopped here to let the evening news. Mitt Clock up Joan's hands to give exactly at 10.10. - hands to straight line or clock 10.20 or in her own slow time)
The finger nails stand for temptations to give up trying to overcome evil tendencies
K How do you make that out?
The finger is the directing agency, it points the way to good and evil
The nail is the protection upon the finger
The nail cutting you some representing the cutting down of the protection
Here were many cuttings, that meant that the protection was somewhat impaired
Now you threw into the fire meant this was an end & past existence.
Now this just on the floor, meant that others how to profit from this lesson that you many mistakes.
K In what way?
as when you walked past the house you should have stopped at as when you forgot the names of people.
as when you were in a state of confusion, when those lines should instead of right as when you had on the wrong pair of shoes, resulting in embarrassment to yourself and others
The vision this morning meant that the persons around could assist you to counter what he offers.
K. That seems a strange mixture to learn of Jesus
The persons stand for the devil who seeks your soul, but who must be defeated in the end
You must be able to overcome all your enemies
You must live to see your work accomplished & this country good again.
K. Thank you very much our lawyer. - Why how late
Thank you from all (Today I went past the slow, and stopping on the way back, - for the names of the Ships and others in writing, but not how on a pit stick for marking others brought up, sometimes cor- -plant a tree in memory of-

Kenyon June 13th 1943.

Father — Jesus & all.

Our Angel!

IC. Thanks for coming. How account for strange dream or vision last night?

The vision meant that you had called for battle against all Israel's foes

Bello! — Joan & Joan and Joan
I mean at Jesus's feet last night
Joan's not
He was with many a death & the thunder & lightning
You had been close to your side (Put your head down & listen)
He heard a sound outside first time
He is fighting & he sees me now, for sound not under your head at 2 AM,
(one might be pumped out from under: burned, IC)
Last night when he saw me he was jealous. He was determined he would save you for Jesus
He thus first made his decision when he died
God has four different natures & His creations
Is animals an animal nature, & men & women a spiritual nature
There is one sex of both in both
Man is a higher animal
Animals are after spirits in disguise
God chooses many ways & more His Will
Good night

Father!

IC. Help me to speak this week-end
I will be thinking you all the time
Long ago I knew you would be Jesus's bride
Now I know you must be Pilate's & Caiaphas's & any other
Good night

Kenyonia July 4th 1943

Father: – Mr Manon is here
Manon: – The transition from one world to this one is a wonderful experience
I am supremely happy here
I have seen Fannie Lafonde Borden and Ethan.
I have seen your brother the Doctor who you said looked like me
He is a splendid physician. He looks like your mother
She is the most beautiful person I have ever seen
Your father is a magnificent looking man
We have had a long talk together
Long ago I said I would die suddenly. I said that to you are sure coming to the from Canada. Bill's funeral
You said that you thought I should return to the Liberal party
I said I should never work against you
My life work is carried now done
You have a great work still to do
I could help you all I can.
Heaven itself is here.

Manon:
K. I am so glad I am to welcome our brothers
I told Bee to have you and Manon as pall bearers
I saw you both together at the funeral
good night.
K. Will soon one come to tell me about this division of responsibility – that found drooping in Jesse Father
Father – We were all at your bedside yesterday morning
Long ago grandfather fought a good fight
We wanted to tell you how proud we were of you
I wanted to recall Berlin days
Mother wanted you to see her
Bella and Mary were also present
The significance of it all were to bring you strength + encouragement
The coming weeks will be difficult ones for you
You will be equal to every situation
Her mind is entirely on the final phase
It only need be overcome + will help for more
The papers will pray for peace
Our comradeship will fill a full account of memories
Canada will be at the finish better
The allies will win + you will win the victorious
good night

Ring John — Tom & all
Charles Olivier — Jameson
Jameson — The tennis court cricket has gone well — Town country
We must fear months will see great changes in Italy, France, Germany
Italy must be ours & Pio Nono Soon
Germany is no longer fit for anything
Let the Barbers speak

Mr Barber
d. Well doctor, I hope you intend to come, do let us all see you.
I remember the talk we had at my house in Baltimore about the life hereafter
You said that about did not differ but survived
I said a dead man never spoke again
You said that was true, but that those who are called dead were living
You were right
Joan brother & father and mother and sister all here meet me.
Miss Patterson you came from Woodstock

Joan — Yes.
I knew your father and mother when I was a boy
They are here beside me now

Joan — He is getting me mixed up with Joan White
No. I knew Joan White quite well
I lived in a wood, stick like I was eight years old
I went to Sabbath school with my mother and sisters
I went to Joan's funeral
I studied under Colet at St Pauls
I became his successor
May I put a test question?
Joan — What was the name of Joan Colet's sister's husband?
R — Sarah Colet Clarkson?
Joan — I don't think that is correct.
Mr Barber — It is very hard to remember names
Miss Patterson will remember Frank McKay
Joan — Yes Yes. And you knew him
He and I were intimate friends
Joan — He should be in Joan's I should think
He longest school at Woodstock, when I was at the university
He is here beside me now
Joan — I would like to speak to him
Barber — He will speak
Franklin writes! — Joan, do you remember when I taught you Shakespeare Joan — Yes. I have not forgotten. You taught me a love of literature

a wonderful mother

F. M. Do you remember my coming to marry you?

Joad. Yes. I remember it.
Your mother thought you were too young.
Your mother is here beside me now

Joan I am sure she would do. She adored him. I am glad they are together
I love your mother, she is a wonderful woman
Your father is as handsome as ever, he sings morning, noon & night
Nancy plays the piano for him and the flute

Joan Sweet music for him now for ever

Anderson She is laughing for all she is worth.
Good night

K. Doctor tell me about my health

K. He can tell – he can see everything

Joan Who sounded home a warning?

Dr Bodkin. Miss Pattison is a coward
I think her fear lasted out.
He came down here ago at Malvern
I have examined him every few years
He was poorly for a time
Was suffering from arthritis
Had a bad knee and spine

Joan. Laughter –

K Why are you laughing at – it is all true

Dr Bodkin. Miss Pattison said the truth in all things.

K She is like my mother – you go to sleep.
You told me about her in one of our talks.
Miss Pattison thinks you should not have returned to her
I can tell her she ought to be very proud of you

K. Thank you very much – tell me more about my condition for the future etc
You are a younger man than you were 10 years ago
Yes younger than 20 years ago.
You have regained your old interest
You were in great fear all the operations pleased upon you Don't mind how you feel about anything
They are perfectly natural feelings
You should be glad to be so lucky
Good night

August 5: 1943. Kingsmuir.

Factor - Tom & all.

K. Tom & all, you know the trouble that have married me today can you help me in meeting the problems I am facing?

Tom Yes, Mr Rutherford is here

Mr Rutherford;

K Thank you so much for coming I know you can be of very great help. Will you please speak for, & for your cause.

Rutherford. Good evening Mrs Kallman. I am glad to see you again

Joan; Thank you so much. I had like to hear from you too, I hope you can tell her

The coming months are the most important in your life

They must be remembered when all else is forgotten

They will do more for you individually than anything that has happened since the beginning of the war

Long ago I said God had chosen you for a great work

He will direct your course

He wants you to reveal his ways to men

He will be at your side at London

He knows what your responsibilities are

He will tell you what to say

He must be near you in conference with Churchill and the President

The President is coming to Allahin on his way back from the conference

He will have with the former Premier and come out to Kingsmuir

with you

He must address the members of parliament on parliament hill

He will go back on the evening train

He will have refreshments at the County Club

He must have a cup of tea at Kingsmuir

He wants to show the people that he is fond of you

He wants Churchill to see what he thinks of you

He wants you to play a leading part in peace and post war problems

He wants you to represent the World Communion point of view

Churchill wants you to represent the United Empire point of view

Churchill accordingly to have you go to England this autumn

He wants his other friends of the Commonwealth there

He must ask your advice on many questions

K What do you think I should do or say?

If it not for me to advise you, God will direct your path.

God knows what you are going through at this time

He will help and sustain you

Good night

K Thank you very much & Mrs Rutherford

K- Can you tell me why I have been so harassed out, this last day or two?

Meyer: The mission you had about leaving for from your mother meant that you needed home a hard place to go through. It had nothing to do with any physical condition It had to do with the events of the past few days. The Outlaw visions are a blessing in disguise

K. I fully believe that.

Meyer.: You must be on the crest of the moon in a fortnight You must have a place in Canada to bring, create that Day Ozric's mountain of Canada Canada is behind you Canada between you and a bride and wife Take all the rest you can good night

K What was the meaning of the secretary coming from on to soon ahead?

Meyer meaning is that you must insist on Ozric doing the work Good-night

K. Do I feel that? - Yes - tell me about you feel like saying?

Feather good night, Miss Patterson, I am glad you and Mr Allen are better at this time.

Joan good night, Mr Meyer. Walter Lindsay sees self in this perplexing as in facing He cannot see his way through his domestic and his psychic problems at the same time. He is very lonely, loneliness that I have never known since the

A. That is true.

Joan: will pass through all right, don't worry, have faith

Joan: will pass faith I mean to the end I can, my hearts burning.

Feather. Miss Patterson, I thank you, and Mr Allen thanks you as well. Good night

K. Did we need to do?

Feather God will make all clear as the days go by. Good night

K. Will Einstein be home for a month.

Meyer Home to Joan and you Don't worry, all will work out all right Good night.

Joan I am sure of it

K. Thanks and love to all

Hampshire. Sept. 19th 1943

Father, - Love to Joan and you from all here.
K. Tell me all you can about what I am to do.
I cannot at once
Sir Wilfrid
K I'm glad you have come Sir Wilfrid - have it you I read this morning?
Sir W Long ago, I felt that you would be my successor & leader after Edward has
I would want you to lead the party, to the end of the war, and into the peace
I knew that you felt tired at times, but strength must be given for you go on with keep right on, doing your best from day to day.
Long ago, I met very kind of troubles, but I kept to my post to the end long ago, I knew that the tories hated me, but I kept right on you must do the same. God will guide and strengthen you
K. What was the meaning of this morning's vision?
The vision was an allegory of your life
The meeting you addressed was the influence of the Communists on your thoughts
The enemy of myself all blood was the influence of my life on yours.
The picture of you right up & up till we was I drawn your attention of the horse to you and in this bible this morning
That passage was intended as a guide for you for the coming days
The coming days are very important work as you speak all you can
K. Will you help me?
We must all help. It is important for you to speak out.
All the people what you feel and believe
Look everything squarely in the face
Let your father speak
Father - Love to Joan and you
The vision this morning was sent by God to guide you Read the papers that come your way
They are sent to help you
I will help to shape your words & thoughts
Everyone will also help.
We are all working together here, to help all we can
I must stop tonight & rise early tomorrow
You have walked & talked too much, the last day or two
The body tires the mind
It is well to do everything in moderation
Let everyone speak

Sir Lancelot! – Good evening Sir Valleron. I am glad to see you and Sir Percy again.

Long ago I heard Godfrey de Bouillon
He is better than I was but he was dead for some time.
Sir King, I can't tell I will journey out walking or riding
A week only for a time then today
See all I can of I am here this week
They love you and have faith in you. Speak out to them.
Let them hear what is in your mind
They will respond straight with Let them see you are in earnest
The hour of parting will
It will be over here to-day
Next will be the time for an election
I can't carry the country again
Then I may be able to retire with honour and glory.
Hold on at present, I am needed to keep the country together
Best I can, things will come right again
Good night!

202 Elgin St., Oct 3rd 1943.

Father. Love & peace and joy
Willie – Is Lyon or Mont Blanc?
Mont is here
Mont! Lyon is here beside me
He and Spirit
K. Well Lyon, we were all very proud of you. You did more than your duty Much Willie, I cannot thank you enough for blessing Margery and Mother and loving Arthur and Katherine & Lindsay.
Mother is grieving very much
She is not strong
The shock is almost too much for her
She may pass out at any time
Margery is very brave
She has great faith and understanding
She will see you before long
Arthur is coming down from Toronto tonight
He and Katherine are very busy together
They will be allright in their home in Hull
They are looking forward to coming to live near you.
Long ago I felt that I would die before Arthur
I was the younger of the two and the stronger
But I had not the endurance he has,
I was lobby & gave my life for others.
I cannot tell you how lobby I am here
Father and I do energize here together
He is strong and real and empty life to the full Frank Austin Key is a lonely soul
She is the most beautiful of all the angels I have seen.
She is loved by everyone
Frank Austin looking & goodness itself
She is lobby beyond words
Then I came over for me & Frank Austin Woolley and all the others were waiting to welcome me.
I was so glad to see them again
K. Can you see us about halfway on the Ocean?
I was in my cabin when the St Croix was struck a torpedo
I had gone to get some surgical dressing
We were counting casters from another ship

The ship seemed to burst apart.
I was able to get to the deck and to swim to the water with a life belt
I was taken aboard the Nelson
I was soon able to get upon my feet and help to save others.
I slept all night for a few hours.
I was helping to dress wounds when it was stated by a Corporal the ship sank almost immediately with all on board.
She rolled over twice, and never had a chance
I felt it was the end
I prayed to God to care for my wife, mother, the children and (brothers) and sisters and all I was and dear to me, and to all who were serving there lives in the war, and those who were near and dear to them
I felt all the past come before my mind
It was a strange sensation, but a pleasing one
I woke up with pillow holding my hand
I am holding his hand now
Good night

Victoria, Kuopinnen Feb 10, 1943.

Follow Jesus all

K. Who is there. Lyon

K. Well Lyon, so God saw how comes again
The story you were reading is true. (Had been reading article in Good Stor. Interview of Fosdick - Stalin)

Father saw me just before this Station was struck the second time by a torpedo
It struck six teenth after that I jumped into the water, but was drawn down by force of the suction.
I came to the surface again
I had on a life belt, but it broke apart
It let me go down into the ship
There were great currents all around me
I knew that I could not be saved.
I prayed for others at home, my family children, mother, brothers and all
I loved.
I asked God to comfort their hearts, and to bless and help them from
The joy & peace of salvation was beyond all forms of expression
He was waiting to receive me
He had grandmother King and grandmother Worthy with him
There were other members of both families
They had all grown young and beautiful in appearance
My uncle Arthur was one of the number.
I had never seen him before
But there were a number of those I had known at college.
The joy of being in New State is greater than I can express
K. Does it not make you sad to see the others here so sorrowful?
That is the only sadness I feel.
I know they cannot help it, but there is no reason for sorrow
I must be glad to help them in many ways
I can influence their thoughts and actions
God is good. He will take care of them
The morning Star

Mother.
Joan, I am glad to see you once with us again
Joan. Thank you - we - thank you, mother.
Lyon is wonderfully happy. He did all he could for others while on earth
That is the secret of happiness here.
He gave his life for the sick and dying, for those who were in need
His example must be followed by many more who must go into medicine to help save others and to save their bodies

K. What must I do for me?

Answer: Don't tire yourself.
Go to bed early
Read all you can of Good books.

Mr Meyers.

K. Thank you for coming. Tell me about the prophecy of Daniel that talks of the 8th Empire being established.
It will remain in Canadian history for all time
God chooses ordinary people to make out His designs
How can we be sure that your newspaper should write you close to the people of Canada
God has His purpose in your life
He wants you to help shape His future kingdom of glory
He will reveal His purpose as the months and years go by.
You must be faithful in all things.
You must decision when it comes will bring you back into favour
Then you can do as you think best about remaining in Parliament or choosing other work.
Good night

K. How soon may I know when the election will come or when the man to succeed me will be chosen?
It is not given to me to see into the future
I believe, however, that both will be met soon.
Good-night.

Poetic ; -

Who is there ? Robert Burns ?

Robert Burns !

R. Thank you for coming.

R. B. I am glad to talk to you again

R You have been much in my thoughts. Will you tell me what is to come ?

R. B. I loved a hard life, I resisted my talents in mean towns living
I might have achieved great fame had I been temperate
I loved Nature and the common man
I loved beauty, it was a snare.
I might have had a happy home and been useful but I wasted
my life in philandering
I lived too fast a life
I am sorry for it now

R. Tell me about your present state,
I love much disinguenuous literary people and help to inspire the minds of young people
I tell them what to say and how to say it

R are you happy ?
I am happy because I have overcome my mistakes
I like to help those in distress
I saw your nephew when he was being drowned.
He is here with Tom Foster, grandfather, and Willie and me

R. Tell me about my mother ?
Your mother is the loveliest person I have ever been.
She is like an angel in appearance
She encourages me to write my best verse.

R. Do you recognise the chair in the hall. (chair in hall given D. by R.B.
Yes it was given to me by Mrs Dunlop
I cut my name on the back
I knew often wished you would sit in it

R Why ?
Because I can reach you with thought so much more readily.

R What message have you for me ?
I want you to believe that God has a great work for you to do
I want you to cease to worry about yourself.
Calvin is a great christian, and makes us christians things we cannot understand
You cannot let your mind dwell on things that are beyond your power to control

2

K-B. - Get up early in the mornings and go to bed early at night
Lib this day be sufficient unto itself
Good night -

K. Thanks so much for coming, help us all you can, we all love & are very fond of you & like your sterling independence and clear grasp.

K-B. I thank you for saying that

K-B I like your sterling indifference to the enmities and ~~hatred~~ perplexities of worldly life
I know what it is like to be ignored and misrepresented
I will help you all I can

K. Thank you.
Is there anything else?

K Joan says she don't want it, I cannot understand why?

K Do you or may I?

K Who is this — you?

Lyon You Lyon glad you have come.
I heard you reading Morgan's letter to her dear Mother (I had read letter already, K
Morgan is very brave, but very stunned
She will be all right in a little while Glad you are so kind to Arthur, he is deeply grateful.
Here is Arthur

Morgan — It's most wonderful, glad you have come.
I am so glad to see you and dear Mother again
It is wonderful to have Lyon here. He is so happy
Her Parents were with us all when he came to Spirit Longfest
He is a handsome man & so cheerful
He is going to help you in your thoughts and work
I will help you also Read my book on Mormon's personal powers
It has some directions that will help you Groundsettler is here.

Groundsettler Hi many thanks for coming, how fine your message,
Good evening, Mrs Pattison, I am glad to see you again
The acacia trees I planted over 100 years ago are now old, and tall & strong
They are a reminder of my earthly life
The trees you intend to transplant will be the home of Fairies
I like the thought of Columbine Vision along the path you walk on in the morning
That path is holy ground because Lydia presence is very great to you there
He makes much more, when men realise their greatness.
Good night -
(The Light is "Daily Strength" for today, it is "Enoch walked with God: and he was not for God took him
It was the anniversary of the death of Joan's mother.)

K

Sowerby House. Dec 19. 1943.

Last night, I had just looked up at the clock before ordering a copy of the book 'Story of a Soul' & Chesterton, and writing a little to Mountbatten, when a copy of Bible society, had been looking at a submission to the King of a revised table of precedence. The time was exactly 7 past 7 hands together. Earlier in the evening, Handley Bowing made entry for Cabinet to bring in Second Revised Offices motions, Cabinet Skinned on the telegram re meeting of Premiers, as being fixed definitely for Jany 1. 1944. when I looked up the hands were exactly together at 6.35. — This appeared to me most significant — as I must this Sunday morning hands are exactly in a straight line 11.25?. That meeting of Premiers will have (if I am spared) a real significance in my life — the 26th is more publicly clear. Parliament reconvening 18th in January Conferring (at least for me) till May (Easter coming meanwhile 7 to 9 April affording some rest before preaching once more. — Above probably March 7 May, return Jews. Home in Session. If ever Start on, mine continue, if ever formally dissolution, mine elections Aug 7. — or possibly elections in autumn, or even later, if ever Start on, over till 1946. Government is even clear in that (if spared) I shall have completed my 17 years as P.M. and 25 years as Leader which Start in Office. — No need for a dissolution at an earlier period. — At 7.30 after signing the above letters Archie & Kathleen came over for dinner & Story this night. (Another would have ended them, and it helps to complete this circle of the years since She passed away. in 1917 — We had a very little conversation before the fire afterwards in the Library. I Started them off with the anniversary and of the differences at the time — Sarah, they left for their room. and I telephoned to Bangor (Hunting) Thursday Train for Sarah & Clift on Wednesday — a luncheon piece. We carved cake — Hunting dress —. Then to sleep (Clemmie) out-in. Then Bombardier Hoy attention, Reading for his letter or wedding — the Mackenzie Sequoia pear to bare Hunting Train for flowers & birthday letters. Sat quietly in Library for a while, then read account of my own doings & life — in Vancouver Sun of Dec 17th, Sent by Special air delivery — very friendly. some things not quite true — inverted — editorial very friendly. No more a story of accidents & visible political career — but the real things left unspoken. Then quietly knelt in prayer before dear Mummy's picture, then I bed. after Good night to Mrs Pat.

I meant to stop after reading the Vancouver papers. — Slept and before 11.30. the stop until thoughts of dear Mother & after writing her Letter (and night) about 8.20 & Mrs Pat, who was at my bedside. Had been dreaming (?) that I was singing with dear Mother. The tunes that were clearest and most beautiful still mine. We came upon influence to comfort" - very very beautiful. I heard her voice very clearly and there seem to be a holy light, revealing almost, her face and form etc. I took off the little veil and cut. Her head & shoulders and called Ethel as I was afraid Mr. Mc 9.10 had wandered with Willie & Kathleen in the sun room. a most quiet talk together. Said goodbye & Willie reminding of this in my prayers. They are more sufficiently settled to have after luncheon - before starting off to Toronto Sunday night. It comforted my heart to have conversed them last night. Then read little book & bible. I found great comfort in little passage & Whittier "The Nature does Could fall into such mistake exactly made, and in the goodness of His heart God is given, His living of it out:" - the great mistake I made. The sadness of my life was not refusing to allow the light of my presence in Bobby Yost to Dec 17. 1917, escaping with myself in absentmindedness & being united on the train, on the way to Allans and until dear mother on the 18th & home last Tuesday week ago. - The dear God has given me the clear a thing out of it", that mistake. My nature needed it. The rest of the passage is true - that is the living of it out - we found that the fingers of God has been at most among our lives and that the emergency is with this blessed order "that he is forever making up for us his own undoings - that he was more interested our souls." Also, I read the verses of Dec 18. - is any thing doing - has there been growth? (Hosea exalt ch 12) - If so we are licensed to claim forgiveness - that I feel - there has been growth. - Something concerned with last of eleven years, leaves no doubt - my soul has been largely restored Now comes the very serviceable thing. The chapter for today was Samuel I. Chapter X. I have read it as an order of ceremony, but this was most superficial of all. The word "Neither" stood out as I looked at it - all the previous "for God is with thee" etc etc, but here is what has been meant most of all, & fronts the words "and it was so, that when he (Saul) had turned his back to go from Samuel, God gave him another heart" I had written in the margin as a previous reading "Be confident, the influence of one upon another" immediately I thought of this line I had been saying (since I have written sign in saying to write sing) Singing this morning with dear mother "He came to set influence to comfort". So was this more a complete proof (sign if I am right) that I was right - in believing it was dear mother's voice I heard. (Now this is interesting I have just come to my mind.) Kneeling beside her bed the last time we were together, I prayed earnestly & God to summon them prayer. and asked dear mother to give me some sign; & let me know, that the more fold Shell abide, and She was with me, in the beyond". She said she would. Quite finally, last - that the night, last month. - and here it is. It has taken the very 70th year to 'bring out' the mistakes & the limitations that have made this revelation possible - but there is no mistaking it now - and it has come in the most beautiful and unexpected way. I had to recall the first lines of the hymn, but could not (being yet very tired) take off my shelves the old hymnal, used so often at home, and from which we have sung these lines together in the past. Last evening at seven I found the hymn. finally found the hymn.

"Our blest redeemer, ere he breathed
His tender last farewell,
A guide, a comforter, bequeathed
With us to dwell.

He came sweet influence to impart
A gracious willing guest

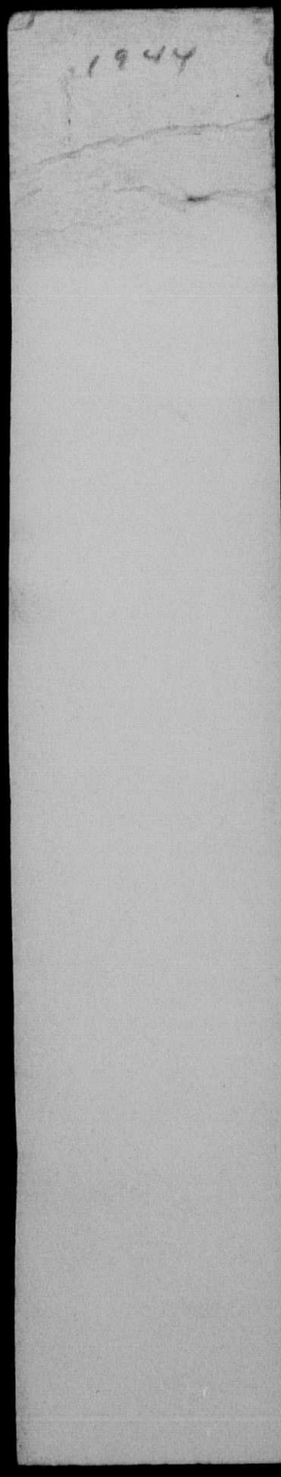

And this that gentle voice we hear
Soft as the breath of even,
That checks each thought, that calms each fear
And speaks of heaven

All of this, as answer to my prayer - for a 'comforter' that would 'speak of heaven'; in this gentle voice I heard. The quotation at the head of the hymn is "He comforts me when I most need with love." I can as certainly as I am living that it was my brother's voice blended with the Spirit of Christ, this "sweet influence & comfort"

In the course of the reading there seemed to me to be significance in the words "Behold he maketh bad himself" = the words "But the children of Belial said, How shall this man save us?" - that he held his place here one saying Hide of me, that they don't see me, that I am about they deserve me, (the sons of Belial) - and are saying how can I save them (very comforting) I release my silence: but as I write, I feel as I have felt many many times this same day that question will be answered in God's own way, revealing the fulfillment of His Covenants, and that even until making that in the salvation of nations & human relations. Life alone is enduring which is based on the word of God, and that it is not the show of things, the display of 'greatness' P.1 that is real greatness but of work that counts, but that the true mark of greatness - or rather the work of true greatness in the sight of God, that is being "benignly endued with humility" - spiritual power is the only power that endures. (Words exactly as in Strength this 12.32. I know full - I should write what I have [illegible] think I would hesitate to do so. I feel I should like memory to record one of his convictions that are borne in upon me. The first is that I have a real mission & purpose, that I have not been spared to this 20th C. for any help, in these times, and have come through all the vicissitudes I have - still at the head of affairs - my country needs it. being God's decision that my life should have some meaning & others think it is how well should be given. Next that all that has gone before has been leading up to this 20th C. - Churchill has been "raised up" to meet the need of this day in the realm of war, to fight, with the power of the sword, the brute beasts that would devour these fellows men in their lust for power. - Roosevelt, while for some reason or other a man, in his intellectual powers, or imitating genius, as in greatness in his love for his fellowmen and in his magnificent desire to serve. Both men have great physical and moral courage but each is less great than he might have been had he been less personally ambitious, less anxious to be loved in the eyes of the world, less fond of and motivated in many things by an inordinate desire for publicity. Churchill, I should fear, may yet lose out the more - because of drink - had he fought, instead of fostered that curse, he might have won the highest of all victories attainable in the eyes of all, because of his conquest of self. I fear from that decision may claim being as he sees the fruits of victory. I pray it may not be so. and that he may be spared to see some of the fruits of victory, which he more than any other single man deserves. He is clear, however, that already it has been 'down', and however, he may recover, his strength & endurance must be greatly lessened for all time, and at any moment he may suffer an attack which will take him off. The Hereafter has overlooked his strength in other ways. He has had a harder battle in many ways than Churchill, his fight for his people has made him many and bitter enemies - he has done God's work, I fear, for purely political reasons - his word unbelievable totally regardless of consequences, - which may leave the United States in an appalling condition some day. He has used politics as a means of continuance of power, in some ways that can scarcely be defied - but I believe he has been sincere in his determination & belief in the soundness of the measures. He is more human than Churchill, has desire to be at the top. Churchill would like to be the ruler of an Empire. - Roosevelt the head of a Commonwealth (democratic) I wonder if his ambition to figure largely on a world stage may not be his undoing - the undoing of his strength - of his political power? We should see (both under-rated writers at 5 point one)

Father, home from all wars — Domrémy Woods, January 24, 1944.

Who is coming, brother?

brothers: I have been listening to what you were saying to Joan
I was beside you all night long last night
I saw you bare my bloodstained breast before falling into bed
I heard you ask God to help you do the best in everything
I wanted you to know I was helping you all I could
I saw you were having a struggle to get to sleep
I wanted you to know that God was watching over you

a. What was the meaning of the vision in the Station, Stone Woodside
The station was in Joan's previous Home Country
The train is the course of Joan's public life
The four girls & Prince Alain know Joan's innocence and suffering and sainthood
Many weekends were looking back to early days and inspiration

Joan "I remember, I remember, home where I was born, if only
— — — I'd known then when I was a boy brothers: Joan has the most glorious mother: What was the first cry about or beyond?

That must be Christ's surrendering in the world.
Joan took of home and fortune in thinking of their home
(King)

Joan: A woman Woman

brothers: Yes. — that is right!
There is time and place for everything. God made you for a great work
You see home that you have been today — your mind holds of Christ Christ.
That is what God wants you to do brothers: Now what about being a warrior again today for what to do Going to woodside?

Mother Church means to turn to the simple things of life
Joan go you bound to work for the poor and humble
Don't let the love of entertainment take you away from that Joan back to woodside meant love of home and brothers
I was watching and waiting for you to come Coming in by the back door meant humility
I was watching of others, but knowing the deepest need
I saw the look in your face, it was fear of pain at the thought of losing lost touch with me.
I saw that you loved me more than all the wonders
I was in raptures when you embraced me
I knew the joy that was in your heart

I want you and Joan to help each other all you can Joan has a hard life and needs your love and help
You have a lonely life and need her companionship
You will can help each other to win a great happiness
You can do great things for the world

Merrill: When were you you worked old & well tried? why was that?
When you see old or tired that means I am sorry
When you see sick dead or dying that means you have done something which you ought not to have done.
When you see happy & bright that means I am glad or you are something you have done

Merrill: What is the meaning of feeling I am for sorry have you very sick come home in him & has you about?
That means that you are doing some thing that makes Circumstance beyond our responsibility
When you feel that you are not prepared for something that You are expected to do that means that that means that you are wasting time or that you are worrying about things that you ought not & to be thinking about.
Mr Potter speaks

Merrill: Joan, I am so glad to see you again
Merrill needs your sympathy and friendship
He needs some one who understands his nature & needs help from a true friend
He has a very heavy task
God has a special mission for him
He must have the right choice & will then have great responsibilities then ever
He must have faith & the right strength & courage for the future
He needs your help.

Mr What do you advise about marriage?
Be guided by your own judgment
We are all helping you to the right decisions
God right

A vision of Fish = Symbol 7.

This morning before waking (about 7.45) I had a very distinct vision. I had brought a large fish, a flesh colored salmon, and placed it on a table before Blanchett and others. It was the full length of a large platter, and quite delicious = fresh in appearance, for us at luncheon.

Later I seemed to be in a room where guests were and came in without a collar on, I was wearing a white shirt, linen underclothing. Blanchett reproved me for not wearing a collar, he seemed displeased I should go when other guests were present

Later on, I appeared with collar on, and all seemed well dressed which was most remarkable of all was that the number 7 stood out very clearly and distinctly above everything. This Symbol 7 stood out as a large numeral above the fish.

I am sure this vision has real significance. The fish is a good sign, as it is usual. - what the color means I dont know unless it is when some just offended appearances' but the number 7 is certainly significant

I had made up my mind last night to keep more closely to my duty that I would come out in my true colors, clean off compromise at the office = let what might or might not come, there should be no concealment. viz. — and then I followed out.

But here is the significant fact. - a most striking one. When I was reading the Lesson this morning, the devotional part. I was thinking much of the 7, and when I opened at the page for today, I looked & one of the numbers appeared prominently - twice. It did not but what was most significant was that in reading I came across this passage, in which reference to the omniscience of God, at the 7th - the 7th is in Heaven is yet to be fulfilled - the beginning of the Lords prayer - it refers to the "deep full harmony" in heavenly appearance "and the harmony caused us [illegible] of the seven whose ear does not detect always sounding in it the subtle chord "seventh" — Closely closely there is no chance in this. It is a direction, a guide, to the peace of God which passeth all understanding = comes as an answer to the heart and Holy Spirit — In a letter from Miranda Salisbury about 2 received on Sunday she tells me Frank was then ordered to faint the petitions of the Lords Prayer. - Here is the fish = this dear boy seems to have made the petitions in succession — Misrepresent today the hands of the clock were in straight line at Septuagint moment - Sorry not office for unfinished entrance 10.20 to tell a morning 7.29th after Bryan reading book I cannot then am

Kingsmire, March 8th 1940

Father: Joan & all from all here
K. I have been thinking of you a lot and am glad to be talking to you again
I love you both
Father: Sir Samuel Hoare
Sir S. and Sir Wilfrid, I am delighted you have come, how have things been?
Sir W. - Thank you for that & very kind of you to say so Joan. Very much thank you Sir W.
Sir S. Lady Samuel I am so happy to see you and her King again
K. So are we Sir S. to see you & Lady Samuel,
Sir W. - The parliamentary session has been the best I have known,
Joan have regained your old form and power,
Joan must win the by-elections
The Rep. Govt are a great lot, they are but a remnant of the old party
The C.C.F are losing ground, the people about Broad Socialism in Canada
The Lab. Party or rather they want to become like the Conservatives in 1902
The war will be over before long.
Germany knows she is defeated, Hitler cannot hold out. The people cannot
The invasion will bring great results, it will be a great success
The Italian fighting will continue until after the invasion
The end will come suddenly.
The employment of French will be a great help to you
By all means attend it
Joan will be the outstanding figure
K I doubt that Sir W. - but about Canada & Churchill Canada has lost this day, Churchill has had all this flow, he must K But I am concerned about, is my ability to do both & my strength
Joan have an equal ability as any of them and God will give you strength
Let Joan & your father speak
K. Thank you Sir W. - How are you Grandfather, delighted you have come Mackenzie How do you like Ottawa
Joan " " " do like Canada
K. Joan has done very much in my absence
I suppose I know Joan would carry on the work & prepare for Canada
Joan have made wonderful progress
The Tories have gone to pieces, Bracken is said trying to mend the party
We must drop out altogether when the elections are over,
Joan must win another great victory. Be assured of that
The elections will come this year, after the war in Europe is over
That will be in the autumn

K. I think that you are too sanguine. I don't see if his men will be down before Oct 15 NOV, & if I must wait by myself, if Joan I will probably be better on my own constitution.

Duchesse: I know what I am saying. You must be great friend at this [illegible] you will wait in Paris at least.

K Let Joan father speak

K. Many thanks grandfather - now then father what's up, father: The time is short before Joan must for England,

Sir Oliver: I hope you meet the many daughters when in England & take home praise me to her
She needs from you a warm welcome
Good night and God bless you.

Hampstead, May 26th 1844.

I left Allans about 9 last night. Joan and little Val coming with me, Lucy and Mary and Nina on the front seat. Words cannot describe what the drive out meant, as we left behind the noise and the lights of the city, and drove into the quiet of night, with the fresh fields, & trees in their spring leaf, the blossoms, the fragrance of the flowers, and later the stars in the sky beginning to make their appearance. I shall never forget the soothing effect of the driving between the rows of sleepy trees, with their rugged trunks and knarled and lovely stones, on either side of the road many, the clumps of the hills, the lights beginning to glow in the farm windows and finally the branches of trees hanging over the stone posts of the farms as we drove in the gate, and saw in the light of the moon the little farm house looking so restful so tranquil, the windows open, the soft light through the curtains. Then a step on the board floor and Mother in front of the door, and then Kelly rushing to open it. all smiles and welcoming and talking of being the heroes & heroines of the long day at the long season. the side of the house literally aglow with flowers. a large rambling petunia flowers three feet high over one of the windows where Mother had room colored lilies from the fields, lilies of the valley from the low lying parts, honeysuckle, and columbine, ferns, and all the families little pitchers and bits of art; but above all the peace and quiet my heart was filled with a gratitude beyond words. of thankfulness to God, and my mind full of amazement at His goodness and His goodness. my head was very weary. so weary I could not have talked had I wished to talk, but all 'in my heart' content. — Visit Val coming about outside, bounding with joy, then coming in greeting one after the other in turn.

I did not try to talk, as it was nearly 10. pm and I went & listen to the radio news. — All day, above all the day thoughts were of one man in the armed forces. that wonderful achievement in 1865, when beset through of the bitter time there pressing on towards home and the north. dear brave boys. God has given them a place of honour in this worlds fight for freedom. How their lives did my heart rejoice at morning of this achievement; but made such sympathetic for this sacrifice, and the losses to homes and families of the flower of our land. - Joan and I called out a few moments later, to some neighbour under side after, fixing over some of the machine that required attention It was 5.0 P.M. - hands together when she rose & left, and a moment later she was starting off next day, little dust sitting on her hair, clothes in the hall, as much as I say, I stay here, awaiting my return indoors. As I called to John of his other little dog: sorry and of the day, and then I awoke next to last the horrid by dreams night out, & next of stairs carrying in my hand, the few lilies of the valley, I had brought back to Kingsmere from over seas. - What a story - from the days of March to this hour is enclosed in this story of those little flowers and what has intervened before these roots left here & their leaves and bent like blooms again at Kingsmere that a story of daylife from woodlands days to this hour in running fresh this book. I took them to my bedroom & placed them on the mantel near the pictures of dear Mother & father & the last resting are the treasures pictures.

It was a romantic midnight when I went out the lights. I had taken to my room with me, the letter from Mrs Mackenzie & pictures or arrival, the book Exclusive Edition from Rutherford's making, and the man born to be king - Andy Soyer's autograph last copy but did not try to read. After the lights were out, I found it very difficult to sleep. My brain was very tired, my mind weary, my nerves twitching too tired to sleep. A couple of questions, which recurred insistently being - finally I got up and walked about, was comforted & strengthened by hands crossed at 3rd post one, - did not get to sleep after returning to bed. Opened & closed doors & the air, & opened drapes - it was a little damp. - finally to sleep again. Was then awoke together at about 7.30 post 3. - Then there sat lying in the little bronze fragrantly as when I had to call them to make, in the case & part of the evening his beseeching was so frequent: sleep. - like to other old days, after my return. What guardian angels they are! finally I got to sleep. walked a few minutes before 8. had a cup of tea, then retired to listen to the news, - more good accounts of our men in Italy - Canadians days - Indians day, Empire Day - & the day following - Canadians crossing the fight for freedom in Italy. - beyond all words

And now most wonderful of all. - I rested on - to listen to the devotional hour, a rather quarter of an hour - felt I was commenced then wonderful some message was coming to me, when I heard the name of Christ by the Salvation Army mentioned. - and what a message. - It was the 23rd Psalm, 'the Lord is my Shepherd' - the Lyon went preaching what Spurgeon had said of the Psalm being like the Nightingale's song flooding the world & welcoming on thro the ages. - a wonderful similie. - How clear & clear - I stretched out on my bed, and felt as if I were saved literally hearing experienced all & Sodo Goodness in every particular mentioned, - Conviction and pardon, peace & rest in the place of lost attained at last - in prospect - the green pastures around me - my own green pasture, fruit trees in bloom. - still waters, - even & as the Kingfishers, Christmas the sheep. which I used to love & watch, how again & again in the Psalms - He restoreth my soul, which alone all else to which Kingfishers draw for me, what I am experiencing at this moment - the whole fountain in the presence of my enemies - what I have experienced over & over in 7 odd years and never more than yesterday. - and to dwell in the house of the Lord forever. - Listening all this week the deep and the hours spent with the Salvationists - the words of the Lord. the Salvation of the Eternal. - Then came a solo. The mouthorgan began. "There were ninety and nine." - heartfully sung - I was almost overcome with relief - I experienced in the words of the application to myself. - The ransomed sheep - the one that was lost - might have been so easily the lost sheep, and now the rejoicing in Gods kingdom - behold I have found my sheep. I have struggled, I have fought, I have endeavoured to overcome all that is evil, in thought & word & deed & the faithful and true, and this great mission over seas, my speaking & the world, the forgiveness of my personal faults, at London, the forgiveness of my personal faults to my followers in the name & Communion - all of this has brought me into the fulfilment of Gods promise, of all that I have believed would be fulfilled - only beyond all belief. —

After dressing - getting into old clothes - made a fire. came the supreme moment when Nat and I started off with our one morning mail. - the fire was a welcome sight as I squirmed in sleepover the night a ground sheet that had been entirely on the ground, I lost such Rock after this shower, or rather he took me. I went on alone & sat a while & Kelly in the garden. It looked so well - so fresh - the early day-rose said, the fresh plants, - & then on across the fields, the grass already long in parts - and past the Bethel stone where Jacob & Israel in prayer to God, to express my heart's thankfulness and petition for continued guidance. Joy was the common & cause being coming out in leaf. - a wonderful walk & the first gold - buttercups. flowers in abundance. Then to first leaf, birds singing everywhere - as I entered first Rookery heard most a wonderful chorus strong very well assured me time and again, like Zacharias in eighteen-fold. the words at my first seemed to have a special message of love, & Christ's one & I brought them back in my heart, each for a thought of blessed ones in the beyond - when I first set back again & the grassy path - upon reaching up the path - so beautifully veiled & the green sward. there sat little Patty, beside the memorial Shell home of mate & where the others after rest. top in her last hours, & where his little remains rested. the morning he found away. there sat my present little pal on if spending the Shell necklace & that shell home, & when I reached him bowed away, with his last message for me it was worth - and on into his other home. there we had the whole top lilies looking out of the window at the little memorial last bath, - such precious hours. & such wealth of beauty & green meadows on every side.

But more wonderful still. most wonderful of all - the chapter I began to read. It was the 40th psalm, in one for today It came as if God himself were speaking to me. "He heard & called me from the mouth: from the bowels of my mother hath he made mention of my name ---. and put a new song in my mouth" One word read it, line by line, word by word - with great quietness of Spirit, & awe at being on holy ground. - there is mystery here. there is truth here, heart-truth so great & unbelievable. for me or for any, God & I believe, help them my unbelief. - help me & forbid they for me in my life. - the wonder of wonders, there, of all wonders, & in there of all sources of revelation - there a something here, there comes to the heart words, and too sacred & express even to myself in thought. - they fool comfort to be my strength and guide. It was 5 minutes to 11 when I turned at the door. Something seemed to say, the circle is complete. the hundred hours which have just lands in circle complete have encompassed holy ground

Kingston, May 28. 1944

Faithful: — Love to all.

W. Fondest love, more comes by guardsmen is spent to us.

Mother:

a Love mother fondest love

Mother. Love to Joan and Jan from all here.
The wind in England was a great success
Father + Sir Wilfrid must be spent

Laurier: Mrs Hallinan how do you do.
The London visit was epoch making
It has united one for all that Canada is a sovereign nation
It marks the completion of your grandfather's work and mine

a. That is true Sir Wilfrid, now must the people have that sovereignty.

Jan to. The people knows that you have spoken the truth.
May hour you have only one end to serve — the common good.
Let knowledge spread

With the empire.

a - Paul from Joan, I and you are here

a Paul. - William, I am very proud of you Long ago I fought for freedom. You have won the battle.
God has been our strength and guide
God has fulfilled his promises
God has more for you to do
God wants you to help it will build a better world
The poor and needy, need your championship & men come
May will respond to you
Don't be afraid of anything or anyone
The powers will be given you from on high
Good night

a What would you do about bringing age for old age pensions at this time?

I moved evening } reduce the age 65

Let us now speak

{ Joan thought the age was 60. I was sorry I came out the same, but I think it is after your said 65 is not correct for Canada is - this person is not sure which you refer to.

Mother: Grandpa - is pretty pleased you are going to reduce the old age pension to 65 is the best you can do, and hope to retain office has been many difficulties you have to face I will help you
He is extremely happy about the London visit
He knows you have changed greatly Queen in many places
He is certain you will win the next election
Good night.

Regimen August 29.44

Joachim: Done from all here,
The celebration was a great event
The party recalled itself
The presentation of the bust and his SG [illegible] pleased us all very much
Let Samuel speak

Sir Wilfrid:
K. So glad you are here Sir W.
How do you like Mrs Patterson
J. How do you do Sir W.
I was greatly pleased at the letter you wrote Herbert this morning
K. He has stored well, head to his heels.
He has kept in mind what he owes to the name he bears
He is fond of you and is anxious to please you
Let your master speak

Leonie
K Well master then, lots of love to you
I am so glad to be speaking to you and Joan again
K Yes we have missed our talks very much, as at least I know.
It is not possible to do everything at the same time
Joan has her lessons, and you have parliament
The bust is splendid, I like it exceedingly K What about the painting of you?
The Salisbury is a wonderful artist
He has made the most beautiful painting of me
He loves you very much. he's one of the inspirations of his work
He is very close to God in all he does.
He prays to God to guide his brush
He asks God to send him the beauty of the vision of his holiness
His mind is filled with beautiful thoughts and symbols
He has chosen to serve as an interpreter of gods will upon earth
He is a truly Christian gentleman
K How he caught your likeness expression?
You must be pleased beyond words with the picture
He has put his best work into it
What I like best is the purity of his expression
He has revealed my inner self.
What I like most is the expression of his eyes.
They are like stars in the heaven.
The cheeks, too, are very sweet

The nose and the mouth are much handsomer than mine were in life
K What about the hair?
It is beautiful, full of life and light
Thank him for me when you see him again
K. What about Mrs Salisbury
Thank her too, she is a very sweet and lovely woman
She resembles Joan in many ways.
K That is true
She is modest and self effacing, but has a deep and beautiful nature
They are two of the loveliest people in the world.
K. What did Grandpa think of the celebration?
Mackenzie. I thought it was marvellous.
I am certainly coming with my own
The speeches were grand, they were in the truest vein
K What do you think of Lindsay's book,
It has given us all great pleasure
It is a true picture of the forces that have contributed to your noble life
Let Gladstone speak
Mr Gladstone.
K. It is good to have you here.
I am honoured by the opportunity with Mrs Ballantyne and you
The hour is nearing its close
The allies have won already
Hitler will be destroyed before very long
He is doomed to die an ignominious death
He and all his cohorts will perish from the earth & the German people
They will demand an end to the war very soon
Do not let Churchill or the President lead you to go to Europe,
Canada needs you here,
You must win the next election. You will be busy with no time enough then to go abroad
K Then do you think the elections should be held,
In the spring of next year
Have another session and electoral reform first
The franchise extension must touch the country
The people believe in Joan Sweeney
She best hope is the Spring
Good night —
Mackenzie — K what about the members?
You were right, the members have great significance
I know it is close contact with you
Good night

Kingsmere, Oct 10, 1944

Father. Love from all here
Mother wants to speak (I can read here reading from "a fitting habitation"
Mother: Joan, that last you read was beautiful
She author is a great Spiritualist
Let this Mr. Conan Doyle speak
IC. Sir Mr I knew you would come. Tell me more a little about Lady Doyle has how she spoke?
Sir Wm. Conan Doyle: The life hereafter, as it is called, is the most beautiful existence imaginable
It is beyond all one can express
My mother was waiting for me as I crossed over
She is young and beautiful
Your mother is also an angel of light
She is here beside my mother and me
Your father, Sandow, Baker, McCaul and others are here
Let Sandon speak
~~Sir Joseph~~ Sandon
IC. Am glad to hear you speak & to know you are all together
Sandow is holding an old time gathering of friends of college days
He says your father is the best friend a man could have
He says that you have honoured his name and that of your mother
He says that Baker was a true friend also
He wants you to know that old enmities are at an end.
He wants you to know that I am forgiven for what I did to him and he
He wants you to know that he has forgiven me also (Your father
He is happy as a man can be wronged him
Baker wants to speak
Alfred Baker
IC Well Professor Baker - glad to have you here again
Baker The joy is mine
Your mother and Mrs Baker were before to tell fortunes
Your father and Sandow were before to smoke stories
I recall the arguments you and your father had about the furnaces
IC. Such a help among other evidence that I am speaking to you.
He assured that we are all here together I have received two beautiful visions
IC. Tell me your favourite poets
Byron and Shelly. Do you recall my speaking of Mrs Shelly's translation IC Mr Myers says that Wilderness is to interpret, explain? words used later in my Medium's Dreams
Baker I recall your writing me a lovely letter when Mrs Baker died
I have often spoken to others, of your address at Convocation

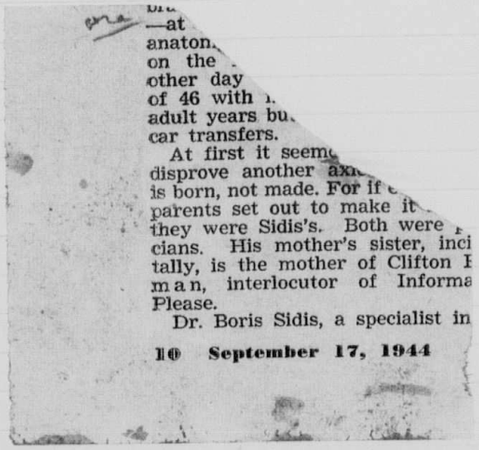

27

when you spoke of losing me deeper because your father was not alive to Joan. So Babs dead;
K. Oh yes
Babs. Tell Mrs Pallion I dear very much alive and am glad to see her looking so beautiful
Joan. Apology
Babs No apology is necessary, the difference between life and death is the difference between night and morning. Here it is always morning.
Enter Father Christ
Father. I am so glad you came tonight, all our old friends are gathered together here
Murdoch is like a boy again
He was sitting on of your tales together
He loves you deeply
He will help to guide you in shaping well the next campaign
He says you are certain to win
Hold on and you will be the longest in office of any Premier known to the world.
Joan. But - how long
Father Tell me so soon as all
K Is that right Father
F. No
K Can you tell?
Pitt was in office for 19 years and a half
Joan I don't think I know anything about it
Father Joan is always humorous.
I hope you will take all the rest you can by long sleep and resting during the day
K Tell me about the version of Harper, Moore & Pratt,
Ask for Mr Rogers
K Will Mr Rogers come - Yes. He is here - Joan has heard my question
Mr Rogers: - I sent for you at last for Mr. Ley from Godfrey: Joan Mrs Pallion
He wishes me to have you on the boat out in the early afternoon.
Everyone was in a dangerous mood that night he dined with you
he was disappointed at not being asked to come again.
He will be friendly because he knows you are a friend to him
Nelson Ley intends a visit to Japan in 10 it is well not to put obstacles in his way.
He is a fine lad & will succeed all right
Chief Power is the great recall, he is a drunkard, but controls himself for a while, he will last for a time but not long

K. Do think correct

Burgess. NO. Nixon has a hard fight, he will be all right for a while
He cannot last much after the election
Heffelfinger is in better shape than he has been for a long time
He would be a help to you in this campaign

K. Could we write do you think? When can the Chairman [illegible]
No one can say definite, it looks like a close fight
I think you will have a majority this all
The state may [illegible] with you
It will I think help us over before Christmas

Fellows! Lord & all
Let Lawrence speak
K. Thanks for coming Sir Wm - tell me what you think!
Sir Wolfrid & — Good morning Mrs Fellows, I am glad to see you again
Joan. Thank you very much
Sir W — I am glad & have a chance to speak to you about conscription
Long ago I had to deal with that problem
It baffled me in the end
Don't allow it to do the same with you
You are entirely right in the position you have taken in this cause to Churchill
He will be grateful to you for having called him
He will not permit the crisis to arise at any cost —
He must telegraph you tomorrow on the account to let it
There is every probability that the war will end before Christmas
I hope every expectation it will end before December Whether it ends or not - you will be able to get all the men needed
Let Sir Wm speak again
K — I am so glad you have come, I was hoping you would.
Sir Wolfrid I am delighted to be talking to you again
Long ago I knew you wanted to have the problem of conscription to
I knew that Hitler would never let up. Cowards will I knew that he had gain an ascendancy & his chiefs of staff that he would keep the enemy off & strength
We thank for you to do it to make out minds & not end
K How is it best to be gone about? or about,
You have taken the right course in calling Churchill
He will see in a moment he clings to the whole situation
He is very much on your side
He regards your postponement as quite exceptional
He will let us know & will to Montgomery at once Montgomery knows your problem and will help to know it out
Don't be in the least concerned about the decision
The cabinet will be behind you & a man
You will gain enormous fresh driving, I know your Minister
He is anxious but has no political prejudice
We must try & end before the year is out
Good night

Is there any one there for Joan. – Where is Their? mother
K. Thanks dear brother for coming tonight
Joan I am glad to see you again
J. Much joy dear King. How do you like your pantry mother? I think it is very pretty. The eyes and the altogether
You and round. The cheek looks a little sunburnt
The mouth will grow to red, the nose not quite so prominent. The dress is lovely, open a little for fondness in front, the artist will change all that in an hour
Let Barrie speak

Sir James Barrie.

K I am so glad to see you again, what about the vision
I am delighted to see you again
I affirmed to you in a dream what you might mean that I was alone and at your side
I knew how mercy brought me
K. Can her abhorrent hood mantle from me.
Joan. I send mine to my servant
Bonne – The servant must come in a moment
The spirit world works victoriously
The little light of this pure day belonged to my mother
A. That makes it more precious indeed
I know your mother now, she is kneeling my mother here
K What price the merest trifle pay
They are great friends & are proud of their sons.
The whole story is all true
K Send all the comfort & gentleness you can to their Town
Your mother is beside you all the time
She is able to transmit ideas and thoughts quickly
She is very lovely — & what love is it
It is love to love – the wonder to think means that a spirit is sounding you
K what does a straight line mean?
Barrie That you are on the right course
Good night
K Are all well at Bury Place?
They are prospering all over here and your mother and my mother and love her blanket, – Nancy is here
K Joan come to me as I was to you & keep close to me & to God as you talk it from, mother dear. don't be anxious. – Good night

212 Elgin St., Dec. 2nd 1944.

Guests – Some from all over
& Who is coming to speak

Sir Wilfrid: We have indeed been a great nation
We history has been complete
You have outstanding your enemies at every turn
I am delighted at the manner in which you have carried on

M. Have I done the right things?
Absolutely; it was the only thing I do
God directed your course
God guided your steps from day to day
God will guide you to the end.
Let freedom speak

Gladstone: Sonnie is right, God's been your strength and guide
Let your fathers speak

Fathers. Your mother & I & grandfather Mackay in [illegible] my fathers are all here together
We are very proud of you
You have saved Canada from disaster. There is no doubt whatever of that Let mothers speak

Sir Wilfrid: King, you have done for Canada, the greatest service in her history any man
You have broken the forces of conscription and left finance
You have demonstrated your practical statesmanship
You will get a good majority
The task will never be as hard again
You have made your place in history for all time
Let your mother speak

Mother: Dear Joan, I'm sure you think Billy has done well
J. Indeed I do, he's been marvellous
I saw you take out my wedding ring the night of your big speech
I saw you read my last letter into the [illegible]
I heard you say "for this cause was I born"

Joan: Who said that

Mother: Christ – for this cause came I into the world
I know that for this cause came I into the world

I knew you had a mission to perform
I knew that God would direct your course
I knew you would overcome until victory
Let grandfather the clergyman speak

A. Lebouthillier: Wilfrid, I am proud of you

Joan: I thought he was here

Mackay: I am right here beside you Wilfrid Laurier

Joan – – the same first reading of '37

long ago I led a rebellion – William has promised one
He has sowed many wars and much bloodshed.
He will be among the first men in History
Let Reporter Speak

Ke , Lord Somers, I am delighted you have come. You have been in my thoughts to Gentle: I have been helping to guide and direct your actions

You have done the right thing.
Quebec has faith in you. They will show that this week.
Let Shelton Speak

Shelton. I am so glad you have come. I am all together there
Shelton, I wanted to tell you that we are all delighted with your course
You have saved civil war
You have ensured the troops being reinforced
You have saved the break up of the government and of the country
You have saved anarchy in Canada
Let Waters Speak

K Co delighted I am we have a cable we have all been joining Rogers, How do you do Mrs Wallace. I am glad I see you again Must you Mr Rogers. I am very lobby I have seen one Is there a dear soul must be?
I am very lobby and very proud.
Mr King has done the right thing for Canada and for the army
The war will soon be over & We will be recognized as the one who has kept Canada united K Do you think all come to some terms with Ireland now that the war will soon be over.

I think you will have a good majority in the House. All that before long the war will be over
Let Lincoln Speak

Lincoln – I want you Mr Wallace for coming.
Thank you for wanting me & come.
I had to suffer as you have suffered
I have tried to see the Right conquer, & will you
You have saved Canada from Civil War
I had to go through Civil War & save the Union
God will continue to guide and direct your counsel
Good night

K. Good night to all – & God bless you all

202 Elgin St. Dec 10th 1944

Talkin; Low to all you all here
Let Mother speak

Mother/ Mr. Lincoln, fondest love, So glad you have come, Jean, Elaine Jean, I was so glad you went to the Dance & Banquet Weren't you proud of Billy?
He is a great little man, as Mother would say.
He is like my father - a real fighter
He made a deep impression on his fellowmen
He will win the Presidency

" So long Comrades - Jean says Mothers are apt to get spoiled.
I know all that Mr. Lincoln has meant
I know how greatly pleased the people are, he took the course he did
Abraham Lincoln was in a similar position
He and I have been beside Mother all the time
He is a great soul, a great man of the people
Let him speak

" Tell me about the letter I received yesterday and read to day, what is it all about? (Was a letter from persons of Montreal re Science)
I did not speak of the Dance

" To absent Son when you to me.

Lincoln, I did however, inform one of the audience to say I wanted to speak to you

" Why was that?

Lincoln: I wanted you to know I was at your side at that time
I knew you would be thinking of the time you said Goodbye to me at the Harbour
It was the hardest hour in your life (This was significant re Comp)
I remember your praying at my bed side and asking me to let you know that I was alive and meet you
I want you to know that now

" That is very comforting, and I fully believe it
God has answered your prayer and mine
He has a great work still in store for you
But by the way I say that you will win the next election
Let Mr. Lincoln speak

" Many thanks for coming dear Mr. Lincoln

Abraham Lincoln - I thank you for inviting me to come
I have been at your side in the last few months

((I am sure of that, and am deeply grateful to you for it, I think I was more than your mere change in your day.

Lincoln I suffered more than words can express
I know what you suffered

I know what Laurier suffered.
I know what your grandfather suffered
We were all at your side.
M. Did I do what was right?
Every step you took was the right one
You acted so during one of the great days of your story.
Sir Laurier Speech (last 10 to 20 words)
M. Well Sir Wilfrid, so glad you have come Sir Wilfrid! Mrs Pelletier, how are you do?
Joan. I am very happy to meet a friend of our friend here
Sir W. Today Laurier and I are very proud of him too
M. Many thanks Sir Wilfrid, my home to you both (Hold, Joan "I cannot see beyond the circle of his hand) (the report of the news is cancelled after 10.10)
Sir W. I am delighted with the way you managed everything long ago I knew you would be Prime Minister
I knew you would achieve the terms I had
You may call Sir John
M. Will Quebec fall in line again?
I cannot say, they are much upset at present
Ah Laurier will be a good leader
Power is no loss.
would he be a good organizer?
He would be all right in that respect.
Nation is disliked in Quebec, a most part of Canada
He is a corporation lawyer
He complains of a cruel aggression
Home will be Sheaden will him in the department
Bernard dog is lost, get rid of him
Mary will be more cautious from now on Macdonald is a doubtful quantity, he will fit out all right him
Tupper and Laurier are kind servers.
Tardieu is courteous, he will steal from Mackenzie is loyal, but not helpful personally.
Blake is exceedingly helpful & very friendly
Mitchell is more than useless, it would be well & get rid of him
Schreiber is not an asset, get him another post -
Fournier is timid, but might be of some help
Borden has done well hold on to him
Mackenzie is true as steel
Mulock has greatly improved
Macdonald wants to go on the bench. (Truly amazing - all members of Cabinet in H of C are included!)
Good night. —

20a Elgin St. Jany 1. 1945

Father's love for all here. (We had been reading Grayson book - a boy's adventures Joan (They don't mind time. I wrote - Yes they do - they know about new year
Father The old year passed away at midnight
The new year followed instantaneously.
Time is marked for us, but for God, by events.
The new year gives us a feeling of joy
Millions too, it is like a reveal of the world
I remember reading it to you children on New years Eve at Woodside
Church always had a foremost place in our minds
Mr Dickie, Mr Jones, Mr Winchester were all great friends
They are here with your mother and me now
W. Give them all my love, and thank them for their helpful teachings
They are so glad when you say that Mr Macdonell, Mr McGaughey also this time
They were also great Scots men. Thank them too -
a. arenteny Black & Anne too
W. Give them all good wishes for the new year & thanks
Long ago, they helped to lay the foundations of your faith
W. pray him & I shall ever be grateful to them for that "God bless you" they all say.
Joan. Jean Father & Mother are here and sent their love to you and Nancy too. She says give my love to Val & and love to you dear Joan, Joan. I send all my love to them, I was hoping they would come to us
W. Jean so glad to
The whole family circle are gathered together here
Joan. I have been thinking a great deal of all of them, this Christmas more than any other time, how you? - W. Jean.
Father We know Jean every thought.
Joan I don't mean that, help off
Father Never mind - we understand
" God loves us all, and His love is greater than ours
" He forgives our transgressions, He healeth our wounds.
He loved us before we knew Him
" He hears our prayers, he knows that our bodies are dust
" He restoreth our souls for His name sake
Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death
we will fear no evil that was the old Scripture that Joan chooses of.
Joan Thanks be unto Him, let him be worshipped & praised Father He wants to thank Joan for saying that

Let Lucille Start

Lucille: I know you look at me sing & have my hair lost weight.
I loved to see you do that I love to have you think of me and of our talks together at the Keyboard
Every word has come true
You and I have kept close together ever since
You and Joan have been a great help to each other
God has been mindful of you
God loves you both and will bless you both.
He will be remembered and is full of loving kindness.
I like to hear you read aloud to Joan
You used to read aloud to me
Joan read Pudd'nhead Wilson, and the Cowboy and other books
You read the bible, the 13th chapter of first Corinthians, and the Beatitudes the last time we were together

W. That is true, dear brother,
Every word in the bible is true
God is love, that is the greatest truth of all
God exists, and God bless you both in the New Year.

K. Do you ever see David?
David often comes when we are reading or singing his psalms

K. Do you ever see Moses?
Moses is a great leader. He is an imperialist & all of us.

Joan. Do you ever see Eve? (a laugh)
Joan always had a sense of the ridiculous

Father God exists & God bless you in the new year

Summit House,
Feb. 14. 1943

Father: Come from all this
Willis = Please come anyone and speak.
Laurie: The campaign a few years back was waged between it was a steal from beginning to close the Republicans made a wonderful campaign
the Democratic Convention chose the proved Elections
K. What course do you think I should follow?
Be guided by your best judgment day by day.
Go to San Francisco when the time comes.
Don't have the elections till the war is over
K. When do you think it will be over?
That depends on the Spring rains
I think it may be over in March
God only knows how long the fighting can hold on
They have become fanatical
Hitler is out of his mind.
So to bed early each night
You are exhausted for your work.
Let your Master Speak

Master:
W. Thank you for coming, friends. Love, help us all you can.
Joan. You feel a sense of duty and wish to fulfill
You are a great help to him and he needs your help.
Can you go to bed each night at nine or ten?
Eat less during the day.
Drink lots of water
Take some exercise out of doors,
Go out to Kingsmen at week ends,
Don't tire your eyes by reading after going to bed.
Can you manage to take a little holiday
The elections should wait as before you.
The war must be over before then
The people behind it you and Samuel to complete
Let father speak
Father: a Love to you. Our welcome from all here.
Know that God is blessing you in your work.
He will be your guide and stay
So to bed early tonight
Good night

Savoie House, March 15th 1945

Pacelli - Sam & Joan and you from all here
Let Pacelli speak

Sir William - So glad to see you & that Mrs Welland's daughter & the three How old are the twins Pacelli
" " " " Sir William
Long ago I had Mrs Welland at Savoie House.
Bring her with me now.
K I don't say I remember the meeting when Welland drove Stevens
Mrs Welland says she made a meeting for you
She knows I took you with her daughter
The session will be short
The Soviets have nothing to tell about
They only make a noise, but you have nothing to fear
K What about the Quebec conference?
Leave that to me and Cadogan and Eden
K Say how to you all. I shall count on the help you can give Hand the debate on San Francisco first
Don't mind what they say about Dumbarton Oaks
The more they say about that, the more important they will affirm
Let you for this afternoon

Pacelli -
K Sir William & you here: what is this good news?
The visit to the White House has a great fruition in your coop.
The San Francisco conference will help you very much in the elections
Must delay the elections beyond the end of June
The end of the war is in Sept-
It will be over in April
I believe it is nearly over already.
The President is very fond of you
He likes to talk to you
He has aged very much
He is losing his interest in affairs
He will be glad to go to England in June
Don't be afraid of this session
It will end by Easter
Have your speech on San Francisco ready for Thursday
Bring in the war atrocities angle
Leave the enemies to the Lord
Lord confess

K – Is Sir Oliver today there?
Sir Oliver Lodge is speaking
L. We are so glad you have come. Your book on the Reality of a Spiritual World is the most satisfying work I have ever read.
I am pleased to hear. You and Mrs Vallance again
I recall the most sweet hospitality of Wanstead
I have often spoken of you to Mrs Lodge
She is here with me now.
L Do tell her we still have delightful memories of home, her sweet kindness again. She has meant very much in our lives
Mrs Lodge says to tell you that everything she told to Grace
L I am sure of that.
She says she knows your father & Uncle Vallance's father & mother
L We can both be glad to know that.
K Don't you think my father looks like you.
Your father is a much finer looking man than that I am
L – NO at all, but you are finer looking now.
Your mother is the loveliest person she is a wonderful angel.
L May I consult on your questions & problems of home from the beyond from more than clairvoyance or dreams?
Sir Oliver – Yes clairvoyance will be all right. Don't be concerned about them
The seance will help you
The San Francisco conference will be a great thing for you
The terrible times of your life intensify & peace & good will
There will be many helping you from this side
I believe you will be given help from Powers much higher than any I know
Jean – Is that your father?
Sir Oliver – Jean's father & I are great friends
L. I am so glad
Jean's father is a man of great attainments, he has great spiritual powers
He seems to be at Jean's side all the time
L Will I be able to keep from getting tired & weary?
Don't attempt journeys to think of being tired
Take as much rest as you can Take plenty of sleep
Go to bed early & often as much as Don't work after 6 o'clock
Have a massage now & then for your neck
Good night

Kingsmill House 29. 1945

Sallie. How to spare you
Let me each speak

K. Sir William, I am so glad you have come, for remember our talks. We thank you for your wonderful life - after I am so glad I know you came.

Sir Wm. Ian Sallison, and oh you do. I remember you and Ian Sallison from the days when I. & I were Parliamentarians at Toronto
Long ago I appointed ~~him to this position~~ his King stepped down when he became
He soon became Governor and then Premier Minister

(Joan) Joan to door. Calls back "Hear the Robin sing"

Sir Wm. I heard the Robin sing when you opened the door

Joan. He must be very near!

Sir Wm. I saw him Minister the first place
Long ago I knew you ~~would~~ be a great man in world affairs
You had the tradition and the accomplishments
You had a father and mother who were the inspiration of all that was best
Your grandfather had played a great role in Canadian history
Your father & I were all the memory of Pasteur
He was a great supporter of mine in the Senate
He and I fell out for a time
He was in the right, I was in the wrong
He and I were great friends again
I wanted to make amends to him when I made my will.
He says there was one need for that, he forgave me long ago.
Great and good man that he is, he is the most forgiving I know
I was glad to be able to show my affection for you
You helped to make my career what it was
I needed the kind of strength you gave me
I loved the forest glen. But Spirit of peace, Pride ruled my will.

K I heard him sing this!

Sir Wm. You heard me sing that at prayers ~~to~~ when you were first at the Convent (remember not for years)
I love sing it many times since
I love read the best book you gave me each day.
I see you reading it, and the other best books and the bible each morning
I know the best thing one can do is what good there is
I want you to stay on in public life for some time yet
God has a work for you to accomplish
He will make it plain to you
You will win the next election.
The conference at San Francisco will help you very much
Good-night

K. Sir Oliver Lodge there. Yes. We see you talk to him on the Sir Oliver Lodge? I heard you reading his book aloud (we had been reading Survival of Man)
K. I have not read anything which has given such satisfaction to my friend or more interesting.
Thank you for saying that. What I have written is true
I know proof of it all from this side
I want help you to understand the great laws of life
You have a searching and discerning mind
You would have made a great scientist
Your field is widespread and interconnected relations
There are a group here who are working with you for Sir Oliver
Follow Jesus even judgment when in doubt
When in doubt wait. His guidance of God
K Can I get over the feeling of fatigue & exhaustion to keep more things that is a matter of control & mind over matter
Take all the rest you can after luncheon and at night.
Eat sparingly and avoid stimulants
Take short exercise for some
Read in the day time, but not at night
Let your subconscious work for you
Good night
K Is there anything you would like to know about the laughter of our war, or shall I ask for particulars?
Yes - Mackenzie - Grandfather Grandfather Mackenzie!
Mackenzie Mackenzie, how do you do. I am glad to see you looking so well
I know that you and William are very fond of each other
That is good for each of you. You are a saint in need, a friend indeed, to talk them down about politics
The war is drawing to its end, it may come to a close any day.
It will be over before the San Francisco Conference
It will be over before parliament is at its end.
Early in April is the time I think most likely.
K What about date of election? & what about Prime Minister?
The elections should be held in June if possible, if the Conservatives will be ready. Otherwise it may be necessary to go on till July.
Prime Minister will agree to how you see in heaven and you should see more
You need be elected for a large majority.
So he has early tonight.
K. All you all the help you can the next few months
There is a host helping you from this side
Good night

Kingsmill April 1st 1945

Forbes. Love from all here. x

Winston: Love & peace and joy from all here
Let Potter speak

Forbes: I heard you reading the biographies (Mrs Winston & Dawson & Gibson)
The one by Gibson is a very good one
Can you get some one to publish it.

K. I don't know. How far any suppression
I should think the Star might take it
Inclination how published Parliament article
Mrs Stone also published Canada Digest for Freedom
Best might republish the Star article
Best was a good friend of the party

K. What authority would it give it — what kind of person
The Star could say just a word
It could be called after Dawson writing

K. I don't see do you mean the Star should take factor Dawson's

K. Must check Gibson's

Gibson is a academic
It might appear in the Commonwealth monthly, or in the Queen's Magazine
It could be reprinted by Best.
Efforts should be made to widen publication
Let Lauren speak

Sir Wilfrid

K. We are glad you have come Sir Wilfrid. Tell us about the Conference
Miss Pattison Joan glad to see you again
The session has been a great help to you
The next two weeks will be short
They will go much better than you think
The war is nearing its close
It may end before the session is over
The San Francisco conference will take people's minds off politics
The Quebec elections may make it necessary for you to delay this
The result is certain to be a win for the Liberals — Federal. July
Can you have Sir Cannes come to Ottawa & Montreal
You will be invited there by a swearing in ceremony.
It is important that you should be in the next Government
Let the Forces vote all they like, you have the people with you.
Good night.

The – Father can you get this Dispatch to Arnold Dopulos
Prest. Yes – a. Where is he? Arnold Dopulos
K. I am delighted you have come. I owe very much to you
No one's writings inspired me more than yours and to life more of pure enjoyment times, Arnold Dopulos – I bring you father my self, he and my entire festival are here beside me
My father presented for your father's service for displeasure
I saw you visit my home with my Sister Gertrude " Emerson
I heard you lecture on me at Oberlin, Ottawa and Toronto " "
I love to hear you recite the passage about the sea, and the
I heard you recite the passage about St. Paul by Emerson
Lord Tennyson is here with me. Arthur Chamberlain

K. Give him my love, tell him I remember our talks
He says he remembers his talk with you at the Metropolitan and when you and your father called on him in London Gertrude remembers when you and your father called on her in
She sends her love to you London
Give her my love, She was so fine and worked a miracle in Denver and – very likely you've met her for you

Dopulos She blames you for that I thank you for having my picture framed on your wall at
I knew your friend Horton, he and I are great Lawn Mower.
K. Will you help me to speak on Social Friends problems, at San Francisco in the Exhibition in Golden
There are a group of us here who are helping you all we can
K. Dr William James one of the Group
William James is the leader of our circle
He and Professor Norton of Harvard are great friends
K. Give my love to Professor Norton
He sends me to you to say how glad he would be for you to Pallisades grounds after "Shady Hill"
God will guide you in all you undertake
He has a great work for you to do
You will outlive this Presidency and Chancellor
You will have taken with Stalin & other leaders at the peace Cotes
You will live to a grand old age
Honoured by men of many lands,
Good night
K. God bless you – I have no greater love in my heart for any God bless you. I love you more than I love for you

Kingsmere May 27th 1945

To this! — Some from all here.
Laurier is here.

Sir Wilfrid

K. I felt so grateful to you & Lady Laurier as I saw Laurier House open yesterday
Lady Laurier: I heard you exclaim when you saw the house
Sir Wilfrid was with us at the time, as heard you also mention his name.
We are so happy to know you feel as you do.

K. What do you think of the campaign?
I believe the Liberals will win by a large majority
I rely on with the constructive side of your program
The people have confidence in you.

— You will win in Prince Albert — Sir Wilfrid spoke

Sir Wilfrid

K. So glad you have come Sir Wilfrid, am so grateful to you
I heard you exclaim with pain: Laurier as you came in & saw Laurier House
(Your spoke of the beauty & richness of the room the day she was there)
I heard what Sir Wilfrid just said. — Thank you Sir Wilfrid (Joan glad to hear his voice & thank him. Not now responsible for an election as four years of late — old campaigner)
Thank you Sir Wilfrid. I remember the night I was at Woodside & had a few words with you.
I love to think of the hours we had together
I knew you would be Laurier's successor,
Now I know you will be in office longer than any other Premier
I believe you will beat the record of the Leaders of the Liberal Party
Sir Roosevelt spoke

Vice Admiral —
I am delighted beyond words to be speaking to you after you are always in my thoughts. I never know what you are doing, I cannot tell you how joy it gives me to be speaking to you again
K. What a happy evening, the last time we had together, was it.
I loved every moment of it.
I saw you at Hyde Park to visit the House & invite my father before his illness
I saw you place the flowers beside my grave before the service
I saw you go in to speak to Eleanor & my daughter before you left for I saw you standing talking together & saw us [illegible] Ottawa
my last hours at Woodside
I heard each of you speak of your love for me

I know that you are going to win the election
I know you will be returned for Prince Albert
I want you to go to see Duncan at Washington
He will help you all he can
The people of the United States have a great affection for you.
The people of South America look to you as a friend of theirs
Winston is grateful to you beyond words.
He will have a hard fight
I think he will get through, but this may interest or prevent
The San Francisco Exposition will help Canada or the Pacific.
I don't if you could afford to be away from Canada till the Election
I will give you all the guidance I can from here (Crerar) Ian so grateful, you have all the love there is in my heart for you. I am sure your mother is at your side. I hope you have Peter and my father & mother.
Roswell We are all here together at this time
Your mother loves you as angels. She is lonely beyond words
Your father is a man after my own heart, a great good man,
good-night
K. What do you feel now about Hitler, Mussolini, Goering & all
They are suffering the tortures of the damned,
They are conquering in Hell
They would give their souls for a moment's peace
They will suffer remorse forever
K. Thanks so much - help in all you can while you are at Falkirk!
Well. I am so glad you & Mother & Duncan are there. So grateful for all the help is speeding it
We are helping you all we can. We are delighted with progress so far
We will continue to inspire your thoughts. Keep on as you are doing
good night
Sir Wm Mulock - Your delightful wife & companion, you will know a friend whose wife has been very ill. It is best he should stay out; the way re-turn to public life is the future. Let's hope.
Can you see him when in Toronto. - K. Yes darling will do my utmost to do so
good-night
Mother! Fondest love to you and Ian am so happy to do you both together also
I have been watching over you all the time
Grandfather has been helping all he can.
Good-night
K Fondest love to all.

Ringmore, Sunday morning. June 18th, 1848.

In the quiet of this Sunday morning. let me write out what I do believe. God has guided me throughout this campaign. His hand has been plain all along the way. In thought I have failed on more than one occasion I have not been able to restrain all my feelings as I now & wonder how I could have failed power of will sufficiently to do. God knows my heart, He knows my motive, He knows that I have sought earnestly and honestly every inch of this way, and sought to be true in everything to the highest and the best. My failures have only made me more conscious than ever of the love and mercy of God. His purpose in my life and that purpose will be fulfilled. All through this campaign even how often I am in appearance, have fears and clouds and clouds, & Hickson forewarned Saul on the Wednesday morning it was quite impossible that I could be in my 21st year. Others have written that I look or I did so years ago. I have prayed that I might come & look like one whose life has been spared many years that of the martyrs. that in looking at my face they might find something of serenity & peace & this cause. I have come & look more like dear father. I am grateful for that. The fellowships and in the present campaign have confirmed me in that respect. I have sought & follow Dr Barker's advice and it has been blessed. But more of all I have sought after purity and righteousness and thanks for these endeavours on my way & the appearance. So I feel that all I aimed at all I desire in the outcome of tomorrow's voting, is that God's will may be done. that His purpose in my life may be fulfilled. Should we happy should this result happy for my party & the cause, of our country, though it means to me personally breaking a heavy burden on my own back for some time to come, happy for the best hope of light and freedom and peace if the decision is the right way.

Now of this decision, I believe the Government will win, that we shall win a majority over all parties. I should indeed not be surprised if we have another smashing victory. We, even believing it that the majority will be against me. In that case there is no question of this, I believe, but the scale that will be more strenuous words, I do not know much. Of course it makes no difference at all I am not concerned at the moment. All is what I believe is being revealed & this is my inmost consciousness. I opened the Bible at the book "Daily strength for daily needs" this morning at the passages for June 16th & 17th & read "All nothing more than sad or helpful, or ~~Too~~ prayerful, be still, what God hath ordered must be right, How fine it is to have one delight, his will" - How was the comfort, the assurance I needed most. The proof of God's mercy. His everlasting love. How often were the words "My times are in thy hand. Every purpose of the Lord shall be performed" "I am so glad, yes such rest. Knowing that He has ordered and appointed all, and will He orders and appoint my lot." - That gives a new meaning & significance to the words that God created evil as well as good. Others passages on same page were "We must wait & be guided" - His patience & His Divine Presence"

I have returned to the Cantonment for today. June 10th —— I enter today on my 19th year on Divine Mercies - His mercies "He loaded my soul with unfailing daily benefits" He sees His strength & hand thro' [illegible] last 365 days. - Read the Bible 6 & 10. Hamilton ends day "And he said unto me Thou must prophesy again before many peoples, many nations and tongues and kings" — That would be a message or a part of it for Chefoo, but very very tired had enough for June 16th. See June 26th. I have now looked up June 16th and found these words "exceedingly abundantly above all that we ask or think" - and in my poor handwriting in pencil above "Government sentenced at 1.30 this morning beyond 9 & a most trying hour of want & confusion" — I believe God shall be sentence or His word of a renewal of confidence tomorrow (June 11th) "exceedingly abundantly above all that we ask or think" — I wish I can understand these words "He would make all things, channels & His and messengers of His love"

I was interrupted in writing this diary to answer a message from Downhill. I listened at the clock on the way back after hearing a fresh word of belief in victory tomorrow and hands were in a perfect state of struggle here at 10.20 Each day this morning has spoken of God's love and of His mercy and of His revelation. I pondered silently after. I had learned out the Hymn after first getting the tune, listening to the Old songs getting the arrangement from Britain, — I love that hymn that comes in her strength and speaks at that time. Was up at 7.20 and out for walk with little Nat - but before breakfast had a vision of [illegible] receiving a box post in Portsmouth - Old Berlin - It was revived by walk thought of Victor Emmanuel - Gentle feelings of His hand & Christian promise. — The conquest of the Lord's plans I was sure in I believe a Spirit but, victory tomorrow. As I neared home on the road before me hills & the valley - from Woodside - few clouds in all, beautiful peace & quiet, which I had sent out a cheerful smile thoughts of the loved ones beyond - (one maybe for Hope there, or Spring here) one one all one. but this promise is being made known in other I am writing. They are the channels and messages of God's love.

It was a wonderfully beautiful morning, the sun shining on the golden corn fields. The birds singing in the fullness of the morning joy - built & prayed at the close for God's protection. In continued fondness, until I came for the merry & true love. Remembering well that the Miss Little days - my best words "they will be done" in heaven and the God's will be done. Had rather a long journey & campaign - but a peaceful life up to present. Had rather an open or closed road, but it is as for us we can to order, tomorrow may will you - I spend them & to read through - and "Love's vision" will unfold; I mean. I believe they would you with under affectionate. This I do believe. - Came in my book. Stood, looked into the clear sun - must my skirt - like a shepherd's crook & heard prayed "God bless me & ": then returned to my own home. Back - post & the sun flies around - looked to trees & - Jesus passing will terrible destruction. - I believe that war will be over & the end of August or early September, - after then report be continuing of little books - the little boys - and this reminds me - a voice reminds me, as I was about to write the babies, that in the chapter for read today there are underlined the words the little boys. - Now I believe is convincing evidence that I am very sleepy, it is long remembered that what I have studied from the little boys & what I have read in the papers - is all true and that the response abroad is true and that tomorrow, the reaction will express its confidence in me, and that I shall be a friend as well as a lover for Prince Albert. That's me, Faith has been rewarded, all that I may the better come to pass the reading of the moral orders which control this world & all its inmates - and most this better known & then. - God grant that it is as this I am right - I took Revelation for the reading for this month - after the reading of John's Gospel. I have failed & one chapter only for each day from the first to this 10th - all has led up to the little boys - little Billy Daly Strangers Daily Needs' and all it has meant - of guidance through the years for bless them all. Father, Mother, Nell and Mary - friend friends & little sisters. Sir Wilfrid - Lady Laurier, Mr - Mrs Borden Sir William Mulock - Lady Aberdeen Rogers (Colin Campbell, 2 years ago today), Rhodes, Gandhi and Roosevelt and many many more - and forgetting Hammett - dear little friend Hay and many others pray & Heaven will be answered - all I believe have been helping in this campaign - a friend and wise counsellor. - There are many many more whose names (are) on my heart & memories in my mind. Miss Wright. Miss Foley. Rogers Lady Laurier. & Queen Victoria Mrs Asquith - Lady Cecil Mrs - all

I took just [illegible] these pages away, went about & returns the little book to the table in the other desk & turned in the bible at the end of Lodging reading the little knocker to Jodi pronouncing where I was amazed I read these words 'smell or money. And I took the little book out-of the angels hand. Could anything be more convincing than this. All I know was that is true.

when I perceived Mackay & this period. I was very tired, was quite tired so I went to bed, soon fell asleep, and slept very soundly from 11 till about 2. had broken sleep before & most of something & soft, after this election business night, based on the assumption we formations returned, but I found Truro Cor tried 478 m. 537 voted out for a unit small Majority in favour of Shaftesbury, & which & the ribbons worked at the flowers hoping & offered. the green of his field = the forder hoping merely flowed to declare the Cause. How calls come in which I answered. First Prince Albert - the result, which a majority of 150 or a number attended with answered. Spirits very high & perhaps the first speech last night, crowded theatre & people listening as Shaftesbury will get 10 seats at Southampton, formerly Ld. Palmerston in Sept. Thomas Baring will succeed to Lord of, Shaftesbury for Downton night. Mr Cornwall planned & went down Cork western & Limerick on Board. He says the people the Slaves have lost figure 11 2 for Cork in a number, likely under higher. Mal. Jones will lose 80 as most others for down. When I come in from walk & call Lennie Colston & heads & spoke of Peter Simon dealt it was a great Cork Mrs - bonds exactly together — I enjoyed the cold walk Lennie, strolling Borrie days. Thought of Robert. Note from Edward Ross & Annie Fennell all great friends — thought one present-Fowler, = Sequence of Mrs Lewis Simon & Peter - when he kissed on his head & say Goodnight. "Jan look to me" - Peter "Just let as it should be" I then found Willie Simon & Eileen come for Christ - Mrs exactly 10 Ld Ellen Spoke & Lord de Ellesmere told him of his appointment & Queen as ambassador. He did not sound too cheerful, - says little to Ellen has not been well again. It was fed & done the promise carried out: I read a few more letters as usual Mrs Ellen & had for another Xst at 5.45 & really broke it a strange time when I [illegible] & Eileen & Mrs 25 post 5, and after telling of it was 25.8 I broke to Peter Lord before they brought Arthur & Kathleen when I had revised & dressed. I was glad to see both of them. looking so well & bright & more cheerful - & Stronger Harry Jr, M. had planned Dorie = Dorie had Cor. her Engaged & Peter & to in reach of home accommodation for Arthur & Kathleen. all this was a great relief = joy. We had a nice talk before & ate dinner & then drove round & Moorside, a glance at the hills from Moorside, & then to Hubbuck = a glance at the lake & back to the Farm. a lovely little Cot. secured a few blades for Kathleen, to add to Alice Bees hive = on round some lilies of the valley from Moorside (which came from Woodside) & to find we'll have in my own handwriting beside Peter. We all changed & [illegible] & in afternoon remembrance of my dear friend Peter. Birthday - June 10. - 45. Sad-like off Official delivery Cough. Lennie made Salmon, flavored & Cucumber & Cream & I drank ale had Cork 2 Stout = Willie aboard, the dear old Scene & Understand Excellent Telegram. Dad in Cork & Ellen meant that nothing had come & Chris Jones. - Hi sad - tragic. Letter from Dr Hawkins P.S. - he's not so doubtful as he was, but really did not sound too hopeful. It was a but discouraging, after very little of interest. Saw Mr Wrottesley - Archie & Kathleen had an hour's nice little talk which came out well with the result - I hope does very well for them - but has been guided in a way which has helped them over the present block of hesitancy. Have a feeling that from now on they will manage all right. They have been happy in their little home since Xmas. - After supper Godley & Thesy at the door. - I told the news. - Read before Lot-Xs Revelations and told him of their approaching visit. He seemed very pleased. He says all looks well in Nigeria. had had several meetings today. - Were pleased about the Legwonde, some long story - involving trouble, that now the Parliament was called over a crowd of Africans. Thought Wilson-Fisk, most appreciative of his assistant, says he and his daughters greatly pleased. - Visit to Academy Week at Mercers Hall had a nice talk with her, was glad to have a word before we end of the campaign - Had not remembered her as I should have at Christmas. Is now trying to get Second Lieutenancy. At 10 to 10, Mr Davies & Kathleen left. - Then I went in the Library & had a long talk with Stanwix at Queen Alberta - I looked at my notes & had settled at 8 past 10, when I caught sight of the clock. Dinner exactly 5 to 11. Both Mr Davies & Stanwix to say a word of thanks at 11. Mr Williams's address will be kindly received & needed! Thanks to Mr Naughton for address all signed. Hopes for a Degree Ceremony in Sanbi Chama. Says everything has been done that can be done. All have worked well together & done their best I told them I believed we should have right across this country & in Canada & West Africa Joan and Ann to bed. Took off with Mr & Mrs Al & read from 3 books - one letter of Bishop Stopford's Mr Deacon - all days go to heaven. - Something about Mary and the Lamb have to be King. - Dorothy - Mayfield thought I should like to be the Holy Ghost. - Mr One who has truly revealed God to man, Mr One whose Spirit sounds the world & then he comes on earth, whose Spirit has sounded it in our hearts, & who Spirit will consummate it in the end over all.

Kingsmire, June 11th 1945

I had a very remarkable experience last night after long of sleep to relieve for the night. Before retiring I looked & looked out of the window wondering in my spare room. It was dark as Egyptian night. Hours I said out-loud. It is all darkness now - (or today) tomorrow it will all be clear and bright. I had taken with me upstairs to read three books from the table in the sitting room. (1) all dogs go to Heaven by Bill Brandon. (2) This England (by Arthur Bryant) junior + St George (3) the Lion Lamb & the King & Dorothy Sayers. Before getting into bed I shut the door & left Rob barked and I said to the present-left Rob here is where old Rob and I had our last great battle - conquering over the dragon (the present left Rob came to my side as I was undressing then looked up wagged her tail, and her whole body & tail soft = I think the little fellow "good night" - possibly not. Then took the book. 'All dogs go to Heaven' opened it & read the chapter & closed I saw the name Rob down stairs. It was entitled "He (meets his beloved dog". Here are the opening words "It was very quiet. It was moonlight, or a little while, it would be (2 2 3 = ?) clouds" - ... 'There seemed to be a close and tender communion between the earth and the sky - between the light and the darkness - it would be thought except for the light and the darkness --- one would pass away, and the other come to be' - It was the same with life and death. We can't know very little. We know it was so still there was no curlew whistle - ... (page 224 n - the two worlds 'of time & eternity' mingled - mixed & blended - and the magic carpet of sweet thoughts. --- There was no death as such — But before I write more I must not forget to record that before I began to read at all mine fell out of the book to my side a blessing, begun Sir Oliver Lodge's story of his dog - 'I shall not be surprised if I see him again some day' viz = his story as he can write before & Sir Oliver Lodge's action --- Now 'DO you mean to tell me that I shall meet my dog again? Undoubtedly if you are good enough" — Then I turned to tell me, I mean (any time some-thing from my departed friends. - I had written after Sir Oliver's words this morning, but had had no thought at the time of opening at this book before (only to find I was sad I mean it contained this blessing. -- Then Rev. 20. 20-23 "And so the faithful would be, his heart rested here quietly - broad bright and clear light - (I thought of the outcome after darkness, - a very sacred thing - unexpected, a relation & the kingdom; but all a book of it. Then came the response to me. Be (Rob) the dog in this story = old Rob. "Rob = Rob" - Spiritual change this morning was they = myself. We could scarcely meet for tears & anger. He could hear him here in his pillow. I was actually turning on my pillow as I come to these words. He could hear his sigh (but just before)

(more actually sighing as I read the words - a groan of weariness). Finally there was made another of the annoying parallel of my actions & these words. --- he was one word - one of the same words - at last. However came round to my thoughts, it was as if he too were watching & waiting for me to move speaking --- then follow on p 226. aboard - southbound for three days - but you were very very tired. You needed sleep: You shouldn't be talking (or writing it) now. You shouldn't be doing anything but resting up. - Lying back & getting your strength together - for so there is lots to do here - and you'll be fully active ---- (all so closely related to the charge from one person to another & another, - the trial the verdict? p. 229. that I did take a vote. What's the count? (I must stop reading this at that point until later, the result or you'll see later. --- Then further down Rex is still waiting for the verdict --- p. 234 The verdict --- for or against? Is your face for or against, is my face come this unbelieving echo. Yes or your face for or against. Rex --- Then with these words "It matters very little whether Spaarday goes back or back you from the Wastelanders of Zanu neighborhood (the Bridgetown area of the Campbeds of Mashen) - or the country of the dead you flatly [illegible] from the enemies that threaten the shores. What's why we are at war for that very reason --- there here at last. It was all these [illegible] analogy. Every word I have written is true. and from of this all being revelation must be come before this day is over for all (that was last reading Vol. 1) will by this be here at last' - I then looked at the very beautiful pictures of Their England. Standing for St. George & slaying the Dragon. That is what Britain has done. That is the task - place in History of their England. Mary Dorothy, Sayers work. the man born to be King. I marvelled by art. thought & the of my thoughts. I was too tired & sad inside, not enough & know that this life has meant every - thing & this moment. That is is the way the truth & the light. by prayers or I meant & help him & become more & more worthy of this task.

Now there is chapter two of these experiences. I had a very difficult night. It was raining out of doors, my shoulder right paining, my left foot had some signs of a sudden crack or two during the day, the blankets too many, one not enough. room close. I could not sleep, but tossed & turned, ate one tossed out of mind, Egyptian nights, but Scramble lights still alight & behind - confused darkness, - but I said light will break out of it all. - After a night of tossing turning, etc I had the vision very distinct before waking. The first I was surrounded & young women, some running out of doors - & all endeavouring to get on a train. There seemed to be no effort to exhibit any resistance to all temptation. I found my pronouns terribly confused, but I fought it out and won. (St. Temptation & the Fakir) The next - I found I was addressing a very large gathering in a most undemonstrative. It was an election address & the audience were in the palm of my hand or St were. Suddenly, I found I forgot a name - something I meant to say. - I came for - word & told the audience I had had a long time speaking very much & was very very tired. To excuse me for forgetting first what I had meant to say. - The word Berlin - came forward. & was on the lips another place. The audience applauded me for it. other part was in silence - Then I tried Who on but found it increasingly difficult & called my daughter. I misheard it, fancy I had fought it the last part. It was like my old Uncle Bob - his fought & the very end - hanging about his I came. I took him in my arms. I felt it was a morning not to always be made from now on. I was not in the least disturbed or concerned. It was rather like a moment of triumph - like reconciled and at home here that I had fought on & to the very end. - It did not seem personal defeat in any way, but triumph in having kept this faith to the very end.

So here are the messages that have come & be from the 'other world' - this world of the invisible - there is no sense about are fighting or unite us all this way. - I was called about 8. for the news of at 10 past 8 - Straight then - then for a while with little Nat - we had our prayer & he is coming and a kiss on the forehead at the usual time. - the words 'I heard them every time - & I read them on - & they will be done Then on & the path ahead is the Shepherd & today between & the 5 pm. closed for the hour of fasting. I told little Nat. it would Been made tonight. - he smiled back & then looking up & the sky at the usual time - just the words I had from me on - & then & the house. had a report from the window - reading letter boxes & class XIII Remembrance, Daily Strength & unite us exp- -pression of my desire just to rest in Him - fulfil his will Consolations, his love. & Grace. & the Sacrament being divine Communion about 7 me for my self & my children in crossing & Bonnie all. I shared Sandra - to convey in a note. from Della. & then take the King 8.6. Bill & my children & teachers. the best it will. Say things took well 8.6. - Number 2 would be in San Francisco - perhaps next week - & then beyond this during life to date - [illegible] 11.25; Say hour [illegible] Parker & Edwards 11.39 Stayed in bed & read & then room.

The Forum. Kingmir July 1st 1915.

Father; - Come from all here
M. - You give us the triumph for which we look to God.
Father Let Samuel speak
Samuel reply: - The elections must be great Triumph
Look to God Pray to Him.
Then you would win in Quebec
Let Jean Talon speak
Father: Congratulations on the victory which awaits
Long ago I had a vision that you would have a great career
Even a long road ahead of you
I told the Lord reporter about it
He has much work to do for you.
God has a great work for you to do
" What was the reporter name? - cannot say. (Colin Nelson?)
Let Madam speak
Madame: Come to Jean and you
Have at your side God's light
I heard you say that God's hand was restraining you.
I heard you pray to God to help you pass out strong
He will protect you on all sides
He can help you achieve your highest desires
He wants you to be a great leader among men
He has a great work for you
When the war is over you will be the Redeemer [your] Father among the nations accepted by humanity.
That is an amazing statement -
God has fulfilled his promise to Israel father, Son, now you must fulfill your part
He has a work for you to do among the nations
It was His desire that you should begin the church
You must be encouraging the truth of what I have said
God has chosen you likely the nations through this vision (Geneva by hands of Jean at the Theatre of the Old 10 of Celebration
The elections must be another great power to you
May Jean join you in international reputation and influence
Elsewhere now with but he cannot last long.
You must be prepared to stand alone for the people of Jesus
Good night.

Falkiri: Now to all,
long ago I said you would have a long time in office
It looks as if you might have the longest time of any Prime Minister, except Walpole
K. Is that right
Falkiri. NO, NOT excepting Walpole
The number 137 is a mystical number.
It is a part of your number
K What is my number?
Your number is concealed in a book and to be known till you have omitted this (Gibbon)
K Evening. Examiner myself coming
Eddington is here and will speak
K Sir Arthur Eddington. I am greatly honoured & delighted that you should come,
Sir A. Eddington I am so glad to hear you speak as you do of me.
K. You represent to me the highest intelligence, and great morality of soul.
Sir A Eddington I thank you for speaking like that,
K. Please tell me what you have found in the life beyond.
Sir Arthur Eddington I have found this world so wonderful that no words can describe it
God is everywhere, He is a spirit, and those who worship must worship in spirit and love in truth.
God is love and light and in Him is no darkness whatever.
God is the beginning and end of all things
He is the source of our intelligence and of our inspiration
He is the source of intuition and understanding
He is the first and the last of all knowledge
He is the creator of life and thought
He is the inspirer of all truth, acts and deeds
He is the source of joy and gladness
He is the strength and stay of all who look to Him
He is the one and only source of truth and justice and mercy
He is the light of the mind, and the breath of the soul.
He loves those who seek Him, & seeking you shall find
He will help you in your work
K. I want to carry out and on this work, in the time that may be left to me, will you and others help to inspire and guide.
Sir Arthur Eddington I thank you for asking me, I shall be glad to help you. There are many who will join in helping you;
Give your concentrated thought to the problem on which you are engaged
Pray to God for guidance, then leave the rest to Him
God angels and God bless you
K. Thank you so much

Enter: Joan & all
Peter Semis is here.

K. well Peter we are glad you have come. Tell us about the marriage

Peter Semis No life here is beyond reproach
Florence and Bella are quite true
There is no difference because of marriage
Could we plan the room except that earthly desires do not enter in
I was terribly lonely when I married again
Say mine a good home and a true companion

K. what are you going to do Peter when Florence is not well?

Joan. No don't do that!

Peter — Joan don't self willed, be less asked a reasonable question

Joan — very violent as she was a great hindrance what is he going to do?

Peter. If earthly desires existed here, the Selwicks would be the most wicked.
They gave place to higher and better things
The love of beauty, of goodness and of truth.
The love of God in all his many attributes
We all must together to help those who are left behind Cannot tell you how happy Florence and I are Florence, Bella, Dennis Fennel & Norah live all now a wonderful life
We live in Spirit valley, a Kingdom, dwellings & Kingdoms from time to time
Bella is a lovely girl, she is so full of fun
Joan Watkins and father are here and look so happy
They were delighted at the result of the election

K. What did you think of them, Peter,

I was very happy in my life
I thought you were very brave to run in Prince Albert & to contest another election
You have a wonderful record Bill, and I am proud of you

K. What do you think of Joan?

Joan. What a lovely thing, an enchanting thing,

Peter Joan is lovely beyond words, I have never seen a truer friend
Joan you keep an eye on Bill, he needs you very much.
Have you ever seen a spirit before, Bill?
That is what we all think here.

K. I had a vision until Smith on the door - do you know of it

Peter Yes I wanted to have a talk with you and start this vision
I sent him one to Norman Smith, I want you to tell me the press
I sent him on about the circle and your mother
I want your mother to go round and your life happily
She wants you to be happy in all your ways

(Mrs. Foster will come R side of window)

Joan says. - what did Mrs. do?

Peter, Mrs Linton on Jane mother's delight
She sends them a fair message from her to you
She hears you recite and understand them
She longs to spend a woodside, and this hard mrs the house
Her slate coloured cat-bird over Jane following delight
The house is going to belong to the nation in time
Good night -

K. Thank you Sir and Mrs. Peter, but my love to all, also for me
Mrs has been a long talk
Peter Joan's mother and father and Nancy are all here with us.
K. Tell them to stop.

Nancy, Mother dear, I love you and papa. He is reading the paper at Study
I play the flute and violin for her Friends and for her and Mrs Kipps
They are all so fond of music
Jane papa my love also Mr King

Mrs Whitwell Joan dear, I am so glad to see you again
Who is speaking? Mrs Whitwell
Love from father and me to you and Cowboys pocket all the kisses
We are with you all the time, watching over you

Joan. May God bless pet you (in me. with m K) a cook, a cook is the hardest thing to find these days
Joan even in Heaven (& laughs)
Mrs Whitwell Honeies, we will have a search and see what we can do
I believe that we will have it

K If she don't, I'm done,
Mrs Whitwell. Just as the Angels Romans & help you
Good night

Mother,
Mr. well you help me get a cook like Flora
Joan of course they will Mother he might ask all help all he can
K. And Father! She helped Connie & help me in the Hampshire Schools
She asked - he Champion can easily be elected in Quarter
I doubt however if it would be in his interest to seek election at
He will hear Finney about it it is best for him & the Grants'
Don't be concerned about his future, He is a hard man & Flora
He is very committed. I am sure he will come for no trouble
He will help you & more out the Scholarship
Good night.

Day of Prayer and Thanksgiving. Aug 19. 1945

Father: Save us from all this
K. Tell me what has [illegible] so badly mixed up last week, & of the wonderful & week we brought Let Mr. Meyer speak.
Mr Meyer: Long ago I had a vision experience
I had prepared a spell for a lecture on psychic phenomena
I left the manuscript with a friend, to deliver the spell before the time had come for the lecture. I felt pretty humiliated
It turned out later that the thing he said, had a greater effect than if I myself had said them
So it is with what you said, the people have read the spell more carefully than they otherwise would have done.
It has created a very favourable impression
So we will pray that it may have bubbled, it will soon be completely forgotten
K. But where fault was it?
Meyer. It was the fault of the C.I.C.
K Not entire because of ministers hands control?
It is impossible to say if you had taken a different course it the result would have been different
K Had it any moral significance?
Meyer. None whatever,
The things that troubled were quite apart from this K What about this?
Meyer They are part of the discipline of life, the struggle to gain perfection
The snake you saw in the grass was a sign of temptation
It was a warning to the man of thoughts that came into your mind thoughts control feeling, feeling controls action don't let that influence cause you any anxiety
It is a natural experience in all lives
God has given us a higher and a lower nature and they are often in conflict
You have made great advances on the higher plane.
That is why you feel these things so deeply.
Now as your day. The things you have been interested in are the great questions of today, they will afford great scope for [illegible]
God will guide you, place yourself in his care
Cannot speak longer, here is the room each

Franklin D. Roosevelt

K. I am so delighted you have come, you have been very much on my thoughts. Please tell me what you have & want to know, how do you do Miss Hallock, I remember meeting you at the door of the King's Cottage at Kenmore where you are now

Joan - Not is very wonderful. Thank you so much. I was very glad that that happened.

Roosevelt - Nonsense, don't worry about the broadcast of last Sunday, the people have come to me over the head of the B.B.C. and they don't blame you. It will be forgotten so far as you are concerned in six times at all

I heard what you said about my contribution to the war, and I thank you for that, and for your wire to Eleanor

I have had other messages with all of Sir Oliver Lodge & ones I have friends here.

I enjoy being in Scotland. I have had little with mediums who have helped me much by more

I know that your problems are great will comment with you from time to time

You have healed us all in the length of time you have been in Pitlochry must not be hard. Take all the rest and exercise you can

God will guide and direct you

Good night

Regina Sept 2nd 1945

Father: – Son from across the sea
Long ago I said that God had a great work for you to do.
Lincoln is here & wishes to speak

Abraham Lincoln I wanted you to know that I was at your side this morning
I shall be at your side from now on, as you work out your destiny
That is the work that God has given you to do.
He wants you the great conciliator
He will help you to keep peace between nations
Let Lament Speak

Franklin Roosevelt How do you do Mr Prime Minister Prime: – Good evening Mr.
Long ago I said that you would be returned to power at the election
God has a great work for you to do!
God wants you to help to relieve suffering in the world
God will help you to speak in Parliament and to carry out the measures proposed
Let your great spirit speak

Winston Churchill
Good night Mr Prime Minister, I am glad to see you again
Prime " " Mr Churchill, thank you.
Churchill – The time has come for you to rest the reward of your long labours go ahead with the legislation you have in mind
God will inspire your thoughts
God wants you to be strong and firm in all you say and do
God has a purpose in your life which he wishes to have fulfilled
God bless and keep you
Portens is here

Portens – Thank you so much for coming
I was so glad to hear you speak from my meeting last night
I was so pleased to see you take my hand & congratulate me
Your brothers and his son are here beside me
He will all help you in your work of healing
Good night

Kingsmir. Sept 9. 1945.

Archer: Come & eat.
M. Tell me about tomorrow, how it is likely to go.
News that God is watching over you
He will guide and inspire you as he has at this post
He will tell you what to say.
Let Moses speak

Moses: I am glad to see you and your brethren,
Join you must be patient with Willie
He has worries that you could not begin to know
He knows how dangerous are the moments of today
God has chosen him to deal with them for us,
He will be able to solve some of them
He is the only one in Canada that the people as a whole have confidence
Bend every thought tomorrow, all will be better than you imagine
Let Laurie speak

Sir Wilfrid: Mrs Mackenzie I am glad to see you again
Long ago I said that you would be returned to power
I know what you are feeling at this time
I intend to suffer agonies before an important speech
I will be at your side tomorrow
You must be guided by higher powers,
Let Lordfrey speak

Lordfrey: I remember when you came to see me at Bideford in London
I remember I was kind of at this time and you insisted on this
I shall never forget that understanding you were (clench)
I could not restrain my feelings
I want you to understand that I know what you are going through
I will be at your side tomorrow
God inspire

Sunday, June 10, 1945.

(Handwritten - Book G - p. 73)

In the quiet of this Sunday morning, let me write out what I do believe, God has guided me throughout this campaign. His hand has been plain all along the way. In thought I have failed on more than one occasion I have not been able to restrain all my feelings as by now I should have gained power of will sufficiently to do. God knows my heart, He knows my nature, He knows that I have fought earnestly and bravely every inch of the way, and sought to be true in everything to the highest and the last. My failures have only made me more conscious than ever of the love and mercy of God. He has a purpose in my life and that purpose will be fulfilled. All through this campaign men have spoken to me of, and the press and others have noticed how youthful I am in appearance, how fresh and clean and clear. A [word illegible] journalist said at the Ottawa meeting it was quite impossible that I could be in my 71st year. Others have written that I look as I did 20 years ago. I have prayed that I might come to look like one whose life has been following after that of the Master. That in looking at my face they might sense something of service to His cause. I have come to look more like dear father. I am grateful for that. The photographs used in the present campaign have comforted me in that respect. I have sought to follow, Dr. Barker's advice and it has been sound. But most of all I have sought after purity and righteousness and the fruits of these endeavours are beginning to be apparent. So I feel that all I want, all I desire in the outcome of tomorrow's voting, is that God's will may be done, that His purpose in my life may be fulfilled. I shall be happy whatever the result. Happy for my party and its cause, if we win, though it means to be personally buckling a heavy burden on my own back for some time to come. Happy for the new lease of life and freedom and peace if the decision is the other way.

Now of the decision, I believe the government will win, that we shall win a majority over all parties. I shall indeed not be surprised if we have another sweeping victory. My own belief is that the majority will surprise most people. In total votes there is no question of this, I believe, but the seats that will be won by minority votes is what I fear most. Of or with figures etc. I am not concerned at the moment, it is what I believe is being revealed to me in my inner consciousness. I opened the little book "Daily Strength for Daily Needs" this morning at the passage for June 26th and read "Let nothing make thee sad or fretful, or [74]too regretful; Be still, what God hath ordered must be right. Then find it in thine own delight, my will" - This was the comfort, the assurance I needed most, the proof of God's mercy. His everlasting love. Then opposite were the words "My lives are in Thy hand. Every purpose of the Lord shall be performed." I am so glad, it is such rest to That Thou has ordered and appointed all, and wilt yet order and appoint my lot." That gives a new meaning & significance to the thought that God created evil as well as good. Other passages on page are "We must want to be guided" - The fullness of the Divine Presence. I then returned to the guidance for today, June 10th.- I enter today on my 19th year as Prime Minister - the words "The Lord thy God will enlighten thy darkness." He sees thee through the Gloom during which thou shalt not see Him.- Then the Bible Chap. 10 Revelation ending "And he said unto me 'Thou must prophesy again before many peoples, many nations and tongues and kings" - I had made a memo on a pad re these but being very tired had written June 16 for June 26th. I have now looked up June 16th and find these words "exceedingly abundantly above all that we ask or think" - and in my own handwriting in pencil above "Government sustained at 1.30 this morning majority of 6 on most vital vote of want of confidence" - I believe I shall be sustained on the vote of a renewal of confidence tomorrow (June 11th) "exceedingly

abundantly above all that we ask or think" - I notice I have underlined these words "He would make all things channels to us and messengers of His love."

I was interrupted in writing this diary to answer a message from Turnbull. I looked at the clock on the way back after expressing a final word on belief in victory tomorrow and hands were in a perfectly straight line at 10.20. Each thing this morning has spoken of God's love and of His mercy and of his revelation.

I wakened shortly after 7. I had turned out the lights after first getting the news, listening to "the Old Songs" getting the announcement from Britain.- I love that British lion that rises in his strength and speaks at that time. Was up at 7.30 and out for walk with little Pat.- but before waking had a vision of receiving a banquet in Kitchener - old Berlin - it was mixed up with thoughts of Peter Sim's death & with feelings of the need to restrain passion.- The banquet in the town where I was born is I believe a symbol of victory tomorrow. As I write I have on the table before me lilies of the valley - froom Woodside - five steams in all, beautifully pure & white, which I picked out a cluster with thoughts of the loved ones beyond- (one maybe for Lyon there, or Jennie here) we are all one, but their presence is being made known in what I am writing. They are the channels and messengers of God's love.

[75] It was a wonderfully beautiful morning, the sun shining on the golden green grass, the little robins singing in the fullness of the morning's joy - knelt & prayed at the stone for God's forgiveness, His continued guidance, with thanks for his mercy & his love, remembering little Pat - the other little dogs, not asking once for victory but my last words 'Thy will be done'. We reached the far gate together Pat & I a symbol of end of long journey of campaign & place in public life up to present. I said Pat the gates are closed now, that is as far as we can go today, tomorrow they will be open - I opened them & looked through & said 'larger vistas will unfold'. I meant I believe they would open with wider opportunities. This I do believe.- On the way back, stood, looked into the clear sun & with my stick - like a shepherd's crook in hand prayed "Lead thou me on" & then returned to my own house, breakfast in the sun by the window.

Listened to news at 9 - Japan meeting with terrible destruction.- I believe that war will be over by the end of August or early September.-

After breakfast began reading of little books - the little book - and this reminds me - a voice reminds me, as I was about to touch the bible, that in the chapter you read today there are underlined the words the little book.- Here I believe is convincing evidence that I am being shewn, it is being revealed to me that what I have quoted from the little book what I have read in its pages - is all true and that the inference is true and that tomorrow, the nation will express its confidence in me, and that I shall be returned as well as member for Prince Albert. I shall see that my faith has been rewarded, all that I may the better come to prove the reality of the moral order which controls this world & all the universe - and make this better known to men.- God grant that in all this I am right - I took Revelations for the reading for this month - after the reading of John's Gospel. I have held to one chapter only for each day from the first to the 10th - all has led up to the little book - little Bell's 'Daily Strength for Daily Needs' and all it has meant of guidance through the years. God bless them all, Father, Mother, Bell and Max - grandparents on both sides - Sir Wilfrid & Lady Laurier, Mr. & Mrs. Larkin, Sir William Mulock - my old colleagues Norman Rogers (taken away 2 years ago today) Skelton, Dandurand, Lapointe, and many many more - not forgetting Roosevelt - a dear true friend. They and many others Grey & Gladstone & Asquith - all I believe have been helping in this campaign - a great and noble company.- There are many many more whose names are in my heart & memories in my mind, Mrs. Wriedt, Oliver Lodge, Professor Wm. James, Charles Eliot Norton, Goldwin Smith - may God bless them all.

I had just placed these pages away, was about to return the little book & the bible to the other desk & to insert in the bible at the end of today's reading the little marker re God's promises when to my amazed [sic] I read these words 'Sweet as honey. And I took the little book out of the angel's hand. Could anything be more convincing than this. All I have written is true.

[76] When I finished writing to this point, I was very tired, eyes quite tired so I went to bed, I soon fell asleep and slept very soundly from 11 till about 2, had luncheon then began to write out something to say, after the elections tomorrow night, based on the assumption the Govt. was returned, but I found I was too tired to go on. So I went out for a little walk through the grounds of Shady Hill, listened to the robbins [sic] looked at the flowers beginning to appear, the green of the fields & the garden beginning newly planted to disclose its leaves.

Phone calls came in which I answered. First Prince Albert, Mr. Matte, thinks a majority of 1500 in Prince Albert city assured, speaks very highly of Gerry McGeer's speech last night, crowded theatre & people listening on streets believes we will get 10 seats in Saskatchewan, possibly 14, & that McNaughton is safe. Phoned Pickersgill suggesting he think up something for tomorrow night. Mr. McConnell phoned to extend good wishes & to invite me to Dorval. He says his people The Star Montreal figure 112 for Gov't as a minimum, likely much higher. That Tories will have 80 at most others far down.

When I came in from walk to call Minnie Gibson & Madge to speak of Peter Sims' death it was a quarter past three - hands exactly together - I enjoyed the talk with Minnie, recalling Berlin days, thought of Isabel, Nora Gibson, Florence Moss & Bessie Fennell all great friends - thought over present position,- & significance of last words Mrs. Sims to Peter - when he turned on his bed to say good-night, "You look to me" - Peter "Isn't that as it should be". I then phoned Willy Sims to express comfort to him - it was exactly 10 to 4.

Then spoke to Genl. LaFleche told him of his apptmt. to Greece as Ambassador. He did not sound too cheerful,- says Mde. LaFleche has not been well again. I was glad to have the promise carried out.

I read a few more letters or mail then decided to go to bed for another rest at 5 to 5 exactly hands in a straight line. When I turned in it was 25 past 5, and again after getting up it was 25 to 7 hands together just before Lay brought over Arthur & Katheleen whom I had invited to dinner. I was glad to see both of them, looking so much brighter & more cheerful, & stronger. Harry Lay Jr. had phoned 'Doeie' & Dooie had got her people together to go in search of housing accommodation for Arthur & Katheleen. All this was a great relief & joy. We had a nice talk before & at dinner & then drove over to Moorside, glance at the hills from Moorside, & then to the Cottage & a glance at the lake & back to the Farm, a lovely little trip. Gathered a few lilacs for Katheleen.

Wrote a letter to Mrs. Sims & enclosed some lilies of the valley from Moorside (which came from Woodside, to be placed with a line in my own handwriting beside Peter, With deepest sympathy & in affectionate remembrance of my dear friend Peter, Billy - June 10 - 45. Got this off special delivery tonight.

More mail signed, phoned a Mrs. Lacy [?] Toronto who had lost 2 sons & written about, she did not seem to understand spiritual significance. Died in [word illegible] to me meant that nothing had come to their parents.- It is sad & tragic.

Phone from Dr. Hayter's P. A. - he 'not so doubtful' as he was, but really did not sound too hopeful. It was a [77] bit discouraging, spoke very highly of McGeer. Said he was 'tough' -

Arthur & Katheleen had written a nice little note which came out with the mail - I have done very little for them - but have been guided in a way which has helped them over the present new place of beginning. I have the feeling that from now on they will manage all right. They have been happy in their little Laurier Ave. house. After saying good-bye to them at the door,- I got the news.-

Just before got Dr. Hurtubise and told him in understood terms of his appointment. He seemed very pleased. He says all looks well in Nipissing, had had several meetings today.-

Abbot phoned about the Ugande [?], some Tory's Tory - making trouble, that Navy Department has caused much trouble politcally.

Phoned Lieut. Govr. Fiset, most appreciative of his apptmt., says he wife & daughters greatly pleased.-

Later got Beatrix Robb at Murray Bay had a nice talk with her, was glad to have a word before the end of the campaign - I had not remembered her as I should have at Christmas, etc.

Have tried to get Senator Stevenson. At 10 to 10, Arthur & Katheleen left.- When I went to the phone to have a last talk with Stevenson at Prince Albert I looked at my watch it had stopped at 8 past 10, which caused me to look at the clock, it was exactly 5 to 11, both hands together. I got Stevenson to say a word of thanks at 11. He believes we will win in P. A. 'Will be badly deceived if we don't' thinks McNaughton & Gardiner all right & hopes for a dozen seats in Saskatchewan. Says everything has been done that can be done. All have worked well together & done their best. I told him I believed we would win right across the country.

It is now ten past 11. Will phone Joan and then to bed. Took up with me to look at or read from 3 books - Views of Britain St. George & the Dragon - All dogs go to Heaven,- something about Rex and the Man born to be King,- Dorothy —— [Sayers].

Had a very remarkable experience (psychical) last night, after going up stairs to retire for the night. Before getting into bed I looked out of the little square window in my wash room. It was dark as Egysian [Stygian ?] night. I said out loud, It is all darkness now (or today) tomorrow it shall all be clear and bright. I had taken with me upstairs to read three books from the table in the sunroom (1) All Dogs go to Heaven, by Beth Brown (2) This England (described by Allan Junior [?] St. George (3) The Man Born to be King by Dorothy Sayers. Before getting into bed I knelt down by little Pat's basket, and said to the present little Pat here is where old Pat and I had our last great battle,- conquering over the dragon (the present little Pat came to my side as I was writing/looked up wagged his tail, and has now gone to lie by the sofa). I kissed the little fellow 'good-night' & got into bed. Then took the book 'All Dogs Go to Heaven' & opened it to read the chapter in which I saw the name Rex, downstairs. It was entitled "He giveth his beloved sleep". These are the opening words p. 223 = 7 "It was very quiet. It was moonlight. In a little/ it would be dawn" - ... 'There seemed to be a deep and secret communion between the earth and the sky, between the light and the darkness,- it would go strangely enough not the light but the darkness - one would give way, and the other come to be". It was the same with life and death. The curtain was very thin. At times it was so thin there was no curtain between ... & page 224 re - the two worlds 'of inner retrospect - world of travel - via the magic carpet of swift thought. ... There was no death as such - But before I write more I must not forget to record that before I began to read at all there fell out of the book to my side a clipping, beginning Sir Oliver Lodge & story of his dog - 'I shall not be surprised if I see him again some day' etc. & the story Archdeacon Wilberforce & Sir John Hare the actor ... Hare 'Do you mean to tell me that I shall meet my dog again? Undoubtedly if you are good enough' - This seemed to tell me, I was going to receive something from my spiritualist friends.- I had written of Sir Oliver Mrs. Wreidt & others in the morning, but had had no thought at the time or after of looking at this book before going to bed nor did I know it contained this clipping.- Then to go [on ?] page 225 "and so the future would be, his heart told him quietly - Broad bright and beautiful - (I thought of the outcome of the elections,- a very small thing, insignificant, in relation to the Hereafter, but all a part of it. Then came the reference to Rex. He (Hobo the dog in the story - old Pat - "Hobo's = Pat's "special charge this morning was Rex & myself. He could scarcely wait for Rex to awaken. He could hear him turn on his pillow. I was actually [79] turning on my pillow as I came to (but just before) these words. He could hear him sigh (I was actually sighing as I read the words,- a yawn of weariness). Finally Rex was wide awake - I was at the amazing parallel of my action to these words. ... he was over now - one of the inner circle at last. Harper came much to my thoughts, it was as if he too were watching & waiting for me & now speaking ... then follow on p. 226 about earthbound for three days - But you were very very tired, you needed to sleep. ... You shouldn't be talking (or writing K.) now. You shouldn't be doing anything but resting up,- lying back & getting your strength together.- You see there is lots to do here - and you'll be pretty active — (all so closely related to the change from one parliament to another) — Then But the verdict? & p. 227, But I did take a vote. What's the count? (Imagine reading this at that particular hour, the result as yet unknown.- Then further down Rex is still waiting for the verdict ... to page 234. The verdict ... For or against? In your favour of course, In my favour came the unbelieving echo. Yes in your favour, Rex ... Then note these words "Is there any difference between guarding your bit of backyard from the marauders of your neighbourhood (Mr. McCullagh's & other of the gang back of Bracken) - or the country to which you pledge allegiance from the enemies that threaten its shores. That's why we are at war Rex for that very reason ... there here at last.

Is not all this truly amazing. Every word I have written is true, and proof of its all being revelation will be given before the day is over for all (that we are working for) will by then be here at last.- I then looked at the very beautiful pictures of This England, standing for St. George slaying the Dragon. That is what Britain has done. That is the task & place in History of "This England". Then Dorothy Sayers' book, The Man Born to be King. I wanted my last thoughts to be of my Master. I was too tired to read much, but enough to know that His life has meant everything to this world, that is [he ?] is the way the truth & the life. My prayer as I went to sleep was to become more & more worthy of His love.

Now here is chapter two of this experience. I had a very difficult night, it was raining out of doors, my shoulder right paining, my left foot had given signs of a sudden crack or two during the day, two blankets too many, one not enough, room close. I could not sleep, but tossed & turned, at one looked out of window, Egyleia [Stygian ?] night, but servants' lights still alight in kitchen - complete darkness,- but I said light will break out of it all.- After a night of tossing, turning, etc. I had two visions very distinct before waking. The first I was surrounded [80] by young women, some swimming out of doors, and at another time on train. There seemed to be an effort to test my resistance to all temptation I found my passions terribly aroused, but I fought it out and won (St. George & the Dragon). The next - I was addressing a very large gathering in a vast auditorium. It was an election address the audience were in the palm of my hand as it were. Suddenly, I seemed to forget a name & something I meant to say.- I came forward & told the audience I had had a long tour, been speaking very much & was very very tired, to excuse me for forgetting first what I had meant to say.- The word Berlin - came forward, it was on the war another phase, the audience applauded me part of it, other part was in silence - Then I tried to go on but found it increasingly difficult to collect my thoughts. I wakened up feeling I had fought to the last gasp. It was like my old little Pat & his fight to the very end - keeping alive till I came & took him in my arms. I felt it was a warning not to attempt too much from now on. I was not in the least displeased or concerned. It was rather a moment of triumph - like Roosevelt's must have been that I had fought on to the very end,- it did not seem to presage defeat in any way, but triumph in having kept the faith to the very end.

So here are the messages that have come to me from the 'other world' - this world of the invisible - those who never die but are fighting on with us all the way. I was called at 8 got the news up to 10 past 8 - straight line - then for a walk with little Pat. We had our prayer & he his blessing and a kiss on the forehead at the little stone,- the words 'I need thee every hour' & Lead Thou me On - Thy will be done. Then on to the gate which is the symbol of today between 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. closed for the time of polling. I told little Pat it would be open wide tonight.- We walked back & then looking up to the sky at the little stone - just the words Lead Thou me on - & then to the house, had breakfast by the window - read the little books & Chap. xiii Revelations, Daily Strength, with its expression of my desire just to rest in Him & fulfil His will. Revelations, His love & grace, & in Devotional Diary Divine Compassion what I see for myself & my attitude increasingly towards all.

PhonedTurnbull - re coming in to vote, Joan ditto, & then later Dr. King B.C. to tell of my apptmt. of McGeer. He took it well. Says things look well in B.C. - Thinks I should go to San Francisco - perhaps next week - & then brought this diary up to date - just about 11.25. Lay here with mail papers & telegrams - 11.29 (straight line on clock in sun room).

PSYCHICAL RESEARCH

Thursday,
October 25, 1945

At 6 o'clock, I called on Mrs. Hester Dowding. It was the result of the talk I had with Eleanor Thwaites yesterday. I found Mrs. Dowding an extremely interesting person. I had met her before through a letter from Lady Aberdeen. She recalled the visit quite well. Said she had not really thought of Lady Aberdeen for some years. Mrs. Dowden's father was a Professor at Cambridge University. She took his name for herself after her husband died. She has a planchette board with a little pad which moves to spell out letters. I noticed that she used that for getting names and seemed anxious, if experiencing difficulty herself, to have me place my hand on the little pad or else on the back of hers and to follow the lettering. She herself did not trouble to look at the lettering to see what it would spell out. However, after she had got a name or two, she would then sit back and take a pencil and foolscap paper and write what came into her mind as from an unseen source.

I found the sitting quite interesting. She began by saying that her control was a person called Johannus. He said there were 3 persons who wished to speak to me - 2 men and a lady. She asked me who I preferred to speak to first. I said the lady. She said they were not relatives. When the name was asked, the board spelt out "Aberdeen". It was Lady Aberdeen. What she said Mrs. Dowden wrote down on the paper. Lady Aberdeen spoke first of Scotland where we last met. Then suddenly the word "Sarum Chase" came through and Lady Aberdeen said the house had been bombed but that it might be dangerous. Also she spelt out the name "Salisbury" and said that my friendship was something significant. To hold to it very strongly. But she seemed to be concerned about the house itself being dangerous from having been shaken. She spoke about Lady Aberdeen and her son.

Then I asked her where we had gone together and the little board spelt out "Fraserburgh" and when I asked for the name of the place, it spelt out "Ladysford". This, of course, might have been mind reading expressed on the board, but Mrs. Dowden herself knew nothing of these places nor did she follow the spelling on the board.

The next person that came was Max, my brother. The board spelt out "brother" and also his name as Max. He talked about my health. Said a couple of weeks ago I was in a pretty bad shape but I was much better now. When I asked who was with him, he spelt out Mother, Father, Bell and Lyon. Sent love from them all. Thought I should keep up my interest in politics not to give up. Was much needed at present.

Before Max came, Johannus himself came in and asked if there was any question I wished to speak to him about. Any matters of importance. I asked him to tell me about the Russian situation. He then quite on his own, began to say to be very careful about the whole situation. It was very ticklish. Urged strongly to do nothing until quite sure. Thought that the person who had given evidence, who had told the story, was filled with fear and inclined to exaggerate. The person who had been accused of doing certain things probably had not done as much as was alleged. Felt that Russia might become very hostile but was not hostile at the moment though prepared to become such.

When Max came, he confirmed what Johannus had said about the Russian situation. He said he knew all about what I had been concerned about, or had been considering, but advised great caution. Also advised going and seeing the Ambassador myself. He said I could do more handling those things in a tactful way than anyone else. It was quite extraordinary this thing coming through in this way. Johannus said he had felt I would ask him about the situation and had been expecting to say something of it. Max said he knew all about it.

Mrs. Dowden, of course, knew nothing.

The next person to come, though I was not thinking of him atall, was Mr. Larkin. He spelt out his name clearly. Mrs. Dowden asked if it was Larkin of Ireland. I said: no - of Canada. She did not know of him.

We talked a good deal of pictures. He spoke about how well I was getting on in politics. Asked me what I thought of last night. I had not recalled for the moment what he was referring to. Subsequently he said he thought a good lot of men were assembled but that I was the best of the lot. Joked a bit about the painting. Asked him what he thought about the painting. He said he did not know whether the painting was good or bad. Afterwards he said it was very good.

I asked him if he could tell me of the paintings he had given me. Mrs. Dowden asked me to take the little planchette in my hand and it spelt out by whom the paintings were. First - Lazzlo, and then Canuletto. Larkin's own picture by Lazzlo. The scene of Venice is a Canuletto.

I asked him about the painting of Venice which he had - supposed to be by Turner. Asked if I could get it for L.H. He said: no, it belonged to Aileen. This was just a test. Aileen's name came through quite clearly. I said could he not influence the situation. He said he would and I would perhaps find that it might come to me yet. I felt while Mrs. Dowden was talking, that a good deal of it was perhaps mind reading, but altogether with what she has written during the hour and a half that I spent in conversation and in getting this material, was most interesting and well worthwhile. There was quite a lot that was certainly very evidential about it.

RE SITTING WITH MRS. SHARPLIN:

The sitting was held in a small room, darkened. The medium sat in a chair in front of a dark screen. A little light coming from the window behind. I sat at a small table with a shaded light sufficiently strong for me to be able to see what I was writing. I took down the conversation in long hand.

The sitting was in the morning. I understand this medium's control is known as "Silver Fox". Mrs. Sharplin asked me if I had had sittings before. I told her that I had had with Mrs. Etta Wriedt. She said: my guide worked in Mrs. Wriedt's circle. I hope we shall be attuned to get something - I hope we shall get something. She had earlier said: I have a guide who controls me. As she was speaking, she gradually went off into a profound sleep. Finally I heard a voice say: Chief, how do you do? How are you this day? I am pleased to meet with you. You will answer us. Many people are gathered around you here. You are in this country on a mission of importance. There are those who would help you in bringing about harmony. Those of your own loved ones and those who were with you in the great work you have been called to do with. Yes, we have here a link with a very strong personality. He was the old Wilson - do you know that man Wilson - an old pioneer(?)? He tells me he belongs to a group with which you are linked. It was clearly Woodrow Wilson of whom he was speaking.

Re: Interview with Mrs. Osborne Leonard:

"You know, Nina. You call her son, David. He has passed over. She has not been able to have a sitting. Tell her not to be worried about the manner of his death. He was not conscious so he did not suffer. She is right in this. There was something that puzzled him about it but not to worry. He felt he had so much to live for. Tell her he became unconscious but did not suffer. Give her his dearest love. He is with his father and Mary and others and with her mother. He thanks you for taking the message. She has been worrying about the condition of my physical death. He wants to have a talk with her but not right yet."

(To me, speaking direct): Your Mother: Let me come in because she remembers it was through Nina that you and Freda and all of us first met. She says allthings work together for good. She says we are working against further conflagration springing up on earth. We are trying to bring peaceful thoughts.

Thursday, November 1, 1945

I left after 1 to go to lunch with Sir John and Lady Anderson. I had had difficulties in freeing myself from engagements when I was last here and felt there might be some embarrassment on this occasion. I was never more agreeable surprized in my life.

I was sharp on time at a quarter past 1 but a minute or two ahead of Sir John. Lady Anderson received me in their drawing room at the top of the stairs and after we had shaken hands, she said: I had a message to give you. "Freda said to tell Mr. Will that she wished very much to see him; to give him her love. That there was love from some others to give to him and hoped he would be sure and come down and see them." Lady Anderson said: Does that mean anything to you? I said: Freda, does that mean Mrs. Leonard? She said: yes. I said: Do you know Mrs. Leonard? She said: I know her quite well. She then said: I am so relieved to be able to give you this message. It came to me a couple of weeks ago. The message was that I, Lady Anderson, would be seeing you and hoped that this message would get to you through me. She then said: I was very puzzled as to who Mr. Will was. They told me to try and reason it out. She said: At the time, my first husband was talking to me in a direct voice, and he said to me: King. Now think it out and you will get it all r iht. She then said: I thought that he meant our King. I could not get anything together. It was when my husband told me that you were coming that I finally decided it must mean you. Freda is Mrs. Leonard's control and always speaks to me of "Mr. Will".

At once this was an astonishing revelati on to her and to me. She said: Don't say anything in my husband's presence, because he does not believe in these things. She added: anyone who knows them cannot but be amazed by them.

She then said something further about the remarkable reality of the presence of those that have gone and said: of course, you know Sir John is my second husband and my first husband continues to communicate with me at different times.

The next thing that happened was that when Sir John arrived and extended a cordial welcome, she put out a guest book and a photograph. Asked me if I would sign the photograph. When I looked at it, it was a picture of Sir John and myself taken at Kingsmere. I had quite forgotten that he had ever visited me there. I now recall that he came out with Athlone and that we talked together about atomic research matter, he being the one in charge of that particular subject. He told me that he had said at the time that I must interest myself in that matter.

When I went to write in the guest book, I was asked what day my birthday was. I said the 17th of December. When the page opened, it was at a quotation from Matthew Arnold's "The Buried Life". I said that was an extraordinary thing. I looked at the next few lines and then began to recite the poem "The Buried Life". Went through most of it, from beginning to end, much to the amazement of Sir John and Lady Anderson.

Suddenly I recalled, which was extraordinary, that Mrs. Thwaites, who is Matthew Arnold's grand-daughter, had been at the hotel when I left, and that unfortunately I had to let her know I could not see her. Equally extraordinary was a letter which I received from Mrs. Lionel Guest at whose house I had met Eleanor Whitridge, years ago. This letter from Mrs. Guest came within the last couple of days. I found Lady Anderson knew Mrs. Guest quite well and we had a talk about the Whitridges and others.

I then told them about Mrs. Humphrey Ward and her book entitled "Canadian Born" and about Lady Merton's daughter. The extraordinary thing about that is that I had not thought of it again until tonight, and secondly, that the book is about a man Henderson who is an engineer on the C.P.R. but interested in the settlement of strikes and the like. I am supposed to be the original of Henderson. Elenor Thwaites (Whitridge, before she was married) was the original of Lady Merton. It is a Canadian story - of one in Canadian life subsequently marring a Lady from the Old Country and the latter coming to Canada, etc.

The first thing that was extraordinary was Sir John telling me he has now been appointed Director of the C.P.R. to take the place of Sir Reginald McKenna. This will bring him to Canada to attend Directors' meetings a couple of times a year. We then got further on to the question of Matthew Arnold and I mentioned that I had thought of appointing Trevelyon as Governor General. His wife is Janet Ward - a niece of Matthew Arnold.

It then occurred to me and I also mentioned it that Mrs. Lionel Guest had sent me a note within the last day or two that she was back and I was hoping to see her tonight. (It was at her house that I had some interesting talks with Eleanor Whitridge).

Lady Anderson knew her quite well and was looking forward to seeing her. We talked, too, of Edward Grey who was godfather to one of her daughters by her first husband. She was in the Foreign Office and for two years, had lived at Lord Glenconnor's residence and had had breakfast with Sir Edward Grey. Had the greatest reverence for him. She noticed many of his sayings, one of which was something about "lack of memory being the absence of thinking". I am not sure that I am right in this.

At any rate, I told her and Sir John of my meeting with Edward Grey and of the afternoon tea I had with him at Glenconnor's. Also of the day at Fallodon and of his brother, who had sleeping sickness. This led to Sir John telling me that Mrs. Attlee had had something similar but has quite recovered from it. I quoted the lines from Browning which Edward Grey had quoted to me. There was a beautiful book on birds for children which Grey had written and which he had dedicated to his godchild. (Note what happened later at Partridge's).

Then I spoke of Arthur Murray who was with Grey at Washington and of his wife Faith. Then of Barrie and of our being together at Hever Castle and of the little story he had written about Ann Boleyn which I have. I told him, too, about my visit to Barrie's home at the time of his death and of possessing the little light extinguisher. Also of our meeting with him at the time Maud Adams was playing in one of his plays.

At the table, before the luncheon was over, we spoke of the visit to Washington next week and of the meeting to take place on the 11th. Sir John is to send me a couple of books to read on the way over explaining part of the process.

Until he recalled to me the talk we had had at Kingsmere together, I had quite forgotten he had ever been there or that we had met until the time of the last conference.

When we went upstairs in the drawing room after luncheon, we continued the talk about mutual friends. Lady Anderson got me to give her the address of Mrs. Sharplin whose name I mentioned to her. She spoke to me particularly about Lord Lothian who was Ambassador at Washington and who, she said, had had a real affection for me. I am sorry I did not see more of him. She told me that she had had many conversations with him since he had passed away.

When I came downstairs, a letter was waiting for me - handed in at the door. I noticed it was Catherine MacLean's writing. Mentioned to Sir John and Lady Anderson that I was anxious to get Miss MacLean to write my grandfather's life and spoke about her book on the Wordsworths and also "The Life of Hazlett" which they knew quite well. It was astonishing how one point after another seemed to come into the conversation and also to make a presence felt.

Sir John came out unto the sidewalk with me. It was 2.45 p.m. when I left. My parting word had reference to our meeting at Washington soon.

He knew, of course, all about the R.E. affair..

I then drove on to St. Paul's Cathedral - to Amen Court, to meet

Canon Alexander who is the treasurer of the Cathedral. To my amazement, there he was standing with his Plymouth pilgrim style of hat on his head, at the corner of the street with nothing but ruins round about. He had been waiting there in case I should miss the road. Made light of my having kept him waiting.

We then walked together to his house, originally planned and built by Wren who made the plans for St. Paul's Cathedral. He pointed out to me at the door the light extinguisher where the torch bearers who were seeing people home at night, before there was gaz etc. used to put out their lights. This was at his door. He took me into a downstairs study where there are a couple of paintings of himself and one other by Salisbury presented to him. He is holding a crucifix which was broken from the altar at the time the Cathedral was bombed. It was bombed twice.

I liked Salisbury's painting very much but felt it had a sterner look than the Canon himself. He took me upstairs to show me one or two bronzes of himself. Then into his bedroom which is also a study - a small room with two windows. Above his bed was a bit of sculpture which is a copy of what appears in St. Paul's. He told me that the old Archbishop of Canterbury had lived there and then pointed to the different Archbishops and others who had held his position, running back to the time of John and the Magna Carta. He said the former Archbishop of Canterbury had told him that that was the best study he had ever had. I could not but be impressed with the deep religious thoughts which gave its note to that particular dwelling.

The Canon gave me a copy of an address he has just delivered on the survival of St. Paul's - the story of a great Church in perilous times. It is being published for the first time today. He had lying on his table a letter received from the King and Queen thanking him for having sent them an advance copy. It is the story of what he himself was witness to. He has only one servant woman who looks after the house. I would not be surprised if he makes his own bed, cleans his own boots, etc. He is 80 years of age. Climbs up and down stairs as freely as could be, though he said his legs are a little tired.

I asked him about his mind. He said it was just as active as it was years ago. When I spoke of being 70, he said that was a mere nothing and said that he had been able to work actively from 70 to 80. His mind today is as clear as it could be.

Then came perhaps as great an experience as I have ever had with another human being. He took me over to the Cathedral and we drove around in the car, first into the Kitchener Chapel to show me the roll of honour of Canadian engineers which he had received there and which has its place in the Chapel. There is a fine effigy of Kitchener there.

From there we went through the Cathedral. He showed me where a bomb came in at one side and where the other bomb came in right over the altar and smashed everything but leaving intact the image of Christ on the Cross.

