Happiness At Last;

Loyalty Recompensed.

Decima, who had been taught by Lady Pauline to accede to any request, unless it were unreasonable or wrong, went at once to the piano, and Mr. Mershon followed her. She knew all her songs by heart, and she sang "The Message." Sung it not with the professional air which so many women aim at, but glibly and sweetly. Mr. Mershon stood beside her, leaning on the piano, his small, sharp eyes fixed on her face with the expression which a man wears when his heart is in the look. All unconsciously, she glanced up at him as the song finished, and caught the look in his eyes. It was as if a cold, icy hand had been laid upon her heart, and she rose and stood a little apart from him.

"Will you not sing again?" he said. "Do!" And for an instant his eyes sought hers.

Decima unconsciously moved away from him and nearer to Bobby.

"No—I will not sing again," she said, almost coldly. "It must be getting late, Bobby!"

Bobby came up to her, there was a little more talk, and then she managed to convey to him that she really wanted to go.

Mr. Mershon himself saw them into the fly.

"I hope this won't be your last visit to The Firs, Miss Deane," he said, and his thin fingers closed round hers.

Decima made no response, and the fly drove off. Mr. Mershon returned to the drawing-room and leaning his arm on the carved mantel-shelf, looked at the silent woman who was bending over her embroidery again.

"Well!" he said at last, sharply.

She glanced up at him nervously.

"Well, Theodore?" she said, timidly.

"What do you think of her?" he demanded. "Isn't she beautiful, lovely? Is there any girl, woman, like her in all the world?"

"She—she is very beautiful, very sweet," she assented, under her breath.

Mr. Mershon laughed.

"I'm glad you think so," he said; "for I mean to make her my wife."

Mrs. Sherborne raised her head and opened her lips, but no sound came.

"Well, what have you to say? Why the devil don't you speak?" he said, with the sudden fury of a weak nature; and he looked as evil as a malicious monkey, as he glowered down at her with his small eyes glowing excitedly. "You hear? And you've got to help me. You've got to make a friend of her; get the right side of her. You've got to sing my praises to her. You understand?"

Mrs. Sherborne moistened her lips and cast a deprecatory glance at him.

"She—she is very young, Theodore," she said.

"Young! I like her all the better for that. D—n it, you don't suppose I should be such an ass as to fall in love with an old woman? And I've fallen in love with her, I tell you."

"She—she may not consent. I—I mean, she seems to have some will of her own, Theodore. I have been talking to her."

"Consent! Will of her own!" he said, with a sneer. "You are an idiot! Do you suppose I'm depending upon her sweet will only? Not me. I know a better game than that. She'll consent fast enough. You wait and see. I've got her tight enough; or, if I haven't got her already, I shall have her in my grip presently!"

CHAPTER XVII.

A week passed, ten days; but no Lord Gaunt appeared. Decima had ceased to go to the Hall, but she met Mr. Bright every day in the village, and that gentleman's face grew longer and less cheerful each time.

"I can't make it out, Miss Deane," he said on the eleventh day. "He said he would come at the end of the week—he may have meant month; it's just possible that I may have misunderstood him. But I've got everything ready. You'd be surprised at what I've managed to get done in the last few days, you would indeed! And he hasn't come after all."

"He may come in a day or two," said Decima.

She too felt a little, just a little disappointed.

"Do you think so?" he said, catching at the hope eagerly. Then he shook his head. "I don't know. It's just as likely that he won't come at all. Though he promised, and a promise is a promise with him. I know that. And he doesn't write; and I don't know where to write to. I've sent word to the lawyer that the place is ready—that is, as far ready as I could get it in the time, and they have written that they don't know Lord Gaunt's address—that he's away from London. I'm almost in despair; for, you see, he may have gone to Africa after all."

"I hope not, for your sake," said Decima, gently.

"Say for all our sakes, and his own most," said Mr. Bright. "Well, I am not going to give up hope, and I'm keeping on at the slave-driving. You should see me hounding on the workmen! They think me no end of a brute and bully. Going your rounds? Ah, you've flattered down on the place like a ministering angel, Miss Deane! I hear you praise me wherever I go. I've just left the Robins' cottage, and that poor sick girl of hers had the tears in her eyes when she told me of your goodness to her. Well, I won't say any more if you don't like it, and I beg your pardon. I'm off to the Hall. There's a new grand piano just arrived; that looks as if he meant coming."

He bustled off rather more cheerfully, and Decima went her way. Perhaps Lord Gaunt would not come after all. Yes; she would be sorry if he did not, she told herself.

But though Lord Gaunt were still absent, the Deanes ought not to have been dull, for they saw a good deal of Mr. Mershon and his sister. Scarcely a day passed but that gentleman strolled down to The Woodbines.

He generally went straight to the laboratory, and Decima could hear her father talking—Mr. Mershon always appeared to play the listener's part—in his rapid, nervous way.

Once or twice she went in—not knowing Mr. Mershon was there—and found him sitting on the bench as she had seen him on his first visit, his chin in his hands, his attitude like that of a monkey, and his big cigar in his lips.

Sometimes she met him in the garden, and he would stop and talk to her in short, disjointed sentences, his small, sharp eyes scanning her face when she was not looking at him, to be quickly averted when she turned her frank, guileless eyes upon his face.

Several times The Firs carriage, in all its magnificence—and newness—dashed up to the gate, and Mrs. Sherborne would come in and sit in the drawing-room and talk to Decima in her nervous, constrained fashion; and on all the visits she begged Decima to go for a drive with her.

Decima did not very much care for Mrs. Sherborne, though she pitied her—why, she could scarcely have told—and several times refused the drive; but one afternoon Mrs. Sherborne begged so hard, that Decima accompanied her.

But she was sorry that she had done so, for all Mrs. Sherborne's talk was of her brother.

"Theodore is so—so clever," she said, glancing at Decima nervously and yet curiously. "He was always clever as a boy. We all used to say that he would make his mark and do great things. I don't suppose there is any one in the city more—more successful and respected"—she paused a moment—"more admired than he is."

Decima did not know what to say, and so remained silent; and after another glance Mrs. Sherborne went on still more nervously:

"He has made a great deal of money. Theodore is immensely rich—but I dare say you can see that."

"Oh, yes," said Decima. "It must be very nice to be rich—for those who care for money," she added.

"You don't care for it, my dear?" said Mrs. Sherborne, with some surprise.

Decima smiled.

"No; why should I? Does money bring happiness?"

As she spoke, she thought of Lord Gaunt. He was immensely rich, and—well, his sad, weary face rose before her, and she sighed.

"I don't think it does. Of course, I do not know very much about it."

"No; you are very young and inexperienced," said Mrs. Sherborne. "But you know everybody wants to be rich; everybody struggles and strives for money—more money."

"Yes, I know," said Decima; "and it seems so foolish. If it does not bring happiness, what is the use of it? Why, see how happy some, most, of the poor people here are! They are always cheerful. I hear the women, even the poorest, singing as I go into the village, and the men whistle as they go to their work."

"Then you wouldn't care to marry a rich man, my dear?" asked Mrs. Sherborne.

The speech jarred upon the girl. She had not thought of marriage, and her innocent heart, shrunk from the woman's questioning.

