PARIS, Sept. 17, 5:20 p.m.—The Germans are slowly giving way in the great battle that continues to-day all along the line of the River Aisne, according to official announcement made in Paris this afternoon.

HEAVY RAIN IS FALLING

Germans are Handicapped by Severe Wet Weather.

Report From Paris on Late Developments of War.

[By Special Wire to the Courier]

PARIS Sept. 17.—The rear guard action, supposed at first to be intended as a check to pursuit and to facilitate the retreat of the mass of the armies of the Generals Von Kluck and Von Buelow, has developed into what will probably be called in history the Battle of Aisne. Whether the Germans found it necessary, or advisable to turn and engage in a general action, this great battle wages fiercely and rivals in importance the Battle of the Marne.

The war office says that the French have not fired at any point. This is so, as if they were on the defensive and this might be a tactical move to draw the strength of the position the Germans occupy. The official communication Sunday said that the British army had crossed the Aisne. It is so they have the river at their back while the Germans are strongly entrenched on the heights of Laon and Rheims with their right protected by the Oise and the Aisne at Noyon.

The undetermined element in this fight is the allies right which is in pursuit of the crown prince's army. All reports indicate that the latter is quite as demoralized as was Von Kluck's army and is suffering equally from lack of provisions and ammunition. While Von Kluck has no doubt received what he needs in this respect it is doubtful if the crown prince has.

The issue of the battle may depend upon what condition the crown prince reaches the front and whether he can make a stand and prevent the allies from turning the German left.

Some of the military experts still think that the Germans hope by this action only to check the onrush of the allies and that later they will take up the defensive on the Namur line, there was credit even for a rumor current yesterday that Emperor William had ordered General Von Kluck not to resist in France, and that he was ready to listen to offers of peace through Pope Benedict XV. or President Wilson, but the steady stream of wounded coming from the front seems to disprove this and indicates that the battle will be to a finish.

There is still no confirmation of the report that the Indian cavalry have landed in France, and are ready for action.

Paris is filled with rumors of the imminent co-operation of these troops as well as of the Russians, but the reports are without definite foundation.

In despatch reporting the rout of 3,000 German cavalry between Hoeglède and Poperinghe, Belgium, the name of the cavalry forces operating against them is censured. This combat was violent and many autos with quick-firers, and much ammunition and

90 MILES OF BATTLE RAGING

British Make Great Attack Across the River Aisne.

Progress of Fighting Recorded in a Late Despatch.

[By Special Wire to the Courier]

LONDON, Sept. 17, 10.15 a.m.—Along a 90 mile front the German armies are at bay and the allies are occupying a ledge across the River Aisne, which was won after one of the most spectacular and thrilling river crossings ever made by an attacking force under fire.

For the past two days there have been sporadic attacks from both sides along this line, but according to admissions from the rival headquarters they have not produced any definite results. Both sides have suffered enormously during the past week and the present pause undoubtedly is being used to bring up reinforcements and supplies. Petrograd reports that the flower of the German corps detached for service in East Prussia are again hurrying back to the western front, and Stockholm learns that General Von Hindenburg flushed with victory against the Russians on the East Prussian frontier, has been urgently summoned to command the western army.

Something of the horrors of modern warfare is indicated by the hesitancy with which the allies discuss the terrible losses marking the progress of the armies from the Marne to the Aisne. The stories are told with great restraint but with enough gruesome details given to make even military men shudder.

The terribly battered second Austrian army is safe around the guns of Przemysl, but with the separate efforts will likely be made to form a junction with the fourth Austrian army with the idea of reorganizing with Cracow as the main base. The Russians have crossed the River San and are hammering away at the retreating Austrian-German forces. Despite their unprecedented losses the German retain their fighting organization and if they gain Cracow they may prevent the Russian right from making a march on Berlin from Warsaw.

The Petrograd military critics express the belief that the Germans having recognized the strategic unimportance of East Prussian operations, will detach their army from that region and begin a march on Warsaw, thus forestalling a Russian offensive movement on Berlin from that direction.

The position at Grodek, 16 miles west of Lemberg, occupied by the Russians, is of great natural strength, provides an ideal operating base, and in case of counter attack can be easily defended.

The Servian and Montenegrins, continuing their campaign in Bosnia and Herzegovina, are well within these provinces and are optimistically planning a march on Budapest.

MADE BIG BLUNDER IN WITHDRAWING HER MEN TO PRUSSIA

[By Special Wire to the Courier]

LONDON, Sept. 17.—g a. m.—A Petrograd special despatch to The Times says: "According to the latest information available here, the Germans, realizing the futility of the withdrawal of eight army corps from their western front, are returning their first line of troops from East Prussia westward.

Military writers here are still puzzling over the problem why Germany should have made the blunder of sending such an enormous army to East Prussia, where it is bound to remain either inactive or make an attempt to invade Russia with the almost complete certainty of sharing the fate of the Austrian forces in Galicia.

The real object seems to be when half the population of East Prussia stampeded before General Rennenkampf, carrying the panic to Berlin, Germany felt compelled to tranquilize the population by sending a great army to the area occupied by the Russians."

BRITISH GENERALS PRAISED FOR HEROIC FIGHTING.

All England was electrified by the report of Sir John French, commander of the British expeditionary army, in which, after detailing the thrilling retreat of his forces, always outnumbered four to one, from the battle field of Mons on August 24, to the lines Noyon-Chauny-La Fere on August 28, fighting every inch of the way, he tells how, when the divisions commanded by General Sir Horace Smith-Dorrien and Sir Douglas Haig were faced by serious loss in the divisions commanded by General Sir Horace Smith-Dorrien and Sir Douglas Haig, to go to his assistance. General Sordet promised to ask the sanction of General Joffre, but said his horses were too tired to move before the next day. General Sordet, however, General French says, intimated valuable assistance. The text of the report of Field Marshal French is addressed to Lord Kitchener, the Secretary for War, and its publication indicates that the government is responding to the public demand for fuller information on the progress of operations, so far as the British forces are concerned, in France.

KRON PRINZ WAS SUNK, REPORTS PILOT AT NEW YORK BUT DETAILS ARE LACKING

[By Special Wire to the Courier]

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—The North German Lloyd liner Kron Prinz Wilhelm has been sunk at sea by the British cruiser Lancaster now off the Ambrose channel. The Kron Prinz Wilhelm was not seen until she was reported as arriving at New York.

The story of her being sunk was brought to quarantine by Pilot McCarthy aboard the Norwegian freight steamer Hermod, which reached this port to-day from Iceland. McCarthy and Nichols are stationed aboard the Pilot Boat Privateer in the Ambrose channel. According to McCarthy the Lancaster signalled yesterday afternoon for a pilot. Nichols answered the signal and went aboard. The Lancaster's officers wanted the latest newspapers and these were given them by Nichols. Nichols remained aboard a few minutes chatting with the officers and they told him what he afterwards related to McCarthy, that the Lancaster had sunk the Kron Prinz Wilhelm. Fearing that they might believe him too inquisitive, Nichols did not ask when or where the wreck had been sunk and this information was not volunteered. Upon returning to his station, Nichols related the alleged conversation to McCarthy. Both Nichols and McCarthy have long been stationed aboard pilot boats in the channel. Upon reaching quarantine McCarthy left the Hermod and before returning, however, he said that the British cruisers Suffolk and Essex were with the Lancaster about one mile off Ambrose channel and that all three warships apparently were watching closely every outbound vessel.

World Watching Clash on River Aisne--Reports are of Conflicting Nature

[By Special Wire to the Courier]

LONDON, Sept. 17, 1.30 p.m.—The world at large has once more been set the task of guessing how the terrific clash of arms on the heights northward of the River Aisne is progressing.

Berlin claims that the attacks of the allies have been repulsed and that the German counter-attacks have succeeded while it is asserted officially in London that the German counter attacks have been repulsed and that the invaders are slowly giving away. Symptomatic of the conflicting statements which can be reconciled only on the assumption that the narrators are referring to different points on the vast field of action.

As the crow flies the front of the opposing armies, which with the heavy reinforcements that have reached them still probably total in the neighborhood of 3,000,000 men stretches for 110 miles. Making allowances for the deviation north to Laon, the line must be quite 150 miles long, so there is ample room for successes on one part of the field and reverse elsewhere. The Germans are in their selected positions with strong reinforcements rushing up from Lorraine; consequently this great battle may yet prove to be the most decisive and momentous of the war. The British and the French armies seem to be attempting to repeat on the Aisne, the turning movements carried out so successfully on the Marne and in the present case they have the additional incentive of knowing that should the German right be again turned there are no great defensive positions behind the invaders until they reach the River Meuse.

The position of the army of the German Crown Prince making its way toward the Stenay Gap, remains full of interest. The French army which barred the exit of the Crown Prince my Toul is still hurrying in pursuit of him. There is no confirmation of the reported German abandonment of Liege, but it would not be surprising in the opinion of observers in London to see the Germans quit Belgium altogether if there is any truth in the report from the eastern arena of the war, which has become the decisive position in German eyes, and that Germany will become content, for the present, to maintain a defensive attitude in the west.