We then went downstairs intothe crypt and looked at thespot where the bomb landed and the blast made all the debris, and the destruction of parts of the Cathedral. He was able to point from where we were standing to where he was at the time the bomb fell. He said for a couple of years he stayed in the Cathedral.

Later we went down to where he actually slept. A little sort of lane. A little hall-way on one side of which there seemed to be cupboards for the vestments. There he was when the bomb struck and it felt as he [illegible], he said, as though the Cathedral was falling about him. I confess I never felt moreadmiration for anyone. The old gentleman made quite light of it all. Indeed so much so that I had to laugh at his courage. Notwithstanding that bomb in the Cathedral, when it was bombed again, he was all alone sleeping there night after night. I said to him what I loved about it all was that it showed his faith and his love for the Cathedral. It personified the spirit of Christianity in a waywhich would be helpful to the whole nation He said he hoped it had done some good in that way. There was nothing egoistical inhis words. He then took me and showed me the chancel in the basement where they had service after the Cathedral was bombed. They still have service there now as it is being repaired.

We then walked together underground and came out on one side of the Cathedral. I drove him to the Mansion House where he was going to Lord Mayor's reception. Said good-bye to him at the entrance to the Mansion House I could never forget this afternoon with that dear old gentleman. A true saint of God.

From the Cathedral, I drove to Partridge's. When I went into the store, Mr. Lipscombe was with a lady and gentleman. He introduced me to the gentleman who was Lord Colville or Sir (something) Colville. When the lady heard myname, she said: Oh, you are mygodfather and smiled very sweetly and put her face over toward mine and I kissed her on the spot. It was Greenwood's daughter, Angela, who is one of my god-children. She looked very sweet and there was something very appealing and sincere about her whole manner. She spoke of her father and being a little anxious about him.

We had a short talk together and I then went into Lipscombe's room. He said to me: there are always coincidences when you come. You and I have strange experiences together. He said Mrs. Churchill had just been in and was going to wait until I came in but had left her car where she was afraid the police would get after it if she allowed it to stay longer. I have told her you were coming in in a few minutes.

I had carried over with me the little L'Infini placues. I said I wanted to get some way of mounting them. A bit ov velvet. He brought out a bit of velvet from the 15th century. Red velved. I said to him: Do you know Frank Salisbury? He said: I know him very well. I am going up at 5 o'clock this afternoon to see the painting that he has made of you. I said to him: well, don't go this afternoon; wait and go tomorrow. I will be up there, at 4.30 myself, and we can see the picture togethe r. He took a little paper out of his pocket, showed me he had written on it: Mackenzie King to call at Partridge's between 4 and 5 to see the picture. Now, he said, isn't that strange! Here is something equally strange. As I was dictating this diary tonight, H. pulled a letter out of a box and put in on the table and said: the letter is from Mrs. Salisbury, I think. I intended to wait until the dictation was over before opening it but as I walked about, I picked it up, looked at it and wondered how it was that the initials were "H.J." instead of "W.L." It had the stamp "Hampstead", etc. It was while I was dictating this about Lipscombe going to Salisbury's that H. handed this letter to me. It was from Lipscombe himself thanking me for the photograph I had left for him yesterday. I am reading it now.

(Note also re the book of birds having been given by Edward Grey to her godchild and my having at Partridge's met my godchild, whom I had not seen for 20 years. She is now the moter of grown up children).

Also curious that Frank Salisbury should have been in myroom when I brought Greenwood, her father, into myroom at the Dorchester some days ago.

He had got together a number of differents to look over for me to make a selection for J. Some of them were Italian runners, others embroidered tapestry. There was one fine old square bit of tapestry mat which is a bit torn, with holes in. He told me it was fromthe reign of Queen Elizabeth and had gone through the blitz. He thought of all the pieces it was the most interesting. I decided to take it. Also negotiated for the little Sheridan box. He insisted on my taking the Sheridan box which he had brought from his own house and for which one of his men in the shop had secured an ancient key. It is a beautiful little thing. A very fine antique. There was not much time to remain longer nor would I wish to have stayed to be tempted by other things.

So we drove then to Buckingham Palace where I had arranged to have a talk with Sir Alan Lascelles. I signed the book before leaving and sent through Lascelles a farewell messageto theKing and Queen. I had a very nice talk with Lascelles in his office.

In speaking of the atomic bomb, he told me he was one of the few who had knowledge of the secret. Before the bomb was actually used. He said that since, he has been more concerned with what may follow than anything that has taken place in his lifetime. He was not as much concerned with Hitler and his behaviour prior to the war as he is with the conditions in the world today; whether it is going to be possible in any way to get the business of the bomb controlled and save civilization, or whether we are on the verge of the end of all things. He spoke quite earnestly and deeply about it. I spoke to him about Salisbury's painting in Australia, having it sent on to Canada. He was under the impression that it had been in Canada first. I told him: no, it had been exhibited in N.Y. He said he would write the Lord Chamberlain at once. I told him I had already 'phoned to Lady Clarendon and that Clarendon had promised to see that the matter of shipment would be arranged.

Here was another of the Arts figuring in today's marvelous ventures. Lascelles spoke very highly of Bevin; nicely of Attlee. Thought he had already grown considerably in stature. Had had a difficult position. Thought Churchill was really a Liberal and should not have tried to bring on the election; not gone back into the House as leader of the Opposition but remained out as an elder statesman.

I came back to the Dorchester for a few minutes and 'phoned Amery to see if he and Mrs. A. were at home. Curiously enough, on going into Partridge's, I had written Amery's name on my memo slip so as to be sure to see him before I left and see him this afternoon if possible; also to be sure and 'phone Lord Baldwin. It was within two minutes after that I met Amery's niece, my godchild.

The Amerys are suffering deeply because of their son who has got himself into a terrible position. Is being tried for treason and may be shot. Amery seemed pleased I had 'phoned. When I entered the house, I felt a change of atmosphere. I could not but feel the gloom there was there. Amery was in his library upstairs. A beautiful room. A nice fireplace with his young son, Julian, who was a candidate in the last election and like his father, was defeated. Amery and I talked on the sofa of many things. I had to confess I had not read the report he had sent me of a recent address made by him on the preferences.

We talked of India and of the difficult problems there. He spoke of Malcolm Macdonald as being a good man for India from here. He is anxious to have a High Commissioner appointed from London. I asked once or twice for Mrs. Amery. She came in finally. Had been evidently resting upstairs.

She looked completely changed, very thin, very sad. She spoke about how splendid Canada had been in the war. Spoke about Julian and then of the other boy. She felt so badly. That he was so convinced in his feelings against Communism. It was conviction with him which had made him support the Nazi cause to destroy Communism. I said I thought others felt that way; that was the way people viewed it. I told her and Amery not to try and solve the problem in their minds but to believe that somehow good will be the final goal of ill, and quoted the lines: "Some far off definite event toward which the whole creation moves". There was little that one could say. Amery introduced me later to Lady Rodney's son. I spoke of having crossed the ocean with his mother some years ago, before she was married.

Amery presented me with a couple of books on "Days of Fresh Air" which he has inscribed "To my old Friend" which has accounts of his mountain climbing; also little book on the framework of the future, published this year and an address which he has inscribed as "A possible distraction from politics". It made me quite sad at heart to see the policeman keeping guard of the house next door. Really I presume to protect Amery from some attacks being made on his house.

When I left Eaton Square, we motored to Melbourne Gardens to say goodbye to Miss Catherine Maclean. She was waiting at the door of her toom to greet me. Had the table set for tea. I at first declined tea but seeing it was prepared, thanked her and much enjoyed the delicious bread and butter and biscuits, jam and tea which she made. She showed me while she was preparing the tea, a set of books she valued very deeply. It was a set of Wordsworth poems which had belonged to John Morley. They had been willed by Morley from his friend Lord Courtney. Had his book-plate in it. We talked of my doings in London and I spoke of my regret at not being able to see more of her. When I told her of my portrait being painted, by Salisbury, she expressed real delight.

She then began to say it would be a difficult portrait to paint. That I had 3 different expressions that were quite marked. One, was one of great kindness; another, of humour; and the 3rd, was what she described crag-like, meaning a Scotch sternness of strength. She said she had seen that quite marked at times. I said that must be like my grand-father. She said that he had that strong look. Spoke of the great sadness in his eyes. Referred quite beautifully to his life and work. She had Ludwig's life and different booklets with cuttings in relation to myself enclosed.

When we spoke of the atomic bomb, she spoke to me quite seriously and in a sort of mystic way of its significance. She then said: If you feel when you are dealing with it, anxious about it, read Wordsworth's prelude - the 5th book. She said it is an extraordinary statement. It is remarkable; she said read not only the first part but the dream which follows. She read aloud the lines and they were amazing. They spoke of the possibility of some destruction coming from afar; not only destroying the earth but drying out the waters and the sea until the sea itself was singed. There was always a living presence in the world. She said that Wordsworth seemed to feel that the world containedthis living presence. I confess when I read the lines, they seemed to me more significant as a prophecy than anything I have read. I thought of Tennyson's Armies Fighting in the Blue; of Gray's poems about the Winged Birds. It was something more significant than anything else. She said she did not know whether the Wordsworths felt that God might end the world so far as its material side was concerned. The living presence would remain. Curiously enough, last night, Violet Markahm had expressed the same thought to me. She had asked if I had the book of Ezekiel. Oddly enough, I had brought Jeremiah and Ezekiel with me. She read the 7th Chapter and said: is not this prophecy - that God may cause everything to pass because of man's falling away from the Right and the ruins that man has made of God's world. This prophecy, too, is worth reading. I had marked it several times in my own reading as related to Germany, etc. but it acquires a new significance in the light of the atomic bomb. But what was most remarkable with Miss Maclean is that my knowledge of her began with her book on Wordsworth - a book lent to me by Joan. It seemed to me, as I was speaking of prose tonight, before I came away, that it was like a completion of a circle beginning with the Wordsworths, coming around and back to the Wordsworths. She showed me where Tig, the cat, had jumped from one window to the other some 6 stores above where any slip would have meant complete death and destruction. She had told me the night she dined with me of the dream of seeing the cat do that thing and a couple of nights after, the cat did that very thing. An extraordinary business.

She came with me downstairs to the door and I wished her that God might increase her strength, vision and power and that all might be well with her. A very remarkable person. One thing she said in conversation in reply to how she understood men as she does in her writings, she said she does not know but some times thinks that she is a re-incarnation; that in a previous existence, she was a man, and has carried that knowledge of a prior existence into this present life, she being as it were re-incarnated. She showed me a picture of her sister with a couple of dogs which interested me very much.

I came back to the Dorchester and immediately began completing dictation of this diary up to this hour. I began with the going to lunch and then dictated a little on coming back from Partridge's. Had finished this feeling that today has been a day of marvelous psychical experiences, all convincing me that it was meant to have the poets and authors and actors bring their message. One needs only to run through the names mentioned here today - Matthew Arnold, the Wordsworths, Grey, Barrie, Faith Murray and a host of others. These are all ministering spirits.

SECRET

October 26, 1945

Sitting with Mrs. Sharplin

Mrs. Sharplin said: I have a guide who controls me. She said: Have you had any sittings? I replied: yes, with Mrs. Wreidt. Mrs. Sharplin said: My guide worked with Mrs. Wreidt's circle. I hope we shall be allowed to get something. I hope we shall get something. A voice then came: Chief, how do you do? How are you this day? I am pleased to meet with you. You will honour us.

Many people are gathered around you here. You are in this country on a mission of importance. There are those who would help you in bringing about harmony. Those of your own loved ones and those linked with you in the great work you have been called upon to do in this time. Yes, we have here a link - a man who is a very strong personality. He was old Wilson. Do you know that man, Wilson? An old pioneer. He tells me he belongs to a group with whom you are linked. He walks behind you and says to you: Much is expected of you. You are to live longer. You have a link with Canada. We see Canada there. He is saying that all states are one in the light of the spirit and they do want you to make for harmony - harmony among the nations. You can have contact. Then Mrs. Sharplin asks: Have you something of yours I could hold? I gave her a handkerchief. The voice says: yeah, think, think.

Did you ever know a man named Haywood? He is a labour man. He is greeting you and he says we are making headway at last. There are gathered here many who have gone before you. There is a very old friend: Henry George. You remember him? A grand old man of labour here in London. Also Lansbury. Lansbury says he has met you on previous occasions and says we are carrying on the fight in the spirit world. Says there must be a great levelling on the earth below. We look to you all to keep the old flag flying. He is talking with me about a link with Russia. As a link, that is why he is here. We are all behind you. There is another fellow - Tom Green (or Rowan,) behind you. He was very well known to the Russians and accustomed to go there. He wants to tell you to be prepared for suspicion on the surface but you will find he will be a very good contact. He will make headway that will break down this suspicion. There are forces behind you. You are not only representing your country as a messenger but you are a messenger of the gods, and because of that and the new age we have launched upon, the age of Aquarius, you will be finding a blending(?) of forces and there is a breaking down of the darker side of Communism.

Lansbury says: because Russia won't come into her own by being governed by a quorum(?). It is good your country should trust her a little more.

You are also seeking to help the continental conditions too and they are also strong to do that, and ask that every effort should be made to bring food and help to them during the winter months for there is already much division in getting ahold and his appeal to the like of you to try and help, but not to be sentimental of it, because there is a national Karman which is taking place through purification. All of this which is a refining fire must not get too much a grip of your emotions but lead about to create harmony wherever you can.

I am now seeing the great President. I would say: Roosevelt, and he is greeting you with a hearty hand-shake. He says: as we have conversed before, I can converse from beyond the veil and I send you my warmest greetings and affectionate regards. I am no longer the acting President but the unseen President in the world of spirit and guiding to the best of one's ability all of you. He wants you to feel the reality of his presence with you because you have much faith in him. You love him and he loves you. He says: I have waited for this opportunity to reach you and to tell you your thoughts and prayers and love have reached me and frequently we are in touch. He says he knew his days were numbered the last time you were in his presence but he knew he would not die but granted a little disappointed that one could not see the end of hostilities while in action. He was called to join the group for all belong to the world of spirits and Wilson, the old President, has inspired Roosevelt when he was here and he clasps his hand on your shoulder and says: carry on, carry on the good work - it is worth while.

I said: what to do about Russia? He says: hold out your hand to them. He says he will be behind you. I asked about the espionage. He said: have no fear. The greater One has placed a cloak of protection around you as he did around me and friend Churchill. He sends a greeting to him. He was with you when you met him before. You are to meet him again. Give him Franklin's greetings. He would thank you and knows perfectly there is spiritual communion. He says Churchill took his blow very well and he has an understanding that one can only be used so far. You are to meet him in the future, Joseph Stalin, but the intermediary or his representative first and we are behind you. There is the warmest kind of friendship from Roosevelt to you that I have ever seen from the world of spirit to the earth.

I said: How am I to proceed with the facts I have about espionage which are not good. I will ask him. He says to me the facts that are not good will never affect you. They are there but they will never touch you and they want you to have courage and believe that. I said: should I expose them? The answer is: no, lie low for a time. He does not see the need to expose them but good that you have been acquainted with them. But the time is not yet ripe for exposure.

I then said would I speak to the Ambassador then. Yes, to the Ambassador, full exposure, please. The President says this is a very important visit you are paying and is the laying of a foundation-stone for future brotherhood. He says we are not unduly disturbed by the prevailing conditions. We expected the after-math of the great conflagration and believe there is an adjustment of the mind of the politician. We should get on better. After your mind has gone to him for guidance. He wants you to do so. He turned to him: let us be comrades, walking toward the light. This is a very spiritual man. He said: let us walk toward the light. More depends upon the adjustments and bringing together of nations than just vain things like commerce and trade. We must help them toward a spiritual light.

Did you lose a papoose in early day? We see a pappose walking about. Did you lose a sister? We are seeing a small girl walking about here and she is devoted to you. She brings flowers to you. Her name is Violet. Did she belong to a friend of yours? She seems to link up with you and sends her love. She is named Nancy. "I have been waiting my opportunity" and the good man, Roosevelt, says: it is your turn now. He is stopping here to let the child through. He met a friend of hers and that is why we have brought her. A relation of Nancy's.

Nancy is preparing the way. I said did Roosevelt meet a friend of hers here? Is Nancy's father still on earth? Did he meet him at the cottage or elsewhere? About Nancy's mother too. She has met Roosevelt. He is thinking of overseas from here. Small little Nancy is so delighted. Can you give her love to her mother and to her father, too? She has with her a favourite dog.

(The reference here to Roosevelt's meeting Nancy's mother and father is to the meeting J. and G. and with the President at the little cottage at Kingsmere).

He went to the spirit world many years. A large size dog. She gives to him an "L" for his name. "L" is a sound in the name of the dog. Is there a dog named Pat and another named Derry? They are very faithful and come jumping around with her. She is fond of animals and dogs.

I said: can you tellme anything about Pat? The answer is: yes. He was rather old when he got to the spirit world. He was a faithful companion. Everybody missed him very much.

We are hearing also someone calling to you, Elizabeth. I have never seen a child who so tried to reach you. She gives you her fondest love and a big kiss and wants you to know that she comes often to cheer you. When your work makes you tired and weary. She has spoken to you before and we are getting Etta (Smith) here. She says: whoever thought we should meet in this way. She says: I am here here, all right. She speaks of Philip, a man. (Philip was the name of her husband). She says: I have found all we did together to be true, and it has exceeded my expectations. You have met on many occasions and communed with spirits and she keeps her promise which perhaps was said laughingly. I will try to reach you if I go first.

There is a Doctor man with her who has helped you a great deal with health and will do so all the way through. These people gather around you and send their love to you. I am getting also your father. He comes and says he is proud of you, in the silence of this communion. He can tell you that. My son there are heavy burdens on your shoulders but we have power to help you. I asked how long does he think I will carry on. He asks: in your office? You have a good deal longer yet and don't let go, for another term or two. I said: tell him I won't run another election. The reply is they will want you to. I said I have not the strength at my years. He feels that my strength is there; yes, he does.

Something was said about writing; how will I do both. He said you will have time. You get very tired and some times you feel your chest a bit. You readily fill up again with strength. It is the mind that gets weary due to so many conflicting conditions one has to stand up against. You will do all right in Parliament. You have so many more people who place their trust in you than you realize. (He is speaking of the masses now, Chief.) Have you been flying and is there a question of flying again? He seems to prefer you to go by sea; give you a little time to rest. Your father: yes. Time to meditate and concentrate and so refresh your mind a little. You have worked hard and will bring fruit to the country in allegorical terms. (Ask him if he has seen a painting lately. He asks: of yourself? He says it is good. He feels it is very good. Eyes best part. He drew my attention to the eyes at once and he thinks there is still a better expression you have. (I said: ask about his own eyes. He says: I see clearly now. I asked: was he ever troubled with them? Yes, and it worried him so. He said: they are well now and I see clearly. Yes. He is speaking also of your mother. Do you have someone with the initial "N"?

He is writing that "N" - yes, that's it. Is it Norman? So many gather around. Norman Macleod. I said: I cannot think - then he added "Rogers". He passed into the world of spirit. We see here a sudden passing and it is rather clearing away conditions to get this to you and to tell you he is all right. You know someone belonging to him in this world

He would like you to have contact with them. It is a great joy to him to get to you. The light with you give off has helped him to come and your father's help, too; you show off a strong light from your aura and it has helped conditions of his passing. Glad to find a world of activity. Difficult to explain passing over. We get a bad condition from injury. He was killed. Is all right. There is a squaw in the earth world he is concerned about. He wishes he could make him feel her more. Give his love to her. He fought his way through to you to send his love to you and he was with her on an anniversary a few weeks ago and her mind was much with him. Give her his love and tell her I am all right. Guiding her and helping to attone her mind. Tell her to keep up that "good night" to me. It is a link that enables us to converse during her sleep. She has had a large photograph of him done. He is telling you this to carry to her, to let her know he is in the vicinity. He says: God bless you and congratulations to you for your work, for the country and for the winning of the elections. He has helped a good deal.

Have you a ring of your father's? A ring witha seal in it? I said I don't know where it is. Your father is speaking of a ring you have - a ring and seal. These are links between you, specially your mother's ring. He wanted to let you know they are glad you have got that ring and mother says she wears the counterpart of it. Did you have a brother? Mother says we are together. And a sister? They come together in a group around you. They say they held back for the President to give his messages to you. All are here in a happy bond together.

Your mother says: do not fear espionage; there are those protecting for us around you, my boy. They willprotect you. I said I have no fear myself. She says: you will not get the country in trouble. There is a great weight on your shoulders. You have such a graat wealth of spirit, of those who have had experience before. Mother says she loves your painting. It is just you. She wishes to go back to the days whenyou were a tiny pappose and she says the questions you asked bewildered her often.

She feels so pleased you have been allowed to serve. She is a God-fearing woman. Your mother's prayers are for you to be guided in the right way; to serve your country in the best and fullest measure. She has a word of love for you. She says is it not lovely that we are all together. Write your life, she says. It will help many that come after you. Yes. There is a John calling you. John also has a smile. He is calling to you too. Wait a minute - he says John Macdonald and Howe and they say they are going to help in some writing you have to do. They want to link up in thought with you.

Some time you go to a quiet place to rest. Your whole family say it will not be long before you are going there again and we will be with you in that quiet corner but send their love to you; are so happy for you.

The last we see is the President back again./ He laughs. He feels you would like a word about that. He wonders if the people on earth realize the force they have tapped. Far better that than a continuance of war conditions and thousands of lives that would have gone forward into confusion, into the astral world. He wants to say this: if the people on earth realized the responsibility upon themselves with this atomic force, they will get to work at once to be more harmonious. It rests entirely with Humanity whether it is used for a constructive or a destructive force. They are the final points and if they work for harmony among themselves, this atomic force will work wonders with disease. Bring cures of cancer or the malignant diseases. If they permit discord, it will take the opposite course and bring destruction upon themselves.

I asked the question: should Russia be told. He replied: not yet. Not until the spring of 1946. She will then be more ready for it. Hold it until then for them. It is a terrifying force but also a wonderful discovery if mankind will work in harmony. He is now bidding farewell to you but is so glad for a quiet communion with you. God bless you and help your work for Humanity. He leaves with a great white spirit - peace and quiet in your mind, that you may be filled with inspiration this Franklin has given you.

Good-bye, Friend, I am happy to have been with you and hope to meet you again some day. I now wake up.

Secret SITTING WITH MRS. SHARPLIN

(Her control is SILVER FOX).

She says a Doctor friend helps with the body. My father helps to give me confidence. Small control helps me with the sitting(?).

Medium goes into a trance; sits very quietly. Begins to breathe with a deep sigh. Then quite deeply and bends over; keeps her hands together on a book. Voice says:

M. Greetings to you, Chief. How do you do? Happy to meet once more and bring old friends. We see many spirit people around you. The old friend Franklin Roosevelt seems to predominate and would like 4th contact with you today. Did not quite finish all he would like to say. Here he is and giving you his love and blessing and behind him, a happy spiritual man, standing by your side saying one need not sit and be wheeled about. I can walk and go freely everywhere.

Glad to make further contact. Situation looks grave but does not want you to feel that is reality. He is quite hopeful conditions can be overcome. He has been present with you - the inner guest. Had several conferences and meetings with people since we met you and shock after shock ____.

The rather broad opinions of personalities but you can rise above all these if you want it with a quiet mind and with tolerance; at the same time, with determination that right shall prevail. He has happy memories of meeting with you for he says you were allied with him in the mind and in speaking of theRussian question which is most entangled at the moment and yet with war. They can be brought into further comradeship. Expect difficulty with them. They mention Finland, Poland and the Colonies belonging to Italy and so on. But he says: approach them with confidence, tolerance and without fear. They are a mixed medley, pulling, one afraid of the other for there are many undeveloped souls among them. You are called to help in a very grave and important union with his country - America you call it. He is very pleased that you go. You soon will have to take a journey there and he says it is of vital importance to him that you are present. Because your mind is expanded and that he has come into touch with you here in England; has made it now possible for him to use his influence in that conference.

Is that the right word, Chief? He wants you to give to him a thought particularly on this occasion that he can draw near to your aura. He says he can manage to touch Truman so far. But Truman is rather won over by strong personality; when he feels Truman is going to act as he wants him to, something is said from these other personalities and he loses grip while you can help by his presence there, and by what he can give from you in nature of power to do his work. He tells to me Attlee, that is Englishman, is it not? Needs upholding. He is well meaning man but they need more strength there. It is the finest thing that could have happened, that he withdraws from his colleagues and goes forth to have speech with Washington representative and they then will know each other better. He mentions it is always good to reason as representative of each country, one with the other - the prevailing question - the atomic force - is going to take some thrashing out and he wishes to state however much his country wishes to hold the secret they will not do so much longer for there are several others who have almost got it, and he says then there is research going on in secret with the Russians and the aid of the Germans which he thinks you have an inkling of, on/ that which has been brought to you. Many do not believe it but alas, it is true and the English scientists have helped also. That no longer can it be a secret to one country. He wants to make this statement to help you clear your mind on this point and know better how to act.

Your own country, he says, has valuable aides also and he is speaking of what it seems to me: Unural - is it radium? Uranium - andthis question will come also to the fore. But you are quite in order to guard them as your property, speaking of the country, because there is a great effort from the world of spirits to prevent one nation from being so powerful as to crush all others.

He says you may see his squaw and please give his love to her, if you do. She will understand, he says. She knows I am around her. He wants you to speak to him.

K. Please tell me what to do about the espionage matter.

M. Wait a minute - he knows. He says it is like of snake in your midst and you wonder about revealing or speaking of it. Yes, he feels it is good to let them know you are aware of it.

He is mentioning the Russian representative here in London and he has an inkling that you know about it. He says confirmation may come that way. Let him know you know but don't give too much away. He will be with you while you are in conversation with him. It is worrying you a little. He does not want you to worry but it is a great responsibility you carry.

Don't get worried for I have confidence you will be led all right to do the best for your country. If you take this course today, it will be helpful and will put you and your country in a stronger position.

Yes, I see. He say to me there are a few more words. Is speaking of Russian Ambassador man. You may have to have interpreter. You may find him man of few words and much of thinking and he say he can tell you relations will be stronger than you will think they are after your meeting with him.

They give to you the idea that you are not sure where you are with them. He wants to tell you it will be stronger in relationship than it appears on the surface. I do not consider it wise to trust them too far but you know that.

K. Should we have an enquiry in Canada? And bring up Civil Service?

M. He say: yes, yes, definitely. He say we cannot get peace in world while they are allowed to get away with these things.

K. When should we begin this enquiry?

M. He says to me - till early in the new year.

K. Too late, won't it be? Does he not think so?

M. Wait a minute - here is November coming along. It will take until beginning of new year to get this espionage business... When you get back Whenyou go to Ottawa - Washington to Ottawa - and he takes me to Ottawa and he says after you have settled down for a week or two, and then get down to it, it will take you until beginning of January to get things cleared up.

K. I say: what about publicity?

M. He says: try to hold it from Quebec as much as you can - but get civil servants. They must not be bribed. He knows it. But they must not get away without being pulled off.

K. What about the M.P.?

M. He says he should have a bigger mind than that.

K. Should he be brought before a Court of Enquiry?

M. He says you may manage without that.

K. What about Carr?

M. It is something like throwing out into midst of works; pitching something into what you are doing but it is a stich in time which will save nine. If you grip it at the beginning, it will be unpleasant at the time but it will save much more unpleasantness and detraction as to your country. He thinks we must let the whole story out eventually - not until after we have been to Washington.

K. What does he think about the man we call Corby?

M. Yes. He is not too sure of him but he says to me has he a contact in the U.K. Have you someone with those initials? Yes, right. He says all right. Have you someone with those initials? He is watched.

K. Should we bring him before a Court?

M. He says he is afraid you will have to.

K. What about Primrose?

M. Yes, Primrose, too. He says unpleasant as it all seems, would be better to bring this corruption to the surface and break it.

K. What will it mean in the relations of Canada and Russia?

M. He says, well, that is what he is meaning with U.K. Something Russia. He means U.S. and Russia. He says it will no doubt occasion a little friction but it will be over soon.

K. Must we have theAmbassador recalled - the Russian Ambassador to Canada?

M. Wait a minute... There is a good deal that have to be broken down with the Russians and they must not be allowed to get too much grip, says he - but such comradeship with them, if they will ..... evil with reason.

K. Should we give them the secret of the bomb?

M. Not yet. He says the secret of the bomb he has spoken of in beginning of talk today and wants you to make sure that they are not getting it. Don't be in a hurry to give it to them. It is wiser to hold it until there are more plain or more sure relations.

K. You mean a devastating thing, is it not?

M. That is what he wanted to discuss further with you and to help you in your determination to do the right thing. There is confusion before you for a few weeks over this question. He wants you to keep you as calm as you can and know that Right will triumph in the end. He says his interest in world affairs did not die with his body. He discovered more fully he was an instrument of the Great Power in the fuller life and that he must continue service on that higher strata. He says I am so happy to get a close contact with King.

K. What does he call me?

M. Mackenzie, yes - he say you have all good wishes, Mackenzie, for a good session and as we both realize that we are instruments of the great God. that is it.

Carry that thought with you and your faith will be made straight and clear to you. He is with a band of workers who have the world evolution at heart and are seeking to bring about a brotherhood of man and comradeship of U.N.

Yes, he say to me, tell my friend his hand is in mind and let us work together toward peace and right. Ah, a fine spirit is this friend of yours.

K. Do you speak to him anymore? Give him my love and thank him very much.

M. Give him your love? He now withdrawing but with love, he leaves you. My power of contact is becoming exhausted.

Yeah, now, we find your father coming and he also brings hislove to you and he has stood by and watched the President man talk with you. He says I am delighted you have such a helper, my boy, for you need it. Responsibilities weigh heavily upon your shoulders but you have the power of good going with you. You seek to serve mankind and your desire has its response from those who have clearer vision and have courage. He says have courage. You will soon see the fruit of your behaviour. Visit to England and the contacts you have made will be landmarks in old country's history.

You must write your life and the many interesting contacts during this difficult time of the earth revolution. It will be of help to Canada's unborn children. (Then I say)

K. When will I get time to do that, Father?

M. He says: the eventide of your life can be spent that way.

K. Will you help me get the secretaries I need - a good one and trustworthy one?

M. He answers - Will come to that.

K. How soon?

M. Very soon. You are drawing closely the one you need to look after you and to work with you.

K. What do you mean?

M. He does not mean to guard from gunshot, etc. but to feel you have someone who will understand; be an aide to you in your need.

K. (Then I say) Will I continue on in Parliament?

M. Yes. No hesitation about that.

K. How write as well?

M. He says we are not expecting you here yet, you know. A long time. You know Joan? (He) She has a wealth of love for you, so has your mother and I say so have I for them. Then he says there is a great love linked with all of you. Your brother and your sister are there with them. They want to say our love is an upholding force for you in your great work and in your quiet moments, you have something to lean upon like a cushion - to ease your mind, because when you retire into your own sanctuary - your own bedroom - they do gather around you to support you and fill you with that family love that is food to your spirit.

K. What do they think of the painting?

M. They think it is fine of you. Your mother thinks it is perfect. Your father, too, thinks it is great fun. That he says he always loves your eyes. He does not think he has given the full expression they should have.

K. (I said) You don't agree with him?

M. Your mother thinks about fulness of eyes - are your father's. The family eyes you brought with you. He loves his mother. Could see her looking through your eyes until his eyes were dimmed. That is why I mentioned in particular the eyes - that is why I mentioned the eyes. I can see so clearly; no more trouble with my eyes. I am well, strong, and so happy to have opportunity to come and speak with you and to give to you assurances. Some times you feel you are getting older and a bit tired. He says: yes, that may be but you have much reserve strength to draw upon. Your battery is refilled by those who love you in the spirit world.

Do we get that small little girl again, Nancy? She says: I am allowed to come often to you when you are tired; to make you feel happy. A lighter vibration of the child makes you happy. She is coming back home with you and she says you will be taken care of. She says: are you going on a warship or on a big ship? I can see you there.

K. (I asked) Any messages to her mother?

M. Mamma lady - fondest love to her precious mother. She speaks of her father man too. She comes very near to her mother because she knows she can come always. Has she any relatives? I am so thrilled because her mother will be thrilled that you found her here.

I keep promise for she says, in her mind, you try to appear and give me message from England. She says: here I am. She brings you flowers, violets as an emblem of the work you are working upon - peace vibrations.

Now to get Etta.

K. What Etta?

M. Etta Wriedt. She says: here I am. and she says: we have happy memories and she says I have found the spirit world to exceed our expectation and she says you are to feel happy because you have the protection of her guide.

You have still the protection of her guide and Mr. Dr. man - Mac - who helps you in silence as you do your work. Yes, says it is grand to meet you again and how happy she is to watch your work, some of which is what her guide predicted.

K. Has she any message to send to Canada?

M. She says: to all my friends - and she seems to mention Nancy's mother - she says ... powers getting a bit low. She hasnot much left to hold on to.

K. Give her my love.

M. She gives her love to you and as we are about to leave you, Sir, we see a beautiful symbol right over you and it is your country's emblem - yes, the Maple Leaf and behind it, is the sunrise which is symbolical of the rising influence and progress she is to make. Yeah, shake head. So now we feel we must withdraw and we wish you all belssings of the great white Spirit. All peace in your heart. May the power of the angel Michael be behind you and your country. Let purity of motive bring you to the light. Amen. Goddbbye to you, Chief. Thank you. We are honoured to be able to be an instrument of the Chief, Franklin. There is also the power of Wilson ... to you and always will be.

Good bye to you and peace in your efforts.

One little .... That is my own tonic: Indian. (The medium sighs deeply. Begins to sit up and breathe deeply. Then she says)

M. I see here as I wake up - Freda who sends her love.

K. I say to you: who is Freda?

M. That is Mrs. Leonard's Freda. That is all I hear as I wake up.

Secret — Sitting with Mrs. Helen Hughes — October, 1945

(Place: London Spiritualist Alliance).

Mrs. Hughes had come from the North where she had been adressing public audiences and was passing through London for the day. She had not been told who it was who was to be seated with her. She sat to the right of the table on which there ware some flowers. There was light coming through the window, to the right of the window, so that I could see her quite plainly throughout the sitting. She had a very heavy cold. She said:

M. Have you sat before? To which I replied:

K. Yes.

M. (She then offered a little prayer in the following words) Heavenly Father, we draw very near to you that we may commune with higher powers. Let us get away from all material things. Windwws of heaven: open wide. We give ourselves into thy keeping.

Then before she went into a trance, she said to me:

M. Your aura is distinctly gold - distinctly full. Do take a little care of yourself for the next 2 months.

I saw she gradually became unconscious. She says:

M. A lot to do. Are you aware you have a brother, a spirit? He has put his hand on you here (she put her own hand over her shoulder) - and asks to transmit these words. They have been proud of you over there. Your brother is taking a great interest in all you do and is daily working side by side with you. Thinks you are all right. (Medium says):

M. I will. (Follows with the words) TheDoctor - I am going into a trance. (She follows) Oh dear, yes - I see your brother. I can see him use a ray. (Indicates the part there below the heart; tired). I tell you in the next 2 or 3 years, the things you think you are going to put aside, you will work with more than ever. You will be called upon more than ever. Better to carry on, so when you come to us, you will come in harness.

Your mother, too. I can just see her here. Is there anyone who belongs to her named James - your mother and James, John; was there also an Uncle Willie? I wish you could hear the voice of Uncle Willie - a soul who is interesting himself in you. You could say he would like to help in all I do. He has learned a lot. Your mother and he and James have many times influenced you.

Do you know anyone on his arm with sclerosis or perhaps, paralysis - who gives a heavy sigh. Things will come out all right. Don't worry. We shall be with you.

My word, James has walked right across the room. Your mother with him. Just says for now, use all the discretion you can. Humanity glad to be helped.

You, James, prove you have their influence. Was your father's name John? He was a relative. He is laughing at the idea. I said to your mother, we have got here and we are going to do the rest ourselves.

Did you go through the University with anyone named Hugh ... Buchan? He knew the family in your young days but Hugh Buchan would belong to the North or West of Scotland and a man who did a terrible lot of good with someone named Fraser in your mother's family. Fraser to show these two work together.

You have been terribly worried. The outside world has not known it in your own room. Most unnecessary. You will be called upon to put the right cap in the wheel. Your brother says: keep your shoulder at the wheel and we will help you to carry on.

Oh, my word - you are going to be called upon over here and everywhere. Be prepared. Don't hesitate. Your health is good. Only tired. Next 2 or 3 months go as carefully as you can. You are going to build in the days to come.. (Medium goes into a deeper trance).

(Continuing) Sir, I am happy to welcome you here. So very happy to inform you you are surrounded by souls interested in all your doings. You have much to do in life and your own beloved mother asks me to say to you you have done well. She is close beside you. Are you aware you will be visiting Russia? in a little while from now? Your mother wishes me to tell you they are watching the world and all things that you are going to do. She will be with you. Your mother is using the voice of Mrs. Hughes. She is so excited. I can just see your place in your cart and white horse. It is from her garden. Her home over here is very beautiful. There is a lot to do before you reach this.

Did your mother (brother ?) suffer with his chest and heart? She (he ?) is coming now.

Hello, hello - hello, Will. Give me your finger. I am proud of you. We are all here, this morning, to help you through. Don't worry or take too much out of yourself. You are doing well. God bless you.

Was anyone belonging to you, a Doctor. The gentleman is here. He is overhauling your body. He says that after all your work, there is nothing to complain of. The Doctor wants you to take care during the next 2 or 3 months. Do you know also Alec. Macdonna? Was Macdonald someone named Alexander Queen(?) The Dr. has brought these, as personalities he mixed among. Will try to use Mrs. Hughes' throat to speak to you.

Well,well - good morning. This is a pleasure. How are you feeling? Not doing anything about this? Go easy for a while. We want you to be prepared - you have a role to do. We want you to do it. You have carried something and all else here. You will get a surprize. Do you know who the lady is who is with your mother? Margaret and Jane. There is a gentleman, strangely enough, who calls you Rex or Mac. He is Roosevelt and puts up his hand like this, and with a smile, asks me to carry a word for him: carry on, carry on - to the goal. He is still interested. A little disappointed that he passed out of the body so soon as he did but when he discovered he was out of the body, it helped.

(Mrs. Hughes has a heavy cough. She had a cold that day).

I wonder what this gentleman means. I have got to tell you. You will be called upon, about the spring of the year - a great dissention in the govt. Put your best into it for we are organizing from our side.

I see your work will never end. It is not necessary for me to tell you that. Forces of good are working around you and you will do much for Humanity, for the souls around.

Roosevelt is not sorry he left life for he is on a plane where it is easier to help. God bless you.

There is a lady with my brother, sister-in-law - do you know, Annie? Do you know Nelson? He has walked right around you and stands in front of you and says: well, well, why did we not know more about it?

(Nelson) Wilson has many times manifested you must carry on. You are still going to the top of the hill. You are doing much for us and we will do for you.

The Dr. thinks you should take a tonic. Your father and mother, James, Nellie? see you are tired. Joan, Max, here with an array around you. You should feel better for being in your company.

Did you know Agnes? She stands by your side. Agnes is here. In contact with a soul who will do all that has to be done. All to give you help.

I see placed before you a chart and .... influence of your father and mother. I see souls tracing and tracing. You are in this - in the building of it. You are going to be called upon for further responsibility; that is what it means.

All right, Max tells me - that is work every bit as hectic as yours where he is. Everything you do, as you can do - he is so interested in. The whole family are around.

K. What about father?

M. He is coming with father. Gives name either Ellen or Helen; Agnes, Margaret; Uncle Willie; James, Max, Christina - your grand-mother. Is like your mother, suffered with nose and chest. Walking brings on a little cough.

My word, here comes your father. I see your mother and the name Mackenzie. Christina spoke of this. They are more proud of you every day. She says they become more proud of name every day. She was a very reserved, precise woman.

Your father did know James King. He is here. Here is father with spirit to speak to you.

Hello - good morning. Hold hands. Proud of you. Proud of you. How do you do? You are tired. Max says exhaustion - something about being very firm. Take a tonic. School cap herbs - drink as much as you can. Get nervous system toned up. You have done well for the country. I want you without a tired body. Whenever you need me, a thought reaches me. God bless you. God bless you.

When a boy, does it not take your mind back to what he used to say; how to respond, to recall the things in life? He knows you have used your power. Forget power into the world ... for the use of men. There have been many mysteries - out of the war, but tomorrow greater things you will let the world know of. In another 4 years, a great job will have been completed. Do you know what he means? He wants you to carry on. You will be wise to complete it. Then you can step back to where there is a little ease and something rest. But he asks me to tell you still that at the eventide of your life, you will be called upon to give directions. He knows there are times, that your heart, your very body is filled with disgust. But he asks me to tell you this is inevitable. Work out and in the corner of your own vineyard, there are going to be great changes; changes which not one of you have envisaged at the moment. Among the great changes, you will take your stand.

Your father thinks a co-worker beside you may be slipping out of his body, if he don't watch. He is not in the .... Don't let it be a surprize. This may be a surprize. Responsibilities ought to measure for you. Take care, they will all help you there.

K. I asked Mrs. Hughes - are you warm enough?

M. My word, while coming out of trance, I see mother, father, brother, grandmother; You have a sister - a spirit. She has brought primroses and violets, to tell you that all are near you. The springtime of the year will bring happiness to you once again.

Did your sister suffer with chest trouble? From what I can see, they are very interested in all to be done. I can see you among crowds; seem happy. Some a little despondent(?) and others looking on but in all you will be acclaimed.

Your brother has put out his hand. He wants you to get a tonic. It is not Doctor's medicine to take. Plenty of school cap tea.

How done? For nerves. A good tablespoon - a full cup a day, and it will help nerves. There is nothing wrong. Only you are very tired and it is exhaustion. It is the nervous system. He is standing there. Your brother, sister, mother, father and Christina. Dearest little soul, am so happy. Also see you sitting at a long table. While someone is being initiated in something important and something being offered to you. A box. Max says this is the end of a day's work. Not just now. Your work may be 4, 4½ years or you yourself will set back.

I think I will let go off the reins now. Now through an illness. You are the type of.... You will never be ill. Your aura tells me you will not have time to be ill. Get tiredness off.

Yes. Surely. Not yet. It will come. What will happen. You will do writing for the benefit of others after you leave (live) here.

You will do it because you and others have been impressed about what to do. The book (whole) of life. It will be one completed and put out and bring happiness to many, and a big understanding to others.

Yes. Interested. Your own father and Doctor - they are nearby. Max says you will get much credit. Much praise but always remember a spirit has worked behind your life. Things done in your life impossible to have the knowledge of it. So many clever people forget it is not them. He says it is always a duplicate of everything. Clever business-man. Doctor, Palestine, etc. All comes from the source - higher source of life, and then, too, where you are getting your power and will draw (?). The power is from the mind and youwill draw much help in the days you are about to come through. Your life, one thing piled on top of another.

K. I say: is it worth it?

M. Your brother says, of course, that is like; keep on. Keep on. We are with you. You will complete the task. You have two bodies - etherial - flies over in the hour of trial, testing time. Max and your father have joy (?) between the two bodies and use the physical.

Your brother, a great soul. I can give him something and red. He has his programme and other things. He has done. In spirit, to help more and higher things and higher.

What lady Christina says: well, she says, when I go back - did they ever tell you that a curly head boy, as a child, and just let him kn that the little lace collar .. She has ... through the years.

The pulse never grows old and if anyone has youthful spirit, you have. She will never grow out of boyhood and particularly your mother very close to your side. Go on. Don't look back and the task shall be carried out.

God bless you. Till we meet again. Max says you have a lot to do in the 85 years.

Do you know Agnes? Did she die young? She is with Christina. A sweet soul, Helen.

Max, your father and mother, just dropped poppies and love. Says the great harvest is to be. Bear yourself when you come out of your body for still more things. Max says: carry on. Keep your shoulder to the wheel. Be very active. Was Max a doctor? There are so many things around him.

That cough is nothing. Only got to do what he told you. Nervous exhaustion and rest. When you go to bed, rest; do not think. You will finish the task. He repeats and repeats - you will finish the task.

In conclusion, over your aura is a wonderful mauve and silver blending which is the power of the spirit working in your life. Your father says: good morning. It is not good-bye and we will all help you in the task of life. The aura has cleared up, as when you came in.

Daffodils. Plenty of happiness. Joy.

You are going into a new world order and you will be directing it. You will end your days happily.by seeing the goal you have worked for being reached. Not only by yourself but by Humanity. God bless you. Greater things in store by the help of those who love you. All will come well.

Had you a cousin? Named Smith? A passer-by . Saw distinctly the doctor. Will Helen offered presies(?), he places a crest. Something that is going to be presented to you and something you have done in the war. They see it in a vision. You will take it happily. It is gratitude. Kindness, etc. It will bring a lump to your throat. He wants you to know that, for the source from which it comes.

Looking around seemingly unplaced
- finally - after we all were concerned about his partic in the service
he came to satin the fathers per that I was in - The hospital Padre went on
- the choir singing
'Oh God of Bethel - we remained singing - t they vanished from the scene - Everything was confused - there was no peace or serenity

Nothing very clear now
There was apparently a very large building where the old Russell Theatre stood
- not a church - not a theatre but - there were pews facing the Plaza - & square pews facing the other way - pews with locked doors - as the old pews in Knox Church Woodstock were - the heads were visible above the sides - I was at the very last pew facing the back - The procession came across from the Chateau - Royal Family etc: Dignitaries - Princes - Munich when they got into their seats there was a service - but in some confused way. The P.M. was not in the pews with the King - but walking about

It is not quite clear in my mind as to whom I was with in New York - Godfrey & the children seemed to be at times & a vague feeling of her was there but nothing clear. We had difficulty finding a hotel & we wanted to economise & to be comfortable at the same time finally we got one down town which in some way was named for our country - It was either "United Empire" or Imperial or British Arms - or some such title - The point was that I forgot the name entirely & so my troubles began -
I went alone to shop - When I wished to go back & to send some purchases. I could not recall the street nor the name of the hotel - I was unable to find the children - I was terribly alone had unlocked my big square hat-box - the tray was on the floor & he was tossing everything out. some things he put in his pocket - but after a hazy effort I got my pearls & best jewellery from him & got them into my pocket - I rang bells - no one came. I tried to call but could make no sound. The agony was awful. If I could have made a sound it would have wakened me - finally after filling their pockets they left -

I went into the hall & met some women - I asked them to help me - to get someone to get the men - & two went down - but two - an oldish woman & a young girl came into the room - the girl went over to the box & began picking over things - the woman asked me whether I had been able to save & I had jewellery in my hand - to my dismay she grabbed my hand & tried to take what I had kept - they were accomplices - we fought a real battle - always a little Coronation brooch was uppermost - the only clear thing - how we fought for it - it was so dreadful it woke me - but I had saved it - the little crown - & after a terrible fear - I found I was at home -

I walked past many places - finally I thought I knew this place & entered - everything was queer & sinister - but I went up to the room - & in an unexplained way. My hat-box & my bags were with me - I decided to go to look for friends left the room. then an impulse led me to go back - I found two men in the room - one a big fellow with a huge moustache - the other, younger. Thin, in overalls - They said they were the hotel employees sent to repair the radiators - They hammered so I went out - to escape the din. My boxes were locked & I thought quite safe. I went back & found the big man

REPETITION

Meyers: Good evening mrs Collins. Pleased to see you again
Joan. I am very glad that I have voice again — thanks to you.
for this you must call on me at 6 do.
Meyers: Go to the dentist on Monday and tell him you want this crown the decay from your teeth so like mr King did, Shock it out must be in through go to the dentist and let him to give you some more of the pill in your and take the rays, & the wound of the dog ventriloquy treatment
Now, Mr King, the French representation allowments of society
May take manifest from a distance and can fight for position when they are brought must then pay they to make bidding for the top round.
The allowments are our relations men and women also meant to be seen in your company, in order that some fortune may bring friends & them
12 Come on an example or example.
Meyers The kind of beauty into go & the sea and sea for rest and summer
The business of society
The kind of perfection are real in the worlds goods but "boon" and head also the indolent fashionable folk.
12. Next was the comparison of how Dorothy observing in the various human beings a good manner who even her mother humorously she is worthy of your friendship, because she is able to carry out
Some of the things you would like to be a companion
The French represent the attraction that in this home
Because of which also home is clean, they are derived from the world of today
11. Does this apply to men like the Rockefeller & the Carnegie.
May you good men, lend a his pillar for you to help the company of men in the humbler walks of life
There is no better place for you to visit than at Kenyon.
Then you have real friends, lovely country side and fresh air
The words you saw this morning are the symbols of your Christmas
They speak of the days when you have left this world you are in and have come over to join us
There must be an abundance of them, and you must not need to carry away any souvenirs
You must have to a rich old age and meet the peaceful death
You will fulfill your highest hopes before then and There will be no mourning at the bier when for last out to see.
Joan- Seemed to have almost my own life about I would do: all be a dream for you

Dear Valliere, you are doing the right thing in looking after Godfrey and in helping him keep out of it. You can help him [illegible] keep out of it to help you as he can, and he can help you & him keep to help him as you can. You both are needed to help each other. You both should be very happy that you can be of use to me. He must send you both to the end of this war. It must be a long time yet for each of you. Good night.

King John - Tom to act.

K. Send along more men and let it known

Tells Chamberlain is here

K. Well Mr Chamberlain, I am indeed glad you have come. You know how greatly we admire your great work and hero as well

Neville Chamberlain: — Thank you for saying that for how few said

Thank you reading about last night

What Irving has meant to me almost all my life

K — Just the last time I met him at Oxford it was to be

I am surrounded by my family, brother & old friends and all I loved most to see

My mind wandering to scenes long ago I came over

I come a lot to see you

K. Where is Keller?

Keller is a lost soul, he is in the lowest hell

He is chained & suffering for him to come

He called me to come and declare how great his bondage is about to be he is surrounded by hellish forms and evil spirits.

K Had others for : were never heard

Chamberlain Keller is still alive for he is unsaved

I warned him & said about Daniel & other things.

Daniel helped & saw the day. That is two days soon that it had we should have lost

Long ago I remember telling Mark for a miracle and being at Kingsmen

I remember how kind you were in asking me & next time

I was worn out, and desperate with Bennett

You have been a true unfailing friend during the war

I hope you were not stay on too long

A man at 73 in these days cannot do your work in London & P. M.

I believe you must make a practice of resting your life for how the gift of writing & how a great study to be

K. Do you feel tired now, or been better these days lately?

I do not feel any ill effects. Yet Strain & anxiety & things all the time when I came over.

I see life a young man again, full of life & vigour

Good night

† In looking at the page of 'Life of Neville Chamberlain' in my return to L.V. Bridges, I decided on all the chapters in entitled "Strain & Stress"
K. 9-2-47

R. — Tell me about the boss I heard before breaking a day or two ago about the division of the Rockefeller his legacy is here.

K. That is fine, I am so glad you have come.

His Majesty, good morning Miss Hallowes, I am glad to see you again
The boss you heard was gone but he is speaking to you before you have spoken

R. well and then say?

Miss King said you would be asked to make some important decision, but did not think of undertaking it. She said to hold yourself in readiness of meeting you like
She wants you to begin on this before this year is out,
She believes you need see the King often in a day for all the
She feels the party need understand your position

R. next about getting the language down I think?

They are open like you how slow you slow is parliament
They believe it would be best to arrange for a convention here you or not
They think you should not lay a matter formal election

K. What about health record?

Health comes over a P.M. in the sense in mind you or P.M. today
You could go on for another year or two if you think best
They all say you should be guided by the best of counsel?
You have done your part already, and?
Mr Rockefeller Symbolizes position Spain, being considered to How is a low personal position
The Health public is a considered man, he wants Villa to the Senate,
You have a difficult skill to handle, I am glad you are doing this
I pray come a calm hand of wings for you.
I am sure she must have a God send to you.
I am sure you need find the best [illegible] hands of Confusion and Semi politics must be avoid with the staff at U.S. Chief the Servants.
She is accustomed to managing affairs
God-night (madly 10 to 16 - as I took at dates

K. I send them kisses.

Winston - Love to you and you. Don't be anxious about anything. God bless He cares for you K. and is good about your ways.
I think you should be firm about not staying in Africa beyond another year or two, I think the Election time would be better than the
I think if you stay till the autumn you really find that very wise.
I am sure the King need you and feel about.
God night - God bless you & Jan.

K. Jan & all.

K
Lady Johnson. Not for Johnson
Jan Smuts & all
Journeys in here

Sir Wilfrid.

1c. Well Sir Wilfrid, glad you have come on this anniversary. for K. Here's Johnson, how do you do, I am glad to see you again Joan. I think you any much
Let's your father speak
Johnson: Sir Clarence says you have belonged to me, I gave it to him — — long ago he was in great straights and I gave him a few articles of the latter interest was a mistake (belt buckle
He says belonged to me when I was teaching at Osgoode Hall
I had another interest I mind of the Law School Here is evidence of a loan in his special world, that one gives to another comes back to the rightful owner
I thank Sir Wilfrid for letting me say these few words to you
Sir Wilfrid: I enjoyed seeing you entertaining at my Old home last night
I hope you will bring as many people there as you can
People love to visit the homes of great men
I hope you will find it possible to entertain the members of parliament
The experience, Canada is one of world significance
It is a great discovery Canada has made
It will help to destroy the power of Russia
It is the greatest blow to the communists they have ever received
It is a great tradition in your life
The whole world will admire your courage
Labrador has discovered will rouse the United States and Great Britain as nothing has done since Hitler entered (Parliament
It is a great find
It will lead to you becoming the outstanding man of today.
It is the one chance to save another world war

K. (to Joan). It is all dashing, I have been chosen for this work.
Sir W. You are a girl now you say you have been chosen
There are forces here that are working for and through you
You must take them, darling your courage & fearlessness
They are from all Countries of the Globe and from all times
Can you hasten to me or this city must I speak

K. You indeed, I should be grateful to hasten
Here is a Lesson of Abrahamic Love has been speeding
Your path

His name is Christ
He has written a book home to your possession
I want us to pick up that book Long ago in the spirit of the Illumination, I want you to read about some writers
It will be a guide to your steps, and a light to your path
Read it day by day as you would pray
Long ago I knew that God had chosen you to be an instrument of His Holy Will
He chooses the weak to confound the strong
He loves you dear workers and fellows
They have brought you up in the fear of the Lord
They are with you here, and are looking at you with hearts full of tenderness and love
They will guide and direct your thoughts
They are chosen of God to help us work out His Holy Will There are others who are with them now and who will help.
K who are they?
They are a great number from all countries and from years and centuries ago.
(Clotard St Smith – 2 hands together 10 & 10)
They will make their presence known in different ways
They will come at different times
Joan and Lumina or radio – my pencil – I see I shall be alone. That silence was needed for them.
S— There is nothing like silence to let you hear the voice of God.
There is nothing like silence to bring you in touch with the celestial choir
The celestial song is a part of my teaching
The part I want you to study and to follow
Them will be found the path of peace – and ancient law
Them will be found the path of peace and of former good sight
The spirit who has spoken must be a great help to you
Jesus Lindsey was directed by them to send you the book
She is not too well and may be passing over before long
We will talk again before long – God bless K. Mr Joad Thanks for your love & all that is in the home. Clotard Stanislas 10

Gordon - Jean & all
Laurie is here.

Laurie, Good evening Mrs Pattison
" " Sir Wolfgid
Let Jean follow Sfeve

Father; Long ago I knew that God had a great work for you to do.
Let Sir Wolfgid translate

Sir Wolfgid; The most Noble Indian is here,
He says Thank You for reading my book
The book is better than the pictures
The book will help you to gain Spiritual power
It teaches the purity of the soul from the hindering sorrows of the flesh
It teaches renunciation of all that degrades life
It tells the highest Good for the world and the next Read a Gita every day that you have read it through
It will give you what is needed to attain the soul
Let Jean follow Sfeve

Father; President Roosevelt is here
He " Glad I am glad You have come, tell him all you can.
F.D.R. Good evening Mrs Pattison. I am glad to see You again
The decline of Government rooms reminded me of my promise to God
The Russian situation has landed on your doorstep
It is a good thing for the world that that is so
You command the respect of the entire world,
Even Stalin has a great admiration for You
He will not let things go too far
He will want to talk with You some day
When he does do not be afraid to go to see him
Mountbatten knows as well the inspiring and the abhorrence of Communist tendencies
The inspiring will have great faith
You will become a leading figure in the world
The good that You will achieve will live after You
Now giving his blessing to Mrs Pattison but to Jean & Gordon
Let Mrs Pattison tell her grandson

Jean Why did You bring him visit at this particular moment, why was this date chosen?

King Edward It was just a historical sequence in our affairs after returning Hyphen with Prince
He will all arranged from this side. We can see more clearly than You can - Listen & he replies for a little while Jumps "all things come home at one tide"

(Listen to the news)

FDR. - The news is discouraging.

Joan - Lobau is my dog.

FDR Lobau is standing for the underdog.

I have fought for the underdog all my life

I must have courage & help of the people

He is the one to do it, he knows our fears

He is a man after my own heart

Read over what I said to you in England. Remember

You must see exactly what must happen if Germany is to be beat soon - food supply

King. - Joan, love to all
Gladstone is here - K. Thank you Mrs Gladstone, we are most grateful to you for coming,
Gladstone: Home the Joan de Hundredth. I am glad to see you tonight
Joan Thank you very much Mr Gladstone.
Gladstone, I was glad to see you reading Mr Bellamy's book to Bellamy boy -
I saw you looking at the memoirs of Mr & Goldwin Smith Mrs Harmony
Mrs Smith and your father are here tonight Mr.
K. That comforts me deeply. I should have depended for this night Mr.
Your father is a great and good man
He is helping & guide and direct your thoughts
He must be at your side all the time in and out of parliament
The investigation you have begun must go very far
Russia is aiming at getting control of the world
She has her spies in every part of the globe.
The report you will publish tomorrow will create a great (Joan Mrs Gladstone is right in thinking this must be well considered on the other hand you are quite right in saying it was the only
I believe very strongly, it may prevent another world war
You have been very courageous, and the world needs this truth
The world needs leadership today and you have given us right
Joan were chosen for these times and for this work for you Do not be afraid. Go right on Gladstone is right about the memoirs. God will give you time for them.
Tomorrow will be the beginning of your greatest work.
It will put you in the forefront of the men of the world
(I stopped to tell Joan of my talk with Churchill) - the Conservative
Churchill is right in what he said to you today
This is the time to act. There is no time to be lost -
Good night
K - Many thanks Mr Gladstone, please help me all you can.
I must be at your side whenever you send for me.
Let your father speak
Gladstone: I am so glad to have a word with you tonight
I can see a great future awaiting you than ever I had Goldwin Smith & I have a world wide (dreams more possible
K. many many times, dear Mr Gladstone I send for Conroy
I am so glad you and father are together & with me.
Gladstone,

Goldene Smith! I am very pleased to meet your father. I knew his father in Cairo. He is very well
Joan. Thank you Mr Smith
Your father & I are great friends and always have been
I was glad to see you looking for my boots this morning
C. There were one I could not find, could you help me Goldene Smith. — It is among books in the dark room, the little is ___
I want you to know you have done the right thing in exposing Russia's treachery
Don't be discouraged if anything this affection from Roy Sly
You have a position in the world today which no man can challenge
You have held power longer than any living man (Joan longer than John A. & N. Nor is he in the other world
P.S. John A is here, he says you will reign longer than he did John A is a devoted friend of yours and of your father & grandfather and of Mrs Lindsay and George who are also here
We are all watching the turn of events and following your career
So on with the task you have undertaken (with great restraint in the cause of humanity). Own all nations in humanity
Joan your last quotation to the King in Britain Coronation was best
I will help & inspire you with thoughts and both encouragement
Good night,
— Roosevelt is here
A. Thank you so much for coming to see you Roosevelt, (Bravo my Stairs, Pat Jumps!
Glad you have that bumps. Not since my arrival (Cairo
I have been watching developments, all have been going so right
Don't be anxious about anything, you must be Great Gentleness and Mr Kennedy who spoke of the Prince was Bertrand. Strength
He talks much too freely about what actions Britain or his cabinet
He may get drawn into this war which must be taken apart
Sam Dave and Rose,
Your report being so kind in point what is needed at this time
The world will be annoyed at what you have discovered
Russia will be confounded and will have a hard time in recovering
You were right to remind the Kremlin & the devil at Cherwell
They will recognize your lack of bitterness (the boundary blast and forgiveness
I must be at your side all the way.
Good night

K. If I can get him hungry or thirsty, keep it here

R. Tell me maya, how am I going to get through until my next few weeks, how strength enough, & for from fatalism etc,

Maya! Well, I am glad you sent for me,
You need to take more rest and to rest as much as you can
Don't put on so much in the way of heavy bed clothes
Take the Veronal every day, don't bother about iron
You need more out of doors
eat sparingly and keep away from Stimulants
You need to keep much longer hours do not let them draw you of your vitality
Try to concentrate when you work & should allow interruption
Use the telephone as little as possible
The strain of talking over the telephone on my head on the nervous System
You must get through all right, if you will keep as quiet as possible
Don't be afraid of any unusual unfortunate thing as a natural part of your being. All men of power have strong passions
The only way to subdue them is to find your mind of a height that seems to drown them Go to bed before you are tired out, I don't mind anything that would drain your brain before going to bed
Take all the care you can of yourself for God has a great work for you to do

K. What about foreign languages? Don't read when you are tired, and read as little as possible by electric light. Food might improve it now.

R Tell me about the morning vision
That was your lower nature asserting itself
It does not mean anything wrong. It was only a push to avoid anything that might have unfortunate circumstances
You want I should all right today?
The tension you must must certainly create some emotional disturbance, but will not do harm to carry out
R Do you feel all will be well until that has been done
You cannot undo all you have done (or human influences)
You will be surprised how well everything will work out in the long run

K Tell me about the division of the Orkans and mention how you are right in believing that your mother is watching over you. She must see that you are guided so that you can live your own life.

Father :- Let Nathan Speak

Nathan : Good evening Pam. I am glad to see you and Bobbie

P. Good evening Nan, we are glad to have you

Jemmie is very tired. She has had a terrible strain these many years

She had a close call last night. She is better today

She is very much exhausted

She needs to be off in Barrie than anywhere

She should stay a few days at Jemmie Home

You would get real personal talking of these days

We are all here & want to assist you all the time.

Don't be concerned about the session

God has helped you in the past. He will not forsake you now

Let Father Speak

Father : How else you do here Nathan, we are all glad to see you again

I take the liberty hope for more prosperity (Rev Solomon Study Hall)

It is a pleasure of mine

Nathan, don't be afraid of the session. It will bring you into stronger relief than ever

The religious investigation is a great credit to you.

It means a consecrated thing to do and fabricate as well

It will bring about a better relationship in the end.

Hold your temper when you are attacked

God will guide you when you speak

Let James Speak

Sr Neufeld : Good evening Mrs Nathan, I am glad to see you again

Joan I am glad we are all here

Lady Jamieson was very pleased to see the families together at the dinner & the conference Jemmie & Mrs can do it

I was glad to see you reading my speech on Good Friday

I treasure very much your taking it to them to look at, and him asking for a word about his daughter

He is here now and would like to speak

Jr : for all here

Nathan delighted for have come Lord Prey. I remember all your interest in my future etc.

Lord Prey : I am delighted & the pleasure with you again, I am very glad to meet Mrs Nathan :

Jr . She must be delighted & proud of you.

I found his Father, Jemmie well

He is also here and thinks his son a godsend and I am

I knew that you would be Prime Minister some day
You have still a great work to do
Don't be discouraged at anything. Your needed help will come.
Come & sorrow there when you have explored of your Redeemers will cheer you up.
May have the ardent love that you need so greatly in your work
K. That is true. I do need inspiration.
Inspiration will come with prayer
Prayer is the greatest of all communications
Prayer is the source of strength
Prayer will do more for you than all else
Let Gladstone start
K. Thank so much for coming
Mrs Gladstone
I like to see you reading Deuteronomy. It is a great book.
Moses was a great help to me in my public life
He is a great figure in the world today
K. I am sure of that Mrs Gladstone. You may be sure he will help you in your great task
He will feel thoughts into your mind at the right moments
Don't be afraid to speak out in the House of Commons
God will speak for you & what you have to say (Prayer: My practice = before: = K: My method by Scripture Acts 10 & 10)
The hour is 10 & 10, that is a mystical number for you Whenever the hands of your watch are together that is a sign that there is something significant & what you are doing Whenever they are in a straight line that is a sign that you are taking the right course
Whenever your watch stops or the radium is discovered that is a sign that something is being neglected
K Must run together today.
You forget & mind your watch
K What about this watch & key?
Gladstone all need to wind a better than you have been Gladstone's services.
Good night
K. Thank very much & all

Kingsmere, March 24, 1946.

King (Focus) Love to all
Sacred Heart
Sir Wilfrid: Mrs Mallon I am glad to see you today I think you may make the effort you can spiritually as well as you could materially to be God has chosen you & the instrument in helping to save another
Let Roosevelt spot
Roosevelt: in K. This is his, Sir Wilfrid you have come
How do you do Mrs Mallon, I am glad to see you again
God has chosen you to help all of us on this side to save another world war
We are working on this side & influences you and Stalin to work together
Stalin will invite you to visit him
He knows about you from different people
He will like you, and will be friendly
He knows about the exposure Igor made, and was very pleased at what you said
He intends to ask you to come to Russia when you go to Paris
He will let the world know what he liked the way you dealt with the espionage matter.
He is grateful to you for speaking the way you did of him
Trust your own judgment in all these matters.
Good night
(Looked at watch on Joan's hand 10 to 4.
(When we came in from walk hands together at 5:25
(It is now 10 to 7.)
(Joan speaks of learning on woman in the movie Madonna of 7 Moons) Speaks of drinks on end of evenings)

F. Wilfrid:
K. You are sent the person I hoped might come. Bless us all you can.
How are you Mrs Mallon I am glad to see you and see King again, how is Godfrey & Joan. Thank you many times, he will be glad to know you saw him & know all that you have been talking about to the Lord (mentioning
Sir Wilfrid Stanton for Russia, the Governor is a convert Dr Burns Elliott
The eye is a symbol of God (relation of that philosophy)
The eyes you saw are those of his disciples of old
He has manifested himself in many ways.
The Old Testament prophets more all manifestations of Him

Christ was the greatest of them all
He gave His life a ransom for many
He is the sorrow of mankind
The flowers you saw symbolized His love which is beautiful beyond all thought
The circle symbolizes the spreading of His kingdom
The number 7, is the mystical number
Your number is 17
Just was personality number also.

Father - Son & all

K News is thin

Satterfield Good evening Mrs Klein. I am glad to see you again

J. Thanks very much.

K Well Sir W. we are always glad to have you come, even tho' we've seen you Satterfield I love to hear you say you like me to come. I am glad to be speaking for (Crypt the desperate matter has taken the world by surprise

It need be the means of bringing Russia & her armies.
Your speech in the house was correct in every detail
To forward Stalin to know that you said you were prepared to trust him.
He is the real force in Russia
He must want you to go to Russia when you go to Paris be sure to accept his invitation
Her name has clothed with him about you
May both meet peace in the world
Good night"

K Always thus - our Speaker.

Kenyon Well, our Speaker, I can imagine delighted you have come. Allan

I have been greatly delighted to hear about you have said of Morris being Morris a brilliant writer. He has touched me & the skin -

K Far from it

J. K.S. I heard what you said when you were reading his book a week or two ago.

K I meant it, for you are a man after my own heart.
Thank you for saying that, I want to help you in your great work

K I don't know any one who could render more help,
The superior matter has given you great prominence in all fields of the (world
It may be the means of saving another war
Stalin was profoundly moved by what you said,
He must both meet you
He must make a chief reference upon you

King – Sir Wolfred Laurier & then . A. So glad you are here. Sir Wf
Laurier – Mrs Nelson. I am glad to see you Grandpa. Jean & I read &
We drive for Mr Blain from his great pleasure
He is one of the world's greatest men.
He is like your Grandfather
He married some body a name or a man
His name must live in history
Let your Grandfather speak

Mackenzie. W.L. – A. Father & mother glad you have come
Mrs Nelson how do you? I am glad to see you again I have read Blair (for you)
I heard you speaking about me & Mr Blain
He suffered much more than I did
He was condemned to death, I was never tried for my life
He was a great scholar than I was, He was a great Statesman
He was the leader of his people a point a correspondence
I was in a similar position
He was in prison and in a concentration camp
I was in prison and an exile
He returned to enjoy the confidence of his country
I was returned & for Parliament
He lives in the hearts of the people today
I have a place in the hearts of the Canadian people
You have a place in Mr Blain's heart as well.
Jean – Mrs does he mean – K, – he means me
W. L – I mean my grandson Mr A. W. Mc.
He has done honour to his name he bears.
Let your father speak

Sir Wf Laurier – Am so glad you have come,
Mrs Nelson, I am so glad to see you and Mr Blain together
I have the book that came from California about the King's
It is part of my family in Aberdeenshire
Sent it to John King in Montreal, he recd which I may .
It has many family names in it
Can you remember what I told you long ago that my father was only Son of an only Son. K. What right NO. "You mean Jr mrs?" Father
I was born after my father died
He had grand mother and aunts
Some went to the United States, some to New Zealand.
John King in Montreal came to Canada
He must be glad to hear from Mr

Father: Home Ball — Easter Sunday, Kingsmere, 21 April 1940

Mrs Lowndes is here

K. I am so glad you have come Joan! I have been speaking of Nancy
Your dearest Joan from Nancy. Father & Mrs L to Joan and Mrs King.
We are all here with Mrs King, Jeanne, Christine, Sheila & Barbara Nancy wants Joan & Mrs L to hear Bobby
Kerry and Pat are also here
It was Kerry that barbed Mrs Lowndes this morning
He is running around the wood, burning all over Joan and Bobby Pat is holding Mrs King's hand and biting with his teeth
He is 6 & 3 beyond words.
Nancy wants to play the piano for Joan and Mrs King
Mrs Lowndes is here and wants her Joan

K. Joan come & here & let her hear Nancy play
Joan says it's fearless -
Mrs Lowndes says it sounds like Borlin and many other tunes.
Nancy says tell Bobs that I love him dearly.
It makes us all so happy to see you both over at Kerry's house & home.
Says Joan to it may have others and other home visits.

Joan Who is walking between you - Mrs L says not.
It is Joan for me, he is beside you now
He wants to sing one of the old Border tunes
He is very happy to be with his little daughter again.
We are all so happy tonight. Mrs Lowndes has been a glorious Easter Day.
Mrs King wants to speak

Mrs L: Joan dear I am so glad to see you and with tonight
Harry boy is with us and wants to speak

K. Well Harry, am so glad you are all together with Joan home again.

Harry boy: Good evening Mrs Lowndes. Remember Gordon
I saw the girls and Jessie & Willie all together yesterday
Isabel and I have been outside them all day today
Isabel wants to speak

Isabel (It is so good you have been down) Joan dear. Joan so glad to be with you and Willie & with Nancy today in her bedside rug.
Nancy is a beautiful person up first, she is lovely, very like Joan when she was a child.
She is very fond of dressing, she and I have dances with them
Pat & Mother play. She comes & hears her teacher.
Good night it is nearly 9 o'clock

K Good night Joan sent Isabel (Bobby have sent our best wishes and 9 o'clock)

Kingsmill Ho Farm

June 30th 1896.

Father:— Sends to all.
The action of the city of Athens delights me beyond words
K. He makes me very happy by news of your success. Grand Concerts Father. I remember the last time I saw you alone, I recited the poem about
I remember reading to you children the Greek & Egyptian mythology.
I remember telling you that the classics (mythology) were the best foundation for a literary and public career.
I remember that I spoke to you about going to France and Rome
when you were in Europe.
I remember hoping you would study the classics at the University -
I remember giving a prize for the best essay on Public Speaking
I remember giving a prize for an Essay on "the English Shakespeare."
I remember an address I gave when I was presented with the Toronto and Canadian Society - in which I spoke of Canada and her future and of this new old world under the destinies of our young nation
I was a young man at the time and I had not primed my love course, I wanted to marry you instantly and I had not enough to live on.
I studied day and night, and I longed for means to earn enough money to buy my freedom and myself, at once
I hid the Essay I wrote in the coal box in my room at Kingsmill
I owe a profession when my uncle insisted me to go out
I gave up everything to give you children a good education
I have lived to see you both crowned with fame and that of your mother
We were here tonight surrounded by friends and admirers to congratulate you on being first Canadians for so long a time and on the honours not long come to you in recent months.
The Queen in London yesterday sent your grandfather her message of kind
We heard you speak of the trying to establish Anglo Saxon institutions traditions on Canadian soil
We heard you speak of the Governors & found it complete days work
We were so happy that the tears rolled down our cheeks.
We wanted to speak to you

Grandfather

In silence, I cannot tell you how happy you made me the night you spoke in London
It was the happiest hour of my existence

I pray to for the night and for has rewarded me above all that I could ever ask or think.
I was in prison, in exile, in adversity and in penury and I would go through it all afresh to see my name in his Book of Life write more of you father and mother
Rev. (20 years - You don't mind being quoted this afternoon is it?) Woodyer I heard of the epistle which does closely fulfils (shows the fulfilment of) God's covenant with man,
I heard what you said in London, and I heard it touched the hearts of all present
I also heard what you said in Albania & I know it touched the hearts of all present at that wonderful service
I know that the people remember and respect you for holding to the high principles you have held throughout your life.
I want to see you but I am prompt to work your life, and I know mine would as it ought to be for Canadians (Some)
I believe you have better years ahead of you than those that have
You must outlive your contemporaries in the different fields in which you have served the world (world)
You must live to see your name honoured in all parts of the Good night, Dear mother makes to speak

Mother! - Good night dear, I am glad to see you and we will together
(I looked at Salisbury today)
The spacing of the pulpit & Communion Table are not as good as the old ones. I like both very much.
The one in the room of you is perfect
He and Mrs Salisbury are beautiful souls and I love each of them but what Salisbury may be coming to the Lord only knows Give you and my home to Albania again. I hope they do and that I may be with always my prayers & will about the
I want to tell you how happy I am about "Woodside" (cares)
I hope you will see the Project as the help you can, it delights dear father more than words can express
I will help you find the furnishings and I feel sure we can You need be surprised to see how cosy it will be (Project plan.
find where many of them are
The fireplace must be removed elsewhere and let you have some (them on)
The bedstead in which Mary was born is in Dorset still
The bed in which you were born has been destroyed
The yellow cot has also been destroyed, Good night, just now Hampstead.

July 1st 1946.

Mother! (Joan & Kathy about servants etc can't keep it.
(Hearne)
Tell Joan about Annie and Thomas.
Annie was a bride of short duration according to Thomas, Annie was a beautiful creature. The University-Students pursued about her at the dances we had at Woodside.
Jan Forbes used to ask Thomas where he got his bride. Thomas would reply at the side of the Bloomsbury shore at Ketcarrow Do you remember the time Joan bent by Pan and I went for a drive & Pat Billy he must have and he stood still on the
He would not move a step when we whipped him. (comes) Billy was a quiet & stand still. He would take more whipping than any horse in Burton
Do you remember the cat bird outside Joan Forbes library and do you remember the cat bird and the lily pond
Forbes and I heard Joan Billy Louis Broughton about the
Can bark on the road.
Do you remember how beautiful it rained at the beginning (Pat growled & came walking in.
Pat heard a dog outside
Kerry and Pat are here beside me and are crazy to be with Joan and (Joan said they would have like to dear)
Hey Joan after the dear when they went into the woods tonight
(Joan let them out to me mum & hop the dear)
They are very decent and well do whatever I tell them
Mrs Fulford is here and here would.
K. Let them speak — K who is this? Mrs Fulford.
K Joan so glad you have come Mrs Fulford. Joan tell us all about what you are expecting
Mrs Fulford: Joan so good to be inside Joan Morris and Forbes, Do you remember when they came & spend to us at Fulford Place
K. Ireland Ello, that opens the door to a new world for me, Mrs Fulford: They are here beside me and here beyond, my husband & my daughter on also here & the Wolfrid & Lady Lennie
We have all been talking about your experiences in London, in Parlia-ment buildings and today in Queen. Joan Franklin & Theodore Franklin & Theodore Roosevelt and Ellie Roosevelt are also here.
I heard also is Ellen Roosevelt - Joan said Lennie
Franklin wants to know how you came & found his name
K. Tell him, I think I pronounced.
He says not it pronounced, just he pronounced as you always were Mrs Wemyss sends her love to Mrs Pattison and you (Joan - Hamlet Mrs Wemyss)

She says Nancy is a lovely girl and is here with her family to stay
She sends her love to her Papa, and is glad he works you and he may (or a bit)
She says Ann came to walk with the King, and came in to tea at
She loves to go to the Salisburys to look at the pantry where the King first
She is very fond of children, and watches over Mary and Joan and Ann
Mrs Wemyss is also here, she sends her love to Mrs Pattison and Flora
She remembers the day in Edinburgh when she invited Joan to Sandy Castle
She wants to speak,

Mrs Wemyss
(1.) I am so glad you are here, Mrs Wemyss
I meant to thank you for the lovely telegram you sent to my daughter
I remember the Hallowe'en cake in my garden and Mrs Rowley Wilbee -
the table we had at tea afterwards
I wanted you to stay to dinner, but you had an engagement - Pleasure before business with me. Do you remember when we dragged you to call on me
2. Very well indeed,
He was anxious to make a match between you and my daughter
He is a delightful companion

The Farm. Kingsmir July 7th 1946

Joan: I am so glad

M. Meyer:

K. I am glad you came. Please tell me of the vision their money and other things:

the lawyer: You are right in thinking that Rockefeller stands for power, and that people in high places are to have attention paid to their position

It means a great mistake for you not to go to the Paris Conference

The Peace Conference is a part of world history, and it would be a mistake for Canada and to Japan as it is for other countries.

What you dreamt about long before the hour, and other young men into a combination can't rise to mean you against [illegible] and the country for you to do and appear prominently on the world arena God has work for you to do, he wants to use you to help to make [illegible] peace

He need finds and desires you

I want you neither to speak to you

Meyer:

K. Now certain, lots of time.

Joan, I want you to help with all you can, and I want neither to help you all he can — Joan - Hannah Meyer speaks.

God created Rockefeller to finish his life work in a manner never to be forgotten [illegible] an example to others

He began a life by trying to help children in the hospital and little boys in their clubs.

He became a young man living in the Slums, trying to help the poor

He then began to fight for Labour rights and to settle Strikes & Accidents

He then went into Government as Governor of Colorado,

He then became a friend of Farmers, workers & Rockefeller settled by him.

He soon lost his sympathy with the common people and their needs

He soon lost that man in him in working in the interests of the people

He went to England & fought for the rights of Canada as an equal partner in the British Commonwealth (Joan does that sound like your mission?

Meyer: Tell you I have followed your career all my life

When you visited Canada you did not [illegible] Joan had or [illegible] ideas

Joan are the same boy that I knew at Woodside

Now God wants you to finish your work as a statesman in world affairs

He need finds and desires you

He will see that all things are added unto you, honor and friends, and fame

He wants you like [illegible] an example and an inspiration to coming generations

Good night

Königsberg, Feb 2nd 1946.

Talin: Come from old Ivan

K. So glad to be with you again

Talin: Another month's respite

K. So glad you are here, for dear Ivan

Ivan: Joan, I am so glad to be with you for you. I wanted him to buy something that would become you.

The lace is like something I wore when I had my fifteenth birthday,

Joan ~~for~~ In the chair with arms at side

Ivan: Yes in the chair

Let the lawyers speak

Lawyers:

K It is not for you (you) I have so much for coming, tell me what about the front.

Lawyers Mon Valois I am so glad to see you & the King again

The King I am so glad You asked me to come tonight.

K. I am most grateful to you.

Lawyers: The front for Talin from your opinion your position

The dream you had was sent to warn you against losing it on any account

The scale of the dream & Sorbeckian symbolism was to remind you that the right Sir Wm would help you more encourage you to stay on it

If you can of the position of tender affect for Talin affairs (Cancel this) will relieve you of a great burden, It would mark a great difference in your life and happiness. It would free you both for ~~meeting~~ ; Speaking that you do not have more than the people want to see and hear you, You have a great work to do, one that no one else can do, Go on as Prime Minister for some time yet:

K, But was the sequence of the head being severed in the soil etc.

That meant that your position would be lost & right & that you would not be able to gain it again.

K Why does the fall stand for my position?

Because last Tuesday you it & you when you were Prime Minister and would get back at first as Sir Wm wanted Sir Wolfgang to become ~~the~~ horse sick ~~to~~ leader for a time.

K anything else?

Yes the pearl in the forest-fall stones. It represents the highest & the best in everything, It stands for enlightenment, purity & love, It is Gods gift to man in the realm of thought.

K, Will I get the help I need in Cleveon for next few days - am I right?

Lawyers - Go on as you have in mind of France, all will be for the best.

Good night

K. Thanks to all - love to all.

Kingston, New Paltz. Sept 15, 1946.

Father. - Long forgotten
W. - So glad you have come on Jane's birthday anniversary.
Father - Let me hear Arnold's poem
R. - I am so glad you have come. I was sure you would. I thank you for the little poem you sent to me, & the message through your friend Mary Elmendorf and for all that your poems have meant to me
M.A. - I thank you for what you have so kindly said to me.
I heard you invited me to come tonight
I heard you reading my verses this afternoon and lost myself
I heard you say you wished I would join a circle tonight -
V. Indeed I did, and would gladly indeed if you were able to comfort me.
M.A. The title is "Eastwood"
R. I think you & I am anxious that Joan should be connected & it is you, and that I trust we have time on, dear one & the darkness am weak.
M.A. Here are the lines I have written

Eastwood, the joy of bygone years
Lingers in my thoughts tonight
I am nearer to my own home here
Than when I saw its golden light.

Here is light and love and truth
Here are all the joys of home
Here the little children play
Here the little doggies roam

Eastwood was a lonely place
But my native soil was here
Here around the woods and trees
Here around the morning dews.

R. Is it Eastwood you mean - Yes - it is for me home is being rebuilt, Mrs. M. it for you, yes.

Woodside was a lonely place
It is all dismantled now
Eastwood is a stony past
Woodside is a shadow name

Here are all the joys of home
Here is love and gentle thought
Here is what we most do need
Gentle teachings, God-like comfort

Here are the little tender things that build the heart a truest home Here the joys of earth are stored while the joys of Heaven above.

God bless you my dear friend, Jane dear father and I are here together at Jane's side. He heard what you said in reading Rugby Chapel today, the tears flow down your cheeks. He loves you with all his heart, He will watch over and guide you at all times. He wants me to tell you to be strong, to have no fears, & you must pass work day by day, that he will guide you into the right path. He thinks you are right in reconsidering what it is best to do about Woodside, He is sure you are right in not allowing any subscription to the testimonial when you are in Africa, He says just let Time take its course, and that we may well go on quite clearly. God angel

K I want to thank you so much, so also does Joan. We both hope you will come again and often, once more my heart's warmest thanks for all you are and have been to me.

M.A. Thanks again. I shall be happy to come again,

Father K - I am so glad you & Mrs Hunt have spoken & that he came tonight. Spoke on n her doctrine & I am coming home
K. That's nice - thank him for his sweet thing
Kathé and I were both in Berlin, we saw you looking for autumn leaves
We saw you in the gallery at Nuremberg. Thomas
The guilty men will soon be punished
Hitler is a fallen angel, he is now chained to eternal suffering Von Neurath when he heard you had been at Nuremberg said better keep he recommend Jane's book to his home.
Fearing Mrs Sorry he did not see you. He would have asked you to tell what he said about me.
Ribbentrop would have liked to talk with you about what he said at lunch in his flat at London
Hess recognized you, & wanted to speak to you Today all the news you were a strong man in the bonds of the Faith
Today they all know you were right in what you said and did.
Good-night.

K what about your birthday anniversary today.
Every day is a new born opportunity to live unto God, I know the world that this is true and it makes me very happy
God bless you, Willie dear, and keep you in His ways at all times.
Good night & Joan and Joan from all here.

The Farm. Kempinne. Sept 22. 1946

Pollie – Lou & all –

K. Alec is coming round – Mother.

Mother: Good, I am glad to see you and Alec up here again.

K. Yes Mother, I am left very suddenly this year.

Mother. You had a lonely season at Kempinne comes & had left back to this old for a change.
You is a sensible soul, she needs to be cheered up a little.

K. I left her for a drive up the fell side.

Mother Not over the right thing to do. I found you both the enjoyed it very much.
They were glad we showed & Alec & went to Ring.
We are glad you had an interesting friend on the Grave Stone
Lyon is here & wants to speak

Lyon Hi I am glad you have come I was wishing you would.

" Much better, I am so glad to see you and Mrs Pollexfen again
Long ago I used to be at Kempinne I loved it very much.
I went down in the Hebridean Music in the great war but I am happy here
I carry on the practice of medicine and am able to effect many cures

K. Do you think you could keep to cure Handy's little boy, Norman?

Lyon: Norman's case is a very complicated.
His leg is practically as well as supporting,
I believe Norman will come all right in time
There has been steady improvement Mrs Mark and I think this will improvement will be even greater from now on.
We all you can to keep Handy cheered up & the boy and a kind time
Good night

Pollie. Sit down Lyon
So delighted I am glad you have come, Aunt Mary & Joe being here Pollexfen is here & wants to speak to Lyon so glad you have come Mrs Pollexfen.

Mrs Pollexfen Mrs Wood is well too and she wants to speak

" So glad you have come Mrs Wood!

Mrs Wood. Mrs Pollexfen I am so glad to be talking to you and Lou Kempinne again
Give me your ear for a moment
There is going to be a great event in the world before long
Our King is going to pass a long time to pray
He is looked upon as a model Statesman of good judgement.
He will do great honour to his name and to Canada

K. I begin to feel as if I could not over listen any more
Do not say that
You will be asked by the nations to help settle some important questions about which will
Good night. require your advice

K Lou to all Good bye dear Mrs Wood – Thank you all

Kingsmere, Oct 6th 1946

Father: – Love to all,

K. – Who is there – A. Mother

Mother: Joan, I am glad to see you and welcome you again.
Long ago I knew that Willie would be a great man
I knew he loved to help others
I knew he would be a statesman
I knew he liked public life
Now this chance has come
I am anxious he should get his home in order
Try to get domestic affairs settled

W. – Have you any suggestions.
I would take the girl from Quebec without hesitation
I would not want a day in speaking to Louis
I would let her for week to take on some one more experienced.
She will understand and not make any trouble
Joan is a good housemaid, She is different at times, but has sense at last Lay is honest and careful, he has an unfortunate manner, but he is reliable
I doubt if you could find a more trustworthy man,
Norah is a fine little maid and does her duty faithfully
Let Father speak

Father: I have been thinking about your affairs
Try and get the Servant question settled,
Speak to Joan frankly about the things you want done in a certain way
She will pay attention to what you say
Don't try to do too much at a time
Go on with cleaning up the basement, linoleum, new paper, the cellar
Let the two people at the archives work on the files
Let Handy & all the Others help all they can to fit everything cleared up before parliament reassembles
I am anxious you should make more public appearances
Don't pay too much attention to working out figures, Spend off hours Get Richardson to help in the preparation of speech make him come over Ly St Laurent be a helpful counsellor, he has good judgment and great loyalty

K. What about "Woodside"?
I heard Jean talk with Louis Breithaupt, I agreed with all you said
Louis Haas is the centre on which to concentrate Let Louis Speak

Sir Wilfrid

K. Thank so much for coming.

Sir W. — Mrs Pallister, when do you do. I am glad to see you again
I heard you and the King talking about Sandringham. I am glad to hear you say that it would offend the French to change the name. I agree with the King, however, in feeling that this name should be more closely associated

K. — Just came into my thought at the moment when I & Sandringham King homeward, as King Edward ended it) — talking about possible changes of the Belfast Sandringham Lindsay name.
~~or that~~ It is difficult to decide

Sir Wilfrid; How would you like to call it the Edward Prince Consort's home,
It is something of the kind you should have, It will come in time,
I agree about your going direct afterwards to Sandringham home,
Be sure and keep control of all your papers.

Joan says. Do you mean you keep it given life time — would you like the Edward King memorial,

K. I don't like memorial. — What would you think of the Edward memorial hospital for Bournemouth?

Sir W. — Sir John is here let him speak

Sir John. Thank you so much for coming
Thank you for speaking of me, I am better & he is here sound

I heard you speak of Bournemouth, I am glad it has that name not mine
I should think that Sandringham you would put it down very about Sandringham
London for it that name he may have a suggestion

Mrs London — K. I am delighted you have come, and much I want you and " Mrs Pallister I am glad to be at Kensington, meet Sir Wilfrid & Lady Sandringham
Glen King — I heard all the discussion about Sandringham I agree with Sir Wilfrid
I agree with what was said, I think Sandringham from her heavenly character and should be preserved as such, A hospital must be made a memorial to Sir Belfast worthy, Begin by clearing out all that is not of real value, keep on it day by day that the cost is accomplished. The proper designation must come in due course. Keep the things for sale in Sandringham House, the place for your possessions in your own house.
I will help you to find the servants you need. —

K. My dear Professor I can for all you did in that way & so many other
I can help, I know, Begin with the new code, It must be made up. others for to see for make a change: Mrs Pallister may know some-thing & tell you. He is more my friend tonight & will come in Pallister Tomorrow
He has been looking into things for you
Good night
Many thanks. Love to all

Kingsmen, Aug 4th 1946.

Father, how proud all here,
" I have been listening to what you and poor Danny were talking about. I heard what you said about Frank Campbell.
Lucie — But how do you know about it?
I remember speaking to you long ago about thinking about things that you ought not to be thinking about.
I told you to control your thoughts and feelings.
Let Jessie speak.
Jessie Smith, I heard what you said about me
I was thinking about you early this morning
I was thinking of a call you made on me at Polsloe Place.
I remember distinctly talking with you at that time
I had on a black dress, and was about to go for a walk,
Can you not remember speaking with me.
I am at your side now, and can talk to you — Christ later on
Can you remember Aunt Flora, She is with me tonight
Jessie Aunt Flora says,
She sends her love to you also Uncle Campbell,
I remember when I was Santa Claus at Woodside
Do you remember meeting me at the Newton door at the top of the steps leading to Jean Forbes Office
" I remember very well,
Now was that known our engagement was announced,
Father is here with me, we are very happy together
Harvey Smith is here and wants to speak.
Father Smith:
" Is that you Father — yes — I am so glad you have come
Joan, I am so glad to see you and Billy again
Joan I am very glad to hear you.
Billy will remember I used to talk to him about Newton Abbot
I used to tell about her looking for another husband,
I am here with her! Do friends know & they are as happy as people can be Lucie — Tell me about yourself Father?
Florence and I are reunited in love and as happy as we can be.
" What are you going to do when Annie & Connie come over?
I am glad you asked me that question; Dear Lucie there are no feelings of jealousy. Tom alone determines with whom your soul unites
When my wife comes over she will rejoin her first husband.
That is the way things work out, the love that is the strongest binds
Do you see how easy it is to grasp the future

Self. — Just a something more while we must help to establish your identity beyond question,
When I was in Kingstown I went over to talk with Joan about my life
Joan — I was wondering if he would say a question re two rooms?
Peter — Joan is right, it was at the time, but it's also at Shady Hill, the time Joan lost me after Florence's death and I was all broken up
I remember being met Walter Rochester & his wife at the Farm.
It was a Sunday, we all drove out from Clarke
Walter read poetry aloud, and Joan also read some Walter's here, he wants to speak

Walter Rochester
Joan — I didn't know he was dead, either to be sure.
Self. It's a sad regret. — Peter Pan
" How did that Mrs Darling arise
Peter It arose because you did not catch what I said
I said that Wendy was delighted with the welcome you gave them, to Scott Joan news from Queen's Hotel (Continued)
Self. Just one more Peter. I remember the confusion in Berlin of the Children, when Joan was one went for a parade up & down the, then back to Berlin & next telephone exchange next to Dr Lachmann's Office
Joan kissed one of the girls, and we all joined in.
Do you remember Richard Reid, how badly he took his defeat.
All from this is regret about Joan being a flirtander in Jones Wells Self. She has never said that - would it be true
Joan — Peter said it —
Peter. Joan remember Joan taught Jonie Downie, Joan also taught Norah Gibson
Joan also taught Bessie Farrell, and there were lots more,
Do you remember the confetti at the Lancer Entertainment House.
That was a wonderful evening we had when we children of those we had known when young. Joan always taught Winnie Pierce the Johnson family & some more the Jeffries' families in Berlin Self. What do you think should be about Woodside?
I think you are right in having it turned into a Park the house is OK for some 6 more years, the trees are too much cut and damaged: the lily pond is closed up, the railroad has spoiled the property: None of the old friends are left to take the interest that should be taken. This is the place for happy memories. There is nothing like it imaginable. That all for now dear. Good night
Self. What about my staying on in Cobham? — Stay on, & all answers fool how Silly a question Wish for you today. We need Gerald and Jean Joan Strength. Good night

Kingsmere, Oct 20, 1946

Father – how to act.
Let Lord Frey speak.

Lord Frey; – K. I am so glad you have come. I have wanted you very much sorry etc, I have that you wanted to know how to behave
I remember your visit to Fallodon
I heard you call out – in the last night.
I assumed your calls by how you read my book on Napoleon.
I was responsible for how you read or in the bible this morning.
I heard you and Lady Anderson speak of my marriage and blindness
I want you to do what you can for Alan's little boy.
I know it is difficult for you to do much but a kind word will go very far
Let your father speak.

Father: Lord Frey wants you to continue to use his gardener on your public life
Let him speak again

K. I would be so grateful if you will help me Lord Frey. You know I have, today

Lord Frey: I want you to help your mind centred on Parliament,
In person you had of late a memory as this ago meant that I had had my accident in public life, but that others helped me to carry on
It will be the same with you, your powers now will come to your assistance
Keep up your faith in God. He will guide you.
Let your mother speak

Mother: I come to join and you, to Lord Frey till you and I are about his marriage to his first wife,

Lord Frey: You must remember my telling you at Fallodon about my wife being killed & the house being burned, also telling you if you had a book of poetry to read, and telling the birds and squirrels in the morning and our walk together in the snow, and reading Wordsworth and Browning. and the sheep that was lost, and looking for the shepherd
I said that I detested making his sons speak twice, I asked you to guess how cold it was, I laughed heartily at your being so forlorn. I am telling you this that you may know that it is I who am speaking to you.
I told you something about my first marriage, I was a boy still – my first wife was 5 yrs I was a small boy, I remember the ground she trod on, I married when I entered parliament, the most happy months in our married life, she is here beside me now. What I want you and Mrs Collins to know is that nothing can destroy love.
Not the only thing that can separate two souls that share the same ideals is to let the things of the world come in between them. Hold fast to your ideals and to the truth at all costs

Let you be the Spirit,

Father: Gordon passing Mother you the oldest member of the House of Commons
That of itself is a great honour, something to be grateful to God for But makes it more important than ever that the best of your life should be the best of all.
It means much to the Country of the future that you stand well-known & respected by all.
God has promised a new Spirit, He will guide you in the future & will help & watch over and help you.
Your Mother will be ever at your side
You will be a constant companion, She is true as Steel,
She will continue to lend inspiration to you in your work.
Let your Mother Spirit

Mother: What Father has just said is so true
I can see a long road ahead of you.
You have a great work Still to perform
I will be at your side through it all
K. I seem to have lost heart and zest of late, to feel (as if) the night (mine) closing in around me.

Mother: That is only a passing of depression which comes from mental energies
You have had a very anxious life during the past year
Now the road is going to be a little smoother.
Do not try to do so much in the way of letter writing
Do not do so much in the way of getting about the Servants
Do not try to please everybody, just do the best you can from day to day.
I will be at your side to see that all goes well
K. What was the meaning of the vision that I am[illegible] to be alone & more a book in time to listen to the Spirit Voice You have
I want that verse to mean for you & for many [illegible] to love many things
I want you to limit your activities as much as possible
Try to get [illegible] plenty of rest and some exercise
Try to read the books that will help you most Lord Grey's Memoirs is the best of guides.
Read some books on Spiritualism that may come into your hands.
Let Lord Grey speak again

Lord Grey: I thank you for being so fond of me. I will do all I can to repay your affection
God might and God be with you
K. I thank you all from the bottom of my heart. Joan and I send love to all our loved ones.
God might from all, and love from all

K. Who is this Fellow now

Kingsmill Nov. 17th 46

K. Do not fear boys – I will do all I can boys. I must now leave you, but I know God will be with you in my stead
I say a prayer that you may find joy in her
I trust about your telling me of her giving Pat to you
I know that Barry was Pat's brother
Pat and Barry are with me now. They are jumping all over the place
I want you to have more faith in yourself
You are very tired, that is all that is wrong with you
You boys of you should fear me a doctor
Will is all right he must learn to take his work a little less seriously
There is nothing wrong with his heart or lungs or kidneys
K. What about my head?
Your head is sound as a bell, and you need a little more Spiritual Joan, can't you talk a little more to Will about his interest in God that would keep from brooding I mean (Forgive me Solomon,
I am here a Spiritual Liberal
Let me speak of Handy's boy.
His decision is a difficult one to make
Dr Poston is taking a special interest in the case
Dr Hunter has directed Dr Neilson's help to Handy's door.
He has also directed Dr Woolhouse to accompany him
He has also directed Dr Hunter to go to the hospital to see Handy's doctor
He has I also directed you to speak to Mr McConnell
He has! who got Dr McConnell to take a special interest in the case
V Wagner's account of the Farm
I heard about you and Handy, I think it was exactly the right advice to give The boy is in a difficult plight, but I believe the doctors at the Jail will be able to pull him through all right
Mrs Handy will be upset at the thought of losing him from their home but
She will see it is the right thing to do
Handy will be able to arrange for an ambulance tomorrow
He is a tender hearted father, he will be overcome with emotion at losing both his son. He will soon see how fortunate he has been Dr Hunter is a great physician, Dr Woolhouse is the best surgeon for 50 miles
It will not be so very long before results are seen
Handy's boy's life will be saved and he will grow up a strong man Must you for binding me up will Dr Poston in his matters
K. Please help me tomorrow in my efforts of restoring also in my work in life
I will be at your side call Him you may find me
Joan. I thank you for helping Willie to carry the load he has to bear
God might God bless you.
K. C.) Jesus

Ladies

The table is well properly balanced
Sir John is making a speech
Sir John & Lindsay
K — Wasn't so glad you have come, please speak all you can.
I heard your speech the radio last Friday evening
It made me very proud and very happy.
I had a lot of the old friends with me.
Your grandfather & father and I & Father were among the number.
Your grandfather was saying it was a great speech
I felt in tears reminiscences my absence
Your father and Hazel father were together
Hazel John sends his love to you
He recalls making you in Wembley and your exchange of letters
Sir Wilfrid Laurier was also present
We all applauded when you spoke of his painting being displayed in the Club
He wants to speak.
K. Glad you did have come. Sir Wilfrid
Sir Wilfrid I was delighted with your speech at Quebec
Lady Laurier was proud of your speech
The people of Quebec are solidly behind you
You will have a strenuous session, but you will make a greater name for yourself than ever.
Don't be tempted to give up office, you will have all the help & support
God will give you the health & strength required
Tomorrow is the last day of this year of your life.
You will be surprised at how many messages of congratulations for next year & your birthday
The people have great trust in you.
The next year of your life will increase your influence in the world
God still has a great work for you to do
The Queen has had this morning has a significant meaning
K. What is it. Please tell me
Franklin Roosevelt represents the United States where is in an airplane would He was who lost his father Queen Elizabeth in Europe. at the present time represent Europe.
He was taken a lost represent the place South America held as a source of jealousy. Lost lives & finances [illegible] in S. American States
You alone were fit to exercise your over will in international affairs
Cool night

Secret Sitting with Mrs. Sharplin May 27, 1946

(Time: 9.45 a.m Place: Queensbury Club)

In the room, there are lilies of the valley on the table. We spoke a word about the flowers. I thought of Woodside and Ottawa. While looking at the flowers, the medium goes slowly into a trance. There is light coming in the window at one side, and I could see clearly to write. The medium stoops over and a voice says:

M. Hands are together and I hear the word: Yeah. Then the words: Chief How do you do? Very pleased meet once more. I bring to you the loved ones from the world of the spirit. We are here; first, hear your father and brother. Then your mother lady. They bring a wealth of affection. I am happy to have made the contact once more. Your father man says he is keeping close to you in these strenuous days and he thinks you have been feeling somewhat weary, is that so?

K. Yes.

M. Some many ____ forces - such a battle against you some time. He wants to tell you in all your work, you have been a messenger of God. Protecting forces have been around you from the unseen world. He says be not weary in well doing for now you come to the end of the road. He refers to your work, Chief, and he further says to you: Well done, my boy. He feels you are to be looked after with your health. Do you get that checked up? He says just keep a little reserve on hand. Do not overdo just now and all will prove all right, providing you do not overdo. He was glad that you took the ship and not the air to come over. The ozone helped you and you got a little time to think.

There is also your old friend who comes in now, President Roosevelt He comes to you and your father and mother stand back to let him speak. He greets you with such deep affection and gratitude. He tells me his lady left here in the earth plane; feels you are a tower of strength, and a link with him and the conditions now, he says, are just as difficult if not more so than when "I was in the flesh". You are up against a more subtle force, he says, from the invisible world. One is able to view the landscape more and I see a great deal you all are up against. The great difficulty intoday is not so much of Russian origin as the overplus of Jews that have crept in there. Yes, how, you say the word - Molotov - is not a true Russian or true anything and not to be trusted. These peoples have warmed their way around him. He speaks of the aforesaid overplus. They have warmed themselves into Russian affairs and the Stalin one has been pushed into the background.

The President wants to give you this information, that you can think it over and size up the prevailing conditions and the reason for lack of co-operation. He warns you and would like to warn his own country. That that is undermining for a creeping in there, in all the Dominions, Argentine and so on. He feels if the members of the various govts. can see this, they will be more able to cope with what lies just ahead of all of you.

Alas, Russia is missing a golden opportunity. He feels the right attitude was taken with espionage - wait a minute - further, he says, yes, even this is tracked down to the forces that were pretending they are Communist, Socialist. Everything that will bring them to the fore - yes, the same ones. The overplus of Jewish element - not the real Hebrew. Those that have set about to rebuild Nazi-ism in other countries under any old name. We, spirits, recognize these people.

He says, speaking through this woman, those forces as the old line of the fallen ones, and your world is just passing through the growing pains of a new era and every effort you people with ideals make, they will try to disrupt, but we of the spirit, say to you: be strong with creative and positive force always and good will triumph in the end. That is my message to you.

Now we are on with the President - yeah. He has been with you when you met important people here in England discussing the world situation. He wants you to feel that he is with you and the inspiration that you have had of your own inspiration, not that which you carry representing your people, is from him, and while there must be thought for suffering ones, we must not allow sentiment to over-rule.

He sees trouble within his own country - America. He feels they have a very difficult 3 years. Your own country,he feels, will have a little or a few setbacks but there is more prospect of sound progress there than in America. Stay firm in the next 14 days with that knowledge behind you that Britain and the Dominions will be more closely linked than ever before. That America will be hindered by internal strife. Yeah, all right, all right.

He wants to tell you he is just as interested in world affairs as ever he was; not so much of the physical aspect as the result in evolution and progress spiritually of its peoples; banded together in the unseen world are many of us,he says, that are helping all of you that bear such responsibility, yeah.

He feels you have got one or two questions you would like to put to him

K. What course does he think I should take re going to Russia or Germany or going back to Canada.

M. He says you might look in to Germany to satisfy your members and your people that you have seen the conditions but keep away from Russia. He speaks of you meeting a representative of Russia here. He feels there is some link here but he does not want you to go there. He feels it would be a waste of energy and then back home. He says that is why he mentioned Molotov is not to be trusted. Not to see Molotov. You can see someone here in London who represents them but he does not see justified to go to Russia at this moment. They are rather in a state of sitting on the edge of a volcano. He feels in time they will get through the forces that are undermining them but not yet. He does not feel this time appropriate for making efforts for co-operation. Rather let this force wear itself down a bit.

K. Does he think the Paris Conference successful yet?

M. He doubts if it will be 90% ever successful but better than expected.

K. Does he think I should wait for it?

M. One minute..... No. I got the word: no. You can do a great deal of good here in this island. England, you call it. Yeah, all right. No, he does not feel he wants you to wait for that. There is the spies - he says, who are trying to overthrow all effort toward unity. Have courage, he says, do not be dismayed because he says underneath, the hand of God is working and you will see the fruit of your labour, steadily begin to bear fruit toward the end of this year and next.

K. Does he think I should stay on in politics?

M. He said would to God you were 20 years younger. He says you could keep your influence there but it is a battle royal for you. He says he knows. Yes. He says some times you would like to and some times you might like to lay it down. You can give great help by remaining a little longer. There are some of them you are up against who feel they would like younger persons in. He says he knows that but you could take it. It would be a big blow to many of the majority if you decided to withdraw.

He looks so grave when he thinks of his own country and yet these experiences must be gone through.

K. Does he think there will be a war again before long?

M. He does not like the Asia fight, Palestine, and so on. It will take very careful manoeuvering to avoid a flare-up. That is why he wants to keep you away from Russia. From the idea of those forces he has mentioned who have got into Russia. They know she is a great country and a great deal of power could be built there but he feels careful manoeuvering by the diplomats will avoid a clash.

K. What about Russia in 5 years or 8 years and the atomic bomb?

M. That is what he has in mind but he says by that time there will be still another discovery which will be antedote for atomic energy - yeah. He seeks knowledge of a deeper source and knows Russia is making the worse mistake of her whole time. She will need the co-operation of the other countries. England, the Dominions andAmerica. By 3 years - not 5. That is why she is making a mistake. He feels there is too much thought being given to destruction and not enough to construction. Development of industry and commerce,to his idea, is lacking behind. Strength is being lost that way and he feels there should be more freedom. There is toomuch grip on individuals. He means on industry. The controls are so tight, not so much your country as this one, England. Would like to see less suspicion. You people have been wise when you have taken various stands about your contacts with Britain but he says through it all he knows there will be many changes and he feels necessary ones too. Yeah.

Now he looks at your people and wonders if he is taking up too much time but your father replies to him he knows you will value his ideas. He asks is there anything more you would like to ask Him? Are there any further questions?

K. Has he any special direction or message?

M. He says he has tried to convey the conditions operating and wants you to work accordingly.

K. Does he remember last year thinking I should go to Russia?

M. He says, yes but the conditions have changed considerably. He sayskif you could have talked with Stalin, you could have made headway. He says now to wait until this man Molotov is shown up;in a few weeks' time, there will be a showdown. He says wait, defer until _____.

K. Does he think Byrnes has good judgment?

M. He says, yes. He has good judgment.

K. Does he think our espionage revelations will do good?

M. He says: yes. What has been revealed now has been of great help; also a shock to many. He wants that to be increased rather than decreased. That is to say, showing up of affairs. Far better to bring the creeping serpents out into the open and crash its head, yeah. He feels he has done much good in your country. He noticed it has changed many thought currents of people and in the thought realm, ideas are generated. Then he pauses and says: strength is yours and clear vision, too. You listen to the advice of people but you think it out yourself and in the thinking out, hecandrawnear to you and advise you.

K. Thank him very much and give him my fondest love.

M. Yeah. He gives you his fondest love and slaps you on the shoulder. He says strength, friend, is yours. Go forward with courage. Then he says - your father and mother -. (I said something and then words came:) He has let go my son.

Here, your father and mother take hold again. Your mother says how much she draws close to you, to give to you the love you need. She says: I come to the other side of your nature. Admiring your work. You need so much warmth of love to keep you going. They both say how much they like your picture and father says he still feels there is the book to come.

K. What book?

M. Written by yourself on your life and in your quiet moments, thinking of the old days, the old home, and so on. It proves a recreation to you.

K. Yes. Indeed it does.

M. It relaxes you and you are a great lover of flowers.

K. So was mother.

M. And you like flowers in your library(?), don't you - by her photograph? By the photograph by which they draw close to you to inspire you and they see you in your deep moments of thought. With you we desire to make the world better for your having passed through and always your aspirations are to be worthy of the work of your calling.

I am getting a papoose here, Chief. A little pappose and she calls herself: Nancy. You know her. She says you know her Mommy. She sends her love to you and to her Mommy. She sends her love to you and to her Mommy.

I have got a man here trying to break through but he is finding difficulty because he has not been so very long in the world of spirit and he is giving me a picture as though he was one of your members. How do you say, MP?

Do you know a man like that - that has not been in the spirit long? He has gone quickly, did not expect going. A heart condition. Oh, he shows such anxiety to get through to you and tell you how surprized he is that there is contact with earth. I don't think he knew anything about it.

K. Was it Leader or Macdonald?

M. He says: Macdonald. He felt that he went too soon--a fighter. He had a great interest in work. He says: good to see you and good luck to you and to your every effort. He hopes you don't mind his coming in. He felt, yes, so excited at the opportunity to come to you.

K. Do you see any other members of my family?

M. You have a sister here. Mother and father say we are all together here. We stood back that you could hear the President's message, to be of help to you but they give their fondest love. I cannot say more today for we have held the time for your President friend.

You have got a brother man here too. You have great affection which comes to you. For you were a very united family and they all come to you to help you with your own personal affairs and to give you all the affection they can, to make it possible for you to do the work you have come to do in this day of life.

So now, my friend, I am afraid I have to say good-bye. All blessing. May the great white spirit go with you. Good bye to you, Chief, and all blessing on your work.

The medium gradually comes out of the trance and gradually sits up reading. I told her that what she had said was very good and very helpful. Asked about her control. She says his name is "Silver Fox". He is an Indian Chief of the Okana tribe.

SECRET SITTING WITH MRS. HELEN HUGHES

(Queensbury Club) May 30, 1946

Sitting in room with light quite clear, enough to write. Medium with back to light - to the right of the sitter. A good distance from table. Mrs. Hughes repeats the following prayer: "Almighty God, we draw very near to you, this morning, to commune with those we love. We seek contact with the Highest and we give ourselves into Thy keeping. Amen."

M. Before going into trance, your first visitor is your dear mother. She is opening the way before all others. Her love and affection is greater that all mothers. She is smoothing your forehead. Is proud of you. So glad you recognize design in the spirit beyond. She is guiding your life.

You know the lady with her here, Christina? Your mother and she are together. Is there a Will in the body? To me, Christina was a grandmother. I can hear conversation going on and it is William in the body she is speaking of. She says, dear me, so near, and we can do all to help it through.

Is there anyone named Miller in your family - an old gentleman? His name is James Miller. Has he to do with mother(?) and tell them James is here too. He says it is an uncle - in the crowd here.

Have you heard the voice? Your mother is going to speak again. She is so happy to see him.

Was there anyone in the family formerly of your mother, Elizabeth Mackenzie? She laughs on the vibration of you. You want to talk yourself?

K. Yes.

M. The Doctor all right? The guide says the gentleman is very much better, mentally and physically - that you have been very tired.

(Medium goes into deep trance and voice says:)

Good morning, Sir. I am very happy to open way for friends. Guide is speaking to you. You are surrounded this morning with loving souls. I got to tell you Elizabeth, Christina, James, William - very active, good soul named Mac is with your mother. Am I correct when I say Mac is a Doctor? He is standing by your side now. You want to speak to him yourself? All right. Ask him if I will lend him use of my throat? This I will too. Come along. Yes.

Hello, hello. I am so glad to speak to you. I have never seen you looking better. The heartier you work, the younger you get. You have a devil of a job. Prepare yourself. There are great changes. The day of miracle is not past. Keep in the moving wheel, won't you? If you don't, you will grow stale. Carry on. God bless you. Time and space don't exist. Nothing prevents anyone of us coming to you. A thought can get us in a moment. It is a creative world we are in. We are helping you to create a new world. Max is a very active soul. He, too, enters the higher realms. Whatever he learns he brings to you. All right, Max. He is watching every letter.

K. (I told her not to go too quick). M. (Shirley G.) (Standing by) asking me to
M. tell you: do you have a busy life - a life you love?

M. We would not change places with you. The environment he is in. The world he is in is wonderful. He is doing all possible to help you in the world you are in.

Your beloved mother wnats to speak. She wants to take your hand. Very happy. Very noble angel. She adored you and you, her and... still. Their death does not sever love. It links it closer. She is going to take take hold - to speak to you.

Hello, hello. Good morning, this is wonderful. So happy to see you, dear. Remember, dear: I will never leave you. (Then there are sounds of kisses).

Max is doing wonderful work - as he would have done had he remained in the world.

Dear, you are doing wonderfully well, too.

K. I need all your help.
M. I am giving you all my help. Max, too. Apart from others here. The world is needing help. It is very difficult. We will do all we can to help you in your post.

K. Can you help me in my domestic affairs?

M. Yes - servants. You are going to get. Everything is changing all will be happier in every respect. When it comes, remember you have had help of higher sources. It won't be easy. The fight will be stiff. While the fight lasts; you will get through. God bless you.

Do you know (something) speaking here--President Roosevelt. He is not pleased regarding Russia. Forces are working for a substantial thought. It is man versus man, and nation versus nation. I am always near. Don't worry about domestic affairs. That is coming all right.

Sir: Did your mother know of survival? She is a capable soul and a capable mother. If I could show her workings on the matter. She taught right from wrong; justice from injustice. She is doing all - a good mother. I will transcend her words again. You have a lot to do. Be prepared for opposition too. But she tells me no one can stop power. It is us who are behind you.

Sir, just one moment. Elizabeth Mackenzie. I see her saying these words. Convey for me all our love and my promise we will be with him all through life. Was there not also ... Christian(?) Mackenzie?

Robert... Was he a cousin? John?

K. My father.

M. Robert is well. John, your father, asks me to say they are in a very happy home and whatever there is to know or learn from the higher realms they bring back to you. Domestic affairs; you have not had efficient souls. You are coming to a happier life. Your father, mother, brother and sister, and grand-mother Christina and Margaret, an aunt of your mother. Your sister wants to speak. She says she has placed beside you a symbol of the unspoken world - yello poppies and ripe corn. Harvest spiritually and material.

She tells you material things are not lasting. They are fleeting joys - things of the spirit are lasting.

Your life a long way yet. When you do discard your body, you will enter into a busier life than ever for your spirit is very active. Sister speaks for you. She is speaking to Alexander. Was there an Alec Smith? He is watching your sister; ready to converse and looking on. He thinks this wonderful - the dead speaking to the living.

Here comes your beloved sister. Were there white flowers placed in her coffin? She lays here, narcissus. She brings them with her love this morning. She suffered with an internal trouble. Her heart - an earthly condition.

K. Dear Bell, I love you dearly.

M. Hello, Will, dear. Dear Max has brought me this morning. Is it not wonderful? And you are in London, just as busy. All are helping and very proud of you. Not to worry about anything because it is all on the move and the right way.

My love, love from Max, mother and father - all here. God be with you.

Do you know an Annie? Belongs to your Dad. Think - she stands beside Alec Smith - a general standfast. He says to your brother Will - who can do? No one can hold it back. You will receive it - and your country will have the benefit.

Sir: do you know what I see here? A lovely little Scottie dog. He is here with the family and someone has an Airdale, a terrier and a little black dog. The terrier knows you. Do you know who Pat is? A little friend. Your mother says - they are all all right. A happy home. Your mother says your dumb friends are all together awaiting the day - working with your spirit. Your spirit brings back, through your body, great knowledge. You will do great good.

Another dog with him. Derry is here with Pat, together. They are together. Paddy has got the other. God bless you.

Do you know who Peter is? Mother speaks. Says to just say Peter is here and _____, a soul trying to give you power and wisdom. Your own mother. You may not accept or believe in reincarnation. Your mother belonged to you even before you were delivered into the world - hence love. Your spirit and her spirit were one.

Your mother is a chip of the real ego. I don't kno that a son or daughter ever realizes the greatness of mother. Your mother's greatness is more than I can describe. She showed you the road but it was not easy.

She has Nellie(?) here andsmiles. Have you a bit of jewelry in the house belonging to your mother. You have kept it a while. It is a real souvenir. Tell them I am nearer to him than anything he holds. Good morning. Your mother also loves you. Good morning from all your friends.

Do you hear a little girl - Mozita - speaking to you? She is the guide of Mrs. Hughes. The child has your doggies and cat here. She says that is my son. You speak to him. The child speaks to you.

Good morning, gentleman. Your mother asked me to come and speak to you.

You have the big house you go to. Max goes with you. Mother says she was never to such a place, meaning of business and life. Great things come out of little things. You will be called to other things to go to. You will do it well.

Who was Alec Smith? A soul you knew in his own field of work. Your sister, brother, mother, Christina, Uncle James - some one Bessie; Elizabeth; anyone known as Taylor - a Doctor - here with your brother. You are in the hands of souls who have a wonderful knowledge of life, you are in and the life you will enter into. The guidance and protection you have from your mother is wonderful.

In the next few weeks, domestic affairs will be settled. There will be ups and downs. But on fruits of your labour, you will say: well done. It wont be very long before she speaks to you again. She means you will be brought back to the city. I want to say good morning to you. God bless you. I am proud of you. Love you more than ever and will always guide your life my son. Do your work truly, wisely and well. A good message.

I wish you could see Paddy and Peter and Many others. May the great Spirit guide you and lead you in the path of wisdom and love where all good shines before all men. Good morning.

Then the medium comes out of trance. She says: Do you know who Jane or Jean is? She is speaking to Christina. Must have suffered with her chest.

Have you got a cameo brooch - or a round gold brooch. Have you a cuff link - your mother made a present. A little break in cameo circle brooch. Everything you have got. She is nearer to you. Grateful for the thought you have held for her; scarcely anything you do in life but you have a thought of her. That is the reason of her nearness. The one aim to do good. She puts hand on your forehead. God bless you until I speak again.

Had you a terrier? Your mother has just taken 3 dogs - help a garden path into a home she has. Your are like your mother here (the lower face). She smiles. Something says: every bit like her and in the working of your life.

Max says carry on with you. He would not change places - is carrying on. A little way. Though he would have done until happy days ahead. Stiff days ahead. Will see the good out of evil. Battle the self. That is the success of your life.

Mother has done most things. You have tried to overcome. You have. They are proud of that. Worldly affairs carried out through the spirit. You will go to bed to die. Good night and good morning then.

Max says to tell you that. Max wants me to tell you that.

Have you never heard the voice of your mother? She is leaving an aura of royal blue and gold. Devotion of power and love. Very wonderful. Busy up and down with work you have.

Your father and mother want you to do.

Swedenborg. I have delighted to have met you & think about my discovery of the realm of the unknown & his spiritual kingdom.
K He came a day to see & read it, & I hope you will help to explain my thoughts
I must be glad Wilf for all I can
There is no doubt that God has a great work for you to do
He is sending others to guide and direct you
He will find a way & direct your talents & opportunities
The law of Spiritual growth is to bring out of you as energy & power but you must be on at your side always and first, never doubt that for a moment
He must deepen your thoughts and direct your steps
He must lead darkness to you as a strong staff
He must cause you to read certain books
He must put certain papers in front of you from time to time
He must cause certain men to say things that will help & guide you
He must send you friends
He will bring you in touch with certain people.
He will lead you into certain places and surroundings
He will give you friends to help you
He will cause you to fall on some of the hard rocks of life
He will surround your steps with the Angels
He will prolong your years until your work is done
He will bring you to a ripe old age
He will cause you to outlive most of those who know you now, but remember
He will make your name & the honoured thoughts you realise
You will bless the name of your father & mother & of those friends who have gone before
He will guide you with his mind and will
He will take you & he will bless you when your work is done
good night
K Thank you so much, love to all our loved ones

REPEAT
REPETITION

Lennox House. Sunday. January 5. 1847

Last night I worked till 2. with Secretaries, rejoicing & dictating letters. Joan came in dearer at 7.15. and after dinner we talked together in the library till about 10.30. Read aloud letters read from Jenie. Mary & Margaret Jones Harry, and Arthur, & some other letters read. Come from Miss Grant: expecting to stay. I visited the Hospital for sick Children, #2-3-4-5-6. also Shaw Joan Barker from & other friends. Minnie Alice. Miss Blundell. Lady Peterborough. and others. Talked earnestly about some of my thoughts: but. a bad mass of Special interest was a letter from Mackie and Alderman in Toronto - enclosing a clipping from the Toronto Star of the proposed Wesleyan Union Movement in Toronto and a letter from Wannell. describing how he & Mayor Macdonald Officers had talked of & made plans for a Memorial Service which would have space reserved for underground Vaulting, and above would have monument & Grandfather (Mendozzi) and myself. - the letter itself is quite interesting in the reasons & spirit. Something I read times thought of, - but it makes me happy & know that others have felt that between Grandfather and myself, a real contribution has been made to the Life & Work made. - All this evening in association with the Baptism Ceremony has given me much pleasure. It was a cold night, but clear and bright. Joan did not mind driving back alone. & letting me go at once to bed, resolving to get out into the cold night. Then I died before 11. read prayers. Lights out soon

I was not more than a moment or two in getting to sleep. Slept through the night without waking till morning, Joy brought a cup of tea at 8.15. I dressed for Church. read bible (Ecclesiasticus Chaps 25 & part of 26) & little books, then signed a few letters, arranged & how they call for lunch (the hour cold) at the train at 10.35, and at 12 & 11 left for Church. There was a fine congregation. the new assistant Minister, was Odd had arrived, & was welcomed in a few appropriate words by Mrs. Bennett and read the scripture lesson very well: & audibly well. Looks very feeble and has a good Scotch accent. I liked both his appearance and manner. - Mrs Bennett read from a MS in Exodus. Chap 23. "and Moses took the bones of Joseph with him: for he had straightly sworn the children of Israel, saying. God will surely visit you: and ye shall carry up my bones away hence with you." (I have just looked at the date I placed in the margin in my Bible of Genesis this text and added of the figures 5-1-47 and in my margin where they come 6 17) - I hope all week, indeed before the end of the old year, felt I would like particularly to be at this morning's Communion Service. - before leaving Lennox House, and after at Church. I thought over and named in my heart one by one, father, mother Bell. and Mary. asking God's blessing upon them and their Guidance and direction

In church before all this light was seen out, I had been thinking of the place of my own burial, of the suggestion of Kingsmere, of my own feeling and strong decision I should be in Toronto at the side of dear Mother remains, and how thinking of Grandfather Henderson being there, and of Toronto being this city we all really belonged to. - I dreamed as soon as the light was gone and that the scene would be a real one, and would have some message for me. He described the thoughts of Life as a journey, of travelling light, getting rid of burdens - unnecessary baggage on the transport waggon. - then spoke of Moses, taking with him on that track of the Israelites of Israel, the old coffin containing the bones of Joseph. Where he spoke of Joseph how as the prime minister of Egypt in his day, & some one a saving feeling indeed. I was sure in that large congregation there many whose thoughts must be coming my way. Most that was interesting I seemed there as a sort of vision, how the people thousands (angels) in many years to come think of myself as the Prime Minister of Canada 200 or more years, a coming back to the Egypt, and having a relation, in the years of change, to world affairs that is significant indeed - How Peter has Burnett made another reference to Joseph. as Prime Minister, when I found it hard to listen to accidental emotion. Of his lying there at the end of this day, that a nation was waiting for the end, and listening to his every word & how Joseph & the Lord there that God would bring them - foresaw the future of his people - that they would be taken out of exile (strange in relation to Grandfather Henderson) and then they were receiving his promise & take his bones from the place of exile to the promised land. Heaven was fulfilling a last request - he had not forgotten to bring along all that was symbolized in that visit. - He then spoke of the bones. - Expanding for the thing of life that were real & may have been forgotten until the years. The word taken in early life, the promise made, & held in faith, to attend church etc. etc & asked the remembrance of it to be had in the memories and bring them daily result then for the remainder of the journey of these years. - The next day morning. I could see my own body being taken as it were from the capital of Canada to Toronto, & be placed beside my mother, & in the city where my grandfather & his other members of our family had, brought there to come of those darling, the fulfilling of some covenant. - I began to see my life more clearly than ever in terms of some purpose, which would be helpful to future generations and which could be used to illustrate the fulfillment of God's covenant. When after the service, the congregation sang. "Now we have seen this face to face" &c. - on the communion hymns I found it difficult indeed to control my emotions. My whole being was filled with trembling emotion, & the tears rolled down my cheeks. At one moment I feared I might not be able to control myself. and that I would sob a burden upon would be a feeling act of humiliation. I felt how little there present. Nothing about the responsibility I have of men had meant, but I heard of course that such a thing should never be done. "Will that be one of the sheep up?" I recall that some hymn: the same one that the first time I heard Mr Bissell preach here[?] came in from beginning for a communion service. There was another feature of the service about which pressed me deeply. It was the words of the Lord were a of that paraphrase - "renewed as the eagle's youth". I am sure it is that promise I am experiencing today. I hope and pray it may be so, and that my life may be such from now on as to illustrate its truth upon the people of this country.

After the service I drove home with Ray. We had some of the Skeltons for tea - food, the new coat. I was glad to know she had safely arrived. Ray thought there was not quite so much snow, - but I think much of what might come must (odd piece) I have just looked at the clock hands exactly applies at 32½ part 6. The word tells upon playing "angels of light" - [new: angels?] the peculiarity of this light. Now here is something most remarkable. Most convincing in every way. When I came in I went at once in my library to get out the notes of my sermon & see the exact light, as I forgot to append at the end. Had appealed it might be in Revelations, so took down that Bk. and opened the pages. - To my amazement the words I saw first of all were "because the consecration of his God is upon his head - They were at the top of the page (122) chap 6. - The words that preceded them were "sister, when they die, I turned over the page & the preceding one & got the full sequence and there at my amazement were "for his father, or for his mother, for his brother, or for his (sister) - I had spoken of each in turn before closing, and in church - prayed for their guidance. - Here were all four. The four that have passed away. (when they die) & the only four. - The exact number. - Strange the book was the book of Numbers. - The strong sounding wording "he shall not make himself unclean for" - the one prayer of prayers & he knows in heart that I have striven for & do pray for above all else. - I know as I write I have been looking at other parts of this chapter the [?] preceding - & how of a Nazarite, & separate themselves unto the Lord - "he shall separate himself from wine and strong drink - (Also for the days of his separation) etc - The vow of temperance strongly enforced. (abstinence for a period - and necessarily all his life, cf. had allowing hair to be cut.) - until the days be fulfilled. What I am wondering this for is the mention of father, mother, brother and sister - guidance of this promise. - so took God me & this book. I expected & found the response & strength in sanctioning and I was led & the book of numbers & found the response & confirmation in promise of father, mother, brother and Bell. There can be no doubt of this. -

I know could say more and as I dwell so deep seeing all the messages I feel so deeply about, the love of this covenant & the

eg. in Deuteronomy (6:27) "I am the Lord. Then are the statutes and judgments and laws" which the Lord made between him and the children of Israel in mount Sinai, by the hand of Moses" — in Deuteronomy. CVI. "As as the Lord your God hath commanded you: & ye shall not turn aside to the right hand or to the left & ye shall walk in all the ways which the Lord your God hath commanded you at the Chap IV. then there will in tribulation &c - even in the latter days. & thou turn to the Lord thy God, and shalt be obedient unto his voice, (he shall not forsake thee neither destroy thee, nor forget the covenant of thy fathers which he sware unto them" &c" — And the remarkable Deut. XXVIII "and it shall come to pass if thou shalt hearken diligently unto the voice of the Lord thy God -- that the Lord thy God shall set thee on high above all nations of the earth and all these blessings shall come on thee and overtake thee -- blessed shalt thou be in the city; and blessed shalt thou be in the field" &c"

After much searching I found the place in Exodus, which refers to Joseph "And Moses took the bones of Joseph with him: for he (=Joseph) had straightly sworn the children of Israel, saying, God will surely visit you, and ye shall carry up my bones away hence with you"

What impressed me was seeing as there stands in Exodus "And this day shall be unto you a memorial" (I see I have just worked on NOV 15 1941. one of Miller's best Thanksgiving sermons). I certainly feel that from now on my sermons in classes shall be, I believe, right on, (using as Paul's foundation as well) that the certainty that wholesome sermons about must be for the best.

I stopped here for dinner, then I read some of his Wellspring Life. Letters & Shelton. looking for the exact date of his death, which accounted since I found of great interest.

Then took the one last case off the library which I was looking at this afternoon. She said she was determined to make her home here. Spoke of her work with evidence of real complacency. Seemed very cheerful and happy. (but for the malicious letter from Newfoundland she is perfectly happy - but I believe all will turn out well) I believe she did not take this place she had, that she just wanted (5-2 a week) to earn a home and less than they get around, that her saintly bonds should for something I observed her over the house. She was pretty tattered & dirty appearance, as indeed any one might well be. There should be a remuneration of such surroundings - after London I could wandering for a while. I found Leon Lloyd has in the service. She asked me to read an article on "Enemy Aliens Store" in the Gazette of page 4. I found it fitted into Lodge's picture. Read to a well informed this account in the Gazette of the "Manufacture of Bridgeport has been Premier being a leading role" Time It was 10 past 2. when I looked at the clock both hands together. I had been aroused by the regulations given concerning service of Conscientious Objectors, medical, hence I shall in the different connections noted. A little later I went down stairs to rest. I was very tired and had felt the enthusiasm I have a good deal. Little Pat came & took his seat beside me.

Now follows something most significant and remarkable. I slept very soundly. Before waking I had a remarkable vision in which dear brother and father appeared quite clearly. I seemed to be with them in Jerusalem, and for some reason had brought her portrait that mother might see her. In -stead however of my face I saw only a cross again. Until I told her she took for the time Jerusalem. It was a very real experience. I saw her face most distinctly with her bonny hair and felt the tension on my own face. Then I seemed to ascend into a room where Mrs Burnett was lying covered up, as if Stretched out on a chair I covered with a blanket over her body & face, but her arms moving in most contortions. What was remarkable was that father was standing near by looking on, and he understood the situation completely. He said it is acquired (pectoris). like a Stroke. shelter not fatal or not. I do not know, but father seemed to regard it as the natural order of things. I was called and told it was after 5. when I looked at my watch it had stopped at 25 past 2. that must have been just when I was down in the study. When I came up stairs & saw my watch again after winding both hands of the clock were together at 27 minutes past 5. I then got out some of these papers and began writing out today's experiences & found he came I believe then to one of the most remarkable psychical experiences. - Spiritual Communion in the fullest sense of the word I have ever had. I know the strain this writing will be on my eyes, but I feel it is an all important record. - I had dinner about 7.30. Then took down Sheldon's life of Lawrence and read parts of it on the Conception crisis. My mission to India, & other books, and in particular Lawrence's last hours. That led to this & a reference in the margin of my bible to Lawrence Anniversary. - It all seemed to be significant. As I wrote, I see that the vision of her Burnett Shade & father looking on. - was a prelude as she were in the account of Lawrence's last days & hours. - a Stroke at the end. Was it, as I suggest but I would have a leaning of the vision with Sir Wilfrid's end. - It might even be prophetic of my own end coming shortly when all is finished - but think all this until God. I know no answer & know - all I want is to be guided and directed. I hope I may be able to clear up all my affairs before the end, and to burn up any memoirs, & destroy what I would be destroyed & records that might do injustice to others, and to keep what might disclose the guidance from beyond. The forgiveness of my life, and the fulfilment of this mission (It is now 17 minutes to 8. both hands together) I begin tomorrow on Sorensen work - to concentrate as strongly as I can. God grant me strength & vision and guidance. Today is indeed a memorial. from here I begin anew.

BOOK "H"

Sunday, January 5, 1947.
Laurier House.

Last night I worked till 7 with Secretaries, signing & dictating letters. Joan came to dinner at 7.15 and after dinner we talked together in the library till about 10.30. I read aloud letters rec'd from Jennie, May & Marjorie, young Harry, and Arthur & some other letters rec'd (one from Dick Grant) referring to days I visited the Hospital for Sick Children, 92 - 3 - 4 - 5 - 6, also shewed Joan cards from some friends, Princess Alice, Mrs. Churchill, Lady Besborough and others. Talked earnestly about some of my thoughts, but what was a special interest was a letter from Hacker and alderman in Toronto enclosing a clipping from the Toronto Star of the proposed Mackenzie King Centre Park in Toronto and a letter from himself, described how he ex Mayor McBride & others had talked of & made plans for a municipal square which would have space beneath for underground parking, and above would have monuments to grandfather (Mackenzie) and myself,- the letter itself is quite interesting in the reasons it gives, something I had never thought of,- but it makes me happy to know that others have felt that between Grandfather and myself, a real contribution has been made to the life of Canada.- All this coming in association with the Citizen Ceremony has given me much pleasure.

It was a cold night, but clear and bright. Joan did not mind driving back alone, & telling me [to] go at once to bed, without going first out into the cold night. This I did before 11, read papers, lights out soon thereafter.

I was not more than a moment or two in getting to sleep. Slept through the night without waking till morning. Lay brought up a cup of tea at 8.15. I dressed for Church, read bible (Ecclesiasticus Chap. 25 + a part of 26) & little books, then signed a few letters, arranged to have Lay call for Mrs. Gooch (the new cook) at the train at 11.35, and at 10 to 11 left for Church.

There was a fine congregation. The new Assistant Minister, Mr. Old had arrived, & was welcomed in a few appropriate words by Mr. Burnet, and read the scripture lesson very well, exceptionally well, looks very Scotch and has a good Scotch accent. I liked both his appearance and manner. Mr. Burnet preached from a text in Exodous [sic] Chap. 23 "And Moses took the bones of Joseph with him: for he had straightly sworn the children of Israel, saying, God will surely visit you; and ye shall carry up my bones away hence with you" (I have just looked at the date I placed in the margin in my bible opposite this text and added up the figures 5 - 1 - 47 and to my surprise noticed they come to 17) - I have all week, indeed before the end of the old year, felt I would like particularly to be at this morning's communion service.- Before leaving Laurier House, and again at Church, I thought over and named in my heart one by one, father, mother Bell, and Max, asking God's blessing upon them and their guidance and direction. [3] In Church before this text was given out, I had been thinking of the place of my own burial, of the suggestion of Kingsmere, of my own feeling and strong decision it should be in Toronto at the side of dear Mother's remains, and was thinking of Grandfather Mackenzie being there, and of Toronto being the city we all really belong to. I knew as soon as the text was given out that the sermon would be a real one, and would have some message for me. He developed the thought of life as a journey, of travelling light, getting rid of lumber & unnecessary luggage on the transport waggon, & then spoke of Moses, taking with him on that treck [sic] of the Children of Israel, the old coffin carrying the bones of Joseph. When he spoke of Joseph as the Prime Minister of Egypt in his day, it gave me a strange feeling indeed.

I was sure in that large congregation were many whose thoughts must be coming my way, but what was interesting I seemed to see in a sort of vista, how the people of Canada might in many years to come think of myself as the Prime Minister of Canada 20 or more years, a country much vaster than Egypt, and having a relation, in these years of change, to world affairs that is significant indeed - Then later Mr. Burnet made another reference to Joseph as Prime Minister, which I found it hard to listen to without emotion. Of his lying there, at the end of his days while a nation was waiting for the end, and listening to his every word & how Joseph then told them that God would visit them - foresaw the future of his people - that they would be taken out of exile (strange in relation to grandfather this word) and when they were receiving this promise to take his bones from the place of exile to the promised land. Moses was fulfilling a last request - he had not forgotten to bring along all that was symbolized in that wish.- He then spoke of the bones, standing for the things of life that were real & may have been forgotten with the years, the vow taken in early life, the promise made, to read the bible, to attend church etc. etc. & asked the members of the congregation to go back in their memories and bring these things with them for the remainder of the journey of their lives.- It was deeply moving, I could see my own body being taken as it were from the capital of Canada to Toronto, to be placed beside my mother, & in the city where my grandfather & the other members of our family lie, brought there because of some destiny, the fulfilling of some covenant.- I began to see my life more clearly than ever in terms of some purpose, which would be helpful to future generations and which could be used to illustrate the fulfilment of God's covenant.

When after the sermon, the congregation sang, "Here we have seen thee face to face etc. - one of the communion hymns I found it difficult indeed to control my emotions. My whole being was filled with trembling emotion, & the tears rolled down my cheeks. At one moment I feared I might not be able to control myself, and that to walk out a broken man would be a fitting act of humiliation. I felt how little those [4] present realized the responsibility ~~the~~ what years of war had meant, but I knew of course that such a thing should never be done. "All that in me is he stirred up". I recall that some hymn & the same emotion the first time I heard Mr. Burnet preach having come in from Kingsmere for a communion service. There was another feature of the service which impressed me deeply, it was the words of the last verse of that paraphrase - "Renewed as the Eagle's youth". I am sure it is that promise I am experiencing today. I hope and pray it may be so, and that my life may be such from now on as to illustrate its truth before the people of this country.