"I don't know—I have not thought. Not if it were only because he was rich. Oh, I do not know! See how lovely that tree looks with the red sunset upon it!"

"Yes," said Mrs. Sherborne; and she was silent a moment, then she said, as if she felt constrained to continue the subject: "We have often wondered why Theodore has not married. Of course he is quite a young man still, but—well, men, especially very rich men, marry at an earlier age than his. And he must have met so many nice—so many beautiful women, who—would have been glad to marry him. Don't you think it is very strange?"

"It is," said Decima, growing very weary of the topic. "Perhaps he has not seen any one he cares for."

Mrs. Sherborne glanced at the lovely face with its unclouded eyes.

"Perhaps that is it," she said. "But he will some day. I hope she will be a—nice girl."

"I hope so for your sake," said Decima.

"She—she will be able to have everything she wants—everything she can desire," said Mrs. Sherborne, in a dry, mechanical tone, as if she were repeating something she had carefully rehearsed. "Theodore is liberal enough when—when he cares for any one. He will spend money like water to—to—gain his object. Yes, his wife will be able to buy anything she may fancy."

"That will be very nice for her," said Decima, unsuspectingly. "And now may we turn and go back, please, Mrs. Sherborne? I like to be in some little time before dinner."

Mrs. Sherborne looked at her sideways, sighed, and ordered the coachman to drive back to The Woodbines. She had done her best but against the girl's absolute innocence and unconsciousness Mrs. Sherborne's hints and suggestions glanced off like arrows from a coat of mail.

"Halloo! been out in the Mershons' chariot?" said Bobby, as Decima came into the house. "What's it feel like, sitting in such a gorgeous vehicle, and staring at the backs of two richly dressed funkies? Did you fancy yourself a duchess, Decie?"

although seeing the benefits to be derived from a Trust Company's administration, hesitates about cancelling any appointment he may have already made, the Montreal Trust Company can be named to act with the Executor or Executors already appointed, in this way the Trust Company co-operates with the Testator's appointees in the administration of the Estate.

This plan is very acceptable when the Testator's wife is named as Executor. Few women have the necessary business training to enable them to carry on the administration of an Estate, but with the co-operation of the Montreal Trust Company the Testator's wife can be appointed with full assurance that the Estate will be well looked after.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18. Dense fog blanketed New York Harbor again to-day and for the third time to-day shipping suffered delays. Incoming vessels were stopped outside the harbor.

DE VALERA TALKS.

OGDENSBURG, N.Y., Oct. 18. Eamon De Valera, "President of the Irish Republic," to-day charged that during the last twenty months British murder gangs raided Irish homes and that "there had been close to 40,000 such raids and robberies." Addressing the delegates of the Self-Determination League of Canada and Newfoundland at a conference here, De Valera said that "the Government of the British Empire, of which Canada is a part, has instigated a campaign in Ireland of organized assassination of representatives of the Irish people." He characterized this as a general campaign of frightfulness, of which any civilized government would be ashamed, directly against the civilian population and strictly parallel to the campaign which the Germans were alleged to have carried on against the Belgians. "Men were dragged from their beds and brutally murdered, women and children were terrorized," he said. There have been no less than seventy-seven such murders and these murders do not include men who met their death in armed struggle with British forces. More than one hundred towns and villages have been destroyed in order to inflict loss upon the people. Transportation has been held up in certain districts with the idea of using the weapon of starvation, he said.

A REAL RACE.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18. Under the caption "Race for Real Sailors," the New York Herald this morning welcomes editorially the forthcoming international race between the Nova Scotia schooner Delwana and the Gloucester fishing schooner Esperanto. "There will be no opportunity to introduce novelties in rig useful only in a race if limitations are adhered to," the Herald says, "and it is safe to say they won't call the race off if the wind blows twenty miles an hour." The Times points out that the salient feature of the race is the elimination of time allowance, which was a deterrent to Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock in the recent International Race. This should be pleasing to those who maintain that contending craft should be raced boat for boat, the newspaper says.

Fighting the Great Red Plague.

The heavy loss in working days due to the ravages of the Great Red Plague will be one of the most important subjects to be discussed by the All-America Conference that will meet in Washington December 8th to 11th to consult on methods of combatting the plague. The extent of this loss to employers whose working forces it decimates, to working men whose pay envelopes it depletes, and to the country at large whose production it reduces, was scarcely suspected until the Army records of the millions of young men examined for the War were studied. Before then it was suspected to be great, but no one imagined that it was anything like so great as it has now been proved to be.

The records show that every thousand men in the army lost on an average more than 300 days per year—1,600,000 days for five million soldiers in the prime of life, and if the loss was so great among men subject to military discipline and under orders to seek immediate help, how great, it is now asked, must it be among the same men when in civil life when no discipline is possible. The ravages of hookworm disease in certain parts of the country are a drop in the bucket compared to the ravages of the Great Red Plague. Many possible methods of checking the plague in workshops and factories have been suggested and will be threshed out at the Conference, which will be attended by the most experienced physicians and administrators that the nations of the three Americas can send.

There is to-day no longer any doubt that medical science now possesses means that would enable it to conquer the Red Plague as completely as it has conquered small-pox and yellow fever if it were given free scope to apply them. The real trouble nowadays arises largely from ignorance and from the hesitation of so many sufferers to seek reliable medical aid until the disease has established itself and has become difficult to dislodge. With modern methods the Red Plague is now definitely curable.

The conditions now confronting the people of this country are somewhat similar to those that confront the British in their work of eradication of the bubonic (black) plague in India. There the first thought of the average

London's Unemployed Demonstrate

Disorderly Scenes in Whitehall--Downing Street a Theatre of Disturbance--Alliance of Ukrainian and Wrangel Forces--Canadian Convicts Refuse to Work--Big Interest in Lunenburg-Gloucester Schooner Race.

UGLY DISORDERS IN WHITEHALL.

LONDON, Oct. 18. Disorders occurred in Whitehall this afternoon during a demonstration by unemployed men, who had sent a delegation to Premier Lloyd George in Downing Street. Several persons were injured in attempts to break through the police cordon, and others were hurt when some stone-work from a window on the Treasury building fell. The situation which developed in Whitehall, at the entrance to Downing Street, was an ugly one. There were thousands of unemployed men awaiting the return of their delegation, and the great thoroughfare of Whitehall in the vicinity was jammed. The disorder started when unemployed demonstrators tried to break through the heavy police guard and set at Downing Street. It was during this rush that the window stones from the Treasury crashed down. Police reinforcements were rushed up and mounted police were called out to assist the regulars. At least two of police and several civilians were injured in the early attempts of the crowd to get through the cordon. Finally the crowd began to throw stones. The parapet on one side of Downing Street also collapsed during the crush. A number of persons were injured when the crowd headed by the red flag of the Tottenham District Socialist and Labor party made a determined rush and tried to break through the police line. Eventually the red flag was captured. The deputations to the Premier consisted of fifteen heads of London Bureaux, asking relief for unemployed in connection with the sending of the deputation to the Premier, a parade of ten thousand of unemployed had been planned to march to Downing Street as a demonstration. After the disorders had subsided the parade of the unemployed reformed and continued towards Trafalgar Square in an orderly manner and escorted by the police. Fifty injured persons were given treatment when the trouble ended, twenty of these were sent to hospitals.