Italian and Roumanian activities seem to-day to point to decisive action in the near future. Should these countries take the field against Austria-Hungary, it is argued here that Russia would have her hands freed and that Germany would be thrown entirely on her own resources to repel the Moscovite hosts thus strongly reinforced. Italy seems to have called her reservists to the colors and to be apparently on the point of occupying Avlona in order to safeguard her interests in the Adriatic.

WAR SUMMARY

[By Special Wire to the Courier]

The third day of the battle of the Aisne finds the hosts of the Germans and the allies facing each other along a line of some 90 miles, stretching from Noyon, 55 miles northeast of Paris, southeast to the Swiss frontier.

The battle line proper extends roughly from Noyon to Nancy, a distance of about 150 miles.

Here between 2,000,000 and 3,000,000 men are engaged in a struggle that in ferocity and strategic importance bids fair to rival the battle of the Marne.

Each side claims a slight advantage and no more. It is only known that the German retreat has been turned into a stubborn resistance. The allies assert that they were so close on the heels of the Germans that the latter were compelled to turn about and fight to prevent their destruction. German reports represent their armies as re-forming in strong positions, following the withdrawal from the vicinity of Paris and again taking the offensive.

Thus far death is the only decided victor. It is admitted that its toll already is enormous—so staggering that official sources hesitate to reveal the facts. Rain continues falling on the battlefield and has rendered parts of it impassable for guns and cavalry, while adding greatly to the distress of the men.

This afternoon's official announcement at Paris says that a great battle continues all along the River Aisne and that the Germans are slowly giving way.

Conflicting reports of the situation in the eastern theatre of the war are received from official and unofficial sources. The several German army corps sent into East Prussia appear to have pushed back the Russian invaders of that territory with great loss to the Russians. It is thought that a part of the German force may be diverted to Russian Poland.

In Galicia the Russian successes seem to be continued with the Austrians and Germans falling back on Przemysl. Enormous losses to the Austrians are admitted at Vienna to which city thousands of wounded are being brought.

The latest official announcement at Nish claims less for the Servian arms than have earlier statements, indicating that Austria still has considerable forces available to oppose the Servian invasion. The Servians, however, with the aid of their Montenegrin allies, appear to be more than holding their own.

The most recent word from the far east describes the Japanese troops as struggling through the flooded districts south of Shantung peninsula, trying to reach Kiaochow. There is no indication of an early investment of that German stronghold.

The Turkish army is reported from Petrograd to be concentrating on the Bulgarian frontier.

The final attitude of Italy is awaited with intense interest. Demonstrations in favor of the allies at Rome and other places have been suppressed by the military. Meanwhile Italy is engaged with the serious situation in Albania, where the insurgents have been threatening since the withdrawal of Prince William of Wied. Italian troops already have been landed at Avlona.

RUSSIA WINNING IN EVERY SPHERE OF IMMENSE CONFLICT

Despatches Indicate That First Chapter of War in the East is Over--Russians Have the Advantage of Fortified Positions

[By Special Wire to the Courier]

LONDON, Sept. 17.—8.45 a. m.—A despatch from Petrograd to the Reuter's Telegram Company gives this outline of the situation in Galicia.

"The position of Grodek, occupied by the Russians, is eighteen miles west of Lemberg, and is situated on the heights under which a chain of six almost continuous ridges stretch out towards the Russian frontier, forming a natural defence for 14 miles running north and south. The Austrians abandoned this position after the capture of Lemberg.

"Moscoska, to which the Russians have advanced, is a little over 40 miles west of Lemberg, on the main line between Przemysl and Lemberg. The shattered second Austrian army was evidently incapable of staying the Russian advance, and took refuge in Przemysl, from which the Russians are according to the latest official report, are only 19 miles away.

"The greatest enthusiasm continues to prevail throughout Russia, and all classes are doing their utmost to help in the present emergency. At Moscow, the Barbers' Guild have offered to shave and cut the hair of soldiers free of charge, while at Vilna, fifteen cab drivers have offered their services for the transportation of the wounded.

KILLED OWN MEN IN FIGHTING AT NIGHT, A GERMAN MISTAKE

[By Special Wire to the Courier]

LONDON, Sept. 17.—In a despatch from Paris, the correspondent of the Reuter Telegram Company, says a Saxon officer, now a prisoner at Troyes, France admits that the Germans made serious mistakes during the fighting at night which they have indulged in since the beginning of the war.

Near Malines, this officer says, a detachment of German artillery annihilated a Prussian regiment under the impression that it was engaging French infantry. Near a frontier village two battalions of the German infantry, mistaking one another for French troops, shot each other down to the last man.

Continuing, the correspondent says that Gaston Doumergue, the French minister of the colonies, is going to the department of the Marne to inquire into the situation of the local populace and organize relief measures.

PILED UP THE DEAD AS A BARRICADE TO RENEWED ATTACK

[By Special Wire to the Courier]

LONDON, Sept. 17.—The correspondent of The Times at Paris sends this story of the fighting on the River Aisne:

"The enemy has found means to arrest his retreat for the time being and is offering a stubborn resistance on the line which he has prepared strongly for defence. He has received considerable reinforcements, probably from Lorraine, where he seems to have abandoned the offensive.

"The fighting is hottest around Soissons where the British army is in action.

"Terrible stories are reaching Paris of piles of dead and wounded which encumber the battlefield of the Marne, and the Red Cross is working night and day. At one place, it is said, the Germans erected a barrier, six feet high of corpses behind which to resist the French. The barrier was carried after a terrible struggle by the French troops, leaving 7,500 dead on the battlefield."

FAREWELL TO REV. C. W. ROSE LAST EVENING

Many Kind Things Were Said and Occasion Proved Very Pleasant One.

The Park Baptist Church school-room presented a brilliant spectacle last night when Baptists in their hundreds, gathered together for the purpose of bidding farewell to their popular pastor, C. W. Rose, who left this morning for Amherst, N. S.

Seldom has the spacious school-room been so well filled, in fact it was not sufficiently large to accommodate the many who gathered for the occasion, which was itself an excellent tribute to the worthy pastor and his wife.

During the evening a purse of gold was presented to Mr. Rose, and everyone present was given the opportunity of individually wishing God speed to their minister and his helpmate and everyone took advantage of it. It was most gratifying to Mr. Rose and equally so to his wife.

The meeting which was named a social gathering, commenced with a brief service of prayer, led by Pastor Rose, during the course of which he gave a short but eloquent address upon the text, taken from Corinthians 13-11. "And finally my brethren, farewell be perfect. He had not been perfect, but he had always conscientiously lived up to his principles. He had realized it was of little value preaching righteousness if he was not living up to it and being an example to the congregation. He at least could say he had lived honestly. Perhaps it was not the best of perfect, but he could be as perfect as possible.

The pastor was then relieved of the chair which was taken over by Dr. Stanley, who presided in his usual cheery fashion. He called upon Mr. S. G. Read, who read an address, which was as follows:

Rev. C. W. Rose, B.A., B.D.
Dear Pastor—It is not given to every pastor to say that in a membership of nearly 600, nearly one-half of the whole number have united with the church during a pastorate of five and a half years, yet it seems that such has been the case with your pastorate. That is to say, of the membership as at present constituted, one half the number united with the church during your pastorate.

It is quite true, as stated by you last Sunday morning, that the relationship of pastor and people should be a very tender and sacred one, and while such is the case, doubtless there are three classes of persons within the membership of the church who feel the sundering of that relationship above and beyond the others. They are (First) those whom the pastor has had the privilege and great joy of leading down into the baptismal waters, and a large number have thus come into the church, adding seals to your ministry. Secondly, those who have been united by you in holy bonds of matrimony will ever remember their pastor, and will find it harder than some others to say goodbye, and it has been your privilege as the pastor of this church, to unite many lives and we trust always for the better, and never for worse. (Thirdly) the very great number that one is called to minister to in times of sorrow and sadness in a church such as ours, and there are very many in our church and congregation, to whom you have ministered in the seasons of sorrow and sadness, always with much tenderness and sincere loving sympathy, and all whose lives you have comforted and helped amid the deep waters of affliction will find it all the harder to say goodbye to you. Then again, the personal friends outside of our church and congregation belonging to other congregations and organizations, have enjoyed the pleasant associations of the various councils of a neighboring pastor. Next to one's own church and congregation they all feel the separation of a true friend and neighbor, and the general report is that you are everywhere respected and esteemed as such a friend, and you will leave behind you the fragrance of a good Christian's life, and while we say good bye to so good a pastor and so faithful a friend, we do hope to see you and Mrs. Rose sometimes in the future, and wish for you much success and real happiness in your new home in Amherst, Nova Scotia, and may God abundantly bless you in your labor of love for Him.

Now on behalf of the church, we ask you to accept these our wishes for you and Mrs. Rose, and also we desire now, through our good brother, Deacon Hall, to present you with a slight token of our appreciation and esteem for you and Mrs. Rose, who has ever been to you a devoted wife, a true helpmeet, and to us all, a faithful friend.

Signed on behalf of the church,
S. G. READ.

Following the address, Deacon Hall, knowing that a few special remarks, he responded and spoke of how deeply he felt their kindness, which he had never had in the years to come. He had not perhaps lived up to the text of the night, but at least he had realized that it was of little use to preach well with ministers, and he appreciated their kind words in every way, and was sincerely thankful that his ministry had been so endorsed. His every action which was actuated for the good, and in the interests of the church, had always been endorsed, not only by a majority, but by nearly every member of the congregation, and he would carry memories of them to his home.