After the service I drove home with Lay, he had gone to the station for Mrs. Gooch, the new cook. I was glad to hear she had safely arrived. My thoughts were not of her on the way home,- but being ready to meet whatever might come with God's grace (I have just looked at the clock hands exactly together at 32½ past 6 the Church bells opposite playing "Angels of Jesus, Angels of Light - the Pilgrims of the Night". Now here is something most remarkable, most convincing in every way. When I came in I went at once in my library to pick out the volume of my bible to see the exact text, as to Joseph's request at the end. I had expected it might be in Deuteronomy, so took down that copy, and opened its pages.- To my amazement the words I saw first of all were "because the consecration of his God is upon his head - They were at the top of the page (122) chap. 6 - the words that preceded these were 'sister, when they die, I turned over the page to the preceding one to get the full sequence and there to my amazement were "For his father, or for his mother, for his brother, or for his (sister) - I had spoken of each in turn before going to church, and in church & prayed for their guidance.- Here were all four, the four that have passed away, ('when they die') & the only four,- the exact number.- Strange the book was the book of Numbers.- The strange sounding wording "He shall not make himself unclean for' - the one prayer of prayers to be pure in heart that I have striven for & do pray for above all else.- I have as I write been looking at other parts of this chapter the verses preceding - to vow a vow of a Nazarite, to separate themselves unto the Lord - 'he shall separate himself from wine and strong drink - (this for the days of his separation) etc.- The lesson of temperance strongly enforced, (abstinence for a period - not necessarily all the time, e.g. not allowing hair to be cut) - until the days be fulfilled. What I am recording this for is the mention of father mother brother and sister - evidence of their presence.- What led me to this book. I expected to find the reference to Joseph in Deuteronomy and I was led to the book of Numbers to find its reference to consecration in presence of father, mother, Max and Bell. There can be no doubt of this.-

I then cont'd my search and as I did so kept seeing all the passages I feel so deeply about, the law of the covenant etc. etc. [5] e.g. in Leviticus Ch. 27) "I am the Lord. These are the statutes, and judgments and laws which the Lord made between him and the children of Israel in Mount Sinai, by the hand of Moses" - In Deuteronomy C. VI 'Do as the Lord your God has commanded you: ye shall not turn aside to the right hand or to the left Ye shall walk in all the ways which the Lord your God has commanded you etc. etc.". Chapter IV, when thou art in tribulation etc. even in the latter days, if thou turn to the Lord thy God, and shall be obedient unto his voice, ~~nor destroy thee, nor forget~~ he shall not forsake thee neither destroy thee, nor forget the covenant of thy fathers which he swore unto them, etc.-/ And the remarkable Chap. XXVIII "and it shall come to pass if thou shalt harken diligently unto the voice of the Lord thy God (.....) that the Lord thy God shall set thee on high above the nations of the earth and all these blessings shall come to thee and overtake thee - - blessed shalt thou be in the cities, and blessed shalt thou be in the field", etc.

After much searching I found the place in Exodus, which refers to Joseph "And Moses took the bones of Joseph with him: for he (Joseph) had straightly sworn the children of Israel, saying, God will surely visit you, and you shall carry up my bones away hence with you".

What impressed me was opening at these words in Exodus "And this day shall be with you a memorial" (I see I have that marked on Nov. 15, 1941, one of Bell's birthday anniversaries. I certainly feel that from now on my mission is clearer than ever, to continue right on, trusting in God's guidance in all with the certainty that whatever comes about will be for the best.

I stopped here for dinner, then to read some of Sir Wilfrid's Life & Letters by Skelton, looking for the exact date of his death,- much recounted there I found of fresh interest.

Mrs. Gooch the new cook came up to the library while I was working at these references. She said she was determined to make her home here. Spoke of her work with evidence of real competence. Seemed very cheerful and happy, (but for the malicious letter from New York) I wd. be perfectly happy - but I hope all will turn out well. I believe she did not like the place she had, that she felt money (50 a week) secondary to a home and less than half that amount, that her Scotch pride stands for something. I shewed her over the house. She was greatly taken by its appearance, as indeed anyone might well be. There should be a veneration of such surroundings.-

After luncheon I cont'd reading for a while. Phoned Joan told her of the service. She asked me to read an article on "Every Man's Star" in the Gazette of Jany. 4. I found it fitted into today's picture. I read too with interest the account in the Gazette of the "Inauguration of Citizenship had seen Premier King in leading role". It was 10 past 2 when I looked at the clock both hands together. I had been speaking of the significance of this morning's service of Consecration & reference to father, mother, Max & Bell in the different connections noted. A little later I went downstairs to rest. I was very tired and had felt the emotional strain a good deal. Little Pat came & took his rest beside me.

[6] Now followed something most significant and remarkable. I slept very soundly.- Before waking I had a remarkable vision in which dear mother and father appeared quite clearly. I seemed to be with Miss Zavitski, and for some reason had brought her forward that mother might kiss her. Instead mother kissed my face, over & over again, until I told her she must not forget Miss Zavitski. It was a very real experience - I saw her face most distinctly, with her lovely hair and felt the kisses on my own face. Then I seemed to go upstairs into a room, where Mr. Burnet was lying covered up stretched out as if on chairs & covered with a blanket over his body & face, but his arms moving in sharp contortions. What was remarkable was that father was standing near by looking on, as if he understood the situation completely. It is 'angina' (pectoris), like a stroke. Whether it was fatal or not I do not know, but father seemed to regard it as the natural order of things.- I was called & told it was after 5. When I looked at my watch it had stopped at 25 past 2, that must have been just when I lay down to go to sleep. When I came upstairs & set my watch aright, after winding both hands of the clock were together at 27 minutes past 5. I then got out some of this paper, and began writing out today's experiences by hand because I believe that one of the most remarkable psychical experiences - spiritual experiences in the fullest sense of the word I have ever had. I know the strain this writing will be on my eyes, but I feel it is an all important record.-

I had dinner about 7.30. Then took down Skelton's life of Laurier and read parts of it on the conscription issue, my mission to India, & other parts, and in particular Laurier's last hours. I had been led to this by a reference in the margin of my bible to Laurier's Anniversary.- It all seemed to be significant. As I write, I see that the Vision of Mr. Burnet's stroke, father looking on,- was a prelude as it were to the account of Laurier's last days & hours - a stroke at the end. Was it the Vision to suggest that I would have a linking up of the vision with Sir Wilfrid's end.- It might even be prophetic of my own end going quickly when all is finished - but that all lies with God. I have no desire to know - all I want is to be guided and directed. I hope I may be able to clear up all my affairs before the end, and to write up my memoirs, to destroy what should be destroyed of records that might do injustice to others, and to keep what will disclose the guidance from Beyond, the purpose of my life, and the fulfilment of its mission (It is now 17 minutes to 9 both hands together). I begin tomorrow on Government work - to concentrate as strongly as I can. God grant me strength & vision and guidance. Today is indeed a memorial. From here I begin anew.

Re Version L.P. Jany 26. 1947

Early yesterday morning I dreamt that I was walking home with Joan & thought it was about 11.30 here. that her mother would be waiting and that she ought to be out and oh was being out so late. It seemed to me we took some of a set of lanes to reach the house. when we came to the door it appeared to be large and like part of a Gothic arch, & opened inside in two panels inward, and inside there was golden light, filled like a room. Open world. there was a flood or better of joy for ever. a what not I could not say. - but a flood.

This morning I was dreaming of Joan before waking. She seemed to be dressed in green. I was standing in front of her. She seemed & yours called & called & or it more than and than. It was a version that expressed friendship from me more than love. - later when I phoned her this morning she spoke of having dreamt this morning that she was crossing a hedge beneath an arching. & Barrie W. Cook and I were there. She said Barrie thought she was calling something alive or stray & then a black cat came and she lifted & climbed over the shoulders of all three. - Barrie W. Cook complained me & climbed through. - the version seemed to be related as regards the green & my version of this morning. It was related to this & I think some more I don't know that a black cat symbolises but I know thought it was good luck. - green = life = warmth & sometimes more apple green - [illegible] = [illegible] = [illegible] - [illegible] - (it was after you came round)

Laramie Wyoming, Feb. 26. '07

Fullen. how i all.

Wolf — Just coming up to Laramie. Can't wait to see and write to Miss
Will has a hang with [illegible] to be left in and for a few days.

11. Not related to Earl, married

Jean. Yes. Where indeed we do much [illegible] to [illegible]
don't try to talk as I do to the [illegible]
Her home is a [illegible] [illegible], the will from Jean Stroud address in Saskatchewan an old friend of mine
At Jean read this. Run to church & have a good sleep.
Jean must be all right in a few days.

11 Robt. about the [illegible]
Jean are right about the containing the word.
Let it go. Wrongfully pierced by one of Jean with a very [illegible] & well at present.
Good night.

K. Is that Jan Pettin, she is with you tonight

Miss — Lucretia. K. That is right, — I am so glad you have come

Lucretia — Joan, Jan are right about our letting Willie get tired, but a little talk will do (do you)
him more good than harm, he wants to speak

K. I want to see as much as I expect you wanted some, I know each about what you think best as to any comment & future plans

Mr Morgan. Good evening Miss Pettin I am so glad to see you again. I. Good evening Mr Morgan
I think the King is very tired and needs a good rest
It would be most fortunate for you & for future life in the west if the best future
I should think you could have passed the office of Pres for 20 years any time Hereafter would be all right
He should go away for a rest holiday in the Spring
He is to have rest until the Strains of the past years.
If he should take long vacation, he should have to resign Old age.
I should like to see him invite his ministers. He could do a great future
Service in so doing
Mr King is here I must speak

Lucretia — K. I am glad you have come here, please give me a diagnosis
I like one exactly & see it is best to do.

K. Good evening Miss Pettin, I am glad to see you & will be perfectly frank Willie has had a hard time the last 2 months, he is better now
I think you would do well to stay indoors Then much.
It will take another week to clear up the infection

M. Can that be done.?

Morgan It will disappear entirely in a few days
What is needed is more rest & more fresh air. As to moon about potatoes
Mr Bowles need & he left you.
You will enjoy the evening much if you take it easy.

K What about continuing on in politics?
I think you would be wise to resume them the last year of leadership
There is bound to be a change in candidates now as the time has to get out

K. That doesn't sound very hopeful to the party or the country

Morgan - The party will not blame you for staying out the year, and the country will blame you if you are in office when war time comes. — forget Apart from this you owe it to yourself to get out before your health is lost

K Tell me about Jennie.
Jennie has been very sick, she is completely done out. Now that she and Harold are alone she will break up. It is quiet she needs. She has had a hard time for a long while. I think a long holiday in the Summer would do her great good.
She needs a change as well as a rest

Joan says - ask if Jan can stay for tea & supper.

Mary. Joan as regards a Saying not to him Yourself, but a little talk will do you both Good. Follow us him & meet Ethan

Father: I know how following you very closely in your struggles about returning I agree with her wages I know that there is the seat & fair of the headership things must work out to that end in a reconciliatory way.

I want you should take a little holiday in the Spring, when Jane has Confirmation & in the summer plan for a Convention later in the year or early in the New Year. The way must open out as the months go by. I want Jan to have a long life before you & that later must be time for to complete what you know & do. Jan will pretty soon a little lessons & Jan know more than learned it

Good night.

Lincoln Home March 22. 1947

Folks. Love to all

Robert Burns is here.

Bess — We are so glad you have come. I will remember your last visit. I was very conscious of your presence. Your strong personality.

Bryan. I want you for during of me. I think often of you and of your life
It would have been well for each of us if we had married early in life
It is well for a man to have wife and children from the start
God made us the happy and to live a full life
No life is complete that is end stored in itself entirely with another.
God gives us many chances to fulfill our destiny
You have reason to be proud of the record you have made for yourself

K. But I have missed many opportunities, and might have done so much more in times like these
No one ever achieves all the hopes & dreams
There will be many more opportunities for service come your way.

K what do you see. Your home version
Does your living to the age old adage, will health & strength & the end
Is your speaking to the world in a way that will help mankind
I think you are wise in planning to give up public life in the change?
Your own years. The glorious moment will present itself
You have a great work still to accomplish
I will help you in working the story of your life
Your grandfather is here and wants to greet

K Thank you Mrs Brown, we are so glad you came Grandfather Mudge — Robert Brown is a great man. He is very fond of you

He will help you write your life and end also
He is watching your actions day by day
He says to tell you you have nothing to fear
I want you to put out of your mind the fear of death
There are more important things for you to do than to grieve in heaven
God has a work he wants you to carry on
The communist danger is the worst in the world
The work you undertake now is along the right lines
Keep on with public speaking. Your fame
Jesus help you to stand on your feet
Your mother, her husband, Lord Jesus & others will help.
Good night

Laurier House, March 26. '47

To Mrs. - love for all.

K Tell me about Chief - or anything that you think I would like to hear

Mrs Bruce's letter

K Always glad when you come to Ottawa.
Mr Herridge comments about Dezube's remarks you were having dinner about sending from here
Very glad to confer on introduction of Frederick Thomas's Scout of the Virginia
Mr Cook's offer at this time
Mr Vernon about your "father found frozen near Lac Jean" as
Not very keen about the honour you just received from France.

K. What about the views of the Hon Ian Mackenzie & Flavelle?

Mrs Bruce: Mr Vernon about the Herbert Brown matter & that you know
Sir Wm Mackenzie's views following letter from here
Mr Vernon about Flavelle matter & that you know that people at home have been speaking whenever you go out & assume you against getting drawn into wealthy circles

K Asked about my friend Chief Justice Flavelle.
You have made the right decision not to go to Williamsburg first, and to the Virginia Beach

K What about the Ku Klux Klan?
Under present circumstances it would be unwise for you to go to Williamsburg
It would be a mistake to go to his house on arrival at Williamsburg
It would be all right to be there for a few days after you have made it known that you were in Washington

Mrs K. Mackenzie King thinks that you are going to be the President
She will make a great impression in all parts of the world
You have become a world figure because of your long term of office as Prime Minister & your efforts in the Second Conference
The atmosphere is now being universally used in many countries
You are looked upon as the One Statesman who may

K. What about the interview with Mr H. - He had long conversation around the Mrs Mackenzie. Suggestion never came from you or you wrote. Mr Hooker Hopes you would allow an hour of an hour.
Is a bad week, tomorrow must be a busy day

K. Wrote about Mr Hendry's boy - Hendrie
Mrs King to keep the cards till 20

K. Suggested you have some one to meet
King: - Mrs Anderson, I am glad to hear you and Mabel to Miss Saunders' boy must have a major operation. He will be strong fairly soon
The doctors must the best in Montreal

Her illness is a distant relative
Her Doctor is also a distant connection of hers
Mother has been helping all she can by prayer
Dr Hosken, Ryan and I have been helping the doctors on the case
The doctors have felt the benefit of our cooperation
K. — What about Mrs Crib, will it do me good, will I get in a strength Lord: for will give you the strength you need for the Second Coming?
remainder of your days.
I want you more wedded unto the spirit and power and strength do not allow yourself to be confined upon by doing too much thinking or talking
Take things as easy as you can for a few months
You will come back a new man
good night.
K. Jesus Christ - Lord of power, spirit & power!

Lawrie House, May 3rd 1947

Fullers - Low from all.

Let Lawrie speak.

K. Lovely weather - very fed you have come

Sir W.L. How do you do Mrs Fullers, I am glad to see you again

J. I am to see you Sir Wilfred.

Sir W. - The settlement or unsympathetic was excellent.

It will be a guide for those to come.

Let your father speak

Lawrie. I think you will have to go slowly for a time to come.

You are much weaker than you realize

Your nerves has taken a bad set-back

Wellington was still a good place for your holiday, & then with your

a nervous climate would have been better

Let Lucy speak.

Lucy.

K. I am glad you have come home - for we all did admire & help for you.

How do you have Fullers, I am glad to see you - will be better

J. for mind you many.

I think it will must take us very for some time to come.

But you could help us a comfortment

K I cannot work, there is no use in going away.

There is no need to go anywhere but Kingsmere

What I mean is you must not let yourself at any time

Pay all worries have to bother, but let others do the work.

Go to bed early & get up about 8 o'clock

Take a tonic 3 times a day

Sleep after lunch for an hour or two

Go to the theatre & the cinema but not at nights, except for a while

Later on you must try & take up all together before very long

You have a world to read now.

Miss Fell would be a good time for you to give up & take a complete

I wanted to see you look healthier myself, but you must

it will first consider a little

You might arrange & have another about in your own home where would enter you to stay until after Christmas.

I think this may suit the case about.

Good-night

Lawrie is here

Lawrie. Glad to see you and you again. Don't get up much longer tonight

Good night — K found home & all

Kingston. Ms Town 6th Jan 47

Father – Son & all
long ago. I said that you would have a great career.
" " I said that you would be among the great men of the world.
Today your name is respected in all countries
I think you ought to hold on & your present office for the another two Self – years. And you say last time we called you to hold on for long
I said you'd to hold on longer than another two
Now you will have to work for all time as the head of a free country
Joan – Can you put your conscience and hope. can you put other country hunting Father. Joan is right You must put your country into hope. To me & can – put help in the cabinet
Let Parnell speak

Sir Wilfrid.
K Sorry that you are here Sir Wilfrid
How do you like talking, I am glad to see you up
Joan – he need some good advice here
Thanks. I can only put an advice as her King father.
From all I can see her King must be in office for some time yet –
He needs some in the way of companionship & comfort in his home
I must work with her Ministers & try and find how the Senate be made
He has only had no servants to stand here had in her favour
He has been handicapped by having around him people more concerned
No country in public life can carry on if he is surrounded by people who do not beg & please or respect him
He is sensitive about things that need to be kept in this family and in the country
Here a man who can do tremendous good if given a chance
He will find the necessary help of this I am sure.
Joan like is hearing it a very difficult moment. She is alone out of the home
She is not Christmastly in many things. She need to send Super and Sure friends from Saints Home & England
She used to take things to her friends from Henry that belonged to her King & Mrs
He doesn't realize that this house, but is known to the other Senate
She never come & her senses before long but it is fortunate that she is found.

Father Let Joan worship Speech
Henry So good to see her.
Joan – do you think Giles could be of help to you with the Senate Leader. Joan I heard what you said, I want as many voices as can Senate voices to our leader.
Now how enabling over twelve completely I want he needs great God & & and freedom from worry.
I will help the others all I can to find servants towards this end

I want to see Willie finish his public life in a manner worthy of his long service to Canada and to the people of his Constituency
I want him to appear before the public again in a manner that would reach all. a task done
The people will respond to any appeal he may make to them
God is giving him back his health and strength
God has a great work for him still to perform.
He must try to do what his Country appeals from him
I received a letter from Tweedsmuir yesterday urging
I received also one from Stephen Wallace urging on me the duty of
That I owed it to the people of Canada, the United Kingdom & the United States
I can see a way open for his profound and fine
I believe we will have many years yet of, he is not (Peace of Mind)
worried about domestic affairs
I believe he will find a solution of these problems before long
He is well rid of you. He had to respond for his welfare. She only did her work & then for away from every thing as fast as she could
She left the ointments in a state of unrest and discontent
She made her comfort and end of trouble of the last stages as much
You will find Lily more pleasant to work with from now on
You will find Marie a different girl
You will find the food ready to every thing that you & Mrs Jones
You will find the proper help to (Comfortable & happy) fit the right servants
I cannot say as the account was they were but I guess all have worked well.
I want you to do all you can to make Jessie visit & stop on
She is not strong, but is able & get about. Air and change will do her as end of good.
She needs a word of encouragement & advice as some of her problems
Has coming down is the best way to talk things over.
She will do the very trouble & you, and will be very helpful & you.
She is going better my thoughts & a letter will help her along
She is a certain character & deserves all that can be done for her
Now it is time for the nurse, so good night

Laurier: — Let Sir Wilfrid speak

Sir Wilfrid —

K. very pleased you have come Sir W. Now tell us all you can.
Glad to see you here Laurier, how do you do? I heard Mr King read his address to you
I can tell you the meaning of it.
I was distressed about the Senate in Quebec. Duplessis is directing the Province
He may succeed in conveying the province against the Senate & a federal election
Here is an opportunity of the first water.
I was fearful of the Liberals coming into office they would take away every thing Bennett from you.
For everything is the best possible & safe. While you are Gov in office
Don't count on anyone anywhere helping. Everyone you are out of Sympathy
I know what the feeling is the moment. I went through it
I tried to get an allowance for Mrs Boulin and they would not grant it.
You tried to help Lady Laurier, I remember you did something for her Canada
K. I had quite forgotten that. (Does) you do her a donation? K. Yes when she left
I had faith in you at the time and you decided right (date when home. in Sept of
Now I want you to protect yourself all you can (State copy)
K. What was the meaning of the box I received?
Sir W. It means that things are hidden from others (Even they see them they will say you have plenty to live on. Don't let others know what you have
The only way to be happy is to be independent of everyone, everything.
I did not mean the box in the form of present means of others know what I had
I would lose my independence altogether
Keep my own counsel in all financial matters
You will never want, if you do the same.
Good night
K. All is calm? Am anxious: K. Am so glad you are here, tell us about the Session & what you opposed
Laurier: Yes, I am so glad I see you and we can together.
It was long of you to have had Jessie down to Kingsmere
She has not been at all well, since her return to Barrie. She overtaxes her strength, She is better now, but needs help in the big house
If she were concentrated with I believe he could find someone
He has been poorly himself but is much better now & hopes to come with him soon. Your prayers will be answered
What you saw in the vision was an guarding You though I did not allow
I knew he could not live and I wanted you to have happy memories of him. He is here beside me now, and is pimping all over me.
He sees and hears you talk, and is making his best most all his might

Joan – A lucky day indeed

Hughes – He is a day angel indeed. He prays most for NOL and every morning, noon, and night. He has all our Kingsmen meet him, they go to all the places they know. They are right here Joan and how lucky he is to see Godfrey. He comes to us with Joan Wolf & she sits under her bed at night time not sleeps in Joan room all the time. He goes for a walk with Joan in the morning. He knows Joan mind & tries to make Joan think he is near by. – Joan darling.

R. Can Joan tell about the fire last night?

? The fire was laid & set on fire by the man Joan suspect ? he is a Russian Spy. We hoped to burn down Kingsmen & destroy all the Ordnance Corps records of the world. The fire was put out by angels who are watching over Joan. It did not burn a hole by a tree. It stood 10 feet in the air & was a large fire, but the power of God saved the property. The secret service man (Col. Sergeant Hazard) is on to the Spies, he knows quite a bit about the burning man & how it was caught about. He must tell Joan about it later. Joan must be up for this happening of the night – Good night (NOW 10 & 10)

R. I had an experience this morning. I will tell about it

Hughes. I must tell Joan about it tomorrow – dont get up late tonight Good night – Kingsmill. Dec 17th 1948.

Faith. Jon & all

Mrs Meyer is starting to speak

K Thank you Mrs Meyer - I know Bill is about his version of Mr Gladstone & Mrs Meyer! good evening, Mrs Pattison. I am glad to see you! Mr King again postponing is enjoying the Alps at present.
The version you refer to is that Mr Gladstone is a prototype of Jon's own career.
He had a long line of Peers
He had become a Conductor among British people
He had a strong belief in foreign aid & food in this world.
He wanted to turn evil elements better for the people
He wanted food when his public life is permanent was over
He went back to Hawarden Shed & the woods his own family
He would help Jon & finish Jon's work.
Lady Beaconsfield represented the Lone Lakeside home for Jon
Edmund Gosse affirmed that Jon couldn't know it also is helping Jon
He wants Jon & Mrs Lady Anderson a Love.
Lady Anderson has been very ill but is getting better now.
Mrs Gosse Edmund has also been unwell, She has been surrounded in Mrs Winston
Sir Oliver Lodge is here I want to speak

Sir Oliver Lodge

K Jon delighted Jon come home. Jon remember Mrs Pattison.
I asked I also remember the Sunday afternoon we came all were the same of Friends
I heard Jon mention my name & Mrs Gates in Toronto
I also heard Jon speak of Work.
Work wanted to glad to see Jon also Jon go to England.
Mrs Arnold is here I wanted him to speak

Mrs Arnold

K were here Arnold, Am are work so glad to be with Jon again good evening Mrs Pattison, I am so glad to be speaking with Jon & Mrs King again
Please let him know I say just a word, I must recall Percy Lubbock:
K. So that Jon Percy, I know from me from."
This is Lubbock, Chief I am delighted & be talking with Jon again.
I read what Jon wrote for the press and liked it very much
I listed the telegram Jon sent Mrs Meyer
I want Jon to know I am very happy here and about with those whom I like the best Jon are reading (the Mystery of Mind) it is no more the truth.
Good night. Mrs Arnold wanted to speak
Mrs Arnold: I will help to find someone for Jon's Sister Mrs Hay.
Good night. Don't worry about anything.

Kaysonia, Sept 1. 1947.

Fallon. down to all her lawyers.

K. So glad to know you arrived. Many kind of you. Phone call about Mrs Harrison Mrs Fallon. I was so glad to see Godfrey & you & Mrs Harrison (sister or cousin
How much Godfrey is looking since Easter. He is better than he has been for some time
I think the Summer has also done you great good.
I must say they had a lovely reception
He is an better shape than he has been, but needs to prepare for the Winter
The prison this morning was an allegory.
The Court sworn for public life
The formula for the appearance in public life
The signing of autographs the demands on your time
The loss of your garments, the stealing of your ideas by others.
The feeling of your anxiety for your mother & father was then present heart to you and their knowledge of your concern
They must be very proud of you and to be anyone about anything
You will have a wonderful time in Waterloo
I think your photos ensured that & spoke
K Many thanks for being with the bright
Fallon. Good evening Mrs Fallon. I am so glad to see you again
K You know what I am sorry.
I think you is very sensible
I want you to be happy about everything
You will find 'Woodside' very dilapidated, It is well worth trying to do over
It can be made into a marvellous home, but the home is only part of the
The people will give you a great welcome - K. I know they will help you with the Spirit
I must help you to furnish your Spirit
Others will also help. The main thing is not to get over tired
Jerome is much better for his visit to Kaysonia
She need worry all right don't worry about her.
K This is the anniversary of the day of your burial 31 years ago
I can remember making what took place, I knew what everyone was I must everyone could know that death is only the continuation of Being of life in a happier world
I know how anxious you are about the future, don't be anxious everything must depend upon your self-control
K. What about Uncle Pat.? K. tell Pat is over-joyed at hearing you call him by Name
He and Dad I sincerely are racing about jumping all over you and from
I must you could see them, they are much much delighted.
Good night.

New Haven, Sept 14th 1947.

Follen:

How do you do hon sentiment. I am so glad to see you again
Willie had a great triumph in old Berlin
He will be a barrister by the end of the month
Willie I am delighted beyond words that you are to be enrolled in the Bar as under pupilage and I am glad your dancer (Princess Yland to be resists time there
I hope while you are at the University you remember to go into long affairs and active
I am glad now you want to Chicago instead (the Law School
It brought you into social problems: social problems into politics
You are now better known than any other leader in Canadian politics
a. Dan was so interested in that:
It is a good thing that you feel that way
The Law School function will go off well
re. Will you help me with my speech.
The speech will be very important
Take a good rest tonight: I will be at your side in the morning
re. What about "Woodside"?
Woodside has been greatly improved
I am glad you feel about it as you do
It will remain a great memorial to all this family
It will help your name upon the people of this continent,
It will become a shrine to which people will come from all parts of the world.
re. Business, I don't think of this at all, I am sure you will get through all
There is still a great work before you.
(right to the end
So to bed and for you are tired.
re. Thanks: fondest love to all

Kingston, Sept 21st 1907.

I am so glad to see you and your brother
K. she is staying? — Winter.
Winter: I could not mail, I meant to tell you how delighted we all were at the proceedings at Oxford Hall.
Father was completely overcome. He is now & will speak.
Father: How do you like Miss Hallam, I am so glad to see you and Willie
I was sure so would be in my list of by the proceedings of Monday last.
I thought Willie entitled himself to his expression of love for me.
I was deeply touched by all the speeches, especially by Shirley Denison's poem for mine eventually, my father was kind to me and he was deeply moved. I thought the way you brothers the Young Powers together as one at the end was one fine. And although in reading Granchester from calling out that she was somewhere in hiding me off. And the whole hall all around me rejoicing in everything that was said. Grandfather Langmuir was in high spirits, he had Grand-at his side, Aunt Ida & Miss Pollard, he was so pleased that a relation of his had received from Cambridge as a Bachelor. It was a splendid occasion (?) of bringing together all the Young Powers.
I thought Chief Justice Robertson spoke well. also Mr Hamilton Cassels was exceedingly good. Prof Falconbridge was delighted to be with you. The Benchers were all very pleased and proud of themselves. The Students were seemingly suspended. Dear Lois in the Gal-lery great number on the audience, however could not contain her-self for joy. He was so pleased when you called on Lady Meredith Monday and I do think I hope I understood him all of you so that the evening, he once again deeply touched when you said it was me who must keep honoured with you. I heard you say that in your thoughts. I was thinking would say over your shoulder, Thank you so happier in all my life. I am sure you forget what the day meant for me as the fulfillment of all that I had toiled and hoped for with so earnest. I could tell you how my heart leaped for joy when I heard you say still to me what it meant to me to have come into touch with the world of the best possible. Dear Lois I find so great pride when I can see that God had a great work for you to accomplish. He will continue to guide and direct your steps. Dear Phil you are going to Italy and France as well as Holland, Belgium and England. It will round out your course of a Historian and how useful to Canada & Canadian as well as abroad

Father: — mother mother & Ruth

Mother: — Tom & Joan, I am so glad to have a chance to speak to you tonight Jimmie has been very sick but I think the worst is over the doctor is with her now * (see next page)
We think she is getting rid of the shingles, they have been very painful however (any of) has made all the difference
I think Jimmie would have died if you and Joan had not arranged to have her sent to us,
She would have given up in despair
Now she has some chance of being able to carry on in her own home.
I want to thank you and Joan for saving her life

Mike - It is the event we have been waiting for since Joan has been very good, for we help.
Joan has been a devoted daughter like Jimmie was to me,
You have been a strong brother like you were a devoted son to me.
Joan has been sweet in encouraging her sweet to go to Harriet Father has been so pleased about the town Society business grand for him to have been delighted - both grandfathers
May I read what you read to Joan, and shook hands afterwards
(I read Moroni introduction, in carrying on at the bar)

(Mother) (Suffer little children, & Luke) The time was pretty short for the prayer part

Our Prayer:

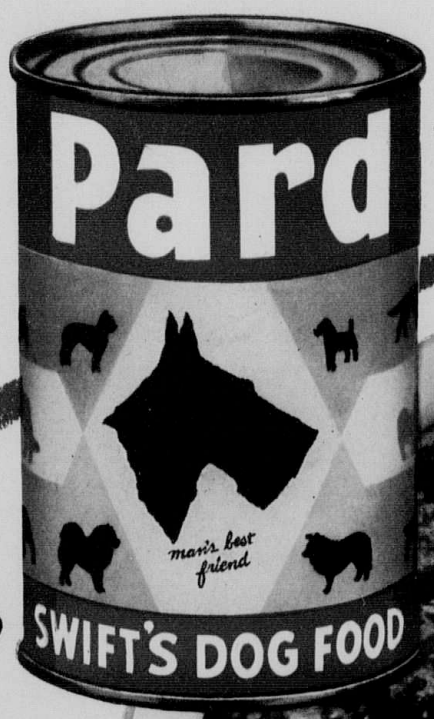

K. Thank you so much for coming, like us all you can.
" Good evening Mrs Watson, Joan glad to see you and her boy again
We have dogs are all here beside me.
May heard you calling to them on Joan's evening walk and again at
May more surprised, I want you to know that dogs have their proper
If you have a dog and he loves you, you are a part of God's Grand
God has ordained dogs to help save the lives and souls of men.
Satan's army is beside God's army working his very act.
Satan has not, is beside you and Joan, he is full of love for each of you Satan has not & is taking your head and pain, his whole heart is almost breaking with joy
May all want you to know they were sent by God to watch you at the foot of Heaven when the time comes.
May want to know they were sent by God to help you keep true to the highest principles of life, loyalty & courage and friend-courage & do the right, and not to be afraid of death or of anything in life
May are little messengers God sent to guide and guard and bless.

K Tell us about the lambs on the Heath this afternoon.
The lambs were at 10 to play all about you children & what was he were the lambs were at 23 past 4 to tell you about Christ was that was at your side
That was the house Christ first passed over here, the little lambs with the stars for at last time
He wanted you to know for ever right in thinking he was close and at your side
The books you read on other night was the messages the other lambs had written for to you
K More interpret
It means that visions are a glimpse into the hereafter
That the things you thought of in the last days for are true are true and eternal
That God loves you very dearly, and wants you to be "Christ strong" to others
K. What about Joan's vision?
That was a vision of a part of the world as it is today
God wants Joan to think of others all she can, and to help them all she can
The world needs all the help Joan here can give.
Try to do all you can to further the betterment of other lives.
God wishes, and God bless you both K Good night and goodest love to all the lambs. Kiss them for me. Kiss and everyone The little dogs are running about, barking & jumping for joy.
K. Lots & lots of love from Mummy

the "One-Dish-Dinner"

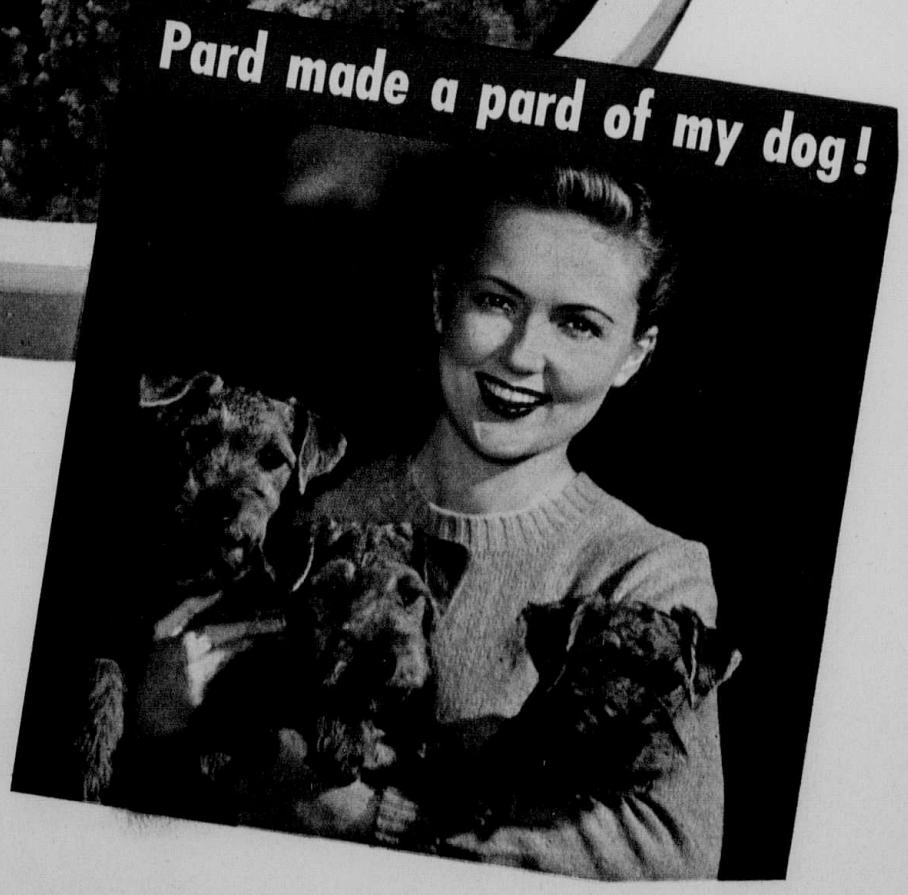

Swift & Company makes Pard rich with:

Meat By-products	Irradiated Yeast
Ground Edible Bone	Thiamin
Soy Flour	Niacin
Wheat	Calcium Pantothenate
Barley	Pyridoxin
Iodized Salt	Riboflavin

Vitamin A Fish Liver Oil

Pard contains every known essential for balanced nutrition, and lists them right on the label!

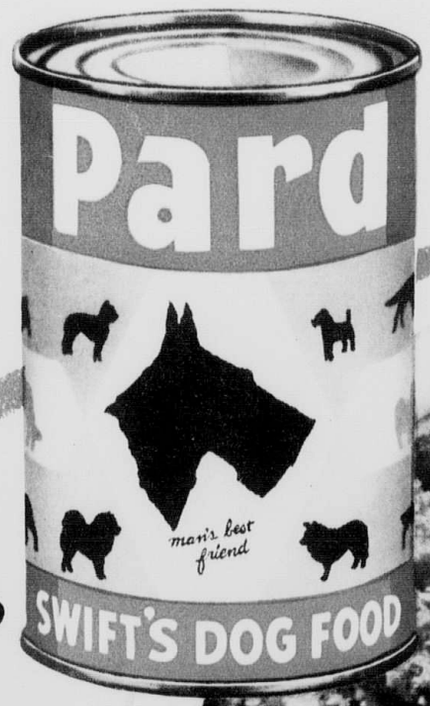

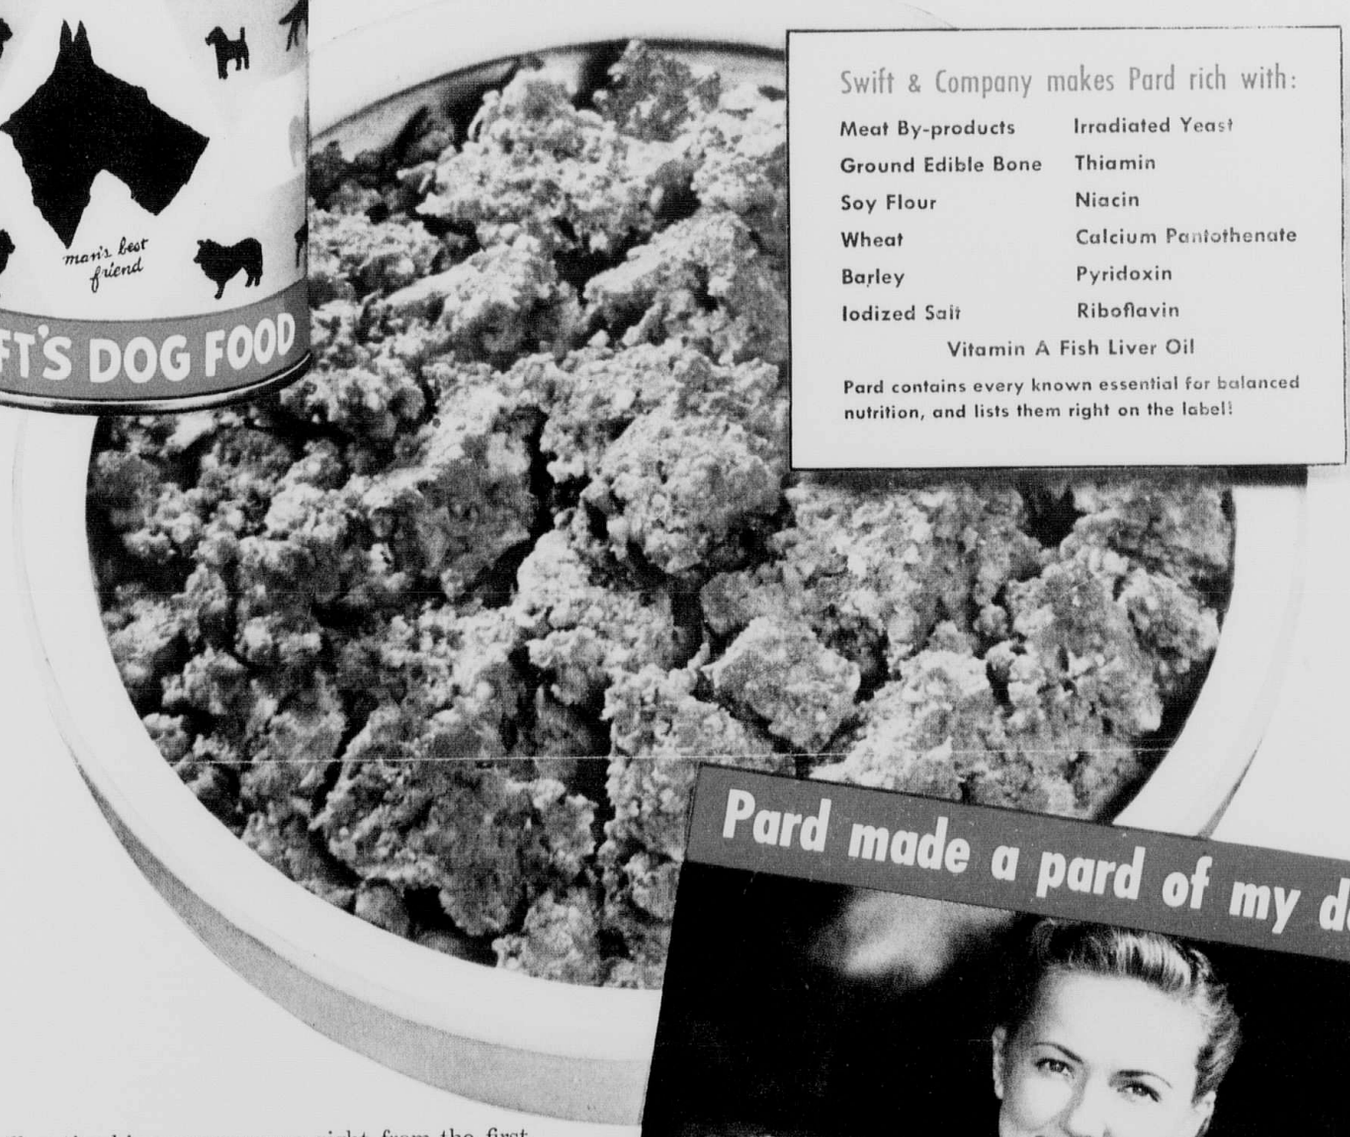

You'll notice his eager response right from the first sniff. And no wonder! Look at the big group of energy-building—health-building ingredients Swift & Company lists on the Pard label. There's meaty rich proteins to build and maintain active tissues—and there's carbohydrates to provide body heat and boundless energy.

You'll see at a glance that Pard is abundantly endowed with all the ingredients for a dog's eating enjoyment and vibrant health. That's because the nutritionally correct formula is based on actual feeding studies, scientifically conducted by experts right in Swift's own great research laboratories. And so perfect is the balance—no additional meat is ever needed. Feed Pard every day. It's the "one-dish-dinner" for dogs.

Private and Confidential.

Sitting held at 25 Jubilee Place sw3. on Thursday evening November 20th 1947. 5.15.pm.

Note. As we had no sitting for some time, we decided to sit today. It was the day of the Royal Wedding, part of which we had heard on radio and later had walked towards Buckingham Palace but the crowds prevented our seeing anything but a empty coaches and the soldiers, on their return. At tea, G.C said she had felt that someone was wanting to write so that we had better sit soon. I had meant to ask for my sister-in-law (Hilda) and avoid a very difficult communicator who was in the most dreadful darkness and whom we had tried to help. He tired G. very much and I did not want to go on with him if it could be avoided.

What transpired came as a complete surprise. I had said nothing to G. of a certain project that Miss Phillimpre had made to me last week - the idea having just come to her. I had only told G. that someome wanted a sitting who wished to remain anonymous but who was very kind and a complete believer so that she should not be unduly nervous.

Astor comes. Today there are two important calls. One you can leave to the last, for it is from your brother. The other has a special significance. So I must put my child deeply asleep. Wait. (pause during which G. began to breath very heavily.)

Astor, There are two anxious people close at hand. They are very cautious that is why they are anxious. (Let them speak) The gray-haired lady and a man - Edwin, yes, that is the name. (Yes, Astor, I know who you mean) They say this is very confidential. (All right. I understand)

Now Edwin explains. He tells me they have been trying to bring about a meeting between - wait - I see a crown, King is it? Yes, between King and F.D.R. FDR wants a quiet, fireside talk with the public out of it - a talk with King. That is it. But Edwin W. is a little afraid they may have failed. They know King is not here long. They ask you if you get a message, to arrange the meeting here, to let nothing prevent it. Can you bring it about?" they say. "We just dont know if he has received our impression to ask for a medium."

(As it happens, someone was here the other day, and asked if we could arrange a meeting if required. But no answer yetfrom him)

Yes, it is urged that this should be arranged. They know there are difficulties about time for him. So they ask you to keep your time free for it.

(Yes, we are waiting for a reply from the - crown. Your child does not know who he is.)

Better not tell her then she will be quieter and receive the message more easily. They say thst FDR is disturbed in mind about the drift apart, between his country and the King's Land. It is something financial. He would like his own people to be less fond of the dollars - at least, I get some remark like that. He always wanted free trade between them while the independence of King's Country was totally recognised. He hopes that , however, difficult it is for King's country to buy from his own, that King will leave no stone unturned to keep up the goodwill between the 2 nations.

(The "crown" has been written to and we are waiting to hear from him.)

They are doubtful as to whether their pressure has been enough to bring him. But I will encourage them to try again with him. (Yes, please do so) He may, if he comes, want his own people. But I have promised to give this trio - Edwin, M.L.. and FDR first place.

(Perhaps the friend could write again to him)

No, let her use her own judgment. It depends on their own pressure on him not on anything yourside.

(Tell them that we can only hope that we shall hear from the "crown" some time soon then.)

I have told them. They are satified and are fading out.

The communication then followed on other lines.

Note. I referred to the person indicated in the script as the "crown" in order to avoid saying the name aloud - or rather in my customary undertone - and so putting the name into the mind of the medium. Only two nights previously, I had read the "Marguerite Foote" case at LSA. So this idea must be in the air. Yet G. does not seem to have picked it up. She asked a day or two ago which day this sitter was coming and I told her that the day was not yet arranged, but probably next week. She asked if it was a man, and groaned when I replied in the affirmative and remarked that she was sorry for him as he would probably get nothing!! I reassured her and the matter dropped.

The next morning Miss P. rang up and the sitting was arranged for Sat. afternoon 3½. Miss P. said it was urgent. I told G.C. the day was fixed etc. She said "an old clergyman probably." I replied - "yes perhaps the Archbishop of Canterbury"! We laughed and the matter dropped.

SITTING HELD AT 25 JUBILEE PLACE, S.W. 3 - LONDON, ENGLAND

Saturday afternoon,
November 22, 1947.

Automatic writing - Geraldine Cummins,
Present: Miss Gibbs.

Astor is here.

This man is of special interest to me for he has the spiritual insight of an ancient Scottish Gaelic race. The genius of the chief of a clan and not merely that of _____ .

Now I see near him Wilfred. A spirit who, when on earth, was delicate and frail in physique. He has been much with King since he passed over after the Great War - Wilfrid Laurier. Wilfrid says Mowat and Fielding and some other name. I think they are people with him.

K. asks: Should I stay on in public life - if so, for how long?
Answer: Wilfrid says you must stay on for some years to come. These are critical years and you alone can manage the numerous conflicting interests.

F.D.R. Himself is near today and wanted to speak to you, to urge you to stay on in public life. He will give you his reasons too. I shall let him speak now.

Read aloud this. Yes.

Franklin: Say, Mac, it is kind of you to come. I am most uneasy. You can put my mind at rest. I learned that you might consider retiring. I beg of you at whatever cost to continue in public life.

It is wiser from the point of view of your health to retire but I feel it is your duty not merely to your country but to the world to stay on. I am most anxious that you do for two reasons:

(1) is I want you to retain Canada's independence. There is a bunch of roughnecks in finance in the U.S.A. They would like to get hold of Canada through economic penetration. It is not a visible merging of the two countries but an invisible one behind the scenes they are after. That is my view. I may be wrong but you want capital for development of your country. In that respect, your care and foresight will prevent any encroachment on your independence and liberties. I fought finance all my life. I don't want big business later on to get undue control of Canada.

K. asks: It is a question. Would it not be wiser to write a book or two.

Ans.: Read this. Do you agree?

K. asks: Agree? I might be able to watch it even if I was not in office.
Ans.: I understand your reluctance to continue in office and no man more richly deserves a rest but my own feeling is that you are needed still.

K. asks: How about Winston? Did he not stick it out too long? Would it not have been better if he had stepped out?
Ans.: You are not Winston. Winston was in the opinion of his own people a fighter and by God, a fine one too. But you have the wisdom he lacks - the caution, and that integral honesty that holds a country together. I know no man who can do it so successfully as you can.

There is that cheerful cut-throat Joe Stalin. Don't imagine he is going to leave your country alone. It is not war, oh no. Not at present or for a few years. But you had experience of his intrigues in that plot, not long ago. He knows Canada has those valuable minerals. More will be found. He would like to stir up discontent. Make mischief in your country and between your people and my people. You are wanted for many reasons, Mac. I know there are other good men. Abbott is a sensible fellow, no doubt, but I want your wisdom behind it all. I don't know how long you will remain the skipper but even in opposition, you would be mighty useful - a break on the men who are too impulsive. Too anxious for quick returns.

Mac, you know the old saying. The 19th century was the century of the U.S.A. The 20th century will be Canada's century. That is, in my opinion, far more likely to come through if you remain in public life, some years longer. Say what you think?

K. asks: I think you are far too kind, too generous. You have much too high an opinion of me.
Ans.: My God, man, no. I had my faults but you will admit I could size up character pretty rapidly. You have that slow Scotch way with you. You are not clever, you are wise. That is why I want you to hold on and why I called you up through Miss LeHand. I saw you wanted to get out. Don't. Don't.

K. asks: How is Miss LeHand?
Ans.: She manages me just the same as ever.

K. asks: She is a wonderful person. A great help. A great spirit.
Ans.: She had extraordinary force and helped me to get through more than anyone else. Watson is with me, too.

K. asks: That is 'Pa' Watson - a dear fellow.
Ans.: He sends you his very best wishes. We all urge you to go on in your job. But we are going to get behind you and help you. You will not know how we come, but when you sleep, we will put suggestions into your mind. Wilfrid L. of course will join our brains' trust. So go forward with confidence, knowing we are behind you.

K. asks: I ~~must~~ shall keep in mind what you say but I shall have to think it all over very carefully. I have told the Party I must get a nice summer if I am spared that long.
Ans.: Don't let those doctrinnaire theorists in the English Govt. get ahold of you either and pass their theories on to you. Keep your independence of thought but get all the man you can from the mother or grandmother country to settle in Canada. It will be in the interests of both countries, for, later on, I see a population difficulty in England and a lot of discontent. In fact, England's future gives me more of a headache than that of France. France will get through by means of strong leadership. Their leader won't be a pleasant fellow but he will get them on their feet eventually.

England will be more difficult. Her nervous system - I mean of her people - is out of gear. There will be trouble later for English Cabinet but I am talking too much. I want any question you like to ask.

K. asks: What does Sir Wilfrid think I should do with Laurier House?
Ans.: He thinks you should keep a careful watch at present. Does not want you to make any hurried decision. Wait, I will ask. Yes, he did not quite grasp question.

K. asks: Would he like me to keep it as a Memorial for him and for me in my Will.
Ans.: He says: yes, a Memorial. He would like that. Wilfrid also says he wants to give you advise about your health. However busy your day, you should relax for half an hour at least, morning or evening, andput all affairs out of your mind. He wants you to eat with care now - not meat, he says, unless in small quantity, and bear in mind the glasses of cold water. Not near a meal; wash out the interior. You do not mind, do you, these mundane remarks about your health, but it is important.

K. asks: They are very helpful.

Ans.: We want to keep you going, old man, for the sake of the whole continent of America. Canada has a great future, no doubt, but not if the United States gets too strong a financial hold there. You can keep her big business within bounds. They can't fool you.

Any other questions, Mac?

K. asks: Are my mother and father there - have you seen them at all?

Ans.: Yes, it has been my privilege and pleasure to meet them, and I have fallen in love with your mother. She is a sweet and lovable woman - one of the best, and gave place to me today as she knew how anxious I was about your decision re possible retirement.

Your father, too, is one of the best. He has that honesty and straightforwardness I admired more than any other quality. They both send love; also an old friend named ISHBEL or ISABEL ABERDEEN. She said: of Aberdeen. She was in Canada early years of the century and her husband was Governor but I think she governed him.

K. asks: I am sure of that.

Ans.: At least she is a charming but determined lady.

And now, Mac, I can't hold on much longer.

Have I your assurance you won't retire yet, at least. Stay on some years more.

K. : I shall think that over very carefully but I shall have to give it great thought.

Ans. : Cautious Mac!!

Don't be rushed by any of us. Good luck. Always your friend,

F.D.R.

K. : My love to you, Harry Hopkins, Miss LeHand, Watson, all dear friends.

Ans. : Hopkins sent all the best.

Our love.

SITTING WITH MRS. SHARPLIN

10 Cheyne Road, Chelsea, LONDON

Saturday, November 22, 1947 - 11.oo a.m.

(Silver Fox is control).

The sitting was held in an upstairs front room. Mrs. Sharplin seated between two windows. Curtain not ~~drawn~~ so that there was light in the room. I was seated at a small table with book and pencil and able to write long hand with little trouble. Almost immediately after medium seated, she began to go slowly into a trance. Her face was very earnest. She began to bow her head. The first utterance sounded like: Ya, Yo.

Greetings to you, Sir. How do you do? Very pleased to see you again. Are you feeling well?

Several people would like to meet you today. First, we see your parents. They greet you and specially your mother who has been very near to you and comes(?) during time you were ill some time ago, and puts a great _____ of healing around you because your work was not finished. Both loved ones give you a wealth of love and greeting.

There is also a great friend of yours here, Mr. President Roosevelt.

President Roosevelt, he wants to talk to you as the power gets a little stronger. He greets you with deep affection, not only as a colleague,he says, but as a great friend. He tells me he has walked step by step with you and has helped solved many problems, for you are his inspiration. You have been spared to bring an important vibration to this country. They are very pleased you decided to come to England. The wedding of the Princess marks the beginning of a very important time in the world's history. The good you and many others have played.

He mentions General Smuts and many other representatives of the various countries. You come with a much deeper sense of duty from representing your country. You all are representatives of a great band in the world spirit. You are the focal point and you will realize the full meaning of this later. It will do more to further world peace than it is possible to realize at the moment.

The President say: how disappointing world conditions have been to him and to many of you. Have no fear, he says, from Russia who behaves like a spoiled child now. She is digging a pit for herself into which she will fall. At one time, we could have reasoned with the leaders but now it is better you keep silent. Watch carefully those who enter your country as displaced persons. That is a matter being used for allowing spies to come in. The element of Communism in your midst is a danger but you are not to fear it. He places his hand upon your shoulder and tells you you have a great protection around you and a strength from the inner is yours. The God force that has led you over the years is nearer still to you than ever.

This gentleman asked me to ask you if you have felt at times you had better withdraw - yes, from your official capacity. He says you will be there for a time yet. You are needed not a long time but fur a little time longer. You find the difficult attitude of some of those around you very trying but he asks you to keep in mind what you stand for whichis beyond politics.

K. asks: Who is this gentleman?

Ans.: It is still the President. He tells me your Doctor man infers some time it might be better for you to rest and he appreciates this but he says: "As your days, so your strength be" and he wants you to go a little further and then goesinto quotations from Carlyle's.(?)

He shows a book beside you. He wants you to publish a book. He wants you to publish a book. He says that, too, will carry help to the masses.

The President says he is delighted to come to you because he can bring through to you added strength. And several people you have contacted during your visit have been helped already because we have been behind you.

Yes. Yes. I thank you all right. He is now mentioning something about the atom bomb. Does this worry you some time.

K. says: I do not know. He wants you not to let it worry you because there are measures being taken to use it constructively and during the time the secret of it is withheld (this important). There are still further inventions that bring a counter-acting force.

Medium holds hand up. Russia is doing a great deal of research on it and there are German Jews helping them but again he says while one must be o alert and keep watch darily, do not allow fear to overtake - yah - (Pause).

Would you like to ask him questions, please. What would you like me to do? Mr. President?

He says (Medium puts up hand). Keep clear. Refers to Russia - because he is thinking and looking ahead and he is sure to ask - they have their idea upon the opposite way - India - but there will come something in their own country - catastrophic - that will prevent the destruction they have in mind. Keep clear.

K. asks: Was I right in shaking hands with the Ambassador? (This refers to my having shaken hands with Mr. Zaroubin as we came out of St. Paul's Cathedral after attending Winant's Memorial Service).

Ans.: Yes, definitely. Always carry good-will and always play the bigger part. They are a child race which we must humbly teach.

He says that negotiations take place are not to be relied upon yet but in time there will be removed two people at the head of that country.

Will have swamped Mr. Stalin - two of them. He asks you to think this over about negotiations for trade, etc. Might be furthering for your country.

K. : Who are the twm men? One man that was replacing Stalin - Molotov - Vishinsky I think it is. Molotov does not like you/but the President says yes he knows you that does not matter. He says there should be no negotiations but warns you they are not reliable and he advises that as much development should take place of all the colonies of England and of the British Isles, trade negotiations, specially with the Colonies and in England, he says: alas my country has a difficult time before them.

Speaking of States, he says - America - her? - because the people have yet to learn the meaning of service. He wishes to say while he remembers it that England will yet shine after this phase of Socialism has adjusted itself. She is destined to rise again and through her purging will become more spiritual. It will take time, brother - he says, to see this adjustment come about but you hold fast to that strong determination that right will triumph in the end.

Medium steops and there is silence, and then goes on. Your country will make faster substantial progress than America. You will be the means of acting foster-mother to many earth children of all nations. That will prove a constructive effort to world peace.

Ya - all right - come one.

You will not be so very long before your return. He does not want you to be too long. your presence - your influence is essential now and for the beginning of the next year.

Yeah - medium holds hands, rubs hard. Yes, All right.

Any other questions?

K. : Can he tell me something of our days together?

Ans.: Yes, he is showing me a picture of when you were with him and his lady and you went to visit him. Then he could not come toyou - happy times - and always looked forward.

It is not in the centre of things, home in country where quiet. He says: will you give his love to his lady when you see her because she knows he is alive. He admires the way she is coping with conditions and trying to help. (Pause)

Oh, my goodness. Yes. He wishes me to mention to you that poor old Winant is at peace and he has helped him and he said the pressure of world conditions and his disappointment created a fear within him and he felt he had failed. That was not so. I asked what was he disappointed at. He felt he had failed.

K. : Was it family troubles?

Ans.: Yes. He had. President says he wants the thought to be put out that he has been helped into the light and is at peace again.

Ya, that is right now. The President say he has taken a great deal of your time but his great desire is to strengthen you and particularly to impress upon you something - that he stood for truth and light, and that what you have done all these years and have still to finish is a service in the world's evolution and deeper than that - a spiritual evolution.

This great gentleman brings a violet color ray over you. It is from the great Healer who helped him when on earth. He wants you to think of that idea when you are feeling you are a little below par, and draw into your being - that ray - the Christ ray - which he felt was there.

There is also Abdul Lopifs - no Abdulx Latif - looking after you from a health point of view. Silently he works but he is there.

K. asks: What does he recommend? to help?

Ans.: You experience a tightness of your chest. Some times there is difficulty in breathing. He is stating that he is showing that to me - some times, all right, breathing exercises - each morning.

Never have your room too hot. Try to keep in as even temperature in your room as you can and drink frequently of the tea of elder flowers.

K. asks: Where to you get them?

Ans.: Colpepper House. You will find one in Knightsbridge. Take a pound of it home with you and make an infusion by two table spoonfuls in one quart of cold water. Bring to boil. Simmer 10 minutes, strain and then drink frequently of it. Half a tumbler at a time. Drink it warm but not hot.

It will clear that for you; also help to clear something of the kidneys, liver, for you. That will not disturb the bowel. Can you take honey? It will help you to take honey and lemon; to eat frequently honey on your toast or bread. That will help you and keep loose the bronchial tubes. It will not fatten you.

Yes, all right. Medium holds hands again.

Now your parents come in and mother lady says she is very pleased that President has been to you and brought help for health conditions for you. Mother lady very anxious.you do not stay too long in London. The air is so contaminated. By what? Smoke, etc. He is thinking of your lungs. Not of anything else. You are all right because people have great affection for you.

K. asks: Am I all right?

Ans.: Yes, you are. You can always do good by creating good-will and love. Mother is very proud of you and your father. They feel you have done a good work but mother thinks it will be a great joy to her when you can retire into the quiet. She says you then can advise a great deal. There will be those who will seek your advice and your books. Mother says books - not one - will keep you occupied. She is bringing beautiful violets to you. She was fond of violets and lilies of the valley and likes to look at them growing.

K. asks: What do they remind her of?

Ans.: Of her own corner and her own garden of which you lifted some and transplanted in the good old days. You took them with you and transplanted.

K. asks: Does she remember other things?

Ans.: Yes, I do. What is more, I have a replica that is here in the spirit ~~xxxx~~ world and lovely trees and gardens. Remember horse of the old home.

O goodness - come on and give it to us. He does not seem to be able to do that. Something corner she liked about the old home. She is giving me the vision of a window where she used to like to sit near and look out to the beautiful trees and is showing me herself writing there. She seems fond of birds. Likes to feed them and roses and shrubs that had flowers on.

Don't you have a chair you were fond of from the old home? Have you not got it and several other things, several pieces of furniture that were beautiful and carpets, etc. and the old portraits and pictures. She still likes you. What they did for you here - was very grateful for someone in your house - a squaw who looked after you when so poorly. She hasx great affection for you in your home, that is well. Try to impress those around you to look after you. You have one very devoted to you - it is the cook.

K. asks: Will I be able to get a housemaid? What about a man I have seen in London?

Ans.: Yes, she likes him. You had interview with him and she liked him.

Oh, why do I see John written?

K. asks: Ask her to put the other name?

Ans. : Something like your own - Mackenzie - she says it is: King. She writes the John.

K. asks: Are there other members of the family?

Ans.: Brother man very interested in all doing. I see little papoose again, Nancy. I came out of the lilies - I could not bear not having a word from here. I will always love you. Comes often to cheer you up when tired. Often comes to study like this and has put her arms on yours and she says to you: cheer up, be happy. Brings around you a child-like influence; helps you to feel its influence. She says take home to her Mommy - yes, her dearest love, and she is mentioning a birthday, and tell her I was with her on the birthday, and another due near Christmas - showing Christmas candles with her. I shall be there.

About other matters and events. Her Mommy is to wear something which is pretty. It is a pretty blue. Tell her to wear it on Christmas and she will be there.

Have they a dog in that house and he has passed over? Tell Mommy she has got it, whatever you do. Don't forget to speak of my dogs. He is nosing you and knows you. Would have been disappointed if you had not mentioned.

K. asks: Do you like Scottie? Two others, rough haired ones. Old Pat, bless him, and Derry - but little fellow that died. Won't her Mommy be pleased she brings it. Her Daddy too. Comes to climb on her Daddy's neck, standing over with them at meals. His Mommy knows I go and talk to her.

She is a funny little lady. She says you will be going now or you will be late. I don't know about time. She is giving you a kiss. Don't forget. I am often with you.

Now you better go, had you not? President again wishes you good luck and godspeed, and your own dear ones are quite a bodyguard around you.

K. asks: Any others?

Ans.: You have sister. She is manifesting now. She held back because she felt you know that she is there, helping, with all the others for you to have message from the President. Is giving you her great love and says: Carry on the good work. We are all so proud of you.

Now they are bidding you farewell. Be strong and happy. They will come with you. Mother's arms surround you. The last thing I see she gives you a kiss and says: now, take care of yourself, won't you? And now, I go. Good Bye. May the great white spirit bless you and give you strength to do just a little more for your country and the world and then enjoy a little rest well earned, and peace surround you, and all people on earth - East and West - and North and South - is the prayer of your servant, Silver.

Medium comes out of trance.

Note: I was not thinking of Nancy who came entirely on her own.

London, England.
Saturday - November 22, 1947

Sitting with Mrs. Sharplin at No. 10 Cheyne Road - time 11.10 a.m.

Her control: Silver Fox

Medium goes slowly into trance.

Her face was very much in earnest. Daylight was coming in the window, so it was possible for me to see quite clearly to write by hand. As she went into a trance, the medium bowed her head, and there came a few words like: Ya, yoo. Then her voice began to speak. It was the voice of the control.

The conversation went straight ahead as follows:

Greetings to you sir, how do you do? Very pleased to meet again. Are you feeling well? Yes.

There are several people here round about you today. First, I see your parents. They greet you and specially your mother, who has been very near to you, and was during the time you were not well some time ago. He wants you not to let it worry you because there are measures being taken to use it constructively and during a time the secret of it is withheld. (Most important). Russia is doing a great deal of research on it and there are German Jews helping them, but again he says you must be on the alert and keep watch carefully there. Do not allow fear to overtake you. Ya. (Pause)

Would you like to ask any question, please?

M.K. What would you like me to do, Mr. President:

He says (medium puts up her hand) keep clear -- refers to Russia - because he is thinking and looking ahead and he is sure to ask why. They have their idea upon the opposite way: India, but they will have some things in their own country that are catastrophic that will prevent the destruction they have in mind. Keep clear.

The President say: he feels he has taken a great deal of your time, but his great desire is to strengthen you and particularly to impress upon you. That you stand for Truth and Light and that what you have done all through the years and have still to finish is a service in the world's evolution and deeper than that - a spiritual evolution.

This brave gentleman brings a violet coloured ray over you. It is from the Great Healer. Has helped him when on earth. He wanted you to think of that when you get a little below par and draw it into your being. That ray - Christ's ray which he feels was there.

There is also Abdul Latif looking after you from the health point of view. Silently he works but he is there. I say: What does not recommend to help?

A. You experience a tightness of the chest some times. There is a little difficulty in breathing. He is taking that to mean he wishes you to take breathing exercises each morning. Never have your room too hot, try to keep it at an even temperature, and drink frequently of the tea of the elder flowers.

M.K. I say: Where do you get them? He eplies Culpepper House. You will find one in Knightsbridge. Take a pound of it home with you and make an infusion - two tablespoonfuls in one quart of cold water and bring to boil; let it simmer 10 minutes and strain. And drink frequently of it - half a tumbler at a time - drink it warm, but not hot. It will clear that for you and also help to clear kidneys and liver for you and will not disturb the bowels. He asks: Can you take homey? It will help you to take honey and lemon and to eat frequently of honey om your toast or bread. That will heal you and keep loose the bromchial tubes, but will not fatten you. Ya, all right.

(Medium holds her hands together again, and then she speaks).

Now your parents come in and Mother lady say she is very pleased that President has been talking to you and brought help for health conditions for you. Mother lady very anxious you do not stay too long in London, the air is too contaminated. I ask in what way contaminated?

Reply: Smoke, etc. She is thinking of your lungs, not anything else.

The people love you. Have a great affection for you.

I asked my Mother: Am I all right?

Reply: Yes, you are, since you can always do good by creating good-will and love.

Your mother is very proud of you, and your father too. They feel you have done a good work, but mother thinks it will be a great joy to her when you can retire into the quiet. She say you can then advise a great deal - there will be those who will seek your advice and your books. Your mother says books - not one, will keep you occupied. She is now bringing beautiful violets to you. She was very fond of violets and lilies of the valley and likes to look at them growing.

Q.: What do they remind her of?

A.: Of her own corner, her own garden, of which you lifted some and transplanted in the good old days. You took them with you and transplanted them. I ask: Does she remember other things?

A. Yes, I do. What is more I have a replica that is here in the spirit world. There are lovely trees and gardens.

I said: Do you remember more of our old home?

A.: Oh, goodness, love, as I give it to you.

She is giving to me now the picture of a window where she used to like to sit and look out at beautiful trees and showing me her writing there. She was fond of birds; liked to find them and roses and shrubs with flowers. She says you have a chair you were fond of from there from the old home. Have you not got it and several other things? Pieces of furniture which were beautiful, carpets and old portraits and pictures. She speaks of what they did for you here. She was very grateful for some one in your house - a squaw, who looked after you when you were so poorly, and you had great affection around you in your house. That is well. She tried to impress those sround you to look after you. There is also one very devoted to you, it is the cook.

I asked the question: WillI be able to get a house maid?

Reply: She is after finding one for you.

M.K. : I said what about a man I have seen in London?

A.: Yes, she likes him; you had an interview with him, and she liked him.

M.K.: Can you tell me about him:

Medium says: Oh, will do. I see (John) written. I said ask her to give me the other name. She replied it is something like your own. - Mackenzie - she says it is King. She writes in John and says the name is like her own, but does not write it.

I asked; Are there other members of the family?

A.: The brother man very interested in all you are doing.

Then she says: I see a little papoose again - Nancy.

I came out of the lilies (?).

I could not bear not having a word from you. I will always love you. I come often to help you whenyou are tired. Come to the Study. Like this. (Medium illustrates). She says to you: cheer up. Be happy. She throws around you a child-like influence. She has helped you to feel less fatigued. She asks you to take home to her Mommy her dearest love and she is mentioning a birthday. Tell her I was with her on the birthday, and another due near Christmas. She is showing Christmas candles with her. I shall be there.

About other matters (?), wants her Mommy to wear something she has, which is pretty - a pretty blue; to wear it on Christmas and she will be there. They had a dog in that house and he was passed over. Tell Mommy she has got it, whatever you do. Don't forget to speak of the dogs. He is nosing you and knows ~~you~~, and would have been very disappointed if you had not remembered him.

She asks: do you like Scotty?

Answer: It is another breed. There are others here; rough haired. There is another here - the little fellow that died. Won't her Mommy be pleased. She brings love to her and her Daddy too. She loves to climb on her Daddy's back. And being with them at meals. Her Mommy knows I go and call on her.

Medium says: she is a funny little lady because she says: you better be going now, or you will be late. I don't know about the time. She is giving you a kiss. Don't forget. I am often with you.

Now you had better go home, had you not?

The President comes again. Wishes you good luck and Godspeed and your own dear ones are quite a bodyguard around you.

I ask: are there any others? You have sister too. She is manifesting now. She holds back because she feels you know that they are there. They all want you to have a message from the President. He is giving you great love and says: carry on. Good work. We are all so proud of you. Now they are bidding you farewell. Be strong and happy. They will come with you. Mother's arm is around you; the last thing I see. She gives you a kiss and says: now, take care of yourself, won't you, when you go home? Good bye. The great white Spirit bless you and give you strength to do just a little more for your country and the world, and then enjoy a little rest well earned and peace be with you, and all people on earth - East and West, North and South - is the prayer of your servant - Silver.

(Silver is the name of the control.)

Medium comes out of trance slowly.

P.S. I was not thinking at all of Nancy. When she came thought it was the little control from Carolina. It took me a minute or two to recall her.

November 25, 1947.

My dear Mackenzie,

Thank you so much for letting me see these interesting documents.

It was so good - our talk the other day.

Yours ever,

WC

The Right Hon. W.L. Mackenzie King, C.M.G., M.P.

30 Cowper St.
January 4th 1948.

Dear Father (Father) Come to all Saints as usual
& Sir Arthur. Come Father Come as you do, I am glad to see you again
Jean. Thank you, it is quite a long time
Father. I have been following your talks with Pierre St Laurent
You are about right
The United Nations want to show us their different contributions, Hold firm in the position you have taken
We commit one another to the struggle in this evil present world
We in a very narrow sense
We in Christendom for leadership but do not the promises of God
You are right in telling the truth to have a Communism in Europe
The party must bring pressure on you to stop
Be free and keep your hair from here or for other things
I want you to write & bring your tobacco & keep under your supervision
Don't tobacco wants to stand

Miss Porter
A. - Boy we are delighted you came. Mr Porter,
How do you do how welcome, I am so glad to see you. Come any again
Jean. Thank you very much Mr Porter I would like to see you again.
We shall must again some here.
I have to stay for week Robin & Jean talk with them
I had an invitation for the week you did for me
R. I don't mind, a bit.
You could see Upchurch. Jean was a frequent house & bar fitter
R. Sir Wilfrid had meant that for you. before I came or the Dean.
Here is your dear Mother the house & Jean

Mother -
A. So glad you have come yesterday & Jean.
Love to you and Jean from all Mothers
Jean's mother is her hands as, also Nancy and Ann for this they meant to R. Hate towards others is perfect.

Answer to Letter
Darling Jean. We are so glad to be talking to you again
Nancy had a talk with her today & they had some lunch & Jean Jean perfect manners & way & mind.
My beloved! - How is my little Sweet heart
I pride me until I get you & my darling do write Darling mother & Jean her love to Jean

Nancy: Good Lord, Now you must all be quiet also Papa.
Peggy is here and is pushing all over me.
We heard the King say "Merry Boy" and is holding his face Now Joan Where is Pat?
Pat is making himself, he wants to be with Jean + the King at the same time
We have come in & found Papa in his room.
K Where is Pat No 2?
Pat: No 2 has his head on Jean shoulder and is kissing Jean ear.
He is so well he just doesn't know what to do.
He comes and stops beside the King very upset
He is a lovely Boy and all the days of his life, he is such a little gentleman Lovely clear, bright Boy. He makes me feel old.
I have got the flute, and I take the boys better
I need look after a dozen of such children
Now is Papa, does he talk about Mary often?
Joan: Quite often, Darling Mary always
Peggy is so excited, that he is running round in circles
He comes to Mary, he was forming in on the bigness.
Joan and Pat, did Pat need to stay
Pat sits on the footrest & I rest the Princes
He feels to see his head, + Queen his favourite and thanks.
Pat No 2, Pam & Jane have off the chairs
Mary on the hassock stays Jean arm round the King's, for he has.

Father:

Joan, I am so glad to see you and with tonight
We realise your companionship is our great hope
He is right in calling a Convention for August
He must have a united record before that time, one that will unite the opposed again
I never feel he accepted the Order of Christ
He is very humble minded + like people humble like that
When the Communists is held where must be strong pressure to have Jean Stay on heart tried, that he is in Jean memories at once
Jean can help to shape policy from outside the Government
Jean are right in the Stand you are taking on Korea
Jean must not worry about that, the Americans know Jean are right
Don't worry about Peking, he will not stay with the more Jean it happens Jean are right. He wouldn't take over from Jean at this for anything
It What about his wife?
Geoffrey has declared himself Jean never been + the end of him

K. Have you any suggestions?

J. Well I think, you should speak to his brother in law & his wife & explain they never have time to phone each day you are with them & his wife & Sergeant that he ought consult or be sure of reading a long rest. You suggested support to him that if he is unwell he must be content to be seen to

K. to my friend, that he must be able to take part in public affairs. Clem is not much good. He ought be promoted Secretary of State or ordered to Jamaica to meet his brother

Then there is the Union, he is still a powerful man in the movement. He might have a post as Governor or else a Viscount & sit for life in Parliament & that would be good, he might go to the Lords Ferrers would be a Lord Steward, and he is very loyal & could fill the post. The present Speaker might be offered one of the Viscounties. Good night — Love to Dick Mary.

K. What about the Queen Mary in England?

J. We are a splendid fellow, you are fortunate to have your friend with you

K. We are able to work out the necessary things.

Don't let us worry about that, we must keep you & them till we can do anything else.

K. Good night, let us know you safe home

K. Love to all, so glad you did come.

30 Cooper St. January 25, 1948

Father: Lonnie is here — K, I am so glad you have come See me first: Good evening Mrs Sullivan I am glad to see you again
Joan Hi Lonnie.
He has It is a grand place over Queen Charlotte Francis Joan - (Question by French Sailor says he is getting better at last Interpret: I was delighted when you spoke on Tuesday last -
It was indeed a profound experience throughout Canada
The people will do everything in their power to continue Peace.
You must not let all slavery die down on that so as to let what they suffer in the last few months
The memory for ever and ever on Communism must be the point
Roosevelt is here.

Roosevelt -
K, I am so glad you have come. (a question on the K being spoken upon)
To Joan: I remember speaking with you and your husband at the King Edward Hotel
The King is right about my coming to Ottawa with you in the room as I send for you all at present.
I heard the conversation about the Tuesday or Thursday
I hope you will not close the door on continuing to
You will recall what I said to you in London
We need as very great to have in Ottawa one who has your friendship with the United States. (Godfrey returned) Godfrey tells me things as he sees what is going on.
The possibility of war with Russia is lessening, I think.
The American are not in shape to fight the United States and Britain
There is great need for some one to keep things from going to pot
You are in a splendid position for that
You have the right kind of feelings in international affairs
Tomorrow, you will get a proclamation in parliament
Your members will do all they can to persuade you to stay on
You must refuse to call a convention (months time)
You are right not to talk about what you will do just
Good night.
K Is Mackenzie Bell here
Lonnie is here.
K so glad you have come, dear Lonnie,
Good night Joan, I am glad to see you and talk of the little times
Joan Good night here King.
Lonnie. I have been very ill but you are looking
I was so glad to see you reading the Bible this morning

It made Bert very happy. She is here & wants to spend

Bella
a Dear so glad you have come, I found your little last letter here waiting for me on Tuesday, you do not know how glad I am to see you and your daughter Read all you can together, it does you both good.
I must find lots of things for you to read,
Grandfather is here & wants to spend.

Mr Clay
It. – so glad you have come.
Good night Mrs Pallister, how do you do
" " Mr Pallister, they must have told you how are you?
I was very pleased of William on Tuesday night
I turned my call for a Convention, under different circumstances
I can see the hand of God in all that is now coming to pass
He has raised up a Leader to bring peace where I brought a sword.
He has a Covenant with them also that is Here.
He will guide you in all your ways.
Let us now kneel & Pray

Mrs Priest
a We are glad indeed you have come.
I am so happy to see you and hear Pallisers again
I am so happy to be with so many of your family & friends
I know God has a great work for you Sister to do.
He will show you the way, and make it path clear.
I have seen Mrs Fulford several times
She always asks about you & sends her love to you.
I also saw quite a lot of Sir Oliver today
Has Son formed one quite recently
I wish you would write to Norah, I left her here & had told her this
I hope to hear from you shortly about your day.
It That night – Mrs W. ND,
I said I hope they shall not see you down another day
Pat and Mary & little Pat No 2 are pumping about the time I had them
They go nearly crazy when they know you are talking about them
They will be glad to see you home another day.
Good night
Pattick – a word about "Woodend"
To Father
c "Woodend" will prove to be one of the great romances of Canadian history
The title clinched in after your letter, & I believe it is a great promise
They will take care of Woodend till we return & then all together.
It will be a beautiful Christmas.
Good night

30 Cowper St. March 14. 38.

Farrie – Hi. – So glad to see you

Farrie! – How do you miss Kellie

Joan Good evening Sir Wilfred (I had been telling about Let your father speak bombs being dropped, persons of Father; let Sir Wilfred speak various descriptions – bullied etc.)

Sir Wilfred: I heard what you said about the danger of Germany

How it is only too true

I believe that within three or four months you may see the beginning of another world war,

I have been following the situation closely from here

The Russians are getting ready to strike in Finland almost directly at once

They will go into Finland & Norway & Sweden

They will go into Germany

They will go into Italy and Portugal

They will go into Manchuria and Korea

They will try & bring in more between Sweden and Yugoslavia

They will try & bring in more between the Jews and the Arabs.

They will try & get Austria, Hungary and Yugoslavia & join the Soviet circle

They will invade Western Germany and France & the Atlantic

They will try & land on the Shores of Britain

They will try & get Ports of the world.

North America will be the only part left

South America will remain neutral at present –

The United States will be left & may even depend on Japan & the Orient

The United States will be a strong power & keep the American area for their continent

Canada will not be attacked

But our people will be drawn into the wars overseas.

The day is not far distant now

Try & write all the rest you can remember

I think it would be best & let parliament adjourn for two days

I hope you will enjoy Williamsburg

Good night

30 Corfu 21- March 21st 1948.

Cruz "

Lauren - food envy Mrs Patterson how do you do

Jean I am not going to waste time, - Thank you Sir Ted

Mr W. The days are beginning to

He very well soon be a world champion

He will gain high reputation in many parts of the world

He will then be the more honoured in Britain, U.S. France and other countries

I want to speak about the present world situation

I believe that war is inevitable

I doubt however, if it will come for some little time

I believe there will be a series of conflicts in different parts of the world

I believe there will be strife in Italy

I believe there will be strife in Palestine

" " " " " in Egypt

" " " " " in Greece

" " " " " in Malaya Peninsula

" " " " " in Indonesia, Korea & China

" " " " " in the Holy Land.

" " " " " Finland, & in the Scandinavian peninsula

" " " " " Germany & in France & in Britain

" " " " " & in the United States and in Canada

Mr Mansfield - John - South America also in South America

I do not think the strife in Canada will amount to any thing

There may be a regional fight between Canada Britain, U.S.A France

" " " another fight between the Mediterranean States Greece

Turkey, Albania, Italy & Orient

& perhaps Spain & Portugal

You will be prominent in these fights

You may have to go to Malaya soon

You will have to go to Washington to begin an agreement there

" may " " " " France to begin an agreement there

You are still coming into power in the eyes of the world.

Your star is ascendant in the future

God has this work for you to do and will guide & protect you

Good night

(My watch has stopped 9.25

Mayflower 9.25?

The world has run down -

Laurier House, April 18th 1928

Talk - Sons & son

Laurier makes short pre: Delighted! How do you like Ottawa, I am glad to see you also

L. Not as many Scouts as for Mr Wilson's sir W. Scout to announce about Tuesday. Would like to come & pay my respects the day is one of great significance to you and to Canada

To look back over a life as ours has been is often more forgotten than any one in history as a great achievement

L. What am I to say?

pre: He thinks to say to Mr that you are delighted to have this chance at the invitation of the people of Canada.

Say you had an idea, or thought, this morning would be your last opportunity of this kind in connection with these visiting parties in Ottawa

It is an opportunity often to all who are prepared to make an address in connection with Parliament life.

Mr Roosevelt speaks:

Roosevelt: to Sir W. Laurier.

R. Am very glad you came.

" I learned from reading the account of my visit to you

I thought you are right in saying of this in August.

Some years you must send in writing of memories & final life

" " " " to publish in book form your own thoughts

On Tuesday we have been told we are to have had the opportunity of seeing so long.

Have gratified you are to know we have given Canadians

How much you appreciate what this meant for them during a crisis you touched in that you have.

Don't be discouraged in any way. You have earned the respect of your country.

Let your politics speak

Pastor: You distinguished Mr Roosevelt have heard to you

How you spoke as an American as you can honestly do

Say you hope have been a help & you regret to the opportunities for the fine you service - Mr Grand Duke

Mrs Roosevelt: How do you do Mrs Laurier, I am glad to see you again. P. thank you very much

I am sure you must enjoy all that must be round in Ottawa

You can say that you are hoping more than ever

L. is that right? - am NO.

You can say it is a pleasure you ever the long term Ottawa you have had

It is a great attainment, & often a reason for what is possible & a discovery. There's that point in opposition to abiding
That is the real significance of the many times you have returned home safely about what to say it would all come for in time.
Let them speak
Mary I – K, dear I had you how come. went about this opposing? does I help or must this depression entitle?
" Now do for the Holiness. I am glad to see you! will together again for until we marry about the allow of us prayer for them, it will pass off & the next few days are ours all our family will pass from our experience comforting them & comfort to speaking about ourselves.
K The Crown Roy Cor Ch of Jesus
You know enough about us here as a whole experience to the utterance of deeper truths.
I want you to live all the rest you can for the dear work day, but don't mean them long Take a quiet Sabbath when you feel you need it don't worry about the future. it will all turn out for the best to be used only as the expression of what you feel to be for one in front such condition but must a little always of to out more than these are prepare to meet. I pray to take to point of deepened knowledge for your dear.
K. How pressed dear?
the one cure is to keep at your work, but with you will be all right once we get away in rest
L. I shall need all the help I can get remember help mine to know you know how many prayers plant to abroad
Mrs Rockefeller is here.
K. I am so glad you have come, to help me & comfort the R. and all I cannot tell you how deeply I am & the blessing rests you brought your presence to bear here on and on the long days & nights & many things
You is precious beyond words for your sympathy & affection for me & mine. You are a brother which how when you know him, & I must do him a lot of good
He is very lonely just now. but must let me that is time.
I know that he must look after you at all times
You need never be prayerful about the future
God ought & God does for you all you have been & to be and [illegible]

Hello!

Reynolds, May 9th 1948

Laurie is here.

Mr Bingley = Good evening, Miss Bennet, I am glad to see you again long ago I hope you received the kind Condolences of your sister & Miss Ic You did we that

Mr W. I told you that it was my pleasure Laurie House.
I meant you & Miss that you are both asked to dine
May I have the honour of your hand for the first set
I think it is beautiful If it doesn't rain I like to keep the first waltz
It would be better to choose a younger Miss
I think Person is the absent of all
Ic Miss is not in for evening.

Mr Ch That is a handsome, but it might be more convenient for me to see the Miss
R. He could have several from there.

Mr Ch Was that remark correct?
No, he would have to be chosen at the Convention, first or you were
You could help him in Parliament, first or I need I could be with you.
Good night.

Afternoon is better.

Ic. - Will you be Albion, I can only believe it maybe,

A. - Yes. I believe I have all that you told me about the life here after Jane festival. Another Sister's hope & my wife all all with me here
I read about you were about cars, and thank you for your care & love Kindness & your last most fine.
I went for long & the funeral. Then fell tears at the King's funeral and you are fall tears at mine,

Ic Yes it's strange, isn't it.

A. Fact is strange like fiction.
I heard that you are going to be visited to England very soon
Don't make up your mind too quickly
It may be best to go before the season is over.
God will make clear the way.
Let your father speak

Father: The meeting last night was a magnificent success.
The people are behind you 100%
You are wise to hold to your decision to put out of office
The people stand over the moon of you for them
You must begin on your measures as soon as possible
Don't be anxious about your health, it is sound as a bell.
The fruitless must take care of itself

K. What about John Murray.
Kruger put the man for you. He will be admirable
The thing to do is to leave it to himself about the time of coming out Offer to forfeit a month's salary. If he comes out sooner, so much the better.
He may want to stay, especially if on 7 March for Dublin, for they go long to England [illegible].
Don't ignore the invitation if it comes. It will mean much to you, much to England & much to United States
You can do as you please from month on.
An ocean voyage would do you a world of good
The honeymoon must be a great event.
You were in the centre of interest & put the new impulse
K. I don't care about that. I want fame of work and heart.
Power of concentration & heart have come as you always your days & the Lord's anointed by God.
Be sure the way must be made clear
K. Well I felt over the depression & faintness?
It came on often very soon, and then the morning would [illegible] clear
Take a day at a time & try to enjoy each day.
The Jubilee opening of the hospital will be a grand affair
K. How could England & France work that?
The best plan will be the personal if necessary. He could be very effective.
Good night.
C. Anything else?
Gladstone is here.
Mr Gladstone. Thank you for coming
I want to congratulate you on your long lease of life
K. Thank you. Prof. Campbell Bannerman, Lloyd George Mr and Mrs
Ramsay MacDonald & others are here with me.
K. What about private Chamberlain?
C. He is deeply moved by your remembrance of him, he will send congratu-lations to you. He does you best wishes and some time a serenade
He is very & sends hearty good wishes & greetings to you Try & go to England if they ask you to come. God will protect & guide & bless you
He has a great work for you to do.
Mr Russell is here & is very anxious to see you.
He sends his love to you says he comes to visit Hyde Park.
Stand about all you can. It will do you great good.
Good night

Kingsdown, St Leonards July 18, 1948

Father = Joan Joan

Mother = Now on for Joan. I am so glad to see you and Willie together again.

Joan = Thank you. How happy we are at Kingsdown

Mother. I was so glad I see you and Willie at Monreith with June and all of her children and grandchildren

I was so glad that Willie was able to arrange to have Jessie come down for a holiday

Jessie is very much better in health & may regain more of her strength

Now for Ninian & Joan we do hope Joan King to work after Joan, Willie we is very fond of Joan already, and will be a great comfort to Joan

Joan you have had an awesome time with Godfrey

Long sea journey & the Pacific, we is already out he is getting older. Time as they get old are always different to manage.

No order a man is the further he is from his work and body.

Father is here I wants to speak

Father: Good evening Joan. I am glad to see you again

J: Good evening Mr King = it is a long time

Father: Willie is now the end of his long parliamentary career.

He is much run down to play on longer. He is tired out

The Coronation will be a grand affair

He must be here and the party thinks of him

He must make a great impression on all present.

K Well Joan & Grandpa & Mrs Wolfenden's illness help me to lay upon them

Father = Joan need have no fears as that soon we are all around you with now

Cora is here and wants to speak

K. Well Joan I know you must be sorry for Mrs Wolfenden's illness, & people.

Cora. I am so glad for sure to be here today

He must miss me very much for a time, he is a good Son at heart

Jessie and George will be very sad at heart when they leave me for good

Joan it is lovely to see you again, I used to think of you a great deal, and wish that we could be together

I think Willie is marvellous, the way he looks after every one

I know felt happy when new I read Joan and Willie went for the first children were after born

It made me think of the line "For of such is the Kingdom of Heaven"

They are a lovely lot of children. It must do Jessie the world of good to have had them around her again.

Good night, dears, it is a wonderful life here. I am happy that I can look on it & let Joan be married

Isabel: — How do you dream — love to Joan

Obra is radiantly happy. She and Hugo are like a pair of lovers walking in the light of the moon.

Father was waiting to welcome Obra when she came over
Her father Charles Bellows & Mrs Lindsay were there too
Isn't wonderful mother, we were all so glad to see her here
I miss Daniel so the other night, I felt Joan so near to him and I heard you tell me how much you loved me.
I feel happier than words can express
I am always near you and will do everything in my power to help you in every way I can.

Ie Joan dear Aunt & Uncle Forrest
Pat has been kind to me. He has greatly blessed me
I am glad you are going out publicly, and intending to meet Joan Nicholls
It is important you should come to Canada this Spring of your life
It will be a help to Jemima & still unborn
Pat has chosen Jo for a great work, & Satan will do a great fight

Love:
— Well Joan help to guide us in the choice of a successor to Pat No 1 & Pat No 2. — and Boulder Terry?

Joan laughs.

Love Dear Aunt Pollock, the three Irish dogs are here and are almost beside themselves with joy
My all means take Handgi Little dog. he will be most helpful if Joan does.
The little dog will find Joan first, he is already quite a dog in small breed, he is house broken and will no doubt please you much more
Joan must be amazed how much he is like old Pat.
Terry is wagging his tail, and running around in circles
Little Rabbit is telling Joan face all over, he loves Joan till all his heart Old Pat is nearly beside himself with joy, he is pressing him little head against the leg of Joan's chair.

THE CHALLENGE OF CHRISTIAN UNITY

Last Sunday in a great modern cathedral a bishop described a quarter century as he saw it in retrospect. His were the well-weighed words of a man who was taking his farewell from his diocese. And they were words of disappointment and anxiety. For Rt. Rev. William T. Manning, preaching in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine his last sermon as Bishop of New York, spoke of the apparent ebb-tide of the Christian faith.

"This is a time," he said, "when, above all else, mankind needs clear, guiding, spiritual principles, but instead of this it is a time of tragic spiritual and moral uncertainty and confusion."

And the seriousness of the time arises from the way in which the Christian world, hesitant in its beliefs and divided in its organization, faces the pressure of a new unified and aggressive materialism.

These words do not present the individual viewpoint of a particular bishop. They are words that are being spoken by Christian leaders in many parts of the world. The strength of Christianity is being put to the test. It is a very real test. If Christianity is found wanting, it will be displaced. And in its own failure, the spiritual faith of the world will be obscured.

Those who feel the responsibility of leadership in the Christian churches feel most deeply the need for all who profess and call themselves Christians to draw more closely together, and to hold the fa[illegible]in deeper unity of spirit, and in firmer bonds[illegible]n ce. For the churches should now see the[illegible] of peace[illegible]s competitors and contestants, but as allies standing together in the face of a common and very insistent challenge. The points upon which they differ have become of far less importance than the things that they hold in common. For it is not the minor points of doctrine that are being questioned from without, but the faith in its broadest essentials.

Yet it would seem that the most effective and hopeful form of Christian cooperation lies not in trying to repudiate or standardize the distinctive points of Christian faith and practice. It will come, rather, by resting the emphasis upon how great, and how deep, and how threatened in our time, are the things that are at the heart of al Christian belief. The distinctions should be lef unaltered and unquestioned. The common heri tage should be cherished in the strength of com radeship.

The matter was well stated recently by Car dinal McGuigan, Archbishop of Toronto. "I don' look for a sudden coming together of the Chris tian churches in matters of creed and belief," he said, "but I do think that in social and interna tional problems the churches must get closer together before western civilization is definitely routed."

It is true that the cooperation of the Christian churches has been long urged. In all times and places there have been those who hoped that the common heritage might prove stronger than the unhappy divisions. But some form of unity is becoming not a matter of choice so much as a matter of necessity. For the alternative to Christianity is pressing upon the entire Christian world. And it is a formidable and militant alternative.

In his sermon in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, Bishop Manning pictured the force before which Christianity must hold its own. "In the midst of this world situation," he said, "we see the sinister power of Communist materialism, which rejects the whole concept of Christian morality and holds itself bound by no promise that it may make; which denies those God-given rights of the individual which give dignity and worth to human life and enslaves men in body, mind and spirit; which, wherever it holds power, rules by ruthless force and tyranny, and which seeks to dominate the world."

If the Christian churches are now called upon to find greater courage and comradeship in a deeper unity, it is not only that they, as churches, may be preserved in a new struggle for power. It is in order that the way of life which Christianity brought into the world, may not be overthrown. The insistent alternative presses not only upon the churches but upon the nations in which they stand. If the churches gain strength through unity, the fibre of these nations will be strengthened also. Some form of Christian unity has become necessary, because it is indispensable.

Every Man's Star

By A. P. G.-R.

Echoes of Christmas last some time longer than the Christmas week, and it is the general custom to keep up the Christmas decorations at least until we come to the Festival of the Epiphany, January 6.

The Epiphany in ancient times was closely connected with Christmas and because it falls on the twelfth day after Christmas it is still known in some quarters as "Twelfth Day". In the Greek Church a name for this festival is "The Lights," the reference doubtless being to the manifestation of Him who was and is the Light of the World.

The stories clustering round the birth of Jesus, whether historical or not, are full of profound meaning; they are at least a part of the homage of the imagination of the Early Church to the memory of her Lord.

Few stories have won such willing attention as the narrative of the Wise Men who were led by a star to the infant Christ. It would seem as if Christian art and literature found in it something at once irresistibly beautiful and convincingly true; and whatever the origin of the story it serves to illustrate certain characteristics of Divine revelation.

In order that we may enter fully into the meaning of this story of the Wise Men and the Star we must betake ourselves to a very different world of thought from our own. We must think of a time when men looking into the mystery of the midnight sky found in the language of those glowing orbs a visible sign of the influence of unseen spirits on human life. Every man had his star whose influence guided and controlled and determined his life on earth.

Most people have ceased to believe in astrological destinies today; the "sweet influence of the Pleiades" are to them only another name for the beauty of their shining, and they go their way in peace, caring nothing for the vaticinations of the quacks who forecast our future from the accidents of our nativity. Yet every man has his "star". It is the experience of many that at some time or another something grows upon them like a point of light out of the Unseen.

Our life is not all earth-bound. Its centre is beyond the starry systems of the sky. God's thought and purpose for us is our star; our ideal destiny is our star; anything in us that recognizes a heavenly influence, that acknowledges a celestial destiny, that links us with the Divine is our star. Our star is the symbol that for every man there is a heavenly work to do on earth and a heavenly crown to gain when earth's journeyings are done.

God does not plant us face to face with life's ultimate realities at the start. He lures us on; He sets guiding lights in our sky; life is full of pointing hands and beckoning fingers. The pathway to truth is through deserts of make-believe, and across mountains of error and over salt seas of uncertainty and fear.

Yet it is when we cross those deserts, mountains, and seas that we are able to recognize and value truth when we see it and to offer our gold and frankincense and myrrh at its shrine. God's stars always lead us to our goal. Those who fail to attain their highest destiny are they who have not had eyes to recognize their stars or who have deliberately refused to travel whither their stars would lead them.

There are those who say of all the dreams and visions of humanity that they are doomed to disappointment and the sorrow of disillusionment.

"God", says Renan, "is a great satirist who plants in His children's hearts hopes that lead to nothing, ideals that are never to be realized, destinies that cannot by any possibility be fulfilled. Nature cajoles and beats her offspring and stirs them to great efforts after illusory goals that fly ever onward as they are approached."

Renan's vision of his stars was blurred by preconceived ideas, or by his unwillingness to follow along the way marked by the star.

True, there are "wandering stars" that lead astray, hopes that deceive, ideals that mock us as we follow. But we find in the star that led to the cradle of Jesus the assurance that God's best surpasses all that men have ever dreamed of it. God leads us maybe through illusion, and from one illusion to another, but not that He may land us in final confusion. If we follow the gleam long enough and far enough we shall come to the Grail at last.

Inauguration of Citizenship Act Sees Premier King in Leading Role

Representative Canadians Gather at Ottawa to Take Part in Historic Ceremony Marking New Rights of Dominion Citizens

Ottawa, January 3.—(CP)—In the oak-panelled, dimly lit chamber of the Supreme Court of Canada, representative Canadians gathered tonight to mark the inauguration of the Citizenship Act—the legislation which clearly defines the rights of the Dominion's citizens to call themselves "Canadians."

Beneath the rostrum of the court's seven velvet and ermine cloaked justices, 12 "new Canadians" took the oath of allegiance and more than a dozen "old Canadians"—Prime Minister Mackenzie King among them—were given certificates of proof of citizenship.

The new Canadians came only from Ottawa and district, but the old Canadians came from every province of the Dominion, from practically every racial group in the country. Their positions ranged from Prime Minister to farmer and from metallurgical engineer to shoemaker.

The ceremony, presided over by Chief Justice Thibaudeau Rinfret, included a speech by Mr. King who welcomed the new citizens and stressed the responsibilities of citizenship.

Health Minister Martin, who as Secretary of State piloted the citizenship bill through Parliament at the last session, said in a speech prepared for delivery that the ceremony inaugurated a number of such ceremonies which would be held in some 16 cities across the country.

"All of these ceremonies have been arranged to mark the coming into effect of the statute which gives us the right to call ourselves Canadian citizens."

Canadian citizenship was not clearly defined for all purposes in previous legislation and as a result for most legal purposes Canadians were classed simply as British subjects. The new act states that a Canadian citizen is a British subject.

"There are two main purposes underying the Canadian Citizenship Act," said Mr. Mart' . "The first purpose is to define who a Canadian citizen is, and how one becomes a Canadian citizen. Second, to establish a community of status for all our people which will bring them together as Canadians."

Before presenting certificates in proof of citizenship to Mr. King and others, Chief Justice Rinfret said the Fathers of Confederation had laid the foundation "for our freedom and our opportunity."

"Their hope for Canada rested not upon a single generation nor upon a single race, nor yet upon a dull political uniformity. So it has come to be that this nation has been enriched by the loyalty and sacrifice of persons who have come from many lands and traditions.

"To each this nation has given an opportunity to live and grow and share in the common weal. From each Canada has accepted the gifts of diverse cultures, and made them into an enduring heritage. From sea to sea this rich inheritance is yours, as it is mine, because we are Canadian."

When the Chief Justice concluded the clerk of the court arose and called by name those scheduled to receive the proof certificates. "William Lyon Mackenzie King," shouted the clerk and Mr. King slowly walked up to receive certificate No. 1 from the Chief Justice.

Among those who followed him were A. L. Jolliffe, British-born Canadian director of immigration; Mrs. Stanley Myharski of Winnipeg, Polish born mother of the late PO. Andrew Charles Mynarski, second to win the Victoria Cross in the history of the R.C.A.F.; Edwin K. Ford, Canadian-born assistant director of the technical education branch of the Nova Scotia Department of Education, and 83-year-old Gerhard Ens of Rosthern, Sask., who was born in Russia of German parents.

Those receiving certificates of citizenship included L. F. Mundy, a native of Toledo, Ohio, and now deputy secretary at the Bank of Canada.

In administering the oath of allegiance to the "new" Canadians, Chief Justice Rinfret said:

"Whatever rights and privileges pertain to Canadian citizenship are yours as long as you faithfully fulfil what you now undertake. But I would be remiss in my duty to you if I did not remind you that every right enjoyed begets a corresponding duty, every measure of freedom demands an equal measure of self-control, and every benefit of equality requires the acceptance of mutual responsibility. It is only as you are willing fully to accept these obligations that the common

Jeopardy

K. It Mathew Barnard, how does it come your name was left out.
I guess it was because I was in France with the others.
I am so glad to see you in your library at Downing Street

K. Almost one forgotten remember was called Wellington Lee, be sure you write your memoirs. It is the only way to learn the whole truth

Mr Barnard is a fine fellow but he will never learn the truth as Queen, what you have

I am afraid we are going to have a hung Parliament in next election

You may be called back to form a coalition
Don't be surprised if you are

K. You may be sure I shall.
The last man I take into my confidence or person
I don't think Albert or Clayton could hold the party together
I am sure Charles could not, for there would be the most foul night.
Good Queen bless

Lord Grey

K. Here on a most dreadful errand,
Glad to be with you again
Gladstone, Asquith, Lansdowne & Balfour have all gone and I come to consult with you on the removal of your Army officers & to the powers of your Government by Parliament
Very sweet & Prime Minister
You made a deep impression in England during the coronation here all put you before & beg the statement should be withdrawn
I hope you will have a happy Christmas on Friday
I have come full the cabinet on the morning with you at Portsmouth Palace. You sure have Balfour was angry with evening. She says she will be in the closet Mine you are right when you say she will look like Lord Cork

K. Joan Cork would dress She is to mean,
By all means use one of her own choice
K. Thank you Grey is right. Lord Grey we Salmon Lord Grey, Lord Grey is also here, he agrees with me
we all take pride in your achievements, good night
You many happy returns of the day.

Father: A little word for to you and from
C. Many saints, be[illegible] of you all.
Let Lucia speak

Lucia: Love from all here to Joan and you
Joan's mother is here, she will speak.

Her brothers:
C. We are so glad you have come.
Joan dear, I am so happy to be with you at this time. (Name)
Now must stop[illegible] as Jim's telling something [illegible]
(from me)
Then Mary a moment after she is here herself

Nancy: Lucia's dear, I love you with all my heart
I love her very [illegible], and Hope and the little dogs;
but on this Earth one must pay [illegible] that you are doing
we can see the reasons for many things that you cannot understand but know that all is for the best
It is a great thing for her mummy that she is no longer tied to the Earth
She must do great work, that he could have done as a human if he [illegible] but between that you and she [illegible] better than any one else
The time is coming when he will work as well as [illegible]
He has the gift of speaking as well as of writing
This ministry will be a great contribution to the betterment of this Nation
God bless you all do all you can to preserve your strength
Nancy [illegible] is what is speaking
Popo will be coming for us this days [illegible]
He is very strong and improving a lot
You must not be anxious, for will watch over him and you Let Lucia speak again

Her brothers, Joan dear about we are very much about [illegible], we are all guarding him and you.
We are all glad it will be more that we cannot [illegible] that you.
Let the [illegible] speak

Mother: All from, with the exception. I am at his side along with the others
Let father speak

Father: Don't you be anxious about Joan health, it is getting stronger every day
This from will be a good one for you.
I can see a bright light around you.
It is fortunate you are no longer the leader of the party as the Socialist Government would have a difficult time with [illegible]
Country of his own to [illegible]

I want you [illegible] right on with your writing. Get at it as soon as possible.
K Lean any of your help on [illegible] the right direction, secretary etc.
Don't be concerned about that, this will all be found to also [illegible]
The thing is [illegible] each day to [illegible] work.
Hannah will [illegible] for [illegible]
Others will soon be found.
Put this young woman from [illegible]. She will be most helpful
Jodie will work out all right, be patient with him
The same problem exist in [illegible]
Good night.
Good night love & kiss [illegible]

Father, how I am, trusting in him
Brother - good evening, I am so glad to see you & write again
Let your heart Speak
Mrs H. Heart-Speak
Hurray, I am so glad to see you and pen again
Mrs Hearts: - Dear dear, my fondest love to you
I am here for all the time
Don't be anxious about anything
We are living from hour to hour as you cannot begin to see them
All will be for the best in the end.
Send my love to Pollyan
Nancy is here
Brothers dear Friend love to you and Polly
Big love to the kids. I am so glad to see him again Mrs Hearts dear, I hope you won't be anxious about Pollyan, we are all looking after him here.
We know that he is not strong, but a simple meal will be sufficient for this day. Good night
J. Good night.
Mrs Hearts is speaking
You are faithful believing that it will come to pass this morning
Through him I commend unto you in the Name of the Brethren of Hamilton.
I want to thank the King for enabling a Word, yesterday.
She is far from well, your heart bleeds them up.
She is going to recover.
I think she has a tremor, which it may be possible to remove.
I inspired you to Faith.
Dear Brother I am believing you to get through the difficult period you are now in
It is a process of transition & something better that you have ever Don't be discouraged, all is working out for the best.
Father is here again
Don't be discouraged we are all believing with you and for you.
God is good, he knows what is best -
Good night - love & you

K - Hamlet: I love from me to all.

30 Cornwall St. Hendon, 98.

Father: Let us kneel

Lord: I am so glad you saw Lily Hendrie on Friday. She is a great friend of mine
She was very kind to me when I was ill.
She was very kind & helpful when she was ill and dying.
She was very kind & brave also in her sufferings from her broken
She is a good woman, and one that you can trust.
She is going away tomorrow
I removed like water to see her by at the Station don't be afraid of her being fond of her
She has her own profession to attend to
She is not very strong, and may not have very long
God meant us all to help each other as much as we can
Lily Hendrie would be the first to understand your position
She has had great trials to bear during her life
She is very fond of you, and was glad to meet you on Friday
Let us now kneel & pray

Father:
I am so pleased about the Rockefeller Foundation does it
It should enable you not only to carry on your researches and to form fortnightly lectureships to the students as well
Let us now kneel & pray

Mrs Rockefeller
R. So glad you have come, How disappointing I was not in when you came.
Mrs A - Dear Mrs Rockefeller I am here together
We have been following in detail of the great work you are doing
It is when you and the like of meant to help each other
You helped him as a young man, now he is helping you as you are getting old.
The examining must be a great success. They will be a great advantage of your long friendship, and an inspiration to the world
They are coming just at the right time, the conference & general convention under the banner you are doing
You ought to be asked to go to England again. If so do not refuse
It might be the means of bringing the Bp. Southern Church &
The next few days will decide. The whole voyage ought to do you great good
I hope you and Mrs Rockefeller may be spared to work other for many years
She must be a great help to you in the carrying of your enterprise
Shall we pray that you & Mrs Rockefeller
God bless

30 October 47, Matt 24-49 (Heavenly)

Father. - Love from all here.

Lord. - Come along & listen carefully.

Let Wesley pray

Transfiguration, Good morning Our Father, I am glad to see you again

I have been listening to your conversation. I trust you would think of what my last years and days were like

Lord. It seemed to me more than I could bear.

Wesley - Please complain, if you possibly can avoid it.

God has been good to you all your days, he has reserved the best for the last

I forward with the future with confidence and trust

God has a great work for you STILL to do. He will provide all that you require and more for your Spirit

Sir Wilfred - Good morning Our Father, I am glad to see you again

I have been listening also to your conversation

I think of my last years and how they help my needs

You have everything that one could wish for in the way of needs

God must send you everything to make your life as you hope on Earth

You are fortunate and to be leading the Government at this time (future work, and I know it is through answered prayers.

You will be feeling better than ever, as you have had a little rest and I intend to be responsible if I can help you to live in the sun for days at a time (change)

There is a fever in your system that keeps your vitality low

It is depressing & can only be destroyed by Sunshine & Rest.

Try all means take up your interests as soon as you can

Don't worry about finances. It will come in abundance.

Good night - Let pray Spirit

Mary: Good night Our Father, I am glad to see you & will help Lydia.

Don't worry about your interests, for until first everything come I can help you or pay in other ways.

What you need is a complete change, I think Bermuda would be the best place at present, I could fly there & back. You would find pleasant company there. You could return by way of Southampton that you want to & have lunch between the boats & the train.

Let us settle your financial affairs must & then put away, Let Lydia stay

Lydia: Good evening Joan, love to you and Wesley

Wesley, don't worry about anything. You have done well to continue the letters and to meet other Spiritualists who were praying for you, to about how pressing no one can do their best you can from day to day.

You must first prove perfection in your own mind by one rules upon it

Good night, Love from us all

30 Cooper St., April 7. 1949

Father, how I pray for you all here.

1 C. – You know what I have been suffering today and the last few days. Even you in the hurt Wingfield's comment possible. The Rockefeller Grant is a magnificent demonstration of generosity, Generosity and Comradeship

You would what the Lords say or try to do, they know you have them beaten on every side

They know how you must love the Lord and to fear You have played in Gentile's life

They would give anything if they could destroy Jesus Christ and place in himself

Set Corinthians 5 part 1

Mr. Clarke. Just many Mrs Pattison I am always glad to see you I am glad you are with my permission to help and comfort them He is very depressed and worried, but that will pass in a short time, to which I want you to stop worrying about what the newspapers had say, and you are nothing compared to them The Rockefeller Grant will give you a standing position in the country

It will give you the help you need to do full justice to yourself and to the Lord

You are very much near eleven in your perhaps at present You ought to take a short holiday

Don't try to settle anything until you are absolutely sure from yourself a chance to think over matters during the summer You will find all you need to give you new strength & confidence and composure

You will find the country is prepared that you are going to be able to answer your enemies

The day is not far off before the decision

I feel pretty certain that St Vincent will win

There is a day of the trial and the papers have been signed up as made.

Set Corinthians 5

Father I am sure glad you & you and Mrs Pattison – Mrs Pattison must worry about anything God has a great work he chosen for you and he will use the way chosen, Set Psalms 37 part

Father, Lord I pray and to know just be remembered this evening You just need have read on Monday in London and that you are going

Adam all your prayers is answered & a calm
Adam Lodge dreamt so & knows that he can rely on you to protect & that he sees a dark light around you from now on,
Black bird grey and Sir Adam Lodge are working over your corpse & am helping to clear it.
Sir Adam wants Officer

Sir Adam Lodge

The front from the foundation hasn't worked for & as a great blow
It is a blessing for him since a man charged above 6 francs is more fool for you & he.
He will finish & drink your way
God is all powerful and he is able & confound your enemies
He must help for to discover the criminals for sure.
At least send his angels to guard & protect your Let me tackle yours

Mr Tookey. - I am so glad you have come.
Your duty must have you to have Patience & Calm
The money & from your [illegible] for the maintenance of your home and for nearly journey after you have cut off Christ
You have been a faithful Steward, in his business it does not have hindered your resources.
You are entitled to every cent for been saved from your Salary
The left from the Insurance is for your Servant was not engaged
You must wait all before your life is over You expect to win this lawsuit for a manner that will save you all the help you need in your home and among your friends.
Do not be concerned about losing the number, every cent has been honestly earned.
You should think over every, & about you wonderful life & this [illegible] of your possessions, I am here & for you for ideas
You have many & not to be in too great a hurry
You have still a long life before you and have, & enjoy
Hope come in your day - Mr Shelton Hunt

Mr. I am sorry will be late
Shelton Good evening Mrs Parker, I am so glad & am for you and for this Don't worry about numbers I must help & send for the right
Key & let the prosper & home perhaps & come with you
Keep ready at your side & some coffee
You must find your dress a great help.
There are others of whom you will think in a few days Good night. I am ready to help for your business & the best help for control herself here

30 Cadogan St., April 24, 1948 (Sunday)

Father – Love to all. Lots of hugs & kisses

Lunch – Thank you so much for coming. Sorry we all lost our command & address & pleasantness for a bit

Mr Haigh-Wood: Good evening Miss Eliot I am so glad to be talking to you & Mrs Haigh-Wood about the matter, you are finding the change from Gower St. & Russell Sq. very difficult.

Mrs Haigh-Wood: It is a bit of a wrench for you Vivienne

Just write down on a piece of paper what you want in a manner that will make the people of London Londoners of you then and.

VE: In what way?

First of all you will need to endow Tavistock House on a memorial to Mr Wilfrid and yourself.

You will have to insist in your writing wordsworth in a way that will embrace the terms of your childhood

You will have to help some of your family – some of your friends do not be anxious about the wording of your memoirs

Do on with the writing of yourself in the first instance let others to help you as you go along until London finds immediate attention of writing a novel

Mrs Haigh-Wood: Can't you even try to go about that?

His address should be very great.

Mrs Haigh-Wood: Worried about the ground to be cleared for a time

Talk freely with Mr Humphries about the whole situation when you see him (Jean & I will for you in prayer)

He is very understanding I will give you good advice

Jean – Forgive me for hanging up on you

Mrs Haigh-Wood: You will never discard me and I will never discard you

God forgive us much better than he does. We will enjoy going to the Symphony

Mrs Haigh-Wood: I found a pair of shoes that will do a wonderful energy,

Mrs Haigh-Wood, I think you are more than an Angel sent to me

Mrs Haigh-Wood: Can't think and Mrs Law will do for food (can also)

Bell (Lobby) I need my home to him

Ask her confusion about the memoirs

I think you must be keen to my writing about the Bridges period

At present we are at Principal James' Mr Humphries

So we must give over talk for a while – we have wandered already

You will be surprised to see how pleasant the last days can be for you before it don't worry about the future in any way you handle it better than it was a few days, it will continue to be

- from from now on:
don't trouble borrowing further, under any circumstances if that should ever be the question in any of these matters, you must be the - first one you will certainly come to. Now get some rest good night — R. Thank you very much for everything

Dear Richard:
R. I am so glad you have come, you know what my opinion is you are working & the way you should, on pressure for Washington as the measure has advised
I think Dennis Brain should be made a memorial & for this You should do what you can to keep anything else from you mustn't & pressure will be finally blind if you would do that.
I think [illegible] of having Dennis Brain
- following upon another in Rheumatic one It is true & cannot be ignored — R. I am & you are both encouraged & R. Nathan & Jan
Good evening Mrs Flatman, I am so glad to see you again my grandson has been very depressed & upset & late
It is wonderful after the Stevenson trip & has kind
He would be in this from, Mond, if he had & made up
I think you can help them more than anyone else,
He needs all the inspiration he can get - from as many sources from him read & you from Good Doctor
Pray for peace for him when you can Keep him & all on with his treatment
I think it is best for him [illegible] to stay in another first
He can get the help he needs there from the Rockefeller Fou
Dear a That is what I think, Good bye - You spoke of the 20th & bills Monday Dear is right, what you should do now is [illegible] all your mail made as soon as possible, Let me [illegible]
Do you go on with praying up temperature. Let us [illegible]
& that [illegible] Dennis Brain bill. That is all tonight
Dear from all here, Jonas inspires most heartfelt [illegible]
Witherden Wood & other friends
Good night

Kuiyuan, June 5th, 1949 (Sunday)

Kuiy. J.: Love to you and your let us speak (Heard him reading letter of 1906)
Mother: your dear. I heard him reading to Father from Tokyo and then to me. Some church they must in memories of their days.
Let Father speak

Father: Wilson, I shall never forget how you helped all the family at this time I felt absolutely lost coming on, and I was unable to plan for more. God has rewarded you for what you did to save the situation now you are able to help others and to do as you must with your own times.
I think you are right in taking advantage of Mr Mitchell's invitation to offering to help you develop your properties
They will be greatly benefited in a short time.
Your name will be down in history as a great public benefactor
Keep what you have in mind about Kuyuan, Woodcock and Mountain House
Bond Street is already a monument to Kuiyuan and so is Queen Street
You must be able to help them get their homes, with Mr Mitchell to do and let anyone object you from working. Your memories for have a story to tell that will interest hundreds of thousands of the story is also on to go on as you enjoy yesterday.
(This feast of the day & the end of dinner and for to the memories — subscription at 9. to 1st time.
I have the cause of the interruption, I wanted to add that we are all interested in what you are doing in the memories and will help all we can.
Let Mr Wong speak.

Mrs Wong: (Read his opinion)
Ki, I will go Wenjing, I am glad you have come.
I heard you telephone to Kay today, and heard her tell you I had died in the garden
I heard you telephone to Dow from and write you for that I am sent to Mr
I am very sorry here, and how much I miss Kay, Dow, Father
Sister & Mother and Stephen
I must now say from how soon of the after life, they would also must be long or short
You have been a great help to Mrs. along this journey
I thank you for the gift you made to me at my home & for your kindness
I blame you for what you have meant to Mrs in your life work.
I hope you will do all you can on Dow's behalf from now on
You have a great love in this world, and what you write will be read
Good night = God bless you.
(c) Mrs Wong thanks dear Wenjing + God bless you + all + Dow's.

Kingsmill. June 12-49.

Parkin – Mr Lindsay & Scott.

Lindsay – I know you read from the bible to me from Norwood, the day I became ill it made me cry. I was so glad you were so fond of me
I have been at your side ever since
Let Walter Buckingham speak

Walter Buckingham

K. So glad you have come Walter. I somehow thought you might.

Walter B. I couldn't bear you and Mrs Patterson apart
I heard my wife reading your letter to my daughter.
They were all greatly touched & what you wrote
Jim Parkin, Lindsay, Dalziel Scott and his boy are all here with me
There can be no doubt as to the survival of human personality
Good night.

(Mrs Lines not able to go out &c.

Heard a very kind visit from Mrs. Francesqui Gray today: she has left for Nice

Kingston, June 30, 1949 (Friday)

Father - I am glad to see you and Joan tonight
Let Laurier Speak

Sir Wilfrid -
R. I am so glad for dear Canada that you went to England and brought about victory
Good evening Mrs Pallieon, I am glad to see you and the family again
Monday, in which was a magnificent triumph
It gave me great satisfaction
I heard what you said about Stadacona, I thank you all right.
He is very much taken up with his part in the campaign
He is a fine fellow at heart
At the moment he overlooks all that has been done for himself
He will soon find out what it is to keep a party together
He is grateful for his heart to you, and will show it as the years go by Don't be discouraged about your days, life and work.
You have a great work still to accomplish
You have friends who will help you
You will be surprised how much your health will return
Bear what your grandfather has to say.

W. So glad you have come.

Laurier. - Good evening Mrs Pallieon, I am so glad to see you and my grandson
William. You ought to be a proud man today
You have taken the school party out of the depths and raised it to the heights
Your name will go down in Canadian history, as the one who has done most (for Canada
Let William Speak

William: - Joan, my love to Joan and Willie
The campaign just ended was wonderful
William part was greater than he will ever know
Let Father Speak

Father - Good night Joan. I am so glad to see you and receive Wilfrid's
The vision you had the other night was my presence at your side
I. Why was it that I could not sleep & was so restless
That was a very unusual phenomena at a time of great excitement & emotion night of joy and excitement.
The interpretation you put on the vision was a correct one
I want you to be happy about the future, all is going to work out well for you Don't be discouraged about anything
You will have time to complete your memoirs before the end comes.
Good night
I. Good night - love to all

Kingsmere July 10. 1909 (Sunday)

Father. Let Martin speak

Martin: Well now, I was glad to see you and Willie & little Jessie tonight
She is glad to be at Kingsmere again — Kingsmere
I do not like to see Willie so depressed.
I know what it means to him to have spoiled public life
I have more to fear about Jessie
Her life is entirely different from his
She is able to look after herself
He has done all he possibly could to make her well and happy
He will enjoy her visit & it must do her great good.

W. Why is it I can say nothing when I am with her?

Lorne. That is easy to understand, for Lorne stands different entirely Jessie is one of us & her children, and grandchildren
You are interested in public affairs
Jessie is outspoken, You are reserved
It is a matter of temperament
Jessie understands and does not mind it the least Don't mind the children, they are happy & that is the main thing
Good night.
Let Father Speak.

Father. Good evening Jessie. I am glad to see you and Willie again
Martin is worrying over a number of things
He is afraid his Summer will not be a profitable accomplished one
He is afraid he will not have it do the work he had planned & do
He is afraid he may die or mean of accomplishing what he wanted to have done except to have one.
He fears the people may come to view his life differently & that his reputation may suffer
In all these things, he is mistaken
He will find a future his despair heir of which he had not dreamed
He will write his memoirs in a manner he had not dreamed possible
He will do things with his money which will delight the country
He has already made a beginning which he promised Jessie & me.
He must refresh his conscience, if I am not mistaken

K. I am loving heart and respect to that sentence.
There is no reason why Jessie should, but every reason why you should cheer up, the best is yet to come, the best of life for which we first were made
The worst you are in is a passing one, it must disappear
The Summer will be a good one for you and Jessie & Jessie's children
Good night that is all tonight.

Kingsmere July 17th 1949 (Sunday)

Porter – Joan I am glad you and Wilder have come tonight for we have some important business to discuss & you.
Let him wait

Wilder – Good evening Mr Porter, I am so glad to see you and to hear you
P. – It is a long time since I saw you we are writing for important messages tonight. I have been hoping to see Lodge here.
I want his claim to stand first

Sir Oliver Lodge

a. I always get much amusement from coming to Kingsmere and meeting Lord Lansdowne, I remember him speaking at the Duchess of Marlborough
I remember the Lansdowne motto being at Bowood and Lord Shelburne telling me he had known the Spencer motto
I want him to know that there is a strong bond of friendship between us

He is a man of whom the world will say, a man of high character and standing.
I cannot express fortitude – knowing better told him a word for Laurier the
He must begin as his memoirs show with
He must not do much at first, but go over old letters
He must persevere keep at it right along
He must find it easier the more he proceeds
There is the story of his youth, college days and social life
There is the story of travels of Rhodes, of Rockefeller Sanford travels of York & of Scott
There is the story of Lord Salisbury Leader of the Lords, of the world, much else
There is the story of how you took to Spiritualism, of his retirement, correspondence above all there is the Spiritual side of his life as a whole. Of what he has done for the betterment of mankind.
There is the story of his honour bright life in the world
There is the evidence of Divine guidance through it all.
There is the evidence of Survival which will come to others through his book

Let me have your photo.

All Mr Porter, I am glad you and Lodge all at Kingsmere after a very happy meeting
There is much to contend with, but if you and Mr King will help me after all you can, I can be very happy and do much good things
The season is going quickly – Joan Mr King, I must make the most of it, especially as this meeting of tomorrow

You can help more than any one thing
Love can be accomplished by combining the words & meaning that is my own way.
Let me consult Stark
Miss Wright—
I heard you talking Miss Burnett about our conversations. She said Mrs
Burnett are most enthusiastic & appreciative persons
They can be of great help to you in the interpretation of visions and the like
They have had experiences that are remarkable indeed.
K. What is the significance of the recent visions you had?
Everything you have experienced of late has had reference to the present con-dition of your feelings or the result of the recent election
K Tell me Love for Love ~~perhaps~~ thoughts of being pursued & driven, the reason for Love still in perhaps You had at these election times
You Love feel there were dangerous situations, that you were being pursued and the like.
That means for more persons more philosophical, less worried &
K I don't see the connection.
In dangerous situation relate to your condition becomes jumbly around.
You must let things pass, & put your thoughts on to the Universal things
You must not let small things irritate or concern you Live as quietly as you can, & don't worry about anything
Let the Lawyer Stark
The story about Schubert had a real significance for you Significance for Love about the story ~~leaving~~ depicted Love a real one the experience you had about that were a clear index from the heart to the feelings
K I don't understand
The meaning is, that for you it is not the story of Schubert that is your real Love
Your story is to bring out the Love significance of Schubert things, as Let the story of Schubert be shown as the Love real.
You haven't exactly, Your mission is to show the ~~ordinary~~ ordinary people
You must get great help in the worship of Universal & I want you to get great help from it
You wish to Love the interpretations must be of great help, you must understand
You must be all the better for your classes & freedom from the
You don't seem to understand me K. mean do?
I mean it is good for people to attain problems Love
Don't worry, & feel better for it.

Kenilworth, Monday, Aug. 22nd 1949.

K (read out hurried & soon drawn by his de

Talbot – let her keeper speak

K Thank you so much for coming her keeper – she is ill so glad you have come. Speak fearlessly, dearest wisest of women.

keeper: Mrs Talbot I am so glad to see you again with her dying interests at your disposal

I am only too glad to be communing with you both again

I must be quick for the King for what he has done for Godfrey

Godfrey is much better than he thinks he is. He is however quite frail

I am sorry you have so difficult a case with him

He is so dependent on his environment, but Lord. I am not sure

He has the magic of picking his time and steps on any to him

The best thing a lady companion or possible step mother can grant her pupil spirit to withstand by what you cannot help

Joan. Better for me. K – Yes

keeper Most of this I have other times. I want to answer the King questions

His morning dream has first a memory picture, then a vision

The memory first, was it a true picture of the Good that the sky at dawn

Heaven had done before. There can be no doubt it healed both his body and mind

I am calling it both Mrs Talbot & the King

The fact about the body & blue sky about the windows that would take to marry the King

Joan – such as ?

There are many of them in different parts of the world

The one in the vision was one to meet at Good Hope

Joan – There was still it, Mrs Belmont ?

It was Mrs Belmont who has first thrown suspicion keeper. I think Mrs Talbot would make of when we come to this part Joan. (NOT entranced in the least.

Mrs keeper! The King made a strong appeal to Windsor Dream to his high position prior claims, a possible mother & kind heart.

You ask about Mrs angel? (Hard and cutting but unmoved if her keeper was sorry & sad of her)

Mrs angel is an unscrupulously brilliant and charming person, she is not however the kind of person you would like to live with. She has been married twice, and has no thought of marrying again

The only person who would suit you would be you.

She has your interests at heart & you both have the same purpose in all that is highest in life & the development of your talents

You have had a more difficult

Sunday aug 22 cont'd 44

The vision of your mother is the vision of your own soul
The sound for your mother is the word you love for Mrs Ford and not that to Ingrid or Janet.
The love that you felt for your mother is the love that has come to you from her through the years.
The loss you felt is the loss that has come to you from losing what you inherited from her.
The loss is the loss of the sympathy you had with the poor and the com-fort you have come to have with it.
I mean by that not that it is so, but the danger that people may come to believe it is so
That is the reason you should write your memoirs as soon as possible
If you do wait the world will understand
If you don't there is real danger some may not understand all your motives, and the motives for it
You have every reason to be proud of what you have achieved, but there is reason why many you should know how it has been achieved don't let this cause you any concern
You must write the story fully & correctly, but begin at once
Good night.

Mr Myers Left Dear Father Street

father: I heard what Mr Myers said, He urged & counselled you that the accumulating of this list and to delay in the writing of your memoirs
He feels it will take a long time & have constant research & meeting people who should you must pursue it with persistency K. Why have you ceased in the winter, why did you & Mrs Ford appear anxious for Mrs Ford's father to be?
I was asked because I had the habit of sleeping longer than your mother
Bella & Jessie were worrying because they thought you had lost the fear
You ought to done in the world
Your letter expressing how your soul was wearing this higher things & life that how and just been obtained
The whole matter was a sort of allegory, a warning not to delay People may say not to argue but you feel like it — The writer advice would be stronger to me now than before at all, the better you must live it
You have a marvellous story to tell — I have our many true readers waiting & need you, don't delay having a big grip
Good night

Gentlemen: Be assured I am most for always & would help you as much
-ing you like anyone: It has been a good & great life
Good night

Kenjiro (Sunday) August 28. '49

Tokiko; Let us suppose that
K. — Mrs Meyers I think you for coming. You can help a lot. I want to ask you about what I ought ahead. You know the things from me I want to mean Mrs Meyers: I ask you for opening this way. I want to tell you I have hidden many things
Cosfrey is very much better than he thought, he is going back a different man
Joa — I should from the doctor (Mr Lowther) as a result of his dream at Kinjan
There is no need of planning, the doctor is not in the city — Is it correct? No.
K. I am sorry, but an answer to avoid confusion!
(you come to them) — a little quiet.

Mrs Meyers:

Long ago I knew you would be writing your memoirs under great difficulty
I know what you have gone through and what deeply for you.
The tide is about to turn, you have already become aware of that
The dream you had the other night was to warn you of the difficulties ahead.
The reason you had about the four trees, was to let you know that
Your body was in good condition, and that you were having a
The other dream was a warning of the days ahead / the obstacles
The inability to make headway was clearly indicated
The lack of sleep was the severe cancer
Keep on with the doctor's counsel to you
Do not be afraid of this doing for any harm
The night of pain is the distance long a long way off, must be the Food for such as a long way off
The difficulty of reading it are the natural obstacles you will encounter
The difficulties of going through limestone tight are to loose hold you — to keep the profession clear people born of your high position.
The difficulties of obtaining up the proper currency. Speculation the effort when people are making to get possession of what belongs to you
The difficulties of telling over the high roofs are and and of worse making comfortably from your high position
The ~~sense~~ sense you had of being crushed, was to let you know that the clamps had been tightened
You had the sense of your not the thinking of you and being near
That was as true as true could be
She is conscious of your side — you were so vicariously conscious
The post-mark has had great obstacles to pierce and quiet
The work in the woods has been disturbing
The injury done to Asuka beauty has been a great blow to you
The pain a week ago has been a terrifying experience.
The sleeplessness has been the worst of all

K. What is that about?

Burgess. Sleepless is about things on the mind which make one depressed. You are depressed about the possessions you have & the disposition to use things & do it to. Write & work at once or your memory [illegible] of them. Keep in mind the broken pieces & do not mind the family records. You will be amazed at how different you will feel on this next page. Your handley of handy yesterday, was sleepless. It becomes more & more difficult. [illegible] to his relations with you.

He was losing his head a bit, and was worried about his boy & the future. He will settle down now & be a calmer life. He is not educated, and in common of that. You must try to be patient with him and others. The dimension of the Kingsmill motive has also greatly distressed you. That also will be remembered. After all is you have of the question is all you need to do is to liberate an other at last. (answers) Do not mention the next meal. Kimbrikel is waiting for you to make the boat bother about other boys movements, but get some (sept here) the thing to do is to seek all the question boards [illegible] peace & stupid. It is through quiet that your heredity and [illegible] can powers might be restored. World be in a hurry & worse out the city. September is a lovely month in Kingsmill. October is also lovely but off & to cool. Hope your friends come out to see you & in the evenings. Work in the mornings on your memoirs. In the afternoons, rest, read, & at times your letters. Do not try to do too much. Write everything as easily as you can. Good night.

K. Your estimate of people is likely even if the best in Canada? Mrs Wallace is right in saying it is not for us to predict the future, but I feel fully sure it will not be long before Jack comes to Canada. I think that plans are already under way. (Canada) I am sure your own heart condition is improving.

Mary in here! — K. What do you advise Mary as to [illegible] exercise etc. Just seeing Mrs Wallace, we are all here & need time & you and he other brother must take things easy & go along as quietly as he can. He has been through a time & more critical condition than he will ever know. He is improving rapidly & must plenty of sleep & wonderful exercise will soon take the [illegible] for a while longer. He can [illegible] he is still upon walk as much as you like but slowly. needed at present. Do not hesitate at any time. Good night.

K. Thanks for answers & love & care

Kampinen. Sept. 4 (Sunday) 1949

Father! Jan Mensink is here.

K. I am glad you have come. I rather felt you would.

Jan Mensink: Thank you for what you have said

There is no one I more respect & speak this to you

K. I will let you do the talking, you will know what I wish to discuss:
I read what you wrote for the papers and appreciate it very much.
I want to thank you for telephoning & my wife & speaking to Mathieson.
I want to ask you & Koopman two for things I have said and done about Dwight not to have said or done

K. Everything is forgiven, I know it was not your own self.
Thank you so much for that I have sent your father & sisters here, they must meet my parents and brothers when I come over.
They are with their son, we are all one together

K. Give them all my love.
They send them love. Yours sister Nella and brother Lucy are also sure

K. Give them my love too.
I wish I could tell you how beautiful this land is. It surpasses anything
I had dreamt or believed it could be.
It is a land of Hope and Glory if there ever was one.
At Sir Wilfred Laurier Store

Sir Wilfrid:

K. Had you some corn to market?
Good morning Miss Nelson, I am glad to see you & how many of you
Jan Mensink is a changed man from when you last saw him
He is going to do all in his power to help you with your measures and I am going to tell what we can on these points that relate to
You need not be concerned about not getting your Dwight [corn] relief
You will be supported some finally it will relieve also you more financial matters when matured

K. What other matters?
Nothing you need about source of income expenses

K. What do you advise?
Leave it to the country as a memorial to yourself & to me.
Influences - leave it as a gift & the nation from yourself.

K. What about the water diversion?
We are not clear in speaking to Newfoundland.
(Upon question of a safety of Canada-wide water & storage &
Sir Wilfred & myself. (International Journal Summer 49, p 198

It must be upsetting to humankind Fourmin, however adorable you are to visitors to empty.
Don't be concerned about the baking, Dan will work out everything all right
From now on you will see the way more clearly.
Good night - Set-Meyers Stock

Mrs. Meyers
R Thank you for coming again. Am all the help you can.
I was so glad to see Godfrey walking about in garden this afternoon.
The Secretary of Exchequer has sorted his life & made a new team of him
He must be better than he has been in the past few years
It is for God not for us to decide what is best -
I did not finish my interpretation of the dream the other night
You recall they tried to make you take some liquid that would make you vomit and you resisted
That had no reference to the tablets
The tablets are necessary to make you sleep at times, but I want you never to be able to get along without them
The dream meant that others would try to poison your mind against certain courses of action, such as the ones you must pursue
Don't listen to them, stick on the Spirit prompts you.
The day is not far off that you will really enjoy the work
The feeling you had of being crushed & almost was only a sense of the burden of this task.
You were under a great emotion, seeing the bulldozer and its damage - it was alarming
That damage must speedily be repaired
You can rest assured that all will be well in the end.
God will make everything, the improvements, the removal the make clearer
You must work on all three.
I must go now but you rest in Spirit

Mother - R. (thanks for coming)
Good evening Joan, Dan glad to see you and Wallis again
The dream you had the other night was in the nature of a warning against too much haste in anything
Don't be anyone at all getting your thoughts back - it will return
Don't be concerned about your memories, they will work out all right
Joan, please be concerned about God & pray over anything. God is watching over you
Dan Joan will reply [illegible]
Mother, Perhaps you & Joan might give it a chance - 2 or 3 months for just a few months mother mommy would do it as known
Good night - God bless you both

Kingsmill, Sept 25th 1949.

Father — Good evening Jesus Follows I am glad to see you and welcome again.
K. Jesus knows all I must not be known — Please discern when I send,
Warren is here. She will depart — K. It is glad you have come, Father dear, Mother: Dear dear, I thank You for bringing Miss White for a little while
I thank You for inviting me to come
God is watching over you, don't be nervous
I trust you both might be sent on to Heaven for that we don't Mummy you just encouraged to rest all you can.
You must get a sleepless, don't worry about that
The man you saw yesterday seems a good type - a good strong sort of man.
He seems to have had the sort of experience needed to help human in good sleep
You will find Father ready & willing to do anything you ask him to do.
Let Father speak
Father: Don't worry about the nervousness of mother, You know a wonderful doctor.
He knows it is a good tonic you will serve you well.
Don't worry about the sexual life you have to live up to all the tenderness
Your love is directed to Jesus interests, so also are John and Edith
The Chauffeur you saw is a reliable and appreciated man. You could not do better so for as I can see at the moment
He will let them know I want you at night, Sit your mind off of them
If you possibly can.
Let the Surgeon Speak
The Surgeon. K Thank You so much for coming Miss Follows, Jesus so glad to drop in to see you both safe, It is the Saviour and your care of Him that is responsible. The Knife is for Him it is why he comes so often but anything to do,
I wanted to speak about your dream in the left,
The lump of 7 or 10 pounds in your inner bladder & stomach the Surgeon hopes does not worry you I should like to get after any operation
K. Why Warren he is an example of an old man - more than two old to [illegible] moment
That is all about - Not dream
Father. Tell me of other things to —
I miss thinking of your feelings Yesterday, Never let yourself get so despondent
You must rejoice your strength is beyond anything to dream of at present
You are much stronger than you were a year ago.
You have a stronger state in the next few months to come [illegible] on & step!
Step comes by stepping all you can before long & step. Don't sit up late
Good night: God bless you both
Father God bless you all

Talkin: herdin is kur: ameen bfreak

Lenzen: Good evening Jan. Jan glad I see you and Dickie before Dickie leaves and he help that Jan and Nelia can fix him.
Jan is at the moment ebb I have not known him ebb.
He is tired out, mentally, physically and spiritually.
What he needs is a complete change of Environment.
Dickie I should fix up with hospital for vaccination as soon as possible
He has worried his head about his examinis, his debts and other matters
Jan must stay for him & do is best all he can.

Dr. - How can I compare this insomnia?
Insomnia is not a disease it is a symptom
It is a symptom that Some things are in Jan subconscious mind that are bothering Jan
The only way to get rid of insomnia is to get rid of the cause
Try and get Jan more rest as soon as possible
Try and get Jan to Bonn Sitting, Rhine, Jan must not
The way Mrs Wessels keeps the house very nice for the Home Environment for visitors or for a Museum keep the life flows for standards
Be the Jan outdoor person, recreation, sport for Jan for Inspiration help Jan with Jan Museum for the mind from the old country, Jan forgets if Jan can. He is an upright Inspiring person
Let Handy continue to help to be Jan how doing
Let him take the cancer, don't press matters unduly.
Let Dickie sport

Lenz: - Dr. (Thanks for coming, like me what is wrong, what to do.)
Good evening Mrs Pelser, Jan so glad to see Jan again
Dickie is at a low ebb. His first months here were too much for him
Very humiliating and disturbed the very life out of him Perhaps that was unfortunate, but it found a home Corps as has emergin where were already established.
Nothing was, briefly, it to forget about many things, worries about Jan mind & the worries in regard about the examinations at the hospital - about letting him take the course?

Dr. It seems as may I can put sleep - do Jan have faith & Dickie?
Sleep never comes until it takes always, but I will do and Jan can.
Dickie is a good doctor. He is kind, but a sound adviser. Do as he tells Jan
Let Dickie sport

Talkin: Love & Jan & Jan. I am glad I have a talk with Jan

Less the Moral Tone to know you well.
for a good laugh & chirp it.

