PROGRESS OF THE WAR

The past week has witnessed some of the most important events of the war so far, both on land and at sea, events that are more decisive in their way than any that have preceded them.

In the western theatre of the war, fro Alsace to the sea, the advantage has been to the Allies, who have advanced their line at several points. It is gratifying to have participated brilliantly in the fighting and have contributed materially to the advances made. At no point have the Germans succeeded in making and maintaining any advance; and the most that can be placed to their credit is the retaking of some ground at one point which the Allies had taken from them the day before. With all their tremendous efforts, the Germans have found it impossible to break through the impregnable line of the Allies; and it appears to competent military critics that General Joffre has the situation so well in hand that, at the fitting moment, he can advance his forces in irresistible power against the enemy. While in the west trench-fighting and artillery duels have been the principa modes of conflict, in the east desperate battles have been fought, fearful carnage has taken place, and many prisoners o war captured. In almost all the engagements victory has rested with the Russians. It is true that the German bombardment of Ossowetz has permitted an advance on that fortified town; but the town itself is still held by the Russians. A further attempt by the Germans to reach Warsaw, this time from the south, is de- Town Council was held in the Town Hall veloping; but it is evident the Russians on Tuesday evening, 2nd instant. are prepared to meet and defeat it.