Plans are being made for the two armies to join soon, and the Moving 4 Buttons adds Another Year of Service from Stanfield's Adjustable Sleepers and Combinations.

Because of its remarkable quality, Stanfield's Underwear for men, women and children has always been good for an extra year of wear. But the children were growing out of Stanfield's Combinations long before they were wearing their way out of them. So we designed Stanfield's ADJUSTABLE Combinations and Sleepers, that grow with the children and always fit.

Four Buttons, sewed to vertical tapes on the waist, hold upper and lower parts snugly together as one garment. Simply moving these buttons down, little by little, adjusts the garment to allow for at least two years' average growth, and to fit comfortably all the time. Made in 3 sizes: 2 to 4 years—4 to 6 years—6 to 8 years.

Now the children get all the wear out of STANFIELD'S Unshrinkable UNDERWEAR

Sleepers and Combinations are alike except for the feet added to the Sleepers. They have all the advantages of Combinations, with the added protection of double thickness around abdomen and kidneys. The lower garment in either can be quickly removed and changed if necessary without undressing the child or uncovering the chest.

native, when stricken by the disease, is to hide himself in the crowded warrens of the city and to die there after exposing to his disease everyone within reach. With the British as with us the first problem is to induce the victims to come forward before it is too late.

Through the efforts of the U.S. Public Health Service and others engaged in combatting the Red Plague, many of the States in the country have begun to provide facilities where its victims can obtain adequate diagnosis and treatment, including the administration of 600 when required. Much still needs to be done in this direction and it will be one of the aims of the Conference to arouse States and municipalities to a recognition of their responsibility to their people.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

THE SON WHO COMES HOME.

A friend of mine whose son works in a city a few miles away and comes home for week-ends, was surprised by a midweek visit from him recently.

She was at my house when her daughter telephoned her of his unexpected arrival and of course and of course she went home at once to be with him as such as possible.

"I suppose Tad felt he couldn't last week out without some home cooking," she said when she mentioned a visit the next day.

"No," she said, "it wasn't just that, although I did manage to give him a pretty good dinner," she smiled in pleased reminiscence. "It was because something troubled him and he said a boy who always comes home when there's anything wrong."

Isn't She a Rich Woman?

My neighbor is a woman of small means, financially, and yet I call her a rich woman. Don't you?

Don't you think that any father or mother who can say of his child with reason that he or she always comes home when there's anything wrong, has an infinite treasure in that treasure-house of the heart here neither moths nor rust can corrupt nor thieves break through and steal?

There are kings and Croeseuses who might well envy.

When I wrote about the trouble farmers and their sons, sometimes I was getting along together when both stay on the farm, a farmer's wife wrote me of her own case in which there was no such difficulty.

Father is the Best One of Them All? "We have two boys," runs part of her letter. "To-day one boy asked, 'Who is in the barn?' and I said, 'Father is the only one out there.' He said, 'All right, I'll go out. Father is the best one of them all to talk to.' And this is typical of the good feeling between the boys and their father."

How proud that father may well be! Whatever his farm is (and I'll wager that a man who can raise a crop of confidence and trust like that can raise other good crops) he is a success in one big part of life.

It is not an easy thing to win a field through the years. It means that you must make your child feel your desire and ability to be just.

You Have to Pay Real Attention.

It means interest in him and his affairs, and intelligent interest. If he tells you about the boys on the team one day and the next day you have forgotten their names and what he said about them and have to be told all over again, the habit of talking things over at home won't be encouraged in him.

It means a realization on your part of how important a child's affairs seem to him.

It means the willingness to give that which many of us are so greedy to receive and so slow to give—genuine sympathy.

Large financial returns are seldom won without great effort and concentration, and sacrifice in some direction.

It is the same with the great treasures of the heart.

Where Trade Names Come From.

Do you know that the Company of Stationers existed long before the invention of printing? A stationer was a dealer at one time, who kept a shop or stall, as distinguished from the itinerant vendor, whether of books or broomsticks. So long as the seller remained stationary he was called a "stationer." In 1622 only dealers in books were called stationers.

A pedlar, according to Johnson, was a "petty-dealer," and the word pedlar is said to be an abbreviation of the hyphenated word. The Teutonic word, however, is "bedeljar," signifying a "beggar." The Danish derive the word from their "betelers," which likewise means a "beggar," so most probably pedlars were once beggars.

A draper's name is derived from the French "drap" and "drapier"—a "clothier." The word "draper" once only referred to woollen cloth, and to make matters quite clear, the word "linen" was eventually added. Hence, we now hear of "linendrapers."

A milliner's shop was originated in "Milan," from which word the name "milliner" was made. Ladies of Europe at one time flocked to Milan, that city being the centre of fashion in all matters of taste in woman's dress.

Shoemakers were formerly called "Cordwainers," and as Cordovan leather was employed in making the finest shoes, and the French shoemakers were once known as "Cordovaniers," it is quite feasible that "Cordwainer" is a corruption of the latter word.

Missing.

Amongst a host of good stories told by Mr. J. K. Hackett, the famous American actor, is one concerning a certain Sunday school teacher "over there" who (he says) was trying to make clear to his class the fundamental doctrines of the American Declaration of Independence.

"Now, boys," he said, "I will give you each three ordinary buttons. Here they are. You must think of the first one as representing Life, of the second as representing Liberty, and the third one as representing Pursuit of Happiness. Next Sunday I will ask you each to produce the three buttons and tell me what they represent."

The following Sunday the teacher said to the youngest member. "Now, Johnnie, produce your three buttons and tell me what they stand for."

"I ain't got 'em all," he sobbed. "Here's Life, an' here's Liberty, but mommer sewed the Pursuit of Happiness on my knickers."

BANK HOLIDAYS.

Our bank is closed three days a week, in honor of some cheap event; "This is the day," the tellers shriek, "when o'er the ice Eliza went; and so we close our gorgeous doors and drop all useless toil, and play; and customers and kindred bores must come around some other day." I have nine dollars in its vaults, and if I wish to pay a bill, and to that granite building waltz, the doors are closed, already, still, I seek the cashier vexed and cross, and ask him why the door are shut: "This is the day when Charlie Ross was kidnapped by some looted nut. And so all banks are closed, my man, for banks must celebrate such things; and if you do not like this plan, you're free to lump the same, by Jings." Some days all business must be done "neath handicaps that knock it flat; no man in town can get his mon—the banks are closed for this or that. We hear the onyx portals slam, the banker shoos us all away; for Mary had a little lamb, and all the banks observe the day. I'd like to draw a silver buck; the bank is closed, with all my pils, in honor of the man who struck one William Patterson, erst-while.

ON DINING WITH QUARRELSOME COUPLES.
I freely confess there are good friends of mine, with whom we are often invited to dine, who get on my nerves so that I cannot eat. Or stay with my usual ease in my seat. For I know that if something should wrangle and shout which he may like or which doesn't please her.

That we'll have to try to be pleasant somehow. While they stage a fine little family row.