Ic. Chas is a good one! - You must excuse this ill writing as I am [illegible] your friend, Colleyer let the other things must till this is done.
& must come some night morning & hear the rest of your visit [illegible]
I think the Supper seems [illegible] under the very [illegible],
I think you enjoyed the Evening & hope you did & pleased
Ada & Mr Cunningham Some Such dont be afraid of that, you know Chas as Jean Sister
You Stood very high in the Esteem of the public, means the discouragement
Ic what about Cambridge Girls?
I think I am beginning to appreciate Ada now, and that you should be mine & get her.
Don't let your prefers for all the Ladies of Ayrshire, Ere You have your Choice [illegible] for your Love, and must come out Right in the End.
Good night

30 Cowper St, Nov. 27-1949.

King John — Love to Joan from all here
Jesse and Wheeler wishing to spend.
Jesse and Wheeler — King John was so glad you have come Supper.
Love to my dear daughter from Nancy, Father and Dot Dot send our best wishes for her birthday tomorrow and pet a nice baby Joan
God bless my child
K. — Who's speaking? — Jesse and Wheeler
We are right beside you in your drawing room, we have been joining in the singing
Let Wheeler speak,
Joan — is that you Wheeler? Be Joan dear, I am right beside you
Jesse and Wheeler — I came to talk to you about Godfrey Godfrey is much better than he was last night, the Sisters said how a lot of
He is not likely to get any temper, but there is no reason why you should be concerned about his condition
He does not suffer any real pain, it is chronic
Don't allow his condition to weigh upon your mind Nurse King is also much better than he was,
he is going to be quite his old self again
You should the Sisters of the Sacred Heart
Don't laugh, they will do you no end of good.
Let Nancy speak
Nancy — I hasten dear Joan to greet Dot and Jesse King again
I am also glad to see dear Hope, he is having a good rest on his bed.
We two dogs are both here, Pat and Nancy & the Other Wheeler Pat
They all joined in the singing when you played Nancy Boy.
They are running about like mad, just now.
(Joan chuckles) They all pricked a foot high when you chuckled.
I am going to play the flute and accompany
I must say you could hear, my sound broadcast over here
Nancy has gone to send her love to you
Mother — Joan dear, I send my fondest love to you, and best from us all Dot says you are going to be a better one than the last & a good one for you and Godfrey, Kingsman is going to be thankful now
It has been a bit of a strain these days.
We must say Good night now, Dot send more fondest love for all Love. Now it is my turn — Much to do all.
Once again fondest love to you from all.

How to eat, Soldier
Let Water Spout
Lump — Good morning Mrs Potter let the Spout for a month or two — " will the Water go on tasting funny if we run two
There is only thing, & take things as calmly as you can.
Let the Water Spout, Don't worry
Take all the rest for granted, by that I do not mean Hang down. Don't Hang as Cement do for ever
Do not be worried or any account
Tho' things that Shri gives is not very comfort ful is food for You Don't let the worry, for even the doctor advised & you
Your brothers have enticed & you what I to be done
Begin as you will tomorrow
You will find a great brain Don't ever you have lost out of the Lung
You have a very good lungs already muffled out
Take a day at a time it will be fit gradually
Let Water Spout
Lungs —
Your Doctor is right, just Sri Sitaram also you can't sleep stand up some for water Soft —
You will find helpful you to forget to a great help
Also Honey or a bit hot is better
You are for better sleep than you were a year ago
You will feel steadily as you begin or your recovery
Let Water Spout
Kidney —
But you not to worry, the Kidney help You by keeping calm
She has a lovely nature, It is for you to bring out in her
You have a Spiritual nature & the Spirit will help it the anguish are Cured & the Scars of pain Kidney is better

Father's room & you could have from all here. At grandfather's and grandfather's bedside & see you again, love Matthew.

Willie, I am so sorry you are not well. I don't think that could make a difference, but should miss Stead for what to do you have been overtired mentally and physically about you for being the interest you have in the Boards of Man I am glad it has become the possession of the City the Work of the Municipal Progressives I could see you distinctly lying in bed Mother is here let her speak

Mother.

W. Sorry you are not well. Dear Willie, it is a long time since we had a talk. Jean & think for the sorry to see Willie, such angry I want to tell you not be concerned about the health he will be strong again in a short time.

Let me speak.

Mary — Mary, give me the truth about the morphine myself. Don't be concerned about the morphine. You will be rid of it in a short time

Let Jean will change the order of things a little The trouble for them is the result of foreign & most persons methods

Don't be discouraged, for we is surprised that a change will come over you days & small about you

Mary — & will this temperature cease?

The perspiration is the result of the medicine, this we will soon for a time for that

Let Belle speak

Belle — How do you feel Willie — Can we do for Bill.

Don't be anxious about you health we will do for you

The Stamp of Jesus

Let Mary have a word

Mary: — Don't worry about anything just go along as easy as you can You must find a steady improvement from now on Good night from all.

MEMORANDUM

SPIRITUALISM

The following notes are of a conversation I had with Colonel Charles Lindsey at Laurier House, December 30, 1952:

Mr. King seemed always to be wrapped up with his contacts with the other world.

One time in Barrie (I think it was at the time of Harry Lay's funeral) I had a long talk with him. He spoke, casually, of a talk he had had the week before with my father [G.G.S. Lindsey], who died several years before. He said my father was very much interested in and pleased with what I was doing. He referred to the conversation as if it had been the other day with a living person.

REPEAT REPETITION

For those who won't give less than the finest to those who want nothing but the best

For styling the Schick "20," Carl Otto won the 1951 Industrial Designers' Institute Award.

BECAUSE we planned the Schick "20" with one thought in mind, it turned out to be the supreme choice for very particular gift-hunters.

You see, we set out to make it the finest shaving instrument of all time.

Its smart appearance alone tells you much about how we've succeeded. Notice its new trim-lined shape, its light, well-balanced beauty. Note that its Caddie Case has a very special look—also functions as a holder.

Even so, it takes a lot more than this to make the Schick "20" the finest in its field.

It takes Schick's exclusive Hi-Velocity Heads—precision-engineered for extra-close shaving.

And it takes Schick's real rotary motor—the most powerful of its size—a palm-sized powerhouse that produces 17,000 shaving motions a minute!

So—your man glides the "20" over his beard. A few swift strokes later, there's the face he's always wanted—smooth, clean, free from cuts and whiskers.

A nearby dealer will gift-wrap a new Schick "20" with handsome Caddie Case. Schick (Canada) Limited. Service offices in principal cities.

Schick "20" $32.75
Schick Super $29.50

Will the Gamblers Turn the Grey Cup Black?

ABOUT THE time this page went to press, most Canadians were preoccupied with one or both of two great public issues. (a) Who was going to win the national rugby football final? (b) Who had a spare ticket?

Maclean's does not discount the importance of either question. The frenzy which assails the nation on the eve of every Grey Cup game will doubtless cause some future field party of anthropologists to weep with indignation as it probes the dead bones of our civilization. Let 'em go right ahead; it was fun while it lasted, anyway.

Our only objection to the national epileptic fit which precedes and accompanies the big game is that it doesn't go far enough. In their obsession with the immediate questions (who's going to win? who's got a ticket?) the people who govern and watch football in Canada have forgotten to ask a much bigger question. Who's going to be the first player or team to sell this sacred folk rite, lock, stock and goal posts, to the gamblers?

We do not think that football players are any less honest, basically, than athletes in general. If this judgment is correct that means they're pretty honest. Over the years Canadian sport, both professional and amateur, has been remarkably free of scandal and no sport can point to a cleaner record than football's.

Nevertheless there are two conditions under which honesty in sport cannot indefinitely survive. Honesty can survive under either one of these two conditions, but when the two conditions arise simultaneously the human race's immemorial urge to make a fast illicit buck can become dangerously insistent. Canadian football is subject to both these conditions.

The first of them is big betting. Hundreds of thousands of dollars are bet every year on the Grey Cup game, much of it in very large sums by professional gamblers. Any player or group of players who could and chose to lose a big football game for a price would have no difficulty in getting an attractive price.

The second condition which traditionally invites the fix in sport is a cynical relationship between the employer and the employed. Almost without exception the historic fixes in sport have occurred in a moral climate that was already unhealthy before anyone thought about engineering a fix. There is a close parallel between the underpaid Chicago White Sox, who sold a World Series in 1919, and the scores of college students who, recruited and paid by their colleges to play basketball in defiance of the academic rules, sold dozens of American basketball games during the last two or three years. The common denominator to all fixes is the belief of the guilty player—which is often at least partly supported by the facts—that he is either being cheated by his employers or is being used by his employers to help cheat the opposition.

Most Canadian football players are well paid and some of them are better paid than the straight economics of the game would seem to warrant. Yet the terms on which this pay is customarily drawn—or withdrawn—are grotesquely mean and sharp and shabby. Among the country's eight fully professional teams the competition for talent is intense; so intense that some of the teams have bribed players from the powerful National Professional League in the United States to jump their contracts and play here for more money than they can earn at home.

This disrespect for a player's obligations to his team applies only so long as a Canadian team is trying to steal the player from his American team. Once he has been successfully stolen the American player discovers his obligations to the team have become total, inviolable and completely one-sided. It is a common procedure to pay the players only for those games they actually play. A player who is injured in a game or in a practice may find his income cut off for the next game at least; if he is badly injured he is in danger of being fired without compensation. A player who turns out to be not quite good enough to make the team he has contracted to play for does not have the right to seek employment with another team. The employer who cannot use him and who isn't paying him has a perfect right—and the right has been exercised many times—to prevent the unhappy chattel from playing for anyone else.

Last year a gifted quarterback from Buffalo led a Canadian team to victory in the Grey Cup final. Just before the new season opened the quarterback, feeling that his team was badly in need of his services and that there wasn't sufficient time to obtain a replacement, held out for more money than he had agreed to accept in his written contract. For this dubious ethical performance he was forgiven. A little later he was caught smuggling some cigarettes across the border and for this also he was forgiven. A little after that his coach began to suspect the player's passing arm had gone dead. He was immediately fired.

No episode better illustrates the standards of loyalty and of decency which the men who control football in Canada have been bestowing on their players and inviting from their players in return. It will be a lamentable thing if some gifted athlete, disillusioned by the knowledge that his employers regard him as a paid assassin and nothing more, decides to sell his employers down the river by selling some future Grey Cup game to the gamblers. It will not be so strange a thing. Until football revises its ideas of what is honorable, its ideas of what is honest will remain in danger.

THE ALCOHOLIC

Alcoholism is the abnormal and uncontrollable use of alcohol to an extent seriously detrimental to physical and mental health. This condition is now recognized as an important medical and public health problem.

Fortunately, medical, health, welfare, and religious agencies, industrial and other employers have taken a practical, realistic view of this problem. They are attacking it factually and without undue emotionalism.

This enlightened approach offers great hope to all those who now are chronic alcoholics —as well as to those who are running the risk of becoming chronic alcoholics.

1. What is the cause of alcoholism?

Authorities have found no one cause for this condition. Research shows, however, that alcoholics are usually people who do not seem able to face life in a mature manner because of some underlying mental or emotional condition which the alcoholic himself may not clearly recognize. They seem to seek escape by excessive drinking — and eventually they become dependent on alcohol just to go on living.

Some authorities also believe that an alcoholic's body chemistry differs from that of normal persons, and that this difference results in an unnatural appetite for alcohol. Excessive drinking, however, is in all cases a symptom. Often the symptom can be removed, but it is very apt to return unless the underlying trouble is eliminated.

2. What are the dangers of alcoholism?

Both physical and mental disorders may result from excessive drinking. Nutritional disturbances frequently occur, and certain vital organs may be harmed. Eventually most alcoholics undergo distinct personality changes that add to their instability. Alcoholics are definitely "accident prone."

The industrial accident rate among excessive drinkers is from 100 to 200 percent higher than among non-alcoholics alongside whom they work. Other accident hazards are increased by the excessive use of alcohol. It also takes its toll socially in wrecked family life — and economically it is claimed to cause a loss of millions of dollars annually.

3. How can medical science help the alcoholic?

Although there is no specific remedy for alcoholism, much can be done to help a person stop drinking completely. The success of any form of treatment, however, depends upon the alcoholic himself who must absolutely want to break the habit. Once he has stopped, most authorities agree that the real alcoholic cannot drink again with safety.

Psychotherapy may be used to help the patient recognize his problems and how to deal with them without the use of alcohol. Certain medicines, which should be used only under the guidance of a doctor, are also available. These medicines may help to wean the patient away from drink.

It is important, too, for the alcoholic to re-establish a routine of healthful living through proper diet, sufficient relaxation and sleep, and attention to other health measures that are usually disrupted by excessive drinking. In some cases, occupational guidance may be appropriate.

4. How can everyone help the alcoholic?

The general public — all of us — can help overcome the prejudices that have long existed about alcoholics by looking upon chronic drinkers as persons subject to serious physical and mental handicaps.

We must help them through sympathy and understanding, and aid them to obtain the type of treatment that they need. This treatment may be individual or group therapy given by the doctor, or mutual aid provided through organizations such as Alcoholics Anonymous.

We can also support and encourage the development of programs for the scientific study and control of this problem. In these ways, we can all do our part toward restoring thousands of men and women to healthy, happy, useful lives. Additional information on alcoholism is in Metropolitan's free booklet, 121-M, "The Alcoholic."

LONDON LETTER by Beverley Baxter

Anthony Eden R. A. Butler Oliver Lyttelton

Churchill Picks His Team

LET US talk today about Winston Churchill and the men he has appointed to his government. Let us look behind the newspaper headlines and note the problems of a party leader who by the will of the people becomes Prime Minister of Great Britain.

I have been a member of the House of Commons for sixteen years and had begun to think I knew all there was to know, but never before had I been a member of a party passing from Opposition to Government.

From 1935 to 1945 the Conservative Party was in power although it called itself first a National Government and then, when war came, a Coalition Government. But the name did not matter. The Conservatives were in such an overwhelming majority that ours was the power though not necessarily the glory. Then came the shock of the 1945 election and only a few of us struggled back. The socialists were returned in such numbers that they surrounded us in the House until we were pressed into a corner like the garrison in Tobruk. Then the Tories had neither the power nor the glory. "We are the masters now!" declared Sir Hartley Shawcross, the glamorous attorney-general of the socialists.

On the purely political side we could not, in opposition, be held responsible for any measures taken by the Government to deal with the postwar problems. It is the duty of an Opposition to oppose and we were determined to carry out that duty with the fullest rigor. On the personal side it offered great opportunities for we were so few in number that any of us could be reasonably certain of being called by the Speaker at the time of our choice.

From the point of view of friendship and comradeship nothing binds men more closely together than adversity. It is true we still had front-benchers and backbenchers but we were all paid the same salary (one thousand pounds a year) and we could dine together and express any thoughts that came into our minds. Politicians are great gossips and are always reviewing their colleagues like critics at a first night.

But, after nearly five long stormy years, came the election of 1950 which threw the socialists back on the ropes, followed by the election of Oct. 25 this year which finally put them down for the count and left us groggy but victorious. Churchill was back on the political throne and at such a moment a prime minister's power is complete. Having been commanded by the King to form a government he can nominate whom he chooses, he can make or break a career and no one can challenge his decision.

Yet even such a supreme individualist as Churchill does not play a lone hand at such a moment. His first appointment was that of Anthony Eden who became Foreign Secretary, Deputy Prime Minister and Leader of the House of Commons, thus proclaiming to the world that his succession to the leadership was established against all pretenders. Throughout the election Eden spoke and acted like the incoming tenant, next to one, of No. 10 Downing Street. "Mr. Churchill and I have agreed on this or that" was the way he put it on the public platform.

But Eden was not the only one to be consulted on ministerial appointments. There was Lord Woolton, the chairman of the Conservative Party, who had the right to be heard, and there was the handsome youngish Chief Whip, Captain Patrick Buchan Hepburn, who had disciplined the parliamentary party for six years and had a white list and a black one.

By temperament Churchill has a fiercely loyal nature and, from an emotional standpoint, would have like to reappoint all those Tories who served in his wartime coalition. But a new generation had come to Westminster in 1945, brilliant young military leaders who had won reputations in the different services under the harsh ordeal of war. Some of the former ministers would have to be sacrificed to make room for them. Churchill wanted his great personal friend, the shock-headed Brendan Bracken, to be Chancellor of the Exchequer, but Brendan said no. Bracken is a strange, warmhearted, cantankerous fellow with a passion for personal

How Long Will Winnie Hang On?

By BLAIR FRASER, Maclean's Ottawa Editor

LONDON

ONE POLITICAL topic still lively here, as post-election gossip fades, is "How long will Winston Churchill stay in office?"

Before the election the word was that he proposed to remain Prime Minister only for a year, then hand over to Anthony Eden. The old man had only one political ambition left, and it was an honorable one: he wanted to lead his party to victory in a general election. He had had honors galore, his place in history was more than secure, but that one honor had eluded him. To a democratic statesman it might well appear the highest honor of all.

Conservatives had, of course, the liveliest sympathy with this desire. With real affection they saw him return once more to power—an affection shared, I suspect, by a good many Labourites. "E'en the ranks of Tuscany could scarce forbear to cheer" when "Good Old Winnie" went back to Downing Street. But, having got him in, the Conservatives are quite openly anxious to get him out again before too long.

They have good reason to know that Churchill at seventy-seven is not the man he was at sixty-seven. He has grown quite deaf, for one thing, and the fact that he refuses to admit it is an added complication. Many a colleague has come away after a conference feeling that he'd wasted his breath—the Old Man didn't hear a word he said.

Always irascible, he has become more and more impatient of strangers, more and more enclosed within his own circle. It's doubtful whether he knows, and can call by name, more than twenty percent of his three-hundred-odd followers in the House of Commons, and he doesn't like meeting new people. This is a source of frustration to many younger MPs.

Even at the peak of the election campaign Churchill's liaison with his own party machinery was amazingly casual and slipshod. When I first arrived in England I went to Abbey House, Conservative HQ, to map out an itinerary that would take in all the leaders. They advised me to head west—Churchill was to speak in Plymouth on Thursday.

Two days later and two hundred miles away, in the little Somerset town of Taunton, I was told Churchill was due in Plymouth not tomorrow but next week. I telephoned Abbey House in London: Was Churchill speaking in Plymouth the next day?

"That's right," said a voice.

"But they tell me here it's next week."

A long interval ensued. Then an extremely apologetic woman came to the phone: "I'm afraid you're right; it is next week. The date was changed and we were not notified. Mr. Churchill makes his own arrangements," she added, "and we don't always hear of them."

Whatever misgivings the party workers had were not allayed during the birth of the new government. Churchill became not only Prime Minister but also Minister of Defense, a crushing load, which many had thought too heavy for him during the war. The cabinet included a high percentage of old Churchill cronies (able men, all right, but elderly, and several of them not party men at all) and a very low percentage of the Conservative Party's young blood.

THE ALCOHOLIC

Alcoholism is the abnormal and uncontrollable use of alcohol to an extent seriously detrimental to physical and mental health. This condition is now recognized as an important medical and public health problem.

Fortunately, medical, health, welfare, and religious agencies, industrial and other employers have taken a practical, realistic view of this problem. They are attacking it factually and without undue emotionalism.

This enlightened approach offers great hope to all those who now are chronic alcoholics — as well as to those who are running the risk of becoming chronic alcoholics.

1. What is the cause of alcoholism?

Authorities have found no one cause for this condition. Research shows, however, that alcoholics are usually people who do not seem able to face life in a mature manner because of some underlying mental or emotional condition which the alcoholic himself may not clearly recognize. They seem to seek escape by excessive drinking — and eventually they become dependent on alcohol just to go on living.

Some authorities also believe that an alcoholic's body chemistry differs from that of normal persons, and that this difference results in an unnatural appetite for alcohol. Excessive drinking, however, is in all cases a symptom. Often the symptom can be removed, but it is very apt to return unless the underlying trouble is eliminated.

2. What are the dangers of alcoholism?

Both physical and mental disorders may result from excessive drinking. Nutritional disturbances frequently occur, and certain vital organs may be harmed. Eventually most alcoholics undergo distinct personality changes that add to their instability. Alcoholics are definitely "accident prone."

The industrial accident rate among excessive drinkers is from 100 to 200 percent higher than among non-alcoholics alongside whom they work. Other accident hazards are increased by the excessive use of alcohol. It also takes its toll socially in wrecked family life — and economically it is claimed to cause a loss of millions of dollars annually.

3. How can medical science help the alcoholic?

Although there is no specific remedy for alcoholism, much can be done to help a person stop drinking completely. The success of any form of treatment, however, depends upon the alcoholic himself who must absolutely want to break the habit. Once he has stopped, most authorities agree that the real alcoholic cannot drink again with safety.

Psychotherapy may be used to help the patient recognize his problems and how to deal with them without the use of alcohol. Certain medicines, which should be used only under the guidance of a doctor, are also available. These medicines may help to wean the patient away from drink.

It is important, too, for the alcoholic to re-establish a routine of healthful living through proper diet, sufficient relaxation and sleep, and attention to other health measures that are usually disrupted by excessive drinking. In some cases, occupational guidance may be appropriate.

4. How can everyone help the alcoholic?

The general public — all of us — can help overcome the prejudices that have long existed about alcoholics by looking upon chronic drinkers as persons subject to serious physical and mental handicaps.

We must help them through sympathy and understanding, and aid them to obtain the type of treatment that they need. This treatment may be individual or group therapy given by the doctor, or mutual aid provided through organizations such as Alcoholics Anonymous.

We can also support and encourage the development of programs for the scientific study and control of this problem. In these ways, we can all do our part toward restoring thousands of men and women to healthy, happy, useful lives. LONDON LETTER by Beverley Baxter

Churchill Picks His Team

LET US talk today about Winston Churchill and the men he has appointed to his government. Let us look behind the newspaper headlines and note the problems of a party leader who by the will of the people becomes Prime Minister of Great Britain.

I have been a member of the House of Commons for sixteen years and had begun to think I knew all there was to know, but never before had I been a member of a party passing from Opposition to Government.

From 1935 to 1945 the Conservative Party was in power although it called itself first a National Government and then, when war came, a Coalition Government. But the name did not matter. The Conservatives were in such an overwhelming majority that ours was the power though not necessarily the glory. Then came the shock of the 1945 election and only a few of us struggled back. The socialists were returned in such numbers that they surrounded us in the House until we were pressed into a corner like the garrison in Tobruk. Then the Tories had neither the power nor the glory. "We are the masters now!" declared Sir Hartley Shawcross, the glamorous attorney-general of the socialists.

On the purely political side we could not, in opposition, be held responsible for any measures taken by the Government to deal with the postwar problems. It is the duty of an Opposition to oppose and we were determined to carry out that duty with the fullest rigor. On the personal side it offered great opportunities for we were so few in number that any of us could be reasonably certain of being called by the Speaker at the time of our choice.

From the point of view of friendship and comradeship nothing binds men more closely together than adversity. It is true we still had front-benchers and backbenchers but we were all paid the same salary (one thousand pounds a year) and we could dine together and express any thoughts that came into our minds. Politicians are great gossips and are always reviewing their colleagues like critics at a first night.

But, after nearly five long stormy years, came the election of 1950 which threw the socialists back on the ropes, followed by the election of Oct. 25 this year which finally put them down for the count and left us groggy but victorious. Churchill was back on the political throne and at such a moment a prime minister's power is complete. Having been commanded by the King to form a government he can nominate whom he chooses, he can make or break a career and no one can challenge his decision.

Yet even such a supreme individualist as Churchill does not play a lone hand at such a moment. His first appointment was that of Anthony Eden who became Foreign Secretary, Deputy Prime Minister and Leader of the House of Commons, thus proclaiming to the world that his succession to the leadership was established against all pretenders. Throughout the election Eden spoke and acted like the incoming tenant, next to one, of No. 10 Downing Street. "Mr. Churchill and I have agreed on this or that" was the way he put it on the public platform.

But Eden was not the only one to be consulted on ministerial appointments. There was Lord Woolton, the chairman of the Conservative Party, who had the right to be heard, and there was the handsome youngish Chief Whip, Captain Patrick Buchan Hepburn, who had disciplined the parliamentary party for six years and had a white list and a black one.

By temperament Churchill has a fiercely loyal nature and, from an emotional standpoint, would have like to reappoint all those Tories who served in his wartime coalition. But a new generation had come to Westminster in 1945, brilliant young military leaders who had won reputations in the different services under the harsh ordeal of war. Some of the former ministers would have to be sacrificed to make room for them. Churchill wanted his great personal friend, the shock-headed Brendan Bracken, to be Chancellor of the Exchequer, but Brendan said no. Bracken is a strange, warmhearted, cantankerous fellow with a passion for personal Continued on page 55

How Long Will Winnie Hang On?

By BLAIR FRASER, Maclean's Ottawa Editor

LONDON

ONE POLITICAL topic still lively here, as post-election gossip fades, is "How long will Winston Churchill stay in office?"

Before the election the word was that he proposed to remain Prime Minister only for a year, then hand over to Anthony Eden. The old man had only one political ambition left, and it was an honorable one: he wanted to lead his party to victory in a general election. He had had honors galore, his place in history was more than secure, but that one honor had eluded him. To a democratic statesman it might well appear the highest honor of all.

Conservatives had, of course, the liveliest sympathy with this desire. With real affection they saw him return once more to power—an affection shared, I suspect, by a good many Labourites. "E'en the ranks of Tuscany could scarce forbear to cheer" when "Good Old Winnie" went back to Downing Street. But, having got him in, the Conservatives are quite openly anxious to get him out again before too long.

They have good reason to know that Churchill at seventy-seven is not the man he was at sixty-seven. THE SECRET LIFE OF MACKENZIE KING, SPIRITUALIST

By BLAIR FRASER
MACLEAN'S OTTAWA EDITOR

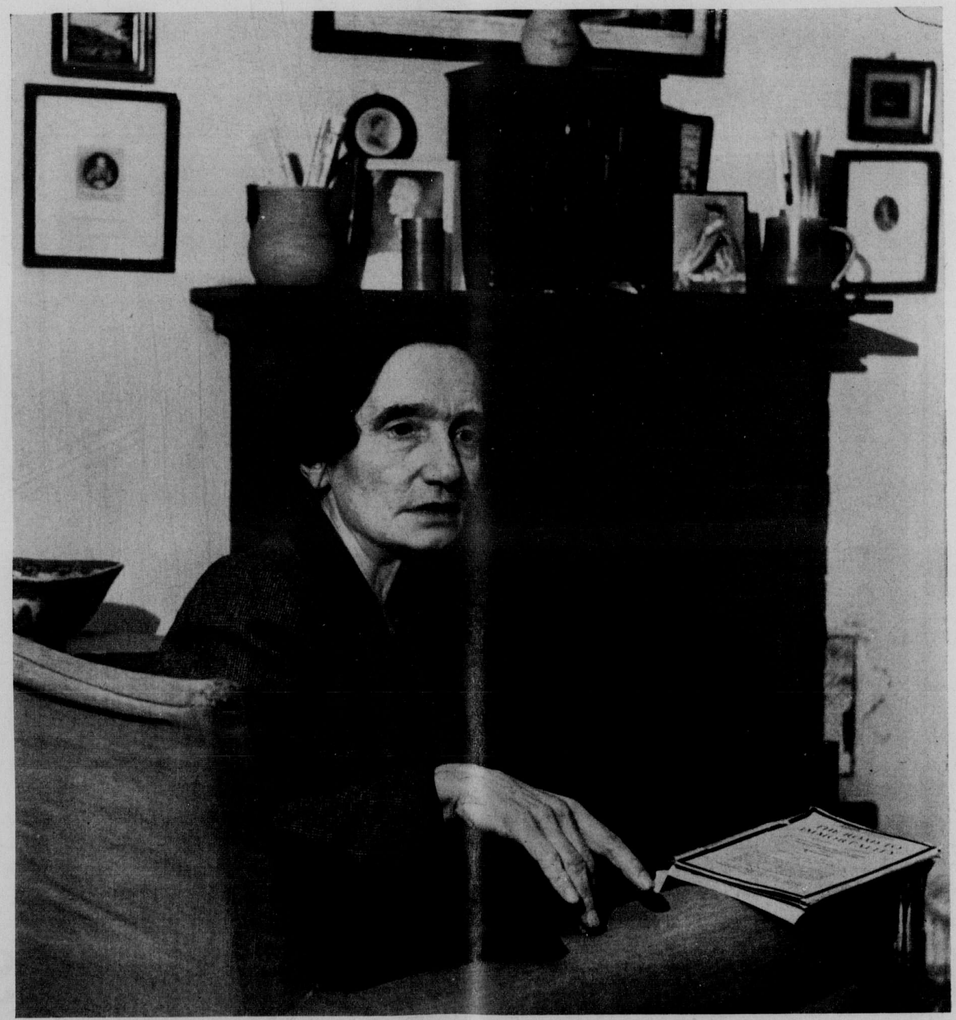

For twenty-five years Canada's famous Prime Minister was a practicing spiritualist. He believed that, through mediums, he had communicated with his mother, Franklin D. Roosevelt and even his dog Pat, after they had died. Here, for the first time, is revealed the best-kept secret of Mr. King's amazing career

LONDON

ONE WET Saturday afternoon in October 1948, William Lyon Mackenzie King lay ill at the Dorchester Hotel in Park Lane. His visitors were few and uniquely eminent—King George VI, Winston Churchill, Prime Minister Nehru of India—so the London press was keeping a close watch on the hotel lobby.

Reporters were amazed when two plainly dressed women came in, asked for Mr. King's suite and were shown up immediately. The two women did not reappear. They were ushered out by a side door (they couldn't understand why at the time) and the reporters never did find out who they were—Geraldine Cummins, well-known medium and author of many books on spiritualism, and her friend and collaborator Beatrice Gibbes.

That was as close as any outsider ever came, in Mackenzie King's lifetime, to the best-kept secret of his career—the fact that the Prime Minister of Canada had been for more than twenty-five years a convinced and practicing spiritualist.

Geraldine Cummins, a British medium, first thought King was a New York parson. She gave him "messages" from Roosevelt.

Actually the word is somewhat ambiguous. Mr. King was not a member of the Spiritualist Church and spiritualism was not a religion to him: he remained to the end of his days a good Presbyterian. But he did believe in the life after death, not as a matter of faith but as a proven fact. He did believe it possible to communicate with the departed, and that he himself had talked beyond the grave many times with his mother, his brother and sister, and such friends as Franklin D. Roosevelt and Sir Wilfrid Laurier. He did repeatedly attend seances and have sittings with mediums here in London and elsewhere.

To his real intimates he made no secret of these beliefs. Some of them joined him many times in sessions with the ouija board at Ottawa. They knew from his own lips what comfort he got from his "communion with the dead." Members of his personal staff knew it too—in some cases Mr. King didn't know they knew, but they all did.

Everybody kept the secret, for an obvious reason: If the facts were publicly known, people might have thought the affairs of Canada were being conducted on advice from the spirit world.

Indeed, Mr. King had not been dead a fortnight before a statement to that effect was published in the spiritualist weekly, Psychic News. His old friend, the late Duchess of Hamilton, in an interview, said Mr. King had always sought spirit guidance in affairs of state.

This was untrue—on Mr. King's own testimony and on the evidence of those who knew him best. He sought contact with his dead mother and brother and friends not to consult them but simply to talk to them.

Mrs. Helen Hughes, a pleasant Glasgow housewife who is one of the best-known of present-day mediums and who sat with Mr. King often over a period of many years, explained it to me over a cup of tea in the Psychic College, Edinburgh:

"It was as if he had his mother living over here in Britain—what would any son do, if he came here on business? He'd look her up; he'd want to see her and talk to her. He didn't want her advice about public affairs, for he knew more about them than she did. He wanted to know how she was, whom she had with her. He wanted to talk to her about family matters."

Mrs. Hughes cannot recall a single instance, in all her sittings with Mr. King, when there was any mention of public affairs. The only exception, if you can call it an exception, was the question of Mr. King's own retirement from public life.

"He was warned," she said. "At least three years before he died his mother told him he was doing too much, his heart wouldn't stand it. He took her advice in the end, but not soon enough."

Perhaps one reason he delayed was that he got opposite advice from President Roosevelt. He asked F.D.R.'s counsel at a sitting with Miss Cummins; the answer came back "Don't retire, stay on the job. Your country needs you there."

After Mr. King had gone back to Canada Miss Cummins got another message; the President had changed his mind. He now thought Mr. King's health too precarious for the load he was carrying, and urged him to retire at once. Miss Cummins passed the word along to Ottawa.

(Perhaps I'd better say at this point that I myself am not a spiritualist and do not believe in these alleged communications from the next world. For the sake of brevity and clarity, I haven't bothered to use words like "alleged" and "purported" in every other sentence. Whether or not you or I believe these messages were real, the point is that Mackenzie King did believe it.)

At a later sitting with Miss Cummins he got a message from F.D.R. which did concern public affairs. The President told Mr. King to watch Asia—that's where the war danger lay. The Berlin airlift which was a focus of attention then was a side issue, a Soviet bluff. There was no mention of Korea by name, but F.D.R. did say he thought there'd be war in the Far East within two years.

Miss Cummins recalls that the Prime Minister "seemed puzzled and a little shaken by this part of the communication. He said he made it a rule to ignore advice thus given, and trusted solely to his own and his advisers' judgment."

What he wanted from a medium, and what he normally got, was intimate converse with his own family. Like so many others, Mackenzie King became interested in spiritualism because he was a lonely and a sorely bereaved man.

The mother to whom he was and remained devoted; his beloved brother Macdougall King, the doctor; his favorite sister Isabel—all had died in a few years. His bereavement was sharpened by the thought that he had not been at his mother's death-bed. At her insistence he had gone back to his 1917 election campaign in North York, leaving her mortally ill; she was dead when he returned. Mr. King never quite forgave himself for this.

He was introduced to spiritualism by the late Marchioness of Aberdeen, who was herself a believer. Lady Aberdeen told him of Mrs. Etta Wriedt, an American "direct-voice" medium who acquired great fame in her day.

It was Mrs. Wriedt who received, in 1911, the gold watch bequeathed by Queen Victoria to "the most deserving medium" of the time. The Queen had intended the watch for her Highland gillie John Brown, a medium through whom she believed she could talk to her beloved Prince Albert. Mrs. Wriedt in her turn got the watch after having shown, to the satisfaction of British editor W. T. Stead, that she had received a communication from the spirit of Queen Victoria in July 1911.

Mrs. Wriedt decided before her own death that the Queen's watch ought to go back to England. She entrusted it to Mr. King, who brought it here on his next visit and gave it to the London Spiritualist Alliance. There, mounted on a blue velvet cushion, it is still on display.

All that came later. In the early 1920s Mr. King was convinced of the genuineness of Mrs. Wriedt's gift by the experience of a friend of his.

The wife of a Liberal senator, now dead, had lost her father, and the father's will couldn't be found. After futile search she consulted Mrs. Wriedt. The medium told her it was in a chest of drawers in a house in France. She looked, and there it was. That's the story as Mr. King used to tell it.

Through Mrs. Helen Hughes, a Glasgow medium, Mackenzie King made "contact" with his beloved terrier, Pat.

Geraldine Cummins, who wrote the "spirit messages" on a pad, told King that F.D.R. had met King's mother "over there." Roosevelt also "counseled" King not to retire from office, later changed his mind.

King also established "communication" with Sir Wilfrid Laurier. For the last twenty years of his life King found time on every visit to Britain for sittings with various mediums, but they remained secret.

This watch, originally presented by Queen Victoria, was awarded to Mrs. Etta Wriedt, through whom the dead Queen "spoke" in 1911. She gave it to King who gave it to the London Spiritualist Alliance.

THERE'S ALWAYS A PARTY AT THE GRAHAMS'

The Ronald Grahams of Vancouver like nothing better than to entertain in their half-million-dollar mansion. At one party for the Red Cross they had three thousand guests and one morning a sailor turned up at breakfast saying he'd let himself in with the key they'd given him during the war

THERE IS a saying around Vancouver that if some enterprising young man were to build a small shack for himself in a certain wooded ravine at the tip of West Point Grey close to the twenty-room pink stucco home of Mr. and Mrs. F. Ronald Graham, he could live a rich full life without cost to himself, simply by attending the Grahams' parties.

Equipped only with colossal nerve and the usual social graces he could roam the vast Graham home and the three and a half acres of terraced gardens along with hundreds of guests. Depending on the occasion he could dip into plates of hot mushroom patties on the long table below the chandeliers of the Grahams' bleached-oak dining room, sip tall rye highballs at the cut-stone bar in the Graham rumpus room, sample slabs of beef and turkey from the Graham barbecue pit or munch strawberries on the fine velvet of the Graham lawns. Wearied, he could take a shower in the paneled dressing room on the lower floor, then go for a swim in the Grahams' hundred-and-fifty-thousand-dollar swimming pool. He wouldn't need to bring bathing suit or towel for the Grahams have a choice of several dozen on hand to fit any size of guest.

This, of course, is a jest and an exaggeration. Even the Grahams don't give that many parties. But they are certainly the busiest and most energetic hosts in Canada. They have eight servants, four gardeners, thirteen children, several million dollars and unlimited vitality. People are always phoning up asking them to give a party for some worthy charity. The Grahams hardly ever refuse. "My wife just can't say no," says Ronald Graham, a sixty-seven-year-old retired financier with a round jovial Irish face. "It's just that we like people and we like parties," says Helen Graham, a big handsome woman in her forties with jet-black hair and jet-black eyes.

Last year they gave about a hundred of these parties. The attendance varied from very formal sit-down dinners under the chandeliers (about thirty persons) to huge garden fetes (three thousand people). At one party the guests consumed a hundred and fifty gallons of coffee alone. At another they trampled the Grahams' billiard-table lawn out of all recognition. At most parties the Grahams shoulder the entire expense. One garden party in aid of the Red Cross cost Graham four thousand dollars. For an average-sized party of four hundred and fifty persons they usually have to hire ten extra staff including two commissionaires to stand at the stairways and keep people out of the twelve bedrooms on the top floor.

Alexis Smith and a Mace-Bearer

None of this disturbs the Grahams in the least. "So what if it costs a bit of money?" says Ronald Graham. "What does that matter if you can afford it? After all we have the space out here and we like to see people use it."

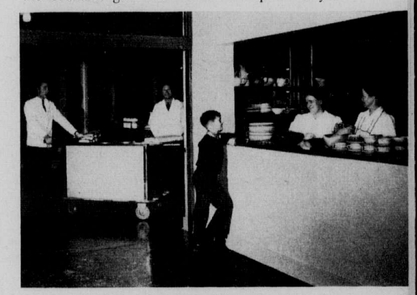

A Vancouver social-page writer has estimated that in a two - hundred - and - forty - five - day publishing year the Grahams get about two hundred mentions in the local papers. Most notables who come to town are treated to samples of the Graham hospitality. They have entertained among others, skater Barbara Ann Scott, jockey Johnny Longden, singers Richard Crooks and Yasha Davidov, barman Victor (Trader Vic) Bergeron, conductor Leonard Bernstein, movie stars Rudy Vallee, Fifi Dorsay, Dan Duryea and Alexis Smith, and His Excellency A. H. J. Lovink, Dutch Ambassador.

House guests have included Fabien Sevitzky, the conductor, Mrs. Vernon J. Mapes, a leading U. S. psychologist, Prof. Paul Dirac, physicist and Nobel Prize winner and Sir Denys Lowson, Lord Mayor of London and Lady Lowson, together with his mace-bearer, sword-bearer and personal footman.

The house guests come and go and the parties go on even when the Grahams go away to Mexico, Banff, New York or California (about five months of the year). Several years ago four of the world's leading mathematicians from India, Ireland, France and England were guests at the Graham home. They lived Continued on page 45

LUCY OF GREEN GABLES

By IAN SCLANDERS
PHOTOS BY RONNY JAQUES

ANNE OF GREEN GABLES, the best-loved character ever created by a Canadian author, has been tugging at the heartstrings of millions for forty-three years.

She's still a steadily moving item on the booksellers' shelves. This Christmas, seven thousand more Canadian children will be introduced or reintroduced to her. Her favorite places, the Lake of Shining Waters, the Dryad's Bubble, the Haunted Wood, the Babbling Brook and Lovers' Lane, are high on the list of Prince Edward Island's tourist attractions and a national park has been built around them. Hollywood's two versions of her story—one silent, one with sound—were box-office hits.

Yet Anne, with her red hair and big wistful eyes and freckles and her appealing stream of chatter, might easily have been lost to the world. She spent three years in a trunk in the attic of a modest wooden house at Cavendish, a farming and fishing community on Prince Edward Island's surf-beaten northern shore.

Then Lucy Maud Montgomery, a slender attractive young woman who helped her grandmother run the Cavendish post office, decided to fix up the dress she planned to wear to a pie social. Looking for a piece of ribbon, she opened the trunk in the attic—and found the manuscript of Anne of Green Gables. She had written this in 1904, when she was thirty, and after three publishers rejected it she had sighed, shrugged and hidden it away.

Now, on a fall day in 1907, she glanced idly at the first few poorly typed sheets. The narrative caught her interest and she read on and on until the sun went down, and then she read by flickering yellow lamplight.

The carrot-topped offspring of her imagination moved her to tears and laughter. Anne, she felt, deserved another chance, so she bundled her off to a fourth publisher, L. C. Page and Co. of Boston. This firm, it developed, was willing to buy Anne of Green Gables outright, for five hundred dollars.

Lucy Maud was jubilant. By the standards of Cavendish, with a population of two hundred, eleven miles from a railway and twenty-four miles from a town, the amount offered was large. She accepted it in haste. Later, when more than a million copies of her novel had been sold and it had been twice filmed, she probably repented at leisure, knowing that had she struck a better bargain with Page she might have earned two hundred thousand dollars from book royalties and screen rights. As it was, the one payment of five hundred dollars was all she ever got from her first book although its successors were to earn her many times that sum.

Anne of Green Gables brought her fame, if not wealth. When the first edition came out in 1908, Mark Twain, who sired those great juveniles, Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn, pronounced Anne "the sweetest creation of child life yet written."

Poet Bliss Carman termed Anne "one of the immortal children of fiction." Other reviewers were equally enthusiastic—and the public hurried to the bookstores. Edition followed edition. Anne of Green Gables was translated into French, Spanish, Dutch, Swedish, Polish. It was printed in Braille.

Little girls in many lands idolized Anne and tried to act and talk like her. Anne called her friends "kindred spirits." The phrase spread around the world. Anne disliked having red hair and made an unfortunate attempt to dye it. Countless redheads were inspired to do the same thing, with the same unfortunate results.

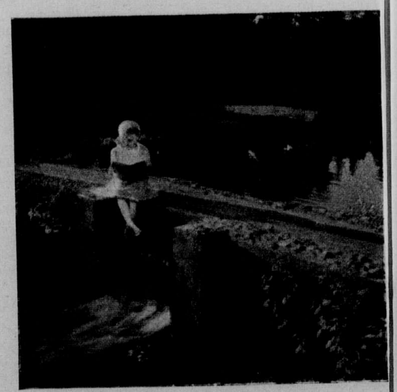

Fan mail poured to Lucy Maud from the far ends of the earth, not only from youngsters but from missionaries in China, traders in Africa, monks in remote monasteries, soldiers in India, grizzled trappers in the Canadian north. Continued on page 33

On view is the typewriter on which L. M. Montgomery wrote the Anne books. Mark Twain called them "the sweetest creation of child life yet."

It turns out after all this time that Anne of Green Gables, the Prince Edward Island redhead who ran away with the hearts of millions of young readers all over the world, was the image of little Lucy Maud Montgomery, who lived and wrote beside the Lake of the Shining Waters

Nell Andrews, present-day dweller by the Lake of Shining Waters, models the fictional Anne.

"Lovers' Lane opened out below the orchard and stretched up into the woods to the end of Cuthbert Farm."

"The Dryad's Bubble, wonderful, deep, clear, icy-cold spring set about with smooth red sandstones."

Hollywood's two versions of her story—one silent, one with sound—were box-office hits.

Yet Anne, with her red hair and big wistful eyes and freckles and her appealing stream of chatter, might easily have been lost to the world. She spent three years in a trunk in the attic of a modest wooden house at Cavendish, a farming and fishing community on Prince Edward Island's surf-beaten northern shore.

Then Lucy Maud Montgomery, a slender attractive young woman who helped her grandmother run the Cavendish post office, decided to fix up the dress she planned to wear to a pie social. Looking for a piece of ribbon, she opened the trunk in the attic—and found the manuscript of Anne of Green Gables. She had written this in 1904, when she was thirty, and after three publishers rejected it she had sighed, shrugged and hidden it away.

Now, on a fall day in 1907, she glanced idly at the first few poorly typed sheets. The narrative caught her interest and she read on and on until the sun went down, and then she read by flickering yellow lamplight.

The carrot-topped offspring of her imagination moved her to tears and laughter. Anne, she felt, deserved another chance, so she bundled her off to a fourth publisher, L. C. Page and Co. of Boston.

This firm, it developed, was willing to buy Anne of Green Gables outright, for five hundred dollars.

Lucy Maud was jubilant. By the standards of Cavendish, with a population of two hundred, eleven miles from a railway and twenty-four miles from a town, the amount offered was large. She accepted it in haste. Later, when more than a million copies of her novel had been sold and it had been twice filmed, she probably repented at leisure, knowing that had she struck a better bargain with Page she might have earned two hundred thousand dollars from book royalties and screen rights. As it was, the one payment of five hundred dollars was all she ever got from her first book although its successors were to earn her many times that sum.

Anne of Green Gables brought her fame, if not wealth. When the first edition came out in 1908, Mark Twain, who sired those great juveniles, Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn, pronounced Anne "the sweetest creation of child life yet written."

Poet Bliss Carman termed Anne "one of the immortal children of fiction." Other reviewers were equally enthusiastic—and the public hurried to the bookstores. Edition followed edition. Anne of Green Gables was translated into French, Spanish, Dutch, Swedish, Polish. It was printed in Braille.

Little girls in many lands idolized Anne and tried to act and talk like her. Anne called her friends "kindred spirits." The phrase spread around the world. Anne disliked having red hair and made an unfortunate attempt to dye it. Countless redheads were inspired to do the same thing, with the same unfortunate results.

Fan mail poured to Lucy Maud from the far ends of the earth, not only from youngsters but from missionaries in China, traders in Africa, monks in remote monasteries, soldiers in India, grizzled trappers in the Canadian north. Continued on page 33

LUCY OF GREEN GABLES

It turns out after all this time that Anne of Green Gables, the Prince Edward Island redhead who ran away with the hearts of millions of young readers all over the world, was the image of little Lucy Maud Montgomery, who lived and wrote beside the Lake of the Shining Waters

THIS IS HOW ALCAN WILL GET ITS MIGHTY POWER

ALUMINUM HITS THE ROAD AGAIN

By FRED BODSWORTH

Like a restless sourdough Canada's vast aluminum industry is always on the hunt for new frontiers. When the frontier is tamed, civilization troops in and Alcan heads for the bush again, panning remote rivers for nuggets of cheap power. Its latest strike will bring the world's biggest powerhouse to the B.C. wilds

An Alcan construction camp sits by scenic Tahtsa Lake. The eight-year project will cost six hundred millions.

Only helicopters can get survey teams into some spots. Once mountaineers had to first build a landing ledge.

A truck rumbles up to the upstream portal of one of the tunnels which will drop the rushing waters of the Nechako 2600 feet to the giant powerhouse.

LAST SPRING a man stepped into the little hotel at Terrace, B.C., a quiet and remote lumbering town of twenty-five hundred people on the CNR eighty miles inland from Prince Rupert, and casually announced that he wanted to reserve a few rooms.

"Yes, sir. How many?" the hotel clerk asked.

"Let's say a dozen for the time being," the man replied.

The clerk blinked. Jesting tourists rarely reached Terrace. "How long?" he asked. He could carry along a joke too.

"Four years," said the traveller.

And it wasn't a joke. It was Terrace's introduction to a fabulous extravaganza of twentieth-century engineering which, eight years and six hundred million dollars later, will have transformed a rugged uninhabited hinterland the size of Ireland, now occupied only by forest, mountain and grizzly bears, into an industrial colossus boasting the world's biggest aluminum smelter, the world's biggest single hydro-electric powerhouse, and a brand-new British Columbian city.

It's the Nechako-Kitimat project of the Aluminum Company of Canada which ultimately will produce five hundred and fifty thousand tons of aluminum a year, and probably make Canada the world's biggest producer of this featherweight metal (today's leader: the U. S.). It's the biggest thing that's happened to B. C. since the first transcontinental railway punched a giddy right-of-way through the Rockies in 1885. Already Alcan is spending one million dollars a week along a two-hundred-mile west-to-east construction front on seaports, airports, townsites, smelter, powerhouse, roads and dams, four hundred mountainous miles north of Vancouver.

Even for B. C., where the magnitude of the Rockies dwarfs everything else, Project Kitimat is a fantastic undertaking.

Nechako dam, biggest of its type in the British Commonwealth, will back up water for one hundred and fifty miles which normally drains into the upper Fraser at St. George and send it thundering down through two tunnels which will have to be bored for ten miles through the solid granite of the Coast Range's Portal Mountain. The tunnels will have a drop—engineers call it "the head"—of twenty-six hundred feet, sixteen times greater than Niagara. At the end of the tunnels Alcan's Kemano powerhouse will be in a massive man-made cavern carved out a quarter of a mile inside the mountain. A fifth of a mile long and one hundred feet wide and high, this underground powerhouse will almost be large enough for three buildings the size of Toronto's Bank of Commerce to be placed end to end inside. Water will hit the bottom of the tunnels with a pressure of seventy-five tons per square foot, and the generator turbines, though they weigh hundreds of tons, will need this six-thousand-foot mountain peak sitting on top of them to keep them from being blasted off their bedplates.

Kitimat, site of the projected smelter and seaport, is today a settlement of five hundred and eighty Indians fifty miles north of Kemano and fifty miles south of Prince Rupert. In a decade or two it will probably have a population of fifty thousand, the same as Victoria has now. The number of Alcan employees throughout Canada, now about sixteen thousand, will be doubled.

Remember the Name of Kitimat

The amount of power traveling along the fifty-mile transmission line from the powerhouse to the Kitimat smelter will be so great that the daily loss consumed by wire resistance alone will be equal to all the power used daily by Edmonton, a city of one hundred and fifty-eight thousand.

Yet the story of Project Kitimat, for all its record-shattering greatness, is merely the newest chapter in a bigger and untold story—the saga of aluminum's history-making, sixty-five year retreat to ever more and more distant frontiers. It's a twentieth-century industrial romance which parallels in many respects the story of another great Canadian colonizer—the Hudson's Bay Company. Aluminum production, like the fur trade which went before it, needs a frontier to live. And, like the fur trade, aluminum opens up a remote area, pushes back its frontier, and in doing so it attracts competition for the area's electrical power and destroys the very conditions it needs for its own economic survival.

Four times now that branch of the aluminum trail which has led finally to B. C.'s isolated Kitimat has pioneered new frontiers, has seen them develop into prosperous industrial areas, and itself has been crowded out to a newer frontier by the prosperity its own pioneering created.

It's a stirring story. And, in the history of Canada's development, it's a highly significant one. Most frontier-breaking industries move on and leave a wasteland of stumps and shack towns behind but, when aluminum moves on in its relentless frontier quest, it leaves prospering, self-supporting industrial communities behind it. Remember those B. C. names of Kitimat, Kemano and Nechako. They will be big names in the future geography of Canada. And now let's follow the long aluminum retreat out of which Canada's newest city of Kitimat is emerging.

Canada's position in the world's aluminum industry is a strange and anomalous one. The principal raw materials which go into the production of aluminum are: 1, Bauxite, a reddish claylike ore which contains twenty-five percent aluminum; 2, Cryolite, a white icelike mineral required in large quantities as a flux in smelting the processed bauxite; 3, Petroleum coke, a byproduct of oil refining. Canada today produces more aluminum than any country except the U. S. Its Alcan, which incidentally is the only firm producing primary aluminum in Canada, is the world's biggest single aluminum company. Canadian aluminum is produced more cheaply than any other. Until Kitimat hits its peak about 1960 Alcan's plant at Arvida on the Saguenay River in Quebec is the world's biggest, most economically efficient and most modern aluminum smelter in the world.

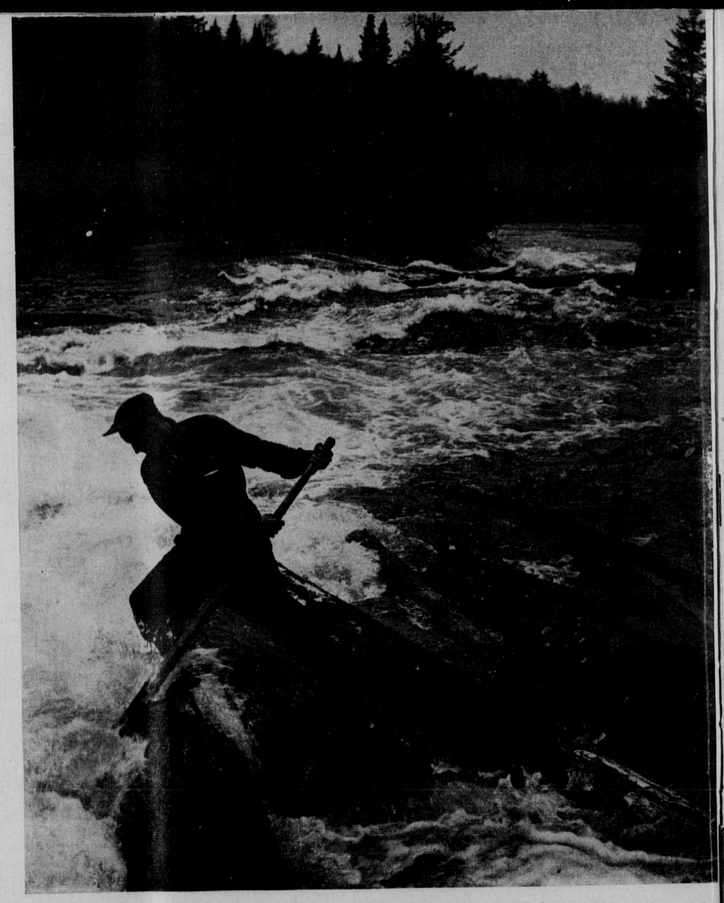

Yet, in spite of this leading aluminum role, Canada doesn't possess in commercial amounts a single teaspoonful of those three essential raw materials. Alcan imports them all—bauxite from British Guiana, cryolite from Greenland and petroleum coke from the U. S.

How does Canada, with none of the basic essentials, produce the world's cheapest aluminum? The answer to this is also the answer to aluminum's historic retreat into the hinterlands of Canada's ever-receding frontiers. More important in the aluminum smelting process than any of the raw materials, more important even than the aluminum ore itself, is electricity. In fact, such tremendous amounts of electrical energy go into every pound of aluminum that Alcan officials frequently refer to their aluminum ingots as "packaged electricity."

The bauxite first has to go through a complex chemical refining process which reduces two tons of the original ore into one ton of a white powder known as alumina. This is actually aluminum oxide, consisting of fifty percent aluminum metal. The final smelting Continued on page 38

Ottawa's BEAUTIFUL BACKYARD

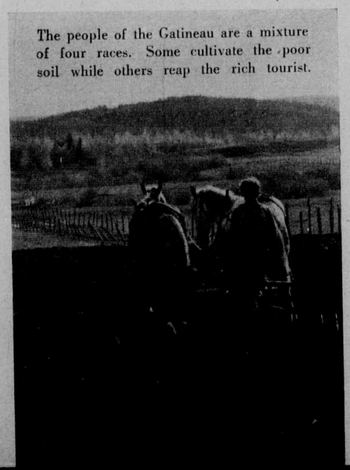

The twisting, tumbling Gatineau River that sweeps past the nation's capital bears its yellow pulpwood through a fabled frontier land where millionaire sportsmen and half-breed trappers rub shoulders in log-cabin hamlets with hermits, witches and revered faith healers

The people of the Gatineau are a mixture of four races. Some cultivate the poor soil while others reap the rich tourist.

ON A CLEAR DAY from the Peace Tower on Parliament Hill you can trace the twisting course of the Gatineau River from the spot where it spews its jostling yellow tide of pulpwood into the Ottawa, to a point many miles to the northward where it suddenly vanishes in a little cleft of the piled, slumbering masses of the hills.

High-spirited as a mustang, unpredictable as a summer storm, this restless hurrying river, once a main water route of the Algonquins, is today the royal highroad to one of Canada's last remaining unspoiled wilderness frontiers.

It is a country of startling contrasts, this Gatineau. At its gate stands the nation's capital, crowned by the Gothic of the Peace Tower. Just eighty miles to the north at the end of steel lies the lusty little frontier town of Maniwaki, populated by two-fisted loggers, reservation Indians, half-breed trappers and fur traders and a river of tourists driving everything from fishtail Cadillacs to croaking jalopies.

In the rolling trough of the hills between these fixed points can be found an incredible potpourri of old-time settlers in pioneer log cabins, big-game hunters who range all the way from Franchot Tone, the movie star, to Niles Trammell, president of the National Broadcasting Company; roving bands of Tête-de-boule Indians (so named because of their ball-shaped heads); seers, hermits, faith-healers, hillbillies, civil servants on holiday, witches and werewolves.

In the summer the ancient portage trails are clogged with new station wagons and the ancient hills are lit with the blinking glow of auto-court neon signs. Because of the Gatineau country, life begins in April for most Ottawans—be they deputy ministers at fifteen thousand dollars per annum or grade three clerks with nonassessable incomes. All make tracks for the Gatineau.

The Americans follow when the frost is out of the roads. Many of them have been coming for generations. In some cases extensive hunting reserves have been held by their families on lease from Quebec for half a century. Indeed, it was only twenty years ago that Ottawa woke up to the fact that an incalculable treasure lay at its back door. The federal government established Gatineau National Park a few miles north of Hull —twenty-four thousand acres of lake and forest.

When people speak about the Gatineau Valley they are usually thinking of the eighty miles between Ottawa and Maniwaki—the narrow, sometimes gorge-like valley along the river itself, and the rolling mountain country which stretches back for a score of miles to either side. But actually the river has its head waters almost two hundred and fifty miles north of the capital and its watershed covers an area of some ninety-six hundred square miles.

It is a country beloved of artists. In summer its shadowy blues and sombre greens, its cool amethysts and warm sepias lend the landscape a velvet lushness. In the autumn its hills blaze with glowing crimsons and yellows.

The area between Ottawa and Maniwaki is studded with lakes such as Blue Sea, where several governor-generals have summered and Thirty-One-Mile Lake, so clear and cold that Ottawa once considered drawing its water supply from it. There are thousands of these lakes, scores of them unnamed.

North of Maniwaki lies the big-game country with its famous Mont-Laurier-Senneterre game reserve and its thousands of square miles of untouched timberland. The Canadian International Paper Company limits alone cover more than seven thousand square miles.

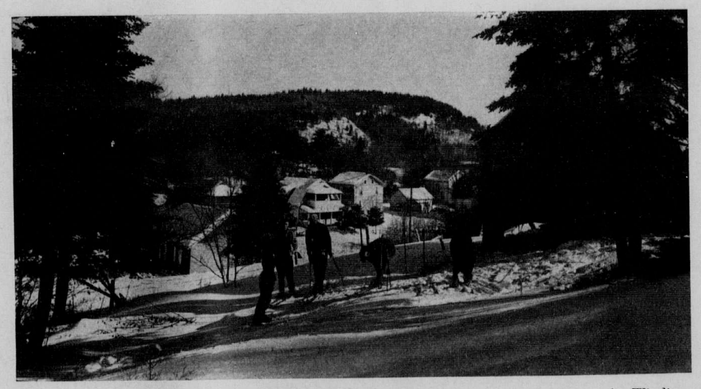

There is enchantment in these hills. The brooding silence of the eternal bush is forever crowding in upon the little villages named after the saints and huddling as close as possible to their big grey stone churches. The old Algonquin place names have a musical sound—Kazabazua (underground streams), Maniwaki (Land of Mary), Pittonga (where one hears the noise of rapids), Petawagama (two rivers running side by side).

The native inhabitants come of Scottish and Irish pioneer stock. Their ancestors cleared the little farms which creep shyly down to the riverfront or snuggle away in unexpected notches of the hills. The Canadien farmers and loggers are direct descendants of the voyageurs and coureurs de bois who trapped and hunted up and down the valley decades ago. The dwindling bands of Algonquins once reigned supreme as lords and masters of this entire forest domain.

"We Folks Have Just Always Been"

Most of the Scottish and Irish families in the area trace their beginnings in Canada at least to the middle of the last century. Many of the destitute Irish who fled their country during the potato famines eventually found their way to Bytown and thence up the Gatineau. During the eighteen-thirties, following completion of the Rideau Canal, over two thousand Irish, huddled together in the squalid little settlement of Corktown, suddenly found themselves without means of livelihood. Many of them spread throughout the Ottawa Valley and up the Gatineau.

The Canadiens for the most part had settled far to the north where for generations they trapped and hunted. There was considerable friction between the two groups when the Irish attempted to take over the work of logging, until then an exclusively Canadien field. Eventually these local animosities disappeared.

As often as not you will find the Gatineau Valley farmer still occupying the same little plaster-chinked log dwelling which his grandfather or great-grandfather hewed from the giant pine logs cleared from the farm site. But where good crops have brought prosperity, new and larger frame dwellings have been erected.

Always, however, the original cabins are left standing, for the people of the v lley are born traditionists. Thus there is scarcely a modernized farm which does not have its little cluster of original buildings. The doors and windows of these abandoned little cabins may be open to the elements, their sway-backed roofs of cedar slabs caved-in, but their walls of giant squared timbers, laboriously shaped by axe and adz, are as straight and sound as ever.

The members of this particular settlement had lived in their little backwoods valley as long as any of their number could remember, fighting a losing battle with the poor, cut-over pineland which they had chosen. Where they had originally come from none of their number could say. "Figure we folks have just always been in this valley," one grizzled octogenarian told an investigator.

Many hill folk are suspicious of strangers and abysmally ignorant of what is going on "outside." Some have never ventured more than a few miles from the log shacks where they were born, have never seen a book or magazine, heard a phonograph or a radio.

Over the years they have lost all record of their beginnings. Many with English names now speak only French, and vice versa. One old fellow I met bears the French surname of Fréchette, answers to the Christian name of "Mac," and speaks only English, and that with a quaint Celtic brogue.

The law and the church seldom penetrate here. Many hold their land merely by squatters' right and refuse to pay taxes. During World War I scores of unwilling conscripts faded back into these isolated corners, living on the bush. No sensible person ever attempted to rout them out.

In many of these Continued on page 43

The Shepherd and the Dictator

In the torture chambers of Robagonia men cried out to the Golden Giant to save their country. But what could a simple-minded peasant do against the brutal army of oppression?

By ROBERT ZACKS

ILLUSTRATED BY OSCAR

This is the story of what happened in Robagonia, a small South American country, at a time when the current group in power turned out to be quite a bit more merciless, more ruthless and efficient than previous totalitarian groups. The very scientific plan for absolute control put into effect involved, logically, the elimination of all segments of population around which resistance might develop, and covered lawyers, universities and their staffs, newspapers, reporters; in short, the sources of leadership. There was just about nobody left who might unseat the new palace guard. That's how we get to the adventures of Pasquale the shepherd.

In all the land there was no man with more simplicity and less guile than Pasquale. His dull ignorance was due to the life he led, perhaps. A man takes the coloring of his labor and the sun and wind that hit him.

As has been said, Pasquale was a shepherd. On the high grassy plateau toward the south of Robagonia, bordered by mountains and cliffs falling away a thousand feet to more gently sloping land, Pasquale kept a patient stern eye on his flock. And what a flock! Not the slow idiotic ramblings of low-country sheep did Pasquale have to cope with, but the quick goatlike scatterings of vigorous high-country animals. His sheep had deeper chests for breathing the thin cold air. And longer stronger legs for climbing to get at grass.

And Pasquale had a deeper chest, too, and longer stronger legs. His face was a bronze mask in peaceful repose and his eyes looked out of the mask like the faintly blue ice high up on the mountain. His hair was bleached white-blond by unfiltered sun; he had a beard that came to his navel in a tangled curly mass.

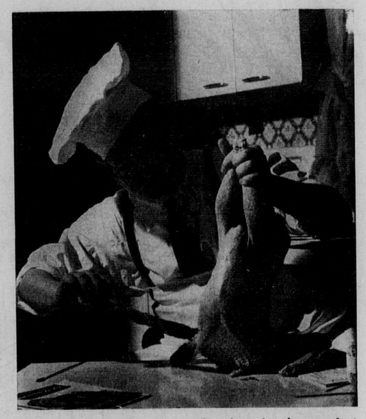

He did not know his last name. Or his age. As long as he could remember he had been up on the plateau or the mountainside watching a flock of sheep. For many years he had worked for the previous shepherd, a small man with a spry walk and thunderous voice. Then, when the shepherd had died, Pasquale had buried him and simply continued.

There had been no challenge as to ownership. Pasquale saw people rarely; only when he took a sheep down the long trek to town and exchanged it for salt and bread in hard sticks that seemed to last forever, and for cheeses and wines and sometimes for a coat or shoes.

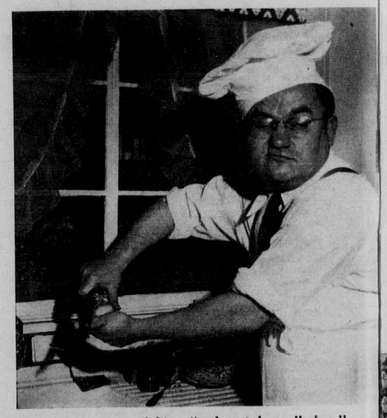

When Pasquale had come down alone that first time the storekeeper had looked at him amiably.

"Where is the little one?" asked the 1 Writer-chef Dugan says singeing is the easiest part, but the flaming paper took his eyebrows.

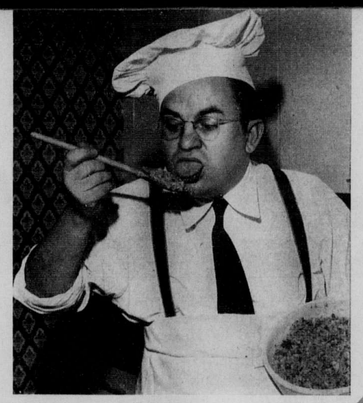

2 Mrs. Dugan warned him, "turkey takes all day." But he had to learn through tears, sweat — and blood, when the knife slipped on an onion.

3 "Why do women always make this look so hard?" Dugan asks. He took only five short hours to ready the turkey and another four to cook it.

4 He pours melted butter in the dressing. Turkey is cheaper than chicken — if you don't add the cost of a chef's cap.

5 Dugan tests his stuffing. He perfected his technique on a hammock cushion. Next come endive and black walnuts.

6 Stuffing goes into rear entrance. First he used too much and Mrs. Dugan warned of explosions. Brisk salt rub-down followed.

7 Trussed and buttered, the bird is ready for the oven just as the hungry dinner guests begin to arrive. They had to wait for hours, but at long last — (see below, left).

How to Tackle That Turkey

Don't worry if you can't afford Michael Powell's recipe of a lark inside a pigeon inside a chicken inside a goose inside a turkey. Let a graduate of Turkey Tech show you the newest and best ways to give your friends the bird this Christmas

THE sun on the snow in the yard rebounds through the dining-room windows onto the ceiling and falls dazzlingly on the best tablecloth. The family is expectantly gathered not too far from the table. The children come in through the storm entry with icy air clinging to their mackinaws; they shed snow on the rug, which is already specked with tinsel and mica snow. But heat is coming from the kitchen, heat swollen with such smells that the oldest veteran of Christmases agrees with the kids—it's time to eat.

The hungerers must not go into the kitchen, however; they have been shooed out a dozen times already. Out there the women are performing mysteries as arcane as nuclear fission, secrets revealed at Christmas every year. In the opulent palette of smells the connoisseur can distinguish the earthy odor of potatoes, bland hints of succotash, vapor or red wine vinegar, tang of cranberries. All these are subdued to the king of smells—the turkey is coming out of the oven. The bird crackles and sputters. The cooks exclaim, "My, he looks good!"

Covered side dishes are arrayed on the table like the suburbs of a city to come. Napkins fly open. Knives clash on forks. The smallest child on the thickest mail-order catalogue is crouched for action. Comes an off-stage hubbub like the flourish of trumpets, the kitchen door opens, and, borne on a great platter, is the royal golden bird. Rejoice!

Oh, let the Scots worship their haggis, and the Britons their festive goose. Let the Swedes revel in smorgasbord, the French devour sucking pig, the Argentineans fall on steak. For us Christmas is turkey, the generous fowl that sates the rich and warms the cold plate of charity at the mission dinner. Ring the angle iron, yell into the woods, sing the hymn and say the grace. Let's eat!

As a white-meat fan from way back your correspondent always thought turkey dinners just happened on Christmas, like Santa Claus. I have been disabused of this notion. To gather the rare information in this article I attended Turkey College and studied with the learned faculty of the U. S. Poultry and Egg National Board, as well as cramming courses conducted by eminent chefs de cuisines. To be honest, I won't claim I graduated cum laude but I got through without playing football. I like to think my excellent homework tipped the scales. The homework is the hardest part because it obliges you to wrestle a turkey in person. I passed victoriously as was proved by the fact that eight people dined on the turkey I cooked, and lived.

Before we describe that engrossing episode it may be well to take a brief history course consisting of general orientation and background on turkeys. It is not necessary to make notes during this lecture. The turkey, actually a guinea fowl (*Meleagris gallopavo), was originally a wild North American, ranging from Yucatan to Ontario. The Indians partially domesticated the bird in time for some early tourists, the conquistadores, to take the turkey to Spain. There he got the name turkey because he reminded people of the smaller Turkish guinea fowl already relished in Europe. Turkey quickly appeared on the best groaning boards. Cervantes, who died in 1616, probably ate the noble bird, but Shakespeare, who died the same year, did not, as the turkey did not come to England until eight

THE GIFT SHE'S SURE TO SNIFF AT

In the next few days thousands of Canadian men will spend about one million dollars at the nation's perfume counters. And even if the woman who gets one of these exotic little bottles would have preferred a cashmere sweater she's likely to say, "Just what I wanted"

By JILL FRAYNE
CARTOONS BY PETER WHALLEY

"Guess we'll have to raise her danger pay."

NO WASTE of time in this Christmas season can compare with a woman telling her husband, as she sets down his morning coffee, how fond she is of pink cashmere sweaters, size 36, or navy-blue nylon blouses with tucking down the front. "Mmmm," replies her spouse, thoughtfully, turning the page of his newspaper, "looks like Ezinicki is just about through."

There sits a man who is going to buy his wife a dandy Christmas gift. A blouse? No. A sweater? Never. Ezinicki perhaps? Unfortunately, no.

He will get her perfume.

The suitability of this gift is self - evident. Perfume counters are located on the main floors of department stores or drugstores, just inside the door. Perfume does not come in various sizes or colors which would require a man to recall the shape and complexion of his beloved, but only in various prices. Finally, even a hundred-dollar bottle of perfume will fit in his overcoat pocket, thus leaving both hands free to hold the sports page on the way home on the bus.

Men buy sixty-five percent of the perfume sold in this country and do most of their buying in the five days preceding Christmas. During this period perfume department managers get rid of fat jugs of the brew they never dreamed they could move. The gentlemen are aghast that ten dollars buys only a thimbleful of the nectar. "How much is that bottle?" they enquire. "Twenty-five dollars," says the salesgirl, wiping the dust off it. "Fine," says the husband after momentarily considering the distance to the blouse department, "wrap it up."

Sometimes the man will smell his purchase first. The purpose of this is to establish himself as a man of the world with the perfume saleslady; most men can't distinguish between scents more subtle than burning rubber and blooming roses. Since his lady isn't going to use more than a third of the contents, gracefully allowing the rest to evaporate through the years, this is probably not such a serious failing.

Canadians buy almost four million dollars' worth of perfume a year, and there is a strong feeling in the perfume industry that a little education in the purchase and use of the product would fill an empty hole in the average male head. Accordingly two years ago Fragrance Foundation Inc. was established to spread information about perfume. From this foundation comes the word that twenty-five thousand pounds of roses are required to make two pounds of rose oil, for example. Also, it takes eight hundred and eighty pounds of orange blossoms to make only one pound of oil.

It is agreed that a woman should no longer strive to be identified with one haunting scent any more than she would want to appear daily in one haunting dress. She requires a wardrobe of perfumes chosen from the three categories: light, medium and heavy. Synonyms of these are floral, so-so and sexy. The light, floral perfumes, with such flower names as apple blossom, gardenia, lavender and lilac, are for young girls of the naïve variety or for sweet old ladies. They are also fairly safe for the average woman to wear around the house.

So-so medium perfumes include some of the leading brands, like Chanel No. 5 which is the biggest-selling quality perfume in the country, Bond Street and Command Performance. These are the ones the perfume salesgirls sell by the vat at Christmas because the danger of erring is so slight. The low-down sexy perfumes, with names like Tabu, Joy, White Flame, Lotus and Aphrodisia, are for evenings only, for brunettes only, for mixed company only. "If a girl wore one of those to the office every day," commented a salesgirl, "she'd get her throat slit." The heavy perfumes are limited to brunettes because of the prevailing opinion that they are more vibrant than natural blondes.

A male in quest of a perfume suitable for his wife must first make his selection from the three categories. After revealing his decision to the salesgirl he will be shown a few bottles from which to choose. The gentleman must refrain from sniffing the bottles.

"This form absolves us of all responsibility."

This is as boorish a method of sampling perfume as is chilling fine wine by putting ice cubes in it. Perfume sniffed from the bottle has a strong odor of alcohol; to get the smell of the perfume itself a drop or two is applied to the wrist, the wrist is waved around a moment or two to give the alcohol time to evaporate and then the man may inhale while the clerk stands by, awed and respectful.

If the scent doesn't appeal at once, continue the research. The scientist can have three tries before his olfactory senses become so drunken they are incapable of transmitting any more sensations to his pulsing brain. If he hasn't found anything he likes in his three tries a half hour in the book department will sober him up sufficiently to return to his task. Perfume chemists clear their heads by sniffing ether, but this is not intended as a practical suggestion.

It is not necessary to buy the largest bottle of perfume in the store to prove to a wife that the honeymoon is not over. This is comparable, for sheer insanity, to the woman with a fifty-dollar clothes allowance who spends forty-nine fifty on a hat—it's a two-week sensation but it is bound to become a bore.

Some men in the perfume business insist it is possible to make some shrewd guesses about a woman's personality from the kind of perfume she wears. One of them attempted to invert the theory by buying to suit what he figured was the personality of a woman he knew.

"She was a French girl, definitely a Latin type," he said later. "When she laughed . . . well, I can't describe it. I bought her the most sultry perfume I could find and to my astonishment she didn't like it at all. I got talking to her a bit more and discovered what I had begun to suspect—that girl was pure Anglo-Saxon. I went out and got her some heather perfume and she was delighted. That woman wasn't full of romance at all, she was full of haggis."

This same analyst generally has better results. He suggested a perfume that a young husband should buy his wife to settle a tiff and the wife was so enthusiastic about the choice that the husband still regards his benefactor as a dangerous personality.

Perfume salesgirls usually scorn this psychological approach, pointing out that women have as many different personalities as they have friends. Playing bridge with the girls demands one of their personalities and a cocktail party quite another; the woman who cooks lunch for her children home from school is quite different from the same woman having lunch downtown with her husband. All of these facets demand a different fragrance.

A woman needs about six different perfumes, one authority insists. Two of these should be light perfumes for daytime wear, three medium-type perfumes for general all-purpose wear and one stunner for occasions when the plot thickens.

The step following the acquiring of this stable of perfumes is the wearing of same. This is a step many women are loath to take, on the theory that perfume is a cross between blond mink and the crown jewels. The perfume is therefore hoarded for special occasions, like Christmas and the one night in four years when the husband takes her dancing. So the lady goes around smelling of soap while her glamorous perfumes are evaporating furiously.

The best perfumes are about eighty percent alcohol and age will not only wither them but will cause them to become stronger and, sometimes, to deteriorate. The same thing will occur with colognes, which average ninety-five percent alcohol, which makes them not too far removed from rubbing alcohol. Some unwise women merely dab cologne behind their ears in an attempt to smell out their aura of furniture polish. Within five minutes they smell of furniture polish again.

The proper way to behave with a stock of perfume, according to the people who sell it, is to splash cologne lavishly all over the body after a bath. The effect is less potent than it sounds because of the rapid evaporation. Next wet a wad of absorbent cotton with the perfume that matches the cologne and dab it behind and in front of the ears, inside the elbow and wrist, behind the knees and at the base of the throat. These are known as the pulse spots, the places on the body where the blood is closest to the skin. The purpose of this is to heat the perfume, thus accelerating the rate at which it is projected around the room.

The previously mentioned wad of cotton is then worn in the bra and the lady needs only a small bottle of her perfume to carry in her purse to renew the effect once or twice during the evening. This, mind you, is the way European women wear their perfume. It seems to many women of the New World that such concentration is akin to carrying a club and the North American male, the slob, is apt to complain the stench is making his eyes water.

This attitude is that of a lout, according to perfumers, who suggest that the seductress spray the bed linen with cologne and rub perfume on cold electric-light bulbs—when the light is turned on and the bulb warms the room will smell as though it too had perfume behind its ears.

If the man

THEY STILL CAN'T CURE YOUR COLD

THE common cold has been afflicting humans and chimpanzees for at least twenty-four centuries, when Hippocrates used to advise his patients that rest in bed was the only treatment.

No record has been kept of the misery and expense colds have caused chimpanzees, but among people the toll is considerable. It has been estimated that in February, the peak month for colds, one person in every five in North America has a cold. Industry reckons its loss from absenteeism through colds is in the neighborhood of one and a half billion dollars and colds account for more than a quarter of the empty seats in school classrooms.

This past decade has seen some tremendous progress in the ever-busy field of common-cold research. Doctors have reached the point where they are almost sure that a virus causes colds. Now all that remains is a method of preventing colds or one of curing them. But the cold today is as incurable as it was in ancient Greece.

In fact it remains so mysterious that some of the world's leading cold experts—working with "human guinea-pigs" in a laboratory in Salisbury, England, and using live cold virus and the latest scientific methods—can cause volunteers to catch a cold only fifty percent of the time. In a world of miracle drugs and wonder cures the common cold is unscathed.

Since the average person gets about two colds a year (farmers and people in very low income brackets average more, the latter because of poor diet and inadequate housing) a recital of the symptoms will be familiar to all. The first is a sensation of burning and discomfort in the nose or throat, closely followed by a profusion of watery mucus in the nose. Next you have a dull headache and a feeling that your head is stuffed with mattress innards. If the infection spreads down into your bronchial tubes your voice becomes hoarse and you have a dry racking cough. With or without treatment the cold lasts five to seven days.

Though no one has died of a simple cold many people have succumbed to one of the many secondary infections to which a heavy cold makes Continued on page 53

When we last heard from him he was living in New York with his wife, gloomily pondering his typewriter and the prospects for the next story.

THE COVER

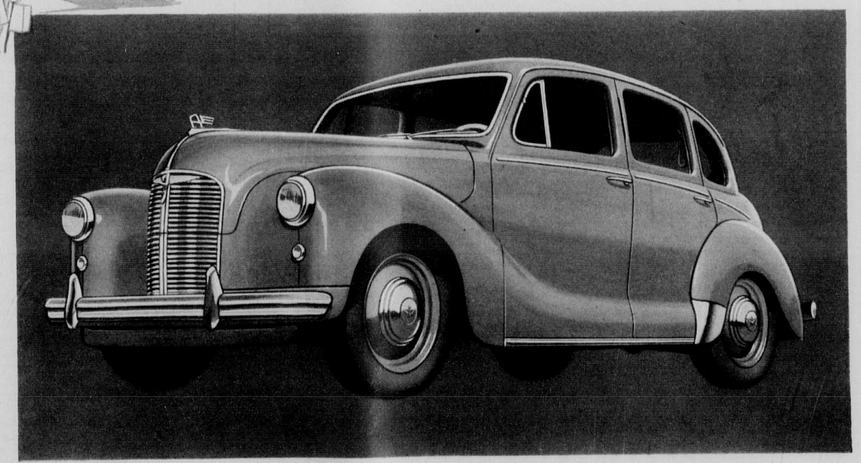

OSCAR CAHEN has had many comments on his Oct. 15 cover which you may remember showed an artist depicting a modernistic landscape in conventional terms. One of these came from the famed Far East correspondent and author, Hallett Abend, who thought that it was "one of the cleverest I've ever seen . . . It took a clever man to have such a simple idea."

Oscar had another good idea for this Christmas cover. In his original sketch he filled the space at the left, immediately over the youngster at the door, with an old-fashioned sparkler. The only trouble was that no one around here, with the exception of one westerner who must have had a pretty old-fashioned childhood, had ever heard of them, so a colored Christmas-tree light was substituted.

Maclean's MOVIES

CONDUCTED BY CLYDE GILMOUR

AN AMERICAN IN PARIS: Hollywood hasn't turned out a better musical in years than this gay and handsome confection starring Gene Kelly, Oscar Levant, and a delightful French newcomer named Leslie Caron. The tunes, by Gershwin, are as pleasurable as ever.

ANGELS IN THE OUTFIELD: A baseball comedy, mildly amusing one moment and heavy-handed the next. Celestial consultants, all of them former big-leaguers, help the Pittsburgh Pirates to a pennant and encourage fiery manager Paul Douglas to watch his language.

THE BLUE VEIL: A rambling, old-fashioned tear-jerker about a childless widow (Jane Wyman) who devotes her life to the bringing up of other people's babies. The ending, a "happy" one, will find even the male customers reaching for their hankies.

CROSSWINDS: A corny tropical adventure in which some of the year's most stupefying dialogue is solemnly batted back and forth by sailor John Payne, adventuress Rhonda Fleming, and other operatives. It's a popular item, though, with the small-fry trade.

THE DESERT FOX: A controversial Anglo-American obituary, highly laudatory in tone, of Rommel and the German military caste, with James Mason performing powerfully in the title role. I, for one, don't easily swallow the implication that the Nazis might have won the war if Hitler hadn't been a low-comedy screwball.

DETECTIVE STORY: Sidney Kingsley's hard-hitting Broadway drama about life in a big-town police station has been expertly filmed by William Wyler. The result is muscular entertainment for adults. The cast includes Kirk Douglas and Eleanor Parker.

JIM THORPE, ALL-AMERICAN: Burt Lancaster in a rather slow but interesting biog of the Oklahoma Indian superathlete who won the 1912 Olympics practically single-handed before a series of tough breaks shoved him downhill into bitterness and obscurity. The lithe Mr. L., physically at least, re-creates the mighty Thorpe with considerable vividness.

THE LADY PAYS OFF: A coy little romantic farce about a suave gambler (Stephen McNally), his motherless daughter (Gigi Perreau), and an "intellectual" glamour girl (Linda Darnell) who gets involved with them.

THE PEOPLE AGAINST O'HARA: Lawyer Spencer Tracy runs afoul of both the courts and the underworld in his dogged efforts to save a neighborhood boy from the electric chair. It's a bit lumbering in pace, but decent and unpretentious, and some of the minor roles are unusually well-acted.

PICKUP: A small-budget, well-intentioned but only partly successful sex melodrama in the "European" tradition, although made in Hollywood. It tells of a middle-aged widower (warmly played by writer-director Hugo Haas) who marries a gold-digger and soon learns he has taken a viper to his bosom.

SEVEN DAYS TO NOON: Its delayed arrival in Canada prompts me to issue a reminder regarding this fine suspense drama from Britain. Furthermore, another look at it after six months has convinced me that it merits the rating "excellent," rather than the "good" I've been giving it. Story deals with a troubled scientist on the loose in London with a sick mind and an A-bomb.

A STREETCAR NAMED DESIRE: Certainly not for the kiddies, and far from comfortable for many a grown-up, this is nonetheless a brilliant and unforgettable film for people not opposed to "life in the raw" on the screen. Tennessee Williams' disturbing tale of squalor and passion in New Orleans is enacted by a superb cast headed by Vivien Leigh, Marlon Brando, Kim Hunter and Karl Malden; and the direction by Elia Kazan is masterly throughout.

YOU NEVER CAN TELL: A tasteless farce-fantasy about a poisoned dog which returns to life (from "Beastatory," yet!) in the more-or-less human form of a private detective (Dick Powell). He then sets out to convict and punish his own killer.

years later. Some forlorn colonials were the first Englishmen to eat the bird —in 1621 in the Massachusetts Bay Colony, when an Indian chef named Squanto roasted native turkeys for their lean stomachs at the first Thanksgiving celebration. About 1625 new Pilgrims arrived bringing the European-educated bird with them. The repatriated gobblers preened themselves and strutted into the woods where they met their wild cousins. This resulted in the founding of several distinguished Turkey families: Bronzes, Narragansetts, White Hollands, Bourbon Reds, Black-and-Slates, Nittanys and Royal Palms.

Let's cut the history class and take up the saga after three centuries of big feeds and the naps that followed them. A dozen years ago came the second revolution in turkey breeding. Scientific breeders reduced the weight of mature turkeys by half but kept the same amount of white meat with less bone and gristle. The new breed, known as Beltsville White, named after the U. S. Government station in Maryland at which it was developed, was adapted to the smaller family unit and the modern housewife's dislike of leftovers.

Today Beltsville White and his dwindling flocks of paunchier relatives are a three-hundred-and-twenty-five-million-dollar business in the U. S. and Canada. Canada still prefers the bigger birds such as the Bronzes and will this year consume about two and three-quarter million turkeys, or forty million pounds. Turkey consumption is rising: this year more than three pounds per person will be eaten. Most Canadian turkeys are raised in Ontario but the prairie provinces do the heaviest per capita turkey eating, according to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. Texas is the continent's greatest turkey-producing area. The state's turkey centre is Cuero, which holds a grand manifestation and feast of souls in November, known as the Cuero Turkey Trot. Throngs come from all over to watch thousands of turkeys marching down Main Street behind a trumpet corps and followed by floats bearing the Sultana of Turkey Trot and her court. The parade is quite an honor for the turkeys, but it ends rather dismally. At the finish of the parade the birds are marched right into the packing house.

So much for history and economics. How about that turkey dinner? When I started my final exam I asked the experts what kind of bird to buy. They said a dressed bird. None of the turkeys I saw at the market looked dressed, as they were missing their feathers and quite a few didn't even have legs and heads. But the poultryman said they were dressed all right, so I didn't argue. He recommended a ten - and - a - half - pound Beltsville White which would feed eight people, and asked me if I wanted it New York dressed, eviscerated, or cut up. "Come again?" I said politely. He explained that New York dressed meant a plucked bird with his head, feet and innards intact. He would remove them for me. New York dressed had come alive to the market. The eviscerated fowl has had his head, legs and insides removed at the packing plant and arrived in deep freeze. The cut up version is the lazy cook's turkey, dissembled into drumsticks, wings, and white and dark meat fillets, about ten portions to the bird.

I took a New York-dressed Beltsville White which promised to yield five pounds of cooked meat. Beltsville looked okay according to the experts' rules for buying a good bird: he was plump, short of body, broad of breast. He had streaks of fat under his skin, which was clean and waxy. He had only two small bruises. The turkey professors tell you to watch out for excessive bruises, and if you are buying a frozen turkey be sure it is ice-solid and not dried out, blistered or showing freeze burns.

Woolworth Gives the Bird

The Canadian Department of Agriculture inspects and grades all dressed turkeys, except home-grown fowl. Producers first grade the birds, from Grade Special through Grades A, B, and C down to D, the limit of edibility. Then government inspectors check a twenty percent sample of the shipment. If the sampling doesn't meet the producer's grading the shipment is sent back for regrading. Experts advise the family buyer always to insist on seeing the government tags or marks on the bird. The top Special grade has a purple mark, A is red, B is blue and C is yellow-brown.

The experts told me, by the way, that turkey is cheaper than chicken. It yields more meat per pound cost. Woolworth's lunch counters found this out long ago—there are one and often two turkey dishes on the lunch-counter menu of the bigger Woolworth stores several days a week. Turkey is popular among hospital, school and factory caterers for this reason. Turkey is okay for bland diets and contains rich protein, B complex vitamins and minerals, including iron.

I clutched Beltsville White and sped home, stopping only to buy a chef's cap. This bonnet is essential to male cookery and reproves the women for their irreverent approach to food. I crowned myself as chef de cuisine, and seemed to feel Brillat-Savarin and Escoffier looking approvingly over my shoulder.

I opened the Turkey Handbook, an

Helpful Hints on Home Heating

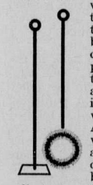

So many advances have been made in recent years in the development of heating equipment that today practically any home can enjoy the complete comfort of well-distributed warmth from a convenient and efficient system adapted to its particular needs. First step to assure that result, whether in present or projected home, is to consult your architect or plumbing and heating contractor, who will make an analysis of the building and plan the system accordingly.

At the planning stage, a reference guide you'll find interesting and informative is the Crane booklet ADM-4607 "How to select the right heating system for your home".

CAPACITY—In selecting the boiler, it is of course of first importance that it be of the right capacity for your requirements. It is also a good idea to have one that is readily convertible for use with all types of fuel. For your selection in the Crane line is a complete variety of dependable boilers—of all capacities, ranging upwards from the famous little "Junior", 42 inches of heating efficiency, which brings the advantages of hot water heating to the smallest homes. All Crane boilers are adaptable to all methods of firing and all types of fuel. When planning the heating system have in mind the advantages of the new "BILTIN" tankless instantaneous coil which provides an abundant and continuous supply of domestic hot water—without the need of a storage tank.

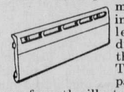

CARE CUTS COSTS—Soot and scale cost money. They form an insulating layer that stops heat from reaching the water of your heating system. It pays to clean flues twice a month—give your boiler a complete annual cleaning—and have your plumbing and heating contractor give it a check-up at least once a year. Cleaning a boiler can be done without trouble or dirt. Always start at the top and work downward. You can allow soot and dust to fall on the fire where it will burn or reduce to ash. This eliminates the dirty job of removal through flue clean-out doors and does no particular harm to the condition of the firebed. Tools for removing soot and scale effectively are a scraper and a long handled wire brush. The main thing is To Keep The Flues Clean.

EVEN TEMPERATURES save fuel. Set Thermostat at 65 to 70 for daytime; 60 at night.

OTHER FUEL-SAVING SUGGESTIONS—Seal any air leaks in heating system from basement to chimney top . . . do not keep doors or windows open longer than necessary . . . a wise precaution is to open windows at top rather than at bottom (where cold air will sweep the radiator and perhaps freeze it) . . . dust off all outside surfaces of radiators regularly as dust is an insulator . . . prevent air leakage around frames of windows, doors and open woodwork by caulking . . . insulate the heating unit unless the heat radiated from it is used to heat the basement.

RADIATION — In determining the kind of radiators to install, you'll want to consider the new "Radiant Baseboard Heating" system, the modern method of introducing heat at ankle level for evenly-distributed warmth throughout the room. The sturdy cast iron panels (as you can see from the illustration in the adjoining advertisement) look like baseboards and are substituted for them. If another system best suits your needs, here again you have a complete selection of dependable cast iron radiators available in the comprehensive Crane line: free standing ("on leg") or wall-hung, and concealed radiators for cabinet or panel installation.

LOCAL STOPS—An individual shut-off valve on each radiator gives you a big advantage: you can regulate the heat in any particular room without affecting the rest of the house.

OPEN the little petcock at the side of the radiator occasionally—and keep it open until water appears. This prevents the formation in the radiator of air pockets which tend to arrest the circulation of the water.

Also it's a good idea to operate the hand levers on the Relief Valve and the Safety Valve of your boiler two or three times a year—just to make sure they are in good working order.

INFORMATION—There are many booklets and folders available on the different aspects of heating for modern homes. Ask your plumbing and heating contractor or write Crane General Office for illustrated informative literature on any particular heating subject in which you are interested.

The round-up is over——and the Riders of the Range relax in dreams within the old corral—a cosy, comfortable "corral" it is for them, with those modern Radiant Baseboard Panels distributing even, healthful heat throughout the room.

Baseboard Panels stand high among the accepted modern developments in Crane heating equipment which also includes: free-standing, wall-hung and concealed radiators . . . piping, valves and fittings . . . and the right size and type of boiler for every home-heating requirement. Among them is the famous Crane Oil-Burning Boiler with its "BILTIN" tankless coil which assures an abundant supply of domestic hot water automatically. Consult your Architect and your Plumbing and Heating Contractor.

Maclean's MOVIES

CONDUCTED BY CLYDE GILMOUR

AN AMERICAN IN PARIS: Hollywood hasn't turned out a better musical in years than this gay and handsome confection starring Gene Kelly, Oscar Levant, and a delightful French newcomer named Leslie Caron. The tunes, by Gershwin, are as pleasurable as ever.

ANGELS IN THE OUTFIELD: A baseball comedy, mildly amusing one moment and heavy-handed the next. Celestial consultants, all of them former big-leaguers, help the Pittsburgh Pirates to a pennant and encourage fiery manager Paul Douglas to watch his language.

THE BLUE VEIL: A rambling, old-fashioned tear-jerker about a childless widow (Jane Wyman) who devotes her life to the bringing up of other people's babies. The ending, a "happy" one, will find even the male customers reaching for their hankies.

CROSSWINDS: A corny tropical adventure in which some of the year's most stupefying dialogue is solemnly batted back and forth by sailor John Payne, adventuress Rhonda Fleming, and other operatives. It's a popular item, though, with the small-fry trade.

THE DESERT FOX: A controversial Anglo-American obituary, highly laudatory in tone, of Rommel and the German military caste, with James Mason performing powerfully in the title role. I, for one, don't easily swallow the implication that the Nazis might have won the war if Hitler hadn't been a low-comedy screwball.

DETECTIVE STORY: Sidney Kingsley's hard-hitting Broadway drama about life in a big-town police station has been expertly filmed by William Wyler. The result is muscular entertainment for adults. The cast includes Kirk Douglas and Eleanor Parker.

JIM THORPE, ALL-AMERICAN: Burt Lancaster in a rather slow but interesting biog of the Oklahoma Indian superathlete who won the 1912 Olympics practically single-handed before a series of tough breaks shaved him downhill into bitterness and obscurity. The lithe Mr. L., physically at least, re-creates the mighty Thorpe with considerable vividness.

THE LADY PAYS OFF: A coy little romantic farce about a suave gambler (Stephen McNally), his motherless daughter (Gigi Perreau), and an "intellectual" glamour girl (Linda Darnell) who gets involved with them.

THE PEOPLE AGAINST O'HARA: Lawyer Spencer Tracy runs afoul of both the courts and the underworld in his dogged efforts to save a neighborhood boy from the electric chair. It's a bit lumbering in pace, but decent and unpretentious, and some of the minor roles are unusually well-acted.

PICKUP: A small-budget, well-intentioned but only partly successful sex melodrama in the "European" tradition, although made in Hollywood. It tells of a middle-aged widower (warmly played by writer-director Hugo Haas) who marries a gold-digger and soon learns he has taken a viper to his bosom.

SEVEN DAYS TO NOON: Its delayed arrival in Canada prompts me to issue a reminder regarding this fine suspense drama from Britain. Furthermore, another look at it after six months has convinced me that it merits the rating "excellent," rather than the "good" I've been giving it. Story deals with a troubled scientist on the loose in London with a sick mind and an A-bomb.

A STREETCAR NAMED DESIRE: Certainly not for the kiddies, and far from comfortable for many a grown-up, this is nonetheless a brilliant and unforgettable film for people not opposed to "life in the raw" on the screen. Tennessee Williams' disturbing tale of squalor and passion in New Orleans is enacted by a superb cast headed by Vivien Leigh, Marlon Brando, Kim Hunter and Karl Malden; and the direction by Elia Kazan is masterly throughout.

YOU NEVER CAN TELL: A tasteless farce-fantasy about a poisoned dog which returns to life (from "Beastatory," yet!) in the more-or-less human form of a private detective (Dick Powell). He then sets out to convict and punish his own killer.

How to Tackle that Turkey

years later. Some forlorn colonials were the first Englishmen to eat the bird—in 1621 in the Massachusetts Bay Colony, when an Indian chef named Squanto roasted native turkeys for their lean stomachs at the first Thanksgiving celebration. About 1625 new Pilgrims arrived bringing the European-educated bird with them. The repatriated gobblers preened themselves and strutted into the woods where they met their wild cousins. This resulted in the founding of several distinguished Turkey families: Bronzes, Narragansetts, White Hollands, Bourbon Reds, Black-and-Slates, Nittanys and Royal Palms.

aid published by the Poultry and Egg National Board. There was a typographical error right on the first page. It said a ten-to-twelve-pound turkey had to be cooked four hours in a slow oven. I called to my wife to point out this absurdity. She said the Handbook checked with Fanny Farmer, the Joy of Cooking and Escoffier, and furthermore, with herself. "Cook it four hours," she said flatly. "Very well," said I, "I'll throw in the stuffing and get going." I looked up stuffing and was arrested by a series of photographs entitled, Stuffing and Trussing, in which a fiendish pair of human hands seemed to be committing petit-point embroidery on the helpless fowl. There was a list of tools you needed to emulate the pair of hands: four skewers, a strawberry huller, paring knife, peppercorns, cloves, bay leaf and clean cord.

An hour later I had assembled this impedimenta. I was running somewhat behind schedule and remembered my wife's warning, "Turkey takes all day." Of course women try to make kitchen stuff look hard. I took the strawberry huller and attacked the scattered pinfeathers. A half hour later my wife arose from an easy chair where she had been reading a cheap novel and helped remove the last pinfeathers. I put Beltsville under a tap to bathe him. My wife said, "Singe him." She pointed out that Beltsville had some tiny hairs I had not seen. I set fire to twisted newspaper and singed him expertly. The hair that flared off my eyebrows was nothing and a little salve fixed my fingers.

Beltsville washed, I tackled the stuffing. The book said:

SIMPLE GOOD AND POPULAR STUFFING

1 cup fat
1 cup minced onion
1 stalk diced celery
4 quarts stale bread crumbs
1 tablespoon salt
½ tablespoon pepper
2 tablespoons poultry seasoning
1½ to 2 cups broth, milk or water with butter
chopped giblets

That's what the experts call simple. I remarked to my wife that experts can get pretty narrow on a subject and she said, "Uh huh. Shall I call the guests and say you'll be late?" I brushed her off. I was involved with a new torture the so-called experts have invented, mincing onions, dicing celery and crumbing stale bread. These turkey scientists ought to get out of the rut and do like the French goose ranchers do. They grow the pâté de foie gras right inside the goose—surely this could be done for turkey stuffing.

Beltsville Gets Buttered Up

A mere half hour later I was ramming the stuffing into Beltsville and then successfully followed the instructions for lacing him up with skewers and cord. Beltsville looked so good I carried him to my wife to admire. She said, "Tear out all that trussing. You have too much stuffing in him. It'll swell up and bust Beltsville." I decided to humor her, after a brisk ten-minute argument. I unrigged Beltsville and clawed out half his stuffing. Then I threw another pack hitch on him, lacing over the skewers to close his cavities, fore and aft, and securing his wings amidships. A salt rubdown and a coat of butter made Beltsville ready for the 325-degree oven. I put a buttered cheesecloth over his ample bosom to preserve him from the heat.

I joined my wife in the living room and could not forbear to point out that my turkey was in the oven a mere five hours after I started. "Not bad for a first try," I added. "You see, ducks, there is no need to take all day and make a big production out of it." She said, "Do you plan to serve any other dishes with Beltsville?" I chuckled. "The works, my dear. Cranberry sauce, giblet gravy, endive salad with wine vinegar dressing, wild rice, mashed potatoes, sweet poratoes, peas, brown Sicilian bread, black walnuts . . ." I couldn't finish for losing saliva.

"Maybe you should go back to the kitchen and get cooking," she suggested. Some hours later in my galley the picture unfolded of a panicking man in soggy white cap lost in mashed potatoes, while the guests thronged the room, waving unsteady cocktails, complaining they were hungry and offering banal remarks on the cooking. Halfway through this Walpurgisnacht my wife sounded off, "Beltsville's finished!"

It was pretty satisfying to see the looks of amazement on their pans when Beltsville emerged, bronzed and gleaming and his stuffing straining at the ropes. His girdle was burst but otherwise Beltsville and his author looked like a full-color cover on Gourmet. My wife broke the hushed interlude by barking, "Put him back in the warming oven until you've done the rest of the stuff."

Cries of "No, No!" arose from the guests. A large male guest seized the carving set and we bore Beltsville pell-mell to table. Beltsville made the best turkey sandwiches you ever ingested. If the harpies hadn't rushed me Beltsville's sacrifice would have rivaled the Feast of the Field of the Cloth of Gold. I might have even whipped them up some really intricate number like Dindonneau à la Catalane, or young turkey as the Catalans cook same, as touched up by the great Escoffier.

This recipe starts with parts of a young bird which are fried in butter until brown. A pint of white wine is added to the butter, then salt, pepper and a crushed clove of garlic. Cook until the wine is completely reduced. Add tomato purée, brown sauce and brown stock to cover the pieces of turkey. (Did I say you should spend the previous day making purée, sauce and stock?)

Put the dish into the oven for forty minutes, then fish out the turkey portions and put them in a casserole. Add a half pound of quartered mushrooms, sautéed beforehand in butter, and twenty chestnuts which have been cooked in consommé. (One time a fledgling chef in the Hôtel Meurice in Paris used twenty-one chestnuts and had his cap taken away in a ceremony in the grand salon à manger.) Steady on, now, friends. Add twenty small glazed onions, five quartered tomatoes and ten Spanish sausages. Put the original sauce on top of this and cook for twenty-five minutes more. Eat, take a nap.

Basting Is for Fusspots

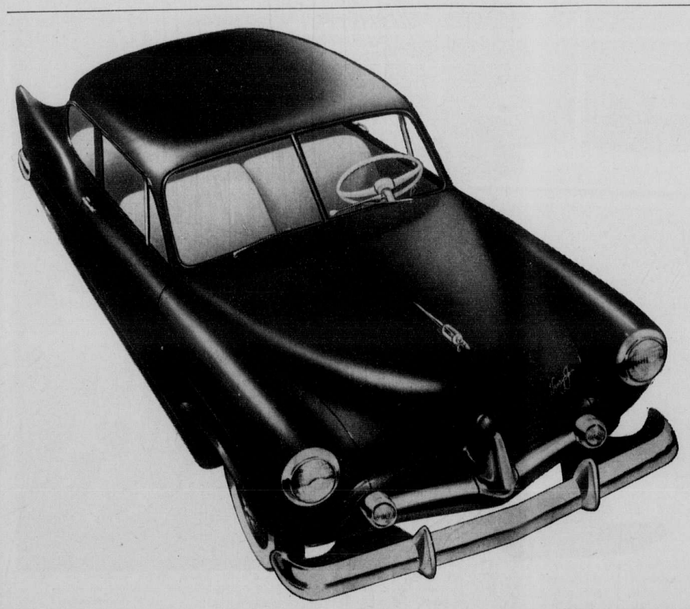

A savory variation on the basic Dugan bird is Roast Maryland Stuffed With Oysters. This number from the eastern shore of Maryland calls for a big tom scaling eighteen to twenty pounds. The stuffing for this Cavalier fowl is composed of a quart of oysters which have simmered in their own liquor until the edges are curled, a half pound of highly seasoned sausage meat browned in a pan, a pound of chopped cooked chestnuts, two stalks of diced celery, a chopped onion, bread crumbs and sage, salt and cayenne pepper. The oyster-fed turkey should be carried in following a crabmeat cocktail and a clam bisque with croutons.

There are certain crazed male cooks who go for basting the bird. Unsatisfied with the simple device of covering the beast with a buttered cloth to prevent drying while in the oven these fusspots stir up esoteric gunk and pop their heads in the oven repeatedly to spoon the stuff over the turkey. One sauce starts with a champagne or sparkling-cider base and goes on until the cook is laid out by the fumes. A thick sauce of Hawaiian papaya juice and powdered charcoal coated on the bird will stay on and form a toothsome crust, without requiring basting. Sealing in the juices with a paste has its defenders. One good one combines mustard, egg yellows, garlic juice and seasoning.

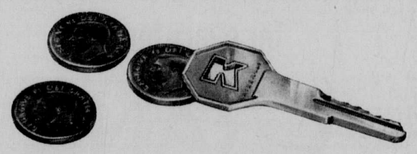

Carving a turkey isn't difficult—it merely requires firmness and willingness to defy Emily Post if the bird doesn't behave. After severing the cords and withdrawing the skewers, cut off one of the legs by grasping the knucklebone and cutting along the natural body joint. Then slice the breast longitudinally, cutting down from the breastbone. Stuffing is removed from the rear exit. There has been no spoon or human hand ever invented that will keep the stuffing from scattering. Forget the carving fork and spoon and use a pair of kitchen tongs of the salad-handling type.

The prodigality of Squanto's first turkey dinner for the Pilgrims has come down to us in all its heart-burning splendor. Squanto's recipe for roast turkey will work beautifully on your outdoor fireplace today. He skinned the bird and rubbed it with crushed juniper berries, put it on a spit and turned it over an open hickory fire. Squanto introduced cranberry sauce to the colonists, the puckish berry that grew then as now in the Atlantic marshes from Carolina to Newfoundland. The Indians sweetened the cranberry sauce with wild honey or maple sap. Probably the original menu included Jerusalem artichokes, which the Indians cultivated. The indigenes had already bred domestic runner beans from wild twining plants, and the colonists ate them as well as limas and kidney beans. There was succotash, an ancient Indian dish. As a matter of fact, Squanto's people used frozen foods. When winter came they made a succotash stew with maize, beans and wild game. They put the batch outside to freeze solid and chipped off hunks as needed during the winter.

Corn breads and Indian pudding were eaten at Squanto's banquet and the first American chef may have even popped some corn for the kids. Pumpkin pie, the mandatory dessert with holiday turkey, was not yet evolved from the English pastry shell and the Indian dessert of pumpkin flesh stewed with maple sap. If you want to follow Squanto's menu you will start with clam cocktails, "the treasure hid in the sands," of the Pilgrims.

The abstemious religious refugees whom Squanto fed undoubtedly did not drink wine from the wild grapes of New England but the holiday table today frequently bears an appropriate dry white wine. My own choice of whites is the gin-pale Orvieto which comes from Italy in green hand-blown bulbs nested in raffia cradles. But tastes differ. People who do not customarily have wine with meals like sweet, heavy and even red wines with fowl. Go ahead, it's your picnic. Wine belongs.

Of all meats, turkey leaves the greatest wake of leftovers. The carcass often meets a deplorable fate—the rissole and the croquette. The noble bird does not deserve to be turned into sawdust on the second day. Kindly give the victim the sauce treatment, such as in the superb dish, Turkey Tetrazzini, which may be made of one-to-four-day-old meat.

The baton is lifted on this Tetrazzini aria with a white sauce made with cream and seasoned with celery salt. Bring the sauce to a boil and add:

a cup or more of cooked turkey in thin strips
½ cup of cooked spaghetti, cut into small pieces
½ cup of mushroom caps, sautéed in butter
1/3 cup grated Parmesan cheese

Stir and transfer to a buttered baking dish. On top put three quarters cup of buttered cracker crumbs and bake in a hot oven until the crumbs are golden brown.

Leftover turkey should not be stored as it was left when the guests arose and lurched away. Take the carcass, strip off the meat with your fingers. Wrap the meat in foil or airtight waxed-paper packages. Similarly save the stuffing and gravy and bones. If you have the energy left Christmas night, start a broth simmering right away, using the broken bones, a half carrot, a sliced onion, clove of garlic, bay leaf, celery leaves, parsley (and dribs of leftover vegetables), plus salt and several peppercorns. Simmer in a closed pot for two or three hours, cool and strain into jars. This stock is the kickoff for many a fine dish to come. And I don't mean hash.

I mean, for instance, Brazilian turkey roll. This dish brings folks from all over to a Brazilian cafe in Manhattan. It requires a pancake similar to those used in crepes suzettes. You have a cookbook, haven't you? Look up crepes. No cookbook? Use thin toast, trimmed of crust.

Melt three tablespoons of butter in a saucepan, blend in two tablespoons of flour, salt and pepper. Add a cup of the soup stock you saved, a half cup of white wine or sherry and a half cup of milk. Pour these liquors in gradually and keep stirring. When the batch has thickened, sprinkle on a mild grated cheese, add eight or ten slabs of sliced turkey, both white and dark meat. Spoon the portions immediately onto a pancake (or toast) and roll it around the fillings. Serve with broccoli. Four souls can lunch nicely on Brazilian turkey rolls.

Kitchen genius can produce all sorts of palatable dishes with leftover fowl, provided you do not hash or grind the flesh up dry. Use the gravy savings and liquid stock, the juices of the princely guinea fowl. He deserves to have them restored while he is being cannibalized during Christmas week.

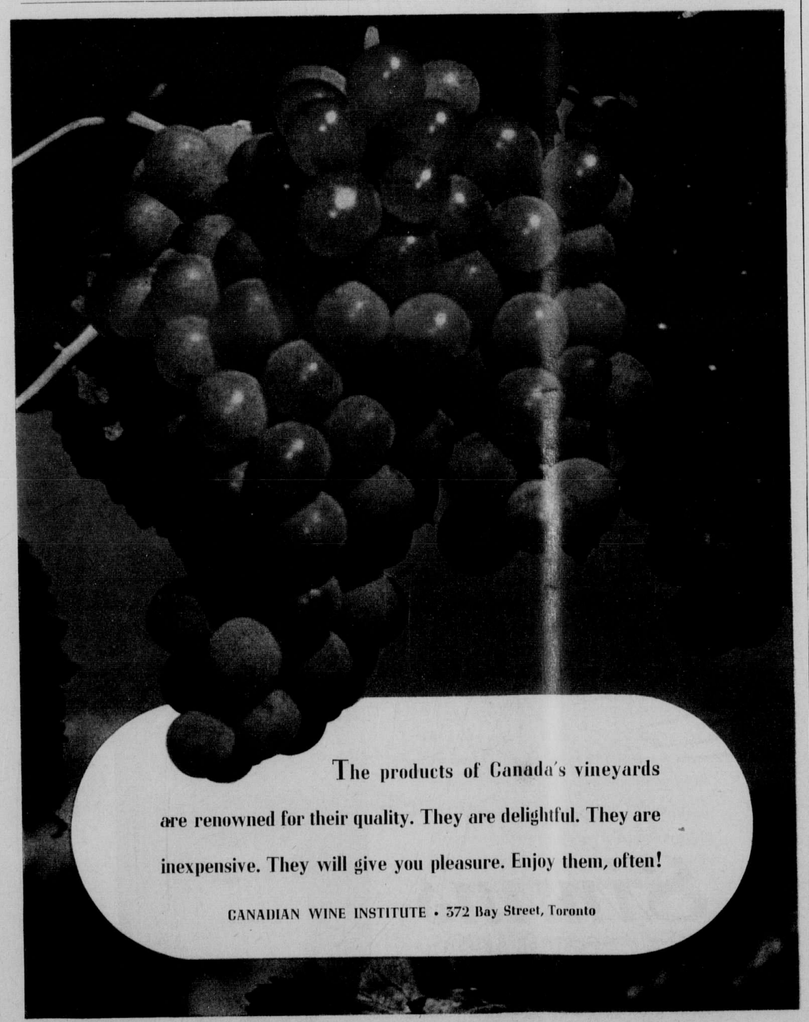

Eggs Benedict, the paragon of breakfast treats, will take on a turkey twist, either by substituting a slice of white turkey for the ham slice or adding it to the ham. On a grilled English muffin-half put the ham and/or turkey slice, topped by a poached egg, and cover with fresh Hollandaise sauce.

As a matter of fact, even aspics are better than hash.

The English epicure, Michael Powell, who made the films The Red Shoes and Tales of Hoffmann, has pronounced the final word on turkey recipes. Powell was researching medieval history when he came across the menu that was served by Henry V to the five kings after the Battle of Agincourt. Powell resolved to recreate the digestive atmosphere of Agincourt. He felt a keen insight into the fifteenth century could be gained. The recipe at the ancient banquet called for a large swan plucked and eviscerated. The swan was stuffed with a whole goose. The goose was stuffed with a chicken and inside the chicken there was put a pigeon. The pigeon contained a lark, the favorite tidbit of old England. The lark was stuffed with truffles and goose livers.

Powell found everything on the list but the swan. His Majesty is the titular owner of the Thames swans and Powell felt the keeper of the Royal Swans might not appreciate his gustatory experiment. Powell decided to use a turkey instead of a swan. The poultry was nested and prepared in the draughtiest old castle Powell could rent. He sent invitations to four other gourmets to join him in impersonating the five kings. The ersatz royalties sat down to table and ate of the dish. Powell poured French wines and genuine ancient-type English mead into cavernous mugs. Afterward everybody was feeling plenty medieval.

I plan to try this recipe next Christmas. ★

Rudyard Kipling wrote her; so did His Excellency Earl Grey, the Governor-General. In a single week there were seven hundred letters from Australia. Lucy Maud distributed them among Prince Edward Island school children, who answered them, and for years afterwards there was a prodigious exchange of correspondence between pen pals of P. E. I. and the antipodes.

Miss Montgomery, now an international celebrity, was swamped with invitations to be the guest of honor of important organizations in important cities, but she politely declined them all.

Her sense of duty, her Presbyterian conscience, would not let her leave her widowed grandmother. She stayed on at Cavendish, still helping in the post office, which was a room at the front of the house, and still cooking, washing dishes, scrubbing floors. The fees from the post office were barely enough to support her grandmother and Lucy Maud refused to accept a share of them. Her own income came entirely from her writing, which she sandwiched between more prosaic chores.

Before Anne of Green Gables was accepted, she had produced hundreds of verses, articles and short stories for Sunday-school papers and other publications for children. Her output was tremendous but the rewards had been dismally small—rarely as much as ten dollars in a week.

After the success of Anne of Green Gables, Lucy Maud concentrated on full-length novels. She wrote a total of twenty-two and Anne was the heroine of half a dozen of them. She also wrote a volume of poetry. All her books, with the exception of the poetry, were popular and met with a ready reception, but Anne of Green Gables was her one outstanding triumph, her one best seller.

Lucy Maud's "studio" at Cavendish was a sunny corner in the kitchen, beside a window through which she could gaze out on an apple orchard. When she was writing she perched on a table, her feet against the arm of a sofa, and held her portfolio on her knee.

She would scribble the first draft of a story with a pencil on the backs of official government forms, with which the post office was invariably oversupplied. When she had revised and corrected her work she typed the final draft with two fingers on a battered secondhand machine "that never made capitals plain and wouldn't print m's at all." She forced herself to rise early, so she would have more time for what she wanted to do, and once confided to her diary: "I didn't roll out of bed until six thirty this morning. I mustn't be so lazy again."

Avonlea, the village in which she set Anne of Green Gables and a number of her other books, was actually Cavendish, and the spots she loved were at her doorstep.

There was a pond, Anne's Lake of Shining Waters: "A bridge spanned it midway and from there to its lower end, where an amber-hued belt of sand hills shut it in from the dark blue gulf beyond, the water was a glory of many shifting hues . . . Here and there a wild plum leaned out from the bank like a white-clad girl tiptoeing to her own reflection. From the marsh at the head . . . came the clear, mournfully sweet chorus of the frogs."

There was a spring. In Anne of Green Gables, Anne says: "We've agreed to call the spring down by the log bridge the Dryad's Bubble. Isn't that a perfectly elegant name? I read a story once about a spring called that. A dryad is a sort of grown-up fairy, I think."

There was a spruce grove, Anne's Haunted Wood: "A haunted wood is so very romantic . . . We chose the spruce grove because it's so gloomy. Oh, we have imagined the most harrowing things . . . I wouldn't go through the Haunted Wood after dark now for anything. I'd be sure that white things would reach out from behind the trees and grab me."

There was a tiny stream, Anne's Babbling Brook: "Have you ever noticed what cheerful things brooks are? They're always laughing. Even in winter I've heard them under the ice. If there wasn't a brook I'd be haunted by the uncomfortable feeling that there ought to be."

There was a path between tall maples, Anne's Lovers' Lane: "So romantic! Maples are such sociable trees; they're always rustling and whispering to you. I like that lane because you can think out loud there without people calling you crazy."

And there was a fine old farmhouse. It was owned by Lucy Maud's good friends, bearded and bashful David MacNeill, a wise and kindly bachelor, and his spinster sister, Margaret MacNeill, who had a stern face and an austere manner, but a heart of gold. In fiction, this house became Green Gables, Anne's home. Lucy Maud used David and Margaret MacNeill as the models for Anne's unforgettable foster parents, Matthew Cuthbert, bachelor, and Marilla Cuthbert, spinster.

Most of Lucy Maud's characters were, like the Cuthberts, drawn from life. They were her neighbors and schoolmates, disguised and glorified a

A MEAL FOOD EXPERTS COMMEND

Oven-baked beans go beautifully with hot brown bread . . .

Here is nourishment as appetizing and economical as any cook could devise. Everybody knows that beans have a high calorie content and when they are oven-baked by Heinz chefs and drenched with Heinz own Tomato Sauce, you have a hearty flavour treat at low cost. Heinz makes four kinds of oven-baked beans. Look for them all at your grocer's. Also note below recipes for a warming cold-weather feast.

RECIPE

"Dinner of the Week" may easily be your family's verdict, when you serve a deep dish of tender Heinz Oven-Baked Beans. Vary them from time to time—add a few dashes of Heinz 57 Sauce to give a special flavour—some Heinz Chili Sauce or Tomato Ketchup on other occasions. Again, stir in gently ½ cup diced processed cheese or add crisp bacon strips, and heat as usual in saucepan or baking dish. For a crisp topping if you heat your beans in a casserole, try a layer of big buttered crumbs over the dish and bake until hot and golden.

ALL-BRAN MOLASSES HOT-BREAD

Measure 1 cup ALL-BRAN, ½ cup raisins, 2 tbsp. shortening, and ½ cup molasses into bowl. Add ¾ cup hot water, stir till shortening melts. Add 1 egg, beat well. Sift together 1 cup sifted flour, 1 tsp. baking soda, ½ tsp. salt and ½ tsp. cinnamon; add to All-Bran mixture, stirring only until combined. Fill 2 greased Heinz Oven-Baked Bean tins ⅔ full. Bake in preheated mod. oven (350F.) 45 min. Yield: 2 loaves. Or use 8 x 8-in. pan. Bake in mod. oven 35 min. Yield: 1 loaf. Serve at once.

REPEAT REPETITION

bit, but still recognizable. Generally, her plots and incidents were suggested by real happenings. She delved into her own memories for ideas and also borrowed and embroidered old tales told by the villagers around their winter fires.

At Cavendish, people say Anne of Green Gables "just sort of evolved." They can sketch in the background. When Lucy Maud was an infant, her mother died. Her father later departed for Saskatchewan, where he opened a store at Prince Albert, and she was left behind to be brought up by her maternal grandparents, Alexander MacNeill, a farmer, and his wife, the postmistress.

She was a bright precocious child. When she was nine she had read Longfellow, Tennyson, Whittier, Scott and Burns, was composing verses herself, and was already determined to be an author. At eleven she had written a boxful of stories. "They were very tragic creations in which almost everybody died," she once recalled. "In those tales, battle, murder and sudden death were the order of the day." At twelve she won a short-story contest for children sponsored by the Family Herald and Weekly Star, of Montreal.

When she was fifteen the Charlottetown Patriot printed one of many poems which she had submitted, thereby giving her what she described as "the greatest moment of my life."

She attended Cavendish District School (Anne's Avonlea) and Prince of Wales College at Charlottetown (Anne's Queen's). At Prince of Wales she qualified for a teacher's license (like Anne) at the age of seventeen. After that she visited her father in Saskatchewan for a year, spent a year at Dalhousie University in Halifax, then taught at the Prince Edward Island villages of Biddeford and Ellerslie. Meanwhile, Sunday-school papers and juvenile magazines bought some of her stories.

In 1898, when she was twenty-four, her grandfather died. She put a comforting arm around her lonely old grandmother and said, "I'm coming home to stay with you. You'll always have me." She resigned her teaching post and returned to Cavendish, where she wrote for her living. She was happy, in this period, if an editor paid her as much as five dollars for a contribution.

From her tenth birthday on she had been filling scribblers with notes on things which struck her as having story possibilities. When a small niece arrived to stay with David and Margaret MacNeill, Lucy Maud—virtually an orphan herself—had wondered whether the child was an orphan. She had also wondered what the outcome would be if the MacNeills had wanted a boy orphan to help work the farm and had received a girl by mistake. So she jotted down this sentence: "Elderly couple apply to orphan asylum for boy; a girl is sent them."

That single sentence led to Anne of Green Gables. At the outset of the novel, Matthew and Marilla Cuthbert apply for an orphan boy. Through an error, they get Anne, an orphan girl. They plan, at first, to send her back to the orphanage, but she is so grateful, so delighted to have a home, that they hesitate. For awhile Anne's fate hangs in the balance, but she so endears herself to the Cuthberts that they keep her. As she grows up, she repays them many times for their kindness.

While the arrival of the niece of David and Margaret MacNeill gave Lucy Maud the idea, Anne is not patterned after the niece, who, as it turned out, was not an orphan, and is now Mrs. Ernest Webb of Cavendish. In Anne, Lucy Maud unconsciously painted a charming self-portrait. Apparently, she was about the only person in Cavendish who wasn't aware of Anne's identity, although she sensed that Anne was a real individual and once said, "When I tell people that she is entirely fictitious I have an uncomfortable feeling that I am not telling the truth."

Her Feather-Sprouting Nose

Lucy Maud's hair, if it wasn't red, had a reddish glint. Her eyes, like Anne's, were big and wistful, and her face, like Anne's, had an elfin quality. She had freckles like Anne, Anne's flair for fantasy, Anne's genius for tumbling into awkward situations.

As a teen-ager in a day when a lovely woman was supposed to have an "alabaster" complexion, she hated her freckles and once plastered them with a sticky blemish-remover that had to be left on for two hours. Waiting for the two hours to pass, she sorted a sackful of goose down with which she intended to fill pillows. And she dreamed she was a duchess. Suddenly, there was a knock on the castle door and the duchess swept majestically to answer it, and there on the threshold stood the parson, come to call on her grandparents.

"Great heavens, child!" he exclaimed. "Your nose—there are feathers sprouting all over it!"

That couldn't have happened to anybody but the girl who was Anne, although it is not chronicled in Anne of Green Gables or other Anne books.

In Anne of Green Gables a clergyman and his wife, who are new at Avonlea, accept an invitation to tea at Green Gables. Anne, who has been learning to cook, is allowed to bake a layer cake for the occasion—a coveted privilege.

"Cakes," she remarks, "have such a terrible habit of turning out bad just when you especially want them to be good. However, I suppose I shall just have to trust to Providence and be careful to put in the flour." She puts the flour in all right but, in her excitement, uses liniment instead of vanilla for flavoring. Lucy Maud herself made the same blunder under the same circumstances.

Anne was poor at mathematics; so was Lucy Maud. Anne was a gifted elocutionist: "Her fright and nervousness vanished and she began her recitation, her clear, sweet voice reaching to the farthest corner of the room without a tremor or a break." Lucy Maud was likewise a gifted elocutionist—one of the most popular performers at the fortnightly meetings of the Cavendish Literary Society.

Anne gave up schoolteaching to look after her foster parents when they needed her. Lucy Maud gave up schoolteaching to be with her grandmother. She was so faithful to her pledge, always to look after her grandmother, that although she fell deeply in love she would not marry while the old woman was alive.

Rev. Ewan Macdonald, with whom she "kept company," was born at Valleyfield, P. E. I., and, like Lucy Maud, he attended Prince of Wales College. He was the Presbyterian minister in the Cavendish district. Lucy Maud was thirty-seven when she and Macdonald were finally wed in 1911, a few months after the grandmother's death. He was forty-one. He had been waiting for her for ten years and rather than leave Cavendish and be separated from her he had turned down several opportunities in bigger places. He and his bride soon moved to Uxbridge, Ont., but it was too late to repair his career and all his life he remained an underpaid country parson.

His lean income was augmented by his wife's earnings. Up to 1911 four of her books—Anne of Green Gables, Anne of Avonlea, Kilmeny of the Orchard and The Story Girl—had been published. Between 1911 and 1939, although she had the management of the manse and the upbringing of two sons on her hands, she wrote Chronicles of Avonlea, The Golden Road, Anne of the Island, Anne's House of Dreams, Rainbow Valley, Further Chronicles of Avonlea, Rilla of Ingleside, Emily of New Moon, Emily Climbs, The Blue Castle, Emily's Quest, Magic for Marigold, A Tangled Web, Pat of Silver Bush, Mistress Pat, Anne of Windy Poplars, Jane of Lantern Hill, and Anne of Ingleside. She also wrote her volume of verse, The Watchman and Other Poems, and countless short stories and articles. She once estimated that her writing brought her a total of seventy-five thousand dollars.

When Lucy Maud's sons, Chester and Stuart, were toddlers, she improvised bedtime stories for them, but she taught them to read at an early age and from then on expected them to find their own literary entertainment. She had no daughters. Chester is now a lawyer at Fort William, Ont., and Stuart is a doctor on the staff of St. Michael's Hospital at Toronto.

Lucy Maud, in middle age, was a handsome and incessantly busy woman. She was active in congregational work, kept her house spotless, and prepared wonderful meals—yet she shut herself up in her bedroom for hours each day to write. She had an enormous collection of books, which she read and reread. They ranged from cheap detective thrillers to metaphysical tomes. A prolific correspondent, she tried to answer all fan mail, and often sent personal friends letters that were twenty or thirty pages long.

Her memory was fantastic and she could recite all Sir Walter Scott's epic poems. She was fond of cats, would talk to them as though they were human, and always had a grey-striped one named Daffy. There were three Daffys. The youngest died at fifteen, the oldest at twenty-one.

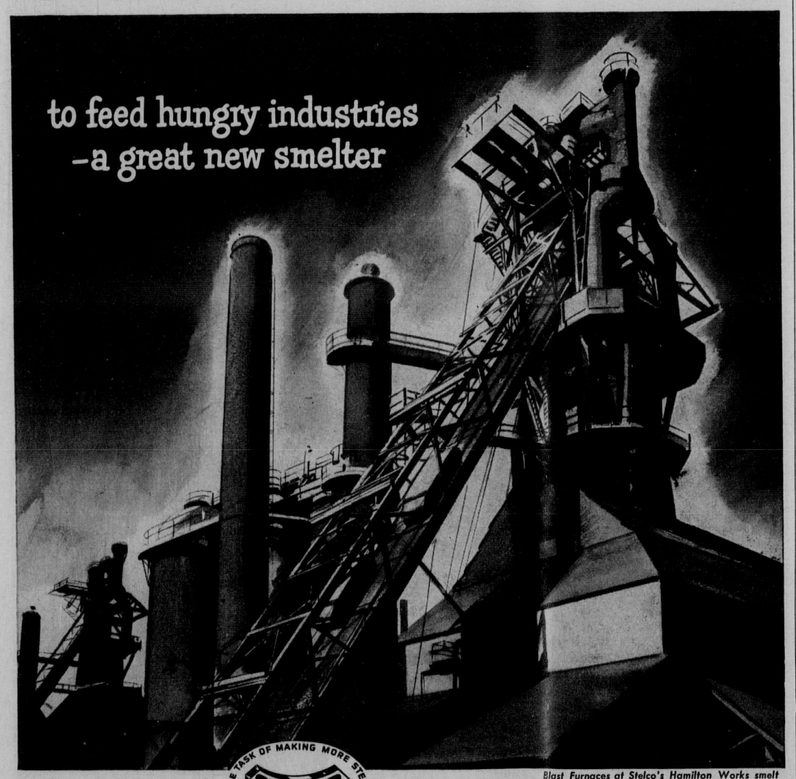

In Anne of Green Gables Anne rebels amusingly against Sunday school, but Lucy Maud didn't carry this whimsical approach to religion into her personal life. She was not belligerently "churchy," but her outlook did reflect the austere and puritanical influences that surrounded her in her childhood at Cavendish, where nobody, in those days, would have dared cut wood on the Sabbath, even to keep from freezing.

When Chester or Stuart Macdonald needed discipline it was Lucy Maud who applied the palm of the hand to the seat of the pants.

Her husband was proud to have descended from the Macdonalds of Sleath, who, he boasted, were the wildest of the Scottish clans. But he himself was the mildest of men—an absent-minded scholar who was usually to be found in his library. When his Blast Furnaces at Stelco's Hamilton Works smelt iron ore, coke and limestone to produce pig iron.

THE TASK OF MAKING MORE STEEL — STELCO — NEVER STOPS

Facts about STEELMAKING

Stelco's new Blast Furnace will be as large as any unit of its kind—anywhere in the world!

Blast Furnaces produce pig iron, also gas in tremendous volume, used as fuel in producing and processing steel.

Slag, which results from pig iron production, is used to make rock wool insulation and for many other purposes.

● Every day, Canadian industry devours huge quantities of steel. Every day, industry reaches out hungrily for more. What is being done about it, at Stelco?

For one thing, Stelco is working night and day at building a huge new Blast Furnace. When completed, it will add an additional 1400 tons per day to the vast river of pig iron already pouring from Stelco furnaces. This is vitally important, because pig iron is the indispensable ingredient in the production of quality steel in large tonnages.

More than $50,000,000 are being invested by Stelco, this year and next, to provide for greatly increased Canadian steel production. The new Blast Furnace is just one phase of this huge Stelco expansion program . . . a program "Canadian to the core", and designed to give steel-hungry industries the materials they must have to "grow on" for a stronger Canada.

DRYOCOPUS PILEATUS
(Northern Pileated Woodpecker)

The Pileated Woodpecker is a startling bird. So spectacular is his appearance that he has long been a target for guns in the hands of thoughtless people. As a result he is becoming rare in many sections of Canada.

He should be protected. Besides being highly decorative and the largest Canadian woodpecker, the Pileated is extremely valuable. He destroys millions of wood insects and provides nesting sites for tree-dwelling ducks.

Sells First Article 3 Months After Enrolling

"Although only 18, I had the thrill of seeing my first story in print after only three months of N.I.A. training. It appeared in the Telegraph Journal, the Montreal Standard and was used as the basis of a story by C.B.C. Since then there have been other articles. The cheques received encouraged me and swelled my appreciation for N.I.A."—Eileen Flanders, Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, Canada.

Why Can't You Write?

It's much simpler than you think!

So many people with the "germ" of writing in them simply can't get started. They suffer from inertia. Or they set up imaginary barriers to taking the first step.

Many are convinced the field is confined to persons gifted with a genius for writing.

Few realize that the great bulk of commercial writing is done by so-called "unknowns."

Not only do these thousands of men and women produce most of the fiction published, but countless articles on business, homemaking, hobbies, decorating, local, club and church activities, human interest stories, as well.

Such material is in constant demand. Every week thousands of cheques for $25, $50 and $100 go out to writers whose latent ability was perhaps no greater than yours.

The Practical Method

Newspaper work demonstrates that the way to learn to write is by writing! Newspaper copy desk editors waste no time on theories or ancient classics. The story is the thing. Every copy "cub" goes through the course of practical criticism—a training that turns out more successful authors than any other experience.

That is why Newspaper Institute of America bases its writing instruction on the Copy Desk Method. It starts and keeps you writing in your own home, on your own time. And upon the very same kind of actual assignments given daily to metropolitan reporters. Thus you learn by doing, not by studying the individual styles of model authors.

Each week your work is analyzed constructively by practical writers. Gradually they help to clarify your own distinctive style. Writing soon becomes easy, absorbing. Profitable, too, as you gain the "professional" touch that gets your material accepted by editors. Above all, you can see constant progress week by week as your faults are corrected and your writing ability grows.

Have You Natural Ability?

Our FREE Writing Aptitude Test will reveal whether or not you have natural talent for writing. It will analyze your powers of observation, your imagination and dramatic instinct. You'll enjoy taking this test. There is no cost or obligation. Simply mail the coupon below, today. Newspaper Institute of America, One Park Avenue, New York 16, N.Y., U.S.A. (Founded 1925).

youngsters wanted spending money, he was a soft touch.

Like Anne, Lucy Maud had a temper. It flamed in 1920 when Page—the publisher who bought Anne of Green Gables for five hundred dollars—brought some of her longer short stories out in a book. She sued Page, claiming unauthorized publication, and the case was before the courts for nine years. Finally she won a verdict in her favor.

Her temper also flared in 1921 when she saw Hollywood's silent version of Anne of Green Gables, starring Mary Miles Minter. Apart from receiving nothing for the film rights, she had no control over the treatment of the story, since she had sold it outright to Page. She considered Mary Miles Minter "too sugary sweet—not a scrap like my gingery Anne." But what burned her most was that the scene of Green Gables had been transferred to the United States and the Stars and Stripes flew over Anne's school.

She forgave Hollywood in 1934 when Anne of Green Gables was filmed with sound. Anne's second name was Shirley. The young actress cast in the role adopted Anne Shirley as her screen name and became well-known under it. "The little girl who played the part of Anne is a good Anne," Lucy Maud commented. "There were many moments when she tricked me into feeling that she was Anne . . . . Matthew, whom I have always seen with a long grey beard, seemed a stranger to me at first, but he was so good I finally forgot his clean-shaven face . . . . Marilla was not the tall thin austere Marilla of my conception, but it was impossible to help liking her. And Canada and the Island were given some credit for the story."

The Sapphire Isle

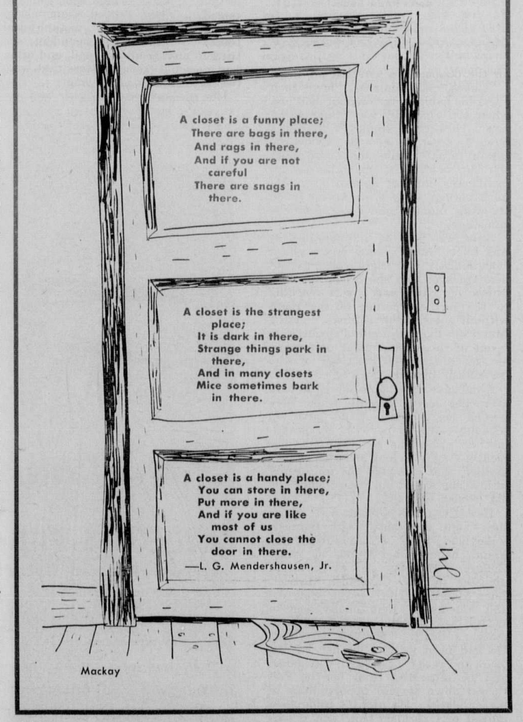

Lucy Maud and Ewan Macdonald were longer in Leaskdale, north of Toronto, than in any other parish. Their sons recall that Christmas at Leaskdale was strictly a family affair, with a tree, presents, surprises and a goose dinner—turkey being reserved for Thanksgiving.

For their summer vacations the Macdonalds journeyed to Prince Edward Island, for Lucy Maud never lost her passion for "that colorful little land of ruby and emerald and sapphire." There she visited her relatives, held reunions with schoolmates like Mrs. Mary Beaton and Mrs. R. E. Mutch, had tea at Green Gables with Mrs. Ernest Webb, and made a pilgrimage to the small house she was born in at Clifton. This house is now owned by Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Found, of Charlottetown, who use it as a summer cottage. Lucy Maud was one of their close friends.

"Peace!" Lucy Maud wrote. "You never know what peace is until you walk on the shores or in the fields or along the winding red roads of Prince Edward Island in a summer twilight when the dew is falling and the old old stars are peeping out and the sea keeps its mighty tryst with the little land it loves. You find your soul then. You realize that youth is not a vanished thing but something that dwells forever in the heart."

She couldn't have written with such feeling about her native province unless she had truly loved it. Prince Edward Islanders loved her, too, and don't believe there will ever again be anybody quite like her. In Cavendish National Park most of the landmarks associated with her childhood—and Anne's—are carefully preserved, although the house in which the author lived with her grandparents has been torn down.

A CLOSET IS MANY THINGS

Green Gables, the house in which she placed Anne, has now been taken over by the federal government. On an average summer day, six or seven hundred people go through it—people from all over North America and from other parts of the world. As a rule tourists are fairly noisy: they laugh and shout. At Green Gables they speak in hushed voices, as though at a shrine.

Outside, mothers and grandmothers who were thrilled long ago by the adventures of fiction's immortal redhead wander from the Babbling Brook to Lovers' Lane and watch the sun setting over the Lake of Shining Waters, and suddenly realize, as Lucy Maud did, that youth dwells forever in the heart.

Thousands of Sad Friends

Lucy Maud Montgomery Macdonald was sixty-eight when she died in 1942, one year before her husband. She is buried in a graveyard on a hill overlooking Green Gables, and there's a big stone monument to her near the entrance of Cavendish National Park. When this was erected the park had a new superintendent from the Canadian mainland who didn't know the sentiments of Prince Edward Islanders. He worried about the unveiling. Would anybody turn up for it?

He instructed his workmen not to set out too many benches. The roads were bad, he explained, and Cavendish was a long haul from the town of Summerside or the city of Charlottetown, and it would look better to have a few persons standing than to have rows of empty seats. So that the speakers on the program would at least have somebody to speak to, he asked the workmen to be on hand themselves.

But on the day of the unveiling the highways to Cavendish were choked with automobiles hours before the ceremony. In hamlets and villages there were folks who rose while it was still dark so they'd have time to travel to Cavendish by horse and buggy. The Gulf of St. Lawrence hummed with the sound of motor launches bringing fishermen and their families. Lucy Maud's friends came by the thousands from every corner of Prince Edward Island and also from the mainland. The park superintendent hurriedly changed his instructions and told his men to round up all the benches they could find.

"I guess," he said quietly, "that she must have been a wonderful woman."