Everyone present was given the opportunity of individually wishing God speed to their minister and his helpmate and everyone took advantage of it. It was most gratifying to Mr. Rose and equally so to his wife.

The meeting which was named a social gathering, commenced with a brief service of prayer, led by Pastor Rose, during the course of which he gave a short but eloquent address upon the text, taken from Corinthians 13-11. # SIDELIGHTS ON DRAMA OF WAR

Belgian National Anthem.

Fled the years of servile shame! Belgium, 'tis thine hour at last. Wear again the glorious name. Spread thy banner on the blast. Sovereign people in thy might. Steadfast yet and valiant be. On thine ancient standard write: King, and Law, and Liberty.

Strive, nor seek discharge at length. Hold thy courage, O my row. God who keeps thee in His strength On thy labors smileth down. Over all thy fruitful land. Labor's prize is full and free. On thine arts entwined stand, King, and Law, and Liberty.

Foes, that our friends of old. Are reneged to love at last. All the free we prize as gold. Praying that our strife be past. Belgians and Batavians, friends. Knit in brotherhood shall be. With one voice the shout we send: King, and Law, and Liberty.

Belgium, Mother, thus we vow. Never shall our love decay. Thou our hope our safety thou. Hearts and blood are consecrate. Grave, we play upon thy shield. This device eternally. Weal or woe, at home or afield, King, and Law, and Liberty.

Scots in Old Belgium

It is interesting to note—though the alignment of nations was entirely different at the time—that the Belgians scored a most notable victory and complete revolutionary success in the military tactics, over 600 years ago. On July 11, 1302, near Courtray in Belgium, John of Namur encountered with infantry and put to rout the mailed chivalry of France, after which four thousand gilt spurs were found on the field. The tidings of this new departure in warfare were circulated all over the world, and it is by no means improbable that King Robert the Bruce may have gathered hints therefrom that proved of essential service to him in the conduct of his tactics at the battle of Bannockburn.

During the campaign that culminated in the overthrow of Napoleon at Waterloo, the Belgians developed a strong regard for the members of the Scottish, and especially the Highland regiments, that were from time to time quartered in their country. The Scottish soldier was, par excellence, the welcome guest in the Belgian home. His sterling, manly characteristics completely won the heart of the people, and they were accustomed to see the Scotch soldier as a "milk and a lamb in the house." At Brussels and Antwerp the people were in the habit of saying that the Scots were the only soldiers that became members of the family in the houses where they were billeted; they even carried the children about and assisted in the work of the house.

CAPTURE OF SHIPS PART OF WAR GAME

Destruction of Commerce a Big Factor in Modern Warfare—Some Exceptions

It is generally recognized as a sound principle of international law that an enemy's vessel is liable to capture either in territorial waters or on the high seas. It has been pointed out by a learned writer on the subject that in face of the results maritime capture has often produced it is little to be regretted that it is not among the most formidable of belligerent weapons; one cogent reason being that by rendering sailors prisoners of war it saps the offensive maritime strength of the belligerent to which the vessel belongs. It has been said that this principle has been weakened in modern times. In 1865 Italy adopted a marine code by which the capture of mercantile vessels of a hostile nation by Italian vessels from capture without insisting on reciprocity. But special reasons may be assigned for the departure from old methods in those instances, an important consideration being the comparative maritime weakness of the powers concerned at that time. When we come to more recent times, we find that Count Caprivi, Chancellor of the German Empire, in 1892 pointed out that the changes which had come about in the methods of conducting a maritime war did not tend to favor the protection of private property at sea. He said in substance that not naval battles but other invasion or the destruction of the enemy's commerce would in future bring a war to an end. Invasion was often impracticable, and thus the destruction of trade was the only method to attack the object of the belligerent power.

Marine insurance is nowadays of an international character, and it is significant that English underwriters depicted some time ago at the Chamber of Commerce in Hamburg an undertaking in writing to fulfil their obligations to German creditors at the due date, war or no war. Such an undertaking could not be enforced at law in the courts of either country either during or at the conclusion of war, at any rate in respect of losses occurring while war was in progress. The courts do not recognize an alien enemy as having any legal status whatever.

While, however, the enemy's vessel is liable to capture, and goods on board to confiscation, it is generally recognized that the vessel is to be avoided wherever possible, passengers on an enemy's ship would be liable to be disembarked at the earliest opportunity, and they would have no remedy, but they would run little risk of more serious consequences, since it is almost unthinkable that a passenger vessel would resist capture by a man-of-war. Still, it must not be forgotten that a vessel seeking to evade capture is liable to be fired upon and possibly sunk.

WALTH OF TOGOLAND

African Colony Taken by Great Britain is Healthy Spot

Togoland, the fourth and smallest of German protectorates on the West Coast of Africa, which was taken by Britain by an expeditionary force of Gold Coast troops, has a coast line of about thirty miles only, but the strip of territory extends inland for about 350 miles. Whilst narrowing on the northern frontier, to about thirty-two miles, it widens in the centre to fully 100 miles. It is calculated that Togoland comprises an area of nearly 24,000 square miles, and there is a population of fully 1,000,000. There are fewer than 400 Germans in the colony. Most of these are at Lome, the chief town, and they consist of officials and traders. Togoland, like the other German West African colonies, suffered from the methods adopted in developing the territory; but it is a rich country, producing palm oil and palm nut kernels, cocoa, kola nuts, rubber, and the many fibres yielded by tropical forests.

In addition to building Lome on lines which render it one of the healthiest towns on the West Coast, the Germans spent about $200,000 in the construction of a landing stage.

A BIG PLANT

The largest pumping plant in the world is to be installed at Mex. Egypt in the Nile delta, which will have a total possible output of one billion, eight hundred million imperial gallons every 24 hours. Ten huge Humphrey direct action expansion pumps of double the capacity of each large Humphrey pump unit of the Metropolitan water board's station at Chingford, will be installed at once, and eight more of the same size at a later date. These gigantic pumps are designed for the drainage of the Nile delta, and are required to lift the water to a height of 2 feet. Each pumping unit must take care of one hundred million gallons every 24 hours.

HAS NOT REPLIED

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Officials here had no information today concerning published reports from Berlin that Emperor William had replied to the American government's recent inquiry as to the truth of a report that Germany was willing to discuss terms of peace. Both at the White House and the state department, no despatch bearing any relation to the question of peace has been received during the last two days. The delay in receiving an answer from the emperor was accounted for by the fact that the German monarch is in the field with his troops and possibly the imperial chancellor is waiting his return to Berlin before drafting a reply on so important a question.

THE SITUATION

The Titanic struggle along the River Aisne still continues. Upon the outcome depends very much—more, in fact, than on any previous encounter. The Germans are well placed on elevated ground, and there can be no doubt that they have been greatly reinforced during the last day or two. Unless all indications fail, there is not likely to be any result of a definite nature before Sunday, even if there.

The battle front is again a long one—over one hundred miles. It is impossible, of course, to make a comparison of the progress of this life-and-death interlocking of arms with any other, for none such has ever existed. Already many, many more men have fallen than at the battle of Waterloo, and the fringe of things, so to speak, has only yet been touched. The most awful fighting will take place in Germany itself. The pace struck has been so fast, and the artillery and other weapons have been so improved, that it seems to be impossible that the tragic drama can be lengthened to the extent of the Crimea or other historic fights. In the long run, grub and money, and not men, will be the determining factors. Lack of either of the former or both will do much for the final undoing of Germany—an undoing which MUST be accomplished.

And the final test will undoubtedly be in Germany, with Britain and France guarding the front door, while Russia breaks in by the back door. The splendid annals of British heroism have once more been greatly enriched by the story of the death of twelve engineers. Under heavy fire they succeeded in laying a powder line for the destruction of a bridge, and then, one by one, twelve men went to certain death before the fuse could be fired. Each prior to the last man saw the other fall dead in his tracks, and he also perished, no doubt with the proud consciousness of a duty nobly fulfilled. The incident is one which will not only thrill British hearts the Empire round, but will also challenge the admiration of every people who recognize and appreciate brave deeds.

INCREASED DEMAND FOR CANADIAN-MADE ELECTRIC LAMPS

The tungsten and incandescent lamp industry in Canada will benefit through the industrial conditions created by the war. There have been large importations of tungsten and incandescent lamps from Continental Europe into Canada, and these importations will be greatly curtailed, if not completely shut off, as a result of the war. This will result—indeed, has resulted already—in greatly increased demands upon the Canadian manufacturers of these articles.

When the war broke out the plant of the Canadian Tungsten Lamp Co., Limited, at Hamilton was shut down for the summer. Under ordinary conditions operations would not have been resumed until September 15. In view of the probability of an increased demand on account of the war, the plant was put in operation on August 15—a month ahead of the usual time. Since operations were recommenced the staff has been employed several nights a week in an effort to keep up with the demand. Although the present output of the plant is 75 per cent greater than under normal conditions it is not sufficient to meet the increased demand. Recently three large orders, which under normal conditions would have kept the plant busy for three weeks, were refused because of the difficulty of filling orders already in hand.