Now a family row is a private affair. And guests, I am certain, should never be there; I have freely maintained that a man cannot always agree on their journey through life.

But they ought not to bicker and wrangle and shout and show off their rage when their friends are about; It takes all the joy from a party, I vow.

When some couple starts up a family row.

It's a difficult job to stay cool and polite. When your host and your hostess are staging a fight; It's hard to talk sweet to a dame with a frown.

Or smile at a man that you want to knock down; You sit like a dummy and look far away.

But you just can't help hearing the harsh things they say. It ruins the dinner, I'm telling you now.

When your host and your hostess get mixed in a row.

Diving for 3,000,000 Pounds.

A Risky and Unpleasant Job.
One hundred and twenty feet below the surface working among a huge mass of debris that once was a ship's hull, and with pressure from the water at fifty pounds to the square inch; such are the conditions under which the divers work while trying to save £3,000,000 in specie from the wreck of the Laurentic. The liner was sunk off the north coast of Ireland in 1917, with £3,000,000 on board.

Two-thirds of this amount was salvaged soon after the disaster, and whilst on the job a diver had an exciting experience. The salvage vessel was attacked by enemy submarines and had to run for it. There was no time even to raise the diver, so he was towed! Luckily the life-line held, and the man was later brought up in safety.

Such incidents as that are regarded by the men as being part of the day's work.

Going down after treasure is not the only job the diver gets. For six years one man toiled in the dark and water under Winchester Cathedral. The building had been erected on a bed of peat, and was slowly subsiding. The task was to take out the peat and substitute cement, and it was rendered more difficult by the fact that as the peat was dug out the cavity filled with water. But in the end the work was carried out successfully, and the cathedral saved.

Again in colliery districts, divers are often required to go down into mines that have been flooded; at other times they are called upon to enter gasometers, and many times they have been employed by the police to search river-beds and the like for various reasons.

Some few years back a diver was sent down by the French police to search for the body of a missing man. It was reported that the man had fallen over the side of a ship by accident, but the allegation was put forward that he had been murdered and the body thrown overboard. The body was found with wounds upon it that fixed the crime on the guilty person.

The work of saving specie is often risky and arduous, but generally the rewards for success are good. When Lambert and Tester brought up $90,000 from the wreck of the Alphonso XII, their commission amounted to £4,000 and £1,200 respectively.

Strangulation of Trade.

The letter from Capt. John H. Pike, of Channel, published in the Telegram yesterday, is additional proof of the unpopularity of the Fish Regulations, as they bear on the small dealer to the detriment of his trade and living. Captain Pike is one of many master mariners, who have spent the best years of their life in carrying cargoes from and to Newfoundland, at imminent risk, and as he says in his letter, he has now abandoned the sea and settled down to enjoy the pleasures of shore life, putting whatever money he made into a small trading venture, in order to give personal occupation during his remaining period on earth. In common with other men doing the same class of business, he necessarily has to take in the way of trade or barter, during the season small parcels of dry fish, which are bought in any quantities from fourteen pounds up to a quintal. These little lots gradually increase in complement and value, until they attain fair proportions to a limited business, a hundred quintals being considered a respectable collection. Having made this collection, representing a sum in the vicinity of one thousand dollars—at current prices—they are naturally desirous of converting the fish into cash to meet bills payable. But Mr. Coaker here intervenes and says, loudly and emphatically, NO!

What is the reason for this prohibition by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries? Is it because he thinks that these men are in direct competition with the large exporter and more influential trader? It must be so, because he deliberately sacrifices the smaller man on the altar of larger. "If you are a bona fide fishermen," runs his instruction, "you may export one hundred quintals without a license, but if you are a business man export of that quantity will not be allowed unless you take out a license." Seems absurd doesn't it to demand the purchase of a license at a cost of fifty dollars to cover the export of any shipment of fish up to one hundred quintals from men who have bartered goods for small lots up to this complement, and when their total collection for a whole year does not exceed this. It is not only bringing about the strangulation of the small business man, but it is putting him clean on the rocks. The cost of a license for the export of one hundred quintals would mean an extra fifty cents on the cost. For smaller lots the proportion would be greater. Thus the man who bartered in little lots, finds himself saddled with additional expense on account of license fee, and consequently cannot realize his original outlay. Should he desire to sell locally, he has perforce to accept the price offered by the big exporter, which may also entail a loss. Therefore the small trader is between the devil of the regulations on the one hand and the deep sea of loss on the other. Is it any wonder then that the deepest anathemas are being hurled at the Fish Regulations by fishermen, planters, and small traders, alike?

A Retraction.

A contributed article in the Telegram of date September 22, page 7, under the caption, "The Effect of the Government Fishery Regulations on the Trade of Newfoundland," contains a statement reflecting upon the stability of Messrs. Hawes & Co., the words used being as follows:

"At times Hawes & Co. must have had acceptances running into hundreds of thousands of dollars, many of these drafts being extended after the expiration date." In giving publicity to this we did not realize at the moment the financial injury it might have caused to Messrs. Hawes & Co., nor would we wish for a moment to publish anything calculated to damage the integrity of that firm, and we have no hesitation in withdrawing the statement of our contributor, and offering our sincere regrets for the publication of such, particularly as we understand that our correspondent was misinformed. In addition we present our apologies to Messrs. Hawes & Co. for any inconvenience which might have been caused them by the expression of such a sentiment as contained in the article in question.

Notes and Comments.

"Jones is the finest after-dinner speaker I have ever heard."
"Indeed!"
"Yes; he always says, 'Waiter, give that bill to me.'"

Why penalize the small trader by exacting a license for the export of one hundred quintals only? That is what the Coaker Fish Regulations have accomplished.

Probably the correct Passenger (Outwards and Inwards) Returns from the Custom House, would tell a different story, from that which the Advocate relates. Figures may be twisted to suit any purpose. Let the public have a sworn statement.

Isn't it great to know that because of the profound (ahem) knowledge of our Food Control Board, sugar prices are set at 32 cents per pound in the city, plus transportation and other charges in the outports, when it might to-day be imported and sold at about half that price?

Joseph Walker, parish verger at Mill Hill, Haddon, Great Britain, and his wife, who have just celebrated their diamond wedding, were married in 1860, at Wilmington, Bedfordshire, by the Rev. Augustus Orlebar, who figures in "Tom Brown's School-days."

The Morning Chronicle, Halifax, asks if the refiners who piled up gigantic stocks of sugar which they expected to sell at top-notch prices are going to be protected against loss, every other kind of business, which misjudged the market and overstocked its wares, has a right to ask the Government for similar protection.

Mrs. Murphy: "Sure, and what is Ryan's girl learning at the boarding-house school at all?"

Mrs. Brown: "Oh, music, drawing, wood-carving, and poker-work—and such-like."
Mrs. Murphy: "Poker-work is it? Well, now, if her old mother had been alive it's herself that could have shown her the way; and well old Ryan knew it."

A portion of a bursting fly-wheel sailed through the roof of the electric light plant at Richmond, Ky., early one morning recently to the home of Wallace Hunter, 800 yards away, where it killed his young daughter, Fanny, and clipped the braids from the head of her sleeping woman companion. The missile crashed through the floor and side of the dwelling and was found in the yard two feet under ground.