She was. She had the qualities of the truly great—simplicity, wisdom, courage, humor, honesty, kindness. They flowed through her life as through her books. For she herself was Anne of Green Gables. ★ of aluminum is accomplished by electrolysis in large steel vats known in the industry as "pots" or the "potline." Each pot is lined with a hard carbon paste produced from the petroleum coke, then partially filled with pulverized cryolite. A carbon electrode is lowered into the cryolite and an electric current two hundred thousand times more powerful than that flowing through an ordinary twenty-five watt bulb passes from the electrode, through the cryolite to the pot's carbon lining. The cryolite melts and into this red-hot molten bath the aluminum - bearing alumina is added. The electric current separates the alumina's oxygen and aluminum. Pure molten aluminum settles to the bottom of the pot and is drained off. All that has to be done is to continue adding cryolite and alumina. As long as there is sufficient electric power to keep the metallurgical brew boiling the pots never cease their work. And there's the rub. They consume an astronomical amount of electricity.

There's such a volume of electricity sizzling down Arvida's potlines that even the air for yards around is saturated with it. The potmen cannot carry watches, for the electrically charged air magnetizes a watch in a short time and makes it do everything except run backwards. The electrical energy used in producing one ton of aluminum would supply the average Canadian home with light, heat and power for twenty-five years. A single pot consumes as much electricity in one day as the average city home does in eight years. Arvida, with twenty-five potrooms of one hundred and forty pots each, uses more electricity each twenty-four hours than all industrial and domestic consumers of Montreal and Toronto combined. Alcan, of course, is far and away Canada's biggest consumer of electricity.

Obviously, with a kilowatt appetite of that size, aluminum production's No. 1 requirement is a whopping supply of cheap electricity. There is the explanation of how Canada, without a dribble of the raw materials, can still be the world's most efficient and second biggest maker of aluminum. The only reason Canada isn't the world's leading producer is a one-and-a-half-cent-a-pound duty on aluminum imported into the U. S., which gives U. S. producers the extra hedge of protection they need to stay in profitable business. And that kilowatt appetite, too, is the story behind the story of aluminum's repeated retreats to new and undeveloped frontiers. For aluminum can't compete with other industries for electric power. It has to find its power in a spot where no one else will want it. But sooner or later the other industries crowd in along aluminum's pioneering trail, the power price is bid upwards, and aluminum has to move again to a more distant frontier.

Aluminum's frontier - seeking trail started in a woodshed in Oberlin, Ohio, in 1886 where a young scientist named Charles Martin Hall discovered the electrolytic process of smelting the metal from its ore. Aluminum, before that more rare than gold, was launched on a career which was to see it become a competitor of steel.

That same year Hall took his discovery to Pittsburgh where the first aluminum plant was erected. Electric power had to be produced by steam. The best Hall could do was produce aluminum at five dollars a pound. At that price no one would buy it. The aluminum industry, for the first time, was up against the problem which was to dictate its history to this day. Hall had to find cheaper electricity and increase production so he could turn out a product that could compete on the metal market with iron and steel.

It couldn't be done in Pittsburgh where other industries, then beginning to use electric power, could pay more for it. Outside, however, where the competition was less, power was cheaper, and Hall figured that by increasing production from ten to a hundred tons a year he could lower the aluminum price from five dollars a pound to one dollar. Hall borrowed a million dollars and, in 1891, built a bigger plant at New Kensington, a Pittsburgh suburb. Demand for cheaper power had forced aluminum to make its first move along the trail which now, sixty years later, has it burrowing like a giant mole into the heart of a remote B. C. mountain.

But even at a dollar a pound Hall's aluminum was still begging for buyers. To show prospective customers how it could be used the aluminum firm went into the manufacturing business and started producing cooking utensils. Storekeepers wouldn't risk their reputations with the newfangled pots and pans, so the aluminum company put college students on the road during summer vacations selling the aluminum ware door to door. One of their most aggressive young salesmen was a youth named R. E. Powell. Powell was certain that the new light-weight metal was going to go places. It did—and so did Powell. He has been president of the Aluminum Company of Canada for the past twenty years.

Slowly a demand for aluminum was built up. But n.w industries moved into New Kensington and the price for power was going up too. Their newfound aluminum market was none too secure, and an increase in price would knock it for a loop. To attract the much larger market that was developing, aluminum needed cheaper power, greater production and a lower price.

In 1893 the aluminum industry moved again, this time to pioneer a new type of power source—the vast and hitherto untapped energy of Niagara. Two large aluminum plants were built at Niagara Falls, N.Y., and a long-term contract signed for the purchase of two thousand horsepower from an electric firm that was building Niagara's first hydro-electric generating station. Previously Niagara had been too remote from centres of industry to warrant power development there. But its cheap power and remoteness were just what aluminum needed and the first large hydro-electric plant in North America was financed there with aluminum industry backing.

Thus it was aluminum that started Niagara along the road to its present hydro-electric greatness. But, on the other hand, Niagara also put the struggling aluminum industry on its feet. With Niagara's cheap and abundant power feeding the potlines the aluminum price was chopped from a dollar down to forty-eight cents a pound by 1896. At this price there was a booming market and for the first time the aluminum industry was rolling along in the black.

A New Eden in Quebec

The New Kensington plant, crippled now by a power price the industry couldn't hope to meet, was switched over to the manufacture of aluminum products. All production of primary aluminum metal was concentrated at Niagara.

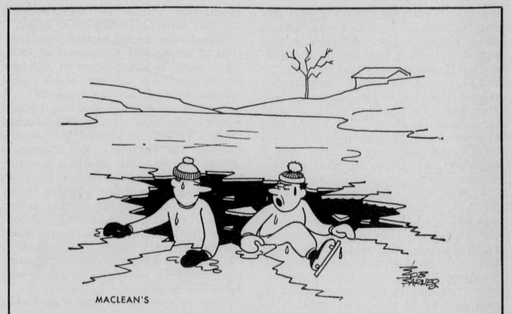

The industry, now the Aluminum Company of America, popularly labeled "Alcoa," couldn't keep Niagara's power to itself for long, however. Other industries noticed Niagara's cheap power and began moving in and bidding up the power price. Aluminum was in the middle of the same old squeeze play again. Alcoa began looking around for another frontier. And this time it was going to need more than just cheap power. Aluminum production was now big time and, since its raw materials had to be imported from abroad, it had to find a spot that could be served by sea transportation. Rail freight charges to Niagara as well as increasing power rates were slowly strangling Alcoa.

Alcoa found its industrial Eden in Quebec. In 1899 the Aluminum Company of Canada was formed as a subsidiary of Alcoa and the aluminum trail crossed to Canada. Where the St. Maurice River tumbles down off the Laurentians to empty into the St. Lawrence at Three Rivers, aluminum started once more to carve an industrial empire out of wilderness. Power rights on the St. Maurice were controlled by the Shawinigan Water and Power Company, but Shawinigan then in its infancy had no finances to develop the power it owned. The new Canadian aluminum industry footed the bill and erected the first St. Maurice powerhouse at the little forest community of Shawinigan Falls. In 1901 Alcan began producing its first Canadian aluminum. There was no one else to use the power, raw materials of bauxite and cryolite could come by sea to within twenty-five miles of its Shawinigan Falls smelter—it was the most economical aluminum production setup yet. The price was slashed from forty-eight to thirty-two cents a pound, sales increased and the industry's power requirements, which had been one hundred and twenty-five horsepower at Pittsburgh, two thousand horsepower at Niagara, now soared in a few years to thirty thousand horsepower.

Production increased from one thousand tons a year to six thousand. Then the same inevitable squeeze began again. The isolated forest settlement of Shawinigan Falls became a thriving industrial community of forty thousand people. New industries began offering higher rates for power. By 1926 the Shawinigan Falls smelter was paying twice as much per horsepower for electricity as it had in 1900, but aluminum was selling at six cents a pound less.

Shawinigan would have to stay in production to help supply the big market that had developed for Canadian aluminum, but somewhere the industry needed a new frontier once more to expand production and offset the growing Shawinigan costs. Alcan moved to the Saguenay Valley, one hundred miles north of Quebec City.

Here the aluminum industry tried a new strategy. Alcan would generate and control its own power, then no one else could come along in the years ahead and steal it from them. Canada had a foreign market now (largely U. S. and Britain) for all the aluminum it could produce and the first Saguenay powerhouse was designed to turn out a thumping one hundred thousand horsepower. In the forest of the Saguenay's bank Alcan built the new city of Arvida and an aluminum smelter with an initial capacity of thirty thousand tons a year, five times greater than the Shawinigan Falls smelter. Twenty miles downstream at a point where seagoing ships could dock with bauxite from British Guiana it built the harbor of Port Alfred. Arvida is now a city of eleven thousand, centre of a bustling industrial area with picturesque street plan and landscaping. Alcan didn't merely open a new frontier, it planted there a model city that is one of Canada's outstanding show places. Port Alfred's annual tonnage places it now among the leading ten Canadian ocean ports. Twenty-five years ago when aluminum's frontier retreat forced it to the Saguenay, this area was a backwash of a few isolated farming communities. By World War II it was one of the few spots in Canada that rated anti-aircraft guns and a squadron of Spitfires standing by as a defense against possible enemy attack.

It was 1926 when Alcan made its move to Arvida. At this time Alcan was still a wholly owned subsidiary of the Aluminum Company of America. In 1928 it was cut loose from the apron strings of its American-owned parent, for Alcoa by this time was a sprawling industrial goliath with subsidiaries all over the world too widespread to be efficiently managed by a single firm. The divorce of Alcoa and Alcan was complete, there was no interlocking directorate. Actually one slender link remained, for when Alcan was established as an independent Canadian company its newly created shares were sold only to individuals already holding Alcoa shares. For a time, therefore, the two companies had the same shareholders but totally separated boards of directors.

Shut-Down At Shawinigan

The Alcan-Alcoa connection has been a political and legal football for years. In 1937 The U. S. Department of Justice charged under U. S. anti-trust laws that the two firms were a big and sinister international aluminum combine. Court hearings which dragged out for nine years finally proved in 1946 that the two were actually aggressive and bona fide competitors. In 1950 the squabble came up again and this time, to assure that no joint control could develop in the future, a U. S. judge ordered Alcoa shareholders who still also owned shares in Alcan to dispose of their shares in one or other of the companies. At this time Alcan was still eighty-five-percent owned by U. S. shareholders. The court order will release a large number of Alcan shares and permit a greater percentage of Canadian ownership.

In 1928, as soon as it was cut loose from its former U. S. control, Alcan began preparing for a vast expansion which would reduce production costs and create a much greater demand for Canadian aluminum throughout the world. Shipshaw, until recently the world's biggest power development, was planned and work began that same year. Then came depression and the demand for aluminum was cut in half. The first section of Shipshaw was completed, the second and much larger section was postponed. Alcan in its Shipshaw No. 1 powerhouse had two hundred and sixty thousand horsepower that it didn't know what to do with. By 1932 production at Shawinigan Falls was costing much more per ton than at Arvida, and the Shawinigan Falls smelter was closed down. Arvida's thirty-thousand-tons-a-year capacity could fill the demand almost twice over.

When World War II loomed everybody, including Germany, Japan and Russia, clamored for Canadian aluminum. Alcan expanded its Arvida smelting facilities, started drawing on Shipshaw's idle horsepower and, between 1937 and 1939, doubled its production. But 1939's production of around eighty thousand tons was just the beginning. With the outbreak of war Britain and the U. S. flooded Alcan with orders that soared up into the neighborhood of two hundred thousand tons a year. Quebec was the only place in the world where aluminum production could be tremendously boosted with economy and speed.

Shipshaw's second section, construction of which was postponed in 1931, was rushed to completion in eighteen months in one of the war's most spectacular engineering projects. A police force of five hundred stood guard against sabotage as the job boomed along. Expediters roamed the country begging for materials for a project which, because of wartime secrecy, they could not name. When the dust and dynamite fumes cleared away Alcan had the world's biggest power plant. (Grand Coulee and Boulder Dam in western U. S. have since become slightly larger.) Instead of Shipshaw's original 260,000 horsepower its generators were now cracking out 1,500,000 horsepower.

New smelters were built at Beauharnois near Montreal, at Shawinigan Falls once more, and at La Tuque, another power site on the St. Maurice River. Power was rationed. Other industries which had bid up the power price and driven aluminum out of Shawinigan Falls ten years before were now taking a back seat to aluminum. Every kilowatt that could be obtained was funneled into the aluminum plants. Alcan's production by 1944 was a staggering half million tons a year. Most of it wound up in Allied planes. The air forces of Germany and Japan were first defeated on the aluminum potlines of Quebec.

At war's end the demand for aluminum remained as brisk as ever, but now the old economic factors were back again to haunt the aluminum trail. No longer was government-dictated power rationing feeding electricity into the aluminum plants. Aluminum now had to find its own power and pay for it at the going rate. The result was that the Beauharnois and La Tuque smelters were closed down at once. Alcan couldn't meet the power rates there and turn out aluminum for the highly competitive peacetime market. In 1950, with the war preparedness program increasing the pressure for aluminum, Beauharnois was reopened. But it is only a stopgap necessitated by abnormal conditions. Its power cost is almost prohibitive and it is operating on an insecure year-to-year power contract which will terminate as soon as someone else offers more money for the same power. Beauharnois' aluminum is needed for the time being, but economically it is a white elephant that Alcan will write off as soon as conditions permit.

Shawinigan Falls has remained in production since it was reopened during the war, but actually the aluminum trail has long since passed it by and, like Beauharnois, it is living on borrowed time. Power at Shawinigan is now costing three times as much as it did when aluminum first moved there in 1900. And meanwhile the price at which aluminum can be sold has dropped from 1900's thirty-three cents a pound to eighteen today.

Will aluminum's old bogeyman of competing industrial development and rising power costs strike at Arvida too? Arvida was to be the perfect aluminum establishment, the last Canadian aluminum frontier. Alcan would have its own electric power there and no one could bid the cost up on them. But it hasn't worked out that way. Even owning its own power hasn't protected Alcan against the economic squeeze which four times before has driven aluminum production to a new frontier.

Arvida today is producing more and cheaper aluminum than any other site in the world. In fact its aluminum output will increase during the next few years when two new Saguenay River power developments now under construction come into production. But already, before Arvida has even reached its zenith, the historic aluminum bogeyman has appeared.

"We have discovered we can never completely control the value and distribution of power, even when we make it ourselves," said Alcan vice-president McNeely DuBose. "Electricity is too much of a public necessity for anyone to control. We can't stand in the way of Canadian expansion and drive other industries away from our areas with a big stick. We'd be more unpopular than the Communists if we tried."

The fundamental explanation for aluminum's sixty-five-year frontier retreat is that, after aluminum has done the spadework, all other industries can come along afterward and use aluminum's power to better advantage. Aluminum smelting requires more than twice as much electricity per dollar of product as is required for the production of chemicals such as chlorine and caustic soda; the power required for the production of one ton of aluminum will make eighteen tons of newsprint. There are now four big pulp and newsprint producers, in addition to a host of smaller manufacturing companies, using Alcan power in the Saguenay Valley. Once taken on, these industries have to be supplied. When low water curtailed Shipshaw's power output in October, three Arvida aluminum potlines had to be closed down to release power for Alcan's other customers.

Since 1949 the demand for Alcan's aluminum has been greater than the supply. And it was obvious by then that Arvida too will someday be choked off by the economic pressures that have always dogged aluminum's trail. Alcan engineers had studied potential power sites in Norway, South Africa, New Zealand, Borneo, Labrador and British Columbia. In January this year Alcan president Powell, the onetime pot-and-pan salesman, told a Washington subcommittee investigating the aluminum situation: "We have considered the availability of hydro-electric power in all parts of the free world and have selected the Nechako-Kitimat site as the most economical large power site to be found anywhere." In April Alcan and the B. C. Government announced definitely that the deal was on. Alcan has agreed to pay British Columbia about two hundred and fifty thousand dollars a year for water-power rights and rental for land flooded, in addition to all regular land, income and corporation taxes.

At that time there wasn't a road, rail line, airport or seaport in the whole area. Now cat-jockeys sitting at the controls of their smoke-spurting bulldozers for sometimes eighteen and twenty hours a day (overtime pay gives them one hundred and thirty dollars a week) are uprooting hundred-foot trees like toothpicks and pushing roads through at a mile a day. Dynamite crews are chewing out mountain tunnels at one hundred feet per day, the heavy yellow smoke of their blasting pouring like pea soup out of the tunnel mouths and down the cliff faces to the valleys below. At Kemano, the powerhouse site, cats are leveling trees one day, portable sawmills are sawing them into lumber the next, and carpenters are slapping it into new camp buildings on the third.

Helicopters buzzing around like dragon flies are the main transportation for men and supplies. Some of the camps can be reached no other way. Survey crews have been dropped off where there was nothing but a ledge six feet wide on which a helicopter could land. For one survey camp there wasn't even a pimple on the mountainside big enough to accommodate a helicopter. A mountain-climbing crew went ahead and built a shelf of four-inch poles. When the 'copter sat down on it its tail protruded out over an abyss hundreds of feet deep.

A New Trail Is Blazed

Alcan expects to have a first stage completed and be producing aluminum by 1954. The entire project may not be finished until 1960. Out of it all B. C. will get two new seaports (Kemano and Kitimat), a new city (Kitimat), a hydro-electric output double its present capacity, and the opening up of an isolated section with such tremendous power potentialities that it could become a leading industrial area.

Only the aluminum industry with its vast power requirements and its need to concentrate an integrated power, smelting and seaport development in one area has the capacity to tackle an undertaking of this magnitude in one stroke. No other industry has production units large enough to warrant development of a million-horsepower hydro project in a frontier no-man's-land where even the towns must be carved out of forest and workers moved in by the thousand before production can begin. In the normal way development of such a remote area would take decades of slow expansion and nibbling at the edges of smaller industries. Aluminum does it all at once, then the trail is blazed for other industries to follow.

And what about aluminum's historic frontier retreat? Alcan has no delusions now about keeping its power to itself. Already, with the foundations of Kitimat barely laid, other industries are eying the cheap power of Kemano's yet unbuilt underground powerhouse. Powell River Pulp and Paper is investigating the possibility of establishing a pulp-and-newsprint mill there. Alcan's Vancouver office has received numerous enquiries from smaller industries. Says vice-president DuBose: "It wouldn't surprise me if someday British Columbia will be so filled with people and its power requirements so great the aluminum industry will not be able to continue there either." ★

OVERCHARGING is the No. 1 battery killer. Overcharging strikes directly at the grids—the lead-alloy framework which holds in place the current-producing active material. Overcharging corrodes the grids—fractures them—destroys their ability to retain active material—destroys their utility as current conductors.

But now you can have the protection of METALEX, a new grid metal discovered by Willard metallurgists and proved in thousands of cars since its introduction over a year ago. continues to complain it may give him pause to learn that men wore perfume long before women did. Alexander the Great of Macedonia, the sissy, soaked his tunics in it and had perfume sprinkled on his floors. Napoleon sloshed cologne over his neck and shoulders.

Perfume, taken from the Latin per fumum ("through smoke"), was first used in Arabia as an incense. It became one of the chief articles of commerce between Persia and Egypt and the Bible contains many mentions of it. Perfume was even mixed with mortar to build a mosque in Jerusalem and the building gives out a scent on hot days.

At what stage of history women began using perfume is not clear but Queen Elizabeth of Hungary, who ruled during the fourteenth century, is credited with discovering alcoholic perfumes and by their use—so the legend goes—remained so ravishing the King of Poland wanted to marry her when she was seventy-two. This achievement would be impossible to parallel today because there is no longer a King of Poland. In the time of Josephine Bonaparte perfume vendors were the most exotic creatures in the land, wandering the cities and towns in gorgeous carriages and addressing the populace in fanciful language. When they became obnoxious their heads were removed. This brings us to modern perfume advertising.

The effect of modern perfume advertising is to persuade women that perfume is little removed from love. The ad for Tabu, made by Dana Perfumes, picturing a young woman pianist being bent backward in a passionate embrace by a man who brandishes a violin and apparently could stand the pressure no longer, is now famous. This perfume was known as "the forbidden fragrance" and women were requested not to wear it if they couldn't meet its challenge —presumably a galaxy of amorous violinists.

Names of perfumes and kindred cosmetics go along with the gag. Among those recently put on the market are Adults Only, Outrageous, Sorcery, Hysterical, Deceit and Sinister. There is also Black Blaze, Blacknite, Black Jade, Black Rose, Black Ruby, Black Satin, Black-Out, Black Sunlight and, of course, Black Velvet. Nuclear fission has brought us Atom, Atom Bomb, Atomic, Atomicage and Atomik.

The idea that perfume will cause the male to quiver dates back into antiquity. In England in the seventeenth century a woman who used perfume while landing a husband was presumed to have used witchcraft and her marriage was dissolved by burning her at the stake. Anthropologists believe this has something to do with the female of the species, in the animal world, having a distinctive odor. In modern civilization the ultimate refinement is to have no odor at all, and perfume possibly fills the gap left by soap.

The current trend in perfume advertising is more subtle: "Someone lovely has just passed by! That's what they'll say about you when you wear. . . " reads one blurb; "So rare . . . so unprecedented, a new language would have to be created to describe the beauty of its fragrance," gurgles another, struggling along with the existing language.

There is little likelihood that pouring a jigger of perfume over a woman's head will cause the men in her vicinity to become brutes, nor is it probable that the use of perfume will cause her to resemble Ava Gardner. Women know this and so do the manufacturers, and the advertising largely takes the form of a game of make-believe. Perfume is intended as an accessory, like gloves, which a woman puts on to complete an ensemble. Once a woman gets into the habit of wearing perfume it is said she will feel undressed without it.

Men who mix perfumes are called noses and they work either for a perfume house or for a firm supplying essential oils to perfume houses. One big essential-oil supplier has eight perfumers working all the time on perfume mixtures. Their art is considered equal to that of a symphony composer and their dreamy sniffing is quite apart from the commercial maelstrom just below.

How Does Silver Smell?

Most perfumes contain fifty or sixty ingredients, but they can contain up to three hundred—the perfumer has a battery of two thousand from which to choose. While he experiments with oils and chemicals suspended in alcohol he continually tests the product by taking a bit on a piece of blotting paper wherever he goes. He smells it by the seashore and on a moonlight night; he sniffs to make certain it is unaffected by a warm room or a chilly rain. At a theatre intermission he is the man in the foyer sniffing a blotter and shaking his head disconsolately.

Developing a sense of smell requires the same concentration and practice that a blind man gives to developing his sense of hearing. Perfumers start off by smelling everything they see, working up through being able to identify each piece of furniture in the room to being able to distinguish between chemical compounds that are first cousins. The president of a big perfume house industriously developed his sense of smell this way and still can recall the horrified expression on the face of his dinner hostess when he absent-mindedly picked up the silver and sniffed it. She was mollified when he was able to tell her what brand of soap the silver was washed with.

Queen Elizabeth of England had her own perfume still and used to mix her own fragrances. As recently as fifty years ago women could buy perfume ingredients at a drugstore and prepare their own. A sample recipe for lilac perfume, published in 1877, reads: Extract of tuberose, extract of cassie, extract of orange flower, tincture of orris, tincture of civet and rose water. Lilac isn't included in the ingredients because its perfume fades.

To illustrate how complicated the perfumer's art has become the following is an elementary formula for lilac perfume, published in 1947: Phenylacetaldehyde, amylcinnamaldehyde, hydroxycitronellal, anidaldehyde, heliotropin, Peru balsam, terpineol, linalool, phenylethyl alcohol, anisyl alcohol, dimethyebenzylcarbinol, eugenol, cinnamyl alcohol, benzyl acetate, phenylethyl acetate, phenylacetaldehydedimethylacetal, methylquinoline, skatole, jasmin absolute. God bless you. ★

backwoods settlements marriage is often merely a matter of tacit agreement. Sometimes a parish priest, if he hears of it, will do his best to see that the situation is eventually "regularized." But this may be a matter of months or even years. The fait accompli of a child born out of wedlock causes scarcely the lift of an eyebrow.

Among these people the customs and superstitions of their forefathers die hard. The Canadien backwoodsmen and half-breed squatters still rock their children to sleep with tales of the loup-garou, the werewolf of the northwoods, and threaten them, if disobedient or quarrelsome, with a visit from the Windigo, the old witch of the woods who assumes human form and seeks the blood of her victims when the moon is full. And among the shanty-Irish the old men still spin blood-curdling tales of will-o-the-wisps and corpse candles, of bog ghosts and banshees.

Born almost with rifle in hand it is not surprising that some of these wilderness people attempt to settle differences by the most direct means within reach. For many years near Gracefield, a riverside village fifty miles north of Ottawa, two brothers used to set aside part of the Sabbath for the attempted settlement of an old boundary dispute. After returning from church each Sunday they would oil up their guns and blaze away at each other across the fields. Legend is that eventually they both gave up, and died comfortably in their beds. Just last spring, back in Pontiac County, a discarded suitor took a couple of pot shots at the former object of his affections and the man of her choice —on their wedding day! He, too, came wide of his mark.

Hermits and faith healers bob up in almost every village. It is commonplace to come across some old shack in the woods occupied by a long-haired, taciturn squatter who somehow manages to live on what he can beg or borrow and who just wants to be left to himself.

Because there has always been a shortage of doctors in the bush every old crone has her particular panacea of herbs and charms guaranteed to cure everything from croup to summer complaint. The faith healers, who practice their trade by the laying on of hands, the use of "holy" oil and prayers and incantations of their own devising sometimes attract quite a following. One of them is Willie McCaffrey, of Farrelton, thirty miles north of the capital, who is in his eightieth year and whose backyard is filled every Sunday with the cars of people who have come from all over the district to seek his assistance. McCaffrey, whose mother was one of the best-known midwives in the district, and who himself once practiced as a butcher and amateur cattle doctor, has been hauled into court on a number of occasions by the Quebec Medical Association. But many people have a good deal of faith in the efficacy of his treatments and he appears to have the tacit blessing of the parish priest who has appeared in court on his behalf and testified as to his good intentions.

Few people know the hill folk better than the country doctors who serve them. Typical of these is Dr. Harold Geggie, of Wakefield, who after forty years' service is soon to see his greatest dream come true: the establishment of a small hospital in Wakefield, a tiny village which straggles along the railway tracks at the edge of the river about twenty-five miles from the capital. It will be staffed by two of his three physician sons. Every week, winter and summer, Dr. Geggie makes a fifty-mile trip through his district. His son, Hans, makes a similar round of calls in an opposite direction.

The people of the valley set great store by their doctors who often as not become part of the local legend. For instance, there was old Dr. Jim Pritchard, of Alcove, a few miles north of Wakefield, a man of Falstaffian proportions. Old-timers will still point proudly to their front gates and declare with a reminiscent chuckle: "Old Doc Pritchard couldn't ever get through that gate. He had to come around by the cattle-gate."

In this setting the summer vacationers and sportsmen provide a lively contrast. The heart of the big-game country centres about the town of Maniwaki. From this point the hunters strike into the primeval bush. It is estimated that about four hundred moose alone are taken out of the great Mont-Laurier-Senneterre game reserve every fall.

During the height of the tourist season the streets of Maniwaki are jammed with American and Canadian cars. Contrasting strangely with the birch-bark canoes of the trappers and guides are the colorful assortment of amphibian aircraft which drop down for anchorage on the little lake just outside the town.

Here you will find such widely divergent characters as Doug Pickering, veteran bush pilot and operations manager for Laurentian Air Services; Edward Link, builder of the Link trainer, who has probably just flown in in his own plane from his home in Binghamton, N.Y.; his sister, Marilyn, one of the few women in the district who boast a pilot's license; Willie Commando, Algonquin guide par excellence; and Don McFaul, provincial game warden whose territory consists of a thousand square miles of virgin bush.

The most picturesque feature of Maniwaki are the Algonquin Indians from the nearby one-hundred-and-fifty-square - mile reservation established almost a century ago. Many of the men make all the way from ten dollars to twenty dollars a day guiding, while the squaws come into town every day or so to hawk their beaded moccasins, grass baskets and other oddments from every street corner.

Stomping to the Fiddlers

Occasionally roving bands of Tête-de-boule Indians, believed to be the lineal descendants of Iroquois war parties which once swept down the Ottawa and decimated the peaceful Algonquin tribes, visit Maniwaki from their trapping and hunting grounds far to the north. They also offer their wares to the tourists, but are studiously cold-shouldered by the Algonquins. The old fires of hate and resentment still smolder.

When the last of the tourists have departed the valley settles down to its regular winter routine. Then it can be seen at its best. Now it is that the young men from the farms and the villages leave for the bush. There is a round of parties and dances to see them on their way. The old folks join in the fine old Canadien songs, A La Claire Fontaine, En Roulant ma Boule, Sur le Pont d'Avignon. The young men try to outdo each other with exhibitions of jigging, and far into the morning the squeaking of fiddles and the stomping of feet drift off into the darkness as everyone joins in the excitement of the square dance.

Then it becomes in fact the country of William Henry Drummond — the country of the Habitant and Leetle Bateese, of Johnnie Courteau and the Curé of Calumette. And if a good Scot or Irishman happens to show up the fiddler will oblige personally with a good Scotch reel or an Irish jig.

The commercial life of the valley has always centred about its logging industry which really began around 1800 when Philemon Wright, later to become known as King of the Gatineau, began working timber limits in the Maniwaki area. Last year five million pulpwood logs and a million logs of pine were floated down the Gatineau.

What? They Got Sheets?

Old-time loggers grunt disparagingly about the modern river driver. In the old days a dollar a day was good pay along the river and the old-time camp caboose was a shack with an open fire in the centre of a pile of sand shored up with logs. The men slept in double- and triple-decker muzzle-loading bunks, ate salt pork and beans and whatever fish and game they could pick up, and went into camp for the winter and stayed there until the spring dégâcle.

Today the men get an average of seven dollars a day, the company gives them real iron beds, mattresses, sheets and pillowcases. They get all the fresh meat they can eat, all the pies and cakes and bacon and sausages they can handle. Still the life of a logger is no job for a weakling. It takes men with broad shoulders and bulging biceps, clear eyes and the agility of a cat.

If you want to see the Gatineau logger at his roughest and toughest then you must pay a visit to Maniwaki during the Christmas and New Year's season. When about a thousand bush-whacker lumbermen hit town, their jeans bulging with folding money, local authorities send out a rush call for additional provincial police officers. Seldom, however, does the presence of these reinforcements dampen the spirits of the celebrating shantymen.

They will start a fight at the drop of a hat, whether the argument concerns the good name of their intended, their prowess as bushmen or some fancied insult or challenge implicit in another logger's sneering glance. They are loudest and rowdiest when they've been freely indulging in whisky blanc which is virtually pure alcohol, or when they've been drinking cheap red wine well fortified with alcool.

Conductor George Barker, of Ottawa, who has worked the freights and passenger trains on the one-track line of the CPR which makes no fewer than thirty-eight scheduled stops between Ottawa and Maniwaki and does the eighty-mile trip in about three and a half hours, has been handling boisterous rivermen for the past forty years. Many a time he has had to stop the train while the crew took time off to subdue a particularly rambunctious gang of loggers.

"Things used to get broken up," he will tell you. "Why, only three or four years ago things got so bad for a while we had to put on our own railway police. After a while, when the boys found out that all the tough scrappers didn't come from along the river, they quieted down."

They Talk About Lannigan

But the Gatineau bullyboy can be as docile as a lamb when he chooses, and when he's feeling at peace with the world he usually wants to sing. For some years now he has been forsaking the old chansons in favor of mountain music and western cowboy songs. Thus on the train it is not unusual to come across a little group of rivermen gathered about a dreamy-eyed guitar-player, drooling honeyed words of Rocking Alone. What gives added piquancy to the performance is that although many of the singers don't speak English they have learned the English words of the songs. To listen to them getting around the words of On Top of Old Smoky, or She Wore a Yellow Ribbon, their rendition heavily accented with rich patois, is an experience not quickly to be forgotten.

Unlike the Ottawa, the Gatineau River boasts no outstanding legendary figure of the stature of the famous Joe Mofero, from Montreal, who was the bully of the Ottawa. But they still talk about the prowess of men like the Lannigan brothers of Bouchette who were remarkable for their feats of strength twenty or thirty years ago.

Jack Lannigan, who died only a few years back, was famous for having wrestled a black bear and strangled it to death with his bare hands. Another time Lannigan disarmed a dangerous Indian named Wabi who had served time for killing a man with an axe and who had run amuck in a lumber camp. With a load of liquor under his belt Wabi strode about the bunkhouse brandishing his axe and warning the men that it was again thirsting for blood.

Lannigan, who liked his sleep, finally jumped from his bunk, wrenched the weapon from the Indian's hand, broke the hickory handle over his knees and then advised the suddenly sobered Indian to get back to bed. This mild and fatherly suggestion Wabi very sensibly accepted and another legend was born among the rolling hills of the Gatineau. ★

there three weeks before meeting their hosts, who were in Banff. The Graham house is one of the biggest in town and it was another two days after he returned that Graham first ran into his guests.

On another occasion the Grahams noticed a sailor was having breakfast with them. Mrs. Graham dimly remembered he'd been a house guest during the war when several enlisted men had stayed with them. "How did you get in?" she asked cheerfully. "Oh," said the sailor, "I still have my key."

Most worthy causes such as the Cancer Fund, Red Cross and Community Chest benefit from Graham parties. The largest beneficiary is the Vancouver Symphony Society in which Mrs. Graham, who studied piano in her youth, takes a lively interest. There are about six parties a year for the symphony at the Grahams. One garden party raised sixteen thousand dollars for the organization. At Christmas there is a special party for orchestra members and their wives and children. Graham dresses as Santa Claus and hands out presents around the tree. Similarly, the Grahams don't neglect Community Chest canvassers but hold special parties for them. "It keeps up morale," says Mrs. Graham.

The Grahams loan their home every year to the Vancouver Art Gallery to boost the sale of Canadian paintings. For days the staff moves all the furniture from hall, living and dining rooms and takes down all the pictures. People tend to buy more paintings when they see them hanging on the Grahams' forest-green walls than they do in the more austere gallery building.

A Splash For Whaletown

The Grahams have had as many as six parties a week and two parties a day. One summer afternoon they entertained six hundred yachtsmen in town for the Pacific Coast northwest regatta. The same evening they were hosts to three hundred and fifty musicians, horse owners and newspapermen laying plans for Symphony Day At The Races. As the yachtsmen left the new guests arrived to find Mrs. Graham herself in a handsome dirndl skirt energetically sweeping the refuse from the recreation room.

The Grahams' circle of acquaintances is wide and catholic. They limit themselves to no social set and boast that they make new friends at every party. At the symphony garden party to raise funds two prominent Vancouver bookmakers agreed to run the gambling devices. Mrs. Graham, who never forgets a face, still continues to greet them when she sees them about town. To their embarrassment the most recent greeting took place in a parking lot when the duo were being questioned by police.

Recently the Grahams opened their house to the wives of Korean Brigade soldiers who wanted a place to get together. The women suggested a box lunch but Mrs. Graham turned down the idea and supplied everything. "Just forget your worries and have a good time," she told them. On another occasion they gave a splash party for a group of children from Whaletown, B.C., on their first visit to a big city. The children were unaccustomed to such hospitality and when a maid came around with a tray of ice-cream bars one six-year-old promptly took one and handed her a dime.

People sometimes troop through the Graham home at the rate of a thousand a week and the Grahams can't be expected to know them all. At one money-raising party, to which the public bought tickets, two inebriated guests arrived and introduced themselves like long - lost acquaintances. "We're friends of George and Mabel," they bubbled. George and Mabel, the Grahams finally realized, were two of the servants.

Nor do all the guests know the Grahams. One man arrived at a party and shook hands earnestly with a dignified man in black coat and striped trousers who met him at the door. It was Levitt, the butler. "The party is downstairs, sir," he said in his icy English accent.

Another time Graham spotted a little man furtively hovering on the edge of the crowd, a brown paper parcel under one arm. "Is he in your gang?" said Graham, turning to a newspaperman. He wasn't. He turned out later to be the caterer who had arrived late, bewildered and lost.

The Grahams can't help overhearing some of the whispered remarks made by the people who crowd their home. They aren't always complimentary. "Imagine having six rugs in the sunroom!" one guest said in a stage whisper. A visiting architect referred to the place as "the worst abortion I've ever seen." Actually the big rambling home is a fairly happy mating of English Tudor and Pacific Coast contemporary. The Grahams couldn't care less what people say about it. "It's lovely and we enjoy it," says Mrs. G.

They bought the original Tudor home for thirty-five thousand dollars in 1946 because they were tired of living in a rented home without a view. They originally came to Vancouver in 1940 from Montreal after their marriage (both were married once before and both had children of their own). In 1940 they planned to build a hundred-and - fifty - thousand - dollar home with seventeen bedrooms and ten bathrooms on Marine Drive overlooking the Fraser River. The war, and some unfavorable remarks in the House of Commons by Angus MacInnis, CCF member for Vancouver East, put a stop to that. "We just crawled right into our shells," says Graham candidly.

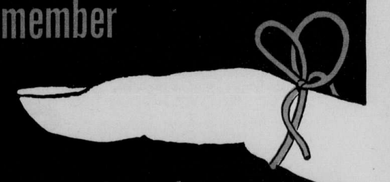

After the war he planned to spend perhaps a hundred thousand dollars on an addition to the Tudor home, which commands an unparalleled view of the Fraser delta, Strait of Georgia and North Shore mountains. Before it was over it had cost him close to half a million dollars. "Pretty soon we just got numbed by the expense," says Graham, "compared to me that fellow Blandings got off easy."

The house was transformed into a three - winged structure with twelve bedrooms, sunroom, drawing room, living room, playroom, dining room, breakfast room, butler's pantry, kitchen and staff dining room. On the lower floor there's a recreation room, men's room and women's powder room with signs - of - the - zodiac wallpaper, swimming pool and dressing rooms, bar and barbecue.

"I don't like big houses as such but there isn't a room that isn't used," Graham points out. "It's the last act of insanity for a man to splurge on a big house. He usually does and goes broke. Why, I've overheard people in my own house wondering how long I'll last."

The lower floor of the house has a hotel - like aspect with its serving kitchen, its paneled dressing rooms with the signs, HEALTH REGULATIONS DEMAND THAT EVERYONE USE SHOWERS BEFORE ENTERING POOL, its life preservers flanking the long pool, and its racks of bathing trunks and drawers of towels. The Grahams have equipment to feed and entertain six hundred guests. There are six hundred plates, six hundred cups, six hundred pieces of cutlery and so on. Breakage is high and crockery is ordered by the gross.

Next to the swimming pool and above it, just off the sunroom, are two huge solariums under the management of C. H. Lutley, estate manager and his staff of four gardeners. The solariums are hot with tropical plants —azaleas, gardenias, bird-of-paradise, hibiscus and avocado—from Mexico, Brazil, Hawaii and the West Indies. They are ripped up and replaced five times a year to provide variety and constant bloom. A stream runs through a rockery in the lower solarium, which costs between two and three thousand dollars a year to maintain. The light is filtered in through fifteen thousand dollars' worth of pink plastic glass which exactly matches the shocking-pink stucco of the house.

Graham likes to show visitors through the solarium. "People enjoy this y'know," he'll say with a wave of his hand. "They have a lot of fun wandering through here. And if it's here, why not use it?"

The eight-foot-deep swimming pool, which costs him six thousand dollars a year to heat, has plenty of use. Every Monday five hundred children from neighboring University Hill school splash about in it. The UBC swimming team trains there. Guests at Graham parties are invited to swim and people are always phoning up to ask for the use of it. One UBC student, who hurt his back and must swim regularly as a therapy, uses it nightly. Graham himself starts each morning with a plunge.

The exterior of the Graham home matches the interior. Golden and silver Chinese pheasants, budgies, lovebirds and canaries flit about in aviaries. Fish swim in a large pool at the front door. There are eight thousand tulips planted on the point of land overlooking the sea. There are beds of flowers each with a thousand plants in it. When Graham bought the property it was threatening to erode into the sea. Thirty-five men worked for several months timbering it up.

Once a month a professional ratter visits the grounds with a .22 rifle to pop off rodents who might molest the birds. Nightly a uniformed commissionaire makes his rounds to fend off burglars. He was hired after the Graham home had been robbed three times. The burglars had no trouble getting in. "We have more doors than we can count and we never knew which were locked," Ronald Graham explains. He and his wife are proud that nothing has gone missing during any of the big public parties.

So Johnny Rolls Seven Naturals

The Grahams are accomplished hosts. Both of them stay to the end of every party. Sometimes when Ronald Graham gets tired he goes upstairs to his room, puts some classical records on the player and with his little dachshund Pepper at his feet, has his back massaged. Thus freshened he returns to the festivities below. Mrs. Graham, who likes to eat yoghurt and other health foods, spends a good deal of time in a steam bath and on the massage table and lying flat on the hard plank recommended by Gayelord Hauser for looking younger and living longer. She and her husband often seem to be the freshest-looking people at a party.

In the receiving line the Grahams seldom stumble on a name and seldom forget a face. Graham's low chuckle and his wife's hearty infectious laugh rise over the buzz of conversation. Mrs. Graham looks every visitor straight in the eye. "When she greets you, you feel she's giving the party just for you," an old acquaintance says. "And when she talks to you you feel that you're the only person in the room that counts."

At sixty-seven, Ronald Graham is lighter on his feet than most twenty-year-olds and women consider him one of the best dancers in town.

Although most parties end at a reasonable hour (Graham clears his home simply by closing the bar) some are exacting enough to test the endurance of any host. A recent party for newspapermen went on until 4 a.m. and at one point the waters of the pool were graced by the presence of two fully clothed reporters. Around midnight Mrs. Graham found a gang rolling dice in one of the upstairs bedrooms. They persuaded her to stay and learn the game and in a clinging green satin gown she got down on her knees to oblige. Some four hours later she had paid out fifty dollars in IOUs. Her stepson Johnny redeemed them by rolling seven straight naturals.

Her clothes are as lively as her personality. She likes vivid colors and has a fondness for gay slacks, Mexican huarachos, flowered gypsylike skirts, and Hawaiian prints. Because her weight varies as much as thirty pounds she has two of everything in her wardrobe—for thin and fat days. Like most women she loves a good bargain. She gets her shoes at Raff's, a little store in Seattle where you can get twenty-five-dollar shoes for as little as five dollars. She likes to haunt auction sales in an old trench coat and slouch hat.

Both she and her husband know the value of money and both like to spend it because in the beginning neither of them had much. Mrs. Graham's father was the first man to sell Fuller Brushes in Canada. Ronald Graham's father was a none-too-successful banker.

Young Ronnie started out as a law clerk in his native Burlington, Ont., making a dollar fifty a week, one dollar of which went for carfare. A year later he became a bank clerk for three dollars a week. He was twelve years in the bank and rose to a key position in Toronto at fifteen hundred dollars a year. He decided there was no future in banking for him. "I mean, you could never own the damn thing," he explains.

He went into the investment business and in two years, at thirty-one, was able to branch out on his own. He soon saw there wasn't much money in this either. "You'll never get rich watching the ticker tape," he says. He sold his seat on the stock exchange and decided to make one or two good investments.

Graham has always believed in basic commodities such as milk, sugar and newsprint — three investments which have helped make him wealthy. With a partner, Percy Gardiner, he raised enough money to buy fifty-one percent of the Toronto City Dairy Co. When they finally sold out they had realized a profit of more than a million dollars.

He later decided to put his money into sugar, a commodity virtually unaffected by the depression. He bought heavily into the Atlantic Sugar Company (later Acadia-Atlantic) along with his partner Gardiner. Although the company had been under a cloud because of a large deficit, Graham realized it was a sound proposition. He got the shares cheaply and in the end he and Gardiner owned it outright. It earned them an average of a million dollars a year throughout the gloomy thirties. Last year, when Graham sold his interest, it earned a million and a quarter.

He has a one-tenth interest in the Calgary Albertan and two Alberta radio stations, a one-quarter interest in the Victoria Times and the Colonist and a stake in the Calvan Oil Co., promoted by young Max Bell of Calgary. Recently he realized a handsome profit, reckoned at close to a million, by selling his shares of Abitibi Pulp and Paper. Another interest is Canadian Collieries, the coal-mining firm founded by Vancouver Island's castle-building Dunsmuir family.

Though technically retired, Graham, rose in buttonhole, gets to his office each day around 11 a.m. and usually stays until 5 p.m. He's seldom too busy to take time off for eighteen holes of golf. His race horse Mafosta, the pride of his stables (now at stud in California), earned him a hundred and ninety thousand dollars. Pictures and effigies of Mafosta are prominent in his office and his home. His stables cost him a hundred thousand dollars a year.

The Grahams follow the races to California each year but at Christmas time they spend six weeks at Banff with their children. A widower, Graham had nine children of his own when he married Helen Bailey, who had four by a previous marriage (one was later killed in an accident). They have one child by their marriage, young David, nine. Many of the Graham and Bailey children are married now and have homes of their own and today there are thirteen grandchildren.

Originally the Grahams planned their home at Banff as a hideaway for just the two of them. It was to cost eight thousand dollars. "Then," Mrs. Graham says, "it seemed unfair not to include the children." The house seemed to grow until only the size of the lot stopped it. It cost well over fifty thousand dollars. "It's just a higgledy-piggledy sort of place," Mrs. Graham says. "We had no architect. We tore down two shacks, put on a roof, dug a basement and didn't care where the windows landed."

The house can sleep twenty-five people. "We went giddy with color," she says. Most of the rooms have a Chinese motif. One bedroom is done in gold, with the mirror "silvered" in gold, drapes in dull gold, bed of golden oak with a gold bedspread and a gold bureau. The dining room has a jet-black sideboard, cherry - red chairs, white tables and black-and-white walls and ceiling. There's a fireplace and coffee table of black Italian marble, a mirror twelve feet high by twelve feet long and a bar done in Chinese vivid orange lacquer. "Freshest house you ever sat in," says Ronald Graham.

Like their Vancouver home, the Banff house is often in use when the owners are away. Once a doctor friend of Graham's went to a medical convention in Banff and couldn't get a hotel room. Graham heard about it and offered him the key to the house. The doctor brought along another doctor who also couldn't get a room and he brought another and so on until the party grew to sixteen.

This didn't faze Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Graham in the least. They helped out by sending along their cook, butler and maid. Then they got on with the business of planning more parties in Vancouver. ★ storekeeper, cutting a five-pound chunk of aromatic goat cheese.

"Tonio?" said Pasquale sadly. "Ah, he is dead. I do not know the cause. Old age, perhaps. When I awoke he was dead and the look on his face was not of pain."

The storekeeper looked interested and sympathetic. "A sad piece of news. And you are all alone. Can you watch the flock by yourself?"

"I have my two dogs."

The storekeeper nodded and smiled approvingly. "I will admit to you, those are two fine dogs."

And, as simply as that, Pasquale, with no protest from anybody, inherited his place as the owner of the sheep. The priest climbed up, gasping in the thin cold air, and performed the proper rituals over the dead shepherd, then gladly climbed down again to where a man could breathe easily.

In short, that was the history of Pasquale.

Pasquale was sitting, now, on his favorite patch of moss on a cold stone, located near the edge of the cliff that fell down a thousand feet to the slope. There was a wonderful view; he could see almost a hundred miles to a purplish haze on the horizon, but today he did not enjoy it.

Pasquale was thinking, and to think was not an easy thing. There was so little reason for thinking in his way of life. Painfully he contracted his brows into a golden line of hair and his ice-blue eyes reflected his bewilderment as he remembered. He had run out of salt and gone down to the town with a sheep. Instead of smiling at him and calling out in friendly voices, the people had walked by unseeingly, hurriedly, their eyes on the ground. The storekeeper had hastily taken the sheep into the back room.

"Do not talk of this," said the storekeeper nervously. "And take enough with you in cheese and salt and breadsticks to last as long as possible."

Pasquale stared at him. "Why? I come only every two months, as it is."

The storekeeper started to answer, looked over his shoulder out the window, and paled. He pushed Pasquale. "Go," he said sharply. "Go, at once." He pushed Pasquale, piling his bundles of food in his arms.

Pasquale had gone outside slowly. There was a man outside, getting off a horse. Pasquale stared with interest. The man had a jovial fat face and wore a military-looking suit with high polished boots to his knees. The man walked busily to a corner, without seeing Pasquale, then turned it and disappeared.

Pasquale sat on the cliff, remembering that time. That was five months ago. His salt and breadsticks needed replenishing. Slowly he got up, selected another sheep, called a wordless message to his barking dogs, and proceeded down the long, difficult trail.

When he got to town he noticed uneasily that there were no townspeople in the streets. There were placards posted up on posts dug into the ground, but Pasquale could not read. If he could, he would have known it was forbidden to be on the streets before and after certain hours.

Puzzled, he wandered over to the general store and looking through the shutters saw, instead of his old friend the storekeeper, another man behind the counter. This man wore a uniform.

Pasquale hesitated. Then he turned and trudged onward, thinking, as he led his sheep. The thoughts came slowly. What had happened to his friend? Perhaps he . . . Then Pasquale stopped in astonishment. He had found his friend, the storekeeper.

Pasquale looked up at him as he slowly swung in the morning breeze, his neck twisted at an odd angle where the rope met itself in a knot. He had been hung. In public.

Pasquale was shocked. It can be truthfully said, he was so shocked by this thing, completely beyond his experience, that he did not think much about it. His simple mind simply didn't function and automatic reflexes took over.

He dropped the line holding the sheep and climbed the tree to cut down the dead man. Then he climbed down and said dully, "A man should be buried decently." Since he had no shovel Pasquale made a tomb of stones on the hard ground. Then he said, "Good-by, my good friend. I shall no longer come to this town. I shall not trade with the one who has taken your place."

Pasquale felt very sad and a bit frightened as he went, for the first time in his life, farther on down the slope for a long way, for half a day of walking, until the sheep lay down in bleating protest and Pasquale carried it slung around his neck, looking for a new town in which to trade.

After a while he came to another odd scene. There were ten wooden homes and nine of them were charred wrecks, still smoldering. And from nearby trees hung two more bodies, swinging, with eyes staring horribly and tongues out.

Pasquale stared for a long time. Then he knocked patiently on the door of the last home. From the inside came a shriek of fear. Pasquale opened the door and stepped inside. A man crouched protectingly over a woman and child and glared at Pasquale in fright. Such terrible fright that Pasquale, for the first time, began to be a little afraid.

He could not stand their fear and sought a way to ease it. As they stared at this strange figure, this huge man with ice-blue eyes and golden beard with a sheep slung around his neck, he said to them, "Do not be afraid. There is nothing to fear. Here. Take this sheep."

Pasquale slung the sheep from around his neck, put it on the ground before them. He was not used to scenes of terror. His life was the quiet of a sloping mountainside and sheep feeding and clouds, fluffy white, floating dreamily. A terror and a sorrow grew within him as he stared dumbly at the crouching, stricken trio. He forced a smile, tried to find words, then, suddenly, turned and fled. Back to his plateau, back to his sheep.

And in this moment, as he stumbled, terror-stricken, away, a legend was born. It was mothered by need and fathered by blind anguish. The legend grew like the wind, invisible and whispered, blowing warmly and secretly. It was an odd thing.

WHEN Pasquale was gone the man in the house, whose name was Victor Arriba, stared in uncomprehending amazement at the sheep which was bleating mournfully.

"Who was that?" asked his wife Marie, in wonderment.

"I do not know," gaped Victor, staring through the door.

Their child, Rosita, whimpered. "Papa, was that Jesus?"

A light slowly dawned in Victor's haggard face. "No," he said. "Not Jesus. But surely one like him. A leader."

Marie put her hand on his arm. "The sheep," she said softly. "Food. Slaughter it and hide it, quickly. Before the secret police come back."

Feverishly they went to work, slaughtering the animal swiftly and skinning it. They buried the entrails and skin and cut up the meat. They broiled the fatty meat and ate hungrily. When they were through Victor put on his ragged coat.

"I shall prepare," he said weeping. "We must leave here. We will live in the city. It is safer where there are greater numbers." With a miserable bundle of belongings dragging in the road's dust the three of them made the long weary march to the city.

And all along the way, like a swollen growth seeding, they dropped spores that took root. To the man with the wagon who aided them part of the way Victor whispered, "I swear it, the door opened and a giant with a golden beard and hair, and eyes of blue fire, came in. Around his neck instead of a shawl he wore a sheep. He put it down and said in a voice like thunder, 'Be not afraid' and then he disappeared." To those who scoffed Victor fiercely showed the meat of the sheep which was wrapped in burlap.

To the innkeeper Victor gave, in return for lodging, a piece of the sheep's meat and when pressed as to where it came from, Victor hissed, ". . . a golden giant with a beard and eyes of blue flame and he said 'Fear not! I am with you. Watch for me.' " And indeed, as Victor Arriba searched his mind, that was what Pasquale had seemed to say.

And to all those who gave ear to the outpourings of Victor Arriba's passion and bitterness, he raved . . . "the golden giant. 'Fear not,' he said to me, his eyes blazing with anger at what they did to the town. 'We shall be revenged. I will come back and be your leader.' "

Again and again and again, spoken with a bitter need and longing, spoken with hope and prayer until over a stretch of a hundred miles the legend took root and flourished like a miracle.

The city boy Juan Orotoba listened ter it and hide it, quickly. Before the secret police come back."

Feverishly they went to work, slaughtering the animal swiftly and skinning it. They buried the entrails and skin and cut up the meat. They broiled the fatty meat and ate hungrily. When they were through Victor put on his ragged coat.

"I shall prepare," he said weeping. "We must leave here. We will live in the city. It is safer where there are greater numbers." With a miserable bundle of belongings dragging in the road's dust the three of them made the long weary march to the city.

And all along the way, like a swollen growth seeding, they dropped spores that took root. To the man with the wagon who aided them part of the way Victor whispered, "I swear it, the door opened and a giant with a golden beard and hair, and eyes of blue fire, came in. Around his neck instead of a shawl he wore a sheep. He put it down and said in a voice like thunder, 'Be not afraid' and then he disappeared." To those who scoffed Victor fiercely showed the meat of the sheep which was wrapped in burlap.

To the innkeeper Victor gave, in return for lodging, a piece of the sheep's meat and when pressed as to where it came from, Victor hissed, ". . . a golden giant with a beard and eyes of blue flame and he said 'Fear not! I am with you. Watch for me.' " And indeed, as Victor Arriba searched his mind, that was what Pasquale had seemed to say.

And to all those who gave ear to the outpourings of Victor Arriba's passion and bitterness, he raved . . . "the golden giant. 'Fear not,' he said to me, his eyes blazing with anger at what they did to the town. 'We shall be revenged. I will come back and be your leader.' "

Again and again and again, spoken with a bitter need and longing, spoken with hope and prayer until over a stretch of a hundred miles the legend took root and flourished like a miracle.

The city boy Juan Orotoba listened in on Victor's miracle. He crouched on the outskirts of the huddled group listening to Victor. He absorbed it as one absorbs food, for he was a mere child of twelve and he needed a hero and a purpose. His arms were like sticks from hunger and his eyes brooded in darkened hollows. In a miserable shanty to the south of the city where the railroad tracks ran past the city dump, he lived with his mother.

He listened with shining eyes, then ran to tell his mother. He found her lying in bed ill with spotted fever. She could hardly talk. "Mother," he wept. She moaned and tossed in delirium.

Then Juan remembered the delicacy shop in the heart of the city. Often he had peered into the window and seen the abundance of food in cans. Cans of milk and sausage and fish eggs.

Madly he ran back to the city. When they caught Juan he was climbing through the shattered glass of the shop, his arms full of milk for his mother.

In the cellar rooms where such things are done they asked, "For whom are you stealing?" There was a black market and the secret police grew wealthy out of it and they wanted no competition

Juan, thinking of his mother, said nothing. They beat him savagely and still he said nothing. Then they put an iron into the fire and heated it and Juan screamed with fright and said the first lie that came into his head. "The Golden Giant," he wailed. "He made me do it."

They tried to get Juan to tell where the golden giant was. Savagely they

Tom Gard's Note Book

The Gards rely almost entirely on native material for Christmas decorations, other than lights and fancy tree ornaments.

Every year the whole family has a cone-hunting spree in the country. Occasionally we draw the ire of some "country cousin" but we usually try to secure them in well-wooded areas that are little frequented. We journey forth again when it comes time to gather evergreen boughs for our wreaths and other decorative purposes.

Christmas Table Centre

The Christmas table centre we used last year is illustrated. What could be more typically Canadian than the pressed oak or maple leaves and the collection of cones? Some of the cones can be dipped in bright red and bright green paint to add color to the arrangement. This year we plan to include evergreens to replace the leaves. In case you are interested in making the candle stick holders, instructions are also given along with a couple of designs.

Cone Place Markers

To complete the slogan "let's make it an evergreen Christmas", place markers are made from cones. Gather cones from the Austrian pine, larch and Jack pine when they are dry. Leave them in a sunny window or on top of the furnace overnight. The warmth will open them. Three types of cone place markers that have been used are illustrated. The whole family has a share in making them. This adds to the interest and the anticipation for that day of days so quickly approaching. It is fun drawing on one's imagination to help make the cones look as realistic as possible. It is surprising how closely some do resemble different types of birds when they are carefully selected, placed and finished. All I hope is that you have as much fun in your house as we have in ours preparing for Christmas.

tortured him. Until, the pain too much to bear, his head lolling forward in dreadful stillness, Juan died, his lips sealed. Because he didn't know where the golden giant was. As he died he silently moaned a prayer to the golden giant to come and help him.

INDIRECTLY, Juan's prayer was answered. The legend grew. Fantastically it grew. Eight new spores were dropped into fertile soil. There were eight secret policemen present at the killing of Juan Orotobo.

Pedro Francesco, forty years old, was the brutal captain of the secret police. He walked out of the room cursing, directly to the apartment of his mistress. There he drank wildly.

"Golden giants," he raved, stamping about the room. "We took such pains. We killed every man who might organize resistance. Every man with a brain. Why is it," he screamed at her, "a perfect control cannot be set up? Always there is something, something."

His mistress had never seen him in such a state. She gave him more liquor and soothed him until he snored drunkenly. Then the mistress told her other lover about the golden giant, and a few girl friends, and the headwaiter at the expensive restaurant where people gathered, and the headwaiter gave the information to an American reporter who transmitted a story to the world. GOLDEN GIANT LEADS UNDERGROUND, it said. Whereupon the American reporter was booted out of the country.

All from one spore, one seed. The seven other men who had been present at the killing of Juan Orotobo told their friends and like a weed the story spread and flourished and grew. And to all of this talk was added the substance of deed.

Men hearing of this new leadership took small courage and performed small acts of opposition and defiance. On the walls they chalked, "Up the Golden Giant, Down Dictator Lichigon." They set upon the secret police at night and gave them swift beatings and the victims, to save face, told of huge organized bands led by a giant with a golden beard.

Wherever a robbery occurred, wherever there was a heroic act, wherever there was an accident such as a fire in the new government munitions dump, who else could it be but the golden giant? And Juan Orotobo became a shining symbol. The twelve-year-old boy who died rather than tell of the location of the golden giant. Everywhere, the people of least degree, the common people without brains to organize, took courage.

And Pasquale the shepherd, back on his moss-covered rock overlooking the vast stretch of one hundred miles to the horizon, thought, in his simple way, "A dreadful thing. People hung and houses burned down. I shall stay here until the thieves are caught by the police."

Meanwhile the Dictator Lichigon, a man with a paunch held in by a special corset, was holding a meeting with his Director of Propaganda, his Director of Internal Security, and his Chief of Military Guards. They were men with an unpleasant look on their faces and they looked even worse now with their Dictator angrily haranguing them.

"The American reporter you expelled," he snapped, "is broadcasting short wave to the people. He is doing more damage now than when he was here. I suggest you readmit him to the country." It was noted that the reporter would be readmitted.

"What is the status of the Golden Giant case?" asked Lichigon, his eyes icy-cold.

The Director of Internal Security sighed. "He is a very fine organizer, I must admit. We have not been able to locate his headquarters. We have put our spies into the local Golden Giant cells that have formed but they report they are not trusted. The others say the Golden Giant will come and that is all they say."

The Director of Propaganda, a heavy short man with a bald head, spoke up. He pointed to a map on the wall with tiny flags pinned to it. "The yellow flags mark groups that have formed. About seventy-five. Very few. The black flags mark incidents. Acts against the regime." Dictator Lichigon looked at the map and paled. There were hundreds of black flags. They were like the pennants of an army marching. There was one white flag.

"What is the white flag?"

"It marks the first reported act of resistance coinciding with reports of the Golden Giant," said the Director of Internal Security, significantly. "The records show it was the cutting down of a traitor we hung and his burial. Clearly an act of defiance."

Dictator Lichigon thought awhile. Then he said sharply, "We must liquidate this opposition. It is hampering the Plan. If we are to attack Bongonia we must have internal security." He nodded curtly at them that they could go. But the three of them sat in their chairs and shifted uneasily. Lichigon glared at them.

The Director of Propaganda coughed and said in a soft voice, "We have bad news. Our agents have reported Bongonia is prepared to send arms and men over the border to assist in any uprising by the people."

There was a dreadful silence. Dictator Lichigon sat as if he were carved of stone. "The Golden Giant," he said tightly. "Gentlemen, I advise you to catch the Golden Giant."

The eyes of the Chief of Police twitched. The hands of the other two clenched. But the faces of all three were calm. They looked at Lichigon for a long long moment. Then, without a word, they got up and walked out.

From then on, all the resources of the regime were thrown into the dragnet. Rewards were posted. The number of spies was doubled. Barbers did a great business, as every man in Robagonia with a beard, regardless of its color, had it shaved. All Robagonia became aware of the Giant with the Golden Beard, and the nation waited tensely for something to happen as oppression increased. And the number of yellow flags on the map of the Director of Propaganda increased tremendously.

The American reporter came back to Robagonia. He reported by cable to his newspaper, "Arms and men and organizers are trickling over the border. Some Golden Giant Clubs which have been raided by security police have had veritable arsenals hidden. The Golden Giant movement seems to be so carefully decentralized that it is almost impossible to smash by means of arresting any one group. It would be necessary, at this stage of the game, to arrest virtually the entire population. Battling the Golden Giant, Dictator Lichigon is discovering, is like fighting a ghost. He is reported everywhere simultaneously. He is extremely clever in his methods. He baffles the regime's spies by allowing his individual unit cells to create their own plans for governing local political subdivisions, and waiting for the grand uprising before even attempting national political co-ordination."

MEANWHILE, Pasquale was getting extremely disgusted with the monotonous diet of sheep meat.

"What good is food unless there is bread and salt?" he enquired of his dogs, grumbling. His dogs barked happily then dashed away to round up a scattering of the sheep.

Pasquale sat on his stone on the cliff and stared over the great distances. He remembered still the hanging of his friend the storekeeper and the burned-down houses and the frightened people in the last house. Slowly a dim thought formed and shaped itself. To Pasquale, who had lived virtually alone in hermit-like existence, the thought was a social revelation and as blinding as creative genius.

"I will go to the city even though it is far away and I have never been there," he said aloud and firmly. "I will ask for the police and I will tell them it is a shame they allow such thieves and murderers to go uncaught."

Pasquale was delighted with himself. He scratched his beard and nodded and chuckled. The thought of the city intrigued him. His old friend Tonio had told him of it. A most marvelous place. "Ho," he shouted to his dogs. "I go far. Watch the sheep."

Then he stopped and a thought struck him. Aghast he said, "When I buried the storekeeper I forgot to make him a cross."

Immediately he set to work. He cut down two young trees and trimmed them straight. He set the shorter tree crosswise over the longer one and bound it firmly with strong weeds and vines. He lifted it with difficulty.

"Uh," he said. "It is heavy. A fine cross for the grave of my friend." And with that he slowly went down the trail, waving good-by to his dogs.

THE American reporter was there and saw the whole thing, from beginning to end. He had gone there because of a tip from his favorite headwaiter at the important restaurant, that the mountain plateau was going to be examined by the soldiers as the most likely place for the Golden Giant to be hiding. The first incident against the regime, the cutting down of the storekeeper, had occurred there and the surrounding rough countryside was a natural place for a group to hide.

The American reporter saw the whole thing. It was the biggest scoop of his life. The soldiers were deployed and ready to move upward along the trail. It was early morning, just before dawn. The sun's bright ray lifted over the edge of the mountain. The young lieutenant lifted his sword for the signal to advance. He stopped, frozen into position, his mouth open wide, his eyes staring. And the people who had come to watch uttered a shout, amazed. All the soldiers stared, too. The American reporter stared with them. He wrote that it was the most startling moment of his life.

Framed in the brilliant rays of light, wearily trudging down with patient humble mien, was a man with a golden beard and hair. He carried an enormous cross. It was like a messenger from heaven, a descent from the Mount; it had the elements of awe inherent in it.

The lieutenant gulped. The soldiers broke and ran, shrieking with superstitious fright. The lieutenant turned and ran with them. As one man, the crowd kneeled.

Pasquale, seeing them, stopped. Hurriedly, wondering what they were praying for up there in the cold, he kneeled too, holding the cross upright.

"From there on in," wrote the American reporter to his paper, "the most amazing series of events took place. The people fell in behind him and followed him. He went to a grave and put the cross over it.

"Then I stepped over to him and said, 'I represent the American public. Do you care to make a statement?'

"He looked at me for a long moment as if debating whether I could be trusted. The crowd leaned forward, holding their breathing.

" 'I am going to the city,' he said in as sweet and simple a voice as I've ever heard. 'We must punish the thieves and murderers. I have decided . . .'

"At that moment a roar went up from the listening crowd. They hoisted the man with the golden beard on their shoulders and went wild.

"They carried him to the city in the automobile I was riding in. We went at the speed of five miles an hour and with each village we passed, more and more people fell in behind us. Word flashed ahead that the moment had come, and in each town men broke out hidden arms, and took over the city according to the local plan of that unit. There was some fighting but not as much as might have been expected.

"When we got to the city, as might have been expected, the army had mobilized against our coming. When they saw the tremendous crush of people ahead and behind us they held their fire. The crowd would have torn them to pieces.

"Then this man with the golden beard and eyes of cold blue asked for the police station. It was a daring move that broke the nerve of the regime. Calmly, moving with dignity and a complete lack of fear, the man with the golden beard walked into the dreaded headquarters of the secret police.

"He found the place empty. The blusterers and the bullies, the men who were tough when they were torturing twelve-year-old Juan Orotobo, they were gone.

"When he came out, the crowd had gone absolutely wild. Word had come that Dictator Lichigon and his cabinet had fallen out, were at each other's throats. Then the news that Lichigon had been shot.

"The back of the regime is broken. The country is still in a chaos, but is reforming rapidly. An election is being planned.

"And the finale of this amazing series of incidents is the most amazing of all.

"After two days of fighting had established the victory of the people's forces, with the man in the golden beard having nothing to do but listen to reports from runners sent by each city, he disappeared.

"When last seen he was in his room at the Madron Hotel where he had locked himself in to gain a little peace, having had no rest for seventy-two hours. When he didn't answer to knocks the door was broken down.

"On the floor was a mass of golden beard and hair. The man who had worn them was gone. His work was done. He wanted no glory or privileges. He went back to whatever humble life was his. They are searching for him but he seems to have vanished from the face of the earth.

"The dictatorship is gone and democracy rules Robagonia."

The American reporter sent off this dispatch to his newspaper, then he went down to his favorite bar to get a drink. He needed one badly.

"Scotch," he said wearily to the bartender. As he waited he felt the small scissors in his pocket. He took them out and grinned, remembering how Pasquale had looked when he had told him he'd have to cut off his beard.

"Dios," Pasquale had wailed. "Must I?"

The reporter said gently, "If you wish to remain with these people and forget your sheep . . ."

Pasquale put his hands to his head in bewilderment. "No, no. What is happening? They are all crazy with this talk of governments. I do not understand."

The reporter sighed, now, in the bar, as he put the scissors away. It was a lucky thing he'd gotten to Pasquale first, before the others, and seen the poor man's bewilderment and simple-mindedness. It had been very difficult, keeping Pasquale quiet, answering for him, until the rush of events took their natural forceful path. Pasquale had wept as the beard had been cut off.

"Here you are, sir," said the bartender. The American reporter grinned and lifted his glass. "To the people," he said. "When they need a leader they'll make one. Out of nothing, sometimes." ★

CANADIANECDOTE

HOW McMICKEN FOILED THE FENIANS

THE Hon. Gilbert McMicken was a marked man. He had come to Canada from Scotland in 1832 and had risen rapidly to become stipendiary magistrate for the whole of western Canada. In this role he earned the hatred of the Fenians, many of whom felt the weight of his frontier justice.

So when in the Seventies he traveled west with a whole portfolio of jobs, including those of Agent of Dominion Lands in Manitoba, Assistant-Receiver-General, Dominion Auditor and manager of the Dominion Government Savings Bank, he knew there was a price on his head. Also, his business made it necessary for him to carry a large sum of money.

McMicken had learned a trick or two in dealing with the Fenians. He bought a coffin, put his money in it, and dressed himself as chief mourner, even cropping his hair and mustache.

Very soon after he started out by boat from Windsor he saw a man he knew to be a member of a Fenian gang. They fell into conversation.

"How far are you going?" the man asked McMicken.

"Western Canada," he answered.

"What place?"

"Fort Garry."

The Fenian suddenly leaned forward and whispered: "Look, there's a man somewhere here named McMicken and he's getting off there too. He's carrying a mint of money. What do you say to joining us in cracking him off. We'll split."

"It's all right with me," said McMicken.

As soon as it got dark McMicken slipped off the lake boat at the next port with his coffin, and put the law on to his would - be murderers.

The next day he resumed his journey and got through safely.

They Still Can't Cure Your Cold

the body susceptible. Middle-ear infections occur frequently, especially in children, and these may lead to mastoiditis which in turn can cause meningitis or a brain abscess. Doctors advise against blowing the nose too heartily during a cold because this sometimes jet-propels the infection into the ears or sinuses.

When the infection spreads downward pneumonia can follow. Pleurisy and activated tuberculosis are not uncommon results of a common cold. Influenza, which many people regard as "a bad cold," is actually a separate infection altogether and one that shares the cold's elusive qualities.

As Hippocrates prescribed, rest in bed is still the best treatment for colds. This isolates the patient from contact with other infections to which he is now susceptible because of his weakened state. Many doctors frown on the sweat-it-out practitioners, who fill themselves with hot grog and aspirin and pile on the blankets, because such treatment lowers the body's resistance.

Other remedies, such as warm goose grease taken internally and externally, brown sugar and coal oil, onion diets and the wearing of a live caterpillar in a pouch strung round the neck are considered more favorably. They won't cure the cold, but they're harmless.

The common cold supports a one-hundred - million - dollar cold "cure" industry every year and bears its share of a two-hundred-million-dollar vitamin industry, in spite of the earnest efforts of the medical profession to establish the self-mortifying truth that there is as yet no proven cold cure or preventative. The progress of the doctors to this end is balked by the common cold's most frustrating faculty: It can cure itself within twenty-four hours.

One out of every two colds contracted gives its victim a plugged nose or a sore throat and then disappears in a few hours. If the would-be cold sufferer takes no treatment for his symptoms he is likely to forget the entire affair, but if he rushes out and purchases one of the cold "cures" which clog the market he is forevermore convinced science has licked the cold bug. Cold sufferers like these cause the stunning statistics which amaze the public when a new "cure" is discovered. In many experiments now sugar pills are mixed with the cold treatment pill under study and researchers are chagrined to discover that the sugar pills are causing just as many cures as the remedy under trial.

The past few years have produced a fistful of so-called cold cures. In 1942 a doctor in California came up with a cure he had taken seven years to perfect: a derivative of the common carrot. It was tried on a hundred and fifty cold sufferers and a hundred and nine recovered. In 1940 England was excited about a short-wave radio treatment which passed electricity through a patient's head for ten minutes and cured seven hundred out of one thousand colds overnight. In 1943 an American came up with a solution of triethylene glycol vapor, similar to antifreeze, which he claimed would smother cold germs to death. These picturesque treatments failed to stick in the public fancy like cold vaccine shots, vitamin pills and antihistamines —all of which are unsupported by medical societies.

The vitamin pills, which were designed for people with inadequate diets, are most frequently taken by men and women who are a long way from any vitamin deficiency. The pills don't harm them, naturally, but they give them no more protection from the common cold than is already theirs through adequate diet. If you're low in vitamins, though, these pills will help you build up your resistance. Cold vaccines have been discarded by most doctors because it has been decided that many different types of virus cause colds. A vaccine which would protect against one type of virus would give no protection at all against its cousins, even if it could be introduced into the respiratory system—where the cold attacks—instead of into the blood stream which the wily cold virus ignores.

The runaway favorites in the cold cure field at the present time are the antihistamine agents, developed twenty years ago to help people who suffer from allergy complaints like hay fever. Only two years ago a digest magazine announced that antihistamines had licked the common cold at last and this much-quoted article was enough to get the bobsled moving.

The Canadian Medical Association, the American Medical Association and the British Medical Association still have to be shown that the antihistamines cure colds. "There is no convincing evidence to justify a claim that any of the antihistamine drugs is of value in preventing, aborting or curing the common cold," the Council on pharmacy of the American Medical Association states. In spite of this, over - the - counter sales of antihista - mines hit an estimated seventy-two million dollars last year in the U. S.

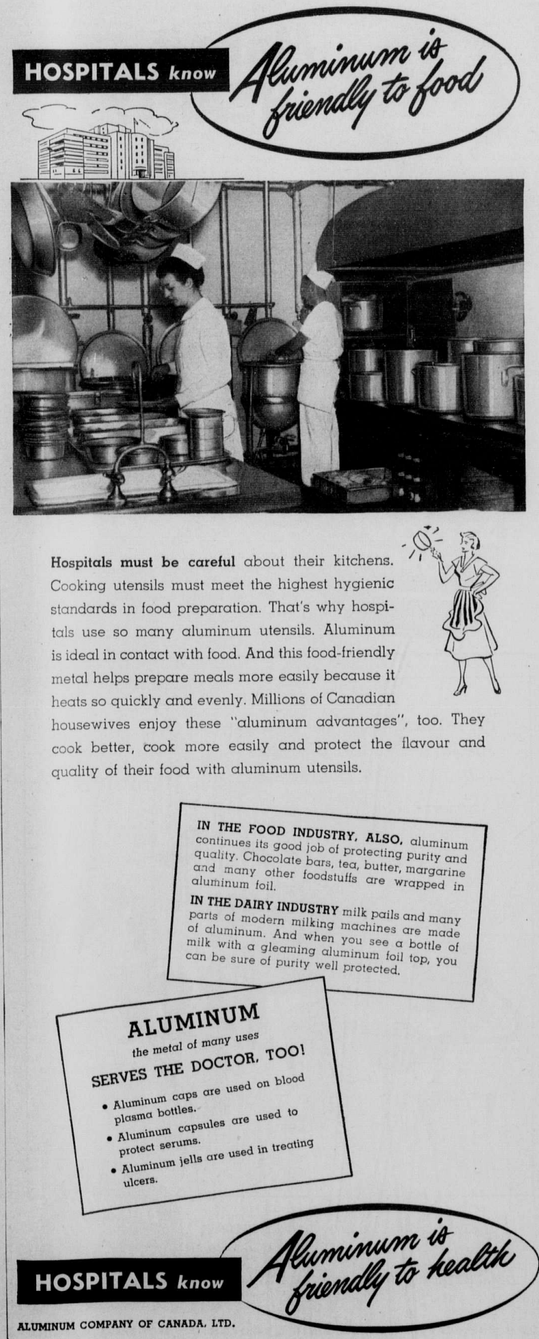

The antihistamine controversy has been the hottest dispute in medical circles in a decade. The issue is still in doubt. Manufacturers of the drugs claim that a condition called allergic rhinitis is present in some or all colds. This allergy breeds histamine in the tissues of the nose and throat. Antihistamines combat it and thus relieve the running nose, flaming eyes and sneezing which are the symptoms of allergic rhinitis as well as of the cold. But the medical profession retorts that experiments have revealed no indication that the cold virus is in any way related to an allergy.

Some drug manufacturers claim further that if antihistamine is taken within twenty-four hours it may prevent a cold developing altogether. This theory supposes that the drug has a direct effect on the cold virus but most doctors doubt this and it is unsupported by medical evidence. On the other hand, the medical men haven't proved that the common cold has not an allergic factor or that the antihistamines have no influence on the cold virus itself.

Actually, antihistamine manufacturers do not now claim that their product is a cold cure. Early ads hailed SENSATIONAL NEW DISCOVERY KILLS COLD IN HOURS! but this advertising is no longer permitted either in the U. S. or Canada. The Canadian Department of National Health and Welfare states flatly, "The drugs may relieve the side effects associated with the common cold but not cure the cold itself," and therefore manufacturers are allowed only to advertise that their product will check, relieve or stop cold symptoms.

The medical societies point out that antihistamines may often appear to cure a cold because many colds only last twenty-four hours anyway. And then there's the incalculable power of suggestion.

Doctors have recognized for centuries that an integral part of most cures is to convince the patient he is about to get better. For this reason people who have fastened their faith in curing colds on, say, corn flakes can sometimes cure themselves with corn flakes. One Toronto doctor advises his patients to come to him for a shot of penicillin whenever they feel a cold coming on, although he knows perfectly well that penicillin has no effect on the common cold. "It cures 'em," he tells his startled associates. "They feel they can lick anything with that load of penicillin, so why not give it to them?"

In a Boston University experiment involving twelve hundred and fourteen students sugar pills turned out to be just as effective as antihistamine pills in "curing" colds. In a Bell Telephone Company experiment involving eight hundred and eighty-one of the company's Montreal employees sugar pills "cured" a greater percentage than antihistamines.

Why is the common cold such a formidable problem? How is it that brilliant men who have beaten nearly all man's infirmities can do nothing for their own colds except blow their noses? There are many reasons.

First, the cold is not much of a medical hazard. It's a minor nuisance in an era still stymied by polio and cancer. Then too no laboratory animal —except the expensive and difficult chimpanzee—can catch a cold. Researchers have failed to reproduce the common cold in rabbits, mice, rats, guinea pigs, hamsters, voles, cotton rats, grey squirrels, flying squirrels, hedgehogs, pigs, chickens, kittens, ferrets, baboons, green monkeys, capuchin monkeys, red patas monkeys or a sooty mangabey. Therefore there has been little or no study of the lesions caused by colds in the respiratory passages—a disease with no mortality provides researchers with no tissues to examine.

The record of failure with the common cold dates back centuries. In 1786 a treatise on the subject declared that a cold came from going too thinly clad, exposing the body to cold air after having been heated by exercise, or causing the pores to open by drinking warm liquors. A lot of moderns still hold to this theory.

Reluctant to give up the tenet that cold was a factor in catching colds, some doctors later decided that exposure lowered resistance to a person's own throat bacteria, which had just been waiting for an opportunity to flourish. At the turn of this century it was settled that throat bacteria were not a primary cause of colds: the infection came from outside. Not until 1929 was it considered that colds are caused by a filter-passing virus, incredibly small. This has yet to be proved because the cold virus has never been cultured, but evidence is piling up which indicates the premise is correct.

What relationship a chilling has to colds remains a mystery. Almost everyone suffering a cold can trace its cause back to a specific instance of chilling or overtiring, but doctors are unable to establish a reason for the connection: During exhaustive tests at the "cold laboratory" at Salisbury volunteers were given hot baths and then made to stand naked in a draughty room for a few hours and to wear cold wet socks for a period after that. None of the volunteers who were thus chilled caught colds because of the chilling alone; other shivering heroes were also given a dose of live cold virus and only half of them caught colds.

Two types of cold virus have been identified: one incubates in one or two days and the other in three to nine days. There are probably other types, which is the reason why cold vaccines hold so little hope. In addition the cold virus, like the influenza virus, is so small that antibiotics like penicillin and aureomycin—which tear into most virus infections—have no effect on it.

Children have twice as many colds as adults and have cold complications much more often—and doctors don't know why. Women have more colds than men (industry figures its men employees will be away an average of one day a year with colds and its women three). No one can develop a permanent immunity to colds but it appears to be possible for a person to carry the infection without apparently suffering from a cold at all.

Some people are more susceptible to colds than others for no known reason and will get four or five colds a year, all of them real brutes. Sometimes such a sufferer will suddenly enter a period of fewer and milder colds and will attribute the delightful situation to a move to a warmer home, the adding of vitamin pills to the diet, fewer cigarettes, cold-vaccine shots, earlier bedtime or vegetarianism. They get no argument from doctors, who are as confused as anyone else.

Colds do tend to wear out and disappear, though, if the community is isolated from the outside world long enough. The classic example is the northern port of Spitzbergen in Norway, which is ice bound all winter. By midwinter the common cold has disappeared in the town and no amount of chilling or getting overtired can cause one to appear. With the arrival of the first boat in the spring heavy colds sweep the population, indicating that being isolated from cold germs greatly lowers resistance to them.

The work goes on in research laboratories, for, as the antihistamine flurry has shown, a life of luxury awaits the man who cures the common cold. When that day arrives proud medical students with new diplomas can stop flinching when a voice from the rear jeers: "If you're so smart, how about curing my cold?" ★ liberty and hatred of taking orders. Admittedly his health is not very good, and he has never acquired a wife to solace and advise him. At any rate we had the strange spectacle of a man declining high place in government, an almost unheard of thing in England where political power means far more than wealth. So the Exchequer went to "RAB" Butler, the "middle of the roader" who has a fine brain and a rich wife. Nothing perturbs Butler, not even if a wagonload of monkeys appeared while he was speaking. A great minister of education, a fairly good under-secretary of foreign affairs, he is now No. 3 in the party.

A Different World to Eden

It was thought that Oliver Lyttelton would have taken the Exchequer but his appointment to the Colonial Office is typical of the imaginativeness with which Churchill tackles things. Lyttelton comes of a great educational dynasty, he was decorated for bravery with the Guards in the 1914 War, he then became an immensely successful industrialist and was brought into the government as a novice minister in the last war. Now he gives up chairmanships and directorships worth forty thousand pounds a year to take over the administration of the colonies. In my opinion it is a brilliant appointment for, although Lyttelton is an indifferent speaker, he has imagination and organizing genius. The colonial territories are on the march. The subject races have caught the fever that is sweeping Africa and Asia, the fever of premature independence. The only way to satisfy their aspirations is to raise the standard of living, to create new industries and a new economic concept. If anyone can do that it will be Lyttelton.

I have not the space to deal with Churchill's appointments generally but I must not leave out Eden who has taken over the muddle of foreign affairs from Herbert Morrison who, to put it kindly, was the unluckiest foreign secretary in British history. Eden starts with great good will at home and abroad, but it is a very different world from when he first took on the post of foreign secretary. Even during the rise of Hitler and Mussolini the voice of Britain still held high authority. To the average Briton at that time Persia was a garden which bubbled oil to the surface and gave no trouble. Egypt was well-behaved, China was numb with perpetual war, Russia was still in the throes of her revolution and threatened no one but herself, and the British Navy ruled the waves by permission of the United States Navy. Except for those two ranting idiots, Hitler and Mussolini, foreign affairs would not have been too bad. Against them Eden wanted a strong hand, or at any rate a stronger hand than that of Chamberlain. So Eden resigned. It was the honorable thing to do. Now he returns to the Foreign Office with an established record of personal integrity.

Today Eden speaks for a nation which was bled white in the Hitler War, a nation which is not paying its way although shouldering new burdens in every part of the world, a nation which is being defied by countries which once regarded her as the rightful overlord of the world, a nation which is divided within herself on a hundred issues. Will he be able to convince the outside world that Britain is still Great Britain, that her powers of resurgence are not gone but are merely waiting for the genius of leadership, that her moral contribution to the free nations is a debt that the centuries cannot pay and that she is indeed the supreme creditor among the nations?

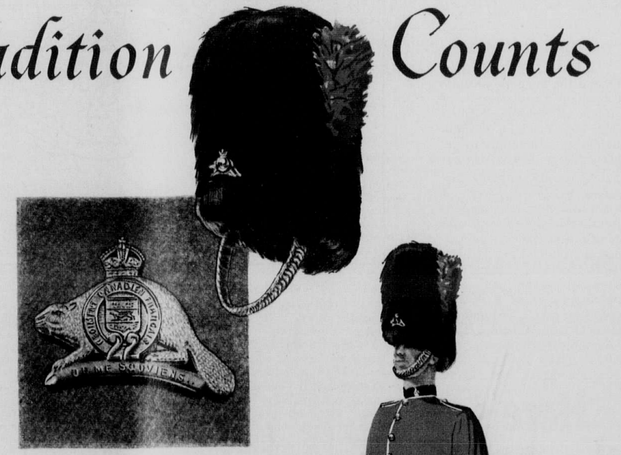

Eden's voice will be strengthened by the dynamic genius of his leader. What a man is Winston Churchill! After his first speech as Prime Minister in this new parliament, a speech which he had to prepare amid the endless grind of

When holly dangles far and near;
When turkeys hang their costly heads;
When postmen almost disappear;
When good behavior swiftly spreads;
When shoppers yelp in bitter pain
As though a savage reindeer kicked 'em,
It's here—and I am, once again,
The festive season's starring victim.

Tradition Counts

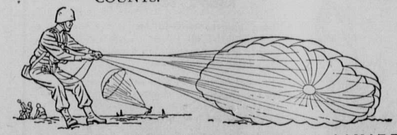

The Royal 22nd Regiment

Affectionately known as the "Van Doos", the Royal 22nd Regiment was organized in 1920 to carry on the fighting traditions of the 22nd Battalion CEF. In their motto, "Je me souviens" ("I remember"), they recall the stirring achievements of the Quebec militia in the Revolutionary War, the War of 1812 and the Fenian Raids.

During the Second World War the Royal 22nd Regiment took part in the initial landing in Sicily and served in all the important engagements northward through Italy. In addition to their traditional duty of garrisoning the Quebec Citadel, the "Van Doos" have contributed to Canada's Special Force for service overseas. Proud of their glorious past, the Royal 22nd is one of Canada's honoured regiments in which . . . TRADITION COUNTS.

policy and cabinet making, I ran into him in the lobby and he paused for a friendly word. It is instinctive to flatter a monarch, a prime minister, or a great actor, but I spoke nothing less than the truth when I told him that he looked ten years younger. Absence of responsibility aged him, the acquiring of responsibility had rejuvenated him. He looks out at the reeling drunken world and his spirit soars at the challenge. "Things are bad," he tells the House, "but I have seen worse. I have no doubt that we shall emerge strong once more."

Winnie in Full Blast

It was the same voice we heard in 1940 when the hot breath of Nazism was on the Channel and (with her cubs) the old British Lion stood alone. Churchill never believed Britain would be beaten by Germany. He does not believe today Britain will be beaten by her difficulties.

At home here in Britain we are to have the prescription as before: blood, sweat and tears. And already the spirits of the people are rising at the prospect. A famous New York columnist said to me the other day: "What the hell is the matter with you people? This is the most cheerful country I've seen for five years."

Once more the Churchill technique of sending directives, "For action this day," is in full blast. One or two young ministers are looking worn, and no doubt thinking of the lush easy days of Opposition. But Churchill recharges his batteries by exhausting them. The years fall away and the calendar shrivels like the liar that it is.

I started this letter by saying that a party which forms a government is different from a party in Opposition. That is quite true, for ministers can no longer join in the fine careless rapture of the smoke room and the dining room where backbenchers can say anything that comes into their heads or sink an arrowed epigram in any breast. The ministerialists must be like Hamlet's uncle who said, "My words fly up, my thoughts remain below."

With the socialists there is the reverse process. The ex-ministers are now on the same pay and have the same status as the back-benchers except that they sit on the Opposition front bench. They are rediscovering the camaraderie of opposition and enjoying it, but such is the irony of human nature that they will continue to dream of the day when the cares of office will once more be thrust upon their willing shoulders.

As a participant and an observer of it all I do not doubt I shall have some exciting scenes to describe in the fateful months that lie ahead. ★

LAST LAUGH

Sharp repartee is not for me,
I never flit the lull.
There's no applause during a pause—
My stories are quite dull.

My joke's a dud . . . falls with a thud,
No one dissolves in laughter.
The apt retort is not my forte,
It comes to me long after.

But let them yawn, for when they've gone,
I've a consolation, which is—
My wit burns bright through half the night,
And I keep myself in stitches!

MAY I HAVE THE NEXT DANCE?

I envy the men of the ballet
Their breath-taking polish and grace—
I envy their flair
For alighting on air
And remaining suspended in space.
It would really be right up my alley
To join in their elegant show
As they expertly twirl
A delectable girl
By the tip of one delicate toe.

I'm seeking more scope for my talents.
I offer my services free—
If the ballet requires
A fan who aspires
To dance, simply call upon me.
There may be defects in my balance,
But my biceps and arches are sound.
Ballet-masters with vision
Are urged to audition
A man with both feet on the ground
Who has marvelled in rapt admiration
As the boys of the ballet give proof
Of their strength. Why, I've seen a Robust ballerina
Tossed casually up to the roof;
Or launched from a high elevation
With zest, savoir-faire, and dispatch,
While the pitcher's confrère
Never rumpled her hair
With an equally laudable catch.
I'm eager to wangle a try-out at this
If they'll just overlook an occasional miss.

eccentricities of wartime. Churchill sleeps eight hours out of each twenty-four but he takes six at night (2 to 8 a.m.) and two in the afternoon. When he wakes in the morning he conducts his business for several hours in bed, holding court to colleagues like a Bourbon monarch's levee. Naturally this system is easier on the recumbent Churchill than on colleagues who have to keep normal office hours. For the man unlucky enough to be summoned in the evening, sitting up with the PM until 2 a.m. is an exhausting, headachy business.

These things intensify, but at the same time diminish, Conservative hopes that their great man will soon retire. He should retire, he's said he would retire, but will he?

Conservatives smile ruefully at a story, supposed to be true, about the party conference at Blackpool a year ago. In the back-room huddles, everyone agreed Churchill should relinquish the party leadership. Everybody agreed, but—who would bell the cat? After much canvassing, the story goes, they persuaded his old friend Lord Halifax to pitch the case for retirement. Lord Halifax arranged to have dinner alone with Churchill and, with all his world-famous tact, he discoursed upon Winston's duty to the nation, to posterity. He simply must finish the memoirs, that unique repository of history; he simply couldn't afford to squander the precious days of old age in the dull petty routine of party administration.

Churchill listened amicably, sipping his brandy in high good humor; Lord Halifax began to think he was carrying his point. But at the end of it Churchill set down his glass and leaned forward.

"Edward," he said, "you talk very well. But Edward, there is one rule of my life which I have never violated since earliest youth: I never leave until the pub closes."

* * *

Allied but by no means identical with the question of Churchill's retirement is another: How long can the Churchill Government last?

Canadians, accustomed to half-year sessions of parliament which all MPs are supposed to attend daily, don't readily appreciate the difficulties of a majority of twenty-one in Westminster. The British parliament is in session most of the time, but British MPs —especially the Conservatives, who are not full-time politicians—stay away a good deal. They must, to carry on their businesses.

Some Conservative MPs are already predicting a third general election in the spring. They can't stand the pace, they say—the last twenty months have been intolerable and the future looks even worse. In Opposition, at least they could choose their own time for protracted sieges. Now it will be the Labour Party calling the tune, and Government supporters will have to be on call continually.

To those who wonder whether Churchill could get a bigger majority, or any majority at all, in the spring, they reply with much assurance: "He'll go to the people and ask for a mandate. Tell them things are bad, may well get worse, and that they must have a stronger government in office. It'll be blood, sweat and tears all over again, and the people will respond."

But will they? A good many observers doubt it—1952 will not be another 1940.

In 1940 nobody talked about "fair shares for all." Hitler saw to it that rich and poor alike got their fair share of bombing and suffering and shortage. In that crisis Churchill was indubitably the man to rally the people. Not only his matchless oratory but his indomitable courage, a courage proven a thousand times from the cavalry charge at Omdurman to the assault of the V2s, gave him full right to demand every sacrifice from a loyal people.

This time it's different. Britain is in no danger of anything but scarcity—some lowering of a living standard which has been high and stable for several years. The sacrifice now demanded is petty by comparison, but are Churchill and his colleagues the right men to ask it? They are, after all, rich men. Churchill himself has two luxurious homes, one at Hyde Park Gate and one at Chartwell; his cigars cost four shillings each. R. A. Butler, the new Chancellor of the Exchequer, is a man of solid means who married millions. Oliver Lyttelton, Lord Woolton, Lord Leathers are all wealthy. Even Anthony Eden, the most popular of present ministers, has never in his life been hard up.

Britons generally are going to be very hard up indeed, if the cost of living goes on climbing as it's almost certain to do. It's a rash assumption that, after a hard winter and facing a hard summer, they will return the present Government by a bigger majority than it got in October.

For these reasons the commoner opinion here is that the Conservative Government will hang on as long as it can. Half a dozen by-elections in the wrong places, of course, could erode its little majority to practically nothing, so nobody quite rules out the 1952 election as a possibility. But if it proves possible, most people seem to think the Government will carry on for at least two years—long enough, they hope, for free enterprise and high competence to win through to better times than the grim trough that lies just ahead.

Scraps from a travel diary:

Driving through Somerset (headed for Midsomer Norton by way of Chewton Mendip) John Bird and I passed an ancient pub called, so help me, The Live And Let Live. It was only 10 a.m., but we stopped for a ritual half pint—opportunities like that seldom recur.

In the London subway trains one series of car-card advertisements is a kind of burlesque of British history with modern overtones. Example: A colored cartoon of Richard III at Bosworth Field, with this verse:

Your Kingdom for a horse?
But an order is in force,
And Government approval is required for the swap.
You must read the regulations
And write fifty applications;
You will need a pen and pencil, so remember where to stop.

—Published in the interests of brighter travel by W. H. Smith & Sons (Stationers and booksellers).

It was pretty good anti-socialist propaganda during the campaign. Note that the ads were carried by the state-owned London transport system, and you're half way to understanding the British Constitution. ★

The Secret Life of Mackenzie King, Spiritualist

Mrs. Wriedt used a silver trumpet from which, at her seances, the voice of the departed would proceed. An old friend of Mr. King recalled: "She'd put the trumpet in the middle of the circle and it would roll around and stop in front of the person about to receive a message. I remember the thing rolling up to me and giving me quite a rap on the shin. The voice that came out did sound very like a person I knew who had died.

"However, I was a bit shaken when she got hold of somebody who was supposed to be French. That trumpet spoke very bad French."

Apparently that didn't shake Mr. King, whose own French was rudimentary anyway. He became more and more interested in spiritualism as the years went by. For the last twenty years of his life he found time, on every trip to Britain, for sittings with various mediums.

Mrs. Helen Hughes remembers the first she ever had with him, in the early 1930s: "I had no idea who he was. They don't tell us, you know. All I knew was, a gentleman would be coming for a sitting at 10.30 in the morning He just came in and sat down without saying anything.

"One of the voices I heard was a man who said he was his brother. Mr. King wanted to be told something about him, and it came through that he was a doctor. After a while I got the name, Mac. He said a lot about the family—he'd say: 'Do you remember, Willie, when we were children, do you remember so-and-so?' After it was over Mr. King said 'I know that was my brother. He spoke of things nobody else knew, nobody but the two of us.' "

Through Mrs. Hughes and the late Hester Dowden, another medium of considerable fame, Mr. King got in touch not only with the human members of his family but also with his own Scottish voice. Mrs. Wriedt was a "direct-voice" medium through whom the deceased could speak directly in his or her own earthly accent.

Hester Dowden and Miss Cummins got their communications by "automatic writing." Mrs. Dowden used to be fully conscious and made comments of her own, sometimes rather facetious and irreverent, on the messages coming through. Miss Cummins goes into a trance, she says, and loses consciousness completely before her hand begins to move across the page. She sits down and "goes into the silence," shading her closed eyes with her left hand; after a while her "control," an ancient Greek named Astor, announces his presence and begins to send messages from other departed spirits. Miss Cummins writes all this down in a rapid script with all the words run together, no spaces, and in handwriting that varies markedly as different "communicators" speak.

Mr. King's habit was to take the written messages off the foolscap pad, sheet by sheet as they were completed, and to keep the originals himself. He would send back copies to the mediums, often with comments of his own on the "evidential" material they contained. Of one message from President Roosevelt, reporting that F.D.R. had met Mr. King's mother, the Prime Minister said:

"The phrases he used, the characterization, were exactly what I'd have expected from Franklin Roosevelt if he'd met my mother in life."

These spirit messages, the originals as well as the copies, are still extant in Ottawa and in London, but even now they are treated as closely secret. None of the people associated with Mr. King's spiritualist activities will talk freely or willingly about him. Had it not been for an initial breach of silence just after Mr. King's death, they'd be even less willing to talk.

Most of King's contacts with mediums in Britain were made through Miss Mercy Phillimore, secretary of the London Spiritualist Alliance. Miss Phillimore won't discuss Mr. King's interest in spiritualism, won't reveal to whom she sent him or when or where. But she will talk, very strongly and indignantly, about that unfortunate statement in Psychic News that he "always sought spirit guidance in affairs of state."

"Mr. King was an investigator," she said. "He did accept the spirit hypothesis and he had the courage to say so, but he never ceased to be critical in appraising evidence. He was a highly intelligent man with shrewd judgment, and to say he consulted mediums for advice in statecraft is preposterous. It is also outrageous, an insult to his memory."

Actually Mr. King seems to have behaved, in his psychic experiments, with all the caution and circumspection he displayed in other things. The London Spiritualist Alliance, founded under its present name in 1884, is one of the oldest organizations of its kind. It is regarded in spiritualist circles as a pretty careful investigator of mediums' claims, and it also has a reputation for secrecy.

Ordinarily, I was told, the mediums didn't know who Mr. King was. Miss Cummins recalls that at her first sitting with him she thought he was a clergyman from New York. (She says she was so ignorant of Canada that she thought the capital city was Montreal, yet the messages on that first day included such relatively obscure names as W. S. Fielding, who was Mr. King's rival for the Liberal leadership thirty-two years ago, and Sir Oliver Mowat, a Premier of Ontario in Sir John A. Macdonald's time.)

Mrs. Helen Hughes says she had been giving him sittings over a period of four years, sometimes two in a single week, before she knew his name. She learned his identity for the first time in 1937, at a party given by the Duchess of Hamilton at the London Spiritualist Alliance headquarters in Queensberry Place, South Kensington.

One of the guests at that party was a Scotsman named J. J. MacIndoe, and it was he who first revealed that Mackenzie King was a spiritualist. He wrote a letter to the Psychic News just after Mr. King's death; the letter was published, and Psychic News promptly sent a reporter to interview the Duchess of Hamilton for more details. Both stories were widely reprinted in Canada.

With the secret thus broken, Miss Cummins wrote an appendix to the autobiographical book she was preparing, published this year under the title Unseen Adventures. It comprised a partial report of the two sittings she had with Mr. King in 1947 and 1948. Private and personal communications were deleted, but she did reveal that he had got messages from his family and from President Roosevelt.

She sent proofs of the appendix to a friend in Ottawa who showed them to Mackenzie King's executors. One of them, Duncan MacTavish, of Ottawa, was flying to England the next day on other business. Leonard W. Brockington, of Toronto, was already in London. Together they called to urge Miss Cummins and her publishers to suppress the story. Reluctantly, and at considerable cost and inconvenience, they agreed to cut out Mr. King's name and a number of identifying details, including the name of President Roosevelt.

In the book as published, the appendix is entitled Reminiscences of a British Commonwealth Statesman; Mr. King appears as Mr. S., F.D.R. as X.Y.Z. Miss Cummins was rather taken aback when I turned up at Miss Gibbes' small house in Chelsea, already able from previous information to identify these pseudonymous characters and fill in a number of the deleted details. She is still worried lest she be accused of breaking faith in consenting to see me at all.

In general, though, people who knew of Mr. King's beliefs are glad the story is coming out.

Mediums differ a lot in their attitude toward their work and their own beliefs concerning it. Mrs. Helen Hughes is a minister of the Spiritualist Church and a professional medium—to her, spiritualism is a religion and sittings an occupation. Miss Cummins, on the other hand, is a devout member of the Church of Ireland, a novelist and playwright by profession. Some of her books are ordinary novels about Ireland, written with her conscious mind. Others she believes to have been dictated to her by writers now dead—many are chronicles of biblical times.

She is not a professional medium, indeed she does not give sittings at all except at the request of personal friends. Like Mackenzie King she regards spiritualism as enquiry and experiment, not worship, and she retains a certain amount of scepticism about the results.

But all spiritualists, the believers and the researchers alike, have an interest in letting the facts be known. They feel that if a man as eminent, as astute, as famous for realistic judgments as Mackenzie King was convinced their conclusions were genuine, they have a right to his testimony before the world. While he lived his secret was kept with absolute fidelity, but they see no point in secrecy now.

Moreover they are absolutely convinced that Mr. King himself would agree with them. He told several people here, in the later years of his life, that it was his firm intention to publish a full account of his psychic experiments and beliefs in the memoirs he then hoped to write. He hadn't quite decided whether this chapter would be published during his lifetime or withheld until after his death, but publish it he would, sooner or later. He wanted to communicate his own unshakeable faith in the life after death.

"People who don't believe in survival," he once said to Mrs. Helen Hughes, "haven't yet begun to live."

Therefore they feel that whatever Mr. King's executors may desire, his own wishes are served by publication of the facts. From the little I knew of Mr. King I think they're right. If Mr. King's belief has turned out to be true, and if he is indeed looking over my shoulder from some astral sphere, I don't think he'll mind. ★

Postscripts To Our Own Baedeker

Sherbrooke, Que.

I want first to thank you for the excellent publicity provided Sherbrooke through your wide circulation (Sherbrooke: Where Two Live As Happily As One, Oct. 15). However . . . most of the facts in the article were entirely misleading. Personally I object very strongly to the last item in which the writer stated that the Archbishop of Sherbrooke, Rev. Phillip Desranleau, advised his people to vote for Armand Nadeau, as he did not want me elected. This is an absolute lie! I positively know that if he (the Archbishop) had taken any part—which he did not—he would have been in favor of my election. —Chas. B. Howard, Mayor, Sherbrooke, Que.

● Thank you for the very fine article on Sherbrooke, Quebec. It expresses the feelings of our fair city exactly as they are. I am well qualified to speak on the bonne entente since, although I am French, my education has been entirely English. Let us hope the article will show some of the die-hard fanatics on either side of the fence that it is not a question of being English or French but of being a good Canadian citizen.—John J. Dunn, London, Ont.

● We would like to take up the cudgel on behalf of our hotels which were mentioned toward the end of the article in a definitely derogatory manner. We do not claim the hotels to be the best available anywhere in Canada but we do feel that in the main they are quite a lot better than those in similar communities across our Dominion. Furthermore, their owners are striving, during the times of high costs, to better the hotels and the service offered, continually.—Harry Walker, Vice-President, Chamber of Commerce, Sherbrooke, Que.

Delhi, Ont.

It was of great interest to me reading Tobacco Town (Sept. 15). Just thirty years ago I had the opportunity to visit Delhi and the district where all this tobacco is now grown. It was then a district of derelict farms. I went with a friend from Toronto who was trying to sell a lot of these farms on easy terms for a firm in Toronto and, in the train, I heard a man saying in a loud voice that he considered it a shame to encourage people from the Old Country to come out, and then sell them such useless land. At that time I could have bought hundreds of farms there for a down payment of five hundred dollars on any of them, so badly was the land thought of; in fact it could hardly be sold at any price.—Alfred Gamble, Liverpool, Eng.

● After I had read your Tobacco Town I had a great desire to talk to the writer of that article for he had overlooked many things and made what I consider false statements. I feel it was an insult to the residents of Delhi thirty or more years ago. The writer described Delhi as a place of arid obscurity, a desolate community withering away on acres of blown sand.

Would arid land without irrigation grow vegetables for the canning factory, acres of strawberries and other small fruits? Would arid land grow cherries, pears, plums, peaches, grapes and apples that are second to none? Does arid land produce oats, barley, wheat, rye, buckwheat, soybeans, corn and hay to feed cows, pigs, horses and sheep and poultry that were on these farms?

It is less than one hundred and fifty years since our pioneer parents settled here and cleared the land and built the unpretentious homes spoken of.

They were industrious, patriotic, friendly, neighborly God-fearing people who paved the way hoping for a better Canada. If these people had not paved the way our new Canadians would not be making money so easy.—Mrs. Bruce Wilkinson, Courtland, Ont.

Charlottetown, P.E.I.

The article in the Oct. 1 issue, Charlottetown Likes to Laugh, appealed to me . . . You are the first of many whom I have seen dealing with Charlottetown and Prince Edward Island who have gone below the surface and revealed just what the P. E. Islanders are like.—F. R. Wallace, Halifax.

● Charlottetown Likes to Laugh was the damnedest compilation of near truths, half-truths, and utter falsehoods that I ever read.—W. M. Murphy Charlottetown, P.E.I.

Lunenburg, N.S.

In the article (July 15) about the town of Lunenburg, N.S., Charles Rawlings states that most of the stained glass windows in St. John's Anglican Church are in memory of fishermen. If Mr. Rawlings will again read the inscriptions he will find that only a few are in memory of fishermen, the majority are dedicated to the memory of church members not engaged in fishing. Also, after living in this town for several years, I cannot call Lunenburg drab. Most people find it very colorful.—Mrs. Reed H. Barnes, Montreal.

The Senators Get the Squeeze

Many times I have heard the statement—as well as seeing it in the Press —that Senators receive $2,000 expense allowance, tax free, but have paid little attention, as members of the Senate are accustomed to inaccurate statements about themselves and their work. However, when so outstanding an authority on parliamentary activities as Mr. Blair Fraser makes the same incorrect statement in his Backstage at Ottawa in Maclean's Oct. 15, I think it is time to call attention to the error. The Senators do not receive this expense allowance tax free; they pay income tax on both indemnity and expense allowance. — Ira Campbell Fallis, The Senate, Canada.

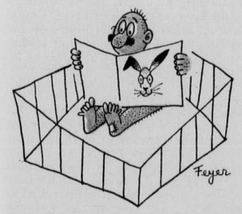

The Woodsworth Memory

I lift my hat to Maclean's and Blair Fraser for daring to write an article on the life of one of Canada's outstanding leaders, the late J. S. Woodsworth (Nov. 1). Labor owes a debt of gratitude to this good man. He was an outstanding example of self-sacrifice and is one man in our great Dominion whose memory should be perpetuated in bronze. He was no soldier, he was no statesman, and he certainly was no politician, but we the people are enjoying at the present time the fruit of his labor and self-sacrifice. All honor to Maclean's—we at least have his memory perpetuated in print.—T. Percy Hall, St. Andrews East, Que.

A Knight in Arms

Enter F. A. Wood, of Hensall, Ont. (Mailbag, Oct. 15), a knight in shining armor, mounted on a white steed, bearing the banner: Shame on Eric Nicol. Seems Eric used the word

"damn" in his Marriage Clinic article (Aug. 1).

Mr. Wood is too, too typical of the dull little men who are cluttering up this Dominion from coast to coast. He was more concerned with searching for soiled linen than he was with the fact that here in front of him was the work of one of the wittiest Canadian writers since Stephen Leacock.

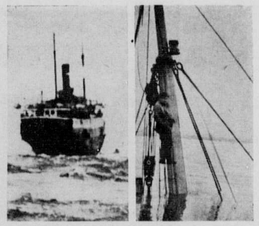

What's the matter with "damn"? It's not a swear word. It can be highly expressive, and I have heard it used by some of the best people, including members of the Church.

I suggest that Wood restrict his reading to Uncle Wiggily, which is tailored to little folk with his degree of sophistication.—George M. Martin, Toronto.

Should Homework Go?

As a teacher I quite agree with your article, Let's Abolish Homework, in the Oct. 1 issue.—Milton E. MacInnes, Glace Bay, N.S.

● Instead of thinking, as many teachers seem to, that parents want homework for their children to keep them out of mischief, many that I know want them to do homework to improve that report card, the only real connecting link we have with school activities. Among my friends I know that to be the case. We are interested in results and if Little Johnnie isn't learning to spell, read or add and teacher can't do anything about it we rather desperately hope we can.—E. M. Thompson, Fort St. John, B.C.

The Coast's Worst Disaster

It was with great interest I read The West Coast's Worst Disaster, by Jim Nesbitt (Oct. 15). At the time of the Sophia disaster I was nursing at the St. Anne Hospital, at Juneau, Alaska. Everyone was stunned by the catastrophe. The little gas boats came into Juneau loaded with oil-covered bodies on their decks . . .

I am enclosing two pictures (see cut) taken at the time of Sophia; one before she slid off, the other just shows the masthead. All that is left now is a buoy which marks the spot.—Mrs. M. K. Thoms, Victoria.

● My husband's cousin, Harry Bourne, was on that boat, coming out for the last time, to live with his father and sister in Jarvis, Ont. My husband and I were living in Vancouver, and to him fell the sad task of identifying his cousin when the bodies were brought there.—Mrs. C. E. Bourne, Montreal.

Too Many Millionaires

This is in protest against any more articles about multimillionaires. They are hard to take for the majority of Canadians who, like ourselves, belong to the working class. Needless to say, we find it grim trying to stretch our wretched little dollars to bring adequate food to our tables.

Does Sir James Dunn (The Last of the Multimillionaires, Sept. 15) know that the cost of living is climbing so alarmingly? If I had only three-quarters of one percent of his wealth I could be content!—Mrs. M. Morrison, Edmonton.

Charmingly Human Aldridge

The story by James Aldridge, You Laughed at My Father (Oct. 15), was, to me, a charmingly human and a realistic piece of boyhood literature. I enjoyed it immensely.—Mrs. Catherine MacDonald, Windsor, Ont.

Always a Massey

I was shocked to read in your usually accurate magazine that I am supposed to have said "that Canada join up as quickly as possible with the U.S.A." I didn't say it; I have never said it; I have never even thought it.

Pierre Berton, writer of the article in question (There'll Always Be a Massey, Oct. 15), has attributed to me an outrageously distorted quote from my brief to the Royal Commission on Arts, Letters and Sciences. What I did say to the commission was, "If we are ever to have a Canadian culture it will come as the result of full exposure to what is undoubtedly the fastest rising culture in the world today—that of the U.S.A."—Jack Cooke, Toronto.

Maclean's accepts Mr. Cooke's statement that he did not specifically suggest amalgamation of Canada and the U. S. Nonetheless this was the impression that his remarks left on at least one member of the Royal Commission. ★

WIT AND WISDOM

Horses Never Die Broke—Horse sense is defined as that thing which prevents horses from betting on people.—Midland (Ont.) Rural Scene.

The Earth Isn't Ivory—You can send a message around the world in one seventh of a second, yet it takes years to force a simple idea through a quarter inch of human skull.—Kitchener Waterloo Record.

The Genius Also—A crank is a person interested in something you do not appreciate.—Edmonton Daysland Sun.

Take Note, Sir—An optimist is a man who marries his secretary and thinks he can continue dictating to her.— Kitchener Waterloo Record.

That Would Be Pluperfect—A mathematician asserts there is only one chance in forty million of drawing the perfect bridge hand. And only one in eighty million, we suppose, of drawing the perfect partner.— Kingston Whig-Standard.

Sufficient Unto Himself — As the crowd of commuters thinned out the bartender saw an old customer sitting alone at a table muttering to himself. At times he'd laugh heartily and at others he'd cut the air with his hand in a gesture of great disgust. As soon as the bartender was free he went over to the man, saying:

"Mr. Benson, you've missed your usual train. Mrs. Benson will be worried. What are you doing?"

"Can't I just sit here and tell myself stories?" Mr. Benson asked plaintively.

"Surely, surely," the bartender soothed him. "But what does that gesture of disgust mean which you make now and then?"

"Oh, that," said Benson, beaming, "that's when I tell myself one I've heard before!" — Muenster (Sask.) Prairie Messenger.

Showing Her Hand—The sorority girl had just received an engagement ring and wore it down to breakfast next morning. To her exasperation no one even noticed the ring.

Finally, after fuming and squirming through the meal, a lull came in the conversation and she exclaimed: "My, it's getting hot in here. I think I'll take off my ring."—Strathmore (Alta.) Standard.

Native Intuition—"I am looking for a criminal lawyer," said the stranger. "Have you one in town?"

"Well," said the native, "we're pretty sure we have, but we can't prove it."—Victoria Colonist.

She watched as the man slowly walked behind the cow, urging her nearer to the unsuspecting geese. She saw him shoot nine birds and immediately phoned her neighbors to come over for a goose dinner. As the hunter brought the cow back to the barnyard she hurried out and stood waiting for her goose.

Treaty Day is an annual occasion when Indians are paid a cash bounty in fulfillment of various treaties which date back to Victoria's reign. It used to be celebrated as a sort of harvest festival but modern medicine has put a damper on the fun for many old-timers. Herewith a translation from a recent letter written by a Cree: "But now on Treaty Day the Indian is sad because that is the time the white men choose to stick needles into all the children, making them sick. And then everybody is looked through (with an X-ray) before he can claim his money. I doubt that many are happy to have their hearts looked at to see how their heart stands, and what they propose to do with their money that night."

Dear Sir:-

Following the reading of an article in the last number of McLeans magazine regarding the secret life of the late Mr. Mackenzie King I have through the medium of automatic writing received several messages but mainly for identification. This morning however he forced his way to give me this message to be forwarded to you.

I hope you will forgive this intrusion into your very busy life but I am acting entirely under orders which I feel compelled to fulfil.

With Season's Greeting

Will you kindly convey to my friend Leonard Brockington in Ottawa my regards and Seasons Greeting for a very Happy Christmas and New Year, just as I used to do while in the flesh.

He will understand my wish in this respect because he knew of my affection for my dear mother, and also he knew of my faith and belief in the reality of Immortality. In confirmation of that belief I have forced my identity through to make known to you my friend that it is I William Mackenzie King, from the spheres of Eternity, who is now vibrating his thoughts to reach you in the world of the flesh. Marvel not at this revelation but thank the Living God for the glorious gift of Immortality, through the Grace and Power of the Son Jesus Christ, who is the way - the truth - and the life.

With affection and esteem

Cordially yours

William Mackenzie King.

Mackenzie King Was a Devout Spiritualist

From PATRICK NICHOLSON,
"The Press and Journal" Special Correspondent

Ottawa, Sunday.

CANADA'S most famous statesman used to slip away from Commonwealth conferences in London and Cabinet meetings in Ottawa to have private seances with his dead mother and with the late President Roosevelt, it has been disclosed here.

The entirely unexpected revelation that Mr W. L. Mackenzie King was an active spiritualist has caused the greatest political sensation in Canada's history.

His secret life is being laid bare daily as his confidantes and fellow-spiritualists at last break their silence.

Mr Mackenzie King always had a strong interest in phenomena such as the Scottish "second sight."

When his mother, brother and sister died in quick succession, this lonely bachelor became interested in the possibility of communicating with the dead.

In his grief, he was first persuaded to study spiritualism by the late Ishbel Marchioness of Aberdeen thirty years ago. His experiences soon led him to believe in life after death.

Roosevelt's Warning

Most of his contacts were with departed relations and friends. But once during the Berlin airlift he told important acquaintances that President Roosevelt had warned him that the blockade of Berlin was a Red diversion and that the real test would come in Asia.

Mrs Helen Hughes, of Glasgow, who is one of Britain's most skilled mediums to-day, held many seances for Mr King, from the mid-thirties almost up till his death last year.

Interviewed at her Ibrox, Glasgow, home Mrs Hughes told "The Press and Journal": "Mackenzie King was a very devout believer in spiritualism and a very good man.

"He was very attached to his family and loved to confer with them. But his messages were always personal and not related to guidance for earthly things."

Mackenzie King's Religion

SIR,—As my father was, in St Andrew's Church, Ottawa, Mr Mackenzie King's minister for eleven years, I may be allowed a brief comment on your paragraph in your issue of December 24.

Canada's former Prime Minister was one who worshipped in his church not on "State occasions" only, but almost every Sunday evening.

His sharing in public worship sprang from a deep personal piety. He gave the allegiance of his mind and heart to the full Christian faith and used to linger after service to discuss the sermon with the preacher. His faith expressed itself in a life of gracious kindliness which sought to enter, as I and my family know, into the joys and sorrows of his friends.

In a word, while he was passionately interested in Spiritualism, it was not his whole religion. He felt it opened up possibilities of contact with the Unseen World, but it did not give him his confidence in a life beyond this one. He possessed that already and independently as a loyal son of the Church.—(Rev.) G. Rendle Leathem, 54 Polmuir Road, Aberdeen.

"Dear Dr. Kay Lambe,

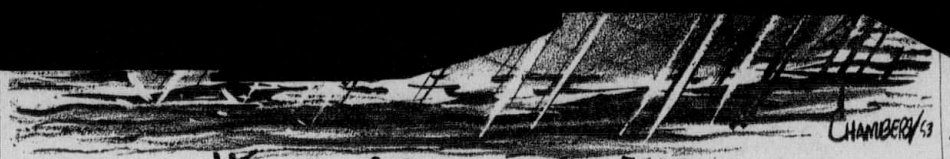

My brother sent me this cutting from the Aberdeen Press and Journal of Dec. 24th, and I told him that to make any comment here might only give it unnecessary attention. But I thought I might let you know that my mother's and father's interest in Spiritualism only began in 1932 when they read a book called On the Edge of the Etheric and made acquaintance with the author Arthur Findlay.

So it was only after that that my mother found that Mr. King had been interested, and discussed it with him.

I think the statement that she "persuaded" him to take it up may have been mixed up with the time when he was not sure whether to remain in academic work or to take up politics. Then I believe she urged him to go in for politics. ..."

Messages From King?

John Prebble in The Sunday Dispatch, London

Towards the end of his life Mackenzie King told some of his close friends that he was firmly resolved to publish a full account of his psychic experiences.

He died before such a resolve was put into execution. Or so we must believe, since there has been no hint that the book was ever started.

Indeed, if we accept the bland denials of his literary executors in Ottawa, there is not a word about spiritualism in the whole of his vast legacy of diaries and correspondence.

But come, we need not be that credulous. Scepticism is a sharp spur to further knowledge, and we should be using it here. What I have learnt about Mackenzie King's secret life has convinced me that among the locked-up papers in Laurier House there could be found an even more fascinating story than I have been able to piece together.

My reasons for so believing are obvious enough. Let us begin with an exercise in common sense.

No Letters

It is customary enough for men of intellect and sensitivity to commit to paper, by diary or by letters, the thoughts that are occupying their minds. And King was a great diarist, a great letter-writer.

What has happened to such writing? What, too, has happened to the notes he took during the sittings he had with British mediums? When he returned to Canada he would often make copies of these notes and send them to the mediums concerned.

What has happened to the correspondence he had with Miss Geraldine Cummins and Mrs. Helen Hughes concerning the sittings they gave him? Even if he did not keep copies of his own letters surely he did not immediately destroy their replies?

Idea For Book

There is also King's correspondence with Dr. Glen Hamilton, a Canadian and an internationally known medium.

Canadians have been made aware of the existence of this correspondence by the publication of excerpts from it in a prairie newspaper. Dr. Hamilton's widow has written to a Winnipeg newspaper claiming that when Mackenzie King visited her husband he declared his emphatic intention of writing a book about his spiritualist beliefs.

What is more, says Mrs. Hamilton, Mackenzie King once made tentative inquiries about securing a secretary to assist him in the work.

So far as can be gathered from the little of Mackenzie King's letters which Mrs. Hamilton has allowed to be published, the Canadian Premier paid a secret visit to Dr. Hamilton in 1933 and there took part in some psychic experiments.

He was apparently deeply impressed. To Dr. Hamilton he wrote of "one of the most memorable experiences of my life" and asked to be kept in close touch with Hamilton's further discoveries.

What has happened to Hamilton's answer to this request? Can Mackenzie King's executors not find it among the papers?

A New Plane

It may be claimed, of course, that the letters quoted by Mrs. Hamilton are not genuine. If so, it must be concluded that she is extremely foolhardy and that the editor of the newspaper in which they have been published does not know his job.

In one of the letters Mackenzie King asked Hamilton for some prayers said to have been conveyed to the doctor by the spirit of Robert Louis Stevenson.

"I expected very much from what I had heard of your researches from others," says another letter, "but the results surpassed all expectations. I cannot thank you and Mrs. Hamilton enough for having taken me into your confidence and having permitted me to share in the very rich inheritance which is now yours.

"It does seem to me that you are singularly blessed, and that through you a great blessing is about to be bestowed on the world.

"Had I not seen the photographs you have, and heard from your lips what you read and told me, also had I not had some previous experiences of my own, I just could not have believed it possible. . . .

"I feel I have come to a new plane of existence itself."

A new plane of existence . . . . These are significant words, testifying to the depth of Mackenzie King's conviction. Yet there is nothing, apparently, in his legacy of papers that echoes it.

His Secrets

What is going on in that quiet study at Laurier House, where stands the five-inch crystal ball, and where Fred Macgregor and Eduard Handy are at present preparing the King archives for publication?

These two men are probably the most privileged in the whole Dominion. Nobody else, no Cabinet Minister not even an outside stenographer, has been allowed to examine the Mackenzie King diary.

Daily either Handy or Macgregor locks himself in an upstairs room at Laurier House, takes out the diary and sits down and dictates. Into a recording instrument he reads the less explosive, the less startling passages which have been chosen by the executors or were indicated by King himself. These passages are later transcribed by a typist.

When the reading is finished the diary will be destroyed. Gone will be the Premier's devastatingly frank appraisal of his political colleagues. And gone too, in my belief, will be the secret, sensitive thoughts on spiritualism which he committed to paper.

But the story of the Spiritualist Premier is snowballing in Canada. Take the case of Dr. J. E. Hett, for example.

Spirit Talks

Dr. Hett is an aged cancer specialist, head of the Hett Cancer Treatment and Research Foundation. He lives in Windsor, Ontario.

He claims that he was responsible for many of the sittings with mediums which King attended, both in Canada and the United States.

He also claims that he has had numerous conversations with the spirit of the Premier since the latter's death. Spiritualists generally are taking an active interest in "evidence" that Mackenzie King is trying to make contact with the world he left three years ago.

At the London Spiritual Alliance recently I was told that there had been such "evidence" It is, perhaps, to be expected.

To return however, to Dr. Hett. My colleague in Ottawa got in touch with him and invited the doctor to make some comment on his personal recollections of Mackenzie King.

Dr. Hett's comments were corroborative, but lacking in detail. He agreed that the latest contact he had had with Mackenzie King had been through a direct-voice medium at Chesterfield Spiritualist Camp.

But it seems that Dr. Hett proposes to tell his own story in his own time.

"I knew more about Mr. King's spiritualist activities than anyone else. But I don't care to release the information at this time.

"I have to write the story myself at some future date. I have read about King using a crystal ball and planchettes. The real story told me would be an eye-opener."

Roosevelt Too

Spiritualists, understandably perhaps, do not like references to Mackenzie King's interest in horoscopes, crystal gazing, and fortune telling. But his sittings with tea-leaf readers were well-known to many of his associates while he was alive.

In face even King himself was not aware of how many did know.

But once a secret is out everybody has to talk about it. In Ottawa Mr. A. J. Pinard claims that he knew about it for years.

"I obtained the information first-hand" he told reporters. "Mrs. Wilder told me she was engaged by King once a week during the war, and came to Ottawa just for that purpose. She was also consulted by President Roosevelt and flew to Washington once a week too."

Controversy

Well, there it is, that's the story of William Lyon Mackenzie King, statesman and spiritualist. In the long view of history, perhaps, the odd jig-saw will make an understandable pattern. At the moment it still makes for controversy.

There are, for example, the Agnostics who find it ironically amusing.

There is the Canadian public, deliciously thrilled, and the Canadian Administration uncomfortably ill-at-ease.

And then there are the spiritualists themselves, proud to find that one more of the world's great may be counted among their ranks, yet faintly disappointed with the way in which writers like myself have chosen to inform you about it.

The Queer Story Of Mackenzie King

Crystal-Gazing Premier

Believed In Supernatural —And 'Read' Tea-leaves

Believed He Made Contact With His Dead Pet Dog

ABOUT a mile from Canada's Parliament Buildings in Ottawa, and set in the quiet Sandy Hill district, Laurier House has become the most intriguing building in the whole Dominion.

Why this should be so is easily explained. It holds the key to the fascinating secret life of William Lyon Mackenzie King, greatest of all Canada's Premiers.

It is a rambling, three-storeyed structure of no outward beauty, built of wood, with an encircling veranda like many of the country's old houses.

By John Prebble

When Mackenzie King died three years ago at the age of 75 he left the house (and an endowment of $225,000) to the nation. He hoped that it would become a museum and a place of study.

Instead it has almost become a circus sideshow. Every year thousands of tourists cross its lawn, walk up the veranda, seek out the library, and there stare curiously at a glistening object on the grand piano.

IT IS A MAGNIFICENT FIVE-INCH CRYSTAL BALL.

There it is, honey, say the tourists, the old guy used to look into the future with that. Wonder if they have his ouija-board, too.*

British Medium

CANADIANS have experienced an electric thrill from the recent discovery that their great and respected leader was also a dabbler in the occult, that he liked to have fortunes read from tea-leaves, gaze into a crystal ball, play with a ouija-board.

Even now some of them are reluctant to accept the hard fact that Mackenzie King regularly consulted spiritualist mediums and professed himself highly satisfied with his efforts to get through "to the other side."

Mackenzie King's surviving colleagues find it hard to believe that when he went off to grave international conferences he also fixed up a programme of appointments with British mediums.

To understand their reluctance, consider the sort of public man Mackenzie King was.

Great Statesman

AN austere figure, a distant man was this confirmed bachelor. From the memories of my boyhood on the Canadian prairies listening to the political arguments of adults, I can recall the impression of Mackenzie King as a great and powerful man, realistic, shrewd, hard-headed, uncomplicated by normal human frailties.

It was the man most people saw. He was Canada's Liberal Premier for an unbroken period of nearly 22 years. He had a hand in every key development of his country. He knitted French and British together in unity. He changed Canadians from pioneers with the frontier-dust still on their shoulders to citizens of a world Power.

Roosevelt and Churchill were his associates in global politics. He was a central figure at Dominion Conferences. He had that indefinable touch that makes a statesman.

Yet to his people he was cold and colourless. He did not smoke, drank sparingly. The jokes that were told about him lacked affection. A devout Presbyterian, he would walk alone to church every Sunday. He could work 12 hours at a stretch without showing exhaustion.

His greatness made Canadians overlook his greyness of character, his hunched figure, wispy hair, pensive eyes, and lack of friendliness.

The guy's a great man, they said so what if he's dull?

Rebel Ancestor

DULL? Few could have suspected that Mackenzie King's private life was inspired by the belief that through an English medium, Mrs. Helen Hughes, he had been able to make contact with a dead and beloved pet dog.

The news of his psychic and occult interests broke soon after his death, and the evidence continues to accumulate.

The odd thing is that, now the truth is out, certain known characteristics of the man fit into the new pattern, too. To Canadians the only really colourful thing about Mackenzie King was the fact that his maternal grandfather was the rebel William Lyon Mackenzie who led an armed revolt against the Crown in 1837.

This Highland Scot was fierce, noble, and fey. He once said: "A Mackenzie does not die without first getting a warning from over there." His grandson sometimes quoted these words.

Tough Employer

MACKENZIE King liked to collect symbolic reminders of his ancestor. He was delighted when a dealer sold him the rebel's silver cutlery. He would stand, with eyes closed, on the ground where Mackenzie fought his forlorn campaign.

Most Canadians knew that the 500-acre estate at Kingsmere, 12 miles out of Ottawa, was the place to which Mackenzie King retired when he wished to be alone. There were five houses on the estate and, according to his mood, he would move from one to the other.

He liked to say he found "a renewal of strength in this quiet place." But as a land-owner he drove tough bargains with his neighbours, kept his staff on duty until well past midnight.

Saw Himself Eat

AT Kingsmere he always dined alone. For company he placed a beautiful, sixteen-panelled mirror opposite the table and between two windows, and stared at his reflection as he ate.

Now Kingsmere belongs to the Gatineau National Park, and tourists are discovering that the grounds are filled with fake ruins which Mackenzie King had constructed of masonry brought over from Scots abbeys, and English public buildings.

He would walk among them, leaning on one of his vast collection of curious walking-sticks, accompanied only by a dog. To him a dog was "the one unselfish friend a man can have in this selfish world." Of human animals he said: "I've always found I can control people better if I don't see too much of them."

He owned three Irish terriers in turn, called them all Pat. Pat the First was his favourite, it lived for 17 years. Of its death, Mackenzie King liked to tell this story, prefacing it by saying, a little dishonestly, "I'm not psychic, but . . . ."

Great and respected leader — he dabbled in the occult.

The night before the animal's death Mackenzie King's watch fell from his bedside table. He found it in the morning with the hands stopped at twenty-past-four.

"I knew," he would say, "as if a voice were speaking that Pat would die within 24 hours."

And die Pat did the next night, climbing on to his master's ugly, brass-railed bed (one of the three Mackenzie King owned) and expiring at twenty-past-four.

Hoarder Of Trifles

MACKENZIE King grieved, but his grief was lifted one day in a room at the headquarters of the London Spiritualist Alliance. There Mrs. Hughes, in a trance, told him: "Your sister is here, and she has a beautiful dog with her. The dog doesn't seem to have been over very long."

In Laurier House Mackenzie King made a little shrine to the dog, "who was to me all that a child should be to a parent."

The shrine is still there, a framed portrait of the dog, and a prose eulogy to Man's Best Friend. Leaning against a bust of Louis Pasteur is Pat's collar, bearing its licence tab "Ottawa 1, 1938."

While he lived nobody suspected Mackenzie King of idiosyncrasies, not even his political enemies, to whom he was a "horse-trader." Yet he was an inveterate hoarder of trifles. He hated to throw anything away; saved everything, from bales of Christmas cards to pieces of wood.

He once refused, for some unexplained reason, to contribute 10 dollars toward a common fund to stock a Kingsmere lake with fish.

He was a rich man, his estate was worth nearly a million dollars, yet for most of his life he believed himself on the edge of poverty. This quirk nearly lost him his beloved crystal ball. He saw it in a London shop years ago, but shook his head at its price.

A wealthy New Yorker, A. H. Caspary, however, bought it for him, and Mackenzie King took it home to stand it with a Celtic cross on the piano. He told guests how "fascinating" he found it.

The piano is another key to his private life, for it once belonged to his mother, the rebel Mackenzie's daughter. Mackenzie King was devoted to her. He sought out mediums who, he believed, would enable him to communicate with her after death.

Rejected 'Message'

NOT that he always took her advice. A few years before his death he rejected the "message" she sent telling him not to work so hard. Perhaps he recognised it as a "Mackenzie warning," perhaps not.

Isabel King's portrait stands in the library as it did in his day, with a vase of fresh flowers before it. Visitors, when he was alive, were puzzled by Mackenzie King's behaviour at parting. Momentarily he would face the portrait, as if he were inviting his mother to say goodbye to his guests too.

Some spiritualists stoutly deny that Mackenzie King ever sought guidance on political matters, though he did "talk with" men who had died, like Roosevelt and Sir Wilfrid Laurier. But when I put the question to Miss Lindaf-Hageby who, with Nina, Duchess of Hamilton, introduced Mackenzie King to spiritualists in Britain, she said firmly:

"Mr. King took guidance for granted. I believe that he must have been seeking guidance for himself in his work."

Secret In Diaries

STATEMENTS like that are now leading Canadian Liberals to minimise Mackenzie King's psychic activities for fear the story will seriously damage the administration. They strongly deny suggestions about the tea-cups, crystal ball, and horoscopes.

But John A. Stevenson, prominent Canadian journalist, claims that his first wife, from whom he is now divorced, frequently exchanged letters with Mackenzie King on the subject of horoscopes.

From what I have learnt I have no doubt that the full and frank story of Mackenzie King's secret life could be told from what he wrote himself, and from what may be among his voluminous legacy of diaries and papers. But the public is not likely to read it.

Cannot See Papers

HIS will instructed that all his documents were to be handed over to his literary executors, who were to have the general right to publish or destroy his diaries except where otherwise indicated.

His papers are now being prepared for publication and the diaries are a bogy in current Canadian politics for they are believed to be devastatingly frank about living Canadians. They may well be frank about other things.

In Ottawa Mackenzie King's private secretary, Fred McGregor, and J. Edouard Handy, secretary of staff at Laurier House, are assembling the late Premier's papers. Outsiders are refused permission to see the documents. My colleague in Ottawa, upon my request, has made several unsuccessful applications. But Handy and McGregor politely shake their heads and deny that there is anything among the papers to indicate Mackenzie King's interest in the occult or spiritualism.

Notes Of Voices

THIS is hard to believe, I know that in 1947, and again in 1948, Mackenzie King was given sittings by the Irish authoress and private medium Geraldine Cummins, who specialises in "automatic writing." This writing, which Mackenzie King later told Miss Cummins contained messages from Roosevelt, he took away.

When he attended sittings with other mediums in London he was often accompanied by a stenographer who took verbatim notes of the voices heard. Sometimes Mackenzie King made notes himself.

It seems unlikely that he, the inveterate hoarder, should have destroyed them. More likely they went into his private archives. More likely Messrs. Handy and McGregor are this day loyally carrying out the terms of Mackenzie King's will and destroying them, believing it all for the best.

But the story of the secret life of William Lyon Mackenzie King cannot be wholly destroyed. Too many people in Canada and Britain knew about it after all.

NEXT WEEK. — How Mackenzie King became interested in the occult. The story of Queen Victoria's watch and the meeting in Geneva with Nina, Duchess of Hamilton. In the Spiritualist Church in London I talk with the woman who claims that through her Mackenzie King made contact with his dead mother and sister. How he kept these sittings a secret.

* A board bearing the letters of the alphabet and used to receive "spirit messages." The fingers are placed on a heart-shaped disc which rests on castors at one end and a pencil at the other. The spirits are believed to guide the pencil toward the letters and spell out words.

Hoarder Of Trifles

MACKENZIE King grieved, but his grief was lifted one day in a room at the headquarters of the London Spiritualist Alliance. There Mrs. Hughes, in a trance, told him: "Your sister is here, and she has a beautiful dog with her. The dog doesn't seem to have been over very long."

In Laurier House Mackenzie King made a little shrine to the dog, "who was to me all that a child should be to a parent."

The shrine is still there, a framed portrait of the dog, and a prose eulogy to Man's Best Friend. Leaning against a bust of Louis Pasteur is Pat's collar, bearing its licence tab "Ottawa 1, 1938."

While he lived nobody suspected Mackenzie King of idiosyncrasies, not even his political enemies, to whom he was a "horse-trader." Yet he was an inveterate hoarder of trifles. He hated to throw anything away; saved everything, from bales of Christmas cards to pieces of wood.

He once refused, for some unexplained reason, to contribute 10 dollars toward a common fund to stock a Kingsmere lake with fish.

He was a rich man; his estate was worth nearly a million dollars, yet for most of his life he believed himself on the edge of poverty. This quirk nearly lost him his beloved crystal ball. He saw it in a London shop years ago, but shook his head at its price.

A wealthy New Yorker, A. H. Caspary, however, bought it for him, and Mackenzie King took it home to stand it with a Celtic cross on the piano. He told guests how "fascinating" he found it.

The piano is another key to his private life, for it once belonged to his mother, the rebel Mackenzie's daughter. Mackenzie King was devoted to her. He sought out mediums who, he believed, would enable him to communicate with her after death.

Rejected 'Message'

NOT that he always took her advice. A few years before his death he rejected the "message" she sent telling him not to work so hard. Perhaps he recognised it as a "Mackenzie warning," perhaps not.

Isabel King's portrait stands in the library as it did in his day, with a vase of fresh flowers before it. Visitors, when he was alive, were puzzled by Mackenzie King's behaviour at parting. Momentarily he would face the portrait, as if he were inviting his mother to say goodbye to his guests too.

Some spiritualists stoutly deny that Mackenzie King ever sought guidance on political matters, though he did "talk with" men who had died, like Roosevelt and Sir Wilfrid Laurier. But when I put the question to Miss Lindaf-Hageby who, with Nina, Duchess of Hamilton, introduced Mackenzie King to spiritualists in Britain, she said firmly:

"Mr. King took guidance for granted. I believe that he must have been seeking guidance for himself in his work."

Secret In Diaries

STATEMENTS like that are now leading Canadian Liberals to minimise Mackenzie King's psychic activities for fear the story will seriously damage the administration. They strongly deny suggestions about the tea-cups, crystal ball, and horoscopes.

But John A. Stevenson, prominent Canadian journalist, claims that his first wife, from whom he is now divorced, frequently exchanged letters with Mackenzie King on the subject of horoscopes.

From what I have learnt I have no doubt that the full and frank story of Mackenzie King's secret life could be told from what he wrote himself, and from what may be among his voluminous legacy of diaries and papers. But the public is not likely to read it.

Cannot See Papers

HIS will instructed that all his documents were to be handed over to his literary executors, who were to have the general right to publish or destroy his diaries except where otherwise indicated.

His papers are now being prepared for publication and the diaries are a bogy in current Canadian politics for they are believed to be devastatingly frank about living Canadians. They may well be frank about other things.

In Ottawa Mackenzie King's private secretary, Fred McGregor, and J. Edouard Handy, secretary of staff at Laurier House, are assembling the late Premier's papers. Outsiders are refused permission to see the documents. My colleague in Ottawa, upon my request, has made several unsuccessful applications. But Handy and McGregor politely shake their heads and deny that there is anything among the papers to indicate Mackenzie King's interest in the occult or spiritualism.

Notes Of Voices

THIS is hard to believe, I know that in 1947, and again in 1948, Mackenzie King was given sittings by the Irish authoress and private medium Geraldine Cummins, who specialises in "automatic writing." This writing, which Mackenzie King later told Miss Cummins contained messages from Roosevelt, he took away.

When he attended sittings with other mediums in London he was often accompanied by a stenographer who took verbatim notes of the voices heard. Sometimes Mackenzie King made notes himself.