The plant of the Canadian Sunbeam Co., Limited, in Toronto, was reopened on July 28 after the usual 30-day summer shutdown. This plant has been operated ever since at full capacity and plans are being made to double last year's output. There are technical difficulties in the way of operating a double shift in tungsten or incandescent lamp factory. The work is of a technical nature, and it takes a new employee some considerable time to become adept at it. However, if the present demand upon the Canadian tungsten and incandescent lamp factories continues, as is likely to be the case, the training of additional shifts for night work will be necessary.

The Canadian manufacturers of tungsten and incandescent lamps had some problems to face in connection with the securing of certain raw material which had been coming from some of the countries involved in the war. It is understood a solution of these problems has been found, and there will be no serious inconvenience on this score.

THE BRITISH RESPONSE

The following is taken from an Old Country paper:— "Who'll serve the King?" cried the sergeant aloud, and the Roll went the drum, and the file played sweetly: "Here, master sergeant," said I, from the crowd, "Is the lad who will answer your purpose completely?"

This is not the time to discuss the politics of the war, or its strategy, or its tactics. It is a time for action, the sort of action described in the verse quoted above from a writer, one of two brothers, whose patriotic poems, written over a hundred years ago, at the time of the Napoleonic Wars, were a tremendous help to the recruiting sergeant. A week ago we ventured to suggest that the brilliant exploit of our Fleet off the Bight of Heligoland and the splendid stand of our soldiers against an overwhelmingly superior force of Germans would be "an immense aid to recruiting." Events have justified that confidence, and from all parts of the country come reports of likely men offering themselves and being accepted for Lord Kitchener's Third Army. From John o' Groats to Land's End, from the Severn to the Thames, they are rolling up at the rate of 20,000 a day, and all accounts agree that the new recruits are of an even better type than the men of the Second Army. That is conceivable, for the first hundred thousand would naturally include men whose services, for one reason or another, were most readily available. The new Army consists of men who have fully realized the dangers that threaten Europe and know that a supreme effort is needed to beat back Germany. They are entering upon the great adventure of their lives in a serious spirit, and in that spirit they will conquer.

The German hordes are nearing Paris, but they are not having the "walk-over" they anticipated, and even if they get within sight of the French capital they will find that their task is only beginning. Men whisper that our arm is weak. Men say our blood is cold. Men say that our hearts no longer speak. That is a lie, a vile lie. But let the spear and sword draw near. The sleeping lion's den, Our island shore shall start once more To life, with armed men.

To that great Britain's answer to those who would decry her, and here let it be said once more that France, Belgium, and Russia, have nobly played their part in this momentous conflict. Before the Second Army is ready for the field the Third Army will be "in being"—to use the technical phrase, meaning, complete formation—and if a million men are wanted they will be found. And the sword will not be sheathed, or the lance at rest, or the guns silent, till the German pollution has been driven out of fair France and bright Belgium. These have already suffered many of the penalties of a barbarian invasion, and we, in our island home, know by the bitter experience of our Allies the meaning of a German victory. "Paris first, then London," is the German war cry. The possibility of their success—horrible as it is to contemplate—must, however, be kept in view. Our hearths and homes would in that case be deserted, our towns and villages given to the flames, and nameless outrages committed in the name of German "culture." And the freedom won for us by our fathers on many a gallant field would be a thing of the past. Never let it be believed! The whole background of our history forbids it; our destiny as a Liberating Power denies it; our possibility, however, must be prepared, and our Army on the Continent—it is little, but it goes a long way—must be reinforced by every eligible man in the country.

To any who are hesitating we would commend some of the stories that have made our island history glorious. Let them think of Duncan—a Scottish M. P. with a comfortable estate—when, lying off the Texel with his own vessel, he heard that the whole Dutch fleet was putting out to sea to attack him. He told the captain of his consort to anchor alongside of him in the narrowest part of the channel and fight his vessel till she sank. And he added: "I have taken the depth of the water and when the Venerable goes down my flag will still fly." It was in this spirit that Nelson went into Aboukir with six colors flying, so that, even if five were shot away, it should not be thought he had struck. These are stories of admirals. Here is a story of the brave days of old, concerning four marines of H. M. S. Wager, who were with Commodore Anson's expedition of 1741 to the South Seas. The Wager went ashore on a desolate island, and it was found, when the boats were packed, that four marines could not be taken without the certainty of swamping a boat. There was no room for these brave fellows in the boat, and they were left behind to a certain death. They were soldiers, they said, and knew well enough it was their business to die; and as their comrades pulled away they stood upon the beach gave three cheers and cried, "God Save the King!" Then they turned and walked inland with steady gait.

All the news from the seat of war is encouraging. The nearer the Germans get to Paris, the more perilous is their situation. It is easy to write of the glories of war from an armchair, but there is more in this war than glory and the bestowing of medals and decorations. This is the future of civilization, threatened by a nation that has put itself outside the pale of humanity. Not for the first time Great Britain engaged in a War of Liberation; and not for the first time she and her Allies will be victorious. Let all able men be also willing to do their part, what their fathers have done for them in the past; of the heroisms of the night attack of Badajoz; the stirring story of the Fusiliers at Albuera—the mighty drama of the Peninsula War—of "king-making" Waterloo, of Moore and Corunna, of Wellington at Salamanca. These are memories that should urge the most sluggish blood to a mighty effort for the overthrow of Germany.

At a special session of the Oxford County Council it was unanimously decided to give $20,000 towards the Patriotic Fund. Good for Oxford! It is stated that German transport wagons taken in Belgium and France bore the legend, "Paris on September 15." A cog slipped in a wheel somewhere. The German Crown Prince and his army are in some danger of capture. If that should occur, it will be a hard job for the Kaiser to make his impious boast that he is in partnership with the Deity, or to quote any Scripture except of the "my son Absalom" sort. The Six Nations Indians have done a splendid and a characteristic thing in offering their services and in voting $1,500 in cash. The latter is a large sum per capita for them. These allies of the Crown risked their all in sticking to John Bull during the time of the United States revolution, and their descendants of to-day are manifestly animated by a like worthy spirit.

It is confirmed that in Germany the expectation was that Great Britain would be anxious to keep out of the present fight because of threatened trouble in Ireland and anticipated trouble in India over the Vancouver incident. The outcome has been a solid Ireland to meet the foe, and Indian troops and money pouring in for a like purpose. John Bull's children are independent enough and spunky enough to bother the old gentleman sometimes, but when it comes to anyone else trying to do the same thing—why then look out. Incidentally constitutional monarchs like King George of England will not, we think, be first to go. The war is rough on all kinds of business, but this war may prove to be the roughing up the emperor's business. Friends, Not Conquerors. Britain seeks no territorial aggrandizement from this war, which has been forced upon her, but if, when it is over, the giving to Europe of a stable government and freedom from military despotism shall cause the British flag to fly from yet wider spaces, the people who come to us will not only be brothers, not only conquerors, but they will be our friends. (By Special Wire to The Courier) BERLIN, Sept. 17.—An official casualty list published to-day shows 4,563 names. Mention is made of the hard fighting evidenced on the part of German Polish regiments in East Prussia. For example, three companies of the 59th infantry stationed at Soldau lost 356 men. The 47th infantry, with headquarters at Posen, suffered 268 casualties. A majority of both regiments are Polish. A battalion of the 136th infantry stationed at Strassburg lost 246 men, one company alone losing 7 officers and 114 men. A battalion of the 142nd infantry of Baden-Baden reported the loss of ten officers and 249 men. Two battalions of the 143rd infantry stationed at Strassburg, lost 13 officers and 498 men. The total of the published German casualties to date are 35,786 killed, wounded or missing. Since last week the average daily losses are shown by the casual lists to be 3,200. Among the killed on September 14 was Prince Otto Victor of Schoenburg-Maldenbourg, a first lieutenant of the Hussar Guards, and a brother of the Princess of Wied. Major-General Nieland was killed while leading his brigade in a street fight in a French town on August 27. Count Kirochbach, commander of the 10th reserve corps, died on September 3d.

(La Patrie) In England, Zanquill, a well known author, and the editor of a newspaper, has attempted to create agitation against the war, by claiming that Great Britain seeks to aid tottering czarism. On his return from a public meeting where he had failed to persuade his audience to accept his astounding doctrine, Zanquill was arrested by order of the government and confined to prison, where he will have time to, at his ease, review and reconsider his anti-patriotic principles and where, at any rate, he will be beyond the danger of doing any further harm. From Zanquill to Henri Bourassa the distance is insensible, truly the last articles of Mr. Bourassa fully justify the federal authorities accusing him of high treason. But it is not likely that the Canadian government will deem it necessary to deal severely with this defamer of the Empire, and of its statesmen because of the conviction that the seignisms of Mr. Bourassa no longer find dupes.

The British Parliament will be prorogued tomorrow to reassemble on the first week of November. Foreman C. S. Rankner was suspended in consequence of evidence given at the Hamilton works department investigation, and arrests of officials may follow.