St. George's Coal Fields.

EXPERTS PLEASED WITH PROSPECTS.

Mr. Thomas Freeman, who for the past week has been at St. George's in connection with the St. George's Coal Fields property, returned to the city by last evening's express. He reports that during the summer considerable development work has been done and several new sections of known seams have been uncovered. The new seam lately opened up has been further developed and the coal has proved to be of excellent quality. As the work of uncovering the seams progresses the property is seen to be ever so much more valuable than at first realized. A party of coal mine owners and engineers from Philadelphia has recently inspected the property and they expressed themselves as highly pleased with what they have seen. They were, however, at a loss to know why Newfoundland has to import coal.

Sable I. Here and Gone.

S.S. Sable I. arrived in port at 1 o'clock this morning from North Sydney, bringing the following passengers: F. J. Conaughton, Miss M. Ball, Mr. L. Levanjic, G. E. Ottor, Stephen West, P. Ring. The captain reports that on Saturday a fierce storm raged at Sydney, and the sea was mountainous, and for the day not one ship could leave or enter port. This storm delayed the sailing of the Sable I. and she did not get away before Sunday morning. She left here at 2 p.m. to-day for Sydney, taking the following passengers: C. R. Drayton, J. G. Rennie, Mrs. A. Hayes, C. Connors, Miss M. Richards, T. Mally, L. S. Fraser, D. M. Steverday, S. L. Storkensen, Mrs. S. Maloney, F. Melton, A. L. Flemming, Miss Campbell, J. T. Telephone Company Doing Good Work.

The Avalon Telephone Co. are making great progress with their work of installing the new phone system. Already the aerial cables, some 40,000 feet, have been strung and two thirds of the splicing have been completed. The new station on Duckworth Street is nearing completion, the outside being practically finished, and in the course of 5 or 6 weeks the inside will be ready for occupancy. The new switchboard in the building on Rochester, N., and should be here in a week or two. This switchboard is of the latest type being semi-automatic, that is when a subscriber has been put on the connection required, the operator need not further trouble with, "did you get them yet," as the phone bell will ring until the number wanted answers. The person ringing up will hear the bell sounding so that the vexation of not knowing if the number has been called is obviated. The laying of the underground cables from Prescott to Waldegrave Streets has begun and the whole system will be ready to cut over about the end of the year. Of late subscribers have been much annoyed by cutting in of conversation and losing the lines, etc. This we are informed can hardly be avoided while the men are working amongst the wires.

Nfld. Schooner to Challenge

CRAFT FROM BELLEoram MAY SAIL IN INTERNATIONAL EVENT. (Sydney Post.)

According to passengers arriving here from Newfoundland, there is much talk in that country of entering a schooner in the international schooner race, which is now planned for between the Delaware, the Lunenburg schooner which won the ocean race at Halifax, and a Gloucester schooner.

The Newfoundlanders are of the opinion that no schooner or province can lay claim to the Atlantic coast championship until Newfoundland has been defeated. As Lunenburg is the home port of Nova Scotia's finest schooners and Gloucester of America's, so also is the port of Belleoram on the South coast of Newfoundland looked upon as the habitat of the colony's finest sailing vessels. It is thought that a vessel from this port may be picked out and that a challenge will be extended to the winner of the Halifax-Gloucester event.

Had Rough Trip.

SABLE I. 61 HOURS, ST. JOHN'S TO SYDNEY.

After a tempestuous voyage of sixty-one hours, the steamer Sable I. from St. John's docked at North Sydney at midnight. To instance difference in conditions over previous trips it might be noted that the steamer has made that in thirty-six hours. Mountainous seas and strong head winds prevailed almost the entire passage, though the first six hours of the trip comparatively good time was made. When the ship passed Cape Race the trouble began in earnest and the thirty-five passengers had one of the most interesting trips of their lives on the ocean wave. The Sable I. however, is a splendid sea boat and came through the rough experience without the slightest damage in any way. It is said to be somewhat unusual to encounter so stiff and long continued a gale and the trip finished at midnight, constitutes the longest and roughest in Captain Murley's experience with the Sable I. on the St. John's-North Sydney run. Passengers coming over this trip are mostly from upper Canada and western points.—Sydney Record, Oct. 15.

Inter-Collegiate Football

The Methodist and Bishop Field College teams were contestants in the opening game of the Inter-Collegiate football series played yesterday evening on St. George's Field. Owing to the wet spurt this while back the ground was in a bad state, nevertheless the average number of spectators were treated to a good exhibition of the game. Though both teams played hard there was no scoring done in the first half. In the second half both sides put forth their best efforts to score and up to about ten minutes before full time it looked as if the game would be a draw. However, Peters of the Methodist team, getting an opening, saved the situation. The Fieldians did all in their power to even up the score but were unsuccessful and the final whistle sounded 1 to 0.

To-Night's Dance in C. C. C. Hall.

Under the supervision of the management of the Jazzola Orchestra, the dance in the C.C.C. Hall to-night promises to be the biggest event of the season. For the first time St. John's will have the pleasure of having two orchestras perform at the same dance. The Jazzola, already famous for its round dance music, will have the assistance of a brass band of ten instruments to furnish music for the square dances. The Hall has been newly decorated and it goes without saying that to-night's dance will be an immense success.

Elks Hold Special Session

The Elks No. 1, Newfoundland, held a special session last night for the initiation of candidates and for exemplification of degrees. A number of candidates took the obligation and several others were admitted. The brethren again had the pleasure of a visit from Brother Crowell, of B.P. O.E. 647, Rutherford, N.Y., Chief Officer of the S.S. Delco. After initiation and degree work, the brethren were entertained to a light luncheon and adjournment did not follow until midnight.

Vicious Class Legislation

Halifax Grocers Refuse to Obey Order Fixing Price of Sugar.

Halifax, N.S., Oct. 14.—At a meeting to-day of the Halifax members of the Wholesale Grocers' Guild of Nova Scotia, it was decided to refuse to obey the order of the Board of Commerce, fixing the price of sugar in Canada. The grocers consider that such an order practically establishing a minimum price is unjust to the consumer.

In an interview, Michael Dwyer, president of the Wholesale Grocers' Guild of Nova Scotia said: "The whole enormous advance in sugar was caused by speculators, and the refiners of this country were not the least of the speculators. They have appealed successfully to the government to protect them by mulcting every householder who consumes a pound of sugar to the extent of six or seven cents. It is most vicious class legislation, offends the sense of justice of everyone, and cannot be defended on any grounds. A protest against this class legislation should go up from one end of Canada to the other."

(Newfoundland Wholesale Grocers would do well to follow this example.)

Canada's Trade With Newfoundland.

At the recent meeting of the North Sydney Board of Trade, some facts and figures were presented in connection with trade with Newfoundland, showing it to be much more important locally than is perhaps generally understood, and it is a business which is steadily developing. In 1909 Canadian exports to Newfoundland stood at $3,937,009. In 1915, $4,509,827. In 1919 they had risen to $11,469,657. Exports in 1902 from Sydney harbor were $3,280,217; imports, $1,955,840. In 1917 exports were $7,838,693; imports $2,898,936. The great bulk of this business went through North Sydney. Freight collected in 1915 were $120,867, rising in 1919 to $544,200. Besides the Newfoundland trade about 15,000 tons of freight were carried annually to St. Pierre.