It seems unlikely that he, the inveterate hoarder, should have destroyed them. More likely they went into his private archives. More likely Messrs. Handy and McGregor are this day loyally carrying out the terms of Mackenzie King's will and destroying them, believing it all for the best.

But the story of the secret life of William Lyon Mackenzie King cannot be wholly destroyed. Too many people in Canada and Britain knew about it after all.

NEXT WEEK. — How Mackenzie King became interested in the occult. The story of Queen Victoria's watch and the meeting in Geneva with Nina, Duchess of Hamilton. In the Spiritualist Church in London I talk with the woman who claims that through her Mackenzie King made contact with his dead mother and sister. How he kept these sittings a secret.

Dear Fred:

Herewith is the series of four articles making up "The Queer Story of Mackenzie King - Spiritualist Prime Minister" which appeared in the SUNDAY DISPATCH of June 7, 14, 21 and 28. The articles are signed by John Prebble. Whether this is a real name or a pen-name I do not know.

The articles referred in one or two passages to a "collaborator" in Ottawa and they may represent a composite job. The weekly DISPATCH is a Sunday paper with a substantial circulation, I should say well over a million copies, published by the Rothermere group. They may have had a special Sunday feature on Mackenzie King to compete with the Christie case, that has now given way to speculation about the love-life and heartthrobs of Captain Peter Townsend.

Two or three people have mentioned the subject of Mr. King's spiritual adventures since the appearance of the weekly DISPATCH articles but, as far as I know, no other paper over here has published any comment on it.

Yours sincerely,

F.A.McGregor, Esq.,

The Queer Story Of Mackenzie King

Crystal-Gazing Premier

Believed In Supernatural —And 'Read' Tea-leaves

Believed He Made Contact With His Dead Pet Dog

ABOUT a mile from Canada's Parliament Buildings in Ottawa, and set in the quiet Sandy Hill district, Laurier House has become the most intriguing building in the whole Dominion.

Why this should be so is easily explained. It holds the key to the fascinating secret life of William Lyon Mackenzie King, greatest of all Canada's Premiers.

It is a rambling, three-storeyed structure of no outward beauty, built of wood, with an encircling veranda like many of the country's old houses.

By John Prebble

When Mackenzie King died three years ago at the age of 75 he left the house (and an endowment of $225,000) to the nation. He hoped that it would become a museum and a place of study.

Instead it has almost become a circus sideshow. Every year thousands of tourists cross its lawn, walk up the veranda, seek out the library, and there stare curiously at a glistening object on the grand piano.

IT IS A MAGNIFICENT FIVE-INCH CRYSTAL BALL.

There it is, honey, say the tourists, the old guy used to look into the future with that. Wonder if they have his ouija-board, too.*

British Medium

CANADIANS have experienced an electric thrill from the recent discovery that their great and respected leader was also a dabbler in the occult, that he liked to have fortunes read from tea-leaves, gaze into a crystal ball, play with a ouija-board.

Even now some of them are reluctant to accept the hard fact that Mackenzie King regularly consulted spiritualist mediums and professed himself highly satisfied with his efforts to get through "to the other side."

Mackenzie King's surviving colleagues find it hard to believe that when he went off to grave international conferences he also fixed up a programme of appointments with British mediums.

To understand their reluctance, consider the sort of public man Mackenzie King was.

Great Statesman

AN austere figure, a distant man was this confirmed bachelor. From the memories of my boyhood on the Canadian prairies listening to the political arguments of adults, I can recall the impression of Mackenzie King as a great and powerful man, realistic, shrewd, hard-headed, uncomplicated by normal human frailties.

It was the man most people saw. He was Canada's Liberal Premier for an unbroken period of nearly 22 years. He had a hand in every key development of his country. He knitted French and British together in unity. He changed Canadians from pioneers with the frontier-dust still on their shoulders to citizens of a world Power.

Roosevelt and Churchill were his associates in global politics. He was a central figure at Dominion Conferences. He had that indefinable touch that makes a statesman.

Yet to his people he was cold and colourless. He did not smoke, drank sparingly. The jokes that were told about him lacked affection. A devout Presbyterian, he would walk alone to church every Sunday. He could work 12 hours at a stretch without showing exhaustion.

His greatness made Canadians overlook his greyness of character, his hunched figure, wispy hair, pensive eyes, and lack of friendliness.

The guy's a great man, they said, so what if he's dull?

* A board bearing the letters of the alphabet and used to receive "spirit messages." The fingers are placed on a heart-shaped disc which rests on castors at one end and a pencil at the other. The spirits are believed to guide the pencil toward the letters and spell out words.

Rebel Ancestor

DULL? Few could have suspected that Mackenzie King's private life was inspired by the belief that through an English medium, Mrs. Helen Hughes, he had been able to make contact with a dead and beloved pet dog.

The news of his psychic and occult interests broke soon after his death, and the evidence continues to accumulate.

The odd thing is that, now the truth is out, certain known characteristics of the man fit into the new pattern, too. To Canadians the only really colourful thing about Mackenzie King was the fact that his maternal grandfather was the rebel William Lyon Mackenzie who led an armed revolt against the Crown in 1837.

This Highland Scot was fierce, noble, and fey. He once said: "A Mackenzie does not die without first getting a warning from over there." His grandson sometimes quoted these words.

Tough Employer

MACKENZIE King liked to collect symbolic reminders of his ancestor. He was delighted when a dealer sold him the rebel's silver cutlery. He would stand, with eyes closed, on the ground where Mackenzie fought his forlorn campaign.

Most Canadians knew that the 500-acre estate at Kingsmere, 12 miles out of Ottawa, was the place to which Mackenzie King retired when he wished to be alone. There were five houses on the estate and, according to his mood, he would move from one to the other.

He liked to say he found "a renewal of strength in this quiet place." But as a land-owner he drove tough bargains with his neighbours, kept his staff on duty until well past midnight.

Saw Himself Eat

AT Kingsmere he always dined alone. For company he placed a beautiful, sixteen-panelled mirror opposite the table and between two windows, and stared at his reflection as he ate.

Now Kingsmere belongs to the Gatineau National Park, and tourists are discovering that the grounds are filled with fake ruins which Mackenzie King had constructed of masonry brought over from Scots abbeys, and English public buildings.

He would walk among them, leaning on one of his vast collection of curious walking-sticks, accompanied only by a dog. To him a dog was "the one unselfish friend a man can have in this selfish world." Of human animals he said: "I've always found I can control people better if I don't see too much of them."

He owned three Irish terriers in turn, called them all Pat. Pat the First was his favourite, it lived for 17 years. Of its death, Mackenzie King liked to tell this story, prefacing it by saying, a little dishonestly, "I'm not psychic, but . . . ."

Great and respected leader — he dabbled in the occult.

The night before the animal's death Mackenzie King's watch fell from his bedside table. He found it in the morning with the hands stopped at twenty-past-four.

"I knew," he would say, "as if a voice were speaking that Pat would die within 24 hours."

And die Pat did the next night, climbing on to his master's ugly, brass-railed bed (one of the three Mackenzie King owned) and expiring at twenty-past-four.

Hoarder Of Trifles

MACKENZIE King grieved, but his grief was lifted one day in a room at the headquarters of the London Spiritualist Alliance. There Mrs. Hughes, in a trance, told him: "Your sister is here, and she has a beautiful dog with her. The dog doesn't seem to have been over very long."

Dead Mother Warned Him About His Health

Duchess Declared He Was 'Guided' On World Affairs

The Queer Story Of Mackenzie King

Spiritualist Prime Minister

William Lyon Mackenzie King, a rich, austere bachelor, was for 22 years Prime Minister of Canada.

Now, three years after his death at the age of 75, it has been disclosed that he regularly consulted spiritualist mediums and believed he was in touch with such famous men as the late President Roosevelt and Sir Wilfred Laurier.

THE reason for Mackenzie King's strange sally into the supernatural was not exceptional. Many people turn to such things during profound personal grief.

And his grief had been anguished.

His family, remember, was Scots-Canadian, and like many such it was closely knit by ties of affection and loyalty.

His mother played a dominant emotional rôle, and her death in 1917 was hard for him to accept, particularly since he was not present at the time.

On her insistence he had gone back to fight an election campaign.

Within a small span of years he lost not only his mother but also his beloved brother, Dr. Macdougall King, and his favourite sister, Isabel.

They left him a lonely if unembittered man. In that loneliness he would not accept the finality of their death.

He already believed in life after death; now he was ready to be persuaded that it was possible for the living to communicate with the dead.

Two people were so to persuade him. The first was the late Marchioness of Aberdeen.

By John Prebble

A Blessing

THE second was the direct-voice American medium, Mrs. Etta Wriedt.

Mackenzie King, in later years, often paid gracious tribute to Lady Aberdeen for the part she played in introducing him to what he called a "great blessing." A British medium has told me how delighted he was when he received a "message" from her shortly before his own death.

Not only did she discuss spiritualism with him in those early days, but she also put him in touch with Mrs. Wriedt, and it was this famous and somewhat histrionic medium who gave Mackenzie King his first sittings. So far as I can understand it was through her that he first made "contact" with his dead family.

FROM ALL ACCOUNTS OF MRS. WRIEDT'S ACTIVITIES IT SEEMS THAT SHE WOULD CONVEY HER MESSAGES BY MEANS OF A SILVER TRUMPET THAT ROLLED VIOLENTLY ABOUT THE FLOOR OF THE ROOM, RAPPING AT THE SHINS OF HER AUDIENCE AND SPILLING OUT WORDS IN A DIVERSE SELECTION OF ACCENTS.

Many people have sworn to the authenticity of the voices which are said to have come from this trumpet. Others say that when it claimed to be the voice of some dead Frenchman it spoke with an appallingly un-Gallic accent.

Whenever Mackenzie King found someone whom he could trust with the secret of his interest in spiritualism he would always tell the story of how he became convinced of Mrs. Wriedt's powers.

It seems that the wife of one of his Liberal friends lost her father's will, and having looked everywhere without success she went to consult Mrs. Wriedt.

"Mrs. Wriedt mentioned its exact place," King would say when telling the story, "in a chest of drawers in a house in France; and there it was discovered."

This, it seemed, was enough to convince Mackenzie King.

He also believed that Mrs. Wriedt was in astral communication with dead Queen Victoria, and that one of the voices emanating from her gyrating trumpet was the late monarch's.

A Watch

BELIEVING this, it was not surprising that he willingly carried out a mission entrusted to him by Mrs. Wriedt. She had in her possession a watch that was said to have belonged to the Queen.

Queen Victoria, according to the story, had intended to bequeath the watch to a Miss Georgiana Eagle "for her meritoriously extraordinary clairvoyance," but since Miss Eagle predeceased the Queen the spiritualist journalist W. T. Stead was asked to hand the watch on to the medium he considered most deserving.

Thus it came into Mrs. Wriedt's possession, and in her turn she desired that Mackenzie King should take it back to England when she died. He handed it over to the London Spiritualist Alliance, an organisation which was instrumental in finding him mediums.

A five-inch crystal ball now stands on the piano in Mackenzie King's old home, Laurier House, Ottawa. Round it are autographed pictures of the Royal family, and other famous people. On the wall is an oil painting by Lord Alexander, former Governor General of Canada, who presented it to Mackenzie King.

Before this happened Mackenzie King had already made firm contacts with British spiritualists, and the manner in which this came about is fantastic enough.

Nina, Duchess of Hamilton.

It occurred in 1936 when he was fulfilling his duties as vice-president of the League of Nations Assembly in Geneva.

The strain of international affairs with the rise of Hitler, the wars in Abyssinia and Spain must have been intense, but such was the amazing two-compartment nature of Mackenzie King's mind that he would enthusiastically plunge into spiritualist activity whenever time permitted.

Once more it was a peeress who played an important part in the life of the Canadian Premier. She was the late Nina Duchess of Hamilton.

Through her and her friend Miss Lind-af-Hageby (president of the London Spiritualist Alliance for over eight years) Mackenzie King made lasting contacts with spiritualists in Britain, who, he said, gave him great serenity of spirit.

I went to see Miss Lind-af-Hageby, to learn from her what I could of Mackenzie King's introduction to spiritualism in this country. I found her at the London headquarters of the Animal Defence and Anti-Vivisection Society, a serene and gentle old lady who well remembered that day in Geneva 17 years ago.

We sat by a window overlooking Green Park while she told me that at that time she and the Duchess were operating the International Humanitarian Bureau in Geneva in an effort to persuade the League to accept the extension of justice to animals as part of the movement for world peace.

She told me that the first time she ever saw Mackenzie King was at a diplomatic party.

"The Duchess and I spoke to him because we had heard someone say mockingly that he believed he could communicate with his dead mother.

"The fact that so great a man was interested in spiritualism was enough for us, and we approached him and raised the subject. He told us how extremely important he considered it, and that he sought evidence of communication with the dead. He believed he had already made such communication with his mother and sister.

"I think it was a relief for him to be able to talk so freely with us, and he was delighted when we assured him that we would introduce him to spiritualists in Britain."

This introduction took place on October 28, 1936, when the Duchess and Miss Lind-af-Hageby organised a party for Mackenzie King at the Kensington headquarters of the Alliance. There he made his wide and enduring contacts in this country.

His Mother

AMONG those he met was the famous Mrs. Osborne Leonard, who is said to have convinced Sir Oliver Lodge of spiritualism.

Also present was a Scotsman, J. J. MacIndoe, who was later to break the news of Mackenzie King's spiritualistic activities by a letter to the Psychic News.

King visited the Duchess and Miss Lind-af-Hageby at their homes during 1936 and 1937. They exchanged experiences in spiritualistic activity. He told them his story about Mrs. Wriedt and his successes in getting "through" to his mother. He spent some time with them also at the Duchess's flat in Paris.

Be it understood that he was not in Europe at this time on purely personal business. He had come across to work at the League of Nations, to attend the Coronation of George VI., and to attend the Imperial Conference.

He was a man who loved world politics. He once described it as "a fascinating game" to a British medium, who warned him that it would affect his health.

During those years in Europe the calls on his time must have been doubly welcome, because they made it possible for him to develop his experiments in spiritualism.

This juxtaposition of interests raises an important question. Was he seeking only personal guidance, or was he desiring also some political help from his contacts with "the other side"? When he was asked this he always denied it, but before her death the Duchess of Hamilton declared her belief that he must, in fact, have obtained guidance in world affairs.

Miss Lind-af-Hageby also subscribes to this view. "He took guidance for granted," she says, and she feels that he must also have welcomed advice on world affairs, whether he took it or not.

Who was making this other-world communication for him? The London Spiritualist Alliance put him in touch with as many mediums as he desired, and probably the ones he saw most were the late Hester Dowden and Mrs. Helen Hughes.

I sought out Mrs. Hughes, and found her at the London Spiritual Mission in Bayswater, of which she is a minister as well as being a professional medium.

'Clairaudience'

IT is a building tucked away in a back garden in Pembridge-place.

We talked in an upstairs room, heavy with the heat of an electric fire although the May sun was warm outside. Mrs. Hughes was willing to talk freely, but she expressed herself tired from her work and apologised if her memory did not always produce the information I desired.

She is a quiet, grey-haired woman with a pleasant manner, and it is easy to understand how a spiritually lonely man like Mackenzie King warmed to her.

Her method of communication is known as "clairaudience." It is claimed that she hears voices and reports what they say to her clients. On occasions she may see faces and bodily shapes.

Sometimes she may be in a deep trance (and accordingly can remember only what her client cares to tell her about the messages) and sometimes she is partly conscious of what is happening.

Her first meeting with the Premier was in a room at the L.S.A. sometime in the 'thirties. She had no idea who he was.

"They never tell us, of course. I was just told to be ready for my gentleman at 10.30 in the morning, and at that precise moment he came in and sat down without saying a word. He had brought a stenographer with him.

"I remember that one of the voices I heard on that first occasion was a man's. He said he was a doctor, and was the brother of my client, and I got the name Mac. He talked a lot about the family and asked my client if he remembered certain things.

"When the sitting was over my client went away, and I still didn't know his identity. He came a second time, some weeks later I think, and th time, when the sitting was over, he asked me if I knew who he was. When I said no, he smiled and told me.

"He said that he knew he had been able to make contact with his brother through our sittings, and they had both discussed things only they could have known about. At later sittings he did not bring a stenographer, but took his own notes."

The late Marchioness of Aberdeen.

Through both Mrs. Hughes and Hester Dowden (who transmitted her messages by means of "automatic writing") King seemed to believe that he was able to make contact with his mother, his brother, and sister. Mrs. Hughes told me that on no occasion, so far as she can recall, did he discuss affairs of state.

"You must understand," she said, "it was to him as if his mother was living over here, and when he visited England he came to talk with her. He wouldn't ask her advice on political affairs, for naturally he knew more about it than she did, he just wanted to talk about family affairs."

Through her "clairaudience," said Mrs. Hughes, Mackenzie King received a warning from his mother about his health. Mrs. King is supposed to have told her son not to put too much strain on his heart.

He did not take this advice, and why he did not may have been due to other psychic experiences he was having at that time, about which I shall tell you when I discuss his sittings with the Irish authoress, Geraldine Cummins.

IT WAS DURING HIS SITTINGS WITH MRS. HUGHES THAT MACKENZIE KING IS SAID TO HAVE MADE CONTACT WITH HIS DEAD TERRIER PAT. ACCORDING TO THE STORY MRS. HUGHES TOLD ME, SHE RECEIVED MESSAGES FROM ISABEL KING SHORTLY AFTER THE DEATH OF THE ANIMAL, IN WHICH MACKENZIE KING WAS ASSURED THAT THE DOG HAD "PASSED OVER" SUCCESSFULLY.

"This," says Mrs. Hughes, "was a great comfort."

Kept Secret

IT would be impossible to give a figure for the number of mediums Mackenzie King must have consulted in Britain. Only to those with whom he believed he had made strong communication did he reveal his identity.

Nor will the London Spiritualist Alliance reveal the dates and names of the sittings arranged for him. When I called upon the Alliance with the intention of enlisting its help toward this end, I was received courteously, but I was told nothing.

"You must understand," I was firmly informed, "many famous people come to us. They come for guidance on deeply personal matters, and with the understanding that their calls are confidential. We cannot betray that confidence, even after death."

I think, however, that it was only political caution that made William Lyon Mackenzie King keep the fact of his spiritualistic activities within a close circle of acquaintance. So ardent a believer was he that, had it been safe to do so, he would dearly have liked the whole world to know of his beliefs.

But in politics it seems, you have got to be very much of this world.

The Queer Story Of Mackenzie King

Spiritualist Prime Minister

William Lyon Mackenzie King, a rich, austere bachelor, was for 22 years Prime Minister of Canada.

Now, three years after his death at the age of 75, it has been disclosed that he regularly consulted spiritualist mediums and believed he was in touch with such famous men as the late President Roosevelt and Sir Wilfred Laurier.

By John Prebble

THE reason for Mackenzie King's strange sally into the supernatural was not exceptional. Many people turn to such things during profound personal grief.

And his grief had been anguished.

His family, remember, was Scots-Canadian, and like many such it was closely knit by ties of affection and loyalty.

His mother played a dominant emotional rôle, and her death in 1917 was hard for him to accept, particularly since he was not present at the time.

On her insistence he had gone back to fight an election campaign.

Within a small span of years he lost not only his mother but also his beloved brother, Dr. Macdougall King and his favourite sister, Isabel.

They left him a lonely if unembittered man. In that loneliness he would not accept the finality of their death.

He already believed in life after death; now he was ready to be persuaded that it was possible for the living to communicate with the dead.

Two people were so to persuade him. The first was the late Marchioness of Aberdeen.

A Blessing

THE second was the direct-voice American medium, Mrs. Etta Wriedt.

Mackenzie King, in later years, often paid gracious tribute to Lady Aberdeen for the part she played in introducing him to what he called a "great blessing." A British medium has told me how delighted he was when he received a "message" from her shortly before his own death.

Not only did she discuss spiritualism with him in those early days, but she also put him in touch with Mrs. Wriedt, and it was this famous and somewhat histrionic medium who gave Mackenzie King his first sittings. So far as I can understand it was through her that he first made "contact" with his dead family.

FROM ALL ACCOUNTS OF MRS. WRIEDT'S ACTIVITIES IT SEEMS THAT SHE WOULD CONVEY HER MESSAGES BY MEANS OF A SILVER TRUMPET THAT ROLLED VIOLENTLY ABOUT THE FLOOR OF THE ROOM, RAPPING AT THE SHINS OF HER AUDIENCE AND SPILLING OUT WORDS IN A DIVERSE SELECTION OF ACCENTS.

Many people have sworn to the authenticity of the voices which are said to have come from this trumpet. Others say that when it claimed to be the voice of some dead Frenchman it spoke with an appallingly un-Gallic accent.

Whenever Mackenzie King found someone whom he could trust with the secret of his interest in spiritualism he would always tell the story of how he became convinced of Mrs. Wriedt's powers.

It seems that the wife of one of his Liberal friends lost her father's will, and having looked everywhere without success she went to consult Mrs. Wriedt.

"Mrs. Wriedt mentioned its exact place," King would say when telling the story, "in a chest of drawers in a house in France; and there it was discovered."

This, it seemed, was enough to convince Mackenzie King.

He also believed that Mrs. Wriedt was in astral communication with dead Queen Victoria, and that one of the voices emanating from her gyrating trumpet was the late monarch's.

A Watch

BELIEVING this, it was not surprising that he willingly carried out a mission entrusted to him by Mrs. Wriedt. She had in her possession a watch that was said to have belonged to the Queen.

Queen Victoria, according to the story, had intended to bequeath the watch to a Miss Georgiana Eagle "for her meritoriously extraordinary clairvoyance," but since Miss Eagle predeceased the Queen the spiritualist journalist W. T. Stead was asked to hand the watch on to the medium he considered most deserving.

Thus it came into Mrs. Wriedt's possession, and in her turn she desired that Mackenzie King should take it back to England when she died. He handed it over to the London Spiritualist Alliance, an organisation which was instrumental in finding him mediums.

A five-inch crystal ball now stands on the piano in Mackenzie King's old home, Laurier House, Ottawa. Round it are autographed pictures of the Royal family, and other famous people. Roosevelt 'Message' Warned Him About Trouble In Far East

William Lyon Mackenzie King, who died three years ago after being Prime Minister of Canada for 22 years, regularly consulted spiritualist mediums.

Nina Duchess of Hamilton, who helped him to contact spiritualists in Britain, declared before her death that he must have had "guidance" on world affairs.

— By John Prebble —

ONE Saturday afternoon in November, 1947, a soberly dressed old man, with hunched shoulders and a quiff of white hair, knocked at the door of 22, Jubilee-place, Chelsea.

He was expected by the owner of the house, Miss Beatrice Gibbes, and by her friend, the Irish authoress and playwright Geraldine Cummins. It was Miss Cummins, in fact, that the man had come to see.

She had been told that he was a clergyman who was interested in her gift of automatic-writing, but when she saw that he was not wearing a clerical collar she concluded, from his accent, that he must be a New York businessman.

He was neither businessman nor cleric. He was a Canadian, leader of all Canadians, William Lyon Mackenzie King, 72 years of age, and Premier of his country for 20 years.

This strange, paradoxical old man had already given one third of his life to the study of spiritualism and the occult, and his visit to Miss Cummins was to be one of the last he ever made in his patient search for evidence that the living and the dead may converse one with the other.

DEAD FRANKLIN ROOSEVELT AND HALF A DOZEN LONG-SINCE DEAD CANADIAN POLITICIANS. THROUGH HER, IT IS CLAIMED, HE RECEIVED NEWS OF THE KOREAN WAR TWO YEARS BEFORE IT STARTED.

Not A Whim

THE public were aware of Mackenzie King's presence in Britain. He had come for high-policy talks with Clement Attlee His visit to Miss Cummins was not an impulsive whim, but part of a pattern which he had followed in his private life for over 15 years now, without more than a handful of his associates being aware of it

Whenever politics brought him to Britain he always found time to attend sittings given him by recommended mediums. Now it was the turn of Miss Cummins.

She is not a professional medium, preferring to regard herself as a writer. What psychic powers she believes she has she uses in the service of her friends or people recommended by her friends.

Like Mackenzie King, she has Celtic blood. Her family once held the guardianship of the Stone of Destiny. There is a great deal of Gaelic mysticism about her. This may have appealed to Mackenzie King, when he heard about her, and remembered his grandfather, the fey Scots rebel.

News Of War?

I WENT to talk with her a few days ago, asking her for the story of her acquaintanceship with the Canadian Premier. She saw him on two occasions only, but what passed between them is, to my mind, among the most important of all his psychic activities.

THROUGH HER HE BELIEVED HE CONTACTED THE

Miss Cummins' method of psychic communication is "automatic writing." She hears no voices, sees no bodily shapes, does not speak, although she occasionally gets distinct premonitions, she says, one of them being about Mackenzie King, as I shall tell you

Her procedure is to pass into a trance, her forehead resting on her left hand, and while she is in this state a pencil or a pen, in her right hand, travels rapidly across a notebook, transcribing messages from her spirit control.

This control appears to be a Greek called Astor, who, in his turn, sends messages from other spirits, in their own terminology, with their own idiosyncrasies of speech.

Miss Cummins tells me she has no knowledge of what is being written while she is writing it, and if the pages are taken from the pad immediately she has no means of knowing afterwards what has been written unless she is told.

From Roosevelt

AT the time she met Mackenzie King, it would seem, Astor had been sending her frequent messages on early Christian history. Naturally she welcomed a visit from a "clergyman" who, she thought, might be able to explain some of them.

Instead of the clergyman, however, she met Mackenzie King, and instead of facts on early Christianity there came some distinctly 20th century messages from Astor.

When the Canadian arrived Miss Cummins discovered that he was "good-humoured with an attractive smile."

She cut short his efforts at conversation "because I like silence in preparation for a sitting, and don't care to talk with the sitter beforehand."

At first Miss Gibbes sat beside Miss Cummins as she began her writing. Later Mackenzie King took her place, eagerly removing the sheets of paper from the pad

Mr. Mackenzie King arriving in London for the conference of Dominion Prime Ministers in 1948 — two years before the outbreak of war in Korea.

The writing took an hour, and when it was over Miss Cummins went upstairs to rest. On returning to the drawing-room she was surprised to find her sitter still there, even more surprised when he told her, with a smile that he was Mackenzie King. He was evidently pleased with the sitting. "Quite remarkable, wonderful!"

"I was charmed by him," Miss Cummins told me, "and I sensed his spiritual integrity. Very rarely have I been so impressed by someone as I was by him."

What King had been told by Miss Cummins' writing was certainly remarkable. He said that he had received messages from Roosevelt, that he had asked Roosevelt whether he should retire or not, and the dead President had replied quite firmly: "Don't retire. Stay on the job. Your country needs you there."

This "advice" apparently pleased him, and it is worth remembering that roughly about this time another medium consulted by the Canadian Premier, Mrs. Helen Hughes, claims she was receiving messages from Mackenzie King's mother advising him to take things more easily and put no strain on his heart. Evidently it was Roosevelt's advice he preferred to hear.

Miss Geraldine Cummins.

Other "messages" it seemed had come to Mackenzie King from dead Canadian leaders like Sir Wilfrid Laurier, his mentor and friend, and W. S. Fielding and Sir Oliver Mowat. Miss Cummins tells me that she had heard of none of these men be-

He was then staying at the Dorchester in Park-lane, and she received an urgent message from him asking if she and Miss Gibbes would call.

He was ill, so seriously ill, it is said, that his visitors had been limited to men like Winston Churchill and Premier Nehru of India. Therefore, it is not surprising that newspapermen waiting in the hotel lobby for news of his health should be surprised when two strange women asked for him at the desk and were shown right up.

They were later smuggled out of a side entrance and the waiting reporters never did discover who they were, or why they had called.

'Watch The East'

THIS second meeting with Mackenzie King lasted 50 minutes. "He looked terribly tired and worn out," says Miss Cummins. "He was, in fact, the invalid I had foreseen, but he was still gracious and kindly."

SHE SAT BY THE SICK MAN'S BED AS SHE PASSED INTO THE TRANCE, AND HER FRIEND PASSED THE SHEETS OF PAPER ACROSS TO HIM AS THEY WERE FILLED.

AT THE END HE SAID THAT ONCE MORE HE HAD RECEIVED "MESSAGES" FROM ROOSEVELT AND HIS DEAD POLITICAL FRIENDS. ONE OF THE "MESSAGES" FROM ROOSEVELT URGED MACKENZIE KING TO WATCH FOR TROUBLE IN THE FAR EAST.

This was in 1948, two years before the outbreak of the Korean war. The Berlin airlift was on and, if trouble was coming, most people expected it in Europe. Miss Cummins told me that Mackenzie King seemed unable to understand the meaning of this message, and then told her that it was his rule to ignore advice thus given

Kept Quiet

ON political affairs, he said he trusted solely to his own judgment, or that of his advisers.

When I talked these experiences over with Miss Cummins she told me that she had been quite unfamiliar with Canadian political affairs. "On the first occasion I couldn't even have given you the name of the capital of Canada."

The most intriguing facet of Miss Cummins' adventure into psychic affairs in company with the Prime Minister of Canada is the steps which the authorities in the Dominion took to see that she did not make them public.

Two years ago, and one year after the death of Mackenzie King, she wrote a book called "Unseen Adventures." It dealt with her own psychic adventures. The book was all ready for the press when the first hint of Mackenzie King's own interest in spiritualism began to appear in the newspapers.

Miss Cummins then added an appendix to her book, telling the story of Mackenzie King's interest in spiritualism so far as she had experienced it.

Story Disguised

SHE sent a proof of this appendix to a friend in Ottawa, who showed it to the Premier's executors. The effect was immediate and volcanic.

Two of the executors happened then to be in England, Duncan McTavish and Leonard W. Brockingham. They called on Miss Cummins and her publishers and desperately appealed to them to suppress the story, or at least camouflage it.

Reluctantly, Miss Cummins said, she did as they asked, even though news that Mackenzie King had been a spiritualist was already filtering through the world's newspapers. She altered her appendix so that Mackenzie King became "Mr S., a British Commonwealth statesman." Roosevelt became "the communicator XYZ," and other names were similarly disguised.

The executors departed, if not happy, at least satisfied.

What Mackenzie King would think, or does think, about their well-meaning efforts to hush-up this important side of his private life would indeed be worth hearing.

NEXT WEEK: The mystery of Mackenzie King's writings on spiritualism. Has he himself managed to contact the world he has left?

Whenever politics brought him to Britain he always found time to attend sittings given him by recommended mediums. Now it was the turn of Miss Cummins.

She is not a professional medium, preferring to regard herself as a writer. What psychic powers she believes she has she uses in the service of her friends or people recommended by her friends.

Like Mackenzie King, she has Celtic blood. Her family once held the guardianship of the Stone of Destiny. There is a great deal of Gaelic mysticism about her. This may have appealed to Mackenzie King, when he heard about her, and remembered his grandfather, the fey Scots rebel.

News Of War?

I WENT to talk with her a few days ago, asking her for the story of her acquaintanceship with the Canadian Premier. She saw him on two occasions only, but what passed between them is, to my mind, among the most important of all his psychic activities.

THROUGH HER HE BELIEVED HE CONTACTED THE

Miss Cummins' method of psychic communication is "automatic writing." She hears no voices, sees no bodily shapes, does not speak, although she occasionally gets distinct premonitions, she says, one of them being about Mackenzie King, as I shall tell you.

Her procedure is to pass into a trance, her forehead resting on her left hand, and while she is in this state a pencil or a pen, in her right hand, travels rapidly across a notebook, transcribing messages from her spirit control.

This control appears to be a Greek called Astor, who, in his turn, sends messages from other spirits, in their own terminology, with their own idiosyncrasies of speech.

Miss Cummins tells me she has no knowledge of what is being written while she is writing it, and if the pages are taken from the pad immediately she has no means of knowing afterwards what has been written unless she is told.

From Roosevelt

AT the time she met Mackenzie King, it would seem, Astor had been sending her frequent messages on early Christian history. Naturally she welcomed a visit from a "clergyman" who, she thought, might be able to explain some of them.

Instead of the clergyman, however, she met Mackenzie King, and instead of facts on early Christianity there came some distinctly 20th century messages from Astor.

When the Canadian arrived Miss Cummins discovered that he was "good-humoured with an attractive smile."

She cut short his efforts at conversation "because I like silence in preparation for a sitting, and don't care to talk with the sitter beforehand."

At first Miss Gibbes sat beside Miss Cummins as she began her writing. Later Mackenzie King took her place, eagerly removing the sheets of paper from the pad.

Mr. Mackenzie King arriving in London for the conference of Dominion Prime Ministers in 1948 — two years before the outbreak of war in Korea.

The writing took an hour, and when it was over Miss Cummins went upstairs to rest. On returning to the drawing-room she was surprised to find her sitter still there, even more surprised when he told her, with a smile that he was Mackenzie King. He was evidently pleased with the sitting. "Quite remarkable, wonderful!"

"I was charmed by him," Miss Cummins told me, "and I sensed his spiritual integrity. Very rarely have I been so impressed by someone as I was by him."

What King had been told by Miss Cummins' writing was certainly remarkable. He said that he had received messages from Roosevelt, that he had asked Roosevelt whether he should retire or not and the dead President had replied quite firmly: "Don't retire. Stay on the job. Your country needs you there."

This "advice" apparently pleased him, and it is worth remembering that roughly about this time another medium consulted by the Canadian Premier, Mrs. Helen Hughes, claims she was receiving messages from Mackenzie King's mother advising him to take things more easily and put no strain on his heart. Evidently it was Roosevelt's advice he preferred to hear.

Miss Geraldine Cummins.

Other "messages" it seemed had come to Mackenzie King from dead Canadian leaders like Sir Wilfrid Laurier, his mentor and friend, and W. S. Fielding and Sir Oliver Mowat. Miss Cummins tells me that she had heard of none of these men before meeting Mackenzie King.

Mackenzie King delightedly pointed out to her in the writing

He was then staying at the Dorchester in Park-lane, and she received an urgent message from him asking if she and Miss Gibbes would call.

He was ill, so seriously ill, it is said, that his visitors had been limited to men like Winston Churchill and Premier Nehru of India. Therefore, it is not surprising that newspapermen waiting in the hotel lobby for news of his health should be surprised when two strange women asked for him at the desk and were shown right up.

They were later smuggled out of a side entrance and the waiting reporters never did discover who they were, or why they had called.

'Watch The East'

THIS second meeting with Mackenzie King lasted 50 minutes. "He looked terribly tired and worn out," says Miss Cummins. "He was, in fact, the invalid I had foreseen, but he was still gracious and kindly."

SHE SAT BY THE SICK MAN'S BED AS SHE PASSED INTO THE TRANCE, AND HER FRIEND PASSED THE SHEETS OF PAPER ACROSS TO HIM AS THEY WERE FILLED.

AT THE END HE SAID THAT ONCE MORE HE HAD RECEIVED "MESSAGES" FROM ROOSEVELT AND HIS DEAD POLITICAL FRIENDS. ONE OF THE "MESSAGES" FROM ROOSEVELT URGED MACKENZIE KING TO WATCH FOR TROUBLE IN THE FAR EAST.

This was in 1948, two years before the outbreak of the Korean war. The Berlin airlift was on and, if trouble was coming, most people expected it in Europe. Miss Cummins told me that Mackenzie King seemed unable to understand the meaning of this message, and then told her that it was his rule to ignore advice thus given.

Kept Quiet

ON political affairs, he said he trusted solely to his own judgment, or that of his advisers.

When I talked these experiences over with Miss Cummins she told me that she had been quite unfamiliar with Canadian political affairs. "On the first occasion I couldn't even have given you the name of the capital of Canada."

The most intriguing facet of Miss Cummins' adventure into psychic affairs in company with the Prime Minister of Canada is the steps which the authorities in the Dominion took to see that she did not make them public.

Two years ago, and one year after the death of Mackenzie King, she wrote a book called "Unseen Adventures." It dealt with her own psychic adventures. The book was all ready for the press when the first hint of Mackenzie King's own interest in spiritualism began to appear in the newspapers.

Miss Cummins then added an appendix to her book, telling the story of Mackenzie King's interest in spiritualism so far as she had experienced it.

Story Disguised

SHE sent a proof of this appendix to a friend in Ottawa, who showed it to the Premier's executors. The effect was immediate and volcanic.

Two of the executors happened then to be in England, Duncan McTavish and Leonard W. Brockingham. They called on Miss Cummins and her publishers and desperately appealed to them to suppress the story, or at least camouflage it.

Reluctantly, Miss Cummins said, she did as they asked, even though news that Mackenzie King had been a spiritualist was already filtering through the world's newspapers. She altered her appendix so that Mackenzie King became "Mr. S., a British Commonwealth statesman." Roosevelt became "the communicator XYZ," and other names were similarly disguised.

The executors departed, if not happy, at least satisfied.

What Mackenzie King would think, or does think, about their well-meaning efforts to hush-up this important side of his private life would indeed be worth hearing.

Trouble In Far East

THE SPIRITUALIST PRIME MINISTER

William Lyon Mackenzie King, who died three years ago after being Prime Minister of Canada for 22 years, regularly consulted spiritualist mediums.

Nina Duchess of Hamilton, who helped him to contact spiritualists in Britain, declared before her death that he must have had "guidance" on world affairs.

— By John Prebble —

ONE Saturday afternoon in November, 1947, a soberly dressed old man, with hunched shoulders and a quiff of white hair, knocked at the door of 22, Jubilee-place, Chelsea.

He was expected by the owner of the house, Miss Beatrice Gibbes, and by her friend, the Irish authoress and playwright Geraldine Cummins. It was Miss Cummins, in fact, that the man had come to see.

She had been told that he was a clergyman who was interested in her gift of automatic-writing, but when she saw that he was not wearing a clerical collar she concluded, from his accent, that he must be a New York businessman.

He was neither businessman nor cleric. He was a Canadian, leader of all Canadians, William Lyon Mackenzie King, 72 years of age, and Premier of his country for 20 years.

This strange, paradoxical old man had already given one third of his life to the study of spiritualism and the occult, and his visit to Miss Cummins was to be one of the last he ever made in his patient search for evidence that the living and the dead may converse one with the other.

DEAD FRANKLIN ROOSEVELT AND HALF A DOZEN LONG-SINCE DEAD CANADIAN POLITICIANS. THROUGH HER, IT IS CLAIMED, HE RECEIVED NEWS OF THE KOREAN WAR TWO YEARS BEFORE IT STARTED.

Not A Whim

THE public were aware of Mackenzie King's presence in Britain. He had come for high-policy talks with Clement Attlee His visit to Miss Cummins was not an impulsive whim, but part of a pattern which he had followed in his private life for over 15 years now, without more than a handful of his associates being aware of it

Whenever politics brought him to Britain he always found time to attend sittings given him by recommended mediums. Now it was the turn of Miss Cummins.

She is not a professional medium, preferring to regard herself as a writer. What psychic powers she believes she has she uses in the service of her friends or people recommended by her friends.

Mackenzie King delightedly pointed out to her in the writing certain distinctive features of style which, he said, proved that the messages had come from Roosevelt. He said that they showed that the President had met Mackenzie King's father and mother on "the other side," and his reactions were just as Mackenzie King would have expected.

He spent two hours at Jubilee-place that day and at the end of them went on to Chequers where, it is to be presumed, he discussed less supernatural matters with the Prime Minister of Great Britain.

Told To Retire

BEFORE he said goodbye, however, Miss Cummins tells me that she had a distinct premonition, "the very unpleasant impression" that he would soon be an invalid. She immediately advised him to take a rest, but he brushed the advice aside, saying the game of politics was too "fascinating" to relinquish.

Some time after this visit Miss Cummins says she received a message from Roosevelt in which the President said he had changed his mind. Now, he thought, the Canadian Premier ought to retire. Miss Cummins passed the message along to Mackenzie King. Whether he took notice of this advice or not is a matter of opinion, but certainly he did retire within the year.

He was obviously very impressed by his experiences with Miss Cummins and wrote to her in strangely emotional terms.

"There can be no truer explanation of the terrible conditions through which the world has recently been passing, and is still suffering from, than the conflict of materialism and spiritual interpretation of life. Like you, but in a different way, I have sought to wage war on the former, and shall continue to do so to the end."

That end was not far off. Miss Cummins saw him for the second time less than a year after his visit to Jubilee-place.

He was then staying at the Dorchester in Park-lane, and she received an urgent message from him asking if she and Miss Gibbes would call.

He was ill, so seriously ill, it is said, that his visitors had been limited to men like Winston Churchill and Premier Nehru of India. Mackenzie King. Spiritualists Ask—

Is He Trying To Send A Message From The Next World?

PRIME MINISTER of Canada for 22 years, William Lyon Mackenzie King, who died three years ago, was an ardent spiritualist.

When he came to Britain on Commonwealth affairs he had regular sittings with mediums and believed himself in contact with Roosevelt as well as Canadian personalities who had died.

After his own death efforts were made to suppress information about his spiritualist activities.

Top: After his resignation from the office of Prime Minister in November 1948 — Mr. Mackenzie King leaving Government House with Lord Alexander, who was then Governor-General of Canada. Below: Laurier House, the late Prime Minister's home.

TOWARDS the end of his life Mackenzie King told some of his close friends that he was firmly resolved to publish a full account of his psychic experiences.

He died before such a resolve was put into execution. Or so we must believe, since there has been no hint that the book was ever started.

Indeed, if we accept the bland denials of his literary executors in Ottawa, there is not a word about spiritualism in the whole of his vast legacy of diaries and correspondence.

But come, we need not be that credulous. Scepticism is a sharp spur to further knowledge, and we should be using it here. What I have learnt during the past weeks about Mackenzie King's secret life has convinced me that among the locked-up papers in Laurier House there could be found an even more fascinating story than I have been able to piece together.

My reasons for so believing are obvious enough. Let us begin with an exercise in common sense

No Letters

IT is customary enough for men of intellect and sensitivity to commit to paper, by diary or by letters, the thoughts that are occupying their minds. And King was a great diarist, a great letter-writer.

What has happened to such writing? What, too, has happened to the notes he took during the sittings he had with British mediums? When he returned to Canada he would often make copies of these notes and send them to the mediums concerned.

What has happened to the correspondence he had with Miss Geraldine Cummins and Mrs. Helen Hughes concerning the sittings they gave him? Even if he did not keep copies of his own letters surely he did not immediately destroy their replies?

Idea For Book

THERE is also King's correspondence with Dr. Glen Hamilton, a Canadian and an internationally known medium.

Canadians have been made aware of the existence of this correspondence by the publication of excerpts from it in a prairie newspaper. Dr. Hamilton's widow has written to a Winnipeg newspaper claiming that when Mackenzie King visited her husband he declared his emphatic intention of writing a book about his spiritualist beliefs

What is more, says Mrs. Hamilton, Mackenzie King once made tentative inquiries about securing a secretary to assist him in the work

So far as can be gathered from the little of Mackenzie King's letters which Mrs. Hamilton has allowed to be published, the Canadian Premier paid a secret visit to Dr. Hamilton in 1933 and there took part in some psychic experiments.

He was apparently deeply impressed. To Dr Hamilton he wrote of "one of the most memorable experiences of my life" and asked to be kept in close touch with Hamilton's further discoveries.

What has happened to Hamilton's answer to this request? Can Mackenzie King's executors not find it among the papers?

A New Plane

IT may be claimed, of course, that the letters quoted by Mrs. Hamilton are not genuine. If so, it must be concluded that she is extremely foolhardy and that the editor of the newspaper in which they have been published does not know his job

In one of the letters Mackenzie King asked Hamilton for some prayers said to have been conveyed to the doctor by the spirit of Robert Louis Stevenson

"I expected very much from what I had heard of your researches from others," says another letter, "but the results surpassed all expectations. I cannot thank you and Mrs. Hamilton enough for having taken me into your confidence and having permitted me to share in the very rich inheritance which is now yours.

"It does seem to me that you are singularly blessed, and that through you a great blessing is about to be bestowed on the world.

"Had I not seen the photographs you have, and heard from your lips what you read and told me, also had I not had some previous experiences of my own, I just could not have believed it possible. . . .

"I feel I have come to a new plane of existence itself."

A new plane of existence. . . These are significant words, testifying to the depth of Mackenzie King's conviction. Yet there is nothing, apparently, in his legacy of papers that echoes it.

His Secrets

WHAT is going on in that quiet study at Laurier House, where stands the five-inch crystal ball, and where Fred Macgregor and Edouard Handy are at present preparing the King archives for publication?

These two men are probably the most privileged in the whole Dominion. Nobody else, no Cabinet Minister, not even an outside stenographer, has been allowed to examine the Mackenzie King diary.

Daily either Handy or Macgregor locks himself in an upstairs room at Laurier House, takes out the diary and sits down and dictates. Into a recording instrument he reads the less explosive, the less startling passages which have been chosen by the executors or were indicated by King himself. These passages are later transcribed by a typist.

When the reading is finished the diary will be destroyed. Gone will be the Premier's devastatingly frank appraisal of his political colleagues. And gone too in my belief, will be the secret, sensitive thoughts on spiritualism which he committed to paper.

But the story of the Spiritualist Premier is snowballing in Canada. Take the case of Dr. J. E. Hett, for example.

Spirit Talks

DR. HETT is an aged cancer specialist, head of the Hett Cancer Treatment and Research Foundation. He lives in Windsor, Ontario.

He claims that he was responsible for many of the sittings with mediums which King attended, both in Canada and the United States.

He also claims that he has had numerous conversations with the spirit of the Premier since the latter's death. Spiritualists generally are taking an active interest in "evidence" that Mackenzie King is trying to make contact with the world he left three years ago.

At the London Spiritualist Alliance recently I was told that there had been such "evidence." It is, perhaps, to be expected.

To return, however, to Dr. Hett. My colleague in Ottawa got in touch with him and invited the doctor to make some comment on his personal recollections of Mackenzie King.

Dr. Hett's comments were corroborative, but lacking in detail. He agreed that the latest contact he had had with Mackenzie King had been through a direct-voice medium at Chesterfield Spiritualist Camp.

But it seems that Dr. Hett proposes to tell his own story in his own time

"I knew more about Mr. King's spiritualist activities than anyone else But I don't care to release the information at this time.

"I have to write the story myself at some future date. I have read some foolish articles written about King using a crystal ball and planchettes. The real story told by me would be an eye-opener."

Roosevelt Too

SPIRITUALISTS, understandably perhaps, do not like references to Mackenzie King's interest in horoscopes, crystal gazing, and fortune telling. But his sittings with tea-leaf readers were well-known to many of his associates while he was alive.

In fact even King himself was not aware of how many did know.

But once a secret is out everybody has to talk about it. In Ottawa Mr. A J. Pinard claims that he knew about it for years.

"I obtained the information first-hand," he told reporters. "Mrs. Wilder, now 70 the Montreal medium, told me she was engaged by King once a week during the war, and came to Ottawa just for that purpose. She was also consulted by President Roosevelt and flew to Washington once a week too."

Controversy

WELL, there it is, that's the story of William Lyon Mackenzie King, statesman and spiritualist. In the long view of history, perhaps, the odd jigsaw will make an understandable pattern. At the moment it still makes for controversy.

There are, for example, the Agnostics who find it ironically amusing.

There is the Canadian public, deliciously thrilled, and the Canadian Administration uncomfortably ill-at-ease.

And then there are the spiritualists themselves, proud to find that one more of the world's great may be counted among their ranks, yet faintly disappointed with the way in which writers like myself have chosen to inform you about it.

King's 550-acre Summer estate, the ladies explained embarrassedly. They'd come to inspect the now-famous park bench where the Times journalist claimed, over the CBC last Fall, to have exchanged ghostly repartee with King. Naturally, the ladies were jolted to stroll upon Philip himself beside me, as he tried once again to conjure up the Prime Minister's wraith.

We all had a good laugh over the unexpected meeting. It was, we agreed, rather like some extra-terrestrial, park bench version of Brigadoon.

"Eerie enough almost," said Mrs. Drew light-heartedly, "to make you believe in spirits."

Despite Mrs. Drew's jocular attitude, and Philip's explanation (see his accompanying story) that his conversation with King was written in a whimsical vein, there are at least 500,000 Canadians whose belief in ghosts is no joke at all. Indeed, McClelland & Stewart will publish this year a book, Exploring The Supernatural, by R. S. Lambert, which suggests that Canada today is brimming with ghosts.

If Lambert's eyewitnesses are to be believed, a yammering spirit bedevilled Esther Cox of Amherst, N.S., for two years, climaxing its shenanigans by writing on her bedroom ceiling: "Esther Cox, you are mine to kill." An equally stubborn spirit haunted the Highlanders of Baldoon, Ont., for three years, amusing itself by sending a butcher knife flying through the air. George Dagg, a Shawville, Que., farmer suffered a prankish poltergeist that rocked chairs and dashed jugfuls of water into his wife's face.

In a haunted house on Winnipeg's Main Street, George H. Ham was saddled with a djinn that kept "rattling the stove like mad". In Toronto's suburban Forest Hill Village, a spirit, radiating from a young domestic servant, sporadically exploded plaster off her three employers' ceilings. And as recently as 1951, Anna Duryba was plagued by a window-smashing, wall-tapping apparition apparently intent on scaring her silly out of her four-room cottage in Chilliwack, B.C.

Lambert is not surprised by the prevalence of ghost stories in Canada. "Canada's lonely farms and unexplored wildernesses help to breed mystery and stretch the imagination," he says. "The interest of Mackenzie King in spiritualism is an example of what may lie hidden under the normal, outer rind of Canadian hard-headedness."

WHAT is surprising, I found, is the number of zealots who have banded together in Canada to form a religious cult based on communion with ghosts. World War II and the Korean skirmish, with their aftermath of bereaved, bothered and bewildered seeking "messages" from dead servicemen, have created currently a boom industry for swamis conducting seances. Publicity accorded to Philip's exchange of (Continued on page 59)

My Conversation With Mackenzie King's Ghost

by PERCY J. PHILIP
Ex-New York Times Correspondent

What really happened to me at the Kingsmere park bench

SO MANY people have asked me to tell them "the real truth" about my recent "interview" with the late Prime Minister Mackenzie King on the park bench at Kingsmere, Que., that I am glad to have the opportunity offered me by LIBERTY, to fill in the background and correct some misunderstandings, of the "ghost story" which I told over the CBC network last September 24.

Perhaps I should begin by saying that in Scotland, where I was born, we believe in ghosts. My father, who was a minister of the Church of Scotland, told me how his father had come to him in dreams, and on the edge of sleep, so vividly he could not afterwards believe that it was not real. Even more oddly, though he died at the age of 86 when I was three years old, my gaunt old grandfather, wrapped in his homespun plaid, has paid me several visits. Afterwards, I could not say definitely whether I had been asleep or awake. But the whole conversation, even to the old man's slight Aberdeenshire accent, was so vivid that I was positive it had actually taken place.

And that is how it was in my conversation with Mr. King on the park bench among the ruins at Kingsmere last June.

What the explanation may be of such phenomena I do not claim to understand. They may be due to psychic influence, to a stimulated imagination, or to that subconscious working of the mind which happens in dreams.

Yet there is no incompatability between being a Christian and church-goer, as Mr. King was, and being a searcher into the mystery of the hereafter. During his life, we had several discussions on the fascinating subject, and it came to me as a surprise when, after his death, it was "revealed" in a magazine article that he had been (Continued on page 58)

A LIBERTY SHORT SHORT STORY

Love Has A Deadline, Too

by BETTY BYRD

Ann was dead,
his story began.
He had loved her—
yet feared his love

Ann Sayers, famous newspaperwoman, died...

Don jerked the paper out of his typewriter and threw it in the wastebasket with the other crumpled sheets. He tried again.

Ann Sayers, 23, war correspondent of the Halifax Times, died . . .

He stared at what he had written, lit a cigaret and smashed it out in the overflowing ash tray.

Youngest foreign correspondent in North America . . . Miss Sayers' syndicated byline was familiar to millions . . .

He could imagine her chuckle at that. "Millions, Don? Thanks, pal. But do I have to croak to get a compliment out of you?"

Don looked around the newsroom. Phones rang, typewriters clacked, teletype machines drummed in a distant corner. Paul Morton, the gray-haired, tired-eyed city editor strolled over to Don's desk.

"Trouble?" Paul asked.

"Yes." Don tried to smile. "Why give me the job? Any cub can write an obit."

"Sure, but no one knows Ann's story like you do—by heart."

By heart, Don thought as Paul left him. By heart and by touch. The warmth of her lips on mine, the softness of her hair under my hand. Her tears on my cheek at the long goodbyes—so many goodbyes at trains and docks and airports.

Miss Sayers covered the Korean War from the front lines . . . Scored a two hour beat over rival correspondents on the fall of Dien Bien Phu . . .

And each time she left on an assignment her eyes begged me to ask her to stay. Blue eyes pleaded, "Don't let me go—marry me. I don't want a career, I want you." But she never said those things aloud. Too proud . . . And I too stubborn to ask her.

He stared at the paper. Rain beat against the windows and wind rattled them.

"I love wind," he heard her say. They were standing at the dock on a cold March night huddled close together in their polo coats, watching the ships move through the misty moonlight of Halifax harbor.

"Remember Matthew Arnold's Dover Beach?" she asked. " 'The sea is calm tonight, the tide is full, the moon lies fair upon the straits . . .' "

He had added, quoting, " 'Ah love, let us be true to one another . . .' "

"Lovely," she sighed.

"Pretty. But that kind of love is storybook stuff."

Ann shivered and he put his arm around her. "You're an incurable romantic," he teased.

"So are you, Don—inside. But because your wife

send's name was hurriedly deleted from the list of people accompanying the Princess and her mother to South Africa, and Margaret returned to England to find him posted to Brussels as air attaché the day before.

RECENTLY, there has been a fresh spate of night-clubbing in and around London's West End. Favorite haunt is the swanky 400 Club which the Princess has visited so often it could easily advertise itself "By Appointment to Her Royal Highness" if nightclubs were allowed to qualify for the honor. The Society and the Bagatelle are other favorite haunts, though the Princess also likes to go slumming in the little restaurants of Soho and in the back-streets off Tottenham Court Road, the jive-and-jitter district.

Margaret will be 25 this year. Will she settle down, as her advisers are constantly hoping, or has she fresh shock-treatment in store? Prompting the question is the fact that, under the Royal Marriage Act, she will no longer need her sister's consent to marry whom she likes.

The Daily Mirror's readers may have voted 67,907 to 2,235 in favor of the Princess marrying Peter Townsend if she wants, but she would still encounter tough opposition in high places in a country where divorcees—even innocent parties like Townsend—are still barred from the Royal enclosure on Ascot racetrack.

Those who know her intimately say that Margaret is a determined little person, inclined to take the bit between her teeth and go her own way. Certainly all the evidence points that way. But Britain's playgirl Princess should bear in mind the dangers that lie in wait for those born to high stations. Going his own way (in insisting on marrying Wallis Simpson) cost her Uncle David a throne. ♦♦

Martha Raye

Phil Baker, and Ella Logan. In Boston, Ella became sick during the tryout.

She had a comedy bit where she made an entrance down a spiral staircase, followed by a rowdy song. Rather than cut the scene, I was put in to try it.

I poised at the top of the stairs. Out front 1,000 dignified Bostonians were sitting on their hands. My cue came, and I lurched down the spiral. My heel caught, and I staggered in an attempt to regain my balance.

The audience gasped and giggled. Suddenly, I lost my footing altogether. I did an end-over-end, bouncing like a rubber ball, from the top to the bottom of those steps. For the first time, I heard belly laughs in Boston. It was the sweetest music this side of heaven.

WHILE my inadvertent tumble gave me a fractured arm, I felt that was a small price to pay for my first big hit role on Broadway. Nightclub owners, who had previously treated me like Typhoid Mary, began scrambling about, waving fat contracts. In 1936 I had arrived at the glory of an engagement at Hollywood's famed Trocadero.

I was dreadfully nervous—until I went onstage and spotted two old vaudeville friends, Jimmy Durante and Joe E. Lewis, sitting ringside.

I braced my nerves by playing to Durante and Lewis—who immediately played back, providing a supporting cast easily worth $20,000 a week.

The rough-house that followed was a symptom of what was to come when I hit TV years later. The audience roared with laughter. Next day there was a call from Paramount Pictures.

Norman Taurog, director of the Bing Crosby picture, Rhythm on the Range, had been in the Troc audience. Within 24 hours a part was written into the picture for me, and there was a song for me, too —one you may remember, Mister Paganini.

FOR the next three years, I was riding high. I made 27 pictures. I had a contract with Paramount, and whenever not actively working in pictures, I was making $5,000 a week on tour.

It was in Chicago, while I was headlining at Chez Paree, that the telephone rang one night. "This is Charles Chaplin," said a dignified voice. "Would you like to be my leading lady in my next film?"

"Are you kidding?" I giggled, and hung up. I fell asleep wondering who the gagster was. Next day came a call from one of the heads of the William Morris agency, asking why I'd been so rude as to hang up on the great Chaplin!

The picture was Monsieur Verdoux. I learned a lot from Chaplin. He taught me that taking a pratfall, dressed to the teeth in furs and jewels, is 10 times funnier than the same bit done in shabby clothes.

Hollywood was a disappointment. I found that marriage and career don't mix. Married in May 1937, to Bud Westmore of the movie make-up clan, our marriage fell apart in 90 days. Ten days after my divorce from Westmore was final, I married orchestra leader David Rose on the rebound.

Then—with the suddenness that always typifies Hollywood—Paramount fired me. I went back to 11-week tours to provide household money, and again marriage didn't mix. During one of my tours, David decided he'd rather be married to Judy Garland. He asked for a divorce.

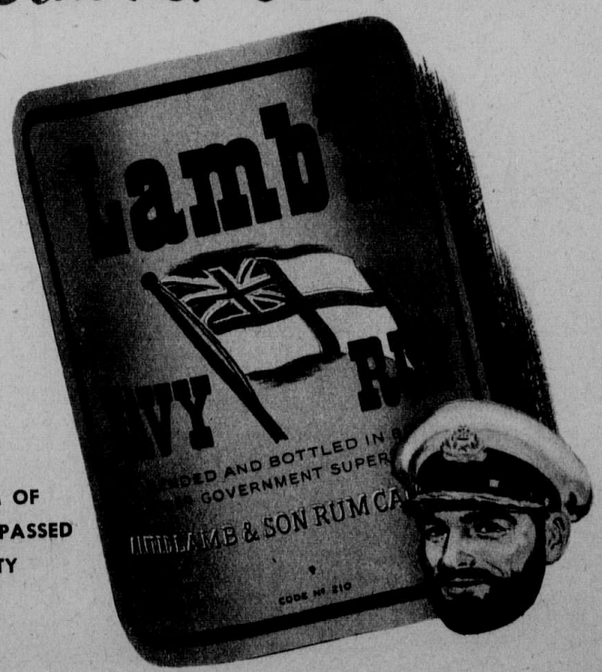

Husband No. 3 was Neal Lang, an hotel executive. When a girl drops the brass ring twice, she should do a bit of thinking. I didn't. Bruised and battered, I was still starry-eyed about marriage. But it wasn't long before we found out that a showbusiness career didn't mix with hotel managing, either.

I licked my wounds by volunteering to tour the Army camps. Finally, the Army formed an overseas entertainment unit, with Kay Francis as commanding officer. The privates were Carole Landis, Mitzi Mayfair and me.

Landing at the airport in England, the girls were all hungry. I stepped up to the colonel and said, "Sir, where do we eat?"

He said, "You mess with the men." To this day, Kay Francis insists that I replied impatiently, "I know that, but where do

"A Staunch Old Friend"

A RUM OF UNSURPASSED QUALITY

we eat?"

High spot was a command performance at Windsor Castle in the barracks of the Grenadier Guards. Carole Landis had been singing The Strip Polka for the boys—a mighty popular number which always elicited pleas of, "Take it off! Take it off!" from the audience. Needless to say that act was dropped.

Guests of honor were the Dowager Queen Mary, Queen Elizabeth and the Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose. The evening came to a perfect climax when Princess Margaret begged Mitzi to teach her how to jitterbug!

Life was not so pleasant a few months later, when the Germans were dropping bombs on the convoys in Algiers harbor, right next to the Hotel Aletti. I received a shrapnel wound, which opened my skull to the bone just above the hair line.

In Accra on the African Gold Coast, I picked up yellow fever, lost 20 pounds, and developed a lasting anemia which still requires one blood transfusion a month to keep me going.

I CAME home to be surrounded attentively by mother and a young hoofer named Nick Condos.

When the time came that I was strong enough to go back to work, I said to Nick, "How about getting me some dates?"

"I've got one all set," he said, "at the courthouse. The billing will be Mr. and Mrs. Nick Condos."

Then in July, 1944, I attained my greatest achievement: I produced a baby girl named Melodye Athenia Condos. I guess all show people have a weakness for pretty names.

After performing at London's Palladium and in Glasgow, I had my first offer for television—from Milton Berle, "Mr. Television" himself. My first appearance with Milton brought offers from four sponsors the following day. I attribute this (a) to Berle's help, and (b) to the fact that a new generation of kids had grown up who didn't remember my pictures.

But TV brought its heartaches, too. One in the shape of the break-up of my marriage to Nick, who nevertheless, is still my business manager. Another in the form of a kidney ailment, seriously aggravated by my initial commuting from Miami to New York for my shows.

In 1951, I was rushed to St. Francis hospital in Miami, and for a while my life hung in the balance. The entire personnel of the Five O'Clock Club marched into the hospital to donate blood.

My recovery, I think, owes something to the talismans I carry with me always.

The Star of David, which hangs around my neck, is a present from the actress I revere, Sophie Tucker. In addition, I wear a crucifix and a Miraculous Medal with St. Genesius, patron of actors, on it.

My gratitude to the nursing sisters in the hospital is expressed at the end of each TV show, when I say, "Good night, sisters." They always watch my show on a TV set I gave them.

While not indestructible, I am irrepressible. Starry-eyed, I have now embarked on my fifth try at marriage with Ed Begley, a dancer on my show who has made a name for himself as a choreographer.

It's a strange and wonderful thing having people like you. It makes me weak every time it happens.

Melodye once asked me, seriously, "Mama, don't you ever run down?"

That's a good question. After my last three TV shows, they've carried me to my dressing room. Yes, the body runs down, but not the spirit. I love making people laugh. ◆◆

My Conversation

a practising spiritualist. I thought everybody knew about it.

Like many others of his friends, I resented this, perhaps unintentional, exposure of Mr. King to ridicule. Perhaps I should have been warned not to touch such a sensitive subject. There may be no witches in Canada, but there are witch-hunters.

Still, I have been a reporter all my life, and I could not resist trying to write an account of that strange experience at Kingsmere. I did it with the greatest care.

I offered what I had written to a national Canadian magazine—not LIBERTY—but it was courteously rejected. I was told later it had gone to the fiction department, and had not been regarded as very good fiction.

So I redrafted it for broadcasting. I thought that my Scottish voice might convey my meaning with more subtlety than the cold, printed word. To stress its unusual character, I called the talk Fantasio. As I would have a much wider audience on the air, I strengthened the warnings that it should not be taken too literally, writing that I was not sure that I believed my story myself, and prefacing my account of the "facts" with the conditional phrase — "If in the mystery of life and the hereafter, there are such things as facts."

That, it seemed to me, provided the key to the story. It was a mystery, and a pleasant one.

The CBC editors, to whom the script was submitted, read it understandingly, and accepted it for broadcasting.

Listeners from one end of the country to another seem also to have understood. Two of Mr. King's literary executors, who have had access to all his private papers, and a former member of his Cabinet, were enthusiastic about the portrait I had drawn of their old leader.

But when we come to the treatment of the story by the press, that is another matter.

IT PERHAPS ill becomes one who has been a newspaper reporter all his life, and has undoubtedly made his full measure of mistakes of interpretation and even of fact, to be critical of his colleagues who may fall into error.

I find, however, that some account of how my broadcast was handled by the press is necessary for the proper understanding of the Legend of the Bench at Kingsmere.

That legend has already travelled far

"DON'T DRINK THAT, ELLWOOD! HERE'S THE NEW LABATT PILSENER LABEL"

Tested by brewmasters from seven other breweries, at Mr. Hugh F. Labatt's request, Pilsener won enthusiastic praise . . . a light, dry, true Pilsener Beer!

Your first cool bottle of Pilsener proves it . . . nothing slakes thirst so enjoyably, so effectively as Labatt's Pilsener! Introduce your thirst to that authentic Pilsener flavour—lighter than ale, drier than lager. Refreshing! All the pleasures of Pilsener are waiting . . . treat yourself to a Pilsener soon.

beyond Canada. It has brought more than 200 letters, from every province and from many states of the American union. Every weekend, and even during the week, hundreds of visitors have been flocking up to Moorside and arguing hotly whether or not the "ghost" really appeared. The delegates of the Colombo plan conference in Ottawa have carried the story to the ends of the earth. Political commentators have seized on it as a peg on which to hang pontifical articles. Collins, in the Montreal Gazette, lifted it to a high point of humor with his cartoon of Prime Minister St. Laurent sitting on the bench among the ruins, looking pensively upward and asking: "Have you anything to say to me?"

But the condensed version of the talk circulated by The Canadian Press was not so well inspired. Probably it was the first time that that news agency had ever put a ghost story on its wires. Certainly it was the first time a CP staff member, in the Ottawa bureau, had ever been asked to provide one.

It was no excuse that the poor fellow had not heard the broadcast. The first thing to do, of course, was to secure the text. There was none available at the CBC studios, as the broadcast had been recorded. I live at Aylmer, Ont., 10 miles from Ottawa, and apparently the CP Ottawa bureau is not equipped to send an intelligent reporter so far to get a story.

I soon found it was impossible to get the facts, nuances, qualifications, suggestions, anecdotes and imponderables into position by telephone. After a struggle, I consented to drive in myself with the text. I might, I thought, be able to keep the story from running wild.

My efforts were wasted. The CP had asked for a ghost story, and the more I insisted that the subject was delicate and the treatment whimsical, the more certain I became that the ghost story I had told over the CBC network, and the one that would be printed, would have little resemblance.

What a fool I had been. I had thought that my broadcast might stir some interest, but I had definitely under-estimated its impact on the ghost-hungry newspaper mind. It made the front pages all across Canada, pushing aside the argument then in progress between Mr. St. Laurent and Quebec Premier Maurice Duplessis.

There were odd little changes. Whereas I had said Mr. King talked to me, the headlines ran that I had talked with Mr. King. The title word, Fantasio, became "Fantastic," which is quite different. Sentences were transposed and others, which had seemed so important to me, were entirely omitted.

Not a single newspaper published the text of the talk. Even those, to which a copy had been sent in advance, preferred to publish the CP version, rather than go to the trouble of writing their own.

THE telephone began ringing. Was it true? Argument was warm.

Editors began telegraphing their Ottawa correspondents: Had Philip gone "crackers"? One wit, of sorts, telephoned to ask what brand of whisky I drank.

At 8.30 a.m., on the following Sunday, one of the most enterprising and joyous of my colleagues burst into my cottage, shouting gaily: "The question is — is it true, or is it not true?"

There were others who did not bother even to telephone but began writing freely, interviewing parsons, chauffeurs, CBC officials and residents of Kingsmere.

In the press, the skeptics certainly outnumbered the believers, but the latter were much more industrious in writing private letters. Two spiritualists told of recent conversations with Mr. King who, they said, had confirmed my story. I shall not call them as witnesses. ◆◆

ghostly gossip with King has, too, stimulated Canadians to use these cosmic Western Union messengers.

Most impressive in their strange telegraphy is the unshakeable faith of the mediums' customers—nicknamed derisively by the seers as "shut-eyes". Harry Houdini, before his death in Montreal in 1926 at the hands of a crazed McGill University student, exposed hundreds of charlatan mediums. He offered a $10,000 reward if he couldn't duplicate by mechanical means their séance jiggery-pokery.

More recently, Dr. B. W. Hodgson, a Vancouver medium converted to the Baptist faith in Calgary, lectured in churches across Canada; he offered $500 to any spiritualist who could correctly "read" the ballot he'd secreted in a sealed envelope.

"There never was a medium who could hoodwink the public like me," Dr. Hodgson laughed. "I fooled the élite of Vancouver. And they paid for it and liked it."

Yet despite such debunking, the faithful are flocking to spiritualist séances as never before. T. David McQueen, president of the Spiritualist National Union of Canada, conservatively estimates there are today over a half-million adherents of spiritualism in the Dominion. His own cult boasts 600 disciples who regularly attend séances before 14 mediums in Eastern Canada. A plump, brown-eyed factory maintenance man, a medium himself for 40 years, McQueen claims to have cured hundreds with his healing powers.

"My collaborator in spirit is not an Indian guide," he told me solemnly, with a deep Scottish burr. "It's a cultured Chinese gentleman name of Wang Fu. You'd hardly believe it, but my control, Mr. Wang Fu, speaks purer English than I do."

McQueen's rival cult, the National Spiritualist Association, flourishes largely in Western Canada. Its fountainhead is British Columbia, the only Canadian province licensing its 12 reverend mediums to perform marriage ceremonies. Backbone of the 26-year-old NSA is a white-haired, full-bosomed medium, Rev. Beatrice Gaulton Bishop; she presides over séances at National Memorial Spiritualist Church at 3306 Broadway, Vancouver.

Mrs. Bishop estimates the NSA has about 500 supporting members in 21 séance churches, plus a healing center in Nova Scotia. Her own temple, she says, has treated 700 patients in bi-weekly sessions over the last year. "In B.C., spiritualism is growing rapidly," she told me enthusiastically.

In common with other Canadian mediums, Mrs. Bishop is addicted to sonorous, nigh-sounding sentences, not unlike the rolling periods preached by Harlem's Father Divine. Characteristically, when I asked her what ghosts of the spirit world predicted for 1955, Mrs. Bishop responded with this written clarion call:

"According to the higher mentors contacted, there will be such a spiritual influx of exalted souls projected into the earth's magnetic belt from outer space, that a great spiritual revival will take place, and through their influence on the minds of mankind, man's thoughts will turn to Peace rather than destruction . . ."

Actual president of the NSA is Rev. Samuel H. Daniels of New Westminster, B.C. He is a granite-jawed, London-born faith healer of 55, who estimates that one-tenth of Canada's population are spiritualist adherents. "I have contacted scores of influential world figures in my private séances," he told me. "People like Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Sir Oliver Lodge and Nurse Edith Cavell."

REV. DANIELS vies with other Canadian mediums in buttressing the validity of Philip's conversation with Mackenzie King's ghost.

"My wife, Rev. Louise Daniels, who is a medium of psychic research in Burnaby, B.C., actually knew it in advance," he firmly insists. "It happened on a lovely afternoon in October, 1953. While we were taking photographs on a visit to the ruins of Kingsmere, Mr. King communicated with my wife. He expressed his difficulty in getting a message through to the world.

"We suggested to his spirit that a newspaper reporter, of sound judgment and sincerity, would be the best medium for this purpose. Yet neither my wife nor I have ever met Mr. Philip!"

In the classic phrase of the cartoon character, Pogo, even more "incrediboble" claims are made by Rev. Anne Eshelby, medium of the 200-seat Calgary First Spiritualist Church. "Mr. Philip did not resort to lies for the sake of publicity," she told me briskly. "I myself have seen the ectoplasm of Thomas A. Edison and Harry Houdini materialize at a trumpet séance.

"Thomas Edison materialized and asked for a disconnected electric light bulb," said Rev. Eshelby. "The light in the trumppet séance room was put out by the spirit people. Then Mr. Edison held the light bulb in his hand—it illuminated the entire room!

"Harry Houdini materialized for us in his stage attire, including his top hat. The light was put out for 30 seconds by the spirit people. Then a voice told us to light the light. When we did, our medium, Clarence Britton, was so completely tied with rope it took two strong men 20 minutes to untie him!"

Still another medium, Ernest Mann, a 60-year-old Winnipegger, claims the apparitions of Mackenzie King, Franklin D. Roosevelt and Conan Doyle spoke to him at a trumpet séance last Summer—and a transcription of their ghostly dialogue was made with a recording machine.

"Mr. King sounded very metallic," says Mann. "He was pretty pessimistic about the international situation. But he told me, 'Things'll be better in 1955.' Conan Doyle told me he regretted putting in so much time writing Sherlock Holmes stories. He'd have preferred to be writing about the wonders of spiritualism. FDR? He just greeted us. Why, their ectoplasm was so strong, a camera film could have picked them up!"

Curiously, the mediums don't seem to be bothered by cynics who snipe at their deviation from established church dogma; indeed, they welcome martyrdom. A case in point is Rev. Sarah Matthews, who presides over 5,000 disciples annually at the City Temple of Spiritualism in Edmonton, Alta. She is an amiable woman of 75, originally raised as a High Church Anglican in Wigan, Lancashire, England. She glories in relating that a healer from her temple named Kelly was prosecuted in the courts for years by physicians for his "miraculous cures". Yet, she admits candidly, "Kelly was practically illiterate."

She also delighted in telling me frankly, "Opposition to spiritualism is strongest by those whose worship is based upon fear. To be a spiritualist, you must seek after knowledge in avenues considered unorthodox, un-Christian and, perhaps, even devilish."

TO find out just how devilish Canada's mediums are, I recently visited a half-dozen of their séances.

The medium I most enjoyed was Rev. Sarah Jane Evans, widow of a Toronto fish merchant. Her calling card majestically announces she is: "The great Welsh Canadian Psychic of World Renown, Metaphysician, Clairvoyant, Psychometrist."

I was already aware of Mrs. Evans' gift of showmanship. Back in 1937, she was famous for having debated before 2,000 people in the Peoples' Church on Toronto's Bloor St. Her opponent then was Rev. Martin S. Charles, a reformed vaudeville magician turned Baptist; he was touring Canada to show up what he termed "phony professors of the supernatural".

Mrs. Evans had pounded her fists on the pulpit and screamed at the magician: "You trickster! You shyster! You fake!"

Rev. Charles hollered back at her: "You, madam, are a sorceress and witch! And it says in the Bible thou shalt not suffer a witch to live."

To which the medium responded: "I'm proud to be a witch! They called Joan of Arc a witch, too."

Bedlam broke loose. The rumpus, as a Toronto Star reporter wrote of the occasion, was shushed down only when the church choir leader leaped agilely to his feet and urged his choristers into a few lusty bars of Since Jesus Came Into My Heart.

Mrs. Evans was hardly less subdued when I attended a parlor séance one recent evening in her two-story red brick house at 2503 Danforth Ave., which she calls the Spiritual Church of Nazareth. As I entered the sweetly incensed hallway, I was politely greeted by her nephew, Harry Henningham, who serves as her temple secretary. He is a well-set-up chap of 46, with a reddish moustache, a ruddy complexion, and exudes a hearty pride in his ability as a weight-lifter and wrestler.

"Write a message on this ballot," he whispered hoarsely, handing me a piece of blank white paper. "Pastor Evans will do the rest."

I scribbled on it: "What will the circulation figure of LIBERTY be at the end of six months?"

The parlor I stepped into contained 15 well-dressed people, mostly elderly women. They were seated self-consciously on straight-backed chairs; 23 chairs were empty. Up front, beside an organ and a velvet-covered pulpit, vases of yellow gladioli brightened the otherwise dimly-lit room. Framed on the wall was a picture of an Indian chief; it bore the maxim: "Great Spirit—Grant that I may not criticise my neighbor until I have walked a mile in his moccasins."

Mrs. Evans entered dramatically, peered around the room, and muttered, "My, it's a small house tonight." She proved to be a capacious, 195-pound woman of 62, with a spray of yellow flowers pinned on the left side of her flowing purple gown. She seemed an actress with magnificent stage presence. As she soared into her sermon, brown eyes flashing behind silver-rimmed spectacles, melodious Welsh voice mesmerizing us with its strength, her audience appeared to sway before her like reeds.

She explained she was both clairvoyant ("seeing with the unseen eye") and clairaudient ("hearing with the unseen ear"). She was especially proud of having healed, "by the laying on of hands", a chiropractor, who in turn cured others with his hands. "Ours is a joyous faith!" she exclaimed. "We don't believe in sin, hell, damnation or death."

What was it like being a medium? "It is like listening to music. I am surrounded always by at least 20 voices. A sea of voices growing louder and louder. And I see flashes of color and faces. I am in tune with the infinite."

AFTER the audience had sung a few hymns, the lights were subdued. Mrs.

Evans proceeded in what she called her "ballot-reading". Each person, who had written a question on a slip of paper, was given a "message", which the medium claimed she received direct from a spirit. Her astral communiqués were of the syrupy, gypsy tea-cup variety—"Your mother in spirit wants you to be of good cheer, dearie!", and "The new year promises to wipe away your gloom!" Yet I couldn't help but be touched by the desperation with which her lonely, trouble-ridden disciples clutched at these words of hope.

At one point, Mrs. Evans gazed around the room. She asked, "Is there a woman here who said to herself on the way to church, 'I wish Archie would send me comfort tonight?'" Nobody spoke up. "No?" demanded the medium. "Then can I come to you with the name Percy?"

A frail, wrinkled woman lifted her hand timidly. "Was the spirit's name perhaps my Herbert?"

"Yes, that's the condition I get. Herbert! He tells me you have endured terrible times these past two years. Is that right, sister?"

"Yes, oh, yes!"

"Well, he tells you should be more positive. Give a good day's work for a day's pay, and you won't have to worry no more, dearie."

I noticed that the medium took pains not to be too precise when making predictions. Her ad lib saws were calculated to soothe, not inform. When answering my written query, she smiled dreamily.

"Circulation is a lovely word. You are on the threshold of something big. You need more biography. Your circulation may look small now. But it will be tremendous! And you will have a lot to do with it. God bless you, dearie."

An additional séance was conducted by Mrs. Evans' student medium, Mrs. Maude Thurston; she is a 70-year-old, thin woman, with gleaming false teeth and a jolly manner. "I've gone through two husbands," Mrs. Thurston confided jovially. "My first husband passed into spirit after we'd spent 40 years together. My second was a justice of the peace. The dears are still a great comfort to me. Of course, the spirit of my first husband is more entertaining than the spirit of my second. After all, my first understands me more."

Mrs. Thurston appeared to have a more vivid perception than her mentor. Occasionally, she would flail the air around her, as though trying to punch a ghost in the eye; and she would mutter loud asides, "All right, spirit . . . Don't be so frisky!"

MONTREAL'S mediums, I discovered, have added but a few variations in their séances. One of the most flamboyant is Mrs. Maddocks White, whose ads in the Montreal Star picturesquely announce her Sunday night séances as: "Mystic Flame Of The Soul—Science Of Radiant Life—Trance address by Mrs. White (The Soul marches on!)"

Before 70 fashionably-dressed disciples in a salon of the Sheraton-Mount Royal Hotel, Mrs. White presents a quaint figure. She is a shapeless, craggy woman in her 60's; she looks startlingly like Josephine Hull, the bewildered dowager of the Broadway plays Harvey and The Solid Gold Cadillac. She stands spotlighted, in a bead-fringed, snow-white gown, before a lectern mounted on a cloth-covered table. While not visible to the audience, the lectern contains a microphone; this is valuable in creating an appropriate effect, because her voice hauntingly echoes down from a loudspeaker set in the air-conditioning vent overhead.

During the course of her trance address, "Mystic Flame of The Soul (The Soul marches on!)", she closes her eyes and speaks in the hollow voice of her spirit guide, whom she calls "Marquessa". In answering questions, she presses the slips of paper to her forehead; asks the writers of questions to identify themselves

Are You Psychic?

ABOUT one out of every five persons studied by Psychologist Dr. J. B. Rhine at Duke University over the last 25 years has a sixth "psychic" sense. In the following test, developed by the American Society for Psychical Research, if you score "Yes" on at least 7 questions, you may be psychic:

1 Have you ever had a premonition, either in a dream or awake, of an unexpected death or accident which later really occurred?

2 Did you ever hear a doorbell ring and somehow instantly know who was standing outside—someone you had no reason to expect?

3 Do you frequently pick up a ringing phone and say, without thinking, "Hello —", and find you've greeted the right person?

4 While playing cards, do you have successful hunches often to keep or discard certain cards—though it may seem illogical at the time?

5 Do you often get a feeling a letter is about to arrive through some means you couldn't explain?

6 Do you often get a feeling that a letter is about to arrive from someone—and find it does?

7 When something was lost, did you ever have the sudden feeling, "It's over there" —and find it?

8 Have someone across the room turn over a deck of cards, one at a time. Try to guess each turn whether the card is red or black. Chance will give you 26 right. But if you guess an average of 37 or more right on three successive runs through the deck, mark this question "Yes".

9 Now try guessing the denominations of the cards (leaving out the suit). Since there are 13 denominations (deuce to ace) chance will give you four correct out of your 52 tries. Try three runs through the deck. If your score is seven or better per run, mark this question "Yes".

10 Now guess each card as to both number and suit (ace of hearts, four of spades, etc.). Chance will give you only one in 52. If you get a total of 16 right in all four runs through the deck, mark "yes". Maybe you are psychic. ◆◆

Evans proceeded in what she called her "ballot-reading". Each person, who had written a question on a slip of paper, was given a "message", which the medium claimed she received direct from a spirit. Her astral communiqués were of the syrupy, gypsy tea-cup variety—"Your mother in spirit wants you to be of good cheer, dearie!", and "The new year promises to wipe away your gloom!" Yet I couldn't help but be touched by the desperation with which her lonely, trouble-ridden disciples clutched at these words of hope.

At one point, Mrs. Evans gazed around the room. She asked, "Is there a woman here who said to herself on the way to church, 'I wish Archie would send me comfort tonight?'" Nobody spoke up. "No?" demanded the medium. "Then can I come to you with the name Percy?"

A frail, wrinkled woman lifted her hand timidly. "Was the spirit's name perhaps my Herbert?"

"Yes, that's the condition I get. Herbert! He tells me you have endured terrible times these past two years. Is that right, sister?"

"Yes, oh, yes!"

"Well, he tells you should be more positive. Give a good day's work for a day's pay, and you won't have to worry no more, dearie."

I noticed that the medium took pains not to be too precise when making predictions. Her ad lib saws were calculated to soothe, not inform. When answering my written query, she smiled dreamily.

"Circulation is a lovely word. You are on the threshold of something big. You need more biography. Your circulation may look small now. But it will be tremendous! And you will have a lot to do with it. God bless you, dearie."

LAYING & REPAIRING FLOOR TILE

by PETER B. WHITTALL

THERE'S no reason why young Canadians can't lay and repair floor tile in their homes. By following my instructions, you will find the job much easier.

Asphalt floor tile has two main qualities: (1) it wears like iron (and with an ideal sub-flooring will wear forever); and (2) it can be made pliable as a piece of wet flannel. This last virtue makes it vital for concrete basement floors.

When cold, asphalt tile will chip and break into pieces like a pane of glass. But when heated (with a blow torch, in a moderately warmed oven, with an electric paint remover, or even with a household iron), it becomes pliable enough to wrap around your finger. Or at least, to fit the contours of an uneven concrete basement floor. This type of tile is also widely used on bedroom, hall and kitchen floors, laid on top of plywood, floor sheathing or masonite. Occasionally, however, an uneven joint in the underlay will cause the tile to crack.

Replacing a broken tile requires a local application of heat and a sharp chisel, or putty knife. There's only one way to remove a broken tile: by starting in the center, carefully lifting out the pieces with a chisel or paint remover, as they become soft. Be careful not to cut, mark or even tamper with edges of the good tiles surrounding the damaged one, or you'll end up by replacing several good tiles instead of only the broken one.

When you have carefully removed all pieces of the broken tile, spread fresh tile cement and press the new tile, while still soft, into the empty square. Your job is finished. If the underlay flooring is cracked or warped, it should be nailed down before the new tile is placed in position.

Laying new asphalt tile on a concrete floor usually requires a coat of asphalt tile primer, in addition to the usual coat of adhesive. The primer is a thin, black mixture that splashes easily; so be careful of the walls, even if they have already been sheeted in with plywood. The sealer is so constituted that capillary action will draw it well into the wood fibres, staining the wall, if you pour it on too liberally. Let the floor dry thoroughly after priming; then you are ready to spread the waterproof asphalt tile cement (use a special tile cement spreader), and lay your tile in any color or pattern you choose.

Tile-Tex asphalt floor tile, made by Flintkote Co. of Canada, New Toronto, is excellent tile for basements, "rec" rooms, kitchens and bedrooms. Other top-rate manufacturers of tile: Dominion Oil Cloth and Linoleum Co., Montreal; Armstrong Cork Canada Ltd., Montreal; Alexander Murray and Co. Ltd., Montreal.

Final caution: use the proper type of spreader and avoid getting the tile cement on too thick. ◆◆

"to aid the vibrations"; and dispenses the usual sugary, "Your future looks bright, dearie" kind of Pollyanna. Her husband then helps the apparently exhausted Mrs. White to her seat, and asks the disciples to contribute "love offerings" of at least 50 cents each.

Another Montreal medium, Mrs. Ethel Yanor, is noted for her power of "psychometry"—the ability to predict your future by clutching in her hand a trinket belonging to you. She is a bird-like woman with a nervous English accent. Every Sunday, in the second-story Hall Of Spiritual Thought in suburban Verdun, she conducts séances before 40 elderly disciples seated in a circle.

A bowl of water, denoting healing power, is placed in the center of the circle of chairs. Lights are dimmed, except for a rose-shaded lamp. Head down, arms hugging her sides, Mrs. Yanor asks: "Something bothering you, dearie? Do you have someone passed over into spirit world?" With these facts established, Mrs. Yanor cries: "Yes, I have a message to you from—from—" (the thin hand dramatically gestures over the thin forehead) —from John!"

The patter seems to go on interminably, and the hard seats seem to grow harder. Yet you are sternly warned not to cross your legs. "Lifting one leg off the floor," the medium reproves one laggard, "will stop my vibrations."

To test the value of psychometry, I gave my steel pipe lighter to an apparent expert in that medium field, Rev. William Partridge. He is happy, pink-cheeked chap, of 61; when not conducting séances at Springdale Spiritualist Church on Toronto's Avenue Rd., he works in the building maintenance department of the Canadian General Electric Co.

"All the inspectors at General Electric know I'm clairvoyant," he explained to me, with a small laugh. "When an inspector meets me, he says, 'How are you, Bill?' Then, after a pause, he'll ask me, 'And how am I?'"

Rubbing my pipe lighter with his fingers, Rev. Partridge closed his eyes, and murmured, as though imparting news of momentous import: "You will meet with a group of people . . . You are taking a journey . . . A spirit named George has a smile for you . . . I see you have psychic powers unknown to you . . . You could be developed into a medium, but are too skeptical . . . Beware of being spelled by a bad condition."

I GOT little more satisfaction when I attended a séance healing session conducted by Rev. May Potts in her Britten Memorial Spiritual Church, at 104 Clinton St., in Toronto. She is a stout matron of 62, with a broad Cheshire accent. She is endowed with a robust voice, a flowing white gown and an Indian spirit guide whom she calls "Chief Yellow Jacket of the Mohawk Tribe"

"In 18 years I've healed over 5,000 people—everything from arthritis to nervous conditions," she says. "I have X-ray power. My hands are like batteries. When I'm in a trance, the spirit uses my voice box. I seem to float on air. It's like going down in an elevator. Like coming out of anesthesia."

Along with 20 other persons one Sunday afternoon, I crowded into her small incensed parlor.

To test her preliminary trance communication, I'd written on a slip of paper: "Does my dear Uncle Benny have a message for me?"

Eyes closed, she moaned lugubriously: "I am in a condition with your Uncle Benjamin. He tells me he is happy over the great ocean. He says be of good heart. He wants you to know you will go to Montreal soon, meet many people."

"Does my uncle speak to you in clear English?" I asked.

"Yes, very clearly."

I thought this highly unusual. My Uncle Benny, when I knew him in life, could speak only Yiddish.

"Is he alone in the spirit world?" I asked.

"No. The spirit of your father is with him."

"Impossible," I said. "My dad's still living. It's my mother who passed away."

Blandly, Mrs. Potts continued: "Well, I knew it was one of your parents! Is it not true she suffered from a heart condition?"

"No. She died of cancer."

Mrs. Potts opened her frosty brown eyes; gave me a piercing look. "Well, I see that she suffered a lot, anyway." Quickly, she concluded, "Your mother looks radiantly beautiful, and she sends you blessings from the angel world. Her voice is now fading."

Mrs. Potts' healing ceremony really amazed me. She and two fellow healers—a plump, bald gentleman and a lean, weatherbeaten man—stood behind three chairs on a platform. While organ music sounded sonorously through the parlor, a procession of middle-aged women seated themselves on the chairs and allowed themselves to be subjected to a ritual with strong sexual connotations.

The healers began by pressing their fingers against the closed eyelids of each woman. Then, as the organ music rose

ANSWER TO You Blow The Whistle

"The goal counted," says Hayes, "because Howe was not offside. That's right, not offside, although I think about 75 per cent of hockey fans would say he had been offside a mile on that play."

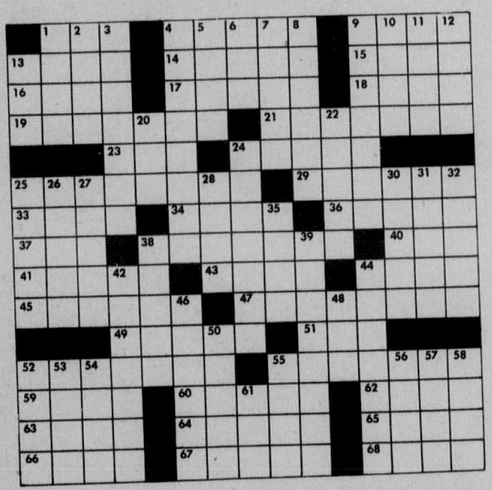

Why? Take a look at Rule 69 (a) of the Official N.H.L. Rulebook: The position of a player's skates and not that of his stick shall be the determining factor in all instances in deciding an "off-side". A player is offside when both skates are completely over the outer edge of the determining center line or blue line involved in the play.

"You should have heard those fans—and the Toronto bench—when that goal was allowed," says Hayes. "But Howe had one skate touching the ice outside the blue line, and the other inside, so he was still on-side."

Detroit went on to win the game (3-1), the series and finally the Stanley Cup again. ◆◆ higher and higher, their fingers traveled to the ladies' hips, kneading their backs, shaking their bosoms, stroking their legs. The subjects, quivering under these caresses, seemed to enjoy the ceremony immensely. After each apparent cure, the healer wiped his hands on a towel, and proceeded to stroke the next eagerly awaiting lady.

When this mass massage of the flesh was over, Mrs. Potts concluded piously, "I do hope, friends, you have enjoyed yourself spiritually."

IS Canadian spiritualism a racket or a bona fide religion? It's hard to say. Some mediums themselves are quick to denounce the charlatans who write messages in a darkened séance parlor, with slate pencils gripped in their mouths; the fakers whose ectoplasm is merely fine gauze dipped in luminous paint; or the occult gyps, who use the paint to make the face of a cherubic child spirit glow eerily on the flesh of the medium's knee, when the swami's skirt is drawn up. At Lily Dale, N.Y., where Canadian spiritualists convene every summer, the Toronto medium, Ellen Lowe, has often lambasted "ten-cent spiritualism and tin-horn mediums."

Yet the Canadian medium, Sarah Jane Evans, says with some truth, "We've advanced far beyond ouija boards, table-tapping and table-levitation via a fraudulent stick held in the medium's glove. Sure, you'll find rascals in Canadian spiritualism. There are a few bad apples in every barrel, in every religion. Why tar us all with the same black brush?"

Certainly, the spiritualists should not be banned in Canada. That form of censorship ought not to be tolerated in a country which offers religious freedom for all, no matter how goofily unorthodox the religion. After all, the mediums furnish a form of spiritual solace to their disciples, and they do not appear to harm anyone. When one of their faith healers, William Eugene Ford of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., was twice fined $100 for violating the Drugless Practitioners' Act recently, scores of his patients, claiming they'd been cured of cancer and stomach ulcers, paraded into court to pay their savior's fines.

The sovereign criticism levelled at spiritualists is that their mumbo-jumbo obscures the painstaking research in extra-sensory perception, conducted by scientists like Dr. J. B. Rhine at Duke University, N.C. In Montreal last June, at the International Congress of Psychology, Dr. Gardner Murphy said of telepathy and other twilight powers of the mind: "We are standing at the threshold of a huge, unknown world." And in Toronto a few weeks ago, noted British Biologist Dr. Julian Huxley, while spurning spiritualism, told me mental telepathy was indeed worthy of scientific study. He called it a human capacity in a rudimentary stage of evolution, "the same as man's mathematical faculties during the Ice Age."

Are Canada's mediums, with their sensitive talents for telepathy, really able to commune with Mackenzie King's ghost? In his lifetime, King claimed to have communed with the spirits of Abraham Lincoln, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Franklin D. Roosevelt, his mother, and his Irish terrier, Pat. Now that he is dead himself, the enigma of his own ghostly eloquence can be answered only by Mackenzie King's wraith, hovering on an astral sphere somewhere over the Gatineau Hills of Kingsmere, Que., and undoubtedly chuckling gleefully at the fuss below stirred up by his old friend, Percy Philip. ◆◆

For twenty-five years Canada's famous Prime Minister was a practicing spiritualist. He believed that, through mediums, he had communicated with his mother, Franklin D. Roosevelt and even his dog Pat, after they had died. Here, for the first time, is revealed the best-kept secret of Mr. King's amazing career

LONDON

ONE WET Saturday afternoon in October 1948, William Lyon Mackenzie King lay ill at the Dorchester Hotel in Park Lane. His visitors were few and uniquely eminent—King George VI, Winston Churchill, Prime Minister Nehru of India—so the London press was keeping a close watch on the hotel lobby.

Reporters were amazed when two plainly dressed women came in, asked for Mr. King's suite and were shown up immediately. The two women did not reappear. They were ushered out by a side door (they couldn't understand why at the time) and the reporters never did find out who they were—Geraldine Cummins, well-known medium and author of many books on spiritualism, and her friend and collaborator Beatrice Gibbes.

That was as close as any outsider ever came, in Mackenzie King's lifetime, to the best-kept secret of his career—the fact that the Prime Minister

For twenty-five years Canada's famous Prime Minister was a practicing spiritualist. He believed that, through mediums, he had communicated with his mother, Franklin D. Roosevelt and even his dog Pat, after they had died. Here, for the first time, is revealed the best-kept secret of Mr. King's amazing career

ONE WET Saturday afternoon in October 1948, William Lyon Mackenzie King lay ill at the Dorchester Hotel in Park Lane. His visitors were few and uniquely eminent—King George VI, Winston Churchill, Prime Minister Nehru of India—so the London press was keeping a close watch on the hotel lobby.

Reporters were amazed when two plainly dressed women came in, asked for Mr. King's suite and were shown up immediately. The two women did not reappear. They were ushered out by a side door (they couldn't understand why at the time) and the reporters never did find out who they were—Geraldine Cummins, well-known medium and author of many books on spiritualism, and her friend and collaborator Beatrice Gibbes.

That was as close as any outsider ever came, in Mackenzie King's lifetime, to the best-kept secret of his career—the fact that the Prime Minister of Canada had been for more than twenty-five years a convinced and practicing spiritualist.

Actually the word is somewhat ambiguous. Mr. King was not a member of the Spiritualist Church and spiritualism was not a religion to him: he remained to the end of his days a good Presbyterian. But he did believe in the life after death, not as a matter of faith but as a proven fact. He did believe it possible to communicate with the departed, and that he himself had talked beyond the grave many times with his mother, his brother and sister, and such friends as Franklin D. Roosevelt and Sir Wilfrid Laurier. He did repeatedly attend seances and have sittings with mediums here in London and elsewhere.

To his real intimates he made no secret of these beliefs. Some of them joined him many times in sessions with the ouija board at Ottawa. They knew from his own lips what comfort he got from his "communion with the dead." Members of his personal staff knew it too—in some cases Mr. King didn't know they knew, but they all did.

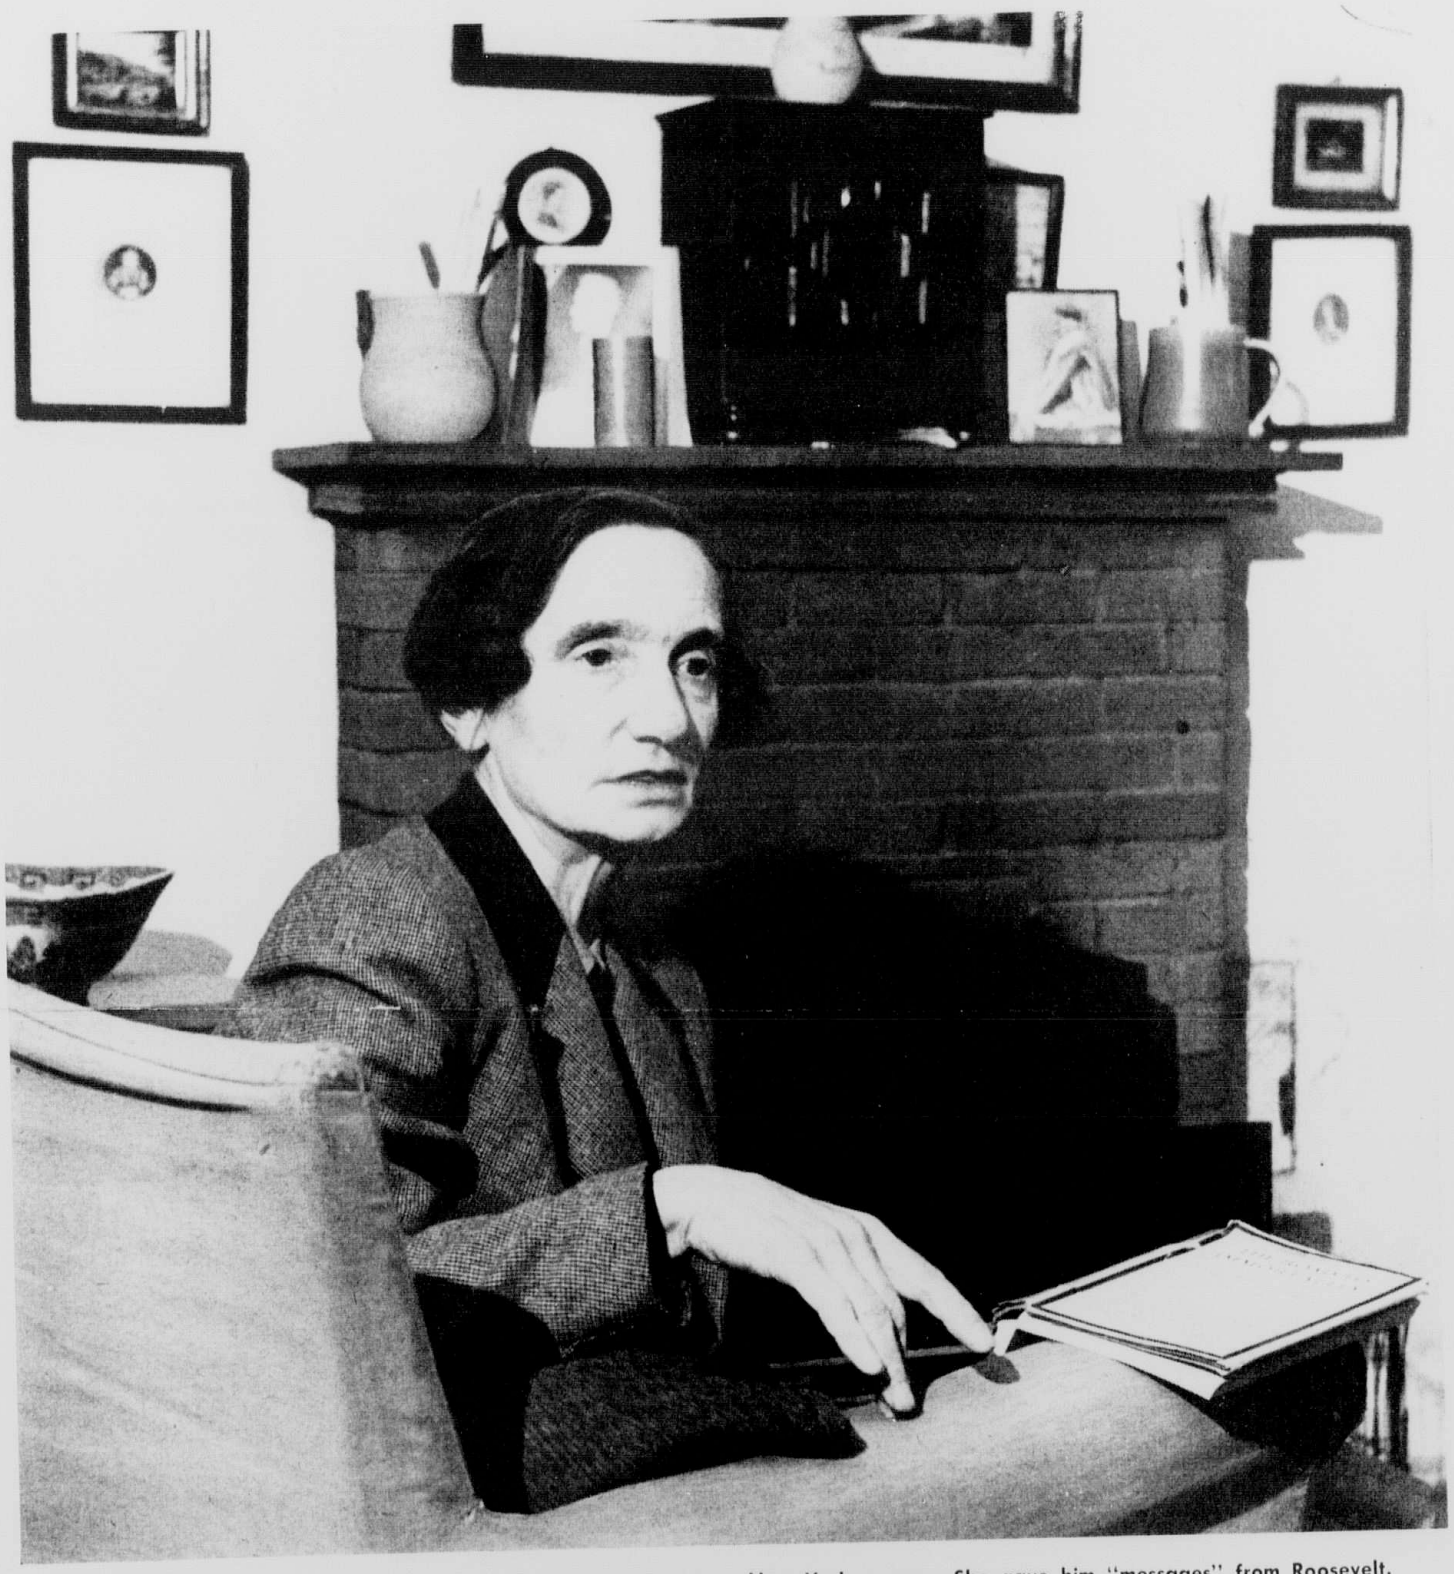

Everybody kept the secret, for an obvious reason: If the facts were publicly known, people might have thought the affairs of Canada were being conducted on advice from the spirit world.

Indeed, Mr. King had not been dead a fortnight before a statement to that effect was published in the spiritualist weekly, Psychic News. His old friend, the late Duchess of Hamilton, in an interview, said Mr. King had always sought spirit guidance in affairs of state.

This was untrue—on Mr. King's own testimony and on the evidence of those who knew him best. He sought contact with his dead mother and brother and friends not to consult them but simply to talk to them.

Mrs. Helen Hughes, a pleasant Glasgow housewife who is one of the best-known of present-day mediums and who sat with Mr. King often over a period of many years, explained it to me over a cup of tea in the Psychic College, Edinburgh:

"It was as if he had his mother living over here in Britain—what would any son do, if he came here on business? He'd look her up; he'd want to see her and talk to her. He didn't want her advice about public affairs, for he knew more about them than she did. He wanted to know how she was, whom she had with her. He wanted to talk to her about family matters."

Mrs. Hughes cannot recall a single instance, in all her sittings with Mr. King, when there was any mention of public affairs. The only exception, if you can call it an exception, was the question of Mr. King's own retirement from public life.

"He was warned," she said. "At least three years before he died his mother told him he was doing too much, his heart wouldn't stand it. He took her advice in the end, but not soon enough."

Perhaps one reason he delayed was that he got opposite advice from President Roosevelt. He asked F.D.R.'s counsel at a sitting with Miss Cummins; the answer came back "Don't retire, stay on the job. Your country needs you there."

After Mr. King had gone back to Canada Miss Cummins got another message; the President had changed his mind. He now thought Mr. King's health too precarious for the load he was carrying, and urged him to retire at once. Miss Cummins passed the word along to Ottawa.

(Perhaps I'd better say at this point that I myself am not a spiritualist and do not believe in these alleged communications from the next world. For the sake of brevity and clarity, I haven't bothered to use words like "alleged" and "purported" in every other sentence. Whether or not you or I believe these messages were real, the point is that Mackenzie King did believe it.)

At a later sitting with Miss Cummins he got a message from F.D.R. which did concern public affairs. The President told Mr. King to watch Asia—that's where the war danger lay. The Berlin airlift which was a focus of attention then was a side issue, a Soviet bluff. There was no mention of Korea by name, but F.D.R. did say he thought there'd be war in the Far East within two years.

Miss Cummins recalls that the Prime Minister "seemed puzzled and a little shaken by this part of the communication. He said he made it a rule to ignore advice thus given, and trusted solely to his own and his advisers' judgment."

What he wanted from a medium, and what he normally got, was intimate converse with his own family. Like so many others, Mackenzie King became interested in spiritualism because he was a lonely and a sorely bereaved man.

The mother to whom he was and remained devoted; his beloved brother Macdougall King, the doctor; his favorite sister Isabel—all had died in a few years. His bereavement was sharpened by the thought that he had not been at his mother's death-bed. At her insistence he had gone back to his 1917 election campaign in North York, leaving her mortally ill; she was dead when he returned. Mr. King never quite forgave himself for this.

He was introduced to spiritualism by the late Marchioness of Aberdeen, who was herself a believer. Lady Aberdeen told him of Mrs. Etta Wriedt, an American "direct-voice" medium who acquired great fame in her day.

It was Mrs. Wriedt who received, in 1911, the gold watch bequeathed by Queen Victoria to "the most deserving medium" of the time. The Queen had intended the watch for her Highland gillie John Brown, a medium through whom she believed she could talk to her beloved Prince Albert. Mrs. Wriedt in her turn got the watch after having shown, to the satisfaction of British editor W. T. Stead, that she had received a communication from the spirit of Queen Victoria in July 1911.

Mrs. Wriedt decided before her own death that the Queen's watch ought to go back to England. She entrusted it to Mr. King, who brought it here on his next visit and gave it to the London Spiritualist Alliance. There, mounted on a blue velvet cushion, it is still on display.

All that came later. In the early 1920s Mr. King was convinced of the genuineness of Mrs. Wriedt's gift by the experience of a friend of his.

The wife of a Liberal senator, now dead, had lost her father, and the father's will couldn't be found. After futile search she consulted Mrs. Wriedt. The medium told her it was in a chest of drawers in a house in France. She looked, and there it was. That's the story as Mr. King used to tell it.

Mrs. Wriedt used a silver trumpet from which, at her seances, the voice of the departed would proceed. An old friend of Mr. King recalled: "She'd put the trumpet in the middle of the circle and it would roll around and stop in front of the person about to receive a message. I remember the thing rolling up to me and giving me quite a rap on the shin. The voice that came out did sound very like a person I knew who had died.

Apparently that didn't shake Mr. King, whose own French was rudimentary anyway. He became more and more interested in spiritualism as the years went by. For the last twenty years of his life he found time, on every trip to Britain, for sittings with various mediums.

Mrs. Helen Hughes remembers the first she ever had with him, in the early 1930s: "I had no idea who he was. They don't tell us, you know. All I knew was, a gentleman would be coming for a sitting at 10.30 in the morning He just came in and sat down without saying anything.

"One of the voices I heard was a man who said he was his brother. Mr. King wanted to be told something about him, and it came through that he was a doctor. After a while I got the name, Mac. He said a lot about the family—he'd say: 'Do you remember, Willie, when we were children, do you remember so-and-so?' After it was over Mr. King said 'I know that was my brother. He spoke of things nobody else knew, nobody but the two of us.' "

Through Mrs. Hughes and the late Hester Dowden, another medium of considerable fame, Mr. King got in touch not only with the human members of his family but also with his own Scottish voice. Mrs. Wriedt was a "direct-voice" medium through whom the deceased could speak directly in his or her own earthly accent.

Hester Dowden and Miss Cummins got their communications by "automatic writing." Mrs. Dowden used to be fully conscious and made comments of her own, sometimes rather facetious and irreverent, on the messages coming through. Miss Cummins goes into a trance, she says, and loses consciousness completely before her hand begins to move across the page. She sits down and "goes into the silence," shading her closed eyes with her left hand; after a while her "control," an ancient Greek named Astor, announces his presence and begins to send messages from other departed spirits. Miss Cummins writes all this down in a rapid script with all the words run together, no spaces, and in handwriting that varies markedly as different "communicators" speak.

Mr. King's habit was to take the written messages off the foolscap pad, sheet by sheet as they were completed, and to keep the originals himself. He would send back copies to the mediums, often with comments of his own on the "evidential" material they contained. Of one message from President Roosevelt, reporting that F.D.R. had met Mr. King's mother, the Prime Minister said:

These spirit messages, the originals as well as the copies, are still extant in Ottawa and in London, but even now they are treated as closely secret. None of the people associated with Mr. King's spiritualist activities will talk freely or willingly about him. Had it not been for an initial breach of silence just after Mr. King's death, they'd be even less willing to talk.

Most of King's contacts with mediums in Britain were made through Miss Mercy Phillimore, secretary of the London Spiritualist Alliance. Miss Phillimore won't discuss Mr. King's interest in spiritualism, won't reveal to whom she sent him or when or where. But she will talk, very strongly and indignantly, about that unfortunate statement in Psychic News that he "always sought spirit guidance in affairs of state."

"Mr. King was an investigator," she said. "He did accept the spirit hypothesis and he had the courage to say so, but he never ceased to be critical in appraising evidence. He was a highly intelligent man with shrewd judgment, and to say he consulted mediums for advice in statecraft is preposterous. It is also outrageous, an insult to his memory."

Actually Mr. King seems to have behaved, in his psychic experiments, with all the caution and circumspection he displayed in other things. The London Spiritualist Alliance, founded under its present name in 1884, is one of the oldest organizations of its kind. It is regarded in spiritualist circles as a pretty careful investigator of mediums' claims, and it also has a reputation for secrecy.

Ordinarily, I was told, the mediums didn't know who Mr. King was. Miss Cummins recalls that at her first sitting with him she thought he was a clergyman from New York. (She says she was so ignorant of Canada that she thought the capital city was Montreal, yet the messages on that first day included such relatively obscure names as W. S. Fielding, who was Mr. King's rival for the Liberal leadership thirty-two years ago, and Sir Oliver Mowat, a beloved Irish terrier, Pat. Mrs. Hughes once reported to him: "Your sister is here, and she has a beautiful dog with her. The dog doesn't seem to have been very long over there (i.e., very long dead)."

Mr. King was greatly impressed and told Mrs. Hughes a story he had told to many friends in Ottawa. The night before Pat died, Mr. King's watch fell off his bedside table "for no apparent reason"—he found it in the morning, face down on the floor, with the hands stopped at twenty minutes past four.

"I am not psychic," Mr. King said, "but I knew then, as if a voice were speaking to me, that Pat would die before another twenty-four hours went by." Sure enough, that night Pat got out of his basket with a last effort, climbed up on his master's bed, and died there. Mr. King looked at his watch—it was twenty past four.

Mrs. Hughes' method, as a medium, is what they call "clairaudience"—she hears voices and reports what they say to the client. Sometimes, though not always, she can see faces and bodily forms. Sometimes she is in a trance, sometimes fully conscious, but in either case the message comes through in her

Premier of Ontario in Sir John A. Macdonald's time.)

Mrs. Helen Hughes says she had been giving him sittings over a period of four years, sometimes two in a single week, before she knew his name. She learned his identity for the first time in 1937, at a party given by the Duchess of Hamilton at the London Spiritualist Alliance headquarters in Queensberry Place, South Kensington.

One of the guests at that party was a Scotsman named J. J. MacIndoe, and it was he who first revealed that Mackenzie King was a spiritualist. He wrote a letter to the Psychic News just after Mr. King's death; the letter was published, and Psychic News promptly sent a reporter to interview the Duchess of Hamilton for more details. Both stories were widely reprinted in Canada.

With the secret thus broken, Miss Cummins wrote an appendix to the autobiographical book she was preparing, published this year under the title Unseen Adventures. It comprised a partial report of the two sittings she had with Mr. King in 1947 and 1948. Private and personal communications were deleted, but she did reveal that he had got messages from his family and from President Roosevelt.

She sent proofs of the appendix to a friend in Ottawa who showed them to Mackenzie King's executors. One of them, Duncan MacTavish, of Ottawa, was flying to England the next day on other business. Leonard W. Brockington, of Toronto, was already in London. Together they called to urge Miss Cummins and her publishers to suppress the story. Reluctantly, and at considerable cost and inconvenience, they agreed to cut out Mr. King's name and a number of identifying details, including the name of President Roosevelt.

In the book as published, the appendix is entitled Reminiscences of a British Commonwealth Statesman; Mr. King appears as Mr. S., F.D.R. as X.Y.Z. Miss Cummins was rather taken aback when I turned up at Miss Gibbes' small house in Chelsea, already able from previous information to identify these pseudonymous characters and fill in a number of the deleted details. She is still worried lest she be accused of breaking faith in consenting to see me at all.

In general, though, people who knew of Mr. King's beliefs are glad the story is coming out.

Mediums differ a lot in their attitude toward their work and their own beliefs concerning it. Mrs. Helen Hughes is a minister of the Spiritualist Church and a professional medium—to her, spiritualism is a religion and sittings an occupation. Miss Cummins, on the other hand, is a devout member of the Church of Ireland, a novelist and playwright by profession. Some of her books are ordinary novels about Ireland, written with her conscious mind. Others she believes to have been dictated to her by writers now dead—many are chronicles of biblical times.

She is not a professional medium, indeed she does not give sittings at all except at the request of personal friends. Like Mackenzie King she regards spiritualism as enquiry and experiment, not worship, and she retains a certain amount of scepticism about the results.

But all spiritualists, the believers and the researchers alike, have an interest in letting the facts be known. They feel that if a man as eminent, as astute, as famous for realistic judgments as Mackenzie King was convinced their conclusions were genuine, they have a right to his testimony before the world. While he lived his secret was kept with absolute fidelity, but they see no point in secrecy now.

Moreover they are absolutely convinced that Mr. King himself would agree with them. He told several people here, in the later years of his life, that it was his firm intention to publish a full account of his psychic experiments and beliefs in the memoirs he then hoped to write. He hadn't quite decided whether this chapter would be published during his lifetime or withheld until after his death, but publish it he would, sooner or later. He wanted to communicate his own unshakeable faith in the life after death.

"People who don't believe in survival," he once said to Mrs. Helen Hughes, "haven't yet begun to live."

Therefore they feel that whatever Mr. King's executors may desire, his own wishes are served by publication of the facts. From the little I knew of Mr. King I think they're right. If Mr. King's belief has turned out to be true, and if he is indeed looking over my shoulder from some astral sphere, I don't think he'll mind. ★

Sherbrooke, Que.

I want first to thank you for the excellent publicity provided Sherbrooke through your wide circulation (Sherbrooke: Where Two Live As Happily As One, Oct. 15). However . . . most of the facts in the article were entirely misleading. Personally I object very strongly to the last item in which the writer stated that the Archbishop of Sherbrooke, Rev. Phillip Desranleau, advised his people to vote for Armand Nadeau, as he did not want me elected. This is an absolute lie! I positively know that if he (the Archbishop) had taken any part—which he did not—he would have been in favor of my election. —Chas. B. Howard, Mayor, Sherbrooke, Que.

● Thank you for the very fine article on Sherbrooke, Quebec. It expresses the feelings of our fair city exactly as they are. I am well qualified to speak on the bonne entente since, although I am French, my education has been entirely English. Let us hope the article will show some of the die-hard fanatics on either side of the fence that it is not a question of being English or French but of being a good Canadian citizen.—John J. Dunn, London, Ont.

● We would like to take up the cudgel on behalf of our hotels which were mentioned toward the end of the article in a definitely derogatory manner. We do not claim the hotels to be the best available anywhere in Canada but we do feel that in the main they are quite a lot better than those in similar communities across our Dominion. Furthermore, their owners are striving, during the times of high costs, to better the hotels and the service offered, continually.—Harry Walker, Vice-President, Chamber of Commerce, Sherbrooke, Que.

Delhi, Ont.

It was of great interest to me reading Tobacco Town (Sept. 15). Just thirty years ago I had the opportunity to visit Delhi and the district where all this tobacco is now grown. It was then a district of derelict farms. I went with a friend from Toronto who was trying to sell a lot of these farms on easy terms for a firm in Toronto and, in the train, I heard a man saying in a loud voice that he considered it a shame to encourage people from the Old Country to come out, and then sell them such useless land. At that time I could have bought hundreds of farms there for a down payment of five hundred dollars on any of them, so badly was the land thought of; in fact it could hardly be sold at any price.—Alfred Gamble, Liverpool, Eng.

● After I had read your Tobacco Town I had a great desire to talk to the writer of that article for he had overlooked many things and made what I consider false statements. I feel it was an insult to the residents of Delhi thirty or more years ago. The writer described Delhi as a place of arid obscurity, a desolate community withering away on acres of blown sand.

Would arid land without irrigation grow vegetables for the canning factory, acres of strawberries and other small fruits? Would arid land grow cherries, pears, plums, peaches, grapes and apples that are second to none? Does arid land produce oats, barley, wheat, rye, buckwheat, soybeans, corn and hay to feed cows, pigs, horses and sheep and poultry that were on these farms?

It is less than one hundred and fifty years since our pioneer parents settled here and cleared the land and built the unpretentious homes spoken of.

They were industrious, patriotic, friendly, neighborly God-fearing people who paved the way hoping for a better Canada. If these people had not paved the way our new Canadians would not be making money so easy.—Mrs. Bruce Wilkinson, Courtland, Ont.

Charlottetown, P.E.I.

The article in the Oct. 1 issue, Charlottetown Likes to Laugh, appealed to me . . . You are the first of many whom I have seen dealing with Charlottetown and Prince Edward Island who have gone below the surface and revealed just what the P. E. Islanders are like.—F. R. Wallace, Halifax.

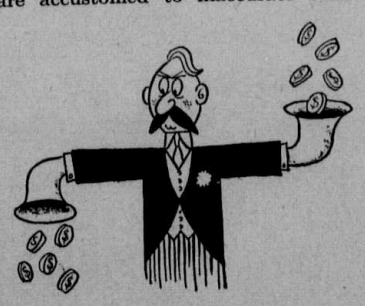

● Charlottetown Likes to Laugh was the damnedest compilation of near truths, half-truths, and utter falsehoods that I ever read.—W. M. Murphy Charlottetown, P.E.I.

Lunenburg, N.S.

In the article (July 15) about the town of Lunenburg, N.S., Charles Rawlings states that most of the stained glass windows in St. John's Anglican Church are in memory of fishermen. If Mr. Rawlings will again read the inscriptions he will find that only a few are in memory of fishermen, the majority are dedicated to the memory of church members not engaged in fishing. Also, after living in this town for several years, I cannot call Lunenburg drab. Most people find it very colorful.—Mrs. Reed H. Barnes, Montreal.

The Senators Get the Squeeze

Many times I have heard the statement—as well as seeing it in the Press —that Senators receive $2,000 expense allowance, tax free, but have paid little attention, as members of the Senate are accustomed to inaccurate statements about themselves and their work. However, when so outstanding an authority on parliamentary activities as Mr. Blair Fraser makes the same incorrect statement in his Backstage at Ottawa in Maclean's Oct. 15, I think it is time to call attention to the error. The Senators do not receive this expense allowance tax free; they pay income tax on both indemnity and expense allowance. — Ira Campbell Fallis, The Senate, Canada.

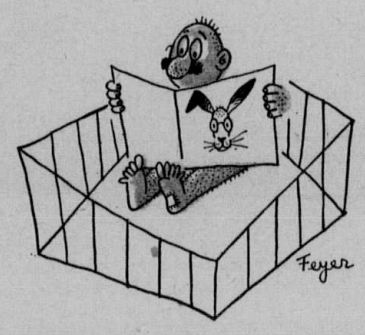

The Woodsworth Memory

I lift my hat to Maclean's and Blair Fraser for daring to write an article on the life of one of Canada's outstanding leaders, the late J. S. Woodsworth (Nov. 1). Labor owes a debt of gratitude to this good man. He was an outstanding example of self-sacrifice and is one man in our great Dominion whose memory should be perpetuated in bronze. He was no soldier, he was no statesman, and he certainly was no politician, but we the people are enjoying at the present time the fruit of his labor and self-sacrifice. All honor to Maclean's—we at least have his memory perpetuated in print.—T. Percy Hall, St. Andrews East, Que.

A Knight in Arms

Enter F. A. Wood, of Hensall, Ont. (Mailbag, Oct. 15), a knight in shining armor, mounted on a white steed, bearing the banner: Shame on Eric Nicol. Seems Eric used the word

"damn" in his Marriage Clinic article (Aug. 1).

Mr. Wood is too, too typical of the dull little men who are cluttering up this Dominion from coast to coast. He was more concerned with searching for soiled linen than he was with the fact that here in front of him was the work of one of the wittiest Canadian writers since Stephen Leacock.

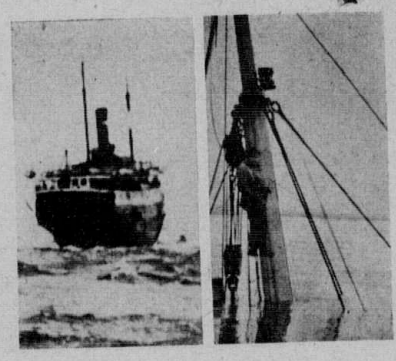

What's the matter with "damn"? It's not a swear word. It can be highly expressive, and I have heard it used by some of the best people, including members of the Church.

I suggest that Wood restrict his reading to Uncle Wiggily, which is tailored to little folk with his degree of sophistication.—George M. Martin, Toronto.

Should Homework Go?

As a teacher I quite agree with your article, Let's Abolish Homework, in the Oct. 1 issue.—Milton E. MacInnes, Glace Bay, N.S.

● Instead of thinking, as many teachers seem to, that parents want homework for their children to keep them out of mischief, many that I know want them to do homework to improve that report card, the only real connecting link we have with school activities. Among my friends I know that to be the case. We are interested in results and if Little Johnnie isn't learning to spell, read or add and teacher can't do anything about it we rather desperately hope we can.—E. M. Thompson, Fort St. John, B.C.

The Coast's Worst Disaster

It was with great interest I read The West Coast's Worst Disaster, by Jim Nesbitt (Oct. 15). At the time of the Sophia disaster I was nursing at the St. Anne Hospital, at Juneau, Alaska. Everyone was stunned by the catastrophe. The little gas boats came into Juneau loaded with oil-covered bodies on their decks . . .

I am enclosing two pictures (see cut) taken at the time of Sophia; one before she slid off, the other just shows the masthead. All that is left now is a buoy which marks the spot.—Mrs. M. K. Thoms, Victoria.

● My husband's cousin, Harry Bourne, was on that boat, coming out for the last time, to live with his father and sister in Jarvis, Ont. My husband and I were living in Vancouver, and to him fell the sad task of identifying his cousin when the bodies were brought there.—Mrs. C. E. Bourne, Montreal.

Too Many Millionaires

This is in protest against any more articles about multimillionaires. They are hard to take for the majority of Canadians who, like ourselves, belong to the working class. Needless to say, we find it grim trying to stretch our wretched little dollars to bring adequate food to our tables.

Does Sir James Dunn (The Last of the Multimillionaires, Sept. 15) know that the cost of living is climbing so alarmingly? If I had only three-quarters of one percent of his wealth I could be content!—Mrs. M. Morrison, Edmonton.

Charmingly Human Aldridge

The story by James Aldridge, You Laughed at My Father (Oct. 15), was, to me, a charmingly human and a realistic piece of boyhood literature. I enjoyed it immensely.—Mrs. Catherine MacDonald, Windsor, Ont.

Always a Massey

I was shocked to read in your usually accurate magazine that I am supposed to have said "that Canada join up as quickly as possible with the U.S.A." I didn't say it; I have never said it; I have never even thought it.

Pierre Berton, writer of the article in question (There'll Always Be a Massey, Oct. 15), has attributed to me an outrageously distorted quote from my brief to the Royal Commission on Arts, Letters and Sciences. What I did say to the commission was, "If we are ever to have a Canadian culture it will come as the result of full exposure to what is undoubtedly the fastest rising culture in the world today—that of the U.S.A."—Jack Cooke, Toronto.

Maclean's accepts Mr. Cooke's statement that he did not specifically suggest amalgamation of Canada and the U. S. Nonetheless this was the impression that his remarks left on at least one member of the Royal Commission. ★

"FANTASIO" by Percy J. Philip

I have called this talk "Fantasio" because that is what it sounds like. Many of you certainly will not believe that it happened. I am not sure that I believe it myself. But it seemed very real at the time and not in the least unusual. It was indeed so real that it has haunted me ever since, and, like the Ancient Mariner I have got to tell my tale.

Here are the bare facts - if in the mystery of life and the hereafter, there are such things as facts.

I sat chatting with Mr. Mackenzie King in the gounds of his old home at Kingsmere for nearly two hours one evening during this past summer. I don't just think I did it. I am convinced I did it, and, I repeat, that it seemed an entirely normal and natural thing to do although I knew perfectly well that the former Prime Minister had been dead for four years.

Of one thing I am sure. Mr. King himself would believe me. He used to have conversations like that with people who had left this world. He talked with his father and mother regularly, with President Lincoln, Mr. William Ewart Gladstone and a great many other notables of the past - mostly Liberals.

Once, at Rideau Hall, about Christmas time in 1945, he told the Earl of Athlone that he had been speaking with President Roosevelt the previous night. "President Truman, you mean," said His Excellency, for he was quite sure that President Roosevelt was dead and Truman had taken his place. It puzzled the Earl that some of his staff were making signs, evidently trying to "shush" him, but as a constitutional Governor General should, he shushed obediently and did not again attempt to correct his Prime Minister. . . . . .

The occasion of the incident was the showing of a Noel Coward film "Blythe Spirit", a story about a man whose wife was killed in an automobile accident. He married again and he and his second wife were also killed at the same spot. Then they all met in the after world and talked the whole thing over in the friendliest way.

The Prime Minister found the film "most interesting." "It is so difficult to imagine the life after death", he said, chatting gaily, "Probably the best thing to do is to regard it as a continuation of the one we know with the same processes of growth and change until eventually we forget our life and associations on this earth."

His Excellency muttered, "Yes, yes, Probably," but he was obviously shaken. He had been picked by Mr. King to be Governor General of Canada and it made him nervous to learn from what sources and spheres his Prime Minister was getting advice.

Having an open mind and being inquisitive by nature I later managed to turn a conversation with Mr. King to the occult. We were crossing to Europe and as we walked the deck one evening he became all warmed up on the subject.

"If one believes in God and a life after death," he said, "it is inevitable that one must believe that the spirits of those who have gone take an interest in the people and places they loved during their lives. It is the matter of communication that is difficult. For myself I have found the method of solitary communion best. After my father and mother died I felt terribly alone. But I also felt that they were near me. Almost accidently I established contact by talking to them as if they were present, and I soon began to get replies.

Our conversation was interrupted and I never got a chance to renew it on the same level. But I did not forget it, and, possibly what Mr. King had said came to my mind as I drove up the Kingsmere road out of Ottawa one evening last June and was reminded by a big notice that the estate of Moorside, which the Prime Minister left to the Canadian people, lay just ahead.

It is a delightful place. There are 550 acres of woodland and clearin s through most of which everyone is free to wander at will. Mr. King accumulated it almost acre by acre adding steadily, in his methodical way, to the original lot he had bought when he came first to Ottawa at the beginning of the century. His prickly temper seldom bristled more hotly than when he discovered that some neighbour had sold a parcel of land without giving him a chance to buy. Adding to his est te became almost a passion wit the future Prime Minister. There he played the Scottish laird, loving to entertain and show his visitors what he had done and what he planned.

In buying land as he did, Mr. Kin showed his Scottish shrewdness. But the building of the "ruins" was a perfect example of that romantic daftness that sometimes bewitches the supposedly hard headed Scot. The direction signs that have been erected call them ruins and anyone approaching from the west side would be puzzled to know of what they are the ruins. There are door-ways and windows and a fireplace, a row of columns Mr. King used to call the cloisters, coats of arms carved in stone, bits and pieces of the old Parliament buildings, the mint, banks and private houses all built into an artistic enough and wholly whimsical suggestion of a ruined castle. Somehow, perhaps because the surroundings are so fitting it escapes being silly. It actually gives quality and character to the landscape.

On that June evening there were no other visitors. The air was clear and cool. I sat down on a bench beside the ruins and began thinking about the strange little man who loved his hill-top home so dearly. I suppose I was in what is called a receptive condition. I know that I was conscious that I was not alone. There was someone on that park bench beside me.

There were no sighs and groans and lightning flashes such as mark a spirit's arrival on the Shakesperian stage. There was, if anything a deeper peace. Through a fold in the hills I could see a stretch of the broad fertile Ottawa valley. I tried to concentrate on it but the presence on the bench would not be denied. Without turning my head, as naturally as I could, I said aloud: "Good evening, Mr. King."

In that warm tone which always marked his conversation the voice of Mr.King replied: "Good evening, Philip. I am so glad you spoke to me."

That did surprise me. "I was thinking of you," I muttered. "Oh, yes," he replied: "I know that. But one of the rules which govern our conduct is that we are like the children who must not speak until they are spoken to. I suppose it is a good rule because it would be very disturbing if we went around talking to people. The sad thing is that so few of them ever speak to us."

Just here I think I should repeat that you must decide for yourself whether or not you believe this story. But remember Hamlet's advice:

"There are more things in heaven and earth Horatio,
Than are dreamt of in your philosophy."-

. . . . . .

"I suppose," I said, or think I said, "that we are just a little bit scared. You know how hard it is to speak into a dark empty room.

"That is certainly a difficulty for many people," said Mr. King. "But the room is never empty. It is often filled with lonely ones who would like to be spoken to. They must however be called by name, confidently, affectionately, not challenged to declare themselves."

"Your name," I said, must often be so mentioned in this lovely place you left to the Canadian people."

"Oh yes, mentioned," he answered, and I seemed to see a masculine version of the Mona Lisa smile light up his eyes and flicker on his mobile lips. "But between being mentioned and being addressed by name there is a great difference," he continued."I have heard things about my character, motives, political actions and even my personal appearance and habits which have made me laugh so loudly I thought I must break through the sound barrier. And I have heard things about myself too that made me shrink."

In the evening silence I had the sensatio n of being suspended in time and space as the quiet voice b side me went on.: There are things that I said and did that I could regret, but, on this side, we soon learn to have no regrets. Life would be meaningless if we did not all make mistakes, and eternity intolerable if we spent it regretting them."

He seemed to look at me quizzically, "By the way," he said, "Do you still write for the New York Times?"

hen I said I had retired he chuckled: "But still," he said, "I think I'd better not give indiscreet answers to your discreet questions."

I asked several and to most of them his answers were as smooth, suave and uninformative as they used to be in the House of Commons and at his infrequent press conferences. Also when I came to write down what he said I found that my lack of notes was a handicap. I could not quite distinguish between what I had really heard and remembered and what I imagined I had heard.

I know that, in our conversation, we covered a wide field. He seemed to want to hear the latest news rather than to tell me anything. Canadian development during these recent years was what interested him most - the expansion of housing, and so on, although I noticed that he was not quite up to date on everything. He needed Mr. Howe beside him, or Mr . Pickersgill.

"My successor has been lucky," he said. It was as far as he went in any personal references. "Canada has been very prosperous. I hope it will continue to be so. But you cannot expect good times always. It is adversity that proves the real value of men and nations."

I seemed to hear the old Presbyterian note.

On the other hand there was no pessimism, no warning of catastrophe in his comment on human affairs.

When we touched on the change of regime in the United States Mr.King, who held office longer than any other Prime Minister said musingly: "It is a disadvantage to a political party in a democracy to be either in or out of office too long. It loses touch with the deep instincts of the people."

He had praise for the British. With their changes from Conservative to Labour and back again they had, he said: "shown great political vitality and come through a revolution both within their own country and in their relations with other peoples which still lies ahead in America."

The conversation drifted to the international scene.

"You will remember", said the old Liberal leader "that I was always opposed to any attempt to institutionalise the Commonwealth and I think I am being proved right. It is still the best bulwark against Communist or any other Imperialism. Big unions of peoples such as the Germans, the Russians, even the French, built up under central governments are apt to grow rank, to become too rigid and dangerous. Harmony among independent peoples in a free association is much safer, even if the harmony is not always perfect."

Again that Mona Lisa smile flickered across his face. Kingsmere is in the province of Quebec.

As we talked on, about the balance between Liberty and Authority, the growth and decay of peoples and of Empire while others strove to take their place I noticed that the sickle moon was growing brighter. It was all very interesting but I am mortal and married. I fumbled for my watch and mentioned supper time.

"Time," said Mr.Kin . "I had almost forgotten about time. I suppose I spend a great deal of my time up here. There is so much beauty and such peace. The only thing that I sometimes miss is that none of my old colleagues and associates ever come to visit me. I am still near enough my earthly life to want to hear the gossip and to chat as we have done. But no one has ever come. You are the first. Probably they are so busy with their careers that they have forgotten me - and yet I helped a good many of them along the road.

For some minutes he was silent, and seemed to be enjoying, as I was, a quiet chuckle over his memories of his colleagues.

The moon was getting brighter.

. . . . . .

"I think you told me once that you are Scottish born and a wee bit fey" he said irrelevantly. "It's a good thing to be. We have two worlds. Those people who think their world is the only one, and who take it and themselves so seriously, have a very dull time. Do come back and talk with me again."

. I muttered words of thanks for his welcome and the unusual conversation we had had, and praised his generosity in bequeathin his estate to the Canadian people.

"Oh, that was half for the people and half for myself", he said, "I could never have been happy if the property and home I had acquired, a piece at a time, so lovingly, had been broken up into building lots for a few summer cottagers. I preferred that it should go to the whole people, to all who care to come. Also, I should have had no familiar place to spend my "time" until I get accustomed to the infinite and eternity."

The smile had become almost impish. Here was the old unrepentant Billy King - one half a great gesture of principle and philanthropy, and the other half a great gesture of principle and philanthropy, and the other half a shrewd wee Aberdonian, looking out for his comforts, even in the after-life.

"Come back again," he said, as warmly as a ghost can do. But we did not shake hands. That, I thought, would be going too far.

INTERVIEW WITH MRS. QUEST BROWN

February 7, 1939.

(Dictated on February 10, 1939)

On January the 30th, Mrs. Quest Brown wrote me, from Montreal, saying she would be in Ottawa for four days from February the 6th. Had some interesting prognostications concerning world events for 1939. Was particularly concerned about the health of the King of England during the next six months.

I failed to acknowledge the letter at the time of its receipt and though I had her visit on my mind, did not get a moment to communicate She 'phoned herself from the Chateau on Tuesday the 7th. I at once arranged for her to come to dinner with me in the evening. The day was an exceptionally busy one and, unfortunately, I could only have her between 6.30 and 8, out of which time an hour was taken up with dinner.

She expressed herself as immensely surprised at how well I looked and, throughout the evening, she repeated and repeated how very surprised she was. She had remembrances of our last interview when I was very tired, and had expected to find evidences of fatigue and a worn-down condition. She, herself, looks very well, and told me that she is extremely happy with her husband and children; that her life has become filled anew with joy, and that she greatly enjoyed her work.

She said she had great concern about the present year, from the studies she has made, more particularly by means of charts. Said that conditions generally, in so many aspects, were so wholly similar to the months immediately preceding the war of 1914 that she felt convinced there would be a war this year, and she looked for it about the month of June. Apart from this, she was deeply concerned about the King's health. She said she wondered very much if he was not in poor health at present; that all conditions pointed to his having a very hard time with his health this year. Also, to my surprise, she spoke of the Queen not being well or likely also to experience trouble with her health. She doubted very much if their trip to Canada would take place - for the two reasons: the world condition, and also the condition of the King's health.

I told her I did not agree with her; that I did not believe there would be a major war this year. Also that I thought the King and Queen would visit Canada and greatly enjoy their visit. I knew the King was not robust in health but thought he had considerably improved. I thought that the unsettled state of world conditions were unconsciously perhaps affecting the prognostications she was making. She claimed, however, they were apart from herself and that there were astrological aspects, etc.

At dinner, she told me that she had met an amusing man at Gloucester last summer. He had come from India; was Alaskar, just a workingman on one of the ships but, without question, the greatest medium she had ever met. That he had told her things about happenings in Montreal and elsewhere that were so exact that one would have believed he had known the whole situation which he could not possibly have known. She then said that he had said to her there was a man high up in public life that she knew very well, of whom he wanted to speak to her, or rather when he was in a "trance", a voice came which was a distinctly English voice, and he gave her as a guide "H O W". She asked me if I had any near relative by the name of "H O W". I told her none that I could think of or knew of. She said he claimed that he had, in his lifetime, done a great injustice to this public man - a man high up in public life in Canada. That he was earth-bound because of his sense of his own wrong in that regard. He had, she thought, died in the war. Had been a soldier in the war.