(Continued on Page Four.) provisions were captured though the Germans were said to outnumber their opponents 3 to 1. Cold and heavy rains are falling to-day throughout the fighting zone in northern and eastern France. Military observers are of the opinion that this inclement weather will add to the difficulties of the Germans in greater degree than to the French. It will make the use of their heavy field artillery impossible, except on the best roads, and the progress of German supply trains, encumbered with men made ill through exposure, will be interfered with.

A large number of the friends of the Rev. C. W. Rose and Mrs. Rose gathered at the Grand Trunk station and gave the travellers a most hearty send-off. A frequenter of the Library yesterday made a suggestion that a large map of Europe and another large map of the world would be appreciated if placed by the board in the reference room. Shirts for Soldiers. The Hospital Aid Branch of the Women's Patriotic League have today sent to Valcartier Camp, through Lieut.-Colonel Ashton, 33 shirts for the men of the 2nd battery. Mrs. W. F. Cockshutt generously contributed flannel for half that number. Will Supply Men. Adjutant Hargrove reported this morning that he had a number of thoroughly reliable men who were out of employment, and whom he would send out readily if people having odd jobs to do would communicate with him. Regimental Meeting. The officers of the 25th Brant Dragoons met yesterday at the headquarters of the regiment, when inter- nal matters of importance were dealt with and also the question of building up the strength which has been sadly depleted through the call of the country. Gone to Galt. Contractor Reuben Rogers, who has had charge of the work of raising Lorne bridge and who has completed the work, left yesterday morning with his tools and gang for Galt, where he has the contract for the moving of a big house off the C. P. R. Property. Monthly Meeting. The deferred monthly meeting of the Children's Aid Society was held on Monday at the institution when important business was transacted. The problem of dealing with delin- quent girls was gone into, and the board of management felt that they should deal more actively with girls who are given over to them, and if possible have them committed to special women institutions. A committee was afterwards appointed to arrange for the holding of the annual meet- ing. Work Done. E. H. Second and Sons, Limited, have completed the work in con- nexion with the L. E. and N. Ry. in the city, and have taken off their gangs. The work which included the de- molition of Water street, the erection of new headgates, the building of retaining walls to hold up Jubilee Terrace and Water street, and the new main holes on Water street, has all been got through. The L. E. and N. Ry. has not, however, taken any steps to have the new channel in the river cleared out, as ordered by the Dominion Railway Commission, or to clear out the river bed where they threw the earth excavated for their right of way.

Assessors Busy. The city assessors yesterday completed their survey of wards 1 and 2, and are to continue the task, which will occupy four or five days. More Lights Gone. More lights have been found broken by the Hydro light authorities, and this time one upon Dufferin avenue was found rendered useless, while another has been found upon Broad street. Oshweken Notes. Every preparation is being made for the holding of the annual winter fair, which will be held on September 30 and October 1st and 2nd. Capt. Johnson of the 37th Rifles is still on guard at the armories at the headquarters on the reserve. Grant $1500. The chiefs of the Six Nations Indian Reserve met in Council yesterday at Oshweken and decided to make a grant of $1500 to the National Patriotic Fund, to be forwarded through Chief Ka-rah-kon-tye, or otherwise the Governor-General, the Duke of Connaught. The sum has been granted from the funds of the treasury of the Six Nations Reserve. At the Front. Private Carey, late of E Company, 38th Dufferin Rifles, has rejoined his old regiment, the Royal Berkshire, at Reading. Newman, and asks that his wife be looked after in his absence, and also sends his wishes to the boys of the 38th. Cement Walk for Sanatorium. The walk around the Sanatorium will be paved should the county be willing to share the cost with the city. Opposition to this is not thought to be likely, and it is probable that the work will be soon gone on with. As soon as the county clerk signifies his approval the work will start. So decided the Board of Works at their meeting which was held last night, when the business was principally routine. Farmers to Meet. The farmers of the county will rally to the aid of the Brant Patriotic and War Relief Association and last night it was decided to call a meeting of them together in the Y.M.C.A. on Saturday at 2.30. Messrs. R. L. Ryerson and Morgan Harris, who are looking after the county section of the campaign work have charge of the proposal, meeting and they are the ardent supporters of the work among the farmers of the dis- trict. Same Old Answer. The Great North-Western Tele- graph Company does not see its way clear to give Brantford city an all- night service, owing to the fact that the extension of time now granted does not warrant the expense. They are keeping their Brantford office open until 9.30, but the hour and a half, they say, is not self-remunera- tive. They, however, appreciate the fact that it is a convenience to the public, and they therefore are willing to allow it to remain open until 9.30 for the present.

Verdict at the Inquest Into Death of Foreigner Last Saturday. "Accidental death" was the verdict returned by a Coroner's jury which met last night at the police station and investigated the circumstances surrounding the death of Elias Paton- sump, the Russian Pole who was killed while crossing the Grand Trunk tracks on Saturday last. Only two witnesses were sworn in when they had given their evi- dence. The jury was unanimous and exonerated the engine driver from all blame as it was clear that he had done all in his power to prevent the accident. Elizabeth Brook of 305 Brant Ave., when called, said she heard the train coming, and noticed the whistle was sounded longer than usual and she went to the back door which overlooks the track and there she saw the man rolling down the em- bankment apparently lifeless. She then went back into the house and later heard that the man had been killed. Engineer William Brown of Strat- ford, who was in charge of the train, testifying said he was starting the city and was on the lookout for the west bound train which he knew was approaching. It appeared, and an object which proved to be the de- ceased slipped out from the track to be confronted with his engine. He applied the brakes but the man was too close to the locomotive, and he was struck between the shoulders and thrown a distance of twenty-five yards away. The apples which he was carrying were found at the point where he came into contact with the engine. A crowd soon collected and after a stoppage the train proceeded to its destination. Deeming this evidence sufficient the jury retired and brought in their verdict, with complete exoneration for the driver. The jury members were: L. H. Taylor, Edward James, Louis Stander, W. A. Tipper, Charles Paddock, W. A. Taylor, S. M. Barnley and T. J. Rogers.

How British Submarine Got Near and Destroyed the Enemy. [By Special Wire to the Courier] LONDON, Sept. 17.—The Har- wich correspondent of The Daily Telegraph sends this story of how the German cruiser Hela was destroyed, as told by one of the crew of the submarine. "In the early hours of Sunday morning, two or three British submarines were stalking the Hela about six miles off the Ger- man coast. The wind was fresh- ening and sea was beginning to get rougher. The Eg came to the surface at half past six. At about eight o'clock the Hela sighted the enemy which was seen to be within range. "With all possible speed the Eg dived a considerable depth and launched two torpedoes at intervals of fifteen seconds. Whether both struck is not definitely known, but one of them certainly was effective, as the explosion followed. "The Hela remained below about a quarter of an hour and then came to the surface briefly for a survey which showed the Hela listing badly. There were other German ships in the vicinity but none were active fighting units. "The submarine prudently dived again at once. After an interval of something over a quarter of an hour it came to the surface again but the Hela had disappeared. "The submarine crew say their sub was never seen by the enemy either before or after the blow was struck."

Peace is Best For Germany. [By Special Wire to the Courier] PARIS, Sept. 17, 4.32 a.m.—A despatch to the Havas Agency from Rennes says that 1,200 pris- oners arrived there yesterday and were sent to Brest. Among them were twenty Alsatiens who were released on signing an agreement to join the foreign legion of the French army. A German officer among the prisoners wrote to his family, says the despatch, that the "best thing for Germany is to sign peace."

PITIFABLE STATE

German Soldiers Wounded Suffer From Lack of Proper Care. [By Special Wire to the Courier] PARIS, Sept. 17.—The pitiable state of most of the German wounded is explained by some of the prisoners as due to a lack of nursing. They say the Germans were so convinced that they would cross France and take Paris at the double quick that they did not provide for wounded. When the famous "75" gun of the French began to make ravages, the Ger- man commanders took from the ranks men best qualified for the work of caring for the wounded, but their services were quite in- sufficient. Yesterday a trainload of wound- ed, comprising a large number of men in the imperial guard, arriv- ed in Bordeaux. Nearly all are in a grave state. They were accom- panied by a German army surgeon and one nurse of the imperial guard. All of these wounded re- cognize the good care they have had since falling into the hands of the French. SUCCESSFUL EVERYWHERE. LONDON, Sept. 17, 6 a.m.—In summing up recent Russian opera- tions the Petrograd correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Company says: "The Russians have been suc- cessful in the fighting with the re- treating Austrians along the whole front and news is continuously com- ing in of the capture of further pos- sessions and guns. On the left bank of the River Niemen the Russians have successfully attacked the Austrians who are retreating. In Eastern Prussia all of the German efforts to surround a portion of the Russians have failed."