United States export business to Newfoundland had risen from $5,841,677 in 1915 to $15,189,805 in 1919. Four millions per annum more than Canadian trade, despite the fact that the U.S. is 200 miles farther south. A reference to the figures given above shows the large volume of business between this port and Newfoundland, and the adverse way in which it is affected by unfair discrimination in freight rates. Freight rates which advance from 1 cent to 2 cents per hundredweight between St. John and Halifax, go up 6 cents to 8 cents between St. John and the Sydneys. These rates naturally affect in a very adverse way local prices, as well as militate against export trade. For instance, freight rates per hundred pound, on Grain and grain products (local) from Toronto—to St. John, 46; to Halifax, 47 1-2. Sugar (local)—To St. John, 70 1-2; to Halifax, 73; to Sydney or North Sydney, 80 1-2; and so on through the list of commodities.

"A Tailor Made Man."

AT THE CASINO NEXT WEEK.

A tailor shop is the last place in the world that an ordinary man would look for comedy. Perhaps that's why Harry James Smith went there—and found it. He found fun in the goose and in the cross-legged man on the table. He put every man in the audience in sympathetic good humor with his true-to-life portrayal of the talkative tailor measuring the victims for a new suit of clothes. Intermingling his conversation with occasional muttered numbers which an assistant is supposed to repeat, and you feeling all the time, down in your heart, that he is making mistakes. It's the true-to-life stuff that makes the comedy so delightful. See "A Tailor Made Man" at the Casino Theatre next Monday. Tickets on sale at Fred V. Chesman's on Friday Morning.

Cost of the World War in Lives.

The cost of the world war to the human race is estimated at thirty-five million lives, according to the figures of the Danish statistician, Doring. The figures about equal the present population of France. Of the total, Doring counts ten millions killed in action or died of wounds, five millions from the increase in mortality among the civil populations during the war, but the largest group estimated is the loss of twenty millions due to the abnormal decrease in the birth rate.

Concerning France in particular, whose losses stand next in order after Austria, Hungary, Poland, the Balkans and Russia, the total population, according to Doring, diminished seven per cent. Frenchmen between the ages of twenty and forty-four decreased at the rate of twenty per cent., which contributed to the present day ratio of one hundred and twenty-six women to every hundred men.

While the losses in Eastern Europe were proportionately greater than in France they were not all military deaths, but the great majority were due to famine, epidemics, and especially typhus, which still is ravaging many regions.

Oily skin and

How to correct them

Do you know that the oil in your skin is necessary to keep it smooth, velvety, supple? This oil is constantly being produced by the glands of the skin. When it is too abundant the result is an oily skin and a shiny nose. You can relieve this embarrassing condition by using the following treatment as frequently as is necessary.

With warm water work up a heavy lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap in your hands. Apply it to your face and rub it into the pores thoroughly—always with an upward and outward motion. Rinse with warm water, then with cold—the colder the better. If possible, rub your face for thirty seconds with a piece of ice.

This treatment will make your skin firmer and drier the very first time you try it. Use it as often as your skin requires, nightly if necessary, and before long you will see a marked improvement.

Get a cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap and begin tonight the treatment your skin needs. You will find Woodbury's on sale at any drug store or toilet goods counter in the United States or Canada. A 25 cent cake will last a month or six weeks.

Manuel Rejects Coup to Regain Throne.

At a secret meeting of his partisans held at his country home at Twickenham, near London, ex-King Manuel of Portugal declared his irrevocable intention never to seek to regain the throne from which he was banished. A message had been despatched from Lisbon urging King Manuel to counter the threatened Soviet movement by making another bid for the throne, the monarchy still being popular in parts of Portugal. The former King exhaustively reviewed the conditions prevailing in his native country, and finally came to the conclusion that another monarchal coup would make Bolshevism inevitable if it failed, as many previous attempted coups have done.

Has Canadian Girl Prince's Heart?

An interesting rumor that the Prince of Wales became engaged during his tour in Canada is current in the political clubs and Canadian circles, says a despatch from London. The story originated from a woman member of the Royal household, who said the identity of the girl was being kept a secret pending the Prince's return to England. Official quarters will neither confirm nor deny the report. "The Prince is better known to the Dominion and colonies than here in England, and perhaps Canada can supply the information," is the answer given to one interviewer.

Like Casabianca.

A fire guard in the Shenandoah national forest not so long found himself in a predicament similar to that of Casabianca, although his decision was not so silly. Discovering that there were three bears at the foot of the lookout tower in which he was stationed without any arms of any kind, he telephoned for permission to leave at the first chance and get a gun. The district ranger replied that the forests were dry, that a fire might start anywhere at any time and that he must stay where he was, bears or no bears; and the guard stayed.

After a time some one who had "hit the netted in" came to his rescue.

George Romney and His Divine Lady.

When George Romney was born, one December day in 1734, under the humbled roof of his father, the village carpenter of Beckside, near Dalton-Furness, he seemed as remote from fame and romance as from Mars; and yet he was fated to become one of the greatest artists of his day, to move in high circles, and to have his name romantically linked through the ages with one of the most beautiful women who have ever enslaved men.

A Scolded Boyhood.

One of a large family, he spent a scolded boyhood in the Lancashire village. At ten his pitiful schooling was ended, and he was working at his father's bench, carving wood and drawing in his few spare hours, until he won this emancipation when a Kendal artist, called Steele, saw the lad's promise and took him into his studio to teach him the art of science of a painter.

Later, when Steele left him in the arch by eloping with an heiress to Petra Green, we find young Romney, possibly infected by his patron's example, challenging Fate by adding to his handicap the burden of a wife. How and where he first met Mary Abbot, of Kirkland, we know not. We know, however, that she was an exceedingly worthy girl, with some pretensions to artistic beauty, and that, after a brief and unromantic wooing, he married her one day in 1756, more from a sense of duty than from any love she had inspired in him.

Turn Your Rain Coat Into an Overcoat.

Overcoat prices are going to be high this winter, and overcoats no better. $70, $80, $90, sound dolefully to the ears of your pocket-book, eh? Why not turn your raincoat into an overcoat? And that's where we step into the breach. Yes, sir, when we present one of our cosy lamb's fleece linings to your admiring gaze your sense of comfort will rise in rejoicing and your pocket-book shout hurrah! For here's the solution to high overcoat prices.

Fleece Interlinings for Raglans, Raincoats, and Overcoats.

Buttons inside your own raincoat, remains invisible; the only difference it makes is in your added comfort. The whole combination weighs scarcely half as heavy as a winter coat. Bring this with you and you are prepared for any weather, rain, hail or snow—or shine. In summer just unbutton the lining and wear the coat in the ordinary way. An overcoat can be worn only for one season; fit your raincoat or raglan with a fleece lining and you can wear it all through the year. Yes, it sure does put the half-Nelson on the weather.