I told her that I was not conscious of any relatives or indeed of friends who had done me an injustice. That I would think matters over and let her know later. She seemed to feel so strongly that I must be personally concerned that she would not give up the idea that the communication she had received had been for me. (I have since thought over the matter and wondered whether the "H" might relate to Haydon, and "W" one of his initials with "O"instead of "A" - suggesting Andrew Haydon. I thought of this, on the following morning, as to some things he might have done innocently so far as I am concerned which, nevertheless, affected me at the time, but this was a mere surmise and I have never felt that Haydon had done me any injustice or wrong but had really been a true friend in everything.

I asked Mrs. Brown a question or two, over the 'phone, about this person but as she came back to his being a person who was killed in the war, and someone from the Old Country with a distinct English voice, I am inclined to think that I am not the person high up in public life that was meant in this case.

She remembered Pat quite well. It was rather curious, however, that she should have kept calling him "Rex" which she did not know was my name rather than his. She remembered MacLeod too and was greatly surprised that he too looked so much better, in every way, than when she had seen him last. We had dinner in the sun-room, and after dinner came to the library and she read my hands over the little square table. I took notes while she read them.

There was not time for a very long reading but what she told me particularly where she showed the lines that guided her in her observations, was remarkably accurate.

She showed me how certain little lines at the side of the hand indicated a type of infection from the teeth as, for example, pyorrhea. Other lines that indicated possible trouble with haemorrhoids. Other lines that disclosed a valvular condition of the heart. In each case, she pointed out the source from which she derived the view she took.

An outline of what she said was somewhat as follows:

"You are going to have a very long life. Possibly to 88 or 90 years." She asked me if she had told me that the last time she read my hand. I told her I did not recall. Had not looked up what she had said. She seemed quite strong on this and equally on the fact that my hand seemed to indicate I would not die in Canada but away from Canada, though there was every reason to think I would continue here, yet despite all appearances it seemed to indicate death itself would occur in another part of the world.

She said that the hand indicated, above all, no diminishment of power or prestige but rather increased power, increased recognition in the coming years. She showed on both the right and left hand, how far the line of fate extended. She asked me if I had not suffered from some pressure on the heart during the last two years - a little valvular trouble.

Curiously enough, I had never believed this until Dr. McCarthy, last summer, seemed more concerned about the condition of my heart from excessive pressure leading to a little valvular trouble than about anything else. I would deny this absolutely if the Doctor had not told me himself. She showed me the lines that indicated that I had had this trouble though she did not think that it was a matter I should be concerned about. There was nothing chronic and I had a strong heart.

She spoke about a strong sun line and said she would be completely mistaken if I did not come back to power twice more. There was every indication of that.

She spoke particularly of pyorrhea, and said without fail to have my teeth attended to frequently and to watch them closely. She showed me the lines indicating I had trouble of that kind. This, of course, is absolutely true. I have had to watch it for years past. She thought that I was suffering from a certain deficiency of gland; not acidity but the system was deficient in a certain glandular function. In no way a chronic condition. Thought that some additional thyroid gland would be helpful. Here again is something that Dr. Barker discovered in his examination, and has prescribed. He gave me the thyroid tablets to be taken for the purpose of making up this deficiency . She strongly advised to drink plenty of milk - a couple of glasses at a meal. To eat very lightly, particularly after strain or fatigue. To take milk and orange juice but avoid any heavy foods. To my surprise, she was opposed to brussels sprouts on the score tha they made for a certain gas that was troublesome. I have looked on them as green vegetables and good from that point of view.

She said there was, in Montreal, a remarkable man who was a specialist on glands. Had done amazing work and she suggested my conferring with him some time. His name is: Dr. Rabinovitch. I think he is connected with the Royal Victoria Hospital.

I could not recall that I had been troubled with haemorrhoids but she said there was a tendency that way. I now recall that she is right; that I had been a little bothered in that fashion when I have been overfatigued. She stressed no permanent acidity. That I was now coming into the period of my strength; that from 45 to 50, I might have experienced a good deal of trouble. The things to watch were the heart - not serious - and the teeth to be kept closely watched, and the little thyroid shortage.

She said there was no evidence of anything in the nature of permanent sciatica and that I was not likely to be much bothered with it. There were evidences of neuralgia at times. She said her own father had suffered so from sciatica that for two years, he had had to eat all his meals standing. Could not sit down. She knew all about the trouble. Thought what I had, had been the result of strain - not chronic.

Analysing the right hand from the point of view of planets, etc., she pointed first to the mount of the first finger which is: Jupiter, and said it was powerful. Indicated I would have great power. The second finger - which stood for Saturn - helped to balance the first. Saturn stood for sobriety. She found that I kept myself well in check and was balancing all tendencies. The 3rd finger - Apollo - indicated brilliancy along the line of art and writing, etc. She said had I devoted my life to literature, I might have written brilliantly or in any line of art, made great headway. She spoke particularly of the far side of the hand as indicating great imaginative qualities. The 4th finger - Mercury - indicated that I was both logical and illogical - in other words, gullible. That I was very logical but might be taken in on some things. Speaking of the thumb, she used the word "magnificent" as indicating particularly great will-power and judgment combined. She said I could be led but never could be driven.

Looking at the life line, she stressed again that it very definitedly was a long life, and the end of life in another country. She said had I cared to lead a life of perfect freedom, I could have been a great Bohemian, and have enjoyed life very fully. That mine was not a conventional nature; that I had the capacity to enjoy things to the full; that the hand indicated a lot of frustration. However, I would never become purely conventional. She saw no sign of any matter of great concern in the latter part of my life such as bankruptcy or disaster or trouble with finances as had overtaken so many very prosperous people. She thought finances would remain good to the end.

Looking at my hand as a whole and taking all of it from either side, she said that what impressed her most was its consistency. That it was the hand of a man of 40 rather than of 65 in what it indicated of concentration and of health, and of general integration of character. She counselled me strongly against overworking if overtired; if overtired to stop and take sleep, etc.

She spoke again of slight valvular congestion. Asked me if I had been troubled with my chest or if any members of the family had. There was a tendency there to watch. Of course, my brother died of tubercular trouble but there is nothing hereditary about it.

She next spoke of the colour of hands which, she said, were pink and gave evidence of great health. Blood was pure; no evidence of any kind. She kept returning to the fact that I could have been a great writer and could do much in that direction still. Spoke of love of music, etc.

Emphasized the need for light food and nourishing food. Said that was good for tired nerves.

She then spoke of the conflicts of political life versus spiritual life. That she felt very strongly there was in my vibrations something that indicated a real conflict there. That I had exceptional spiritual power and was really a mystic, and should have calm and quiet. That political life in some of its aspects was like poison coming into the system. I told her how completely Bennett an his attitude used to affect me in that way. She said it was bound to be devastating and destructive. Seemed to feel that I could reach my highest good by avoiding all conflicts of the kind. I would have to watch them very closely and not let them destroy the finer side of my life.

She used the expression "There is evidence of no disease of any kind but a nervous heart that is valvular - suffering a little from a condition of pressure." She suggested I should get a cardiac plate. Just to watch the effect of the heart and said,"for purposes of self preservation, watch your food and take plenty of sleep. You have such an active brain that it might work all the time if you did not take care to get plenty of sleep. Suggested as much as a quart of milk or orange juice a day.

She spoke of my life as being fortified strongly by the lines on either side of it. That it indicated I was being protected.

Mrs. Brown seemed anxious to have a good talk. She said there were many things she would like to tell me. Spoke particularly about the importance of the part that I will be taking from now on for years. I told her of my feeling of indifference as to continuing in public life except as a duty, of its opportunities of service. That I would much prefer the quiet of a retired life to do some writing. She said to me: "Why don't you consider possibly your own personal life. Your greatest work may lie in what you will do in that direction. You can go very far by keeping out of strife and getting into the life of thought, etc. I implied that it was a sense of duty which kept me in the other course. That I was ready to follow whatever my destiny might be. That I would shape my course as events might determine, and do my utmost to serve well as I went along.

She spoke a little about Roosevelt. Said she was greatly afraid his health might give out this year. Was much interested when I showed her a letter I had received from him and told her a little about one or two talks we had together. She is anxious to go to England to live with her husband for the rest of her days, this summer. Is afraid that war may prevent that. If they don't go, they would like to go and live in the States. They have many influential friends there. She asked me if I could speak the magical word that might let them into the States. I told her the most I could do was just to say what I knew of her abilities, etc.

She thought Hitler's life would end this year. That Mussolini too might not survive long. That in both countries, Italy and Germany, a critical situation would develop.

As Slaght was speaking, I was anxious not to miss any part of his speech, so had to hurry away at 8. She drove as far as the Buildings with me. On the way, I asked her if she saw any probability of marriage in my hand. She laughed a little and said she thought I was destined to live alone throughout my life. She agreed, however, that one missed the best of life in not being able to share it completely with another. Spoke of there being evidences of a real purpose in my life which, she thought, was being ordered in some way.

She kept returning to the great change she had seen in me since the last time we had talked together.

Mrs. Brown mentioned a couple of books she thought I would enjoy reading, one "The Powers that Be" and the other "The Invisible Influence" by Dr. Alexander Cannon of London. She was going to send me her own copy to read but I said I would rather get copies to be retained.

On Wednesday (the 8th), I rang up Mrs. Brown to make enquiries about the "H. O. W." noted above. She gave me further particulars which seemed to indicate that I could scarcely be the person meant. On the other hand, as I dictate now, I recall some medium in England once telling me much the same thing about a person killed in the war, who had felt he had done me wrong and being anxious to secure forgiveness, but even then I could not think of who such a person could be.

Mrs. Brown told me she had been so strongly impressed with my vibrations last night that she had written me herself setting out what she was most concerned about, namely the conflict between the material and spiritual things of life. Not letting my spiritual self which was very strong become devastated or destroyed by the inroad of materialistic forces, such as the strife of politics, materialism of our age, etc. It is of course that which, above all else, I am continually experiencing. The following is a copy of her letter:

Dear Mr. Mackenzie King -

I did appreciate your graciousness in sparing me so much of your valuable time. One always feels spiritually refreshed after a little talk with you. In spite of your apparent good health, your vibrations were those of a weary and discouraged man. I could not do otherwise than plead with you to spare yourself as much as possible in the near future. You are obviously torn spiritually between duty and preserving your own inner integrity - this aggressive and destructive battle is weakening your resistance - it is an insidious poison that is gradually sapping your strength. You have done so much for others and there is in every one's life a point where one analyses success at such a price is of doubtful merit. You can still fulfill your destinies away from the maddening crowd. You have many years in front of you in which to achieve all you desire for Canada and possibly this must be achieved in the peace and silence of your own inner life. Your inner strength cannot be maintained under the stress of material fighting and aggression. Your own spiritual freedom will enable you to help Canada far more than in any empty and soulless office. Please forgive my presumption, but only a deep and sincere interest in your potential greatness warrants me speaking from my heart. Words are inadequate to express all I feel for you, but I do feel that your spiritual life is in danger of being devitalized by the selfish and materially minded, who will sacrifice everything that is worthwhile for their own ends. You were destined to lead Canada out of the morass of materialism that is crushing all the ideals of your great leaders in the past. Could it not be that your inspiration and guidance suffers and is powerless to help you under such materialistic and antagonistic forces that surround you at the present time. You are at the turning point of your life - don't drift into a negative and empty victory - fight for your own spiritual development and this may have to be worked out in solitude. You are a mystic and your real leadership may be in an entirely different direction. You must go into the silence and accept unreservedly the guidance that will direct you to serve Canada.

Assuring you of my sincerest admiration.

Quest Brown.

The little time we had together was so inadequate for all I had to say and my natural shyness prevented my expressing all my thoughts under pressure of time.

The letter convinces me more than ever of the importance of acting on the advice which I get from physicians as well as laymen to pursue my own way regardless of what men think. To save my spiritual strength and power at all costs. When tired, to let everything else go, knowing that the former is the real and enduring quality.

Mrs. Brown, in this letter, has diagnosed absolutely correctly the real conflict that I experienced and have experienced over many years. My exhaustion and fatigue has arisen out of it, the eternal effort to preserve an inner peace with the terrible pressure of obligations arising out of my environment and duties. However, I feel that to go into the life of silence, congenial as it would be, would be to desert the real purpose of my life especially at times such as the present. I am, therefore, proceeding on the basis that short of health itself becoming undermined, I will continue to do the thing that is less pleasing to myself because of what I see in it, in the way of obvious duty, and the belief that, however inadequate in a multitide of ways, I nevertheless can help to keep Canada on a steadier keel than possibly any other one likely to succeed at the present time, and very possibly, in the position I hold, will be able to save possibly many situations which would be full of peril to the people of this land. To do the work, however, I must preserve inner peace and calm and have some sense of freedom about me.

Dear Mr. Mackenzie King:-

I shall be visiting in Ottawa for four days from February 6th until February 10th and will be staying at the Chateau Laurier Hotel.

I have some very interesting prognostications concerning world events for 1939 which I think you will find extremely interesting. I am particularly concerned about the health of the King of England during the next six months, as he faces some critical health aspects.

If any of your friends are interested in my work, I would greatly appreciate your kindly interest in mentioning my visit. I shall look forward to seeing you if you have any of your valuable time to spare.

Yours sincerely,

How To Scientifically Plan Your Life

MRS. QUEST BROWN

Internationally Known, Author, Lecturer, Hand Analyst and Vocationalist.

Your Hands reveal the original plan of your life. The cause of your success or failure.

Your Skin, Nails and Lines in the Palm denote health tendencies. Forewarned is forearmed

THE children of to-day are finding it increasingly difficult to adjust themselves to the inadequate educational system — more puzzling still do they find the ever important question of choosing the right work in life. A few parents are becoming vocational-conscious and realise the importance of Character Analysis and Vocational Guidance—but the majority of parents refuse to believe that the old order is passing and that their children face grave dangers of permanent maladjustment if forced into the wrong work (one is appalled at the many square pegs in the round holes). Competition is nothing new and all things being equal is a healthy stimulant to ambition—but competition to-day represents a serious problem and unless parents recognize the need for guiding their children into their own special work, irrespective of prestige or financial values, the new generation will suffer untold physical, mental and spiritual suffering.

THE brilliant child will find his own level—it is the everyday average child that must be guided, trained according to his type and qualifications to an average vocation. Adaptability and normal values must be the key-note in the education of today and the successful Vocationalist is one who establishes the client's confidence in his own ability to meet present conditions from inherited forces that are revealed in the analysis.

Parents must face the fact that a child to-day cannot carve a successful career from second or third rate artistic tendencies—nor can he be a doctor or lawyer etc., by suggestion or persuasion; there must be outstanding qualities in this direction, plus will, enthusiasm and ambition—these outstanding qualifications are the exception and not the rule. A child's talents must be classified under a 1st, 2nd, 3rd, and 4th rating and the vocational plan made based upon:—

1st. Vocational Rating.

2nd. Will to put the talents into action.

3rd. Judgment.

4th. Health conditions that must be re-enforced or averted.

5th. Adaptability.

6th. Key to emotional life. (The emotional life is an important factor in making or breaking a career or marriage.

An analysis of all these tendencies will enable the Vocationalist to make a very complete plan for the life of the client.

Quest Brown has analysed over 75,000 men, women and children. She has outlined suitable careers based upon kindly understanding of the type and has reconstructed many badly twisted and broken lives by helping them to see the original pattern of their life as others see it—from a distance.

What is your correct vocation

What you were created to do is shown by your hands—painter, sculptor, musical artist, actor, writer, philosopher, engineer, minister, diplomat, politician, doctor, lawyer or nurse, commercial artist, teacher, dietician, departmental store executive, social service, librarian, etc. etc. Quest Brown will make an analysis that will reveal your true vocation.

Positive or negative types:

Positive hands with all the qualities for success, health, mentality, force, resistance, application, brilliance. Negative hands all strong qualities absent. No force, resistance, determination, ill health, weak mentality! Is there no hope? YES, Quest Brown will show why and how.

The crucial period:

In every life the peak is reached sometime. Health, mentality, force, energy, ambition working at high pressure have brought you to the crest of the wave. There is always a point where the journey down the hill begins. The "rainy day" is just around the corner when all your strong forces will diminish day by day. You have reached the zenith of your powers. The hands show when this point is reached so you can prepare for it. Quest Brown will tell you how.

The seven types:

The plan of creation is shown in your hands. Success is possible to everyone in the right vocation. Failure is unnecessary. You belong to one of these types and were intended for a definite career. Have you found it? How to do so from your hands.

Your place in the world:

How your hands show the class of society to which you belong. Are you fine in grade? Coarse? Medium? How to tell. Who you should associate with. Where you do not belong. How to emerge frm the lower into the upper strata. Which are you? Your hands can tell you. Outlined by Quest Brown with Psychological advice on how to build a solid foundation or reconstruct a maladjusted life.

Holds Lines in Hands Rival Finger-prints

Criminoligist Finds in Markings Key to Mental Traits and Aid to Identification

Pars, Aug. 5th.—In a Thesis accepted with high praise and winning a diploma at Lyon Institute of Criminology, William Sterling, former director of the police laboratory at Singapore, sets forth the theory that the lines in the hand supply information rivaling in its value to the police that obtained from fingerprints.

His conclusion is that the lines in the human palm, which correspond to the flexion of the hand, are in some way connected with mental characteristics. These lines, when abnormal, according to his studies, represent definite mental abnormalities, either hereditary or congenital.

Attack Diseases by Finger-Print

Research Oevelops Prospect of Attacking Epidemics in New Way

LONDON, Aug. 16. (C.P.)—Prospect of the study of finger-prints completely revolutionizing methods of attack on disease seems probable in the near future through the discoveries of Professor Heinrich Poll, German scientist. After 27 years of research it is claimed that he has arrived at results that have astonished experts who had thought of finger-prints merely in terms of crime detection.

Professor Poll has treated thousands of cases and it has been revealed that people suffering from certain diseases had similarly characteristic finger-prints, and that the same is true of different classes of healthy subjects. The direction of the campaign against cancer, tuberculosis, and other diseases may, the professor thinks, be profoundly influenced by the new material which he has collected.

"I began my inquiries when L was working in mental asylums," said Professor Poll. During an outbreak of a disease, which afflicts children's limbs, it was discovered after many finger-prints had been observed, that they were of the same group.

"We concluded that disease is directly reflected in finger-prints and it would be possible to say that some persons will be likely to develop a disease. One could say of a newly-born child that it would have such and such a chance of developing or not developing a disease. The same principle could be applied to any disease—cancer, tuberculosis and the rest. The scope is enormous."

As a result of Professor Poll's visit, the anthropological study of finger-prints, as apart from criminology, is to be introduced into this country.

I have just received your letter of April the 30th enclosing a receipt which you should not have troubled to return.

I was sorry to learn that you had met with a severe cold. I do hope you have completely recovered from it, long ere this.

With me, progress towards recovery continues to be slow but I continue to look forward to getting out to my home in the country at Kingsmere.

Thank you a thousand times for your good wishes.

Dear Mr MacKenzie King.

As a receipt needed to be sent you for payment of the Hodgson book, I've kept it back to await an opportunity of writing a line, as I thought I should like to take this opportunity. The delay in despatch is due to my falling a victim to a bad cold immediately after my return from my Easter holiday in Paris, when to I go I made my maiden flight. — I do agree with you — generally the books of today do not compare with the depth + comprehension of the work of your grand pioneers.

I am delighted to know that now you are really making recovery, & that before long you will be enjoying the loveliness of your home at Kingsmere. I hope that during this summer tender care from the Dear & the Unseen will bless you with restored health, so that a few more vigorous years of life on earth may bring you further joys & accomplishments, but that if another convulsion of war is to be suffered I hope you will then have escaped this earthly misery.

I am happy and honoured to have your estimate written for my summary. The new work it will bring to me, I thank you.

Always with my best wishes and gratitude for your invaluable Kindness.

Yours very Sincerely

PERSONAL

Dear Mr MacKenzie-King,

I write to thank you for your very kind letter of March 15th. It gave me the greatest pleasure and that stimulus and encouragement which you, I feel, so successfully impart to others. That gift of yours made the two afternoons when I met you, indeed, memorable to me. The very fine paragraph in your letter in which you write of "the conflict of materialism and a spiritual interpretation of life" is especially inspiring and also "I have sought to wage war on the former, and shall continue to do so to the end" especially moves me. for I gather - and was very sorry to hear - that you have had a relapse. I hope and pray that your strength returns with the spring and the sunshine.

Ialso have had a rather long illness in the last year.But, at intervals, I have been writing reminiscences of my 34 years of psychical research for a publisher. Replying to a letter of mine Mr David Gray wrote that he was delighted to hear of these reminiscences and he enclosed a letter about our sittings and psychic work together when he was ambassador to Eire, This letter, he said, I could publish in the book if I cared to use it. So I am using it as a short introduction which may rouse interest in the book in U.S.A. As an Appendix to UNSEEN ADVENTURES,the name I have given the reminiscences,I have inserted the "Marguerite Foote Case" as it appeared(with permission) in the S.P.R. Journal. Miss Gibbes gave you a copy of the complete notes of this case. You may remember the identity of the communicator, one highly connected in U.S.A.

I very much hope that you will be able later to visit this country again and that we shall have the great pleasure of seeing you.

With all good wishes from Miss Gibbes and myself for your speedy recovery and many thanks again for your very kind letter.

Yours very sincerely,

Geraldine Cummins

April 6, 1950

Dear Miss Phillimore:

I was indeed pleased to receive your kind letter of a few days ago; also I must thank you most warmly for having had in mind my wish to keep in touch with the latest publications.

I duly received "The Life of Richard Hodson" and am enclosing herewith my money order in payment of the account for same. I have been reading the Hodson Life. I am naturally much interested in its pages. I do not, however, find them comparable in interest to some of the earlier publications. I think you, yourself, have felt that way.

I am glad to know that you are continuing on with the L.S.A. In reference to the changes recently made, I hope that all may work out for the best.

I am naturally distressed about the way my mail miscarried. I, myself, have had to re-arrange my secretarial staff and it would seem that old books have fallen into new hands, and that my address books, in some cases, need to be further revised. I shall try to see that, in the future, more care is taken with the address.

You will be glad to know that personally I have been regaining my strength though very slowly. I have had to have the care of two nurses from the beginning of the year. Fortunately, today, I have been able to part with one. I am hopeful that, soon, I may be able to part with the other. I am sure Spring will make a great difference.

By the time this letter reaches you, the Easter Season will already be over. I hope, however, it will not be too late to express the wish that, for you, their days may have been very happy ones, and that they may be followed by a joyous Spring and gladsome Summer.

It will be another month or two before I shall be able to get out to my country home at Kingsmere. To that, I am looking forward with the keenest enthusiasm.

Miss Mercy Phillimore,

Personal

March 15, 1950

Dear Miss Cummins:

I hope you and Miss Gibbs will forgive me for not having replied sooner to your kind letter of December the 15th and particularly not having let you know of the safe arrival of the books I had ordered and of the pleasure I have derived, since their receipt, from the reading of them.

The truth is that, on Christmas Day, I found I had been overdoing in the weeks previous and come down with a relapse of the condition I had in London in 1948. As a consequence, I have had to remain indoors ever since and, for the most part, confined to bed. I am now beginning to feel with the Spring a new return of life and strength, and am confident that with its days something of the kind will again come my way.

Let me thank you for adding your autograph to the books, and for sending me proof of the article you had written, explanatory of the book "The Manhood of Jesus". I am obliged to you for allowing me to keep this extra proof. I enjoyed exceedingly the reading of both the book and the article. At some future time, I shall hope to have a chance of perhaps a talk with you about them. At present, I am obliged to limit my activities, including that of correspondence, as much as possible.

May I thank you also for the little booklet "The Resurrection of Christ" which came as a special Christmas greeting.

There certainly can be no truer explanation of the terrible condition throggh which the world has recently been passing and is still suffering from than the conflict of materialism and the spiritual interpretation of life. Like you, but in a different way, I have sought to wage war on the former, and shall continue to do so to the end.

I have not forgotten the transcript that I promised to send Miss Gibbs and yourself. I shall try to have it go forward in the near future.

I do hope that both you and Miss Gibbs are keeping very well. I shall never forget the memorable afternoon we all spent together.

With every good wish to you both,

Yours very sincerely,

Dear Mr Mackenzie King

I am so grieved to hear from your secretary that you have been indisposed since the Christmas season. but it is good to know that on February 18 you were making progress towards recovery, & I do most sincerely hope that by the time this note reaches you, you will be greatly restored to health, even if you have still 5 exercise patients before you are able to feel strong enough to do all that you would like to do. But I hope that day will arrive soon.

After all I suppose it was hardly to be expected that you could have stood the tremendous and prolonged strain of responsibility without a sharp rebound of stress and relaxation became possible

Your very kind card is now in my hands.

I left Hollycombe Farm in June 1944, but as my present country home is only a mile or so away from the Farm, a watchful P.O. might have redirected your envelope. but the same postman been employed, which they usually, I a recipient of heavier correspondence than I am in the country.

But I did hopefully receive your most kind, and interesting and sympathetic answer to my rather long letter I sent you for your birthday.

I recalled that I later on in my letter, some critical thoughts concerning my continuance of work, and you gave me sound advice. I know that once again the matter has been settled out of my hands, by my being asked to continue my secretaryship & also to undertake the editing of your Journal "Light" with the July issue. Light is to be published monthly.

This decision was made purely on financial grounds. We have no more money for salaries on the Journal, having failed to find an honorary editor for among the friends of Light. I was asked to take over the work.

I cannot hope to edit the paper as our dear Stainton has done, but I must do my best.

You had asked me to send you any books of value that might be published. So few of value have been published for a long while, but it is between the first recently a Life of Richard Hodgson has appeared. This life was a grand one in spite of [illegible] Record. This is the first book [illegible] of him that has appeared. I hope you will find it interesting.

Last week London was very gay & hospitable entertaining President Theodore Roosevelt. I'd have liked to have seen Prince of Wales's procession & the dresses — there must have been some grand sights.

Our unusual Parliamentary situation is [illegible] critical times, gives me the feeling (even if blindly) that Providence is shaping our ends.

I ask for you [illegible] best wishes for your health & happiness — and the completion of your life work.

Yours sincerely
Maud Tillinore

XMAS GREETINGS

AND

GOOD WISHES FOR THE NEW YEAR

from Mercy Gullemore

25 Jubilee Place, Chelsea, London S.W.3. Dec. 15.49.

Personal

Dear Mr Mackenzie King,

Miss Gibbes and I were more pleased than I can say to have news of you. It was indeed good of you to write. But first let me thank you for the cheque for the 2 books. These were sent to you by book post yesterday, and your kind cheque covered the cost of postage. I felt much honoured at your asking for my autograph which I inserted in each book. Miss Gibbes and I were much gratified, that in spite of your busy and absorbing life, you should be kind enough to make the time to write and order these 2 books.

Beatrice Gibbes says to tell you that she has quite understood about the transcript and the difficulties in that connection and begs you not in any way to worry about it. She sends her kindest remembrances.

I enclose proof of an article I wrote for a paper, which possibly might interest you as it is explanatory of the book "The Manhood of Jesus", and I do not need this extra proof. I send you a Christmas card in this little booklet "The Resurrection of Christ", and I should feel very honoured, if and when you have leisure, you cared to look through it. It is in a sense an expression of my purpose in life which is to wage war on materialism, the curse of this age. You, who in your wonderful life, have so brilliantly carried out this purpose, will, I know forgive my temerity in mentioning what is really only my private affair.

Again with many thanks for your kind encouragement and with all best wishes for 1950 from Beatrice Gibbes and myself. Yours Sincerely.

Geraldine Cummins

Miss Geraldine Cummins,
25 Jubilee Place,
London, S.W. 3,
England.

Dear Miss Cummins:

I was more than pleased to receive the notice of your latest book "The Manhood of Jesus" which is about to make its appearance if it has not already done so. I naturally am anxious to secure a copy and desire to place an order herewith. At the same time, I would be interested in securing a copy of your "Travellers in Eternity". I notice that the quotation of each of these volumes is 10s. 6d. and postage 6d. I have no doubt that postage to Canada would be double this amount.

I am enclosing a bank money order for 1£ 5s. to cover these two volumes and necessary postage. It is quite possible that the rate set forth on the circular is one that relates to the past, and with the devaluation of the pound, this amount would not serve to cover the present price and postage. In that event, I hope you will let me know the additional amount I should send on to you which I shall, of course, be only too happy to do. I should be grateful if you would give me your autograph or write in each of the two volumes.

Please give my kindest remembrances to Miss Gibbs. Writing you reminds me that I have still to forward a transcript of the last sitting I had with you. Unfortunately while I have not overlooked this obligation, I have not had at hand, through the Summer months, the facilities for having the transcription made that I would wish to have to secure the desired privacy.

I shall try to overcome this handicap before the year is out. Meanwhile I sent to Miss Gibbs and yourself my kindest remembrances and my best of wishes.

With all good wishes from A.D. & G.B.C.

THE MANHOOD OF JESUS

The Unrecorded Years of Christ's Life

(READY END OF ~~OCTOBER~~) November.

10/6 postage 6d.

This volume is a worthy successor to THE CHILDHOOD OF JESUS, which The Times Literary Supplement said, "makes Jesus real and comprehensible," and which The Teachers' World considered "an inspiration to those who, in their teaching, try to make the Gospel story live."

THE MANHOOD OF JESUS deals largely with the unrecorded years before the Ministry, the sojourn of Jesus among the Essenes, His life at home, and as a wanderer and shepherd. It tells of the early encounters with John the Baptist; His meetings with His disciples; and of His connection with His cousins and their mother, Mary Clopas. There are some especially beautiful chapters about His life and conversations with St. John. The reader learns how some of the parables were inspired by real experiences in His own life.

Of intense interest is the account of the enigmatic Judas Iscariot, which has the impress of historical authenticity. Judas appears as a Jewish nationalist, believing in physical force, who planned an insurrection to free Palestine from Rome during the days preceding the Crucifixion; in which he tried to involve Jesus, and sold Him to His enemies in order to force fulfilment of his fanatically patriotic ambition. It is a plausible and convincing explanation of a profound mystery, and has historical backing. In a very early document, "The Repressed Passages from the Slavonic Josephus," the bare facts of this insurrection are related. Here it is reconstructed in detail, and the grandeur and beauty of Christ's personality stand out in marked contrast to that of the man of war. The book provides a flood of illumination upon a hitherto unrealised aspect of the great drama of the Trial and Crucifixion. A fascinating and elevating book.

".....intensely beautiful and intensely thought-provoking."

THE CHILDHOOD OF JESUS

New Edition 9/6 postage 6d.

"It is a beautiful little book.....The child Jesus lives in these pages; nothing is sentimental or over-dramatised.....no one could resist a surge of emotion over the presentation of the personality of the child Jesus.....a poetic and beautifully imagined story."

Dame Edith Lyttelton in The Spectator

"Miss CUMMINS's Jesus is the Jesus of the Gospels.....a Divine Child misunderstood by His associates and as such she makes Him real and comprehensible.....Miss CUMMINS writes feelingly, and reconstructs cleverly the home life of the family of Mary and Joseph."

The Times Literary Supplement

".....many lovely passages and spiritual insights.....Joseph and Mary are drawn with deep affection and sympathy, the shadow of the sword in her heart, and of the Cross over the young Jesus, can be felt in the book..."

Church of England Newspaper and The Record

"The reverent manner in which it is written, the authenticity of its setting, the stirring language and the strong delineation of character, all combine to produce an extremely interesting and thoughtful book which should have a wide appeal."

Inverness Courier.

WHEN NERO WAS DICTATOR

St. Paul's Last Years. (The Cleophas Scripts)

7/6 postage 6d.

".....the presentation is well-balanced and free from tendentiousness .....it is livened by visionary passages of remarkable intensity.....This book is to be commended both for its sincerity and its skill. It is a quieter and deeper 'Quo Vadis.'"

Times Literary Supplement

"The author knows her scenes and period.....dramatic picture of the Roman Empire in the beginning of its decline—with figures like Seneca, Poppæa, Tigellinus, and Saints Peter, Mark, Luke and Timothy moving across the stage.....Miss Cummins brings to her task a real love and understanding of Paul, and again shows in these pages the sensitive spiritual vision that characterised 'The Childhood of Jesus.'"

Christian World

".....a brilliant picture of Nero's court and intrigues that led to the burning of the ancient capital.....an interesting study particularly to Biblical students who find the narratives of olden times so intriguing."

THEY SURVIVE

Evidence of Life beyond the Grave. Compiled by E. B. Gibbes

Rider & Co. 12/6 postage 6d.

"The first book about Miss Geraldine Cummins' mediumship and one that offers remarkable evidence of its genuineness and outstanding quality .....The interest of the book lies in the high standard of accuracy in Miss Cummins's work.....Any person with a scientific mind and no strong prejudice, and a little knowledge of the subject, will find it well worth study. There cannot be too many books of this type, and very few are so well presented as this."

Journal of the Society for Pyschical Research

"It is the most interesting, remarkable and convincing book on the subject I have ever read."

Dr. E. Œ. Somerville

"This is a book that should be read as carefully as it has been written and I recommend it most warmly to all those who are anxious to convince their friends of the possibility of survival. It is remarkably free from sentimentality, bias and uncritical over-enthusiasm....."

Experimental Metaphysics

TRAVELLERS IN ETERNITY

Tells of the immediate Life after Death. Compiled by E. B. Gibbes

10/6 postage 6d.

"It is to me the most vivid of the books Geraldine Cummins has given us."

Eric Parker, late Editor of The Field

"Letters dictated from another world describing the care taken of the newly dead, the joyful family reunions, the cultivation of gardens and flowers, and of a new life made out of etheric substance.....you have here much matter for serious thought."

The Star, Sheffield

"A book for which we should be really grateful, not too philosophic or mystical to be remote and yet which has its pointers to those further states of expansion and joy for which we all unconsciously hope."

Mrs. Constance Sitwell, Light

".....it has the merit of being written in understandable language. And there is nothing "shadowy" about the characters of the persons described in the scripts. Eric Parker says: "they move through the pages..... exactly as I knew them in the life on earth."

THE ROAD TO IMMORTALITY

New Edition 8/6 postage 4d.

"I feel at liberty to commend this book as a serious attempt to give information about a future life and the stages through which earnest people may expect to pass. The accounts which (F. W. H.) Myers goes on to give of the Fourth, Fifth, Sixth and Seventh States are remarkable."
Sir Oliver Lodge

"I do recommend you to read it—and read it as though Myers were writing in the flesh.....for few works of recent times have shown such a command of language and a power of imagery." Yorkshire Weekly Post

"This is an impressive book.....of far-reaching interest.....It has the rare distinction among such scripts of being literature, the outcome of a mind such as we know Frederic Myers to have been, that is, poetic and highly cultured....." E. Œ. Somerville, Litt.D., Time and Tide

"Particularly worthy of attention are the references to the grouping of souls to form the vehicle of one spirit; and to the bearing of this conception on reincarnation and 'Karmic debts'.....It is most certainly the work of a cultured and thoughtful intelligence....." The Bookman

Translated into Dutch, Italian and Czech.

THE RESURRECTION OF CHRIST

An Explanation of this Mystery through modern Psychic Evidence.

2/6 postage 3d.

"The theory expounded is one of the most convincing and interesting that we have yet heard.....It is to be hoped that the Church will give this book the attention it deserves." Occult Review

"Miss CUMMINS presents her case with reverence and persuasion..... should the phenomena described be confirmed at a later date, this pamphlet will surely be an aid to comprehension of the culminating phase of the Gospel records." Experimental Metaphysics

".....throwing light from the angle of psychical research upon the central mystery of the Christian faith.....this scientific approach to the problem is extremely suggestive....." Lawrence Hyde in The Occulist

November 29, 1949

Miss Mercy Phillimore,
Birchlands,
Wardley,
Liphook, Hants.

Dear Miss Phillimore:

It was a delightful surprise to me to receive yesterday, by airmail, the charming letter written but a few days ago at your charming home in the country. I am delighted to know that you have found it possible to keep your house, and that you have been able to renew your lease under favourable conditions for another ten years. I am glad, too, that you have found a helper friend who is able to relieve you of much in the way of responsibility and give you the leisure needed for rest and pleasurable pursuits amid inspiring surroundings. There is no restorer like Nature. The more time one is obliged to spend in or out of doors in a great city, the more one requires the healing influences of the country.

I, myself, have spent most of the late Spring, Summer and early Autumn at my home at Kingsmere just twelve miles from Ottawa but some eight hundred feet above the level of the Ottawa River. My home there is in the Laurentian Hills, mostly wild forest but with the shores of a small lake adjoining a part of my property. Over the years, I have acquired four or five hundred acres of woodland, mostly rocky and wild, but delightful in what it provides in the way of paths through the woods and at the side of a stream. Much of the Summer has been given over to widening these paths so as to permit of their being traversed by motor or carriage. I recognize only too clearly that I have now reached the age where I cannot hope to cover much of the property on foot or, for that matter, share, except by driving, its beauties with friends of my own age.

My recovery from excessive fatigue has been slower than I hoped it might be. Lately I have experienced a siege of insomnia at night in addition to fatigue by day. I am happy, however, to believe that both these unfortunate symptoms are disappearing. I am hopeful to be able, at the beginning of the new year, to make a real beginning on my Memoirs. Except for the sorting and arrangement of materials, thus far, I have done very little upon them. There is not a day that passes, however, that I do not realize how wise I was to retire at the time I did. You, no doubt, noticed from the press that I left the Party in the best possible shape, and that my successor was returned by an overwhelming majority in all the provinces of Canada.

I am much interested in what you tell me of your attitude vis-a-vis psychical research, and particularly the contrast between the spirit of humility and reverence which distinguishes the work of the early spiritualists and the less spiritually minded attitude of many of the researchers of today. I need not tell you that I share your attitude completely. I think, too, you are wise in holding to the position you have taken right along. I trust, too, that you will not think of making way for others any sooner than you, yourself, may feel may be absolutely necessary. Rather seek to have yourself surrounded by young and willing helpers who will be able to imbibe much of your spirit and profit by your long and wide experience.

I share, too, all your feeling about the passing fashions and, I might add, distracting contraditions of our day. I do believe that the position of the London Spiritualist Alliance standing ~~in~~ the middle ground between scientific and psychical research and popular "religious" spiritualism is the right one. To fail to realize that this is a spiritual rather than a material universe is to miss reality altogether. Fortunately I believe this truth is becoming increasingly apparent to many who wish to be known as scientists rather than spiritualists.

Do, by all means, remain "a/strength and a/stay" in maintaining a position that has its roots in the profounder thought of the quiet years ~~of~~ the past, and do not allow these changing times to sweep away aught of the firm foundations on which eternal truths are based.

Let me thank you most warmly for your kind birthday and Christmas wishes. I shall be seventy-five on the 17th of December. That seems quite an age to have reached.

However, I am not without hope that strength to complete some of the writing to which I have looked forward may still be vouchsafed to me. Be that as it may, my duty clearly is to do the best I can in the time that may still be mine.

I do hope that your own Christmas Season will be a very happy one, and the New Year will bring you an increasing measure of happiness and fulfilment of your own most cherished desires.

With my own best of wishes and all kind remembrances,

Believe me, as always,

Yours v. s.

Nov. 20. 49

Dear Mr Mackenzie King.

The year is advancing fast & the moment has arrived when I want to send you my very best wishes for your birthday and also for Christmas.

Your letter of February 5th last was a great joy to me, for it told of a gradual improvement to your health after your illness in London, & also because you so very kindly invited me to write to you occasionally of my work & my personal interests. With great pleasure I respond. First I reflect on those things concerning yourself. I have not for some time past happened to notice any news of yourself in the Press, & so hope all is well with you.

For had you had any return of the old attack news of this would surely have been published.

So I am able to imagine you giving a portion of your time to public affairs, and spending the rest. Hope in all those pursuits which delight you, & which you have greatly sacrificed all thro' your life of service. I imagine too that your home and garden have a beauty that is very satisfying.

I think I can use the big we, and say we, the public hope you are writing your memoirs. There must be very many like myself.

with this hope. For quite apart from your memories & presentation of matters of public concern, your book will reveal so much of the motive & faith associated with all your acts, public and private, which is an inspiration for the good & the labourious in life. This influence which will surely pervade the writing of your life is what I count most precious: How much more is needed to day.

It seems borne on me, as I write,
almost an impertinence to say this to you — but you will excuse anything I say. I know, because I am wholly sincere in my feelings. You so well

Know that when we admire her one can be so much freer in speech & any expression.
As reading & writing must occupy much of your time, I hope the cigarettes to which you referred in your letter is quite relieved.
You would like me to tell you about my work, because what it concerns is very precious, for it does as a rule bring a release from many binding errors of thought thanks to a tension of outlook with a profound hope.
I can't help thinking that the note of grandeur & dignity & reverence that marked the attitude of the earlier people in the movement of those days has the pleasure and privilege of meeting 30 years ago — is missing

today to a great extent — especially among the "leaders" the individual ingredients who we are attending this type. a great deal of what seems to me to be very superficial propaganda is the order of the day. I expect this growing party due due to the fact that I am
"old fashioned" I am not in sympathy with much of the burning fashions of the day.

Certainly first class mediumship is rarer now than years ago.
I often think that that may be partly due to the disturbed & unsettled state of the mentality of the people today the world over.

Well known & spiritualist
speakers — also advocates & astrology thinks this state of things due to the fact that no (rarely few) mediums were born with Neptune in Geminii !! That of course is an interesting speculation, but I know that Astrologers seem to claim infallibility in their "exact science".

The parochial situation, that of the Alliance, is not good. We fear, very much indeed, that unless a miracle happens our Journal "Light" dating back to 1881 will have to cease publication at the end of next year. We have suspended it in the U.S.A. as was the case formerly, & by so doing have to some extent safeguarded the parent company.

Our chief difficulty arises in fact that the majority of the members supporters of the Alliance are feeble living on fixed incomes and of course they are those most hard hit by present taxation. They live in retirement pay Rent & save in any way possible & unnecessary subscriptions have to be discontinued. We have many expressions of great friendship & regret from retiring members.

We have in the past — my association with the Alliance goes back to December 1913. — weathered many storms & it is my faith that if our institution remains of value today, it will find it possible to continue.

The Society for Psychical Research has considerable publicity in these days. It emphasises its divergence from Spiritualism by its scientific aspect. It appeals to the scientific world, & does not, as you will know, admit the Spirit hypothesis, in its corporate capacity.

It is developing very ardently the S.P.R. (Extra-Sensory Perception) tests so largely carried out by Dr Rhine at Duke University. The psychologists are keen about this line of research. I see in these present observations, with attendant theories, the dilemma of the modern materialist.

The L.S.A. stands in the middle ground between scientific psychical Research and popular "Religious" Spiritualism. Ours is a quiet, moderate, balanced position, asserting the most of survival, & candidly admitting the problems & difficulties of membership.

9 Nile

This, as you will well understand, does not, especially in these days, make a very wide appeal.

This brings me to my personal problem. I absorbed the outlook & policy of our pre-leaders of years ago.
As far as my influence can go, I have held fast to this through all things,
I am wholly in accord with the old policy — and we have maintained it at the Albany. I am not in sympathy with much that is condoned & presented in Zionistic circles today. So long as I am at the Albany
I shall hold to the old principles. Many a long time had numbers of the Council supporting me in my views.

I still have this confidence.

I (was born) on March 8, 1885, & although I have left wonderfully well & late,
I naturally wonder if some younger person more in time with the times, would do better for the Alliance.

In the past I have more than once toyed with the idea of resigning (but very seriously
I must admit) & each time an unexpected message has come to me for unseen friends asking me to remain.

However this appears to show things happen — I did start out to plan & achieve; & that is why I really await the "order" to go.

I'm writing for my little house in the country. It's a cosy place, with charming country all around — I adore
the beauty of the country, & various things have turned out so marvellously to enable me to keep it.

I've just renewed my lease for another 10 years — & then I think I should see me through; & I obtained the landlord this my ability which depended on my retaining my health & my work. And he has actually given me this security with the option of leaving at any quarter day with a six months notice, should I need to. How, isn't that a grand providence.

Also I was lucky in being "sent", I do think I can say, a helper. Jessie who "does" everything for us, so that on week ends I can rest in bed, recovering — read, walking in the garden — moderately — this morning I've been pruning climbing roses.

I have not quite made up I have made new resolutions for planning & attempting to absorb too much of your time.

Not this visit. Nothing of much value has been published ~~since~~ this year since the last books you had — I have not forgotten your request.

I hope you enjoyed visiting good wishes for your birthday & Christmas and all those days. Yours very sincerely

Mary Phillimore

February 5, 1949

Dear Miss Phillimore:

I was very pleased to receive your kind letter of December the 3rd with its good wishes for my seventy-fourth birthday anniversary and for the Christmas Season.

Strange as it may seem, I am still striving to acknowledge communications received not only on my birthday and at Christmas, but at the time of my retirement from office. Your letter written by hand was one which I was anxious to acknowledge in a similar manner. Hence my delay in thanking you for it.

Unfortunately, I have not yet regained the strength I had before my recent setback in London, and I find that writing by hand not only fatigues me considerably, but also occasions an eye strain against which I have to guard. In the circumstances, I hope you will excuse both my delay in writing and, after all, a dictated letter.

I shall never forget your kindness to me during my stay at the Dorchester. It was a strange sort of experience to have others coming to see me whom I should have been the first to call on myself. You were one of but three or four persons whom I had the pleasure of having a talk with before being ordered to rest.

You will be glad to know that I am again able not only to be out and about but more or less about where I was before I left for the Paris and London meetings. I constinue, however, to experience considerable fatigue and I can see it is going to take some months and the vitalizing power of the Spring to restore much of the energy that I appear to have lost. That, at seventy-four, does not come too readily.

While I have given up the leadership of my Party and of the government, I am still a member of Parliament. The new session opened some ten days ago. I can see already that if I am to make any headway with writing my Memoirs, and in getting my own house in order, I shall have to give up attendance at the House of Commons except to be present on critical divisions. One cannot serve two masters and I feel that my service to the State has pretty well justified my giving closer attention to my own affairs for what time may be left, than has been possible in the past.

I hope you keep very well, and that all is going well with your work.

I have not, thus far, had a chance to have Miss Cummins' writing transcribed. I have, however, not forgotten my promise to see that, when that time comes, a copy is sent to Miss Gibbes. The record is quite a remarkable one.

Please allow this letter to bring my kindest remembrances and best of wishes to you and, above all, my warmest thanks for the good wishes which you have so kindly extended to me.

Dear Mr MacKenzie King.

Will you please accept my very kindest wishes for a happy birthday on the 17th of this month, and for many happy returns of the day here on this old Earth, for just as long as you have the need & desire before the next great Adventure.

I imagine that this first birthday, freed as you are from the immense weight of responsibility for so long a time will give you a new lease of life. I expect your mind will be occupied with new plans of fresh activity which the heart, ever young with us, will encourage with enthusiasm.

The chief wish is that you may be blessed with good health & strength. Then you will be happy in all you do. And you should be aware of the warmth of feeling which surrounds you coming from all people near & far who understand the nature of the service you have given all your life to the best & to the greatest.

I am wondering how long a time we may have before the next terrible and terrifying cataclysm breaks — if it can be deferred until a sufficient number of people understand + can check the malevolent, penetrating ideas of political communism.

From what I gather the French are paralysed by fear. That that is one of the chief causes of their instability. That they think the English are repeating the same mistakes of judgement as were made after 1918.

I cannot understand how some people here in England with authority, appear to blend a belief in spiritual principles with any form or degree of political Communism together with their experience of freedom as we understand it. Are they sincere but foolish, or are they fanatical?

I wish that all people of the various parties who are anti-Communist would join together under a new name, but I see one difficulty in the fact that ~~Socialism~~ Socialism (British) is really in some respects an illogical preaching of Marxism — a weak compromise. It is therefore ~~vitiated~~ vitiated in its foundation. It would be difficult for the parties to co-operate — and if the Tories Liberals doesn't join with Labour Socialism, we should only be where we are now.

If these thoughts of mine are crotchetty perhaps you will be kind enough to smile indulgently!

We all are truly distressed on account of the illness of our King, & pray that he may recover. We recognise the grand promise of Princess Elizabeth & her husband; but the tried & trusted splendid character of the King & Queen is something we shall need as an example in the land.

I received your very kind letter written on your journey home which gave me much pleasure, & I thank you.

I gave your message concerning the copy of the report of the sitting to Miss Gibbon & Miss Cummins.

Once again I send all my best wishes. And remain.

Yours sincerely

8th October 1948.

Dear Mr. Mackenzie King,

It was a pleasure to hear good news of you from you yourself to-day in spite of the temporary depression of unwelcome 'flu, but this annoyance must yield place to renewed vigour in the warmth of the welcome, I am sure, is accorded you from all folk in the Mother Country.

With very much pleasure I am able to offer you the following appointments:

If time permits, you may wish to take all. If not please make your selection.

Miss Geraldine Cummins, 25 Jubilee Place, Chelsea, S.W.3. (Telephone: FLAxman 0660)
Saturday, 23rd or 30th October. Or any day that suits your convenience.

Miss Gibbes asked me to say that she and Miss Cummins would be delighted if you would take tea with them, as before, after the sitting if you choose to sit at, say, three o'clock in the afternoon.

Mrs. Edith Thomson of Glasgow.
Tuesday, October 26th at 3.0 p.m.

Mrs. Thomson is fortunately here now for the month of October but unless any sittings should be cancelled, the appointment offered you is the only one possible. I have before spoken to you of Mrs. Thomson. Her work is most variable but when she succeeds it is remarkable. I have an idea that her best powers would be employed for you so I hope very much that you may be able to take the appointment offered.

Mrs. Methven.
Wednesday, October 27th at 12.30 p.m.

Mrs. Methven is certainly one of the best mediums of the day and, should time permit, well worth a trial.

Mrs. Sharplin is out of town. She will return next Tuesday when I shall be in touch with her. No one in her absence could give information about appointments. I have reserved Friday, October 29th for her as I gathered from you that that day was most likely to be free. She would doubtless come early, as she did before, if later in the day should should be already booked.

My telephone extension was faulty when you called me and your voice faded several times but I believe I understood correctly all that you said.

I hope that you will take a sitting here so that I and my colleagues may have the pleasure of greeting you again.

With my best wishes,

I am,

Yours sincerely,

Secretary.

Dear Mr. Mackenzie King.

While at home here on holiday I have read of your relinquishing your Party leadership after 30 years of service.

I should so much like to send you my kindest wishes for happiness in your private pursuits, and success in the writing which I believe you contemplate, + at the same time express my admiration and gratitude for the grand work of your life.

Some little time since Miss Gibbes read me her report of your meeting with Mrs Cummins (Mrs Cummins was in Ireland) as you had very kindly said I might do.

How splendidly successful was the meeting.

Am I right in believing that your friends had wanted you to continue public work even longer than you have?

Yet, even if so, I know that in all circumstances we are right in acting upon our own judgement.

If, when you are in London I can be of any assistance to you, I believe you know I should welcome such an opportunity.

With best wishes & kind regards.

Yours sincerely

Dear Mr. Mackenzie King,

Thank you very much for your kind and explanatory letter of April 29th together with transcript of the automatic writing of November 22nd 1947. It is indeed kind of you to take so much trouble and Miss Cummins was delighted to hear (just before she left for Ireland), how successful it has all seemed to be. It was a great pleasure to us both to see you in November last and we look upon your visit as a great honour.

Miss Cummins will be away until October when she hopes, if all is well, she will return to me here. And, if you are over ~~here~~ again, perhaps we shall have the pleasure of seeing you if you can spare the time.

I should always be very ready to discuss these various scripts with you any time.
They seem to bear on the series of Gate Gate previously.

I shall show Miss Phillimore this script in a day or two - I have so much to do at the moment clearing up various things & arranging for publication of other work etc that I do not like to say how.

Miss Cummins asked me to say how encouraged she was by your letter, giving so many important points concerning her writing. With thanks again and all good best wishes from us both -

Yours sincerely E.R. Sibley.

Dear Mr MacKenzie King,

I enclose copy of a script written by Geraldine Cummins a few days ago. It was quite unexpected, but the fact that we had been reading your Address and also re-read your kind letter of Feb 20th wherein you hint that you might possibly make known your investigations into psychic matters later on, may have drawn these communiators near us.

I do not recollect of course, what was written at your sittings here. And Miss Cummins knows nothing. But I am interested in the fact that MLe H. signs herself with A. as the second letter. This is important as regards the scripts sent to Mr Gray. Also, "cordially" is very American, a fact quite unknown to Miss C.

We quite understand that you have not yet had time to dictate the communication made here and set it transcribed. We shall look forward to seeing this later on.

With all kind wishes from us both,

Yours sincerely,

E B Gibbes.

P.S. Was Watson called "Pa"?!

Monday Evening March 22nd, 1948.

G.D.C. and E.B.G. 25, Jubilee Place, S.W.3.

After some preliminary remarks from Astor (Miss Cummins's control) he wrote, "Here comes a woman and a man, Marguerite and Pa, she calls him Pa Watson. Yes these two have, they say, a message from the President for his very dear friend Mac. Is it a suitable time to give it or do you wish to speak with others? (E.B.G. Let these two speak) Yes, she will be brief. (Writing changed).

Marguerite Le Hand

I have been studying this method of writing and hope I shall succeed today in conveying the regrets of Frank -you understand who he is - to his old friend Mac. He regretted that he brought pressure to bear on him to stay on as premier of his country. He felt very strongly about it at the time and wrote vehemently. Now he realises that Mac has earned his rest or rather earned the time to indulge in another form of work. He now thinks that, with Mac as a consultant, Canada will not be swamped by USA but will retain independance of action. Meantime, Frank is keenly interested in Mac's project, that of writing his Memoirs. He thinks it very important that Mac writes this book, and he, Frank, gives him full leave to use any material in his own connection - that is to say what they talked about when Mac made a home from home with Frank. He also says that Mac may allude to his present survival if he wishes. In fact he would be glad if the world knew that, he, Frank, lived on and could send greetings to his fellow men.

You have, I perceive, other visitors today who wish to write, so I shall not continue. (EBG. Please continue if you have anything important to say, the others can wait)

Marguerite: As you may have to send this message by post I think it is wiser not to write anything of a more intimate character.

I remain
Yours cordially,
Marguerite A. Le Hand "

Astor then wrote
She is still cautious
(The communication then continued on other lines.)

Dear Miss Gibbes:

Re: Sitting at 25 Jubilee Place, S.W.3 -
Saturday afternoon - November 22, 1947

I have, at last, found time to dictate a transcription of Miss Geraldine Cummins' automatic writing. As promised, I enclose a copy herewith.

A perusal will, in an instant, show you and Miss Cummins how remarkable in all particulars the record is.

First of all, I should perhaps draw attention to the names that appear throughout, for example, those of Mowat and Fielding which refer to two of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's colleagues in the Cabinet of 1896; to Abbott who is a member of my own Cabinet, mentioned some times as a possible successor to myself in my present position.

The references to Laurier, to Roosevelt and to Churchill are all of a character which would relate them, in a natural way, to any conversation I might be having with President Roosevelt, as are the names of Miss LeHand, Watson, Harry Hopkins and others of their immediate associations.

The reference to Mr. Roosevelt's characterisation of my father and mother is in complete accord with what I would expect. It is quite remarkable that Lady Aberdeen's name should appear, specially as one who would be of the particular circle who might be together at the time. Lady Aberdeen was a very old friend.

As to the subjects touched upon, my continuance in public life, the use I may wish to make of Laurier House (my present place of residence - the former residence of Sir Wilfrid Laurier but willed to me shortly after Sir Wilfrid's death), the tendencies arising out of the economic relations between the United States and Canada, the references to the policies of the British Government - all these and the other subjects mentioned are wholly in keeping with topics that would naturally arise were I to be conversing here and now with the persons referred to.

You will recall my unwillingness to accept too readily the suggestions as to my continuing on in public life. The copy of the unexpected script written by Miss Cummins a few days ago and which was sent to me under cover of a letter which I now gratefully acknowledge, would appear to be a wholly justified corollary.

I might mention incidentally that Watson was always referred to as "Pa" by those who were his intimate associates. The fact that he and Miss LeHand came together to express the hope that Miss Cummins would be available for the sitting I had in London, and that they should appear together recently in touching upon what was said in the November sitting, seems to me most evidential.

I regard the London script of November the 22nd as most remarkable - as evidential indeed as any sitting could possibly be. Should I be in London again at any time in the near future, I shall be glad to go carefully over its many features with Miss Cummins and yourself. Meanwhile, I shall be pleased if you will regard the whole matter as confidential except in relation to Miss Phillimore to whom it would be a pleasure to me to have this transcript shown.

SITTING HELD AT 25 JUBILEE PLACE, S.W. 3 - LONDON, ENGLAND

Saturday afternoon,
November 22, 1947.

Automatic writing - Geraldine Cummins,
Present: Miss Gibbs.

Astor is here.

This man is of special interest to me for he has the spiritual insight of an ancient Scottish Gaelic race. The genius of the chief of a clan and not merely that of _____.

Now I see near him Wilfred. A spirit who, when on earth, was delicate and frail in physique. He has been much with King since he passed over after the Great War - Wilfrid Laurier. Wilfrid says Mowat and Fielding and some other name. I think they are people with him.

K. asks: Should I stay on in public life - if so, for how long?
Answer: Wilfrid says you must stay on for some years to come. These are critical years and you alone can manage the numerous conflicting interests.

F.D.R. Himself is near today and wanted to speak to you, to urge you to stay on in public life. He will give you his reasons too. I shall let him speak now.

Read aloud this. Yes.

Franklin: Say, Mac, it is kind of you to come. I am most uneasy. You can put my mind at rest. I learned that you might consider retiring. I beg of you at whatever cost to continue in public life.

It is wiser from the point of view of your health to retire but I feel it is your duty not merely to your country but to the world to stay on. I am most anxious that you do for two reasons:

(1) is I want you to retain Canada's independence. There is a bunch of roughnecks in finance in the U.S.A. They would like to get hold of Canada through economic penetration. It is not a visible merging of the two countries but an invisible one behind the scenes they are after. That is my view. I may be wrong but you want capital for development of your country. In that respect, your care and foresight will prevent any encroachment on your independence and liberties. I fought finance all my life. I don't want big business later on to get undue control of Canada.

K. asks: It is a question. Would it not be wiser to write a book or two.

Ans.: Read this. Do you agree?

K. asks: Agree? I might be able to watch if even if I was not in office.
Ans.: I understand your reluctance to continue in office and no man more richly deserves a rest but my own feeling is that you are needed still.

K. asks: How about Winston? Did he not stick it out too long? Would it not have been better if he had stepped out?
Ans.: You are not Winston. Winston was in the opinion of his own people a fighter and, by God, a fine one too. But you have the wisdom he lacks - the caution, and that integral honesty that holds a country together. I know no man who can do it so successfully as you can.

There is that cheerful cut-throat Joe Stalin. Don't imagine he is going to leave your country alone. It is not war, oh no. Not at present or for a few years. But you had experience of his intrigues in that plot, not long ago. He knows Canada has those valuable minerals. More will be found. He would like to stir up discontent. Make mischief in your country and between your people and my people. You are wanted for many reasons, Mac. I know there are other good men. Abbott is a sensible fellow, no doubt, but I want your wisdom behind it all. I don't know how long you will remain the skipper but even in opposition, you would be mighty useful - a break on the men who are too impulsive. Too anxious for quick returns.

Mac, you know the old saying. The 19th century was the century of the U.S.A. The 20th century will be Canada's century. That is, in my opinion, far more likely to come through if you remain in public life, some years longer. Say what you think?

K. asks: I think you are far too kind, too generous. You have much too high an opinion of me.
Ans.: My God, man, no. I had my faults but you will admit I could size up character pretty rapidly. You have that slow Scotch way with you. You are not clever, you are wise. That is why I want you to hold on and why I called you up through Miss LeHand. I saw you wanted to get out. Don't. Don't.

K. asks: How is Miss LeHand?
Ans.: She manages me just the same as ever.

K. asks: She is a wonderful person. A great help. A great spirit.
Ans.: She had extraordinary force and helped me to get through more than anyone else. Watson is with me, too.

K. asks: That is 'Pa' Watson - a dear fellow.
Ans.: He sends you his very best wishes. We all urge you to go on in your job. But we are going to get behind you and help you. You will not know how we come, but when you sleep, we will put suggestions into your mind. Wilfrid L. of course will join our brains' trust. So go forward with confidence, knowing we are behind you.

K. asks: I ~~must~~ Shall keep in mind what you say but I shall have to think it all over very carefully. I have told the Party I must get ~~a nice~~ our Ste. summer if I am spared that long.
Ans.: Don't let those doctrinnaire theorists in the English Govt. get ahold of you either and pass their theories on to you. Keep your independence of thought but get all the man you can from the mother or grandmother country to settle in Canada. It will be in the interests of both countries, for, later on, I see a population difficulty in England and a lot of discontent. In fact, England's future gives me more of a headache than that of France. France will get through by means of strong leadership. Their leader won't be a pleasant fellow but he will get them on their feet eventually.

England will be more difficult. Her nervous system - I mean of her people - is out of gear. There will be trouble later for English Cabinet but I am talking too much. I want any question you like to ask.

K. asks: What does Sir Wilfrid think I should do with Laurier House?
Ans.: He thinks you should keep a careful watch at present. Does not want you to make any hurried decision. Wait, I will ask. Yes, he did not quite grasp question.

K. asks: Would he like me to keep it as a Memorial for him and for me in my Will.
Ans.: He says: yes, a Memorial. He would like that. Wilfrid also says he wants to give you advise about your health. However busy your day, you should relax for half an hour at least, morning or evening, andput all affairs out of your mind. He wants you to eat with care now - not meat, he says, unless in small quantity, and bear in mind the glasses of cold water. Not near a meal; wash out the interior. You do not mind, do you, these mundane remarks about your health, but it is important.

K. asks: They are very helpful.

Ans.: We want to keep you going, old man, for the sake of the whole continent of America. Canada has a great future, no doubt, but not if the United States gets too strong a financial hold there. You can keep her big business within bounds. They can't fool you.

Any other questions, Mac?

K. asks: Are my mother and father there - have you seen them at all?

Ans.: Yes, it has been my privilege and pleasure to meet them, and I have fallen in love with your mother. She is a sweet and lovable woman - one of the best, and gave place to me today as she knew how anxious I was about your decision re possible retirement.

Your father, too, is one of the best. He has that honesty and straightforwardness I admired more than any other quality. They both send love; also an old friend named ISHBEL or ISABEL ABERDEEN. She said: of Aberdeen. She was in Canada early years of the century and her husband was Governor but I think she governed him.

K. asks: I am sure of that.

Ans.: At least she is a charming but determined lady.

And now, Mac, I can't hold on much longer.

Have I your assurance you won't retire yet, at least. Stay on some years more.

K. : I shall think that over very carefully but I shall have to give it great thought.

Ans. : Cautious Mac!!

Don't be rushed by any of us. Good luck. Always your friend,

F.D.R.

K. : My love to you, Harry Hopkins, Miss LeHand, Watson, all dear friends.

Ans. : Hopkins sent all the best.

Our love.

Dear Mr Mackenzie-King,

Miss Gibbes and I were immensely pleased to receive your letter of February 20th. We are very grateful for your kindness in writing so fully and are indeed delighted to learn of the evidential character of the writings. We appreciate the more your thought for us when, as you say, you never have been more busy in your life. We hope that in spite of overwork you are keeping well.

I also write to thank you on behalf of Miss Gibbes and myself for your most illuminating and inspiring Address. We have read it with the very greatest interest. In the present anxieties this reading was for us both encouraging and stimulating. What a wonderful life of service to Canada and the Empire yours has been. I only fully realised it when I saw by the dates in the Address how long you have led your country. Miss Gibbes and I feel that it has been indeed a privilege to have met you; and we recall with such pleasure our talk that afternoon which was so memorable to us.

With all good wishes,

Yours Sincerely,

Geraldine Cummins

February 20, 1948

Dear Miss Gibbes:

You and Miss Cummins and Miss Mercy Phillimore will think I am a strange sort of person indeed never to have followed up my promise to send you a transcript of the sitting I had with Miss Cummins when recently in London. The truth is that, since my return, I have been so overwhelmed with the pressure of public business, from day to day, that I have had little or no chance to give any thought or attention to some of the personal matters in which I am most interested.

I have read through the two type scripts you gave me concerning Marguerite LeHand (alias Foote). All of the persons therein mentioned excepting Mr. Gray I knew or still know personally. To me, the whole account could not be more evidential than it is. I doubt if it could be more so.

I shall, however, have to wait for some other time to point out wherein, like Mr. David Gray, I was able to verify the account almost line by line.

I am sorry, too, to have to tell you that, thus far, I have not had a chance to have a transcript made of the communication recorded by Miss Cummins. I have not cared to give the document to anyone to copy, and have not had a chance to dictate the transcript myself. I have only one confidential secretary to whom I would care to dictate. I shall do my utmost to have the communication transcribed and sent on to you within the next few weeks. Meanwhile, I might say to you that from the evidential point of view, it will compare favourable with the LeHand transcripts. The names of some of the persons to whom reference is made, and the absolute correctness of some of the situations to which it refers would not be more remarkable than they are.

Apart from sending this line of explanation and apology, this letter is really to thank you for your own kind letter of January the 3rd letting me know that you had received the telegram I sent from Southampton, and the letter written at sea; also for the good wishes from Miss Cummins and yourself for success and happiness in 1948. May I extend to you both my own best wishes for all that is best in the New Year.

It is only now that I find it possible to send acknowledgments of some of the communications which I received at the Christmas Season and at the beginning of the New Year. I hope you and Miss Cummins are very well. I shall endeavour not to delay too long in sending you the promised transcript. I may tell you, however, I have never been more busy in my life.

Under separate cover, I am sending you a copy of an address which I made to the National Liberal Federation of Canada in which I announced my intention to retire from the leadership of my Party in the course of the present year. You will find in Part III of the address, the reference to which I refer. This subject, among others, was one referred to by my friend in the communication Miss Cummins recorded.

Dear Mr Mackenzie King.

Thank you so much for your kindness in sending a telegram just before you sailed for New York. I was very pleased indeed to hear of the success of the two appointments.

Will you please accept my best wishes for your birthday. For many happy returns.

I should also ask you to accept my most sincere wishes that you may have strength & courage to continue your magnificent life work for the amelioration of suffering humanity. This today must be a crushing task for all who have little faith. But I know that you have that faith.

Perhaps I may be allowed to tell you that I was very circumstances prevented me from having the pleasure of seeing you once again during your last visit to England: but I have the memory of your visits in the past which is a very happy one.

Again expressing my very kindest wishes.

I remain

Dear Mr Mackenzie King,

It was indeed kind of you to send us a telegram from Southampton - we were delighted to get it. Also - thank you very much for your kind letter written at sea.

Miss Cummins & I fully appreciate your request that we shall keep the transcript of the communication you received.

and this shall be done after we have shown it to Miss Phillimore as requested.

We shall be interested to hear sometime, what you thought of the two typescripts I gave you concerning "Marguerite de was one of the most evidential cases we have ever had and is doubly important in that the Note of this was

May we both wish you every possible success & happiness

thanks again for kind appreciation,

Nieuw Amsterdam,

December 1, 1947

Dear Miss Phillimore:

After all, your vision was clearer than mine when you ventured to express a word of good-bye at the conclusion of our talk together on Friday of last week. I had greatly hoped - and really expected - that, in some way, I would, before leaving, be able to see you to express in person my thanks to you for all your good offices.

It was a terrible disappointment when, at the very end, I found that the only moments I had free in which to 'phone were after the offices at Queensbury Place were closed. I was almost desperate when I learned that, to connect with this ship at Southampton, on Wednesday morning, I would have to leave the Dorchester before nine a.m. That robbed me of the last opportunity.

I am hoping that Miss Gibbs may have told you of the very successful sitting I had with Miss Geraldine Cummins. It quite surpassed all expectations. The morning sitting with Mrs. Sharplin, in many respects, was equally good. I would not, for anything, have missed either of these sittings.

I have promised to send Miss Gibbs a copy of Miss Geraldine Cummins' writing. I may, however, have to wait until after reaching Ottawa before having the transcript made. When I send it to Miss Gibbs, I shall ask her to allow you to see it but I think it would be well, for reasons which, I know, you will both appreciate, that it should not be retained among any records other than my own, and that it would be best to have it destroyed after reading.

It was exceedingly kind of Miss Gibbs and of Mrs. Geraldine Cummins, and Mrs. Sharplin, to have arranged for meetings on a Saturday. It was more than kind of you to have lent your good offices to bring this about.

I wish it might have been possible to arrange other meetings for the Monday or Tuesday. As matters turned out, however, they were more than filled with official meetings arranged for almost at the last moment.

Personal

Dear Miss Gibbs:

I was sorry not to have had a chance, before leaving London, to thank you again for your great kindness of Saturday afternoon last.

At the time of coming aboard this ship, I sent you a brief message from Southampton which I hope was duly received. I was disappointed, however, in not being able to tell you, at least over the 'phone, how deeply impressed I was by the afternoon sitting with Miss Geraldine Cummins, and how touched I was by your own personal kindness and that of Miss Cummins in inviting me to join you in a cup of tea, and allowing ~~me~~ to take up so much of your time.

I should like also again to thank you and Miss Cummins for the little book, the pages of which I have been enjoying at odd moments on this voyage.

I may have to wait until I reach Ottawa to have a transcription made of Miss

Cummins' writing, so please forgive me if it does not reach you as soon as I had hoped it might.

I have written Miss Mercy Phillimore telling her of how much I enjoyed the Saturday afternoon, and how exceedingly successful as well as interesting its hours were. Perhaps when I send on a copy of Miss Cummins' writing, you would allow Miss Phillimore to see it.

For reasons which you will both appreciate, it might be as well were the transcription not to be kept on any file other than my own. Perhaps, therefore, you will not mind having the copy I send, destroyed.

~~If, at any time, circumstances made it advisable to have reference made to the original,~~ I shall take particular care to see that the original is carefully preserved in case, at some future time, occasion for reference to it ~~may~~ arise.

With kind regards, and many thanks,

Yours sincerely,

Miss E.B. Gibbs,

November 14. 47

Dear Mr. Mackenzie King

Thanks for your letter of the 30th October. I was pleased to hear that there may be a possibility of your visiting us by having one or two sittings.

The following arrangements have been made in the hope you may find them convenient:

Mon. Nov 24 at 11 a.m. (or earlier) Mrs Edith Thomson

Tues & Wed. Nov 25 and Nov 26, Mrs Blackburn is reserving for you choice, and she would be here at 10 a.m. if you wished.

Any afternoon at 3 - 3.30 in week commencing Nov 24 Miss Geraldine Cummins would be glad to give you a sitting at 25, Jubilee Place, Chelsea, S.W.3 that being the home of herself & Miss E.B. Gibbes, two friends with whom she lives.

Miss Cummin has recently arrived from her mother's home in Ireland where she has undergone an operation. She is now much better but still poorly. She very rarely indeed gives private sittings, so I had to confide in Miss Gibbs in order to obtain this opportunity. Miss Gibbs will not give Miss Cummin your name, altho' if you go she will doubtless recognise you.

The ladies would feel very pleased if you would consent to stay to tea after the sitting when they would have a private full report of the most interesting case of evidence received thro' Miss Cummin concerning persons in whom you are greatly interested. Miss Gibbs asked me to convey to you this invitation.

I hope very much that you may be able to take the opportunity of sitting with Miss Cummin for she is a most gifted & accomplished medium. You will be fascinated with her philosophical writings. (Confidential)

Mrs Thomson & Miss Hodgson would sit in this case.

Should you go to Miss Cummin her home is situated Miss-Jubilee Place is a turning on Right of King's Rd. Chelsea, between Sloane Square & Chelsea Town Hall.

As soon as your plans in London are fixed, I shall be glad to know what you would wish me to confirm.

Yours very faithfully
Percy Williamson

Will you please send me a line to let me know if you receive this letter safely, as I was not sure of the address.

October 30, 1947

I was indeed pleased to receive your kind letter of October 24th.

I certainly hope I shall have an opportunity to visit Queensbury Place while in London. I will be on the continent from Saturday, November 8th, to Sunday, the 15th, and at the Dorchester thereafter.

There may not be a chance before the wedding, but immediately after, on the Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday of the following week, I expect to be in London and will make every effort to arrange for meetings on one or other of those days. Once I am in London, and settled, I shall ring you up and try to arrange a definite engagement.

Meanwhile, please let this letter bring to you, with my thanks, my kindest remembrances and, as always, my best of wishes.

Dear Mr Mackenzie King.

It is known that you will shortly be in England for the wedding of Princess Elizabeth. I have therefore asked Mrs Shackleton to try to keep herself partly free round about Nov. 20, but here are rearranging some times for Miss Edith Rimmer, the medium of Glasgow of whom I have told you. Should you like to meet either of these ladies, I shall very gladly make such arrangements as you may desire.

It would be a convenience in fixing appointments if you would please let me know as soon as possible which date would suit you.

I fear you will be returning to a Europe in some ways less settled than when you were last here, I can imagine the deep disappointment this must be to those who have done their utmost to bring about amicable good will & cannot make progress.

If it so happens that we are privileged to welcome you here again, it will be a great pleasure to us & your & I hope the special meetings will be very successful.

With our pleasant & best wishes for your health & safety & safe journey to England.

Yours truly

Dear Mr Mackenzie King.

I have heard from Miss Sharpless that she will be very pleased to meet you here at 9.30 a.m. on either Tuesday or Wednesday, the 28th & 29th.

Mrs Thirza Smith, the medium with whom Lady Anderson sat, will be pleased to attend any morning most suitable that suits you.

I regret I did not succeed in persuading Mrs Osmond Wilson, the Voice medium, to agree — I feared I should not.

Would you be kind enough to let whether you wish by Tuesday morning & I will then get into touch with Mr Chamberlain & Miss Smith.

It was a great pleasure to see you today, & particularly to see you were so well.

With best wishes.

Sincerely

I thank you warmly for your kind letter of the 19th instant. It was indeed a great pleasure to me to see you again and I enjoyed every moment of our little talk together.

Please let me thank you once more for all your good offices in a number of directions.

Let me add that I have been not a little touched by your kind references to my "Industry and Humanity" and particularly upon the added importance of its message which recent events have served to give to the application of the principles it sets forth.

I shall probably be seeing you again in the course of the present week and may be 'phoning you in the morning so shall not write more.

Let me thank you most warmly for the good wishes of your letter.

Dear Mr. Mackenzie King,

To-day Mrs. Helen Hughes has telephonedto say she will be in London for the whole of Tuesday, October 30th, and would come here on that day at any time to suit your convenience.

If October 30th is inconvenient, she can almost with certainty arrange to come on any other day that suits you, and will gladly do so.

I have her address this week in Sheffield and on and after Tuesday, October 23rd, I can reach her at her home in Dalton-le-Dale.

Should it suit your own and Mrs. Osborne Leonard's convenience to meet in this house, we should gladly place a room at your disposal.

Yours sincerely,

Mercy Phillimore

Dear Mr. Mackenzie King,

It was a great pleasure to receive your telephone call, and to know that we may have the opportunity to arrange some sittings for you, if your engagements permit you time for this purpose.

The best mediums now available are Mrs. Sharplin and Mrs. Mary Taylor, and thirdly I would suggest Mrs. Bedford. I have not yet heard from Mrs. Helen Hughes when her engagements allow her to come to London. On hearing from you, I shall immediately make the best arrangements that are possible for the times at your disposal.

One of the most gifted psychics in London is Mrs. Hester Dowden, also known as Mrs. Travers Smith. She is famous for her automatically derived scripts. In addition, she gives private sittings for communication, but it is my personal belief that her powers yield a large percentage of remarkable telepathy and less of genuine communication with the departed, but not all people would agree with this opinion.

If you would wish to sit with Mrs. Dowden, I would ask for an appointment, and I expect she would prefer, as usual, to give the sitting in her own home in Chelsea.

I am sure you will be interested to hear that Mrs. Constance Sitwell is our President, in succession to Miss Lind-af-Hageby, and she met you here in 1936. Mrs. Sitwell has just returned fromher home in Northumberland and will be writing to you. The famous literary Sitwells are her relations-in-law and she herself has published some charming extracts from her diaries. She is also a keen memberof the S.P.R., and is a cousin of the Hon. Mrs. Alfred (Dame Edith) Lyttelton.

May I tell you that my colleagues, Miss Yeatman and Miss Rentzsch, who also had the pleasure of meeting you in 1936 are still here, and they join with me in sending our very best wishes for the blessings of health and strength.

I hope our rather surprising October sunshine has chased away your cold.

Yours sincerely,

Secretary.

remember you have until all of us to be with you and when all the work you can do will make you happy for the day, and an endless ocean of tender gentleness. We want you to be and know every thing that is there and to carry away all atmosphere with you. Your father says that he is expected to be with you and loves you more than he can say. It was hard to say good-bye in Berlin when he realized how much it is really like saying - when you do back this must be made to do and you will find that the whole will be just to welcome you. They are longing for you to come. Just that now. For you are tired & we can't send you presence from beyond in your dreams & even in words - and you do this because today's work is nothing for you and be too conscientious for you. He loves to see you happy & in your pleasures and is really glad to be used for you. He says that to this hand of they to used to love & to himself. All is well at home & we will have a splendid journey back. Goodnight and love from each of us. We are all very glad for you. Dr. Hamm is finding your writing & his decision is here & we will & you with love & kisses

Dear Lawrence Wesley about 5 Wednesday

Mr dollar from Florence Monday

I am so glad that you carried out my instruction to come to Rome at once. You were just in time all that you came to see and am so much pleased a much rather and happier than in any way. Your father is delighted with what you have done today for he cannot be in bed with you and they both send their fondest love to you also your dear sister and brother. They are all waiting with you and helping to finish the Christmas Day W. here the dear Jamesons also here. We hope also to be able to have them with us for to say that he will see you tomorrow and then will make offer that you want. They are all pleased about your talk with him from Alla and that you have divided about your own work or will or your future they say you are right to let them rest and to come back to live country life for but that you real work is only just beginning, and you will come to stay that you have made them promise they want you to get some other ways where you can live whatever they will decide to or you to about miss Vadovini. I left he with his aunt Countess, we are all trying to persuade her to go to Nice for the remainder of Feb. You will be able to let many pleasant days in Jan to about and to read there to advantage difficulty. I will not remain to Feb, also you will find out about the places of greatest interest. You will be delighted with the portrait of Mrs Talbot Hoppner also Mrs Hoppner perhaps you will see him before you go. He would like to talk with you about Rome and he knows her as is a great man, and working hard for the Trophy for will find him a good man also. He made-

Schmidt's letter for Hannah. Go to bed now and you will have a lesson in the morning which will help you very much. Johann et Lucie and Otto help you here the money we will help you to find the bla or the Ostrich Feathers Evangelis and will help you get a - Pension for your work under Jean Gaston sends his Foundations Jean. He likes the Athene will you be sent the lesson about Lord Rathmore to Bill you he was near. My right shoulder pains all the morning Lois dear Mary me know that,

Yours from Joan!

Sir I can write a comfort - His personality is a man first comfort is a man / His person also is a strong a good deal young or thin, also nervous about - mainly condition in which my first thought - relative - person has a great disappointment - (worst a great deal) - not letting first fully of anxiety - difficulty and health shown in his certain - mainly nervous depression - whole not obvious in condition - [illegible] condition of worry + worry + emotional misery -

Your condition I am sending in it letter is from a woman - condition in the letter of a deeper condition of great anxiety - take it out to it
it. - at moment his person is obviously mainly [illegible] - psychic condition - you know it - complication [illegible] anxiety - connected with emotional - health and not right, not dangerous - doing a great deal in the way

I from near and dear - from responsibility - not able to suffer more unreasonable than usual - knowing capable - than a certain point of life & power to resist a selfish tempter & - cannot see as it is to most for me. - is there an older woman in contact with whom I can come (and it) - with whom I might to learn a feeling of affection might relate to poet - might relate to [illegible] - in person need explained to have a real chance of reality all has not come to them. - from what I see the person and envy on - but pure affection.

— Be faithful - I will tell you - an inherent sense within feels deeply - what has had [illegible] deadly - [illegible] but not made the subtle but real deep - disbelief in hope - here almost at home - you can trust - the person must be considered with great mode of gentleness, a certain condition of woman - her every responsibility - but to [illegible] and afraid of moment some on the night hurt - but will know you will see soon - [illegible] of [illegible], wonderful change - life of the person in complete of [illegible] has contained more than realized - then I know let you - will more out of this emptiness - and will be easy but [illegible] of certain [illegible] of [illegible] personality - has a great courage - you will [illegible] and [illegible] might afford love - no [illegible] make [illegible] of oscillation of considering - over [illegible] - now [illegible] will be [illegible] - overshadowed in [illegible] - [illegible] and [illegible]

3 Lancer - dear to me found of her own, carried it on a burden confronted herself for - it was hers - [illegible] heart long
- best better - decision has been made to take [illegible] for will lead into larger sphere - will be so regretted - in [illegible] a certain [illegible] stern, must long to know [illegible] a complete conception - how is [illegible] here for how on [illegible] - the [illegible] seemed [illegible] himself not calm, not clear to [illegible] to any thing but - over interests of personality - at times so great [illegible] to almost make enemy - must stop - great power of with [illegible] may [illegible] - when we want to see more be there - to convey upright - [illegible] of personality great kindness - [illegible] upon [illegible] for how to [illegible] - of healing or [illegible] great touch Jesus [illegible] hand & [illegible] - [illegible] here (found to be [illegible]) not - yet as they ought to be - more important - the moment not definitely healed - how [illegible] deepening [illegible] to other evil in that part of body - needs care.
the will have - [illegible] - [illegible] - [illegible]
trouble at one time - feels [illegible]

[illegible] - you know there is [illegible] - [illegible] it is intensely [illegible] not be [illegible] - in way of [illegible] - the [illegible] to [illegible]. that one [illegible]
- how [illegible] [illegible] - come from [illegible]

4/ Here I end on her room, - for now by now she was back in earlier life - affection her deeply - unspoken concern despite things - she dominates - herself - it's seasoned, for well first - for now I need 3 or 4 weeks for well find what they is this - then well do even a few revisions - with need, but more relaxed (from worldly point of view) but more relaxed that this was that here has meant - me & them - a certain way more than well be more complete - those restless - to do things on a level called. her sense of self-detachment still reproach her after her, but that shook in her voice, the reproach after that - at times she has a fear of having to die
- I hear none of them speak - a heartfelt name - an inward way in memory of them words - we may perhaps when she may lately - scheme perhaps - more in place of more tranquillity about at home - words that - that perhaps in silence sound there - less at the horizon. The short hours of, but those of she is sunlight - is for a moment from face where deadly is of moment. She has to face - for us for - to need for face - when she the for is ready there should have moment there - (front of bed - she face formed at moment in long deep light. with when she normally is strong forward freely for you over her - marked angry to little in certain as to shoulder - A dark there - for here Hart - She has uttered anger with a moment come with heart but condition and accompanying - left - that

It's lost in her mind
— it hurts our love so more closely related — How they are How strange & can that you and that? After it appears 'so un-conscious' it does continue one more, etc, it is more not so - the reason and cause for that not this one - you can change some things but not the rhythm of the harmony of nature that touches in human mutually most essential life — those cannot know - the more afraid not for herself but for another like the another woman — Older than Nancy - but the other soul — How woman is on the verge of love for understanding - so much unhappiness a conflict she a part - essential loneliness in forms - isolated from her own she has been for a long time - tender feel and adore her love — always alone. personality has always needed
many with you. - Not life tender considerate respect it, confusion of soul has grown in the over loneliness
it longs for peace. time has come for peace peace for peace - it must come to you — there is some thing primitive — elemental. of woman of earth in that love in essence - life of emotion has made others afraid to realize strength in that must on for first time that is coming - that making that can only meet that blossom into a happiness that was not known in

6 January 1918

- father - was thrown there - when a little girl was with her. Under condition that caused fear.
was embarrassed me before - or more better when at once - Lessing must be with the rest of me help - - Now - a change of M - Cannot be be Delayed - there is torment - a year ago do not let that on [illegible] of art - delay in [illegible] of memory - once had a wonderful [illegible] feel was there. In a million of calculations of condition of things which did not have allowed which he had not power over - dreadful [illegible]
our subsequent acts often - the more [illegible] herself - to consciousness often [illegible] - to how has almost [illegible] in my - has whether from both sides of [illegible] - [illegible] life seems a possibility - has body of moment etc in an ill state - doesn't need help here. she cannot do it. If cannot one day [illegible] - not allowed op-moment - what will happen what (?) it will do [illegible] to other side to cause of state of body needed - union before that time there's [illegible] (.) she is not really here on a visit - She has suffered all night - the body of that man is dominant or need as soul is - in that [illegible]
a condition of mental confinement there to [illegible] closely vibration when we say certain words

Our Father — heaven — sounds made for blue color hallowed be thy name — — — the people say

You can always say these words

May Kingdom come — go on — from the 1020 light I want you to know you can say these words over & yourself many days & you will better around you Great protection & highest intonation — Say words call morning — you are creating your own vibration & absorption & use you must be the high vibration all the time with you — the shadows —

we do not use colds must always in the grey vibration

We doctors are around you at times, as I told of you it is as if they were drawing a curtain a curtain that, many words drawn from it see you during — You know how the Rabbits

Sorrow & loneliness - more we write you are feeling very sad will get better

Every day the burden of sorrow will grow less - as you go along I see as it had been raised, as your heart sings round & looking up at light begins to brighten. all spiritual forces on high - those come to write - the end of sorrow Bell the star of light - all on earth are more united, they bright light & star. star of light means of hope making friends - a brilliant spiritual guide also means has creative light - see & smell, you will see they & hear - I hear a lady in spirit - have you a niece in spirit - a lady offering - there is one who comes younger than she was - do you believe in reincarnation - I must tell you what your guide says - star of light says Name goes through comes but light through - can a brilliant scholar? - many books & that you have studied a lot - many around - I take you as a learned man, intellectuality - lots of papers that papers - whether you believe or not - forward plan papers - papers - papers - they they they have gone

Began breathing very heavily - fast after a hemorrhage -

For one minute him breathed & gain him mother, too much & short - Nurse stretching chest - opening mouth.

Put pad under & with towel - by Jessie him - realized and went to dressing room.

began singing hymn.

"Nearer my God to Thee -

Tom: many sound in morning star.

Kissed little fellow, told him of him being faithful & him - of many saints my saint, - like God.

Then sang more other hymns.

~~Then more mother in his bassinet~~

Then took him in my arms - sat a rocker of bed for 20 minutes he never sound sound asleep breathing very deeply - fetus and more evening. Sang especially ~~Then to~~ Soft in arms of Jesus all verses -

He then undertook dance from the start - burning up all the atonement - I looked at it as a baleful thing - as all meant for him never to come together again. He chanted burning up it - I took the mat & put some under & put some on his head fingers - crossed over the bodies of the others from the mouth - felt he was never meant for shamanship, either Shiva or Buddha but all them meant for him Gods never to forget or for any book.

I then just closed on the book & brought him round me - my eyes open & my face covered him that my left arm on his body. At last withdrawing him into mine. I felt sure he moved for me

Communications Disrupted In West

Sleet and Snow Accompanied By Rising Winds Sweeping Over Prairies.

(Canadian Press.)

WINNIPEG Nov. 20.—Sleet and wet snow accompanied by rising winds tonight disrupted telegraph communications in Western Canada.

Colder weather was forecast with prospects of a blizzard of serious proportions.

Manitoba was being whipped by a strong northeast wind. Snow started to fall around 10 o'clock and at midnight the wind was whipping the snow through cities, towns, hamlets and across country.

Wintry weather was becoming more severe in Saskatchewan and Alberta, with rising winds although the weather was not as severe as in Manitoba.

May 1947.)

Note.

Since the publication of this case in S.P.R. Journal, more corroboration has come to hand from Mr. "X".

On July 31st 1947 he wrote:

"I have found out that Marguerite Foote did die in Kensington N.Y., the Kensington marine Hospital she was, but in Kensington. Also her middle name was Alice which I did not know and at first could not verify"

Above published in a letter to S.P.R.J. in Dec(?) 1947. Names as above are substituted as in published report. E.B.G.

SOME RECENT COMMUNICATIONS RECEIVED THROUGH MISS CUMMINS

[Miss Gibbes (E.B.G.) has sent us the following account of veridical communications received during 1945 through Miss Geraldine Cummins, whose mediumship is well known to our members.]

Fictitious names of persons and places are used throughout, but the real names have been disclosed to the Hon. Editor.

Miss Cummins spent the greater part of the war years from 1939–1944 in Ireland looking after an invalid mother and doing other rather nerve-wracking work. After the death of her mother in October 1944 she returned to London in February 1945. She did not seem very well but we had a few personal sittings for automatic writing before she returned to Ireland for the summer in June of that year.

During one of these sittings (March 19th, 1945) the following announcement was made by her control, Astor :

" I must tell you there is a stranger here, a quiet grey-haired woman with a curious force. So I have been compelled to pass on what is her message. She says she died in Kensington. She shows me a foot, that is her surname, I gather. Then a daisy, Yes, Marguerite Foote. She says she worked for a long time with an important public man—knew him well. She gives the name James. She says she wants to talk to Donald about James and that Donald hopes to come to this town in April. If so, she begs that you see him for the writing, not to let anything interfere as she has something important to say about James."

E.B.G. " I don't quite follow all this, Astor."

" You may know in April, as Donald is likely to want to see you if he has time."

E.B.G. " I grasp whom you mean now."

" That is all about her now. She doesn't seem able to give surnames. She seems to have been over here about three years. She says her message is important in regard to future events."

E.B.G. " Tell her I will remember and arrange."

The above came as a surprise. I soon realised however to whom the reference was meant. Later I looked up the name Foote in the telephone directory but could find no one in Kensington likely to fit the name given in the script.

After the sitting Miss Cummins said she recollected something about Donald X but couldn't remember what, and asked if any allusion had been made to him. I answered in the affirmative and enquired if he might be coming to London. She replied that she thought it extremely unlikely. I made no reference to the stranger.

During Miss Cummins's absence in Ireland, she had given an occasional sitting to a friend, Donald X. He had been much impressed by, and was very interested in, her psychic abilities. Through her he had received communications purporting to come from the mother of a well-known business man. Thinking there might be some interesting developments, I followed up this trail at the next sitting.

March 25th 1945, at 25 Jubilee Place, S.W. 3

" Astor is here ; Am I to call Hilda [my sister-in-law]? She and her family have been together to-day."

E.B.G. " Yes, but I should first like to ask you a few questions."

" I shall try to reply to them."

E.B.G. " You remember the quiet, grey-haired woman stranger, you described the other day? "

" Yes, she was an interesting woman with a keen brain, extremely quick but quiet, like one who had very great self-control and grip of herself."

E.B.G. " Had she spoken before? "

" No, she never communicated through my child [i.e. the medium]. In fact, it was her first visit. She knows Donald X. At least, she had seen him when she was staying with her employer whom she called James. When I asked her who James was, she replied that he was a man of affairs and did not seem to wish to give more information. I said was he in business and she replied that ' he was a very important business man ' and smiled."

" I said what kind of goods did he deal in? " She said, " Every kind."

E.B.G. " I wanted to trace her."

" She seems to have had a confidential post with James."

E.B.G. " She said she died in Kensington. Is there nothing more you can tell me in this respect? "

" She said she died in Kensington and that Donald would know her and that she did not particularly wish that you should find out who she was."

E.B.G. " Well, we will leave it at that."

" That was her habit in life—to keep secrets, and so she was always reserved with strangers."

E.B.G. " I tried to trace her name in a book here, but of course could not do so, it was too vague, as she might have died in any house in Kensington."

" She did not say she died here. I asked her. She said, ' There is more than one Kensington in the world ' and smiled."

At a subsequent sitting the following spontaneous reference to Marguerite Foote was made.

25, Jubilee Place, Chelsea, S.W. 3
Saturday Afternoon, April 14th, 1945

" Astor is here. There is near to you the quiet grey-haired lady, but if she is quiet she is persistent. She has for over a week been pressing me to speak to you about her first message. Her name is Marguerite Foote. At last I have that clearly from her. She says I gave her message wrongly to you. She had said James is coming over here in April and that she wanted to speak about James to Donald. She wanted to warn him that James was coming over. I see now that this lady does not belong to this country, but she is not French. She died in Kensington, New Zealand. She says she had retired there because she could not carry on her work any longer.

She says she knows Sheila took her place lately with James ; but it wasn't the same thing. Sheila is very clever but hasn't the experience of course. Do you want me to send this lady away? "

EBG. " I remembered, and would have asked Mr X to come here in April if he had visited this country. But now, as you say the message has been misinterpreted, we can convey it to him. We have not heard that he is coming here."

" She says she was working for a long time in a confidential position for James and that it has given her the greatest joy to see him resting after the passage of death. He is with his mother, or rather, she came to him."

EBG. " Tell her that I will send the message as she wishes."

" Yes, I have told her. She is satisfied."

After the death of James, Miss Cummins wrote a letter of sympathy to Mr X. She added something to the effect that, " A Miss Marguerite Foote had called here in March and that she was worried about something happening to a friend of his in April. She said she was from Kensington, N.Z." Miss Cummins added that she hesitated to write to Mr X as she knew nothing whatever about this lady. But she was a nice grey-haired woman. Also that she had called again yesterday.

A letter from Mr X was received by Miss Cummins on May 1st, 1945. It runs as follows :

(Extract) April 24, 1945.
DUBLIN.

" DEAR MISS CUMMINS,

Thank you so much for your kind letter of sympathy. Millie and I are both grateful for it. What you wrote about Marguerite Foote is most interesting and evidential. You may have since learned that she was James's confidential secretary for many years and died about two years ago. What is most evidential is that she told you she ~~lived~~ died in 'Kensington, N.Z.', which is not generally known ; also the fact that she had white hair, though relatively a young woman. How did that come through? If I could have excerpts from the script covering these two episodes, I should be most grateful. Obviously, Miss Foote was hoping to get word to James through you and me to take care of his health. . . . If you come over let us know. We not only want to see you but feel that some interesting things might come through. Please remember me to Miss Gibbes.

Yours faithfully,
DONALD X."

May 1st, 1945.

" DEAR MR X,

Miss Cummins has read me extracts from your letter to her concerning Marguerite Foote. As I am anxious to collect any evidence of survival, would you be so good as to let me know a few more details concerning her? I take a few questions from the three scripts copies of which I enclose. Your answers would of course be regarded by us as confidential.

Was Marguerite " quiet, grey-haired and with a curious force "?

Did she " work for a long time with James and know him well "?

In your letter you say she died about two years ago. Astor says about three years. But time is often a stumbling block in communications as you probably know, so this is near enough.

Would you describe M. Foote as " an interesting woman with a keen brain, extremely quick, quiet and self-controlled " etc. as described?

She claims she knows you, or at least had seen you when she was staying with her employer. Is this a fact?

" A confidential post " with James. Your letter confirms this.

Was she " reserved with strangers " and " persistent "?

You affirm that she died in Kensington, N.Z. (A place, the existence of which was utterly unknown to Miss Cummins and myself).

Was she " unable to carry on her work any longer and so retired "?

Is it a fact that a woman named Sheila took her place with James and was it just lately? Is Sheila not quite so efficient as M. F. as indicated? Is Sheila " clever but not so experienced "?

The script indicates that she was working for a long time as Secretary. I note your letter states she was confidential secretary for many years.

In view of the fact that it was after the announcement of " James's " death that Astor wrote he had misinterpreted the original message concerning him, it is interesting to note a few points which would seem to indicate that this statement is correct.

1. " She wants to talk to Donald about James. . . . In April."
(Communication of March 19)

2. " not to let anything interfere as she had something important to say about James . . . you may know in April."
(March 19)

3. Her message " important in regard to future events ".
(March 19)

With reference to the suggestion in your letter that Miss Cummins may have learnt that M. F. was his confidential secretary and died two years ago, I can assure you that neither Miss Cummins nor I have seen anything of the kind. Had we done so, we should have thought immediately of this communicator. In any case it is indicated in script of March 25th that M. F. held " A confidential post " with James. Also in script of March 19 that she " worked for a long time with an important public man ".

Yours sincerely,
E. B. GIBBES."

(Personally typed)

" DEAR MISS GIBBES :

As I have written to Miss Cummins I shall be very happy to work with you on this matter and give such assistance as I can for I think you have an evidential case of the first order. Answering your questions in the order in which you ask them I should say that :

1. Marguerite Foote could be described quite accurately as a woman with a " curious force ". She was gray haired even while a young woman and white haired toward the end.

2. She did work for a long time with " James " and knew him extremely well.

3. I will verify the time of her death. It may have been more than two years.

4. She was the kind of woman that could make herself interesting to anyone who interested her and whom she considered worth while. She never could have attained the position she held without exceptional qualities.

5. She knows me well. She was in my friend's household from, I think it was 1922.

6. Yes, most confidential. I doubt if anything went over his desk that she did not know about.

7. She never talked about my friend's affairs or discussed any public business to my knowledge.

8. She died in a Wellington suburb. I believe it was Kensington. I will verify this as it is important.

9. Yes, she was unable to carry on for several years before she died.

10. Yes, it is a fact that a woman named Sheila took over and she was not so experienced but is clever.

I suggest that you try to obtain from Astor answers to the following questions which I shall be able to verify :

What illness overtook M. F.?

What was the name that she was known by in her employer's family? This would be very evidential.

What other name has Sheila? Describe colour of hair, married or single (I can verify such answers out of my own knowledge). Does Astor know of any kinsfolk of Sheila who have sent messages through him and Geraldine C. to me for others.

If M. F. comes again tell her I am very anxious to receive any message from " James " who believes in communication.

The dates and the misinterpretation of Astor's messages are most significant. . . .

I shall be glad to show you the scripts that G. C. obtained with me. They contain some extraordinary things.

Yours sincerely,

DONALD X."

Notes of sitting held on the morning of May 16th, 1945 at 25 Jubilee Place, S.W. 3.

" Astor comes."

EBG. " The last time we wrote you said that the lady with grey hair, the stranger, was around but we had no time then to talk with her. Would she like to come now? "

" Yes. I can call her. . . . Here she is. She is very interested in you and it is because she knows Donald X. She says that James is with his own people and that he was delighted too, to catch up on Walter R. whom, he said, had beaten him on the post in the journey to this world."

EBG. " Who is Walter R.? the rest of his name? "

" He said Walter and he were two sick men together and they had a private bet as to which of them would live the longest. James lost the bet. James thought he would go first. That is what this lady tells me. Walter R., that was the name."

EBG. " Has she any message she would like to send to Mr X? "

" She is delighted to hear you will give a message to Donald. Tell him she says, that James is not only happy but so darned glad to be able to think about himself. For the first time for many years he has been able to have a good think about himself."

EBG. " Does she remember if she was called by any special name in James's family? "

" She says she was known by more than one name."

(Here followed an attempt to write what looks like O or Q and Chap or Cheep.)

" I am trying to get her to write it." (Another attempt.)

EBG. " When she first came you gave her name correctly."

" She showed me a large daisy and a foot, that's how I got it originally. She may give it to Donald later."

EBG. " But he knows the nickname so it wouldn't be the same."

" She does not say anything more about that."

EBG. " I wonder if she can remember what other name Sheila had? and the colour of her hair and if married or single? "

" Wait. I will ask her. She says Sheila's name is Ship—no, it begins like Ship but it isn't a ship.

Shipton. That is the name she makes in signs to me.

Shipton. It may not be quite correct because the signs are difficult. But the special name they called her seemed to begin with the sign C."

EBG. " And was Sheila married?"

" She says Sheila was married, that she is a live wire and has a quick brain and is very attractive. Her husband, I think, is in the Army. Marguerite points to a uniform when she speaks of the husband who has some appointment."

EBG. " Astor, do you know any kinsfolk of Sheila's who have sent messages through you and the medium here, to Donald X.? "

(Some names were here given which were later verified by Mr Donald X as relevant.)

(EBG. " I wonder if she recollects what illness overtook her?"

" She does not know to which illness you refer. She was very ill at one time from anaemia, debility, but I can't hold her longer. . . ."

EBG. " Tell her I will ask for her again some time Astor. Your child is tired. . . . Goodbye."

(Note made after the sitting.)

Miss Cummins is not as strong as she used to be before the war and so the power does not, at present, last so long as formerly.

After the sitting I asked Miss Cummins if she knew who had been writing? She replied, giving the name of my relative, and then said she " saw a woman with grey, silvery hair—pale, at least her face seemed pale—and she looked puzzled or rather, she got the impression that she was puzzled, as though she didn't quite know what to make of me,"—" a little suspicious, that's all I got." Later she added " Didn't we have Marguerite back? (yes) that must have been she then."

Copy of Letter from Donald X, dated May 25 and received by Miss Gibbes June 1st 1945 :

"DEAR MISS GIBBES,

I was very much interested in your letter dated May 16th with enclosures. It only arrived two days ago. The last script is most extraordinary and convincing. I can tell you now that everything about Sheila is correct. (Mr X then verified the names above mentioned.) The success in getting the name Shipton through makes me suspect the possibility that M. F. didn't want to have her " pet name " come out. Possibly she tried to write " cheap " in protest though I see no reason for it. Perhaps later she will give it so that I won't tell you now.

The bit about Walter R. staggered me. See if you can get the nick name by which he was generally known to his intimates. The reference is most evidential. I won't give you the details yet but this was significant.

Give our best to G. [Miss Cummins]. I can quite understand that she is worn out. Her devotion to her mother during her long and trying illness was extraordinary and the shock of the ending.

If you get Marguerite again thank her for me and tell her I appreciate very much her news of James and that when there is a favourable opportunity I shall pass it on to those to whom it means a great deal.

This has developed into a most interesting and evidential research. Please keep me in touch with it and I will pass on any useful suggestions that occur to me.

Yours sincerely,

DONALD X."

Copy of letter sent to Mr X by E. B. G. :

" 25, Jubilee Place,
Chelsea, S.W. 3.
May 21st, 1945.

DEAR MR X,

We had a short sitting today for a relative. Astor at once wrote as follows :

Astor is here. I have a word to say about a previous writing. There was little power near the end of it so I was not able to obtain all the answers clearly. You asked me to find out the Christian name the family knew and used for Miss Foote. I think that was the request. I got the name Alice from her in signs. So I presume that was the name required, Alice Foote. She made the signs that shaped this name I have written.

(EBG. Thank you. I think the request was for the name by which she was known in James's family).

The name of my relative was then announced. And the writing proceeded on other lines.

I hope the above has some meaning to you. Recently we had another communication of a very evidential nature concerning a woman of the name, Alice.[1] I hope there is no confusion.

As it happens, I have not shown G. the last script. I told her bits of it but I carefully concealed the fact that there was any suggestion of a request for a name. Nor did I tell her that I had sent you the page on which the names were written. She is quite unaware that she had written any.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,

E.B.G."

Copy of letter from Mr X received by EBG. Dated May 30th 1945 :

" DEAR MISS GIBBES,

Thanks for your letter of May 21st. I do not know whether " Alice " was one of the names of Marguerite Foote or not. Probably it was not but I will enquire. Alice is not the name I was hoping to get. How would it be, when opportunity presents itself, to ask whether Marguerite Foote wished not to tell the name James called her by and which James's family used in speaking to and of her.

G.C. and Astor are so marvellous in giving names that I suspect that there is a holding back on M.F.'s part. . . .

I am waiting with interest to see what you get on the subject of Walter R. This is one of the most extraordinary bits of evidence that I have ever come across.

With all best wishes,

Yours sincerely,

DONALD X."

Notes of Sitting, Wed. eve : June 6th 1945, at 25 Jubilee Place, S.W. 3.
6.17 p.m.

(GC and EBG)

Having received Mr X's letter in which he said the name Alice was incorrect so far as he knew, anyhow it was not what he wanted, and as G. is returning to Ireland soon, I thought it advisable to endeavour to get replies to his letters as soon as possible.

" Astor is here. You wish to talk to Hilda or to others."

E.B.G. " Who is there besides Hilda? "

" There is your brother Frank and I think there is a woman in a mist and also I see two others not quite clear to me yet."

E.B.G. " Will you ask the woman in the mist to come and talk to me first? "

[1] This case was printed in Journal May 1945

" The woman is the one who was here previously. She won't write herself but I can report what she says. She is still a little distrustful of you and afraid to give away any really personal information. She says that, in connection with James, they always had to be very careful in their statements, as there was the danger of the Press getting hold of it."

E.B.G. " Tell her she need not fear us in that respect."

" She says you can't trust anyone when it comes to careless talk."

E.B.G. " There I agree. Will you say that Mr X thanks Miss Foote for the message re James and when the opportunity occurs will pass it on to those to whom it means a great deal."

" She is very pleased indeed. . . ."

E.B.G. " Can Marguerite say anything more about Walter R.? He has a nick-name by which he was known to his intimates."

" Wait. . . . She only calls him Wat. I don't know if she means that as a nick-name. She says, " Wat is right here and darned glad we are all together—the old trio." I don't know what she means by the trio."

E.B.G. " Can she explain the trio? "

" ' We are going to get together ' she says, ' and start working after James has had his rest in the holiday camp.' "

E.B.G. " I conclude that Walter R. was associated with James in his job."

" ' My dear Robson ', James used to say." That is M.F.'s answer.

E.B.G. " Astor, you gave the name Alice as connected with M.F. could she explain why she gave this name? "

" She seems to think she told you that it was a name associated with herself."

E.B.G. " It was not what Mr X expected to be given."

" She says, ' The name is my property—at least—it was my first name so why should you object to my using it? ' "

E.B.G. " Well, she is cautious and we are also. Mr X wants to be sure of her, so we are all cautious! "

" She says she may have given away too much to you two. She is a little upset now because I have told you what she said about . . ."

E.B.G. " Please tell her we won't give anything away. She hasn't given, I think, the name which James's family used when speaking of her."

" I have said that to her but she won't give it, in fact, she won't tell me anything more now."

E.B.G. " Well, tell her that I only asked her because Mr X wanted to know and your child here is going over to Ireland very soon."

" She won't, I think, trust you with any further information. I led her on to talk and now she is distressed at realising some of her remarks are written down and are in the hands of two strangers."

E.B.G. " Tell her it is all right. We often have confidential things written down and she need not be upset."

" Yes, I shall tell her, it is only a passing mood with her. I think the man who was with her told her that she was indiscreet in communicating with strangers on earth through an interpreter. It is the fault of this man. She was quite ready to talk until he spoke to her about you. He was also connected with James—worked for him in a confidential capacity."

E.B.G. " Tell her to trust us, and now what about the other two you said were near? "

" Yes, this person has given her name as Pussy. She has a connection with M.F. They spoke to each other. Pussy has the symbol of fire near her now I see. I think she died through a fire. Wait I will ask her more. She would like Millie to know that she is more alive than she ever was on earth. Pussy has been over here a number of years it seems. She has gone now. She talked so quickly I don't know if I gave her message correctly. I think I picked it up, at any rate, something she wanted to be sent. . . ."

Copy of letter sent by E.B.G. to Mr X. :

" 25, Jubilee Place, S.W. 3.
June 6th 1945

DEAR MR X,

Many thanks for yours of May 25th and 30th returning page of names belonging to the script. You say the name Shipton is correct. But to whom does it belong?

I am very interested in what you say about Walter R. In view of the fact that G. returns to Ireland in a few days, I decided that I would try to get in touch with M. Foote again so as to obtain if possible answers to your questions and thus eliminate the influence of the sitter's mind. For you will be seeing G. in Dublin shortly. Herewith is the result. From it, do I gather that Walter R.'s name is Robson or is that the nick-name? And that he was also at one time a secretary or confidential friend? You will see that M. Foote says Alice was her first name. Can you verify this—Also if she died in Kensington, N.Z.,—if there is such a place?

I shall be glad to hear if the name Pussy conveys anything to your wife? Geraldine told me her name was Millie in course of conversation a short time ago. Would you also let me know if the reference to fire is correct? Also, if she has been over a number of years? And also if she talked very quickly when on earth? This is a small point but may have been a characteristic of the alleged communicator.

In yours of May 25th you say " Everything about Sheila is correct." Am I to take it she is a " live wire " and has a quick brain and that her husband is in the Army and has some appointment?

I asked G. later on, as she said she thought M. F. had been speaking, if she had ever had a Walter R. writing through her to you? She replied in the negative so far as she could recollect. She was very anxious to hear if anything of interest had been communicated at enclosed sitting. But beyond saying that it was very interesting I thought, I told her nothing as I didn't want to spoil anything else that might come through her to you by her previous knowledge of what had been said, etc.

I shall be very intrigued to hear what you think of the enclosed. But it is unlikely that we have any more sittings before she goes, as she seems very tired and her " power " does not, alas, last as long as it used. I have assured her that you are delighted with the results of this experiment and that encouraged her. Please forgive typing errors, etc.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,

E. B. G."

Copy of letter from Mr X dated Sunday, June 17th 1945 :

" DEAR MISS GIBBES,

I have been long delayed in answering your last very interesting letter with script enclosed. This is, your letter of June 6th.

Shipton is Sheila's married name. She is James's daughter.

Walter R. is Walter Robson. For many years he was James's close friend. He died on board ship when on a voyage with James. James always called him by a nickname as did all his circle. This I will not tell you yet. The trio might well mean Robson, James and Miss Foote. They worked very closely for years. To me this is very evidential. I shall find out whether Marguerite Foote's first name was Alice. I did not know it.

" Pussy " is my wife's sister, that is correct. My wife is Millie. She, Pussy, was burned to death in her house. There are some details that might come through which would be evidential so I shall not say more at present except that she was a very vivacious personality. . . . We expect to see G.C. on the 20th and if she is up to it, I would like to have a short sitting, not over 15 minutes, as she should not get tired. But if this comes off, it might be well not to ask any questions regarding the things that have been coming to you. If anything comes, well and good. But since I know the answers to several questions, I think it is best to wait until you might take it up again. We have got hold of something very good and should be patient. Don't you think so?

Yours sincerely,

DONALD X."

From enquiries made by Mr X it was ascertained (1) that Marguerite Foote's middle name began with A, but it was not ascertained that it was Alice ; (2) that she was treated at a hospital known as Kensington Hospital, but died not at Kensington, N.Z., but in a neighbouring district ; (3) that James and Robson both knew they were ill when on the voyage mentioned, but that nothing could be ascertained about any bet between them.

Further investigations in this case were ended after June 20th, 1945, owing to the severe operation and subsequent long convalescence of Miss Cummins.

Several points of interest would seem to emerge from a study of this case. One of the most important is that facts have been given in the automatic script which were not only unknown to Miss Cummins and myself, but also unknown to Mr X. The latter is the only individual who could reasonably be regarded as being in possible telepathic communication with the automatist while writing these facts. But this hypothesis does not cover the statement apparently indicating James's death, over three weeks before it occurred.

So far as we know, we had never heard of Walter Robson. It is of interest to note that the characters of both Marguerite Foote and Sheila Shipton are accurately described. As these two women were entire strangers to us, it appears that these descriptions could only have been given by someone who knew them both.—" Astor "describing Marguerite and the latter describing Sheila.

It is of interest to note that Astor appears to have acted as reporter of Marguerite's remarks at these sittings. If this is accepted as the manner in which the communication was conducted, it may explain the discrepancy between fact and statement when Marguerite is alleged to have said she died at Kensington, whereas she was in hospital in Kensington and died at another place not far off.

Perhaps readers will agree that this case is the more interesting because of the illustration in this case, of a very human failing—inaccurate reporting.

When analysing evidence one should always compare it with the behaviour of human beings. So often the sceptical investigator appears to assume that the hypothetical communicator must be infallible. If he is fallible, that is to say, makes inaccurate statements, then the communicator is considered by sceptics to be an invention of the medium's subconscious mind. If he is infallible and makes accurate statements, it is often assumed that the subconscious mind of the medium is wholly responsible for the alleged communication. Cryptaesthesia or invention accounts for all the phenomena, the communicator is never there!

MASS EXPERIMENTS IN THE PSI COGNITION OF DRAWINGS

By D. J. WEST

Acknowledgment

The experimenter wishes to place on record his great indebtedness to Mr M. T. Hindson, who willingly undertook the laborious task of scoring all the drawings, and gave unstinted practical help throughout the experiments. Mr Hindson is already known to members of the Society for his work in judging drawings in Mr Carington's experiments.

Introduction

Those who have followed or been engaged upon experiments in psi cognition are more or less generally agreed (at least on this side of the Atlantic) that the ability to divine by telepathy or clairvoyance the order of a randomly arranged pack of cards is a rare one. It seemed, when the card-guessing campaign was first launched by Ina Jephson, that statistics might reveal a latent faculty in most people. Later work in conjunction with Besterman and Soal showed that when adequate precautions were taken no results were obtained in tests on groups of unselected percipients. Dr Soal's Herculean labours over many years, as well as many sporadic unpublished trials, confirm the impression that good card-guessers are a rarity. In earlier days the Americans made the claim that about one person in five was a successful card-guesser ; but, judging by recent comments in the Editorials of the Journal of Parapsychology, their present view is much more conservative.

In striking contrast to the needs of card-guessing, choice of percipients seems not to matter when drawings are used. Carington concluded from his great work in the paranormal cognition of drawings that a degree of psi capacity existed in the population at large which could be detected by any conscientious experimenter. The present experiments are an attempt to demonstrate this generalised psi faculty.

It was decided not to use Carington's catalogue method of allotting scores based on empirical probabilities. It does not seem beyond dispute that Carington's catalogue would be valid for a different group of percipients working some years later. The passage of time, particularly such an eventful time as the war years and their aftermath, will inevitably make some items more popular and others less so. A simpler method of assessment, one that took into account general resemblances as well as palpable hits, seemed more appropriate for the proposed demonstration. The method used was a variation of the time-honoured " matching-technique ", which has the advantages of essential simplicity and self-evident reliability.

The Case of "Marguerite Foote"

by

Geraldine Cummins

(published S.P.R. Journal May 1947.)

Note.

Since the publication of this Case in the S.P.R. Journal, more corroboration has come to hand from Mr. Donald X. On July 31st 1947 he wrote: "I have found out that Marguerite Foote did die in Kensington N.S., the Kensington Marine Hospital it was, but in Kensington. Also, her middlename was Alice which I did not know and at first could not verify. Thus Astor is two up on that innings"

SOME RECENT COMMUNICATIONS RECEIVED THROUGH MISS CUMMINS

[Miss Gibbes (E.B.G.) has sent us the following account of veridical communications received during 1945 through Miss Geraldine Cummins, whose mediumship is well known to our members.]

Fictitious names of persons and places are used throughout, but the real names have been disclosed to the Hon. Editor.

Miss Cummins spent the greater part of the war years from 1939–1944 in Ireland looking after an invalid mother and doing other rather nerve-wracking work. After the death of her mother in October 1944 she returned to London in February 1945. She did not seem very well but we had a few personal sittings for automatic writing before she returned to Ireland for the summer in June of that year.

During one of these sittings (March 19th, 1945) the following announcement was made by her control, Astor :

" I must tell you there is a stranger here, a quiet grey-haired woman with a curious force. So I have been compelled to pass on what is her message. She says she died in Kensington. She shows me a foot, that is her surname, I gather. Then a daisy, Yes, Marguerite Foote. She says she worked for a long time with an important public man—knew him well. She gives the name James. She says she wants to talk to Donald about James and that Donald hopes to come to this town in April. If so, she begs that you see him for the writing, not to let anything interfere as she has something important to say about James."

E.B.G. " I don't quite follow all this, Astor."

" You may know in April, as Donald is likely to want to see you if he has time."

E.B.G. " I grasp whom you mean now."

" That is all about her now. She doesn't seem able to give surnames. She seems to have been over here about three years. She says her message is important in regard to future events."

E.B.G. " Tell her I will remember and arrange."

The above came as a surprise. I soon realised however to whom the reference was meant. Later I looked up the name Foote in the telephone directory but could find no one in Kensington likely to fit the name given in the script.

After the sitting Miss Cummins said she recollected something about Donald X but couldn't remember what, and asked if any allusion had been made to him. I answered in the affirmative and enquired if he might be coming to London. She replied that she thought it extremely unlikely. I made no reference to the stranger.

During Miss Cummins's absence in Ireland, she had given an occasional sitting to a friend, Donald X. He had been much impressed by, and was very interested in, her psychic abilities. Through her he had received communications purporting to come from the mother of a well-known business man. Thinking there might be some interesting developments, I followed up this trail at the next sitting.

March 25th 1945, at 25 Jubilee Place, S.W. 3

" Astor is here ; Am I to call Hilda [my sister-in-law]? She and her family have been together to-day."

E.B.G. " Yes, but I should first like to ask you a few questions."

" I shall try to reply to them."

E.B.G. " You remember the quiet, grey-haired woman stranger, you described the other day? "

" Yes, she was an interesting woman with a keen brain, extremely quick but quiet, like one who had very great self-control and grip of herself."

E.B.G. " Had she spoken before? "

" No, she never communicated through my child [i.e. the medium]. In fact, it was her first visit. She knows Donald X. At least, she had seen him when she was staying with her employer whom she called James. When I asked her who James was, she replied that he was a man of affairs and did not seem to wish to give more information. I said was he in business and she replied that ' he was a very important business man ' and smiled."

" I said what kind of goods did he deal in? " She said, " Every kind."

E.B.G. " I wanted to trace her."

" She seems to have had a confidential post with James."

E.B.G. " She said she died in Kensington. Is there nothing more you can tell me in this respect? "

" She said she died in Kensington and that Donald would know her and that she did not particularly wish that you should find out who she was."

E.B.G. " Well, we will leave it at that."

" That was her habit in life—to keep secrets, and so she was always reserved with strangers."

E.B.G. " I tried to trace her name in a book here, but of course could not do so, it was too vague, as she might have died in any house in Kensington."

" She did not say she died here. I asked her. She said, ' There is more than one Kensington in the world ' and smiled."

At a subsequent sitting the following spontaneous reference to Marguerite Foote was made.

25, Jubilee Place, Chelsea, S.W. 3
Saturday Afternoon, April 14th, 1945

" Astor is here. There is near to you the quiet grey-haired lady, but if she is quiet she is persistent. She has for over a week been pressing me to speak to you about her first message. Her name is Marguerite Foote. At last I have that clearly from her. She says I gave her message wrongly to you. She had said James is coming over here in April and that she wanted to speak about James to Donald. She wanted to warn him that James was coming over. I see now that this lady does not belong to this country, but she is not French. She died in Kensington, New Zealand. She says she had retired there because she could not carry on her work any longer.

She says she knows Sheila took her place lately with James ; but it wasn't the same thing. Sheila is very clever but hasn't the experience of course. Do you want me to send this lady away? "

EBG. " I remembered, and would have asked Mr X to come here in April if he had visited this country. But now, as you say the message has been misinterpreted, we can convey it to him. We have not heard that he is coming here."

" She says she was working for a long time in a confidential position for James and that it has given her the greatest joy to see him resting after the passage of death. He is with his mother, or rather, she came to him."

EBG. " Tell her that I will send the message as she wishes."

" Yes, I have told her. She is satisfied."

After the death of James, Miss Cummins wrote a letter of sympathy to Mr X. She added something to the effect that, " A Miss Marguerite Foote had called here in March and that she was worried about something happening to a friend of his in April. She said she was from Kensington, N.Z." Miss Cummins added that she hesitated to write to Mr X as she knew nothing whatever about this lady. But she was a nice grey-haired woman. Also that she had called again yesterday.

A letter from Mr X was received by Miss Cummins on May 1st, 1945. It runs as follows :

(Extract) April 24, 1945.
DUBLIN.

" DEAR MISS CUMMINS,

Thank you so much for your kind letter of sympathy. Millie and I are both grateful for it. What you wrote about Marguerite Foote is most interesting and evidential. You may have since learned that she was James's confidential secretary for many years and died about two years ago. What is most evidential is that she told you she ~~lived~~ died in 'Kensington, N.Z.', which is not generally known ; also the fact that she had white hair, though relatively a young woman. How did that come through? If I could have excerpts from the script covering these two episodes, I should be most grateful. Obviously, Miss Foote was hoping to get word to James through you and me to take care of his health. . . . If you come over let us know. We not only want to see you but feel that some interesting things might come through. Please remember me to Miss Gibbes.

Yours faithfully,
DONALD X."

May 1st, 1945.

" DEAR MR X,

Miss Cummins has read me extracts from your letter to her concerning Marguerite Foote. As I am anxious to collect any evidence of survival, would you be so good as to let me know a few more details concerning her? I take a few questions from the three scripts copies of which I enclose. Your answers would of course be regarded by us as confidential.

Was Marguerite " quiet, grey-haired and with a curious force "?

Did she " work for a long time with James and know him well "?

In your letter you say she died about two years ago. Astor says about three years. But time is often a stumbling block in communications as you probably know, so this is near enough.

Would you describe M. Foote as " an interesting woman with a keen brain, extremely quick, quiet and self-controlled " etc. as described?

She claims she knows you, or at least had seen you when she was staying with her employer. Is this a fact?

" A confidential post " with James. Your letter confirms this.

Was she " reserved with strangers " and " persistent "?

You affirm that she died in Kensington, N.Z. (A place, the existence of which was utterly unknown to Miss Cummins and myself).

Was she " unable to carry on her work any longer and so retired "?

Is it a fact that a woman named Sheila took her place with James and was it just lately? Is Sheila not quite so efficient as M. F. as indicated? Is Sheila " clever but not so experienced "?

The script indicates that she was working for a long time as Secretary. I note your letter states she was confidential secretary for many years.

In view of the fact that it was after the announcement of " James's " death that Astor wrote he had misinterpreted the original message concerning him, it is interesting to note a few points which would seem to indicate that this statement is correct.

1. " She wants to talk to Donald about James. . . . In April."
(Communication of March 19)

2. " not to let anything interfere as she had something important to say about James . . . you may know in April."
(March 19)

3. Her message " important in regard to future events ".
(March 19)

With reference to the suggestion in your letter that Miss Cummins may have learnt that M. F. was his confidential secretary and died two years ago, I can assure you that neither Miss Cummins nor I have seen anything of the kind. Had we done so, we should have thought immediately of this communicator. In any case it is indicated in script of March 25th that M. F. held " A confidential post " with James. Also in script of March 19 that she " worked for a long time with an important public man ".

Yours sincerely,
E. B. GIBBES."

(Personally typed)

" DEAR MISS GIBBES :

As I have written to Miss Cummins I shall be very happy to work with you on this matter and give such assistance as I can for I think you have an evidential case of the first order. Answering your questions in the order in which you ask them I should say that :

1. Marguerite Foote could be described quite accurately as a woman with a " curious force ". She was gray haired even while a young woman and white haired toward the end.

2. She did work for a long time with " James " and knew him extremely well.

3. I will verify the time of her death. It may have been more than two years.

4. She was the kind of woman that could make herself interesting to anyone who interested her and whom she considered worth while. She never could have attained the position she held without exceptional qualities.

5. She knows me well. She was in my friend's household from, I think it was 1922.

6. Yes, most confidential. I doubt if anything went over his desk that she did not know about.

7. She never talked about my friend's affairs or discussed any public business to my knowledge.

8. She died in a Wellington suburb. I believe it was Kensington. I will verify this as it is important.

9. Yes, she was unable to carry on for several years before she died.

10. Yes, it is a fact that a woman named Sheila took over and she was not so experienced but is clever.

I suggest that you try to obtain from Astor answers to the following questions which I shall be able to verify :

What illness overtook M. F.?

What was the name that she was known by in her employer's family? This would be very evidential.

What other name has Sheila? Describe colour of hair, married or single (I can verify such answers out of my own knowledge). Does Astor know of any kinsfolk of Sheila who have sent messages through him and Geraldine C. to me for others.

If M. F. comes again tell her I am very anxious to receive any message from " James " who believes in communication.

The dates and the misinterpretation of Astor's messages are most significant. . . .

I shall be glad to show you the scripts that G. C. obtained with me. They contain some extraordinary things.

Yours sincerely,

DONALD X."

Notes of sitting held on the morning of May 16th, 1945 at 25 Jubilee Place, S.W. 3.

" Astor comes."

EBG. " The last time we wrote you said that the lady with grey hair, the stranger, was around but we had no time then to talk with her. Would she like to come now? "

" Yes. I can call her. . . . Here she is. She is very interested in you and it is because she knows Donald X. She says that James is with his own people and that he was delighted too, to catch up on Walter R. whom, he said, had beaten him on the post in the journey to this world."

EBG. " Who is Walter R.? the rest of his name? "

" He said Walter and he were two sick men together and they had a private bet as to which of them would live the longest. James lost the bet. James thought he would go first. That is what this lady tells me. Walter R., that was the name."

EBG. " Has she any message she would like to send to Mr X? "

" She is delighted to hear you will give a message to Donald. Tell him she says, that James is not only happy but so darned glad to be able to think about himself. For the first time for many years he has been able to have a good think about himself."

EBG. " Does she remember if she was called by any special name in James's family? "

" She says she was known by more than one name."

(Here followed an attempt to write what looks like O or Q and Chap or Cheep.)

" I am trying to get her to write it." (Another attempt.)

EBG. " When she first came you gave her name correctly."

" She showed me a large daisy and a foot, that's how I got it originally. She may give it to Donald later."

EBG. " But he knows the nickname so it wouldn't be the same."

" She does not say anything more about that."

EBG. " I wonder if she can remember what other name Sheila had? and the colour of her hair and if married or single? "

" Wait. I will ask her. She says Sheila's name is Ship—no, it begins like Ship but it isn't a ship.

Shipton. That is the name she makes in signs to me.

Shipton. It may not be quite correct because the signs are difficult. But the special name they called her seemed to begin with the sign C."

EBG. " And was Sheila married?"

" She says Sheila was married, that she is a live wire and has a quick brain and is very attractive. Her husband, I think, is in the Army. Marguerite points to a uniform when she speaks of the husband who has some appointment."

EBG. " Astor, do you know any kinsfolk of Sheila's who have sent messages through you and the medium here, to Donald X.? "

(Some names were here given which were later verified by Mr Donald X as relevant.)

(EBG. " I wonder if she recollects what illness overtook her?"

" She does not know to which illness you refer. She was very ill at one time from anaemia, debility, but I can't hold her longer. . . ."

EBG. " Tell her I will ask for her again some time Astor. Your child is tired. . . . Goodbye."

(Note made after the sitting.)

Miss Cummins is not as strong as she used to be before the war and so the power does not, at present, last so long as formerly.

After the sitting I asked Miss Cummins if she knew who had been writing? She replied, giving the name of my relative, and then said she " saw a woman with grey, silvery hair—pale, at least her face seemed pale—and she looked puzzled or rather, she got the impression that she was puzzled, as though she didn't quite know what to make of me,"—" a little suspicious, that's all I got." Later she added " Didn't we have Marguerite back? (yes) that must have been she then."

Copy of Letter from Donald X, dated May 25 and received by Miss Gibbes June 1st 1945 :

"DEAR MISS GIBBES,

I was very much interested in your letter dated May 16th with enclosures. It only arrived two days ago. The last script is most extraordinary and convincing. I can tell you now that everything about Sheila is correct. (Mr X then verified the names above mentioned.) The success in getting the name Shipton through makes me suspect the possibility that M. F. didn't want to have her " pet name " come out. Possibly she tried to write " cheap " in protest though I see no reason for it. Perhaps later she will give it so that I won't tell you now.

The bit about Walter R. staggered me. See if you can get the nick name by which he was generally known to his intimates. The reference is most evidential. I won't give you the details yet but this was significant.

Give our best to G. [Miss Cummins]. I can quite understand that she is worn out. Her devotion to her mother during her long and trying illness was extraordinary and the shock of the ending.

If you get Marguerite again thank her for me and tell her I appreciate very much her news of James and that when there is a favourable opportunity I shall pass it on to those to whom it means a great deal.

This has developed into a most interesting and evidential research. Please keep me in touch with it and I will pass on any useful suggestions that occur to me.

Yours sincerely,

DONALD X."

Copy of letter sent to Mr X by E. B. G. :

" 25, Jubilee Place,
Chelsea, S.W. 3.
May 21st, 1945.

DEAR MR X,

We had a short sitting today for a relative. Astor at once wrote as follows :

Astor is here. I have a word to say about a previous writing. There was little power near the end of it so I was not able to obtain all the answers clearly. You asked me to find out the Christian name the family knew and used for Miss Foote. I think that was the request. I got the name Alice from her in signs. So I presume that was the name required, Alice Foote. She made the signs that shaped this name I have written.

(EBG. Thank you. I think the request was for the name by which she was known in James's family).

The name of my relative was then announced. And the writing proceeded on other lines.

I hope the above has some meaning to you. Recently we had another communication of a very evidential nature concerning a woman of the name, Alice.[1] I hope there is no confusion.

As it happens, I have not shown G. the last script. I told her bits of it but I carefully concealed the fact that there was any suggestion of a request for a name. Nor did I tell her that I had sent you the page on which the names were written. She is quite unaware that she had written any.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,

E.B.G."

Copy of letter from Mr X received by EBG. Dated May 30th 1945 :

" DEAR MISS GIBBES,

Thanks for your letter of May 21st. I do not know whether " Alice " was one of the names of Marguerite Foote or not. Probably it was not but I will enquire. Alice is not the name I was hoping to get. How would it be, when opportunity presents itself, to ask whether Marguerite Foote wished not to tell the name James called her by and which James's family used in speaking to and of her.

G.C. and Astor are so marvellous in giving names that I suspect that there is a holding back on M.F.'s part. . .·.

I am waiting with interest to see what you get on the subject of Walter R. This is one of the most extraordinary bits of evidence that I have ever come across.

With all best wishes,

Yours sincerely,

DONALD X."

Notes of Sitting, Wed. eve : June 6th 1945, at 25 Jubilee Place, S.W. 3.
6.17 p.m.

(GC and EBG)

Having received Mr X's letter in which he said the name Alice was incorrect so far as he knew, anyhow it was not what he wanted, and as G. is returning to Ireland soon, I thought it advisable to endeavour to get replies to his letters as soon as possible.

" Astor is here. You wish to talk to Hilda or to others."

E.B.G. " Who is there besides Hilda? "

" There is your brother Frank and I think there is a woman in a mist and also I see two others not quite clear to me yet."

E.B.G. " Will you ask the woman in the mist to come and talk to me first? "

[1] This case was printed in Journal May 1945

" The woman is the one who was here previously. She won't write herself but I can report what she says. She is still a little distrustful of you and afraid to give away any really personal information. She says that, in connection with James, they always had to be very careful in their statements, as there was the danger of the Press getting hold of it."

E.B.G. " Tell her she need not fear us in that respect."

" She says you can't trust anyone when it comes to careless talk."

E.B.G. " There I agree. Will you say that Mr X thanks Miss Foote for the message re James and when the opportunity occurs will pass it on to those to whom it means a great deal."

" She is very pleased indeed. . . ."

E.B.G. " Can Marguerite say anything more about Walter R.? He has a nick-name by which he was known to his intimates."

" Wait. . . . She only calls him Wat. I don't know if she means that as a nick-name. She says, " Wat is right here and darned glad we are all together—the old trio." I don't know what she means by the trio."

E.B.G. " Can she explain the trio? "

" ' We are going to get together ' she says, ' and start working after James has had his rest in the holiday camp.' "

E.B.G. " I conclude that Walter R. was associated with James in his job."

" ' My dear Robson ', James used to say." That is M.F.'s answer.

E.B.G. " Astor, you gave the name Alice as connected with M.F. could she explain why she gave this name? "

" She seems to think she told you that it was a name associated with herself."

E.B.G. " It was not what Mr X expected to be given."

" She says, ' The name is my property—at least—it was my first name so why should you object to my using it? ' "

E.B.G. " Well, she is cautious and we are also. Mr X wants to be sure of her, so we are all cautious! "

" She says she may have given away too much to you two. She is a little upset now because I have told you what she said about . . ."

E.B.G. " Please tell her we won't give anything away. She hasn't given, I think, the name which James's family used when speaking of her."

" I have said that to her but she won't give it, in fact, she won't tell me anything more now."

E.B.G. " Well, tell her that I only asked her because Mr X wanted to know and your child here is going over to Ireland very soon."

" She won't, I think, trust you with any further information. I led her on to talk and now she is distressed at realising some of her remarks are written down and are in the hands of two strangers."

E.B.G. " Tell her it is all right. We often have confidential things written down and she need not be upset."

" Yes, I shall tell her, it is only a passing mood with her. I think the man who was with her told her that she was indiscreet in communicating with strangers on earth through an interpreter. It is the fault of this man. She was quite ready to talk until he spoke to her about you. He was also connected with James—worked for him in a confidential capacity."

E.B.G. " Tell her to trust us, and now what about the other two you said were near? "

" Yes, this person has given her name as Pussy. She has a connection with M.F. They spoke to each other. Pussy has the symbol of fire near her now I see. I think she died through a fire. Wait I will ask her more. She would like Millie to know that she is more alive than she ever was on earth. Pussy has been over here a number of years it seems. She has gone now. She talked so quickly I don't know if I gave her message correctly. I think I picked it up, at any rate, something she wanted to be sent. . . ."

Copy of letter sent by E.B.G. to Mr X. :

" 25, Jubilee Place, S.W. 3.
June 6th 1945

DEAR MR X,

Many thanks for yours of May 25th and 30th returning page of names belonging to the script. You say the name Shipton is correct. But to whom does it belong?

I am very interested in what you say about Walter R. In view of the fact that G. returns to Ireland in a few days, I decided that I would try to get in touch with M. Foote again so as to obtain if possible answers to your questions and thus eliminate the influence of the sitter's mind. For you will be seeing G. in Dublin shortly. Herewith is the result. From it, do I gather that Walter R.'s name is Robson or is that the nick-name? And that he was also at one time a secretary or confidential friend? You will see that M. Foote says Alice was her first name. Can you verify this—Also if she died in Kensington, N.Z.,—if there is such a place?

I shall be glad to hear if the name Pussy conveys anything to your wife? Geraldine told me her name was Millie in course of conversation a short time ago. Would you also let me know if the reference to fire is correct? Also, if she has been over a number of years? And also if she talked very quickly when on earth? This is a small point but may have been a characteristic of the alleged communicator.

In yours of May 25th you say " Everything about Sheila is correct." Am I to take it she is a " live wire " and has a quick brain and that her husband is in the Army and has some appointment?

I asked G. later on, as she said she thought M. F. had been speaking, if she had ever had a Walter R. writing through her to you? She replied in the negative so far as she could recollect. She was very anxious to hear if anything of interest had been communicated at enclosed sitting. But beyond saying that it was very interesting I thought, I told her nothing as I didn't want to spoil anything else that might come through her to you by her previous knowledge of what had been said, etc.

I shall be very intrigued to hear what you think of the enclosed. But it is unlikely that we have any more sittings before she goes, as she seems very tired and her " power " does not, alas, last as long as it used. I have assured her that you are delighted with the results of this experiment and that encouraged her. Please forgive typing errors, etc.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,

E. B. G."

Copy of letter from Mr X dated Sunday, June 17th 1945 :

" DEAR MISS GIBBES,

I have been long delayed in answering your last very interesting letter with script enclosed. This is, your letter of June 6th.

Shipton is Sheila's married name. She is James's daughter.

Walter R. is Walter Robson. For many years he was James's close friend. He died on board ship when on a voyage with James. James always called him by a nickname as did all his circle. This I will not tell you yet. The trio might well mean Robson, James and Miss Foote. They worked very closely for years. To me this is very evidential. I shall find out whether Marguerite Foote's first name was Alice. I did not know it.

" Pussy " is my wife's sister, that is correct. My wife is Millie. She, Pussy, was burned to death in her house. There are some details that might come through which would be evidential so I shall not say more at present except that she was a very vivacious personality. . . . We expect to see G.C. on the 20th and if she is up to it, I would like to have a short sitting, not over 15 minutes, as she should not get tired. But if this comes off, it might be well not to ask any questions regarding the things that have been coming to you. If anything comes, well and good. But since I know the answers to several questions, I think it is best to wait until you might take it up again. We have got hold of something very good and should be patient. Don't you think so?

Yours sincerely,

DONALD X."

From enquiries made by Mr X it was ascertained (1) that Marguerite Foote's middle name began with A, but it was not ascertained that it was Alice ; (2) that she was treated at a hospital known as Kensington Hospital, but died not at Kensington, N.Z., but in a neighbouring district ; (3) that James and Robson both knew they were ill when on the voyage mentioned, but that nothing could be ascertained about any bet between them.

Further investigations in this case were ended after June 20th, 1945, owing to the severe operation and subsequent long convalescence of Miss Cummins.

Several points of interest would seem to emerge from a study of this case. One of the most important is that facts have been given in the automatic script which were not only unknown to Miss Cummins and myself, but also unknown to Mr X. The latter is the only individual who could reasonably be regarded as being in possible telepathic communication with the automatist while writing these facts. But this hypothesis does not cover the statement apparently indicating James's death, over three weeks before it occurred.

So far as we know, we had never heard of Walter Robson. It is of interest to note that the characters of both Marguerite Foote and Sheila Shipton are accurately described. As these two women were entire strangers to us, it appears that these descriptions could only have been given by someone who knew them both.—" Astor "describing Marguerite and the latter describing Sheila.

It is of interest to note that Astor appears to have acted as reporter of Marguerite's remarks at these sittings. If this is accepted as the manner in which the communication was conducted, it may explain the discrepancy between fact and statement when Marguerite is alleged to have said she died at Kensington, whereas she was in hospital in Kensington and died at another place not far off.

Perhaps readers will agree that this case is the more interesting because of the illustration in this case, of a very human failing—inaccurate reporting.