Diary is Given of the Battle of the Marne

[By Special Wire to the Courier] PARIS, Sept. 17.—The follow- ing extracts from the diary of a citizen of Crepy-en-Valois, pub- lished to-day in the Petit Paris- ien, gives a graphic resume of the varying fortunes of the battle of the Marne: "August 30: Passage of English troops, 10,000 men. "August 31: Arrival of French wounded. "Sept. 1: Cannonade, patrol of Uhlans arrives and Taube (Ger- man type of aeroplane) throws a bomb. Officials flee with part of population; of 3,500 only 1,400 re- main. "Sept. 2: German troops passed. General makes formidable requisitions on the town and fixes a fine of 100,000 francs ($200,000) per day for delay. First vicar cap- tured and ten other citizens taken as hostages. Systematic pillage com- menced yesterday, continues. "Sept. 3: Continual cortège of troops. Some set fire to houses for amusement. "Sept. 4: All Germans have passed. Heavy firing towards Nanteuil. "Sept. 5: Germans come back; pillage resumed. "Sept. 6: First wounded French- man arrived. Indecision apparent among German troops, don't know whether go south or north. "Sept. 7: German wounded re- sumed pillaging. German aero- plane throws bomb on a factory transformed into a hospital. A Taube brought down at the sta- tion. The French arrive and cap- ture German stores. "Sept. 8: A Taube aeroplane catches fire and falls towards Feinies. Cannonading continues without respite. "Sept. 9: French cavalry retreats and Germans come back to town at noon and pillage is resumed. "Sept. 10: Germans blow up the Sedan bridge and leave toward Compeigne. The French come back. "Sept. 11: A train of French en- gineers arrives. "September 12: There is a contin- ual passage of English and French troops. "Sept. 13: Paris newspapers ar- rive. Calm and general joy pre- vail."

Army of 30,000 Men There and Every Volunteer Has a Good Working Knowledge of Manoeuvres—Are Im- patient to be Off.

VALCARTIER CAMP, Sept. 16.—With the organization of the camp of Canada's expeditionary force here in smooth working order there is little to mark one day from another. At 5.30 o'clock in the morning the reveille echoes and recruits down the lines, sounded by a hundred buglers; breakfast is soon disposed of and the daily round of practice at the rifle ranges or drill on the parade ground, as the case may be, begins. Valcartier is no longer a camp of individuals. It is the camp of an army of over 30,000 men, all wearing the same uniform and all animated by one purpose, to fight for their King and the integrity of the British Empire.

BURFORD

(From Our Own Correspondent)
The death of George Pite, took place at his home, King St. East, on Tuesday morning. Mr. Pite has been in failing health for a long time. During his residence in Burford, he has been closely connected with the public of the village. A few years ago he started Burford's live paper, the "Advance", but owing to ill-health, had to give it up after running it for two years. As editor of that paper he did considerable to arouse interest in various matters put forward by the Board of Trade. As Secretary of the Board of Trade, he did much to keep alive the interest and forward the work of that organization. The funeral, which is private, takes place at the Congregational Church cemetery on Thursday.

"The Minister hopes that all ranks will continue to throw their energies into the work that lies before them, and make this contingent a force of which Canada and the whole Empire may be proud."

KITCHENER NOT

Woman Friend Paints Green

Mrs. J. S. Erskine, widow of former captain of the 10th Royal Hussars, who was for a time attached to the staff of Lord Kitchener now English War Secretary, has given an interview in which she discusses the chief of the English War Department at short range.

Long before Mrs. Erskine met the army officer who eventually became her husband she knew Kitchener at that time attached to the Engineering Corps—and has continued the acquaintance since. At the first meeting she was a lass of a in short skirts and blouse. To-day she is the neighborhood of 40 and is residing temporarily in New York.

"You have seen a great deal of him, showing the austere side of the great man's character, but very little relating to the human side, and the human side is very strongly developed in Lord Kitchener," she said. "Then, you have seen him described as a woman hater, but he is far from that, although he has never married. He holds that a very strongly developed side of his country by remaining single; that his chief duty is to his King."

"I was at the engineering department at Woolwich with my parents when I first saw the then engineer, Kitchener. He was most shy and diffident, but I wasn't. In truth, I was just the opposite, and probably that is the reason we became fast friends."

"Even now I can remember how he started when I asked him to please fasten my garter. He did, but he blushed. Not long after that when he was called to Egypt he gave me a doll and I treasured it many years."

Mrs. Erskine told how, when she was 8, or 9, Kitchener returned home and renewed the acquaintance, telling her all about the Sudan and teaching her French. Next time she saw him she had reached the marriage age of 19, and was in love with the man.

It was then she learned of his rejection to the marriage of army officers. He was Sirdar of the Anglo-Egyptian army then, and England was beginning to take some notice of him.

"When my husband's leave of absence expired I went to Algeria to meet him," said Mrs. Erskine. "There, I met a better idea of Kitchener in the field. I remember one day in the desert, he was sitting in a certain modern make of gun and specified in a requisition sent to the War Office. In due time he received a reply saying the government would send a different make, immediately he returned the order across which he had written. 'You may keep your guns—I can't stand at this rate. The Sirdar wants to see the requisition, and it is needless to say he received the weapons he desired.'

"It was during this campaign that he recommended to D. S. O. (distinguished service order) the Roman Catholic Bishop named Robt. # KITCHENER NOT WHOLLY OF IRON

Woman Friend Paints Great Britain's War Secretary in New Colors.

Mrs. J. S. Erskine, widow of a former captain of the 10th Royal Hussars, who was for a time attached to the staff of Lord Kitchener, now English War Secretary, has given an interview in which she discusses the chief of the English War Department at short range.

Long before Mrs. Erskine met the army officer who eventually became her husband she knew Kitchener—at that time attached to the Engineering Corps—and has continued the acquaintance since. At the first meeting she was a lass of 4 in short skirts and blouse. To-day she is in the neighborhood of 40 and is residing temporarily in New York.

"You have seen a great deal printed showing the austere side of this great man's character, but very little relating to the human side, and the human side is very strongly developed in Lord Kitchener," she said. "Then you have seen him described as a woman hater, but he is far from that, although he has never married. He holds that a man should be able to best serve his country by remaining single; that his chief duty is to his King."

It was at the engineering depot at Woolwich with my parents when I first saw the then engineer, Kitchener. He was most shy and diffident, but I wasn't. In truth, I was just the opposite. Not long after that when he was called to Egypt he gave me a doll and I treasured it many years.

Mrs. Erskine told how, when she was 8 or 9, Kitchener returned on leave and renewed the acquaintance, telling her all about the Sudan and teaching her French. Next time she saw him she had reached the mature age of 19, and was in love with Capt. Erskine of his staff.

"It was then she learned of his objection to the marriage of army officers. He was Sirdar of the Anglo-Egyptian army then, and England was beginning to take some notice of him."

"When my husband's leave of absence expired I went to Algeria to be near him," said Mrs. Erskine, "and there got a better idea of Kitchener in the field. I remember one incident distinctly. The Sirdar wanted a certain modern make of gun and so specified in a requisition sent to the War Office. In due time he received a reply saying the government would send a different make. Immediately he returned the order, across which he had written, 'You may keep your guns, I can't throw stones at the Arabs myself.' It is needless to say he received the weapons he desired."

"It was during this assignment that he recommended to D. S. O. (distinguished service order), a Roman Catholic Bishop named Robert Brindle and was approached by a member of his staff, who remarked, 'I hardly thought this would be popular in England unless a Church of England divine was also named.' I recommended a man for distinguished service."

"I played England in a war with Germany," said Mrs. Erskine, "and accidentally planted my flag on Heligoland. The territory was neutral territory were immediately raised, but Lord Kitchener backed me up. 'That's just what she ought to do,' he said. 'If ever there is a war with Germany that is what the English will do unless the Germans do it first.' You forget the treaty of London, somebody said. 'No,' he shot back. 'Bismarck was a statesman. He signed something that would be to the future good of his country. War knows nothing about the future good. It is only the present that appeals to the warrior and any clever commander knows that the best way to get from Germany to France is through Belgium.'"

"Then what will happen?" I asked. "I meant what would happen should Germany invade Belgium."

"That is in the lap of the gods," was his reply. "But I'll tell you what I think would happen. Germany would win the first round. After that she would be out-manoeuvred."

"EXPLOSIVE BULLETS FOUND. PETROGRAD, Sept. 17.—The general headquarters of the Red Cross announces that it has been informed by telegraph by its representative with the first Russian regiment at the front that while Austrian fortifications have been captured quantities of explosive bullets, packed in special parcels and labelled, have been found. It is also charged that explosive missiles have been used by the Austrians. The general headquarters of the Red Cross has been requested by its representative to send into the field a commission to investigate the charges."

GENERAL VON MOLTKE MODEST AND SILENT

He is Chief of Staff and Commander of German Forces Under the Kaiser

General Count Helmuth von Moltke, now 66 years old, namesake and favorite nephew of the great Field Marshal who led the Germans to victory in the Franco-Prussian war, has been chief of the German general staff since 1904 and as such is in supreme command of the united forces of Germany—under the Kaiser.

The reservation concerning the Kaiser is important, because von Moltke, modest and silent as the famous uncle whom Germans nicknamed the Great Tactician, has never believed that he is the man for the place he occupies. In fact, he refused the job twice, and accepted it the third time only because his imperial master declared with brutal frankness: "In time of peace any man can do the work. In time of war I shall be my own chief of staff."

As a 22-year-old lieutenant von Moltke served through the Franco-Prussian war. For conspicuous gallantry in the fighting before Paris he was decorated with the order of the Iron Cross. He was among the victors who marched under the Arch of the Star. His uncle, the Field Marshal, was very proud of him and wrote home to Helmuth's father, Adolf von Moltke: "Yesterday Helmuth marched in with his regiment—the tallest man in it. The king asked me his name. He looked splendid with his Iron Cross."