Special To-Day:

Waterproof Walking Coat, fitted with lamb's wool lining, both totalling $60. $50 To-Day.
Fleece Linings separately, priced $20. $15 To-Day.

A Bid For Fame And Fortune.

However cold-blooded his marriage may have been, it at least served the purpose of "putting him on his mettle," and he set to work to keep his domestic cupboard supplied by painting portraits of the local gentry at "two guineas a head, life-size, and small and small full-lengths six guineas."

And such was his success that he was not only able to provide a comfortable home for his wife and the two babies that came to them, but to save money. It was not long, however, before Romney wearied of his prosaic home-life and his restricted field of work. He yearned to go out into the world and try his wings at loftier flights; and in 1762 we see him handing seventy pounds of his little nest-egg of a hundred pounds to his wife and, with the remaining thirty pounds in his pocket, faring south to London and, as he hoped, to fame and fortune—little dreaming under what changed and pathetic conditions he would return, nearly forty years later, to the wife on whom he so lightly turned his back.

"How touching," says Edward Fitzgerald, "is the close of Romney's life. He married at twenty-one and, because Sir Joshua and others had said that marriage spoiled an artist, left his wife in the north, and saw her but twice till the end of his life, when, old, nearly mad, and quite desolate, he went back to her, and she received him and nursed him till he died."

Whatever may have been the precise motive of this cowardly desertion, which will always sully Romney's memory, we know that he settled down quite happily to his battle with fortune in London, with little thought of the deserted wife and the children he had left so far away; and it was not long before Fortune began to smile sweetly on the runaway.

So successful was he with his portrait-painting that he had soon saved enough money to pay an artistic visit to Paris in 1764; and on his return to London his studio in Great Newport Street was so besieged by sitters that even the great Sir Joshua Reynolds had at last a really formidable rival.

Thousands a Year.

His income was now soaring into thousands a year—in one year his portraits brought him 3,500 guineas, an enormous revenue from art in those days; and during these long years of rich harvesting we are told "he almost entirely neglected his wife and children, and only twice did he visit them." He was now the second most successful portrait-painter in London, with five, and occasionally six, sitters a day; a favourite in society circles, and an intimate friend of many of the greatest in England. And it was at this time of triumph that romance came to him for the first and last time in his life.

One day in 1782 the Honourable Charles Greville, a younger son of the Earl of Warwick, introduced Romney to his protegee, the beautiful Emma Hart, who in the years to come was to blossom into My Lady Hamilton, as wife of our Ambassador at the Court of Naples, and to live in history as Nelson's "beloved Emma."

The Beautiful Emma.

At sight of Emma's radiant young loveliness the middle-aged artist is said to have completely lost his heart. Nor can we wonder when we look on any of the canvases on which Romney has made her beauty immortal. From that hour she was to him his "divine lady," "the most perfect woman in the world." She was an object of worship, rather than of mortal passion. To be near her, to feast on her loveliness, to sit at her feet in the home she shared with her mother and Greville in Edgware Row, was "all of Heaven he craved."

"If Romney painted that superb creature once," we are told, "he painted her scores of times"—as Hebe and as a Bacchante. And this love, this idolatry, remained with Romney to his last day, long years after she had passed out of his life.—John O'London's Weekly.

Old Friends Are Best.

True friendships like the old oak tree, When bending to the blast, It sinks its roots in safety, And holds on to the last.

And so it is with old-time friends— We'll never let them go Until our earthly trouble ends, Because we love them so.

We love old friends, for, don't you see, They know us to the core And bring again to memory The youthful days once more.

We love old friends the very best, The reason why is clear, We love them better than the rest, They've proved themselves sincere.

No matter where grim duty sends Us onward by the way, We treasure then a few old friends To chum with while we stay.

And when we leave this world of care, To back in Heaven's sunshine, We'll hunt a cosy corner there And sing of "Auld Lang Syne."

Feathered Frauds.

Apart from the natural camouflage which speckled feathers and patches of colour, like dazzle painting on ships, afford birds for their protection, there is no doubt that birds have little tricks which, consciously or instinctively, they employ to frighten away intruders. Can anyone doubt that the long neck of goose and swan, and the hissing sound they both make, is a good imitation of the snake in the grass? Of course, it is necessary to think of these birds in their wild state, nesting among the reeds. A marauding fox, or wolf, or pine-martin, happens along, intent on eggs for breakfast at least, or better still, a tender gosling, or cygnet. Suddenly, out darts the snake-like neck hissing like a whole basketful of serpents, and the intruder turns tail and flees from the poisonous spot.

The wryneck builds its nest in the hollow of a tree, and if any prying person should thrust a hand into this hole he hears a most menacing hissing, and he withdraws the hand very smartly, lest the adder should bite him. Even the blue titmouse, an inoffensive little bird enough, will imitate a snake, producing a most alarming hiss if her nest is approached by cat or human.

The well-known dodge of the lapping to lure the egg-gatherer from her eggs is another case of cute trickery. The lapping, or plover, makes her nest on the ground, and when she sees a stranger approaching she flies just in front of him, constantly seeming to fall, as if her wing were injured or broken. Naturally, boy or man will make some attempt to catch her, and that is exactly what she wants.

The Carpenter-Levinsky Fight.

BATTLER PUT TO SLEEP IN FOUR ROUNDS.

JERSEY CITY, N.J., October 12.—George Carpenter, the French heavyweight, made his initial bow as a fighter before an American gathering of patrons of pugilism to-night and knocked out Battling Levinsky, who held the United States light-heavyweight title, in 87 seconds of the fourth round. Carpenter, who holds the light-heavyweight championship of Europe, is now the world's title holder of that division.

Early in 1918 Jack Dempsey, who subsequently won the world's heavyweight championship, knocked out Levinsky in three rounds at Philadelphia. To-night Carpenter failed to equal Dempsey's time in finishing Levinsky, but he is the only one outside of the champion who has knocked out Levinsky since the latter became prominent as a fighter.

Making a line through Levinsky, Carpenter has earned the right to meet Dempsey for the world's championship.

Levinsky was in splendid condition, and so was Carpenter. From the middle of the first round, when the Frenchman began to cut loose, the outcome was inevitable. His blows were well delivered and effective, while Levinsky's plucky returns were too light to cut any figure. Twice in the second round Carpenter sent Levinsky to the floor of the ring with hard right crosses. During the third session, Carpenter slowed up a bit and seemed undecided as to what his next move should be. When he did start after his man, however, he used both hands powerfully and Levinsky, who always was credited with being able to absorb punishment, was visibly weakened.

In the final round Carpenter simply battered Levinsky into submission, and when the battler fell almost through the ropes into a neutral corner he was unable to get up while Referee Ertle counted him out.

Levinsky was badly punished, while Carpenter did not show a mark when he left the ring.

Round Three.—Carpenter rushed and landed his right to the head. Levinsky clinched. Carpenter missed right and left for the head. Levinsky jabbed three lefts to face and Carpenter swung right to head. Carpenter hooked left to face and slowed up a bit while Levinsky kept him off with light lefts. Carpenter was waiting for an opening when the bell rang. Carpenter's round.