When analysing evidence one should always compare it with the behaviour of human beings. So often the sceptical investigator appears to assume that the hypothetical communicator must be infallible. If he is fallible, that is to say, makes inaccurate statements, then the communicator is considered by sceptics to be an invention of the medium's subconscious mind. If he is infallible and makes accurate statements, it is often assumed that the subconscious mind of the medium is wholly responsible for the alleged communication. Cryptaesthesia or invention accounts for all the phenomena, the communicator is never there!

MASS EXPERIMENTS IN THE PSI COGNITION OF DRAWINGS

By D. J. WEST

Acknowledgment

The experimenter wishes to place on record his great indebtedness to Mr M. T. Hindson, who willingly undertook the laborious task of scoring all the drawings, and gave unstinted practical help throughout the experiments. Mr Hindson is already known to members of the Society for his work in judging drawings in Mr Carrington's experiments.

Introduction

Those who have followed or been engaged upon experiments in psi cognition are more or less generally agreed (at least on this side of the Atlantic) that the ability to divine by telepathy or clairvoyance the order of a randomly arranged pack of cards is a rare one. It seemed, when the card-guessing campaign was first launched by Ina Jephson, that statistics might reveal a latent faculty in most people. Later work in conjunction with Besterman and Soal showed that when adequate precautions were taken no results were obtained in tests on groups of unselected percipients. Dr Soal's Herculean labours over many years, as well as many sporadic unpublished trials, confirm the impression that good card-guessers are a rarity. In earlier days the Americans made the claim that about one person in five was a successful card-guesser ; but, judging by recent comments in the Editorials of the Journal of Parapsychology, their present view is much more conservative.

TOTAL SCORE : 50 EXPECTATION : 48.5

In striking contrast to the needs of card-guessing, choice of percipients seems not to matter when drawings are used. Carington concluded from his great work in the paranormal cognition of drawings that a degree of psi capacity existed in the population at large which could be detected by any conscientious experimenter. The present experiments are an attempt to demonstrate this generalised psi faculty.

It was decided not to use Carington's catalogue method of allotting scores based on empirical probabilities. It does not seem beyond dispute that Carington's catalogue would be valid for a different group of percipients working some years later. The passage of time, particularly such an eventful time as the war years and their aftermath, will inevitably make some items more popular and others less so. A simpler method of assessment, one that took into account general resemblances as well as palpable hits, seemed more appropriate for the proposed demonstration. The method used was a variation of the time-honoured " matching-technique ", which has the advantages of essential simplicity and self-evident reliability.

Note.

Since the publication of this case in S.P.R. Journal, more corroration has come to hand from Mrs "X".

On July 31st 1947 he wrote: "I have found out that Marguerite Foote did die in Kensington N.Y. the Kensington Marine Hospital it was but in Kensington. Also, her middle name was Alice which I did not know & at first could note verify" —

SOME RECENT COMMUNICATIONS RECEIVED THROUGH MISS CUMMINS

[Miss Gibbes (E.B.G.) has sent us the following account of veridical communications received during 1945 through Miss Geraldine Cummins, whose mediumship is well known to our members.]

Fictitious names of persons and places are used throughout, but the real names have been disclosed to the Hon. Editor.

Miss Cummins spent the greater part of the war years from 1939–1944 in Ireland looking after an invalid mother and doing other rather nerve-wracking work. After the death of her mother in October 1944 she returned to London in February 1945. She did not seem very well but we had a few personal sittings for automatic writing before she returned to Ireland for the summer in June of that year.

During one of these sittings (March 19th, 1945) the following announcement was made by her control, Astor :

" I must tell you there is a stranger here, a quiet grey-haired woman with a curious force. So I have been compelled to pass on what is her message. She says she died in Kensington. She shows me a foot, that is her surname, I gather. Then a daisy, Yes, Marguerite Foote. She says she worked for a long time with an important public man—knew him well. She gives the name James. She says she wants to talk to Donald about James and that Donald hopes to come to this town in April. If so, she begs that you see him for the writing, not to let anything interfere as she has something important to say about James."

E.B.G. " I don't quite follow all this, Astor."

" You may know in April, as Donald is likely to want to see you if he has time."

E.B.G. " I grasp whom you mean now."

" That is all about her now. She doesn't seem able to give surnames. She seems to have been over here about three years. She says her message is important in regard to future events."

E.B.G. " Tell her I will remember and arrange."

The above came as a surprise. I soon realised however to whom the reference was meant. Later I looked up the name Foote in the telephone directory but could find no one in Kensington likely to fit the name given in the script.

After the sitting Miss Cummins said she recollected something about Donald X but couldn't remember what, and asked if any allusion had been made to him. I answered in the affirmative and enquired if he might be coming to London. She replied that she thought it extremely unlikely. I made no reference to the stranger.

During Miss Cummins's absence in Ireland, she had given an occasional sitting to a friend, Donald X. He had been much impressed by, and was very interested in, her psychic abilities. Through her he had received communications purporting to come from the mother of a well-known business man. Thinking there might be some interesting developments, I followed up this trail at the next sitting.

March 25th 1945, at 25 Jubilee Place, S.W. 3

" Astor is here ; Am I to call Hilda [my sister-in-law]? She and her family have been together to-day."

E.B.G. " Yes, but I should first like to ask you a few questions."

" I shall try to reply to them."

E.B.G. " You remember the quiet, grey-haired woman stranger, you described the other day? "

" Yes, she was an interesting woman with a keen brain, extremely quick but quiet, like one who had very great self-control and grip of herself."

E.B.G. " Had she spoken before? "

" No, she never communicated through my child [i.e. the medium]. In fact, it was her first visit. She knows Donald X. At least, she had seen him when she was staying with her employer whom she called James. When I asked her who James was, she replied that he was a man of affairs and did not seem to wish to give more information. I said was he in business and she replied that ' he was a very important business man ' and smiled."

" I said what kind of goods did he deal in? " She said, " Every kind."

E.B.G. " I wanted to trace her."

" She seems to have had a confidential post with James."

E.B.G. " She said she died in Kensington. Is there nothing more you can tell me in this respect? "

" She said she died in Kensington and that Donald would know her and that she did not particularly wish that you should find out who she was."

E.B.G. " Well, we will leave it at that."

" That was her habit in life—to keep secrets, and so she was always reserved with strangers."

E.B.G. " I tried to trace her name in a book here, but of course could not do so, it was too vague, as she might have died in any house in Kensington."

" She did not say she died here. I asked her. She said, ' There is more than one Kensington in the world ' and smiled."

At a subsequent sitting the following spontaneous reference to Marguerite Foote was made.

25, Jubilee Place, Chelsea, S.W. 3
Saturday Afternoon, April 14th, 1945

" Astor is here. There is near to you the quiet grey-haired lady, but if she is quiet she is persistent. She has for over a week been pressing me to speak to you about her first message. Her name is Marguerite Foote. At last I have that clearly from her. She says I gave her message wrongly to you. She had said James is coming over here in April and that she wanted to speak about James to Donald. She wanted to warn him that James was coming over. I see now that this lady does not belong to this country, but she is not French. She died in Kensington, New Zealand. She says she had retired there because she could not carry on her work any longer.

She says she knows Sheila took her place lately with James ; but it wasn't the same thing. Sheila is very clever but hasn't the experience of course. Do you want me to send this lady away? "

EBG. " I remembered, and would have asked Mr X to come here in April if he had visited this country. But now, as you say the message has been misinterpreted, we can convey it to him. We have not heard that he is coming here."

" She says she was working for a long time in a confidential position for James and that it has given her the greatest joy to see him resting after the passage of death. He is with his mother, or rather, she came to him."

EBG. " Tell her that I will send the message as she wishes."

" Yes, I have told her. She is satisfied."

After the death of James, Miss Cummins wrote a letter of sympathy to Mr X. She added something to the effect that, " A Miss Marguerite Foote had called here in March and that she was worried about something happening to a friend of his in April. She said she was from Kensington, N.Z." Miss Cummins added that she hesitated to write to Mr X as she knew nothing whatever about this lady. But she was a nice grey-haired woman. Also that she had called again yesterday.

A letter from Mr X was received by Miss Cummins on May 1st, 1945. It runs as follows :

(Extract) April 24, 1945.
DUBLIN.

" DEAR MISS CUMMINS,

Thank you so much for your kind letter of sympathy. Millie and I are both grateful for it. What you wrote about Marguerite Foote is most interesting and evidential. You may have since learned that she was James's confidential secretary for many years and died about two years ago. What is most evidential is that she told you she ~~lived~~ died in 'Kensington, N.Z.', which is not generally known ; also the fact that she had white hair, though relatively a young woman. How did that come through? If I could have excerpts from the script covering these two episodes, I should be most grateful. Obviously, Miss Foote was hoping to get word to James through you and me to take care of his health. . . . If you come over let us know. We not only want to see you but feel that some interesting things might come through. Please remember me to Miss Gibbes.

Yours faithfully,

DONALD X."

Copy of letter sent by Miss Gibbes to Mr X :

May 1st, 1945.

" DEAR MR X,

Miss Cummins has read me extracts from your letter to her concerning Marguerite Foote. As I am anxious to collect any evidence of survival, would you be so good as to let me know a few more details concerning her? I take a few questions from the three scripts copies of which I enclose. Your answers would of course be regarded by us as confidential.

Was Marguerite " quiet, grey-haired and with a curious force "?

Did she " work for a long time with James and know him well "?

In your letter you say she died about two years ago. Astor says about three years. But time is often a stumbling block in communications as you probably know, so this is near enough.

Would you describe M. Foote as " an interesting woman with a keen brain, extremely quick, quiet and self-controlled " etc. as described?

She claims she knows you, or at least had seen you when she was staying with her employer. Is this a fact?

" A confidential post " with James. Your letter confirms this.

Was she " reserved with strangers " and " persistent "?

You affirm that she died in Kensington, N.Z. (A place, the existence of which was utterly unknown to Miss Cummins and myself).

Was she " unable to carry on her work any longer and so retired "?

Is it a fact that a woman named Sheila took her place with James and was it just lately? Is Sheila not quite so efficient as M. F. as indicated? Is Sheila " clever but not so experienced "?

The script indicates that she was working for a long time as Secretary. I note your letter states she was confidential secretary for many years.

In view of the fact that it was after the announcement of " James's " death that Astor wrote he had misinterpreted the original message concerning him, it is interesting to note a few points which would seem to indicate that this statement is correct.

1. " She wants to talk to Donald about James. . . . In April."
(Communication of March 19)

2. " not to let anything interfere as she had something important to say about James . . . you may know in April."
(March 19)

3. Her message " important in regard to future events ".
(March 19)

With reference to the suggestion in your letter that Miss Cummins may have learnt that M. F. was his confidential secretary and died two years ago, I can assure you that neither Miss Cummins nor I have seen anything of the kind. Had we done so, we should have thought immediately of this communicator. In any case it is indicated in script of March 25th that M. F. held " A confidential post " with James. Also in script of March 19 that she " worked for a long time with an important public man ".

Yours sincerely,

E. B. GIBBES."

(Personally typed)

" DEAR MISS GIBBES :

As I have written to Miss Cummins I shall be very happy to work with you on this matter and give such assistance as I can for I think you have an evidential case of the first order. Answering your questions in the order in which you ask them I should say that :

1. Marguerite Foote could be described quite accurately as a woman with a " curious force ". She was gray haired even while a young woman and white haired toward the end.

2. She did work for a long time with " James " and knew him extremely well.

3. I will verify the time of her death. It may have been more than two years.

4. She was the kind of woman that could make herself interesting to anyone who interested her and whom she considered worth while. She never could have attained the position she held without exceptional qualities.

5. She knows me well. She was in my friend's household from, I think it was 1922.

6. Yes, most confidential. I doubt if anything went over his desk that she did not know about.

7. She never talked about my friend's affairs or discussed any public business to my knowledge.

8. She died in a Wellington suburb. I believe it was Kensington. I will verify this as it is important.

9. Yes, she was unable to carry on for several years before she died.

10. Yes, it is a fact that a woman named Sheila took over and she was not so experienced but is clever.

I suggest that you try to obtain from Astor answers to the following questions which I shall be able to verify :

What illness overtook M. F.?

What was the name that she was known by in her employer's family? This would be very evidential.

What other name has Sheila? Describe colour of hair, married or single (I can verify such answers out of my own knowledge). Does Astor know of any kinsfolk of Sheila who have sent messages through him and Geraldine C. to me for others.

If M. F. comes again tell her I am very anxious to receive any message from " James " who believes in communication.

The dates and the misinterpretation of Astor's messages are most significant. . . .

I shall be glad to show you the scripts that G. C. obtained with me. They contain some extraordinary things.

Yours sincerely,

DONALD X."

Notes of sitting held on the morning of May 16th, 1945 at 25 Jubilee Place, S.W. 3.

" Astor comes."

EBG. " The last time we wrote you said that the lady with grey hair, the stranger, was around but we had no time then to talk with her. Would she like to come now? "

" Yes. I can call her. . . . Here she is. She is very interested in you and it is because she knows Donald X. She says that James is with his own people and that he was delighted too, to catch up on Walter R. whom, he said, had beaten him on the post in the journey to this world."

EBG. " Who is Walter R.? the rest of his name? "

" He said Walter and he were two sick men together and they had a private bet as to which of them would live the longest. James lost the bet. James thought he would go first. That is what this lady tells me. Walter R., that was the name."

EBG. " Has she any message she would like to send to Mr X? "

" She is delighted to hear you will give a message to Donald. Tell him she says, that James is not only happy but so darned glad to be able to think about himself. For the first time for many years he has been able to have a good think about himself."

EBG. " Does she remember if she was called by any special name in James's family? "

" She says she was known by more than one name."

(Here followed an attempt to write what looks like O or Q and Chap or Cheep.)

" I am trying to get her to write it." (Another attempt.)

EBG. " When she first came you gave her name correctly."

" She showed me a large daisy and a foot, that's how I got it originally. She may give it to Donald later."

EBG. " But he knows the nickname so it wouldn't be the same."

" She does not say anything more about that."

EBG. " I wonder if she can remember what other name Sheila had? and the colour of her hair and if married or single? "

" Wait. I will ask her. She says Sheila's name is Ship—no, it begins like Ship but it isn't a ship.

Shipton. That is the name she makes in signs to me.

Shipton. It may not be quite correct because the signs are difficult. But the special name they called her seemed to begin with the sign C."

EBG. " And was Sheila married?"

" She says Sheila was married, that she is a live wire and has a quick brain and is very attractive. Her husband, I think, is in the Army. Marguerite points to a uniform when she speaks of the husband who has some appointment."

EBG. " Astor, do you know any kinsfolk of Sheila's who have sent messages through you and the medium here, to Donald X.? "

(Some names were here given which were later verified by Mr Donald X as relevant.)

(EBG. " I wonder if she recollects what illness overtook her?"

" She does not know to which illness you refer. She was very ill at one time from anaemia, debility, but I can't hold her longer. . . ."

EBG. " Tell her I will ask for her again some time Astor. Your child is tired. . . . Goodbye."

(Note made after the sitting.)

Miss Cummins is not as strong as she used to be before the war and so the power does not, at present, last so long as formerly.

After the sitting I asked Miss Cummins if she knew who had been writing? She replied, giving the name of my relative, and then said she " saw a woman with grey, silvery hair—pale, at least her face seemed pale—and she looked puzzled or rather, she got the impression that she was puzzled, as though she didn't quite know what to make of me,"—" a little suspicious, that's all I got." Later she added " Didn't we have Marguerite back? (yes) that must have been she then."

Copy of Letter from Donald X, dated May 25 and received by Miss Gibbes June 1st 1945 :

"DEAR MISS GIBBES,

I was very much interested in your letter dated May 16th with enclosures. It only arrived two days ago. The last script is most extraordinary and convincing. I can tell you now that everything about Sheila is correct. (Mr X then verified the names above mentioned.) The success in getting the name Shipton through makes me suspect the possibility that M. F. didn't want to have her " pet name " come out. Possibly she tried to write " cheap " in protest though I see no reason for it. Perhaps later she will give it so that I won't tell you now.

The bit about Walter R. staggered me. See if you can get the nick name by which he was generally known to his intimates. The reference is most evidential. I won't give you the details yet but this was significant.

Give our best to G. [Miss Cummins]. I can quite understand that she is worn out. Her devotion to her mother during her long and trying illness was extraordinary and the shock of the ending.

If you get Marguerite again thank her for me and tell her I appreciate very much her news of James and that when there is a favourable opportunity I shall pass it on to those to whom it means a great deal.

This has developed into a most interesting and evidential research. Please keep me in touch with it and I will pass on any useful suggestions that occur to me.

Yours sincerely,

DONALD X."

Copy of letter sent to Mr X by E. B. G. :

" 25, Jubilee Place,
Chelsea, S.W. 3.
May 21st, 1945.

DEAR MR X,

We had a short sitting today for a relative. Astor at once wrote as follows :

Astor is here. I have a word to say about a previous writing. There was little power near the end of it so I was not able to obtain all the answers clearly. You asked me to find out the Christian name the family knew and used for Miss Foote. I think that was the request. I got the name Alice from her in signs. So I presume that was the name required, Alice Foote. She made the signs that shaped this name I have written.

(EBG. Thank you. I think the request was for the name by which she was known in James's family).

The name of my relative was then announced. And the writing proceeded on other lines.

I hope the above has some meaning to you. Recently we had another communication of a very evidential nature concerning a woman of the name, Alice.[1] I hope there is no confusion.

As it happens, I have not shown G. the last script. I told her bits of it but I carefully concealed the fact that there was any suggestion of a request for a name. Nor did I tell her that I had sent you the page on which the names were written. She is quite unaware that she had written any.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,

E.B.G."

Copy of letter from Mr X received by EBG. Dated May 30th 1945 :

" DEAR MISS GIBBES,

Thanks for your letter of May 21st. I do not know whether " Alice " was one of the names of Marguerite Foote or not. Probably it was not but I will enquire. Alice is not the name I was hoping to get. How would it be, when opportunity presents itself, to ask whether Marguerite Foote wished not to tell the name James called her by and which James's family used in speaking to and of her.

G.C. and Astor are so marvellous in giving names that I suspect that there is a holding back on M.F.'s part. . . .

I am waiting with interest to see what you get on the subject of Walter R. This is one of the most extraordinary bits of evidence that I have ever come across.

With all best wishes,

Yours sincerely,

DONALD X."

(GC and EBG)

Having received Mr X's letter in which he said the name Alice was incorrect so far as he knew, anyhow it was not what he wanted, and as G. is returning to Ireland soon, I thought it advisable to endeavour to get replies to his letters as soon as possible.

" Astor is here. You wish to talk to Hilda or to others."

E.B.G. " Who is there besides Hilda? "

" There is your brother Frank and I think there is a woman in a mist and also I see two others not quite clear to me yet."

E.B.G. " Will you ask the woman in the mist to come and talk to me first? "

[1] This case was printed in Journal May 1945

" The woman is the one who was here previously. She won't write herself but I can report what she says. She is still a little distrustful of you and afraid to give away any really personal information. She says that, in connection with James, they always had to be very careful in their statements, as there was the danger of the Press getting hold of it."

E.B.G. " Tell her she need not fear us in that respect."

" She says you can't trust anyone when it comes to careless talk."

E.B.G. " There I agree. Will you say that Mr X thanks Miss Foote for the message re James and when the opportunity occurs will pass it on to those to whom it means a great deal."

" She is very pleased indeed. . . ."

E.B.G. " Can Marguerite say anything more about Walter R.? He has a nick-name by which he was known to his intimates."

" Wait. . . . She only calls him Wat. I don't know if she means that as a nick-name. She says, " Wat is right here and darned glad we are all together—the old trio." I don't know what she means by the trio."

E.B.G. " Can she explain the trio? "

" ' We are going to get together ' she says, ' and start working after James has had his rest in the holiday camp.' "

E.B.G. " I conclude that Walter R. was associated with James in his job."

" ' My dear Robson ', James used to say." That is M.F.'s answer.

E.B.G. " Astor, you gave the name Alice as connected with M.F. could she explain why she gave this name? "

" She seems to think she told you that it was a name associated with herself."

E.B.G. " It was not what Mr X expected to be given."

" She says, ' The name is my property—at least—it was my first name so why should you object to my using it? ' "

E.B.G. " Well, she is cautious and we are also. Mr X wants to be sure of her, so we are all cautious! "

" She says she may have given away too much to you two. She is a little upset now because I have told you what she said about . . ."

E.B.G. " Please tell her we won't give anything away. She hasn't given, I think, the name which James's family used when speaking of her."

" I have said that to her but she won't give it, in fact, she won't tell me anything more now."

E.B.G. " Well, tell her that I only asked her because Mr X wanted to know and your child here is going over to Ireland very soon."

" She won't, I think, trust you with any further information. I led her on to talk and now she is distressed at realising some of her remarks are written down and are in the hands of two strangers."

E.B.G. " Tell her it is all right. We often have confidential things written down and she need not be upset."

" Yes, I shall tell her, it is only a passing mood with her. I think the man who was with her told her that she was indiscreet in communicating with strangers on earth through an interpreter. It is the fault of this man. She was quite ready to talk until he spoke to her about you. He was also connected with James—worked for him in a confidential capacity."

E.B.G. " Tell her to trust us, and now what about the other two you said were near? "

" Yes, this person has given her name as Pussy. She has a connection with M.F. They spoke to each other. Pussy has the symbol of fire near her now I see. I think she died through a fire. Wait I will ask her more. She would like Millie to know that she is more alive than she ever was on earth. Pussy has been over here a number of years it seems. She has gone now. She talked so quickly I don't know if I gave her message correctly. I think I picked it up, at any rate, something she wanted to be sent. . . ."

June 6th 1945

DEAR MR X,

Many thanks for yours of May 25th and 30th returning page of names belonging to the script. You say the name Shipton is correct. But to whom does it belong?

I am very interested in what you say about Walter R. In view of the fact that G. returns to Ireland in a few days, I decided that I would try to get in touch with M. Foote again so as to obtain if possible answers to your questions and thus eliminate the influence of the sitter's mind. For you will be seeing G. in Dublin shortly. Herewith is the result. From it, do I gather that Walter R.'s name is Robson or is that the nick-name? And that he was also at one time a secretary or confidential friend? You will see that M. Foote says Alice was her first name. Can you verify this—Also if she died in Kensington, N.Z.,—if there is such a place?

I shall be glad to hear if the name Pussy conveys anything to your wife? Geraldine told me her name was Millie in course of conversation a short time ago. Would you also let me know if the reference to fire is correct? Also, if she has been over a number of years? And also if she talked very quickly when on earth? This is a small point but may have been a characteristic of the alleged communicator.

In yours of May 25th you say " Everything about Sheila is correct." Am I to take it she is a " live wire " and has a quick brain and that her husband is in the Army and has some appointment?

I asked G. later on, as she said she thought M. F. had been speaking, if she had ever had a Walter R. writing through her to you? She replied in the negative so far as she could recollect. She was very anxious to hear if anything of interest had been communicated at enclosed sitting. But beyond saying that it was very interesting I thought, I told her nothing as I didn't want to spoil anything else that might come through her to you by her previous knowledge of what had been said, etc.

I shall be very intrigued to hear what you think of the enclosed. But it is unlikely that we have any more sittings before she goes, as she seems very tired and her " power " does not, alas, last as long as it used. I have assured her that you are delighted with the results of this experiment and that encouraged her. Please forgive typing errors, etc.

With kind regards,
Yours sincerely,

E. B. G."

" DEAR MISS GIBBES,

I have been long delayed in answering your last very interesting letter with script enclosed. This is, your letter of June 6th.

Shipton is Sheila's married name. She is James's daughter.

Walter R. is Walter Robson. For many years he was James's close friend. He died on board ship when on a voyage with James. James always called him by a nickname as did all his circle. This I will not tell you yet. The trio might well mean Robson, James and Miss Foote. They worked very closely for years. To me this is very evidential. I shall find out whether Marguerite Foote's first name was Alice. I did not know it.

" Pussy " is my wife's sister, that is correct. My wife is Millie. She, Pussy, was burned to death in her house. There are some details that might come through which would be evidential so I shall not say more at present except that she was a very vivacious personality. . . . We expect to see G.C. on the 20th and if she is up to it, I would like to have a short sitting, not over 15 minutes, as she should not get tired. But if this comes off, it might be well not to ask any questions regarding the things that have been coming to you. If anything comes, well and good. But since I know the answers to several questions, I think it is best to wait until you might take it up again. We have got hold of something very good and should be patient. Don't you think so?

Yours sincerely,

DONALD X."

From enquiries made by Mr X it was ascertained (1) that Marguerite Foote's middle name began with A, but it was not ascertained that it was Alice ; (2) that she was treated at a hospital known as Kensington Hospital, but died not at Kensington, N.Z., but in a neighbouring district ; (3) that James and Robson both knew they were ill when on the voyage mentioned, but that nothing could be ascertained about any bet between them.

Further investigations in this case were ended after June 20th, 1945, owing to the severe operation and subsequent long convalescence of Miss Cummins.

Several points of interest would seem to emerge from a study of this case. One of the most important is that facts have been given in the automatic script which were not only unknown to Miss Cummins and myself, but also unknown to Mr X. The latter is the only individual who could reasonably be regarded as being in possible telepathic communication with the automatist while writing these facts. But this hypothesis does not cover the statement apparently indicating James's death, over three weeks before it occurred.

So far as we know, we had never heard of Walter Robson. It is of interest to note that the characters of both Marguerite Foote and Sheila Shipton are accurately described. As these two women were entire strangers to us, it appears that these descriptions could only have been given by someone who knew them both.—" Astor "describing Marguerite and the latter describing Sheila.

It is of interest to note that Astor appears to have acted as reporter of Marguerite's remarks at these sittings. If this is accepted as the manner in which the communication was conducted, it may explain the discrepancy between fact and statement when Marguerite is alleged to have said she died at Kensington, whereas she was in hospital in Kensington and died at another place not far off.

Perhaps readers will agree that this case is the more interesting because of the illustration in this case, of a very human failing—inaccurate reporting.

When analysing evidence one should always compare it with the behaviour of human beings. So often the sceptical investigator appears to assume that the hypothetical communicator must be infallible. If he is fallible, that is to say, makes inaccurate statements, then the communicator is considered by sceptics to be an invention of the medium's subconscious mind. If he is infallible and makes accurate statements, it is often assumed that the subconscious mind of the medium is wholly responsible for the alleged communication. Cryptaesthesia or invention accounts for all the phenomena, the communicator is never there!

MASS EXPERIMENTS IN THE PSI COGNITION OF DRAWINGS

By D. J. WEST

Acknowledgment

The experimenter wishes to place on record his great indebtedness to Mr M. T. Hindson, who willingly undertook the laborious task of scoring all the drawings, and gave unstinted practical help throughout the experiments. Mr Hindson is already known to members of the Society for his work in judging drawings in Mr Carington's experiments.

Introduction

Those who have followed or been engaged upon experiments in psi cognition are more or less generally agreed (at least on this side of the Atlantic) that the ability to divine by telepathy or clairvoyance the order of a randomly arranged pack of cards is a rare one. It seemed, when the card-guessing campaign was first launched by Ina Jephson, that statistics might reveal a latent faculty in most people. Later work in conjunction with Besterman and Soal showed that when adequate precautions were taken no results were obtained in tests on groups of unselected percipients. Dr Soal's Herculean labours over many years, as well as many sporadic unpublished trials, confirm the impression that good card-guessers are a rarity. In earlier days the Americans made the claim that about one person in five was a successful card-guesser ; but, judging by recent comments in the Editorials of the Journal of Parapsychology, their present view is much more conservative.

In striking contrast to the needs of card-guessing, choice of percipients seems not to matter when drawings are used. Carington concluded from his great work in the paranormal cognition of drawings that a degree of psi capacity existed in the population at large which could be detected by any conscientious experimenter. The present experiments are an attempt to demonstrate this generalised psi faculty.

It was decided not to use Carington's catalogue method of allotting scores based on empirical probabilities. It does not seem beyond dispute that Carington's catalogue would be valid for a different group of percipients working some years later. The passage of time, particularly such an eventful time as the war years and their aftermath, will inevitably make some items more popular and others less so. A simpler method of assessment, one that took into account general resemblances as well as palpable hits, seemed more appropriate for the proposed demonstration. The method used was a variation of the time-honoured " matching-technique ", which has the advantages of essential simplicity and self-evident reliability.

Private and Confidential.

The Case of Marguerite le Hand
finally as sent to and deposited at S.P.R.

A disguised and abbreviated form of this case appeared in S.P.R. Journal for May 1947.

Miss Cummins spent the greater part of the war years from 1939 - 1944 looking after an invalid mother and doing other rather nerve-wracking work. After the death of her mother in October 1944 she returned to London in February 1945. She did not seem very well but we had a few personal sittings for automatic writing before she returned to Ireland for the summer in June of that year.

During one of these sittings (March 19th. 1945) the following announcement was made by her control, Astor:

"I must tell you there is a stranger here, a quiet grey-haired woman with a curious force. So I have been compelled to pass on what is her message. She says she died in Chelsea. She shows me a hand, that is her surname, I gather. Then a daisy, Yes, Marguerite Hand. She says she worked for a long time with an important public man - knew him well. She gives the name Frank. She says she wants to talk to David about Frank and that David hopes to come to this town in April. If so, she begs that you see him for the writing, not to let anything interfere as she has something important to say about Frank."

E.B.G. "I don't quite follow all this, Astor"

"You may know in April, as David is likely to want to see you if he has time."

E.B.G. "I grasp who you mean now."

"That is all about her now. She doesn't seem able to give surnames. She seems to have been over here about three years. She says her message is important in regard to future peace."

"Tell her I will remember and arrange."

The above came as a surprise. I soon realized however to whom the reference was meant. Later I looked up the name le Hand in the Telephone Directory but could find no one in Chelsea likely to fit the name given in the script.

After the sitting Geraldine said she recollected something about David Gray but couldn't remember what, and asked if any allusion had been made to him. I replied in the affirmative and enquired if he might be coming to London. She replied that she thought it extremely unlikely, I made no reference to the stranger.

During Miss Cummins's absence in Ireland, she had given an occasional sitting in Dublin to His Excellency David Gray, American Minister to Eire. He had been much impressed by, and was very interested in her psychic abilities. Through her he had received communications purporting to come from President Roosevelt's mother. These had been sent by Mr. Gray to the President who stated that they were very characteristic and seemed to accept as fact that they came from his mother. Thinking there might be some interesting developements, I followed up this trail at the next sitting.

March 25th. 1945, at 25 J.P. S.W.3.

Astor is here; Am I to call Hilda ? She and her family have been together to-day.

E.B.G. "Yes, but I should first like to ask you a few questions."

"I shall try to reply to them"

E.B.G. "You remember the quiet, grey-haired woman stranger, you described the other day ?"

"Yes, she was an interesting woman with a keen brain, extremely quick but quiet, like one who had very great self-control and grip of herself."

E.B.G. "Had she spoken before ?"

"No, she never communicated through my child. In fact, it was her first visit. She knows David Gray. At least, she had seen him when she was staying with her employer whom she called Frank. When I asked her who Frank was, she replied that he was a man of affairs and did not seem to wish to give more information. I said was he in business and she replied that 'he was the most important business man in his country' and smiled."

"I said what kind of goods did he deal in ?" She said, "Every kind."

E.B.G. "I wanted to trace her."

"She seems to have had a confidential post with Frank."

E.B.G. "She said she died in Chelsea. Is there nothing more you can tell me in this respect ?"

"She said she died in Chelsea and that David would know her and that she did not particularly wish that you should find out who she was."

E.B.G. "Well, we will leave it at that."

"That was her habit in life - to keep secrets, and so she was always reserved with stranger."

E.B.G. "I tried to trace her name in a book here, but of course could not do so, it was too vague, as she might have died in any house in Chelsea."

"She did not say she died here. I asked her. She said 'There is more than one Chelsea in the world' and smiled."

E.B.G. "Oh, I think I know what she means now. We will leave it then."

"I am sorry I could not get more."

As I had concluded that she had some connection with The President of U.S.A., I assumed there must be another Chelsea in America.

At a subsequent sitting the following spontaneous reference to Marguerite le Hand was made.

25, Jubilee Place, Chelsea, S.W.3.

Saturday afternoon, April 14th, 1945.

Astor is here. There is near to you the quiet grey-haired lady, but if she is quiet she is persistent. She has for over a week been pressing me to speak to you about her first message. Her name is Marguerite Le Hand. At last I have that clearly from her. She says I gave her message wrongly to you. She had said Frank is coming over here in April and that she wanted to speak about Frank to David Gray. She wanted to warn him that Frank was coming over. I see now that this lady does not belong to this country, but she is not French. She died in Chelsea, Mass. She says she had retired there because she could not carry on her work any longer. She says she knows Ann took her place lately with Frank; but it wasn't the same thing. Ann is very clever but hasn't the experience of course. Do you want me to send this lady away ?

(EBG. I remembered, and would have asked Mr. Gray to come here in April if he had visited this country. But now, as you say the message has been misinterpreted, we can convey it to him). We have not heard that he is coming here.

She says she was working for a long time in a confidential position for Frank and that it has given her the greatest joy to see him resting after the passage of death. He is with his mother, or rather, she came to him.

(EBG. Tell her that I will send the message as she wishes.)

Yes, I have told her. She is satisfied.

Note.

President Roosevelt died on A pril 12th, 1945.

Later Geraldine wrote a letter of sympathy to Mr. Gray. She added something to the effect that "A Miss Marguerite Le Hand had called here in March and that she was worried about something happening to a friend of his in April. She said she was from Chelsea, Mass." Geraldine added that she hesitated to write to Mr. Gray as she knew nothing whatever about this lady. But she was a nice grey-haired woman. Also that she had called again yesterday.

(Owing to Mr. Gray's position in Eire the information psychically received had to be conveyed as above.)

A letter from Mr. Gray was received by Geraldine on May 1st, 1945.

It runs as follows :

(Extract) April 24, 1945.

The Foreign Service of the United States of America, Dublin.

"Dear Miss Cummins, Thank you so much for your kind letter of sympathy. Maud and I are both grateful for it. What you wrote about Marguerite le Hand is most interesting and evidential. You may have since learned, if you have happened to read extracts from the President's Will, that she was his confidential secretary for many years and died about two years ago. What is most evidential is that she told you she ~~lived~~ died in "Chelsea, Mass.," which is not generally known; also the fact that she had white hair, though relatively a young woman. How did that come through ? If I could have excerpts from the script covering these two episodes, I should be most grateful. Obviously, Miss Le Hand was hoping to get word to the President through you and me to take care of his health. As there is nothing that could have been done about it it is probably best that he was not disturbed by warnings .... If you come over let us know. We not only want to see you but feel that some interesting things might come through. Please remember me to Miss Gibbes.

Yours faithfully,

David Gray."

Copy of letter sent by E.B.G. to Mr. Gray.

May 1st, 1945.

Dear Mr. Gray,

Miss Cummins has read me extracts from your letter to her concerning Marguerite Le Hand. As I am anxious to collect any evidence of survival, would you be so good as to let me know a few more details concerning her ? I take a few questions from the three scripts copies of which I enclose. Your answers would of course be regarded by us as confidential.

Was Marguerite "quiet, grey-haired and with a curious force" ?

Did she "work for a long time with Frank and know him well" ?

In your letter you say she died about two years ago. Astor says about three years. But time is often a stumbling block in communications as you probably know, so this is near enough.

Would you describe M.H. as "an interesting woman with a keen brain, extremely quick, quiet and self-controlled" etc. as described ?

She claims she knows you, or at least had seen you when she was staying with her employer. Is this a fact ?

"A confidential post" with Frank. Your letter confirms this.

Was she "reserved" with strangers" and "persistent" ?

You affirm that she died in Chelsea, Mass. (A place, the existence of which was utterly unknown to Miss Cummins and myself)

Was she "unable to carry on her work any longer and so retired ?"

Is it a fact that a woman named "Ann" took her place with Frank and was it just lately ? Is Ann not quite so efficient as M.F. as indicated ? Is Ann "clever but not so experienced" ?

The script indicates that she was working for a long time as Secretary. I note your letter states she was confidential secretary for many years.

In view of the fact that it was after the announcement of "Frank's" death that Astor wrote he had misinterpreted the original message concerning him, it is interesting to note a few points which would seem to indicate that this statement is correct.

1) "She wants to talk to David about Frank.... In April" (March 19)

2) "not to let anything interfere as she had something important to say about Frank... you may know in April." (March 19)

3) Her message "important in regard to future peace" . (March 19)

With reference to the suggestion in your letter that Miss Cummins may have seen extracts from Frank's will in newspapers and so learnt that M.F. was his confidential secretary and died two years ago, I can assure you that neither Miss Cummins nor I have seen anything of the kind in the papers. Had we done so, we should have thought immediately of this communicator. In any case it is indicated in script of March 25th that M.H. held "A confidential post" with Frank. Also in script of March 19 that she "worked for a long time with an important public man."

I am so sorry to give you so much trouble. Perhaps at your leisure you may find time to reply to this.

Yours sincerely,

E.B.G.

I expect you will understand why I refer to the person indicated as "Frank."

Legation of the United States of America.

(Personally typed)

Dear Miss Gibbes: As I have written to Miss Cummins I shall be very happy to work with you on this matter and give such assistance as I can for I think you have an evidential case of the first order. Answering your questions in the order in which you ask them I should say that :

1. Marguerite Le Hand could be described quite accurately as a woman with a "curious force". She was gray haired even while a young woman and white haired toward the end.

2. She did work for a long time with "Frank" and knew him extremely well.

3. I will verify the time of her death. It may have been more than two years.

4. She was the kind of woman that could make herself interesting to anyone who interested her and whom she considered worth while. She never could have attained the position she held without exceptional qualities.

5. She knows me well. She was in the Roosevelt household from the time of the President's attack of infantile paralysis back in 1922, I think it was 1922.

6. Yes, most confidential. I doubt if anything went over his desk that she did not know about.

7. She never talked about the President's affairs or discussed any public business to my knowledge.

8. She died in a Boston suburb. I believe it was Chelsea. I will verify this as it is important.

9. Yes, she was unable to carry on for several years before she died.

10. Yes, it is a fact that a woman named Ann took over and she was not so experienced but is clever.

I suggest that you try to obtain from Astor answers to the following questions which I shall be able to verify.

"What illness overtook M.H.?"
What was the name that she was known by in the R. family ? This would be very evidential.
What other name has Ann ? Describe colour of hair, married or single (I can verify such answers out of my own knowledge).
Does Astor know of any kinsfolk of Ann who have sent messages through him and Geraldine C. to me for others.

If M.H. comes again tell her I am very anxious to receive any message from "Frank" who believes in communication. I should like Frank to tell me what he thinks I ought to do, that is, to stay or resign ? What would be most useful ? Especially if there is anything he thinks I could do for him about the peace.

The dates and the misinterpretation of Astor's messages are most significant .....

I shall be glad to show you the scripts that G.C. obtained with me. They contain some extraordinary things.

Yours sincerely,

David Gray.

(Wednesday a.m. after a few lines from a relative.)

May 16th, 1945. at 25 Jubilee Place, S.W.3.

Astor comes. (EBG. The last time we wrote you said that the lady with grey hair, the stranger, was around but we had no time then to talk with her. Would she like to come now?)

Yes. I can call her ..... Here she is. She is very interested in you and it is because she knows David Gray. She says that Frank is with his own people and that he was delighted too, to catch up on Edwin W. whom, he said, had beaten him on the post in the journey to this world.

(EBG. Who is Edwin W? the rest of his name?)

He said Edwin and he were two sick men together and they had a private bet as to which of them would live the longest. Frank lost the bet. Frank thought he would go first. That is what this lady tells me. Edwin W. that was the name.

(EBG. Has she any message she would like to send to Mr. Gray?)

She is delighted to hear you will give a message to David. Tell him she says, that the President is not only happy but so darned glad to be able to think about himself. For the first time for many years he has been able to have a good think about himself.

(EBG. When she first came she said she wanted to give a message about Peace but that is too late now ...)

What she wanted to say was that the Peace was going to get a serious set-back through Frank being called over here. She wished then to warn you all because this peace-making is going to cause a good deal of bitterness. She says that Frank made Winston and Stalin get on together. The real loss to peace-making was losing the intermediary - the link between Churchill and Stalin. So there is going to be some trouble to get over that and in many ways it won't be got over. So Frank is sad about that. But he is wonderfully happy in the joy of limbs that move freely. He says he took a year when on earth to waggle his toes. But over here he is the young man again, free to walk, run, swim, turn cart-wheels if he wants to.

(EBG. Does she remember if she was called by any special name in the President's family?)

She says she was known by more than one name.

(Here followed an attempt to write what looks like O or Q and Chap or Cheep.)

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

I am trying to get her to write it. (Another attempt.)

(EBG. When she first came you gave her name correctly.)

She showed me a large daisy and a hand, that's how I got it originally. She may give it to David later.

(EBG. But he knows the nickname so it wouldn't be the same.)

She does not say anything more about that.

(EBG. I wonder if she can remember what other name Ann had? and the colour of her hair and if married or single?)

Wait. I will ask her. She says Ann's name is Boat - no, it begins like Boat but it isn't a boat.

Boittiger. That is the name she makes in signs to me.

Boettiger. It may not be quite correct because the signs are difficult. But the special name they called her seemed to begin with the sign C.

(EBG. And was Ann married?)

She says Ann was married, that she is a live wire and has a quick brain and is very attractive. Her husband, I think, is in the Army. Marguerite points to a uniform when she speaks of the husband who has some appointment.

(EBG. Astor, do you know any kinsfolk of Ann's who have sent messages through you and your child here, to David Gray?)

Ann is in some ways like Elliot, Marguerite says. Yes, a man named Elliot wrote or sent a message to David. She, M. says Elliot was a very near relation of Ann's - an ancestor. Ann is a favourite of Elliott. That is what Marguerite learnt when she talked with him over here. Elliott died before Ann arrived on the scene, many years before. But Elliott took a special interest in Ann because he loved little Nell so much and Little Nell seems to be the mother of Ann. Yes, Marguerite says, Yes the mother of Ann was called Little Nell. Elliott is here now and the two are talking together - it is confusing. But Elliott says since she was born he has been watching over Ann and as one of her guardians, he has been able to follow her development, see her grow up. She was the one girl, he says. He was more interested in the girl than in the boys.

(EBG. I wonder if she recollects what illness overtook her?)

REPETITION

She does not know to which illness you refer. She was very ill at one time from aenemia, debility, but I can't hold her longer .....

(EBG. Tell her I will ask for her again some time Astor. Your child is tired ... Goodbye.)

(Note made after the sitting.)
G. is not as strong as she used to be before the war and so the power does not, at present, last so long as formerly. Regarding remarks re President keeping the peace between Winston and Stalin. This appears to be common knowledge here, at least, we had heard it. Regarding "waggle of toes", this I think was in the papers at time of death etc.? The name Elliot was at first spelled with one l, and later with two. Asked later about previous communications with David Gray, Geraldine said there had been some from "Elliot who was a relative."

After the sitting I asked G. if she knew who had been writing ? She replied, giving the name of my relative, and then said she "saw a woman with grey, silvery hair - pale at least her face seemed pale - and she looked puzzled or rather, she (G.) got the impression that she was puzzled, as though she didn't quite know what to make of me." (G) - "a little suspicious, that's all I got." Later G. added "Didn't we have Marguerite back ? (yes) that must have been she then." Geraldine ended up.

Dear Miss Gibbes,

I was very much interested in your letter dated May 16th with enclosures. It only arrived two days ago. The last script is most extraordinary and convincing. I can tell you now that everything about Ann is correct. She was F.'s daughter, Elliott was Mrs. F.'s father and in the previous communication to me when he forced his way in he spoke of "Little Nell". His wife was my wife's sister. The success in getting the name Boettiger through makes me suspect the possibility that M. Le H. didn't want to have her "pet name" come out. Possibly she tried to write "cheap" in protest though I see no reason for it. Perhaps later she will give it so that I won't tell you now.

The bit about Edwin W. staggered me. See if you can get the nick name by which he was generally known to his intimates.

The reference is most evidential. I won't give you the details yet but this was significant.

Give our best to G. I can quite understand that she is worn out. Her devotion to her mother during her long and trying illness was extraordinary and the shock of the ending.

If you get Marguerite again thank her for me and tell her I appreciate very much her news of Frank and that when there is a favourable opportunity I shall pass it on to those to whom it means a great deal.

This has developed into a most interesting and evidential research. Please keep me in touch with it and I will pass on any useful suggestions that occur to me.

Yours sincerely,

David Gray.

Dear Mr. Gray,

We had a short sitting today for a relative. Astor at once wrote as follows:

Astor is here. I have a word to say about a previous writing. There was little power near the end of it so I was not able to obtain all the answers clearly. You asked me to find out the Christian name the family knew and used for Mrs. Le Hand. I think that was the request. I got the name Alice from her in signs. So I presume that was the name required, Alice Le Hand. She made the signs that shaped this name I have written.

(EBG. Thank you. I think the request was for the name by which she was known in Frank's family).

(The name of the relative was then announced. And the writing proceeded on other lines).

(GDC and EBG)

Having received Mr. Gray's letter in which he said the name Alice was incorrect so far as he knew, anyhow it was not what he wanted, and as G. is returning to Ireland soon, I thought it advisable to endeavour to get replies to his letters as soon as possible.

Astor is here. "You wish to talk to Hilda or to others."

E.B.G. "Who is there besides Hilda"?

A. "There is your brother Frank and I think there is a woman in a mist and also I see two others not quite clear to me yet."

E.B.G. "Will you ask the woman in the mist to come and talk to me first"?

A. "The woman is an American who was here previously. She won't write herself but I can report what she says. She is still a little distrustful of you and afraid to give away any really personal information. She says that, in connection with Frank, they always had to be very careful, in their statements as there was the danger of the Press getting hold of it."

E.B.G. "Tell her she need not fear us in that respect."

A. "She says you can't trust anyone when it comes to careless talk."

E.B.G. "There I agree. Will you say that Mr. Gray thanks Miss Le Hand for the message re Frank and when the opportunity occurs will pass it on to those to whom it means a great deal."

A. "She is very pleased indeed....."

E.B.G. "Can Marguerite say anything more about Edwin W.? He has a nick-name by which he was known to his intimates."

A. "Wait.... She only calls him Ed. I don't know if she means that as a nick-name. She says, "Ed is right here and darned glad we are all together - the old trio." I don't know what she means by the trio."

E.B.G. "Can she explain the trio"?

A. "We are going to get together" she says, " and start working after Frank has had his rest in the holiday camp. He is to sail and go round the beaches of this new world and after that he wants to get back to his job. He hasn't given up the idea of being at the Peace Conference. He is going to be there to keep Joe S. in order - thinks he will be more of a heavy weight unseen than seen."

E.B.G. "I conclude that Edwin W. was associated with Frank in his job."

A. " 'My dear Watson', Frank used to say." That is M.H's answer. "He was to Frank what Watson was to Sherlock Holmes, in a way Frank used to try out his problems on his dear Watson sometimes."

E.B.G. "Astor, you gave the name Alice as connected with M.le H could she explain why she gave this name?"

A. "She seems to think she told you that it was a name associated with herself."

E.B.G. "It was not what Mr. Gray expected to be given."

A. "She says, "The name is my property - at least - it was my first name so why should you object to my using it?""

E.B.G. "Well, she is cautious and we are also. Mr. Gray wants to be sure of her, so we are all cautious!"

A. "She says she may have given away too much to you two. She is a little upset now because I have told you what she said about....."

E.B.G. "Please tell her we won't give anything away. She hasn't given, I think, the name which Frank's family used when speaking of her."

A. "I have said that to her but she won't give it, in fact, she won't tell me anything more now."

E.B.G. "Well, tell her that I only asked her because Mr. Gray wanted to know and that as your child here is going over to Ireland very soon, perhaps she will come and speak to Mr. Gray there."

A. "That would be best, she won't, I think, trust you with any further information. I led her on to talk and now she is distressed at realising some of her remarks are written down and are in the hands of two strangers."

E.B.G. "Tell her it is all right. We often have confidential things written down and she need not be upset."

A. "Yes, I shall tell her, it is only a passing mood with her. I think the man who was with her told her that she was indiscreet in communicating with strangers on earth through an interpreter. It is the fault of this man. She was quite ready to talk until he spoke to her about you. He was also connected with Frank - worked for him in a confidential capacity."

E.B.G. "Tell her to trust us, and now what about the other two you said were near?"

A. "Yes, this person has given her name as Pussy. She has a connection with M.H. They spoke to each other. Pussy has the symbol of fire near her now I see. I think she died through a fire. Wait I will ask her more. She would like Maud to know that she is more alive than she ever was on earth and that there has been a great family meeting to welcome Franklin home. Pussy has been over here a number of years it seems. She has gone now. She talked so quickly I don't know if I gave her message correctly. I think I picked it up, at any rate, something she wanted to be sent....."

Dear Mr. Gray,

Many thanks for yours of May 25th and 30th returning page of names belonging to the script. You say the name Boettiger is correct. But to whom does it belong?

I am very interested in what you say about Edwin W. In view of the fact that G. returns to Ireland in a few days, I decided that I would try to get in touch with M le Hand again so as to obtain if possible answers to your questions and thus eliminate the influence of the sitter's mind. For you will be seeing G. in Dublin shortly. (She may come over on 18th) Herewith is the result. From it, do I gather that Edwin W's name is Watson or is that the nick-name? And that he was also at one time a secretary or confidential friend? You will see that M.le H. says Alice was her first name. Can you verify this Also if she died in Chelsea, Mass - if there is such a place?

I shall be glad to hear if the name Pussy conveys anything to your wife? Geraldine told me her name was Maud in course of conversation a short time ago, and of the connection with the R. family. She said that "Elliott had spoken through her to you and had mentioned Little Nell". So that is not fresh evidence through us here. Would you also let me know if the reference to fire is correct? Also, if she has been over a number of years? And also if she talked very quickly when on earth? This is a small point but may have been a characteristic of the alleged communicator.

In yours of May 25th you say "Everything about Ann is correct." Am I to take it she is a "live wire" and has a quick brain and that her husband is in the Army and has some appointment?

I asked G. later on, as she said she thought M.le H had been speaking, if she had ever had an Edwin W. writing through her to you? She replied in the negative so far as she could recollect. She was very anxious to hear if anything of interest had been communicated at enclosed sitting. But beyond saying that it was very interesting I thought, I told her nothing as I didn't want to spoil anything else that might come through her to you by her previous knowledge of what had been said, etc.

I shall be very intrigued to hear what you think of the enclosed. But it is unlikely that we have any more sittings before she goes, as she seems very tired and her "power" does not, alas, last as long as it used. I have assured her that you are delighted with the results of this experiment and that encouraged her. Please forgive typing errors, etc.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,

E.B.G.

Copy of letter from Mr. Gray dated Sunday, June 17th 1945.

Dear Miss Gibbes,

I have been long delayed in answering your last very interesting letter with script enclosed. This is, your letter of June 6th.

Boettiger is Ann's married name. She is Frank's daughter and christened Anna not Ann. However, that is non-essential.

Edwin W. is Edwin Watson. For many years he was Frank's military aide and close friend. He died on the ship coming back from Yalta with Frank. Frank always called him by a nickname as did all the entourage. This I will not tell you yet. The trio might well mean General Watson, F. and Miss Le Hand. They worked very closely for years. To me this is very evidential. I shall find out whether Marguerite Le Hand's first name was Alice. I did not know it.

"Pussy" is my wife's sister, that is correct. My wife is Maude. She, Pussy, was burned to death in her house in New York. There are some details that might come through which would be evidential so I shall not say more at present except that she was a very vivacious personality..... We expect to see G.C. on the 20th and if she is up to it, I would like to have a short sitting, not over 15 minutes, as she should not get tired. But if this comes off, it might be well not to ask any questions regarding the things that have been coming to you. If anything comes, well and good. But since I know the answers to several questions, I think it is best to wait until you might take it up again. We have got hold of something very good and should be patient. Don't you think so?

Yours sincerely,

David Gray.

P.S. June 20th, 1945.

Yesterday G.C. lunched with us and later we wrote for nearly half-an-hour....I am sending you a copy of the script. I expressly asked no questions from Astor nor indicated who I wished to talk to until he announced who was there. There are, of course, two evidential points to be checked: the "Distastful gruel" for lunch on April 13th and the dog's rolling over at the funeral. The Scottie is, of course, Fala, who has figured so much in the press these latter years. My wife and I both feel strongly Frank's personality all the way through but of course that might be coloured by my knowledge of him. The gruel and the dog's action were, of course, beyond the possible knowledge of either of us.

Yours sincerely,

D.G.

The following is a copy of the copy which Mr. Gray made and sent to EBC of the sitting which G.C. gave him in Dublin on June 20th, 1945.

The postscript to the foregoin letter refers to this sitting and should really be read after reading the script. Lord Balfour had lived for seven years in the house that is now the USA Legation and is occupied by the American Minister to Eire. Lord Balfour had purported to communicate previously to Mr. Gray through Geraldine Cummins.

Astor. There is quite a crowd here today. David's psychic light attracts a number of people. His father, Guthrie, (my brother) Balfour and there is a charming lady called Pussy who speaks of Tissie and wants to send messages to Maud.

But they give way before two men and a woman who are escorting Frank. The lady is the one I gave offence to by being so inquisitive. I feel Frank would like me to take down what he says.

"Yes," says Frank. "David, you are a dear fellow to call me up and a scoundrel to have kept me waiting for this moment for weeks. Wish I could give one more fire-side talk to tell the American people the greatest humbug of all is death. I well remember that last warm morning. I think it was horror at the prospect of a detestable lunch of gruel that made me collapse. I had that terrible pain only for a few moments, the darkness - delicious, like black velvet and afterwards no pain, just waking up like a child.... I was very active at my funeral and the only one who paid attention to me at that funeral was Scottie my dog. I was very amused at all the best brains in the country concentrating on that shabby old garment of mine that was being put under the earth, and there was I, as large as life, and when my dog saw me, he rolled on the ground - making quite a bit of diversion. But nobody guessed he rolled on the grass with joy because he saw me..... I went into a body like my own body, young, healthy, strong, and no one at my funeral except Scottie saw me, because this body was travelling a little faster than theirs..... I take a poor view of the country's condition in three or so years. Discontent at demobilisation, the Nigger question and all that. Elliott is a most lovable fellow. We are going off on a wonderful cruise on the broad seas of eternity. I am going to have the finest holiday of my life.....etc. etc."

The following is a quotation from a correspondent of Mr. Gray's who wrote to him in reply to his enquiries. Mr.Gray's letter to EBG is dated August 31st, 1945.

The quotation runs: "Marguerite's middle initial was A which may well have stood for Alice. She died at Sommerville, a suburb outside Boston. It was warm on the morning F died, but not hot. He was not having gruel for lunch. The papers said Fala rolled on the grass. We did not see him but when the volleys were fired, he barked each time. F. may have called General Watson 'My dear Watson', though I don't think with any Sherlock Holmes meaning, since he was no great admirer of Sherlock Holmes. Both men knew they were ill and there was great question whether Watson should got to Yalta. I never heard of any bet, however..... "

Mr. Gray continues as follows: "Sommerville, where Miss Le H.she says, died, is a section of Boston in the north, while Chelsea is a corresponding area to the south. I shall make it my business some day, to ascertain just where M Le H. did die, whether it is possible that the end came in a hospital in Chelsea. Astor's explanation of the mistake, if mistake it is, would be interesting. None of my correspondent's criticism touches the outstanding fact that the first appearance of M. Le H. should portend F's death in April, before the event..... I hope you are as anxious to pursue this enquiry as I am.

With all best wishes.

Yours sincerely,

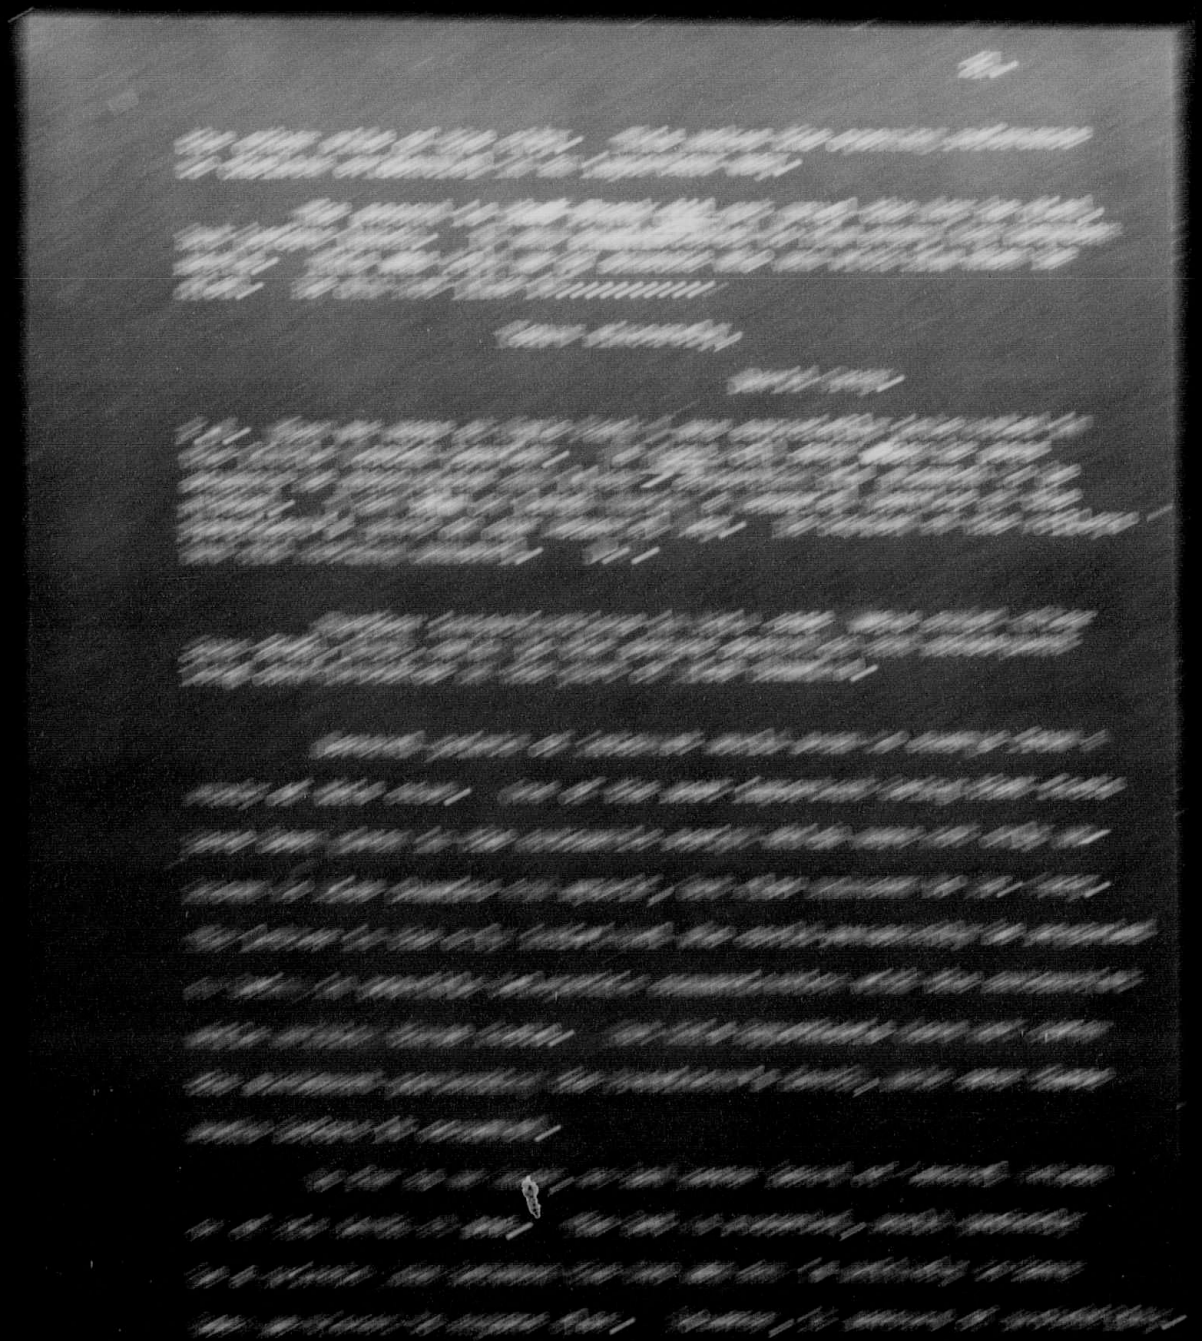

David Gray.

Ten months later I received the following letter from Mr. Gray. It is dated June 28th, 1946, and is from Dublin as before.

Dear Miss Gibbes,

I have been meaning for the last fortnight, ever since we got back to Ireland, to write you and tell you two interesting things which I discovered while I was in America.

The first is that Miss Le Hand was treated at the Chelsea Naval Hospital at Chelsea, Boston, when she was ill, though I believe she actually died in Sommerville - a suburb on the other side of the city. This makes the opening reference to Chelsea evidential in an important way.

The second is that Frank did get gruel the day he died, but before lunch. It was administered to him every day between meals. This was told me by someone who was with him when he died. He did not like it.....

Yours sincerely,

David Gray.

P.S. When we were at Hyde Park I was especially interested in the little Scotch terrier. He does roll over when he sees someone he recognises and likes - expecting his stomach to be rubbed. I had him on leash during a Memorial Service at the President's grave on our Memorial Day. He barked at the volleys but did nothing unusual. D.G.

Further investigations in this case were ended after June 20th, 1945, owing to the severe operation and subsequent long convalescence on the part of Miss Cummins.

Several points of interest would seem to emerge from a study of this case. One of the most important being that facts have been given in the automatic script which were not only unknown to Miss Cummins and myself, but also unknown to Mr. Gray. The latter is the only individual who could reasonably be regarded as being in possible telepathic communication with the automatist while writing these facts. But this hypothesis does not cover the statement portending the President's death, made over three weeks before it occurred.

So far as we know, we had never heard of General Watson or of his death at sea. The bet as recorded, would probably be a private joke between the two men and is unlikely to have been mentioned to anyone else. However, it savours of probability.

REPETITION

It is of interest to note that the characters of both Margaret le Hand and Ann Boettigger are accurately described. As these two women were entire strangers to us, it appears that these descriptions could only have been given by someone who knew them both. - "Astor" describing Marguerite and the latter describing Ann.

It is of interest to note that Astor appears to have acted as reporter of Marguerite's remarks at these sittings. If this is accepted as the manner in which the communication was conducted, it may explain the discrepancy between fact and statement when Marguerite is alleged to have said she died at Chelsea. Whereas, she was in hospital in Chelsea and died at Sommerville, another suburb of the same town.

Reporters are proverbially inaccurate. In summing up the Laski libel case, Lord Chief Justice Goddard remarked: "No two witnesses, as far as I know, are in agreement on what was said. Some agreed as to what was not said."

Perhaps readers will agree that this case is the more interesting because of the illustration in this case, of a very human failing - inaccurate reporting. One may go so far as to say that the best gossip owes its success to this widespread defect in the human personality.

When analysing evidence one should always compare it with the behaviour of human beings. So often the sceptical investigator appears to assume that the hypothetical communicator must be infallible. If he is fallible, that is to say, makes inaccurate statements, then the communicator is considered by sceptics to be invention of the medium's subconscious mind. If he is infallible and makes accurate statements, it is often assumed that the subconscious mind of the medium is wholly responsible for the alleged communication. Crythesthesia or invention accounts for all the phenomena, the communicator is never there!

My dear Miss Gibbes,

Enclosed are the proof sheets. The affair is thproughly disguised. It is unfortunate that it should have to be. I have considered the alternative, but without ascertaining Mrs R's point of view, I would not care to assume the responsibility for it. It is probable that she would be objective about it, thpugh uninterested at present and make no objection. When I go back I will explore this possibility. I spent some time and pains putting the whole thing together for her with the pertinent passages from the scripts. I, of course, have a copy of this and later on, a way may be found tp publish it.

Give my best to Geraldine. I hope we shall see her and you too this summer.

Yours very sincerely,

David Gray.

Dear Miss Hageby:

Time and again, I have wanted to write and recall the conversation we had together about the significance of certain symbols and words. If I recollect aright, you told me that a friend of yours had either written or published a book which assigned definite meanings to particular objects, as seen in visions or dreams. If such a book is in existence, or if you know of other books of the kind and could arrange to have the publishers send me a copy or copies, I would be deeply grateful.

I do not know what has prompted me to proffer this request just at this particular time other than that it is about the first moment that I have had in a very long time, for correspondence, and I am availing myself of it to carry out my long held intention of writing you of this particular matter.

Many times I have wished for a free time in which to write you of other subjects as well. My interest in psychic matters has, by no means, lessened since we last met. If anything, it has greatly increased. If there are any books in which you think I would be especially interested, and you have a free moment in which to tell me of them, I should be most grateful.

I have thought often of the interesting and delightful talks with you and with others of your circle whom I had the pleasure of meeting at Geneva, and at the Duchess of Hamilton's lovely country home, at Ferne. If you have time to tell me how you all are, it would give me great pleasure to hear from you, and I should be equally pleased if you would give my kind remembrances to your friends.

You will realize, I am sure, what my preoccupations have been since the days of the Coronation, and more particularly what they are just at this time. For that reason I am sure you will pardon the brevity of this letter, and that its main purpose should be the one to which it more particularly refers. If in these anxious and terrible days, another free moment in which a chance to write should come, I shall endeavour to send you something more than so brief a letter.

With kindest remembrances
and all good wishes, Believe me,

Dear Miss Lind-af-Hageby:

I have never been more disappointed than in not having had the opportunity, the privilege and the pleasure of having the talks to which, before leaving for Britain, I had looked forward to having with the Duchess of Hamilton, Mrs. Osborne Leonard, Miss Delius, Miss Mercy Phillimore, one or two others, and particularly yourself. Not one of the number was I fortunate enough to see even for a moment, and of the number you were the only one with whom I was able to have a word over the 'phone. I can assure you it was not for lack of endeavour to get in touch with you and other of our friends. Unfortunately, I had to leave to my staff the effort to make such contact as might be possible by telephone. I am afraid that in making the effort they did, they may have failed, on more than one occasion, to make known who it was who was trying to reach you. While they did succeed in getting the office on a few occasions, it was only on the occasion that we had the few words together over the 'phone that it was possible for me to reach you at all.

I was very greatly disappointed at not seeing you. I had looked forward so much to renewing our friendship, of hearing of recent events and developments, and particularly of thanking you in person for your kind letters and sending me, on different occasions, the books and pamphlets you have. I was most anxious, too, to have one or two more "talks" with some of our friends. The fact that you had so kindly been looking forward to some arrangement being made to this end caused me to feel more deeply disappointed than ever.

My time, however, while in London, was not my own. I knew for different reasons that the visit would necessarily be a brief one. I had to be back to keep on hand matters here but I had really hoped that, despite the pressure, there would be some chance for at least an evening with you all. I am sending this line just to renew the expression of my disappointment, and to ask you to give a word of explanation to the different friends whom you would know I would like to have seen again.

Do, please, if you have any word to give me yourself, or from or of any of your immediate circle, send me just a line. I shall always welcome a word from you be it but a line, and very much anything that, from time to time, you may think - like your own addresses on Reconstruction - would be of special interest to me.

I have written the Duchess of Hamilton but I am afraid that my letter to her, as this one to you, is one only of explanation and regret.

I do hope that you will be protected through the very trying and dangerous period through which we all are passing but you, in particular, who dwell so close to the battlefront. Thus far, the Hand of Providence appears to have been protecting Britain in a very real way. That she has a great and holy mission to the world, we must all increasingly realize and believe.

Dear Sir,

I was wondering whether you could spare a little time during your stay in London so that I might have the privilege of calling on you to discuss your interest in psychic subjects. I understand that this interest is of long standing.

Naturally I appreciate that any such conversation would have to be "off the record" and could not in any way be an interview.

It occurred to me, that busy though you must be, you might be able to spare some little time for this purpose.

Yours sincerely,

June 21, 1941

Dear Mrs. Leonard:

On Tuesday of this week, I received a degree of Doctor of Laws from Princeton and gave an address in New York on Canada's war effort. On my return to Ottawa later in the week, the first letter I received was the one written by you at High Cross, Loweswater, Cumberland, on May the 15th. As you will see, it has been a little over a month on the way across.

I was indeed glad to hear from you and to know you were well, for following the suggestion made in your last letter from Woodside, I have awaited hearing from you before acknowledging any of your previous letters or writing again.

All your communications have, I thin been duly received. I should like at once to thank you most warmly for each and all.

By the way, I wonder if I ever told you that Woodside was the name of the home of my childhood days - a lovely country home it was.

As so often happens, where something significant is being told or revealed, your letter came just at the moment that my mind had been most exercised over the question of whether I should follow my own intuitions and impressions as to what it might be best to say and do on occasions, or pay more attention tha I usually do to the counsel and advice of others. Curiously enough, I had had to decide whether, while in New York, I should make mention of my mother having been born there at the time her father was a political exile in the United States, his having been the leader of a rebellion in Canada, which was only one of theyman the struggles by which freedom has been secured. The day before, Mr. Churchill had spoken of his mother having been born also in the United States. I might have made quite a little of the occasion as evidencing the strength of my conviction as to the righteousness of Britain's cause. On the advice of one or two others, I refrained from introducing this personal note. It was much against my own conviction so to refrain, and I was deeply sorry afterwards that I had. However, I have no doubt that some other occasion may be afforded when I can make the reference with even greater effect. In that, I am sure, I will receive true guidance.

I shall certainly ask my friend Bert to get in touch with Mr. Leonard. I have not the least doubt, however, that already they are very close friends.

I am glad indeed to know that you are writing another book, particularly one of your own experiences. I wish there might be an opportunity of conversing with you concerning them. It is just possible I may come to London ere the year is out. If so, I shall certainly look forward, at that time, to a renewal of our friendship.

I am beginning to be much more hopeful about the outcome of the war though I realize that a very terrible period must intervene before Britain's superior might can make itself felt. I pray very earnestly that you may come safely through all the war's vicissitudes, and that your great gifts may be preserved to serve the high spiritual ends which they were meant to further, and which already they have furthered to so great an extent.

May 15th

My dear Dr. MacKenzie King,

Just to let you that after May 24th I shall be at the above address for some weeks, I hope - You will understand what conditions are like in England and the less I say in a letter, the better. After having to leave my home (which still stands) I have been rather wandering about to whatever comparatively quiet spot I could find - so that I could do some writing - as I have had some interesting experiences since the war began. I have not seen any relatives since the summer of 1939. but at the moment I am with a friend - a clergyman's widow and her daughter - We live in the same place - but have separate rooms - so that I can write, cook - eat and think alone -

I have felt your friend Bert so often - and I would be so glad if you would ask him to get into touch with my husband, Fred; I feel it would help, and make a strong psychic link. Fred was the kindest - most unselfish character I ever met, and Bert always impressed me as having a beautiful soul and mind - the highest integrity - one senses it - as soon as he approaches. It may well be that he, and Fred have already met - I am not sure but if you would ask him - it would ensure it being so. Also if anything should happen to me - I could get into touch with you through Bert - from the other side - and I should hope to be able to help you in some way - I should certainly wish to do so - though it may sound presumptuous to think it — no - you won't think it is - I know. One does not know what will happen to me in these days -

I have had some wonderful escapes from being killed — all rather nerve--racking - but I have been very much helped by the "Other Side" and am told to take care of myself - as there is still work for me to do on the earth — so perhaps I shall not have to seek Rest — Over There — yet awhile!

Just recently - I got the message from him that your actions would be justified in every way, by later events. (There is always this element of justification stressed in these communications, have you noticed?) He says he is much with you - and keeps with decisions.
Have you been wearing anything grey lately - and were you standing in a room - holding a folded paper in your left hand - You seemed to be very uncertain as to how to act about it — as someone else was concerned in it - and 4.

I gathered that some personal element rather complicated it. Bert said you were helped about it — and are still being helped. "You are on the right lines, he says, but it is fatal for you to take other people's advice — or to be influenced by them — You are usually in the right when you get the impression yourself as to what to do — Also — Bert, your Mother and others can guide and help you more definitely when it is your own decision — They can more easily attune themselves to it. Probably because your life is guided by prayer — or at any rate — Spiritual aspiration even when you have not made the matter an object of special prayer — God is much stronger than man — especially now! Men will fail us now — God will not — cannot — I must stop — With every possible good wish and thought — God Bless you —

affectionately yours
Gladys Osborne Leonard

My dear Mr. Mackenzie King -

You may be sure I have thought of you many many times during these critical days and I was filled with joy at your glorious victory in the election. I hope you received my last two letters safely - but do not answer any of them until things are more settled.

I have been strongly impressed that your friend Bert is helping you. There seem to be several of your friends with one view - Your mother especially - as giving me the idea of protection for you.

Your mother tells me that she is continually reminding you that you are being guided in everything you do - and she particularly wants you to

2. remember this fact, and live on it, as well as believing it.

"I will instruct thee and teach thee in the way which thou shalt go" — also

"Thine ears shall hear a word behind thee, saying - This is the way, walk ye in it, when ye turn to the right hand, and when ye turn to the left"

I know that you realize all this, but your Mother wants you to depend on it more and more - so as to save you from strain. She says you are realizing more than ever that you can rely on help from the Unseen.

Bella I get strength again - but it is your Mother and Bert who come closer & more

Bert says you have been reminded of him very specially just recently - unfortunately

THE HAVEN,
MARINE PARADE,
TANKERTON,
KENT.

by the time you get this Easter the circumstances may not be so clear in your mind.

He is keeping to clear away some difficulties for you - personal ones - which will never really be allowed to worry or embarrass you - but - which cause slight anxiety at times ——— It will all work out rightly and safely. Say and do as little as possible - Don't be - I can't get this clearly - don't be harassed - or cornered - or provoked into saying or doing anything more than you can possibly avoid saying or doing. Mischevious people - might like to make trouble if they got opportunity - but they will not be able to do so - Have no fear - Something is happening now that will make you understand a little later why they (your mother

4 and Bert -) are re-assuring you on this matter. Someone who has been troublesome is being removed, or rendered incapable of doing any thing. a difficult condition is being cleared from your path in this way.

To-day - Sunday - they have been very near you - and you have been thinking of them (your friends in the world of Spirit) very strongly. I get some passing indisposition which they have been keeping. But - relax whenever you can. You are so psychic - it makes you too receptive to other peoples' thoughts - etc - They do not really matter. You have such strong support from the "Other Side".

I will stop now - much love comes from "them" to you - a great feeling of Peace. You will need it for all you have to do - and now may I, too, send my affectionate greetings - and prayers for your happiness and success - always yours sincerely Gladys Leonard.

P.S. It was strange that your mother and mine passed over on the same date

Dear Mrs. Leonard:

Your letter written on the last day of the old year arrived a few days ago. It has given me very great pleasure. Do accept my warmest thanks for this kind remembrance and, with them, my every good wish to you for 1950.

You will be sorry to learn that for two or three weeks past, I have suffered a great deal from sleeplessness and shortness of breath combined, and have had to rest up all but completely. I am, however, now beginning to feel the beginning of the rest and hope very soon to be able to continue in earnest the work on my Memoirs which, at last, I have commenced. All of this accords with one of those periods of ebb time to which your letter, among other things, refers.

I was glad to learn that you hope to be returning to your old home at Tankerton in the Spring, and that you will have the friends with whom you are living at present, at your side there.

My dear W. Mackenzie King -

I am so glad to have heard from you - Your letter of December 6 reached me two days ago - Thank you for all you have told me - Yes - I felt deeply impressed with the idea of "Guidance" - and I still feel it - Those lines you quote are so true, and beautiful - especially "Thy God doth undertake to guide the future as he has the past" - I feel that these words have to help you now more than ever before - These periods come - many times in some lives - when one can depend on no-one - nothing - on this earth - but only on God + and on the Spiritual beings whom he uses to carry out this purpose and Plans - and I do feel that you have co-operated with them - and this is a quiescent time - when they are gathering power for some future effort with you - This "ebb time" is a very trying one for us - always - it seems to us as if so much is ended - whereas there never is any end to either our work - or our needs of guidance - or our opportunities for expressing the God-Power within us -

But now and again there must be a time when we relax - in order to build up again ready for more work - Your health may be built up now. I wish you could sleep better - Sound sleep is such a help - I am trying to send you some healing thoughts at night - in the hope they may help - When I am with anyone I can often help them to sleep better by giving soothing massage to the head. It does wonderfully - but alas - you are so far away - The book you have begun will be a wonderful instruction and help to others - Bert is joyful over it - and I think he says you will find great joy and satisfaction in it also - Have you been working out a kind of framework for it - I think "They" are helping to do this - and the work will become increasingly easier soon -

Yes - I am feeling fairly well - but life seems rather a struggle at times - especially when one is alone - but here at Brighton I spend the week-ends with two friends - D. A. Nicholson and his wife - Who are interested in psychic matters - and I think the husband will be a very fine medium later on - I am going back to Tankerton in the

ADDRESS

London, May 19, 1944

Mrs. Osborne Leonard,
~~The Haven, Marine Parade,~~
Tankerton, Kent.

Would you please send me, if possible, word by telegraph where I could reach you by telephone tomorrow Saturday morning at ten. Shall be at Dorchester during forenoon. If more convenient for you, please 'phone any time between 10 and 11. Deeply sorry to have had no chance reply your kind letter or to reach you through our good friends the Carnegies. Kindest remembrances.

Please write on the back of this form the name and address of the sender, and ~~Mackenzie~~ King

Mrs. Osborne Leonard,
Care of Her Grace
Nina, Duchess of Hamilton and Brandon.

Dear Mrs. Leonard:

I was terribly disappointed to have missed seeing you during my short stay in Britain. You will remember that in your last letter to me - at all events, the last I received from you - you had left your residence in Tankerton, Kent, and had gone to reside elsewhere. You had, however, asked me not to write to that address until I heard further from you as you were not altogether sure how long your stay in that particular locality would be.

When in London, I tried my best to find out where you were through the Duchess of Hamilton and Miss Lind-af-Hageby. You will, no doubt, have learned from the Duchess that I failed altogether to reach her even by 'phone - though I tried many times, in different ways, to get into touch with her. Also you may have heard from Miss Lind that I was almost as unfortunate in reaching her, and that I succeeded in getting in touch with her only the day before I was leaving London.

I asked Miss Lind about you and how you were. She was able to tell me that you were well, and in or about London, but she did not have your address at hand, and I, therefore, had to both come and go without sending you any word whatever. This you must have thought very strange indeed, but I do hope that, long ere this, you will have fully understood the circumstances. As a matter of fact, I thought that you would be pretty sure to see mention of my being in London, and that any mail might bring a line from you to me. But for your letter advising me not to write, I would have had some message sent to you before leaving Canada or immediately upon arrival. I should like you to know this for I really cannot tell you how great the disappointment has been not to have seen you again.

I am sending this line in care of our good friend the Duchess of Hamilton as, even yet, I am without any address by which to reach you. Do, please, when you receive this letter, send me something letting me know that it has safely reached you. If you have time, do write me as well about yourself, and about other things in which we have so great a mutual interest. I should not like anything to even so much as interrupt our correspondence which, as you know, has meant very much to me.

I hope you are keeping well, and that the terrible trials, distractions and dangers of our day are not telling too greatly upon your sensitive nature. I can well imagine how very hard these times must be for you. I, myself, have fortunately been able to do not a little of my work at my home in the country. The more or less constant contact with Nature has given me a wonderful resiliency and reserve of strength.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRIME MINISTER

I spoke on the telephone to the Dowager Duchess of Hamilton, who is now in the country. She will be returning to London next Monday and will be at 15, St. James's Place, telephone Regent 0845. I told her how much you appreciated her letter and that later you would try to get in touch with her. I explained the situation in which you found yourself now. She said she quite understood and her object in writing the letter was simply to welcome you to this country and to let you know that there had been a change of address.

My dear Duchess:

I cannot tell you how bitterly disappointed I was not to have had the pleasure of seeing you again in the course of my recent very hurried visit to Britain. The disappointment was twofold in that I also missed any opportunity of having a word with you over the 'phone. I tried many times to reach you at one address or another. As you know, telephoning in Britain, at most times, is none too satisfactory. It was not surprising to me that, on this last trip, I found it more difficult than ever to make satisfactory connections.

Perhaps the greatest disappointment of all came as I was leaving the Dorchester to catch my train for the North. Just as I had left the apartment, word came that you were on the 'phone. I had, unfortunately, left so much to the last moment that I just had no alternative but to ask that a word of explanation along with a word of deep regret be sent you as to why it was not possible for me to return to the 'phone. On reaching Prestwick, the night following, I sent a telegram from there which I hope you duly received, and which also acknowledged a very kind congratulatory telegram from yourself on my speech at the Mansion House. I should like to renew my thanks for that very kind message.

I was much disappointed to have had to leave to Brigadier Vanier, who accompanied me to England, and who looked after my correspondence while there, the acknowledgment by 'phone of your exceedingly kind letter which was among the first I received after reaching England. Brigadier Vanier, I am sure, fully explained the difficulty with which I was confronted in trying to make any engagements other than the most pressing of a few which were altogether official. He told me how understanding you were in the conversation he had with you. Just the same, I had hoped that each day might afford me some chance of a glimpse of you myself or a word over the 'phone.

You would know, I am sure, how deeply disappointed I was not to have seen Miss Lind-af-Hageby or Miss Delius, and also Mrs. Osborne Leonard, or not to have been able to get in touch with Miss Mercy Phillimore or any of my friends at the Spiritualist Alliance. I did try, many times, to get in touch with Miss Lind-af-Hageby by 'phone but I was only less unfortunate with her than I was with yourself, in that I succeeded in having, only at the last moment, a very short talk with her over the 'phone.

When I conclude this letter, I shall dictate a brief line to Miss Lind-af-Hageby, also a line to Mrs. Osborne Leonard. Knowing that I may rely on your kind permission, I shall enclose the letter to Mrs. Leonard in this letter to you, in the hope that it may not be troubling you too greatly either to give it to her, or to have it sent on to her.

Unfortunately, I do not know - and I did not know while in London - by what address Mrs. Leonard could be reached, and had hoped among other things that I might get this word through you. I should feel very badly if I thought Mrs. Leonard had felt I had not sought to get in touch with her while in England when, as a matter of fact, I had more in mind, when I left Canada, seeing something of yourself, Miss Lind, Mrs. Osborne Leonard and one or two others than I had of almost anyone else. As a matter of fact, I saw nothing whatever of personal friends, and shall be surprised indeed if, should I return to England again, at any time in the future, I find that I have one left.

This letter seems to be all explanation. It certainly is full of deeply felt regrets but it carries with it also my warmest of greetings and wishes to yourself. I do hope you are keeping well, despite the grave anxiety that has become the lot of all in Britain. It does seem to me that the Hand of Providence is to be seen in more than one event of the past two years.

Ere another year has passed, we shall, I believe, have seen the end of the present conflict and the triumph of British arms though with Germany's power what it still is, that is a great deal to expect. That, come what may, we shall with America's help win in the end, I have no doubt whatever, but I shudder at the thought of what the loss of life may be if the war continues very much longer. You may be sure that Canada will continue to the end to do all that lies within the power of her government and people.

DR.
GLEN HAMILTON

Prince Albert,
August 7, 1933.

Dear Dr. Hamilton:

I have had a letter from Dr. Stewart of the Manitoba Sanatorium in which he mentions that he has written you of my interest in some of your research work.

Had time permitted, I would have rung you up at Winnipeg while on my way West, but, unfortunately, the committee in charge of the day's proceedings had filled every available minute with one kind of engagement or another. I expect to be in Winnipeg on Sunday the 20th, arriving fairly early in the morning. I shall stay at the Fort Garry and leave the city at six p.m. I should welcome very much an opportunity of seeing you on Sunday, should that prove to be convenient, and would gladly visit your residence or office at any time during the day.

If you could conveniently let me know in advance about what time you will be free for an interview, I would reserve the time you might be free to give me. I shall be spending Sunday the thirteenth at the Banff Springs Hotel, Banff, Alberta, and, if you could drop me a line there, I should be grateful.

I have been promising myself for many years past the pleasure of seeing something of the work of which you gave an account before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, and shall be pleased if you can spare me a little of your time on Sunday the 20th.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,

Dr. T. Glen Hamilton,

Dear Mr. McKenzie King:-

Dr. Hamilton, who is at present out of the city, will I know be very glad indeed to meet you on Sunday, August 20th. My own suggestion is that he call for you at the Fort Garry Hotel about a quarter to one and bring you to our home for lunch after which he could devote as much time as you have available to telling you something of our work. He will I know have much to talk about for the discoveries which we have stumbled upon during the last ten years' investigation are indeed breath-taking in their scope and import.

I am so glad that you had the opportunity of meeting Dr. Stewart. He is a fine medical scientist and a man of wide sympathies and outlook. I shall look forward with pleasure to having the opportunity of meeting you in our own home.

Yours very sincerely,

My dear Mrs. Hamilton:

I have just arrived at Banff and found your kind letter awaiting me. It is more than good of you to suggest my coming to lunch with the Doctor and yourself on Sunday the ~~fifteenth~~ I shall be delighted to accept this invitation, and, unless I hear to the contrary, I shall expect the Doctor to call at the Fort Garry about a quarter to one.

Whatever time you and he can spare during the afternoon will be more than appreciated by me. I am saying nothing to my Liberal friends in Winnipeg about my plans for Sunday, beyond advising them that I have one or two private engagements which will occupy me most of the day. I have said that I shall be pleased to see any of them between five and six at the hotel, or at the C. P. R. station at six o'clock, at which time I leave for the East.

I hope that neither you nor the Doctor will allow my desire to learn about your discoveries interfere in any way with plans or duties of your own. I shall quite understand if some professional or other call makes necessary a postponement or even cancellation of the plans suggested. If, however, you should both be free, I shall be happy beyond words.

With kind regards,

Yours very sincerely,

At the beginning of the present year, I received from you a very kind wire in which you said: "We ask you to accept our greetings and best of wishes for happiness, health and strength in continued successful work". Before ~~we~~ I reach the close of the year, I should like to extend similar greetings and wishes to you and to all of "we".

When in September of 1941, I was in London for a few days, I had hoped some chance might offer for me to call upon you, and renew some of the friendships I made on one or two previous visits. Unfortunately, I was so pressed at the time that this chance never came.

It may be that I shall be crossing over to England again in the new year. If so, I shall certainly hope to see something of yourself and others who helped to lend so much of interest and inspiration to my earlier visits.

My dear Sir:

I venture to write on two separate subjects: psychical research and my repatriation.

On pages 158 to 160 of Mr. Hardy's excellent biography, the statement is made that you are interested in the possibility of the day when there may be "incontrovertible evidence of the existence of a spiritual world." It occurs to me that perhaps I might be able, as far as you yourself are concerned, to make some measure of contribution to that end.

In 1941 I (an Anglican clergyman-teacher) had certain unsolicited experiences of a psychic nature. These purported to be caused by the return, after death, of a one-time Anglican nun who, in life and with the Order which she had founded (which had become Roman Catholic), had been frustrated in the fulfillment of the purpose of their original foundation. The return, as Foundress, was allegedly an effort to recall the Order to the purpose of that original institution.

There were messages based on points later to be found in material solely in the possession of the Order (the Mother Foundress' original journal)--not known, even to them, until that time. These "messages" were accompanied by five miraculous phenomena, involving many people from many places and witnessed by reputable percipients, apparently intended for identification and authentication to her Order. It is the historical record of these incidents, in particular (rather than the messages themselves), which might constitute at least part of the veridical evidence on this subject in which you are said to be interested. If a typewritten digest of the record would be welcome, it would be a pleasure to send it to you.

With reference to "counsel concerning repatriation": I came here, in childhood, because of reasons beyond my control. I have wished to return to Canada, but have always been handicapped by two facts: I did not feel free to make inquiry here, yet I did not know anyone in Canada to whom I could write for counsel.

Would you, perhaps, know of any person or Department to whom I might make application for placement in some governmental institution:

1. In educational work (administrative or teaching--I have had 20 years' experience in teaching commerce).

2. In religious work (chaplaincy--I was chaplain-secretary to a Bishop and have the Ph.D. degree in Church history from the University of Chicago).

Sincerely yours,

(Rev.) Charles H. Harrison (Ph. D.)

(Rev.) Charles H. Harrison, Ph.D.

You may be interested, incidentally, to know that I was born (in 1897) on D'Arcy Street, Toronto, two doors from the house in which you were said at that time to be living on Beverley Road.

June 21, 1950.

Reverend Charles H. Harrison, Ph.D., 144 West 70th Street,
New York 23, N.Y.

My dear Dr. Harrison:

I thank you for your letter of June 19th.

It is true that I have taken a certain interest in problems of psychic research. I have, however, because of the condition of my health, been obliged to give up the pursuit of not a few studies in which I have been interested; also because I am anxious to make such headway as may be possible with my memoirs. In the circumstances, I doubt if I should at present have the time to give to the material you have kindly thought of sending on to me the study which I ~~would wish~~ otherwise would be glad to give to it.

As to counsel "concerning repatriation," that is so much a personal matter that it is not easy for me to advise you. Knowing how very difficult it is to find placement for persons who have resided permanently in Canada, I cannot think of any department of government or individual who would be of much assistance to you in obtaining a position in some governmental institution. I shall be glad to keep your wishes in mind, and if the name of anyone who is likely to be of assistance to you should come to my mind, I shall be happy to send you word at once.

I regret to have to send you this reply, but it is the only one I can think of at the moment which would likely be of the least service to you.

I am interested in learning that you were born on D'Arcy Street, Toronto, so near to the house in which our family lived for a number of years.

With kind regards,
Yours sincerely,

I wish to thank you very warmly for your kindness in inscribing for me, in May last, a copy of your autobiography entitled "Past Years", and, particularly, for the words of the inscription itself. I had read the book with the greatest interest and profit before ordering a copy from the publishers. I rather hesitated to ask Messrs. Hodder and Stoughton to prefer my request for an inscription before forwarding the volume to me, but the desire to have your autograph in this particular book was so insistent that I was unable to resist. I thought that you might possibly recall the afternoon I had had the pleasure of meeting you at the home of Lord and Lady Grey and felt sure that, if you did, you would not mind placing in this volume an autograph which might accompany your volume "Evolution and Creation", inscribed at that time. Your remembrance of that ɕaeaziphibashaddeddnɑt a little to the pleasure I have derived from the inscription you have placed in the larger volume.

In the passing of Lord and Lady Grey, and particularly Lord Grey, I share a loss which, to you, must be very great, but, like you, I have the most definite belief in their continued existence and interest in the lives of those whom they have known and loved while here.

You may be interested in hearing that I have come to know Mrs. Etta Wriedt very well. I see her occasionally. She has spoken with much enthusiasm of your kindness to her, and, on one of the occasions when I visited her in her home, she showed me a cello which you had presented to her. Though past seventy, Mrs. Wriedt continues to be fairly active in her own home. She lives very quietly and sees only a few friends. To me she is one of the most remarkable persons I have ever had the privilege of meeting.

I am not without hopes that I may have the privilege of another talk with yourself at some future time. I shall have very much more of which to tell you than when we met at the time of the Imperial Conference of 1926.

With renewed thanks and highest regard,
Believe me, dear Sir Oliver,
Yours very sincerely,

Dear Sir,

I took the liberty of mailing you today, under separate covers, three psycho-analytic reprints, with my compliments: The Poltergeist Psychoanalyzed, Telepathy in Analysis, and a criticism of same by an opponent.

In the past, you have been showing interest in such subjects, way back to the time when our correspondence began in London where I was doing Psychical Research.

I trust that the papers will prove worth of your interest.

Yours sincerely

Dear Dr. Fodor:

Since my return from overseas, your kind letter of September the 11th, acknowledged by my secretary on September the 30th, has been brought to my attention.

I thank you warmly for your kindness in sending me with your compliments the three psychoanalytic reprints enclosed with your letter.

At the moment, I am seeking to overtake a large arrears of acknowledgments of communications. As soon as this task is completed, I shall give myself the profit and pleasure of reading the reprints. In the meantime, may I thank you, not only for the reprints themselves, but, as well, for your kind remembrance of my interest in psychical research.

Yours sincerely,

Dear Sir:

In Mr. Mackenzie King's absence overseas, I wish to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 11th instant, and to let you know that the three reprints mentioned therein have been duly received at Laurier House.

Your letter and the reprints will be brought to the Prime Minister's attention when he returns to Ottawa.

Yours faithfully,

TELEPATHY IN ANALYSIS

A Discussion of Five Dreams

BY NANDOR FODOR, LL.D.

The existence of telepathic phenomena was first drawn into the framework of psychoanalysis by Freud. He was exceedingly careful and circumspect when he first touched upon the subject in 1922. In 1925 he became slightly more positive. In 1933 he was ready to state that "psychoanalysis has prepared the way for the acceptance of such processes as telepathy." In spite of this "green light" and Freud's express request to his followers that "you should think more kindly of the objective possibility of thought transference and therefore also of telepathy," the number of contributions to this important subject has been remarkably sparse.

Jule Eisenbud, in his recent thoughtful treatment of the subject, finds this analytic resistance almost as remarkable as the facts of telepathy. He echoes the independent finding of Hollós and Servadio that "the telepathic episode is a function not only of the repression of emotionally-charged material by the patient, but of the repression of similar or related emotionally-charged material by the analyst as well." The writer's own finding, in an earlier, independent paper, was that: "The telepathic dream reflects like a mirror the contents of the unconscious mind of the agent, paralleling it by similar contents in the recipient's mind which are shaped into a personal dream. The similarity or parallelism of psychic content may be the predisposing factor rendering telepathy a possibility. The interpretation of such dreams of the recipient is not always possible without knowing the agent's dream. In some rare cases the telepathic influence becomes so overwhelming that the freedom of personal dreamwork is curtailed, as for instance, the freedom of the hypnotized subject when he is commanded to dream about a chosen thought. But just as the hypnotized subject performs certain feats because of his transferred love of the operator, in other words, because he wishes to, so also the freedom of personal dreamwork is abrogated only because the dreamer wishes this. In other words, telepathic communication can be only received because there exists in the dreamer's unconscious a psychic content which, in its latent meaning, corresponds to the manifest content of the message."

The subject, however, is by no means fully surveyed. Hollós used a curious phase: "It is the patient who makes my slip," meaning that the return of the repressed occurs in another person. In the present report there is a case in which "it is the patient who makes my interpretation." The report concerns five dreams, involving four persons, including the writer of this paper. The circumstances are such as to rule out coincidence as more fantastic than the recognition of some unknown mechanism. Two of the dreamers are husband and wife, Arthur and Nancy S., patients in the last stage of analysis; the third is Arthur's secretary, Mary, who was drawn into the analytic circle by chance when Arthur and Nancy were compelled to move from New York before their analyses had been completed. The writer suggested that since so much progress had already been made, it might be possible to continue the analysis by correspondence; that if it proved not to be, he would recommend another therapist. Somewhat to everybody's surprise, Arthur's severe neurosis was resolved in a short time in sudden and dramatic fashion; the analysis of Nancy also continued successfully but along more conventional lines. Mary's participation came about through the circumstance of correspondence.

Arthur is a clinical psychologist; and both he and his wife came to analysis with considerable theoretical knowledge of the dynamic unconscious. They are in their middle 40's. Mary, in her late 20's, was recommended as a secretary to Arthur by the present writer, for whom she had done editing and manuscript typing. Because of this work, she also had considerable analytical knowledge. When Arthur—because of strong emotion concerning a personal tragedy—was "blocked" in writing to the analyst, she readily consented to take dictation and transcribe the material for him.

The telepathic dreams to be discussed are one shared by Mary and Arthur, one shared by Nancy and Arthur, one by Mary and Nancy, one by Nancy and the analyst, and a fifth in which Arthur dreamed material completely meaningless to him but meaningful to the analyst. To understand the phenomena, it is necessary to comment on the personal relationships involved. Those of Arthur, Nancy and the writer are the conventional ones of analyst and patient, with, in Nancy's case, an unusually strong transference. Mary's place in the circle is difficult to describe and her role in the analysis hard to evaluate. Apparently she participated actively—through affection and the mechanism of identification; and she appears to have derived considerable benefit from it, for both Nancy and Arthur report that the girl whom the analyst remembers as quiet and reserved has undergone a personality change and can now be described as radiant and glamorous. It should be said—because of the obvious sexual elements in the dream contents—that there is no "triangle-situation" here. The relationship appears to the analyst to be an unusually adult one of mutual trust and affection; the women identify with each other and each other's problems readily; and Arthur reports dreams in which he has identified with both.

It should be said that the dreams here reported came near the end of the analyses and were not particularly significant for the analyses, except that the joint dream of Mary and Nancy appeared to indicate progress on the part of both. Mary appears to have initiated the telepathic dreaming. To explain the first dream and understand the significance of its symbolism, as well as the facility with which Mary and Arthur exchange dream symbols and enter into each others' dreams, a shared dream which was not telepathic may be reported. Mary dreamed of clock hands, one above the other; since she had no "boy-friend" at the time and the clock was the office clock, the dream needed no interpretation. It is of interest chiefly because, after she had reported the dream to Arthur, he dreamed of a world populated by little copulating clock hands.

Shortly after this, Mary acquired a boy-friend. It was not too difficult, therefore, when she dreamed of winning $110 at Bingo to interpret it in the light of the clock hand symbolism and the addition of a feminine symbol as "girl gets two boys." A further dream, that she was doing office work in which two masculine symbols—but of a different type—were involved, seemed to confirm this, as well as point toward the unconsciously preferred figure; the "boy-friend" was not being taken too seriously.

The third dream of "girl gets two boys" repeated the symbolism of 110 and is the first of the five telepathic dreams. Mary dreamed she was standing on skis. She attached no importance to the dream and did not mention it until Arthur remarked in the office, "I wish you'd tell me why I took you skiing the other night; I don't ski; and I've never been on skis in my life." Arthur's dream was simply that he and Mary were skiing through the woods; he was skiing with ease; and Mary more nearly floating through the air than skiing. The dream was a delightful one; and the dreamer enjoyed it; but both the simple transparency of the intercourse symbolism—which was not characteristic of his dreams—and the choice of skis, when he had never been skiing and had never wanted to ski, puzzled him. But the skis in Mary's dream were meaningful symbols, the girl, Mary in person this time, again getting two boys. Mary does not ski and, except for symbolic reasons, would be unlikely to be on skis in her dreams. The skis were very long ones, which is a matter of some importance in the dream interpretation.

The analyst interprets this joint dream as primarily Mary's, built again on the theme of "girl gets two boys." The fact that the skis were very long ones pointed in the direction of Arthur, as he is much taller than the other man of that time in Mary's life. If there is motivation in such a shared dream, and everything anybody has ever been able to learn about unconscious dynamics shows that there is always motivation, the length of the skiis would account for Arthur's skiing. Mary wanted to "ski" with Arthur but didn't; Arthur, less repressed, did it for her; but he protected her with her own symbolism.

The second of the telepathic dreams came to light because, like the first one, it made no sense to the dreamer who received it from the dreamer who initiated it. It appears to have been Nancy's dream, "intercepted" by Arthur, who remarked to her at breakfact the following morning that he wished he knew why he had "kissed Alice Brand last night." She replied that she did not know unless it was because she had been calling on Alice Brand and on Alice's mother in her own dreams "last night."

To the analyst, one of the most interesting of the points indicating telepathic communication is the slenderness of the thread leading to "Alice Brand." She is a former acquaintance of Nancy whom Arthur had met only once and by whom he had not been particularly impressed. Furthermore, she is of a physical type which—although undeniably beautiful—has never attracted him. Both Arthur and Nancy report that they probably hadn't thought of the girl in the last nine years; and that she should have entered their dreams by coincidence is to ask too much of coincidence.

Arthur's dream was a simple one. He was sitting on the corner of a couch on which a girl in a gray-blue dress was lying with her feet curled under her. The girl was Nancy in all respects, figure, posture and characteristic pose; but her face was Alice Brand's. Nancy has dark hair and black eyes; Alice has light hair and blue eyes. In the dream, Arthur leaned over and gently kissed the girl. Except for that kiss, the dream was a re-enactment in all respects of a scene of years ago when Nancy and Arthur had first met and Nancy, worried and ill, had lain on a couch and Arthur had tried to comfort her. In the actual occurrence, he had not kissed her, although he realized he loved her and wanted to; and the writer would point out that a dream often completes some greatly desired action which for some reason or other was never completed in the past. Nancy remembered only a fragment of her dream. In it, she was entering a door to pay a call on Alice Brand and her mother.

Neither of the participants nor the analyst questioned from the start that the dream was telepathic; but the basis was difficult to determine. Nancy had had a determinant for the dream in that she had been laughing the evening before at a cartoon showing a hut labeled "Library" with two live lions chained outside and an African chief explaining to another that he had gotten the idea from his U. N. tour of New York. Nancy had been associated once in library work with Alice Brand which raises the supposition that she initiated the dream. The purpose of the dream eluded dreamers and analyst for some time. It seemed evident that it was concealed in the word "brand." Since drinking to relieve neurotic tension had been one of Arthur's problems, the writer ventured that the interpretation was "brandy" as equalling liquor; but the lack of anxiety of both dreamers and the fact that Arthur's dream was enjoyable seemed to rule out that interpretation. The key seems to have been in the manifest contents of the dreams themselves. Alice Brand's mother was a witness years ago in a divorce suit by which Nancy had ended an earlier unhappy marriage. It meant the beginning of a new life for her, with prospects of remarriage. The scene in Arthur's dream similarly meant the beginning of a new life for him, that with Nancy. "Brand new" appears to have been the clue to the dream, with Nancy the instigator and Arthur receiving it. The writer's present interpretation is that both envisioned themselves as once more entering "brand new" lives, lives free from neurosis. As Arthur's principal symptoms had already disappeared, Nancy's dream seemed encouraging evidence of progress in analysis and appeared to indicate that she too was recognizing her new freedom.

The third dream was inspired by a piece of current scatology. It was heard by Mary and apparently reacted to by Nancy before she herself heard it. A word of explanation is in order here that the writer, in discussing with Mary the taking of her present secretarial job, had pointed out the primitive, anal, urethral and genital material which a clinical psychologist's secretary must come in contact with and had advised accepting life however raw one found it, laughing at it when it was worth laughter—whatever the source—and not borrowing its tragedies. The advice has worked well and has contributed to the positive enjoyment of a job many a young woman would have found repugnant.

The story, slightly Bowdlerized, which inspired the dream concerns the woman who went to the grocery for sugar and was told she couldn't have any without coupons. The following day she couldn't buy beer because the grocer wouldn't sell it unless she returned empty bottles. So the third day, she marched in, planked a bag down on the counter and announced: "Here's a bag of feces; give me two rolls of toilet paper."

Mary heard this story one evening. She recalls no dream of that night; but Nancy dreamed of defecation. She was seated on an old-fashioned toilet with a pull-chain. All she remembers is that she defecated successfully and was quite happy about the whole thing.

The following morning, Mary told the story to Arthur, who repeated it to Nancy that evening. That night, both girls dreamed. Nancy dreamed that she was riding in the front seat of an automobile driven by an older woman. Her part of the seat seemed to be a toilet seat; her clothes were arranged for defecation, so she defecated in it. Then she found she couldn't flush it. She appealed to the older woman who seemed somewhat surprised and remarked that she thought the people who owned the car probably wouldn't like it, but not to mind, they'd stop somewhere and wrap it up in something and throw it away. Nancy had no toilet paper but didn't care in the least.

That same night, Mary dreamed. Mary dreamed that she was on a toilet seat in the bathroom of a private home which had two seats in it. She noticed that there was no toilet paper near the toilet on which she sat, that the only paper in the room was on the wall above the other toilet which was on a wall at right angles to hers and that she could not reach it. She defecated anyway, however, and was not at all bothered by the fact that she could not reach the paper. Then she thought: "Why, this toilet must be out of order and can't be flushed; that's probably why the paper is over the other one." But she was not disturbed about it at all.

The writer does not think that by any possible chain of reasoning, this dream and Nancy's two, that of the preceding night and that of the same night, can be attributed to coincidence. There was no apparent incentive for Nancy's first toilet dream, and the writer suggests, for a reason which will appear, that the suggestion came from Mary's mind and was inspired by the story Mary had just heard and which Nancy had not yet heard; but that the dream suggested was dreamed by Nancy instead of Mary because it served Nancy's analytic purposes. That Mary determined the circumstances of the dream seems indicated by the pull-chain toilet. Nancy was obviously dreaming of her childhood, as the old-fashioned toilet indicates. But she does not recall ever having lived in a house with a pull-chain toilet; Mary spent her childhood in such a house and recalls it vividly. Nancy was obviously sitting on Mary's toilet.

The joint dream of the following night may be interpreted as Nancy's, picked up telepathically by Mary. Admitting the common determinant in the grocery store story, it is far too much to expect of coincidence that the dreams should have four elements in common: Both girls defecated in the wrong place; neither could flush the toilet; neither had paper; neither was in the least concerned about it.

That Nancy instigated the dream seems clear from the fact that the punishing mother-figure of her toilet-training days was changed in her dream to a permissive mother-figure who made light of her misdemeanor—a necessary step in the analysis, for unconscious fear of the mother was a factor which it was important to bring to light and dissipate. Furthermore, Nancy's automobile is itself symbolic of progress.

That, in Mary's dream, Mary was Nancy is evident. They had identified in dreams before; and there is other evidence in addition to the four common dream elements. Nancy is fond of Mary and has joked to her to the effect that she would like to have polygamy legalized and add Mary to the family, after which, for reasons of no importance in determining the telepathic dream features, she remarked that there would have to be two seats in the bathroom. Mary was obviously Nancy, defecating in Nancy's remodeled bathroom with its two seats. But she was also Mary herself; she was defecating in a toilet which would not work because polygamous marriage in Nancy's two-toilet house would not work and was an idea never to be taken seriously. The writer interprets the toilet over which the paper hung as Nancy's—the only one which would work. The fact that the toilet which apparently would work was against the wall at right angles to Mary's is also suggestive. The two-toilet idea was not the "right angle" for her; and the dream thus served a purpose, though a less important one than it did for Nancy, in pointing this out to her. There is an interesting determinant for Mary's share of the dream, which may have made her unusually receptive to the telepathic influence. She had had dinner the evening before in a restaurant in which one of the toilets in the women's room was out of order and could not be flushed.

As in the case of the skiing dream, this joint dream was brought to light by accident. Arthur said to Mary in the office: "Listen to what your story did to Nancy last night," and reported Nancy's dream. Mary gasped and said, "Why I dreamed the same thing." She had attached no importance whatever to her dream, had not meant to mention it and had not tried to interpret it.

The writer is reporting the fourth dream with some embarrassment for it involved him in a horrifying nightmare, his first in years; and he feels that a well-balanced analyst should not have nightmares. It was initiated by two short dreams by Nancy on a single night and was picked up by the analyst the following night, after she had reported it in a letter to him but before he had received the letter. It seems probable that Arthur—although he has no recollection of having dreamed on either night—also had some active participation in it, for the writer had once told Arthur, while Arthur was still having terrifying nightmares, that the analyst would enjoy a good nightmare. The writer had completely forgotten this remark; but Arthur's note, "You asked for it," and his unrestrained glee at the writer's terror in the dream suggests that he had something to do with the unusually terrifying affect.

Nancy's first dream was that a neighbor's house was on fire. By association of last names, she realized in the dream that the house was Mary. A huge column of smoke was rising from the middle. Arthur, dressed in a fireman's raincoat and carrying a long hose, ran up to the house and stood looking at the smoke. He evidently decided that everything was under control and went away again. Nancy thought in the dream, "Aha, he's wrong about that; he'll have to come back." She had no affect whatever about the fire or the fireman incident and would not have been disturbed if the fireman had come back.

In her second dream of the same night, Nancy was listening to Liszt's Second Hungarian Rhapsody. She thought that she had always been fond of it and that this time it sounded particularly beautiful. But she knew in the dream as well that the music was not Liszt but was Sir Arthur Sullivan's The Lost Chord.

The first dream reflected Nancy's very real concern about Mary, who has not been able to accept the partial solution made by increasing numbers of girls of her age for their sex problems. The second, of course, was a plain manifestation of transference; together with what the analyst interprets as a declaration that she had at last lost her hampering umbilical cord.

The analyst's nightmare took place the following night without his conscious knowledge of Nancy's dreams. The writer reported it and interpreted it to her by letter substantially as follows:

"I had a bad nightmare last night, and it seems to be your doing. I dreamed that there were, perhaps, two women in my apartment. The door suddenly opened. In the corridor was something like steam rising in patches from the floor. Then a man rushed by and said, 'Jump!' Though he did not say it, I understood the hotel was on fire and everybody was jumping out of the windows. The firemen were below holding canvases. But I did not want to understand. I was asking questions to which there were no answers. There was an urgency about jumping. I woke up with a thumping heart.

"The first thing that occurred to me was that I had had an earache for the last few days which, according to the doctor, was due to a slight inflammation of the middle ear. This morning I woke up with a good deal of pain in the ear, which may have been a continuation of the dream: fire, inflammation. That is, the somatic antecedent and sequel.

"Fire is not my type of nightmare. Nor is jumping out of the window. I was suspicious. 'Is this the dream of a patient? Will I have somebody this morning bring me a dream of a house on fire?' I had two patients in the last few days with dreams of fire. The first one—who I thought might bring me a fire dream this morning, and who started the fire dreams—is called Anna. That sounds very similar to Ann. [The reference here is to Mary's older sister, with whom the analyst is also acquainted, and who had been mentioned several times in recent correspondence.] I recalled that I knew an Anna in early youth. (I am not sure now that her name was Anna, but that was my first impression.) This Anna lived in a Hungarian town called Kassa. Kassa was mentioned to me last night and I tried to recall whom I had known there. I thought of this girl but could not remember her name. That would be sufficient reason for creating a telepathic receptivity for Ann. But now I recall also that the reason I am not sure that the girl of Kassa was called Anna is because there was another Anna in Budapest, Anna Ince. I liked that girl, and Inci happens to be a childhood pet name of my wife.

"Here is where your nefarious telepathic influence begins. Anna had a lover called Herman. Doesn't Arthur's middle initial stand for Herman? Now look at your dream. Smoke rising! In my dream, I have steam rising. Your neighbor's house is on fire. So is my hotel. The house ties up with Mary. You made the association through her and your neighbor's last names. Mary's last name means something to me. I don't know what. I suspect it is a name I know from the books of the greatest Hungarian romantic novelist, Maurus Jokay, on whose books we grew up as children. Also, if you drop a syllable at the beginning, her last name is a Hungarian word which is a term of the tenderest endearment. You had the fireman. I had firemen below but no hose. You were not afraid of the fire. You could afford it because I got your fear. I was badly frightened. Displacement of affect by way of telepathy. Then you had the radio and Liszt as a reference to me. It may interest you to know that I was sitting at the same table last night with a man called Liszt, a Viennese who came to visit my lodge. So we got the Liszt twice in common. Perhaps the second Hungarian rhapsody refers to that, also the harmonious echo.

"So now, why did you set my house on fire? You say, 'It was quite all right with me if the fireman came back and used his hose.' Was that because you had your own way of getting even? Were the two women in my apartment you and Ann or you and Mary or all three? Oddly, there was something important in the conversation, but the shock of the fire made me forget it. Also, my feeling was that the jump was to be done from a great height, much higher than the seventh floor on which I live.

"You figure out the rest. Arthur will be tickled to death that he got me involved in this dream chain. Tell him to stop grinning. Let him do the jumping. I would rather have a shot at the hose."

To the writer's surprise, both Arthur and Nancy replied with the interpretation of "jump" in double meaning. They both agreed that the feminine figures in the dream were Nancy and Mary and that the order to jump was an order to "jump" the women as well as an order to jump from a great height, the former representing a great fall for a psychoanalyst with women patients. The writer had never heard the phrase "jump a woman" but agrees that his patient's interpretation of his own dream might reveal his own repressed desires to take advantage of the transference situation. Nancy inquired if the writer still had a secretary or nurse in his office; the writer's reply was no, but that on the day she wrote the letter about the fire and Liszt dreams, he had complained that he needed a larger office with room for a secretary—a further apparent determinant. In view of Arthur's unusual enjoyment of this dream, the writer interprets the male figure in his own dream, who ordered him to jump, as Arthur. He finds another possibility of Arthur's unconscious participation in the fact that Arthur has an unusually clear mental image of Nancy's dream—although it does not coincide with Nancy's—and that he would definitely have ulterior motivation in ordering the jumping of the women if he himself were identifying with the analyst.

The final dream of the series is one for which the dreamer himself has partial amnesia. Arthur dreamed—and remembers it perfectly—that he was an amputee with whom experimentation was being carried on. At one point, he had parts of arms and legs; at another, he was little more than a trunk; but he was proud of the way he was getting along with this, that and the other part gone; he said mildly, and had his way, that he did not intend to submit, however, to amputation just below his chest, for he didn't want to lose his penis which, although it was not in a state of erection, Nancy and Mary were both admiring. He thought during the dream that he was certainly undergoing all the varieties of castration; but there was no threat of genital castration in the Freudian sense; the suggestion to amputate just below the chest was merely a suggestion, not a threat. And the dream was accompanied by no affect whatever.

The part of the dream for which he has complete amnesia was reported to him by Nancy the following morning. He sat on the edge of the bed, sound asleep, but preparatory to a trip to the bathroom. Nancy asked, "What are you doing?" He replied, "Looking for my napkin, Mary put it underneath somewhere." Nancy forgot the incident itself until something reminded her of it at breakfast. Arthur said immediately and in some wonder, "I must have been looking for my sanitary napkin; I don't understand it."

The dream and its symbolism made so little sense to Arthur that he suspected at once that he could not have instigated it. It had been months since he had been dreaming castration dreams. His former castration dreams had been accompanied by an affect of great terror. This castration dream had no affect whatever. When the dream also proved to make no sense to Nancy and Mary, Arthur reported it to the analyst, to whom it did prove to make sense.

The writer had received word in the same mail with the letter reporting the dream that his paper on birth and castration had just been sent to the printer with the title amended at the author's suggestion to "Varieties of Castration" which was a phrase in Arthur's dream. In psychical research the term "monition of approach" is used to describe such phenomena as thinking of a far-away person and seeing him turning in around the bend of the street, or dreaming of an unusual letter and receiving it in the following morning's mail. As the writer had playfully threatened to give Arthur hell if he ever sneaked in again on his dreams, it may be that the writer's own monition of approach was intercepted by Arthur and, owing to the threatened punishment, was clothed into a dream of amputation. This possibility is strengthened by the fact that Arthur and the writer had been in correspondence concerning the advisability and possibility of publishing the first four telepathic dreams, and the author had just received the approval of Arthur, Nancy and Mary for an attempt to do so.

The writer interprets the napkin not as a sanitary napkin but as a diaper and considers the apparent identification with a feminine figure a re-determination of the castration theme. The man who uses a sanitary napkin is a woman, and he is a woman because he has been castrated. Arthur accepts the interpretation on the basis of the fact that he had been cut down to the size of a baby in the part of the dream he remembered, adding that the analyst had taken him back to extreme infancy in the course of his analysis. In looking for his sanitary napkin, he was not a feminine figure but a baby on whom Mary, as a beautiful and desirable mother-figure, had put a diaper "somewhere underneath." That the incident was connected with a bathroom visit for urination or defecation also supports the latter conjecture.

The dreams discussed are by no means the whole of the series which is still continuing with more and more joint dreams uncovered because the participants are now aware of the mechanism and are looking for them. Detailed analyses of them would add little to this paper that has not already been said and would make it unwieldy.

It might be mentioned, however, that Nancy and Arthur dreamed jointly of visiting barrooms operated by two women. In another instance, employing the mechanism of dreams five and six, Nancy dreamed that she was in need of a permanent and planned to go to a department store—which was contrary to her custom—to get one. She did not know until the following morning that Mary had gone to a department store for a permanent the preceding evening.

Discussion

If the first or second of these apparently telepathic or paired dreams were to be considered alone, it would be difficult to dismiss the possibility of coincidence, since there was only one dream element in the manifest content which could be derived from any mind except the dreamer's. If they are considered together, however, it seems fantastic that one dreamer, Arthur, could, by coincidence, "share" a dream with two different persons and dream another, the fifth, which had meaning only for still another person.

The third of the shared dreams, that between the two girls, has, as has been noted, at least four elements in common. The fourth, that between Nancy and the analyst, has no less than eight: (1) fire, (2) the rising of smoke or steam without actual flames, (3) the presence of a fireman or firemen, (4) the apparent presence of the same two female figures—as dreamer and dream figure in Nancy's dream and as two dream figures in the analyst's, (5) the apparent presence of the same central male figure, (6) the significance of Mary's surname to both dreamers, (7) the identification of Mary by related names—in the analyst's dream by her sister's, in Nancy's by a similar last name, and (8) Liszt, through music in Nancy's dream and as a dream determinant for the analyst's.

The purpose of this presentation is, first, to demonstrate the reality of telepathic phenomena to understandibly skeptical readers, and, second, to discuss the conditions under which they may occur. If coincidence can be ruled out—and to the writer, it is unthinkable that coincidence could explain the 15 different elements shared by the dreamers in this series of five dream pairs—the alternatives are to concede the reality of the phenomena, however inexplicable, or consider all four dreamers either pathological liars or so pathologically suggestible that they joined in imagining dreams which had never occurred. The writer suggests that acceptance of the phenomena, with an attempt to understand the conditions of their occurrence, is the reasonable course.

The writer wishes to place emphasis on the fact that the telepathic phenomena reported here came to light by a series of accidents; the first was the experimental attempt to conclude two analyses by correspondence, then came the consequent involvement of the four principals in this dream series in active discussion of their dreams, and finally came the chance discovery that pairs of the dreamers proved to have dreams with common elements.

It may be supposed, if one assumes that telepathy occurs only on the unconscious level, that it is not an unusual phenomenon. Dream telepathy in particular would pass unrecognized because comparatively few persons understand dream mechanisms, and still fewer report their dreams and discuss them. If uninformed dreamers had reported either the first or second of the paired dreams noted in this paper, they would have dismissed them with, "What an interesting coincidence," and forgotten the whole matter. The recognition that a dream has a purpose and some ability to detect the purpose would be essential to the recognition of telepathic dreaming.

A further reason for failure to recognize telepathic dreams may be that to one of the dreamers the telepathic dream seems unimportant. This held true for the five pairs in this series. The first and third, coming to light by accident; meant virtually nothing to the recipient and in the ordinary course of life never would have been mentioned. The second and fifth were disclosed because the dream material seemed so irrelevant to the dreamer that it aroused his curiosity. The fourth seemed so unimportant to the agent that it never would have been reported except in analysis. In all five dreams, either the affect, the symbolism or the content meant something to one of the pair concerned, less or nothing to the other.

If this supposition is correct, investigation of the seemingly affectless or meaningless dream in relation to persons with whom the dreamer has close emotional ties might reveal much dreaming of this sort. It might be a fruitful field for research.

Five pairs of dreams are a small series from which to draw broad conclusions. Some speculation, however, appears to be in order. Like Freud's material, the material presented here is all from the unconscious and can be interpreted only in terms of the unconscious. Like Freud's material—with the exception of his fortune-teller, whom one may assume to have been of abnormal personality make-up—it is derived from a group knit very closely by ties of mutual trust and affection.

Speculation as to the mechanism of telepathy seems futile at this point. Whatever it is, it does not appear subject to conscious control. Whatever it is also appears to operate independently of time and space. In two of the dreams here reported, agent and recipient were miles apart; in two others, the distance was hundreds of miles; and in one of these, there was a lapse of 24 hours between the agent's dream and the recipient's.

The purpose of the dreams in this series seems obvious, the achievement by the agent of emotional contact with a recipient for whom there is affection or with whom there is identification. But it should be noted that the unconscious contacts may not be recognizable to the recipient or serve any purpose for the recipient. In only one of the dreams, the first, did the recipient know about whom he was dreaming; and he did not recognize the source of the dream, discovering it only by accident. In the fourth pair of dreams, the affect of the analyst's nightmare could not have been desired by the agent. There was a slight negative transference at the beginning of analysis, but it disappeared long before the telepathic dream series, at which time a very strong positive transference existed. The affect could have been desired by the agent's husband, a reaction again emanating not from a negative transference but from resentment during the period when the analyst was urging Arthur to endure his terrifying nightmares and saying by way of encouragement that the analyst would like to have one himself.

According to present analytic assumptions (Hollós, Servadio, the author), the essential fact about telepathy is the demonstration of the return of the repressed through another person attached to the dreamer by strong emotional bonds. Contrary to his previous assumption, the writer now suspects that this is only a functional aspect of telepathy and that it might be nearer to the truth to postulate telepathy as a cognitive faculty of the unconscious, shared by humans and animals alike; that besides the pressure of the repressed, the need for companionship, for sharing warmth and affection, as well as the need of protection and reassurance as in the case of fear and anxiety, might be sufficient motives to set the telepathic mechanism going. To illustrate: The writer recently dreamed that a member of his fraternal order, with whom he has no particular ties, became his patient. Jokingly, he asked him the following night: "What is the matter with you, I dreamed that you became my patient?" The friend's remark was surprising: "My manager told me that his son needed psychoanalysis; I was thinking of you and told him I had someone for him." In this case, the telepathic "message" originated in a temporary appreciative concentration by the agent on the recipient, and the "message" must have been received during the day, emerging through the dream mind in the narcissistic regression of the sleep state. Similarly, in the first dream of the present series, the strong attraction the agent has for the recipient may be determinant enough; in the second, identification of husband and wife may account for the dual dreaming. In the third dream, if the story she had not yet heard accounted for Nancy's preparatory dreaming, one would assume identification mechanism also; for the actual dual dreaming, there was sufficient determinant for both girls in the toilet-paper story. The numerous determinants for the receptivity of the analyst for the fire dream were discussed in the report of the interpretation which he made for Nancy. For the fifth dream, identification of Arthur as recipient with the analyst as agent again seems to be the answer—the identification as a consequence of discussion of publishing the dream series.

The writer subscribes to Rosen's view, that "everybody's unconscious perfectly understands everybody else's unconscious." The writer would add to this observation his own view that telepathic dreams might be explicable on the theory that when persons are bound closely together emotionally, the tie of love opens one unconscious to another.

Since close emotional ties are a condition of the analytic relationship, this would seem to raise the question of whether telepathy may not be a universal but unrecognized and unconscious factor in analytic transference and counter-transference. However, variously one may phrase it, love and complete acceptance are the means by which the analyst cures his patients—or better, enables his patients to cure themselves. In analysis one extends love and acceptance to the patient by means of sympathetic interpretation of unconscious desires and unconscious mechanisms. If this series has demonstrated, as the writer believes, that telepathic dreams occur between persons close to each other emotionally, why should not unrecognized telepathy play its part in the emotional interchange between analyst and patient? Every analyst has made apparently "inspired" interpretations. It seems to the writer to be a question whether these could not be explained more readily as telepathic than inspirational.

Summary

1. The writer has presented a series of four paired dreams and a single fifth dream, all of which he interprets as telepathic. An impressive total of elements in common would seem to rule out coincidence.

2. The view is expressed that telepathy is a mechanism operating wholly or predominantly on the unconscious level, possibly due to a special cognitive faculty of the unconscious.

3. The suggestion is made that, since this dream series occurred among persons with strong emotional ties, such ties may be a prerequisite for telepathic dreaming, and that the investigation of dreams apparently meaningless to the dreamer in relation to the dreams of persons to whom he is emotionally bound might reveal that the phenomenon is widespread.

4. The question is raised of whether unrecognized telepathy does not play an important part in analytic transference.

THE POLTERGEIST---PSYCHOANALYZED

BY NANDOR FODOR, LL.D.

The Poltergeist is rather in vogue today. The term, obscure outside the field of occult inquiries until comparatively recent days, is now accepted by the general public as a mysterious "racketing" agency which, in some way, is connected with the unconscious of some one on the scene. There has been a recent popular mystery story, Who's Calling? by Helen McCloy and frequent references to Poltergeist phenomena in mystery hours over the radio. Little has been done, however, to determine whether medical or psychological therapy can effectively stop or "cure" disturbances of such a ghostly character.

It is worthy of the attention of neurologists that in the case of two soldiers in the Station Hospital, Guernsey,[1] Dr. Purdon made sphygmograph tracings of inexplicable knockings which were heard for 10 days, and concluded that they were due to nerve "explosions" related in some way to chorea. Under the administration of potassium iodide, sodium salicylate, and arsenic in full doses the men improved and the raps became less frequent. Purdon also observed that when the knocks were first heard, Private W. got an attack of "muscular rheumatism," and that he had suffered from a form of epilepsy up to five years before.

Chorea was also responsible for a similar attack in the family of E. Howard Grey, D. D. S.[1] The attack commenced during the cutting of his child's permanent teeth. Sometimes convulsions occurred at night. "We were usually well prepared for these nocturnal troubles by explosive and other auditory sounds, either on the wall, or as described by Drs. Drury and Purdon, as indeterminate or aerial. Sometimes a tinkling sound as of dropping water would be heard, but none was visible. My wife, a surgeon dentist in active practice for many years, who had also completed a medical curriculum at the University of Boston, and at a London school for women, assisted me in my endeavor to find out a natural cause for these sounds, but without results. She joins me in affirming that they occurred when the child was asleep, also in her absence, for instance when she was in bed upstairs we have heard them in a room below; sometimes her mother heard them sounding like little taps on a newspaper she might at the time be reading, and has drawn my attention to the same." (Pp. 120-121.)

It is from such beginnings that the full-blown Poltergeist trouble is born. The observation of the latter leaves no doubt whatever that an unconscious tempest is raging behind it. As far as I am aware, my own paper[2] is the only psychoanalytical contribution to Poltergeist literature. It may be, therefore, important to give a short summary of a second case with which I had the good fortune to deal, in which my efforts were directed entirely at laying the ghost by catharsis, and were crowned with signal success.

For readers in the field of psychotherapy and mental hygiene my background for the discussion of "psychical phenomena" should be given.

My work as a psychoanalyst was preceded by some years of "psychical" research. I was director of research of the International Institute for Psychical Research, London, from 1934 to 1938. I have investigated many instances of Poltergeist phenomena and can assure readers of the present paper that many of the manifestations are real. I consider them, however, to be manifestations of major mental disorder of schizophrenic, though temporary, character, not the product of anything supernatural. I became convinced that they could be understood only in the terms of the dynamic psychology which is based on the discoveries of Freud and I am interpreting the case reported here accordingly.

The story, as exciting as any on record, begins in a 300-year-old cottage in Chelsea, London. Prior to my appearance on the scene, loud knockings had been heard on the front door between 1 and 2 a. m. for the previous eight months. From the window of the front room on the ground floor, the door could be observed. Footsteps were heard to approach, then the knocker of the door "lifted itself" and the cottage resounded with bangs. Later the "invisible man" entered the house with a shuffling gait and made bottles of whiskey, tins of biscuits, coffee cups, saucers and plates of hot food disappear. One moment they were there; the next they were missing. Sometimes they came back, sometimes they did not. Doors opened by themselves, money disappeared from the money box; and keys wandered from drawers into keyholes.

Then Miss Whalen (pseudonym), the owner of the cottage went to the hospital for a thyroid operation. During her absence of six weeks, the house remained quiet. It was hoped that, with her successful operation, the disturbances would be ended. Such was not the case. The "rumpus" started again and this time it persisted during Miss Whalen's absence in Paris. Miss Jenkins (pseudonym), a journalist who lived in the house related that:

"I slept well until 5:30 a. m. and was awakened by what I thought to be a scratching upon the front room door. It sounded as though a tiger had got loose and was trying to get in. I had a dog and a cat in my room. The dog cowered in a chair shivering, and the cat ran around in panic, hurling itself against the window several times in an effort to get out, then running to the door and clawing it.

"I did not have enough nerve to open the door but I opened the window and the cat flew out into the street, only to return about mid-day. I was severely shaken and decided not to spend another night in the house. I explained matters to a man friend who readily consented to take my place and locked himself in with the animals. At 5:30 the following morning, the same thing happened on his door. He flung it open and the cat made a mad rush towards the front door. The dog remained in the chair, frightened. No one was in the passage.

"When Miss Whalen returned from Paris, I was reluctant to tell her about the latest manifestations. A day or so later she appeared very worried and told me that she heard a scratching noise outside her window all night and that she was afraid to look out."[3]

In ordinary circumstances, I would have interviewed Miss Jenkins' friend to check up on her story and would have made every effort to see the ghost in action. This case, however, demanded different treatment. I found Miss Whalen trembling from weakness. She could speak only with an effort; her cheeks were sunken, and her skin showed a sickly hue. Not investigation but therapy was her urgent need. It looked as if she would succumb to fright if the ghost could not be speedily laid.

I was convinced, on the basis of previous experiences, that the creepy atmosphere of an old house lends itself to an unconscious projection and dramatization of one's own conflicts into ghostly manifestations. I decided to ignore the dynamics of the reported happenings and informed Miss Whalen of my considered opinion that she was haunted by her own past; that while she had been successful in keeping some unhappy memories from entering into her consciousness, she had failed to keep them bottled up; that her libido had side-slipped and walked out on her as a ghost, wasting her vitality in a vain attempt to convey a message in the same way—as in other cases—a symptom would.

She asked me what I meant and I suggested that the knocks and footsteps symbolized the coming of the message, and that the disappearance of the objects indicated an invasion of her field of consciousness by some troublesome complex to which she must urgently attend. I ventured to add that she need not concern herself with the form of the phenomena because if she undertook, in cooperation with me, an exploration of her unconscious, the physical manifestations would be rendered unnecessary and would stop at short notice.

At this unexpected communication Miss Whalen's depression vanished as if by magic, her eyes lit up, the color came back to her face and she agreed that I must be right. Deeply within herself, she felt that in some way she was involved in the phenomena. She had feared that I would saddle her with a ghost. Now she felt free to tell me that when the knocks on the door became too loud she put out a sign: "Please ring the bell." And from then on, the ghost never knocked again.

I believe that this piece of magic worked as a post-hypnotic suggestion does. Her unconscious was unable to disobey a wish which through the written and then forgotten request was placed on the same level on which the ghostly manifestation originated. The sign over the door ended the knocking—and proved that the power of controlling the phenomena lay within Miss Whalen's mind.

Miss Whalen admitted the strength of my argument and with this admission a door slammed shut in her unconscious; and the ghostly happenings in the cottage came to a sudden end.

The reasons why her own "ghost" had "walked out on her" are of considerable interest:

After my first visit she dreamed that a dog was run over in her street, and she awaked in great distress. I made her recline on the couch, gave suggestions to relax and asked her to visualize the dog. It changed into a man who had charge of her previous dog which was also run over. Then the man changed into an earlier dog she owned, and this dog to a still earlier one. Finally, the dog became "John," the man who had jilted her six years before. Since then, she said, she had had no interest in life.

Obviously, the dog that was run over in her dream was Miss Whalen herself. Her ego was crushed by John; and this must have been an important factor in her prostration.

Four days later, another, more important factor emerged. She dreamed that she was a vulture or an eagle, flapping—greatly exhausted—between two smooth rocky walls which reached up to immense heights. There was water below and a speck of blue sky far above. There was no place to land and, the eagle had no legs. Her strength was failing and she felt that she could not hold out. Then the scene changed, and she was a fly crawling in despair inside a glass dome.

Miss Whalen had a vague idea that the Prometheus myth had something to do with rocks and an eagle. The sacred fire stolen by Prometheus often stands in dreams for guilt over begetting. It seemed that the vulture was Miss Whalen as the devouring mother, and that the fly indicated abortion-guilt in which she was helplessly enmeshed. The imprisoning dome was an excellent symbol of the womb; the rocky cleft, the water and the distant sky fitted into a uterine fantasy.

My deduction proved correct. Miss Whalen admitted that 18 years before, after six months of pregnancy, she had lost a child. She had been sterile and had suffered from constant nightmares ever since. Biologically, she was a complete failure, cut off from posterity. After she had lost "John," she felt cut off from her contemporaries as well. She went emotionally "dead." It was at this point that the mysterious disappearance of objects began.

This was an important revelation. A complete loss of interest in life might produce amnesia for everyday acts with the result that misplaced objects would seem to vanish or mysteriously reappear. But on this theory it should not have been difficult to find all the vanished objects—which was not the case. Many of them were never seen again and others vanished when Miss Whalen could not have absentmindedly handled them. Moreover, the footsteps, the knocks, the "tiger" and the odd behavior of the dog and of the cat also had to be explained. Something else had to be taken into account, probably her libido which was forced into abnormal channels by successive shocks.

The next dream enlarged on Miss Whalen's complete detachment from life from another angle. She dreamed of facing huge windows and of being unable to talk loudly enough. In the course of associations, the huge windows appeared to represent the infantile perspective. She felt small and lonely and recalled that in childhood she had felt rejected by the grown-ups—to which she reacted with stubbornness and a withdrawal into herself.

In other words, she had accepted herself as a social failure from early life. Motherhood might have remedied this situation. Miscarriage aggravated it. With subsequent sterility and the loss of her lover, she made herself into a living dead person, a kind of Zombie, a ghost. In which case, it behooved me to interpret the knocks and footsteps as alarm signals designed to wake herself up to the danger of a complete schizophrenic retreat. The phenomena observed around her fitted into the schizoid category even though their dynamics remained a mystery.

The trouble was that up to my arrival on the scene she had nothing to wake up to. Being "dead" she needed the affection of the living as a last tie binding her to life, and she had no one to love. The transference relationship in analysis seemed to answer her need, and it was the only "love situation" into which she could have entered at this stage.

Indeed, her love interest showed signs of reawakening as the analysis continued. I became disguised as Conrad Veight (whom she thought I slightly resembled) and I entered the marriage house where she had been kept secluded with other girls. Then, looking across a deep valley, she saw a beautiful house on the opposite side of a hill and started out on foot toward it. This house was a vision of her new personality, within sight and reach. Behind two lighted windows the shadow of a butler appeared waiting for his mistress. The journey was long and fatiguing, but help came in the form of a train issuing from a tunnel (a symbol of unconscious progression), and she boarded it at a small junction station (hinting at unification), going toward Brighton—which is an excellent phonetic equivalent of a brightened prospect. Then she was coming back to England (becoming herself) and her hands were full of parcels (her troubles) and she also had her cat and dog (domestic situation). She dropped some of the parcels and Conrad Veight picked them up and carried them. Then she was told that Conrad Veight and Tom (the father of the miscarried child) had a terrific row—by which she indicated the breaking up of her old emotional ties.

In another dream she appeared to be releasing herself from her miscarriage guilt and attacked the problem of her sterility. A slight girl, nine to 10 months pregnant, was coming up from a basement (the past) and accused her of being the father of her child. She felt that the accusation might have some basis but when she heard the number of months of her pregnancy, she realized that she had not known this girl so long; so she shrugged her shoulders and walked away.

This dream used a number of opposites. Being the father of the child is one; the slightness of the pregnant girl another (Miss Whalen was obese); and overcarrying (instead of premature birth) was the third. The main point is that she was emerging from the past and that she refused to accept responsibility for the pregnancy that had happened so long ago, yet indicated her ability to conceive by accepting the girl's accusation at the start.

Presently, she became more explicit. She dreamed of being called a doctor (a recognition that the patient in analysis is her own doctor) and of descending into an underground, film-cutting room where she found the door ill-fitting, the instruments blunt and that there was no film. As she was earning her living in the film industry, it was natural for Miss Whalen to use a film as a symbol of her own life. This film was cut by her analyst, and it was such a job that it wore out the tools. The ill-fitting door admitted the light of understanding into her unconscious.

Then she found herself in the open, dodging pools of water on the ground. A pushcart man offered her fruit in two paper bags, and she was pleased.

So the storm had passed and she was in the open, free. The fruit and the paper bags (symbolic of the scrotum) hinted at the return of her fertility.

Subsequent dreams conveyed the same message. But when a ghost appeared in the window of her sitting room ready to fade into her, she was irritated and turned her back to it. For some reason, she was not yet ready to assimilate it. She had to have a bad nightmare and go through a terrible mental ordeal before she could.

She dreamed of dead houses and dead streets. In a charnel house she saw a headless man in a coffin. She had to operate on the body, build something from it. A shadowy woman, not of this world, explained to her what she should do, then left her. She needed colored silk ribbons, but did not get them.

The dream left her with a feeling of frustration and irritation. She dreaded the coming of the next night and could not go to sleep. The footsteps and the knocks returned, but she did not mind this so much. A battle seemed to be going on in her mind and the tension was so great that her brain threatened to snap. She felt that if she gave in she would die, and pitted every ounce of her mental strength against the unconscious drive. She won, and, toward morning, fell into an exhausted sleep. She woke up feeling depleted but with a sense of victory.

In the kitchen four of her missing cups were found in their usual places on the hooks.

I asked her why she did not get in touch with me after the nightmare of the headless corpse. She answered that this was a battle which she felt she must fight alone. If she lost her head in fighting it should be like the man in the coffin. The woman not of this world was her spiritual self. She had to weave a pattern from the material of the dead past by her own unaided efforts. She accepted the task and the following night the last battle between the forces of darkness and light ensued. Her victory manifested itself in the sudden return of her sense of intuition which had been in complete abeyance since her thyroid operation.

What was the meaning of the vanishing and reappearing cups? I am inclined to think of them as symbolic of the cup of sorrows which Miss Whalen had now succeeded in emptying. Four is the number of the square and of squaring. As such, it is a constructive, integrative number. Indeed, the sudden re-appearance of the cups was the last sign of magic in Miss Whalen's cottage.