In the last years of the greater Moltke's life Helmuth and his wife kept house for the old soldier. Of the four sons of Adolf von Moltke, who were known as the "four giants," Helmuth was regarded by him as his son. He stands 6 feet 4 inches, has blue eyes and, like all the Moltkes, is very blond.

When Helmuth fell in love with Hilke, a daughter of Count von Moltke-Hvitfeldt of Denmark—she was a distant cousin—his future father-in-law refused his consent to the match till the field marshal had given his Count Cross.

"In the last years of the greater Moltke's life Helmuth and his wife kept house for the old soldier. Of the four sons of Adolf von Moltke, who were known as the 'four giants,' Helmuth was regarded by him as his son. He stands 6 feet 4 inches, has blue eyes and, like all the Moltkes, is very blond."

SOLDIERS SPEECHES ON THE BATTLEFIELD

Stirring Words That Have Come Down Through History—Duty Done in Face of Death

In the grim hour of battle there is small time for words; it is the time for the strong arm and the stout heart; and such words as are spoken could be few and to the point. No general knew better than that gallant Highlander, Sir Colin Campbell, how to say the words that fire courage or reward brave deeds. On that "day of heroes" at Balacava, when his Highlanders were awaiting the shock of the Russian cavalry, he rode down the line, and in two calmly spoken sentences nerve every soldier for the death that seemed inevitable. "Remember your duty," he said, "and do not retreat from here. You must die where you stand." And with one voice the killed heroes gave back the answer, "Aye, aye, Sir Colin, we'll do that."

When Collingwood's ship was about to open the great drama of Trafalgar, the admiral, calmly munching an apple on the break of his poop, summoned his officers and said to them, "Now, gentlemen, let us do something today, of which the world may talk hereafter." Within a few moments five lines of battle were emptying their guns into the Russian ranks.

"Napoleon had called Wellington 'a Sepoy general' when the crowning battle opened on the plain of Waterloo. 'I will show him to-day,' Wellington said, gleefully, 'how a Sepoy general can defend himself.' A few hours later, as he sat with a few of his surviving officers at supper, his face black with the smoke of battle, 'he repeatedly leaned back in his chair, rubbing his hands convulsively, and exclaiming aloud, 'Thank God, I have met him! Thank God, I have met him!'"

Throughout the long day of battle, when the fate of his country was in the balance, his words of encouragement which befitted one of the greatest soldiers the world has produced. "If you should be struck," one of his lieutenants asked him, "tell us what is your plan." "My plan is to die," he answered. "I'm in dying here to the last man."

"When at Balacava, Lucan told Lord Cardigan to lead the Light Brigade on that mad charge down the valley of death, Cardigan answered, 'Certainly, sir; but the Russians have a battery in our front, and riflemen and batteries on both flanks.' Lucan, with a shrug of his shoulders, said, 'We have no choice but to obey, wherever Cardigan turned quickly to his men. 'The brigade will advance,' he said, as he rode off at its head, saying to himself, 'Here goes the last of the Brigade!'"

"Clunes, take your Grenadiers and open the ranks," were the words of Sir John Moore which started the fighting at Corunna. When, towards the close of the battle, Moore was dying, his chief shattered by a cannon-ball, one of his men stepped up to unblock his ears, but the dying soldier stopped him. "I had rather," he said, "I should go out of the field with me."

"Turning to Colonel Anderson, he said, 'Anderson, you know I have always wished to die in this way. I hope my country will do me justice.' Then, in a tone of apology, 'I feel myself so strong, I fear I shall be long dying.'"

"Men of the Gordon Highlanders," said Colonel Mathias at Dargal, "the General says that position must be taken at all costs. The Gordon Highlanders will take it, if you have the words had left his lips the brave Scotsmen were racing up the rugged steps in the face of a deluge of death; to drive the enemy from his lair like so many terror-stricken sheep."

THE STORY OF Waitstill Baxter

By KATE DOUGLAS WIGGIN.

Copyright, 1913 by Kate Douglas Wiggin.

Ivory read the correspondence with a heavy heart, inasmuch as it corroborated all his worst fears. He had sometimes secretly hoped that his father might return and explain the reason of his silence or in lieu of that that there might come to light the story of a pilgrimage, familial perhaps, but innocent of evil intention, one that "Bourgeois" had told to his wife and his former friends and then buried forever with the death that had ended it.

Neither of these hopes could now ever be realized nor his father's memory made other than a cause for endless regret, sorrow and shame. His father, who had begun life so handsomely, with rare gifts of mind and personality, a wife of unusual beauty and intelligence and, while still young in years, a considerable success in his chosen profession. His poor father! What could have been the reason for so complete a downfall?

Ivory asked Dr. Perry's advice about showing one or two of the brief letters and the lock to his mother. After her fainting fit and the exhaustion that followed it, Ivory begged her to see the old doctor, but without avail. Finally, after days of pleading, he took her hands in his and said: "I do everything a mortal man can do to be a good son to you, mother. Won't you do this to please me and trust that I know what is best?" Whereupon she gave a trembling assent, as if she were agreeing to something indescribably painful, and, indeed, this sight of a former friend seemed to frighten her strangely.

After Dr. Perry had talked with her for a half hour and estimated her sufficiently to make at least a reasonable guess as to her mental and physical condition, he advised Ivory to break the news of her husband's death to her.

"If you can get her to comprehend it," he said, "it is bound to be a relief from this terrible suspense."

"Will there be any danger of making her worse?" Mightn't the shock cause her violent emotion?" asked Ivory anxiously.

"I don't think she is any longer capable of violent emotion," the doctor answered. "Her mind is certainly clearer than it was three years ago, but her body is nearly burned away by the mental conflict. There is scarcely any part of her but is weary and weary unto death, poor soul! One cannot look at her patient, lovely face without longing to lift some part of her burden. Make a trial, Ivory. It's a justifiable experiment, and I think it will succeed. I must not come any oftener myself than is absolutely necessary. She seemed afraid of me."

The experiment did succeed. Lois Boynton listened breathlessly with parted lips and with apparent comprehension to the story Ivory told her. Over and over again he told her gently the story of her husband's death, trying to make it sink into her mind clearly, so that there should be no consequent bewilderment. She was calm and silent, though her face showed that she was deeply moved. She broke down only when Ivory showed her the lock.

"I gave it to my husband when you were born, my son," she sobbed. "At first, it seems so surprising to me that your father is dead. He said he would serve me back when the mayflowers bloomed, and when I saw the autumn leaves I knew that six months must have gone and he would never stay away from us for six months without writing. That is the reason I have seldom watched for him these last weeks. I must have known that it was no use."

She rose from her rocking chair and moved feebly toward her bedroom. "Can you spare me the rest of the day, Ivory?" she faltered as she leaned on her son and made her slow progress from the kitchen. "I must bury the body of my grief and I want to be alone at first. If only I could see Waitstill. We have both thought this was coming; she has a woman's instinct; she is younger and stronger than I

That is the reason I have seldom watched for him these last weeks. I must have known that it was no use."

She rose from her rocking chair and moved feebly toward her bedroom. "Can you spare me the rest of the day, Ivory?" she faltered as she leaned on her son and made her slow progress from the kitchen. "I must bury the body of my grief and I want to be alone at first. If only I could see Waitstill. We have both thought this was coming; she has a woman's instinct; she is younger and stronger than I

"I gave it to my husband when you were born, my son," she sobbed. "At first, it seems so surprising to me that your father is dead. That is the reason I have seldom watched for him these last weeks. I must have known that it was no use."

TORTURED BY CONSTIPATION

"Fruit-a-Lives" Gured Paralyzed Bowels and Digestion

ST. BONIFACE DE SHAWINIGAN, QUEB. Feb. 3rd. 1914.

"It is a pleasure to me to inform you that after suffering from 'Chronic Constipation' for 2 1/2 years, I have been cured by 'Fruit-a-Lives'. While I was a student at Berthier College, I became so ill I was forced to leave the college. Severe pains across the intestines continually tortured me and it came to a point when I could not stoop down at all, and my Digestion became paralyzed. Some one advised me to take 'Fruit-a-Lives' and at once I felt a great improvement. After I had taken four or five boxes, I realized that I was completely cured and what made me glad, also, was that they were acting gently, causing no pain whatever to the bowels. All those who suffer with Chronic Constipation should follow my example and take 'Fruit-a-Lives' for they are the medicine that cures."

said he you do so beautifully easy today, Waitstill. I'm sure you barked your leg or skinned your knee when you fell down. Don't you think the 'dearest lady in the land' is a nice sounding sentence?"

"I do, indeed," cried Waitstill to herself as she turned the words over and over trying to feed her hungry heart with them.

"I love to hear Ivory talk. It's like the stories in the books. We have our best times in the barn, for I'm helping with the milking now. Our yellow cow's name is Molly and the red cow would be, Polly, but we changed her to Golly 'cause she's so troublesome."

"We had a cross old cow like that once," said Waitstill absently, loving to hear the boy's chatter and the eternal quotations from his beloved hero.

"We have great fun cooking, too," continued Rod. "When Aunt Boynton was first sick she stayed in bed more, and Ivory and I had to get used to things. One morning we bound up each other's burns. Ivory had three fingers and I two done up in buttery rags to take the fire out. Ivory called us 'soldiers dressing their wounds' after the battle. Sausages sputter dead-fully, don't they? And when you turn a pancake it flops on top of the stove. Can you flop one straight, Wait?"

"Yes, I can; straight as a die; that's what girls are made for. New-run along home to your big brother and do put on some warmer clothes under your coat. The weather's getting colder."

"Aunt Boynton hasn't patched our thick ones yet, but she will soon, and if she doesn't, Ivory'll take this Saturday evening and do them himself. He said so."

"He shall not!" cried Waitstill passionately. "It is not seemly for Ivory to sew and mend, and I will not allow it. You shall bring me those things that need patching without telling any one, do you hear, and I will meet you on the edge of the pasture Saturday afternoon and give them back to you. You are not to speak of it to any one, you understand, or perhaps I shall pound you to a jelly! You'd make a sweet rose jelly to eat with turkey on Thanksgiving dinner, you dear, comforting little boy!"

Rodman ran toward home, and Waitstill hurried along, scarcely noticing the beauties of the woods and fields and waysides, all glowing masses of goldenrod and purple frost flowers.

Patty was standing under a little rock maple, her brown flannel-woolies in tone with the landscape and the hood, out of her hood, cape pulled over her bright head. She looked flushed and excited as she ran up to her sister and said: "Waitstill, darling, you've been crying! Has father been scolding you?"

"No, dear, but my heart is aching today so that I can scarcely bear it. A wave of discouragement came over me as I was walking through the woods, and I gave up to it a bit. I remembered how soon I will be Thanksgiving day, and I'd so like to make it happier for you and a few others that I love."

Patty could have given a shrewd guess as to the chief cause of the heartache, but she forbore to ask any questions. "Cheer up, Waitstill! We may have a thankful Thanksgiving, after all."

GERMANS ARE CUTTING OFF LEGS AND ARMS

Letter From Brantford Soldier is Received by Major Leonard.

The following letter will be read with interest: Bury, Sept. 3, 1914.

Major Leonard, 25th Brant Dragoons, Brantford, Ont., Canada.

Dear Major:—You must excuse me taking the liberty of writing you, but I just want to let you know that as a trooper in your Squad that I joined with you practically as soon as I landed. Well, Sir, I have enlisted in the Lancashire Fusiliers and as you will notice, this is their Headquarters and the recruits are joining wonderfully quick. They are drafting them out as quickly as possible. I expect to go to-day. They sent one of the wounded into the barracks this morning and he said that one Battalion of the E. Lancshires got all pretty well cut up, and he says that the treatment of the Germans to our men is inhuman. They are cutting arms and legs off them as they lay on the field and the men here are only too anxious to get where they could have a crack at the monster. I will write you again and let you know how I get along, so I hope you will excuse scribble. I am writing on a piece of firewood and it only wants a few minutes from fall in. So I conclude with my sincerest wishes and knowing that the 25th Brant Dragoons will not back out in a time of necessity which is unmistakably the case at the present time.

Your one time trooper, RICHARDS, Lancashire Fusiliers, Bury.

P. S.—Please do not answer this, as I will be drafted any minute, so wait until I write you again.

Atrocities in Belgium Are Seen Again

(By Special Wire to the Courier) PARIS, Sept. 17.—(3.40 a.m.)—Leon Bourgeois, former premier and Senator from Marne, who has just returned from a tour of the district recently occupied by the Germans, has made a detailed report of his observations, a copy of which has been given to the American ambassador for transmission to his government at Washington. The report declares that most of the communities through which the Germans passed were annihilated by fire and sword, several mayors were shot and where the mayors were absent substitutes were shot in their places.

The report contains an attack on women at Montmirail and the shooting of a father and his 12-year-old son, who were present. A number of witnesses of this alleged incident are named in the report.

When the Germans were announced as approaching Chalons, many of the inhabitants rushed to the station and begged the trains that were leaving, but most of the population retained their composure. The arrival of the Germans, the report says, was preceded by a short bombardment in which shells fell on the hospital and the children's asylum.

It is also charged in the report that the Germans pillaged the stores and that large quantities of wine, the wine cellars of the town during which champagne literally flowed like water.

Are Changing Their Generals

(By Special Wire to the Courier) BERLIN, Sept. 17 via wireless telegraphy by way of Sayville, N. Y.—An official report given out at army headquarters at midnight says that the French front remains unchanged. Owing to illness General Von Hausen, formerly commander of the second or Saxony army, has been replaced by General Von Einem, former Minister of War. General Von Hausen is 68 years old. Another change in leadership has taken place in the Fourteenth Reserve corps, where General Von Schuber has been replaced by Quartermaster General Bon Stein, the well known editor of the official war reports and the author of a comic war bulletins. It is reported here from Vienna that 1,800 Galician traitors have been brought into Graz, Austria, where they are awaiting sentence.

Embassy Makes A Statement

(By Special Wire to the Courier) WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—The French embassy to-day announced the receipt of the following despatch from Bordeaux: "On the 14th and 15th of September the rear of the enemy has been in touch with the pursuing forces of our army. The rear of the enemy has been reinforced by German troops. The enemy was strongly to accept battle along the whole front, part of which was forcedly organized. "The allies are on the north of Vich-sur-Naine, Soissons and

High Flyer Settled It

LONDON, Sept. 17, 4.20 a.m.—An officer of the British cruiser High Flyer has given the following account of the sinking of the North German Lloyd trans-Atlantic liner Kaiser Wilhelm Der Grosse off the coast of Africa, the latter part of August, by the cruiser: "While we were coaling at Las Palmas, Canary Islands, we heard that two colliers had left for Rio De Oro, West Africa. We followed and sighted the Kaiser Wilhelm Der Grosse within 20 miles of Rio De Oro, with colliers alongside. We opened fire at 3.10 o'clock and finished at 4.25. The Kaiser Wilhelm sank at 5.10. Our lyddite shells sunk settled things. Our ship was struck ten times."

TERMONDE BURNED

Systematic Effort on the Part of the Germans to Destroy Town.

(By Special Wire to the Courier) LONDON, Sept. 17.—The Antwerp correspondent of The Post, who visited Termonde, one of the raised cities of Belgium, found that out of 1,500 houses less than three hundred remained. Termonde, adds the correspondent, was burned for much the same reason as Louvain. On September 4, a German force came back from the field, after having been severely handled by the Belgians and the German commander exclaimed: "It is our duty to burn them down." The inhabitants were given two hours' grace, and German soldiers filed through the town breaking windows with their rifles. They were followed by other files of troops, who sprayed kerosene into the houses. Others applied lighted fuses and thus, says the correspondent, the town was systematically destroyed.

FREE TROUSER OFFER EXTENDED BY TIP TOP TAILORS.

Since Tip Top Tailors offered free trousers with each suit or overcoat ordered on Saturday, Sept. 12th and Monday, Sept. 14th, they have received many calls and telephone messages from men who would like to share in the opportunity but found it impossible to do so last week.

To give these gentlemen another chance, Tip Top Tailors have decided to repeat the offer on Saturday and Monday, Sept. 19th and 21st. This means that each man who places his order on either of these two days will receive in addition to an extra pair of trousers from the same material, or a pair of trousers from any material he desires, should he buy an overcoat.

The announcement, giving full particulars of this offer will appear in this paper to-morrow. The company's store at 68 Colborne street, will be open evenings on Saturday and Monday to measure men who cannot get there during the day.

RUSSIA WINNING

According to the Reichspost, Emperor Francis Joseph said to the Archduke Charles, Francis, when the latter was leaving to take up his place in the army: "Never in my life has anything cost me so much pain as the duty of talking such a grave decision."

RUSSIANS STRONGER VIENNA, via Paris, Sept. 17.—7.30 a.m.—Messages from special correspondents in Galicia lay stress upon the numerical superiority of the Russians, whose army divisions are composed of sixteen battalions of infantry, with cavalry and artillery, and unlimited supplies of ammunition. The Russian divisions are considerably stronger than the Austrians, especially as regards artillery.

The Russian soldiers declare that for every ten Russians killed, 20 came in their places. The Russian artillery fire, they said, was wonderfully good, but the infantry were doing very little.

It is anticipated here that there will be a temporary lull in the fighting, as both sides are apparently exhausted. The Viennese journal of Tuesday are entirely without news of any Austrian fighting.

The wounded continue to arrive in Vienna in great numbers. Eight thousand were brought in on Sunday. The hospitals and public buildings can no longer be converted into temporary nursing homes, are terribly crowded. Ten thousand wounded are being cared for in the hospitals.

The exhibition building in the Prater, the imperial park. Sunday afternoon 30,000 persons visited the soldiers in the general hospital.

PARIS, Sept. 17.—A Nish, Servia, despatch to the Havas agency says: "Resuming the offensive the Austrians passed the Drina River to the south and west and marched to the town of Kroupani and Valievo (Servian towns, about 10 and 25 miles respectively from the Bosnian border). On a front of more than 60 miles, companies of Austrians, Serbians, and Lesnitsa, along the Bosnian frontier, desperate battles have been fought for four days. "The latest news declares that the situation is favorable in spite of desperate attacks."