Round Four.—Both fiddled for half a minute. Then Carpenter drove Levinsky across the ring, landing lefts and rights at will, finally sending Levinsky down in a corner for the full count. Levinsky was not unconscious, but he was tangled up in a corner on the ropes while he was counted out. Time of round, 1:07.

Mrs. B. Guilmet Gains 30 Pounds By Taking Tanlac

Montreal Woman Says She Feels 20 Years Younger And Can't Express Her Gratitude.

"By taking Tanlac I have actually gained thirty pounds in weight and feel all of twenty years younger," was the truly remarkable statement made the other day by Mrs. Bernadette Guilmet, of 324 Drolet St., Montreal.

"The six years previous to the time I got Tanlac was just one broken period of suffering for me. My stomach was so disordered there were a number of things I never dared eat and even fresh bread and vegetables always gave me trouble. After eating I had a heavy feeling and almost unbearable pains in the pit of my stomach, and gas formed which pressed on my heart and made it beat so violently I thought my time had come.

"I had no appetite and even the smell of things cooking made me sick. My liver was badly out of order, and I suffered constantly from awful sick headaches. My nerves were so upset the least noise would almost set me wild. I had constant pains in my back and couldn't stoop over or bend about without intense pain.

"This went on till I just had to put myself on a rigid diet, and, in fact, for six weeks took practically no solid food whatever. In seeking relief I tried everything I could think of or heard about, but nothing helped me, and I was going down in health all the time.

"But I declare, it's just wonderful how different everything is with me since I have taken Tanlac. My appetite is splendid, and I can eat pork or any kind of vegetables, or, in fact, just anything I want, and never feel even the least inconvenience afterwards.

"My nerves are steady, I sleep fine, and all the headaches and back-aches have left me. My friends who haven't seen me since before I took Tanlac hardly know me for the same person when they meet me. I just can't find language to fully express my gratitude to Tanlac."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, in Paradise by Mrs. Martin E. Byrne, in Upper Gillies by Heber Andrews, in Portland by H. C. Haines, in St. Joseph, Salmonier, by Mrs. J. Guehne, in Millertown by Exploits Valley Royal Stores, Ltd., in Flat Island by William Samson, in Jamestown by Christopher Haines, and in Lewisporte by Uriah Freaks.—adv

Cattle Drivers Need Attention.

The attention of the S.P.C.A. Inspector is called to the inhuman treatment given to cattle whilst being driven from the sales to the slaughtering premises. Young drivers may be seen at any time belabouring animals with heavy sticks unmindful of the punishment they inflict. A word of caution to these lads would have the desired effect.

A few minutes after the word was passed along the waterfront, the tug Togo, Captain LeBlanc, with four of the vessel's crew on board, proceeded to the scene, and for an hour and a half grappled for the body without success. The tug Weatherspoon also assisted in the grappling. Being unsuccessful, the men returned to their craft, one of them coming ashore to remain in the city and help the search for the body.

By four o'clock the vessel had raised her anchor and again headed for sea. Her mainsail had not been lowered and the foresail, jumbo and jib were hoisted. Thus she sailed out past George's Island, passing almost over the identical spot where her skipper had been drowned four hours previous.

The spot where Captain Lohnes was knocked overboard is on a line with the Breakwater and the Oil Docks, not far from the Halifax shore and a few yards behind the starting line of the race. At the time the tide was running out, and the body may have been carried by the current some distance. There is about ninety feet of water in the vicinity.

Swept Overboard and Drowned.

SAD SEQUEL TO SCHOONER RACE.

A sad sequel to Nova Scotia's first ocean schooner race took place in Halifax Harbor yesterday at noon, when Captain Calvin Lohnes, skipper of the schooner Ruby L. Pontz, the only LaHave contestant, lost his life by drowning a few yards from the starting and finishing line of Monday's great race. The vessel was homeward bound at the time of the accident, and her crew were hoisting the mainsail, when the wind caught the flapping canvas, sweeping Captain Lohnes overboard. A dory was immediately launched, but he sank before it reached him. Up to last night his body had not been recovered.

By the drowning of Captain Lohnes the Lunenburg fishing fleet has lost its youngest skipper, for he was but twenty-three years of age. Although his boat was not among the first to complete the course on Monday, she sailed a good race, and much praise was showered on the young captain for his work. He was a lucky fisherman and this season secured a good catch. The entire fleet will mourn his loss, for he was a favorite with all.

Yesterday's accident has an additional sad aspect, for a brother of the Captain, Joseph Lohnes, was on the schooner and witnessed the drowning. Joseph was the first in the launched dory and he did his utmost to save his brother, who was struggling in the water to keep himself afloat. When the dory was about two lengths away Calvin Lohnes sank and did not come again to the surface.

The Ruby L. Lentz, which is of the knockabout type, had left Campbell's wharf shortly after noon for LaHave. There was a strong northerly breeze blowing, and the vessel made good headway under her foresail, jumbo and jib. Passing down through the western passage of George's Island, her crew began to hoist the mainsail.

Swept Over the Rail.

The vessel had passed George's Island and was approaching the Breakwater when the accident occurred. She was running before the wind. Her mainsail was hoisted, by the auxiliary engine, a distance of about ten feet, and her crew had put the gaff to port of the backstay, so as to get the full benefit of the wind. Captain Lohnes was on the port side, standing near the rail, while another member of the crew held the vessel. The wind caught the loosely hanging mainsail, carrying it to port and dragging the rest of the canvas off the top of the after house. The canvas struck the Captain, who lost his balance and fell head first into the water.

The vessel was brought about and in two minutes a dory was launched, the crew picking it up and throwing it overboard. Joseph Lohnes, brother of the drowned man, was the first in the dory, and with his companions rowed rapidly towards where the Captain was struggling in the water. He was no swimmer and was paddling with his hands in an effort to keep himself afloat. Once he called to them to hurry, but that was all. The dory had reached to within twenty-five feet of him when he sank. For a few minutes the men rowed around the spot, hoping that their skipper would come to the surface again, and then returned to their vessel.

The dory was hauled aboard and the new Canadian Ensign, which was proudly flying from the mainmast, was hauled to a half-mast position. The vessel tacked up the harbor to an anchorage off the Custom House and the mate came ashore to report their loss.

Search for the Body.

A few minutes after the word was passed along the waterfront, the tug Togo, Captain LeBlanc, with four of the vessel's crew on board, proceeded to the scene, and for an hour and a half grappled for the body without success. The tug Weatherspoon also assisted in the grappling. Being unsuccessful, the men returned to their craft, one of them coming ashore to remain in the city and help the search for the body.

By four o'clock the vessel had raised her anchor and again headed for sea. Her mainsail had not been lowered and the foresail, jumbo and jib were hoisted. Thus she sailed out past George's Island, passing almost over the identical spot where her skipper had been drowned four hours previous.

The spot where Captain Lohnes was knocked overboard is on a line with the Breakwater and the Oil Docks, not far from the Halifax shore and a few yards behind the starting line of the race. At the time the tide was running out, and the body may have been carried by the current some distance. There is about ninety feet of water in the vicinity.

Captain Lohnes was unmarried and lived at Riverport, and is survived by five brothers and a sister. His death is greatly lamented on board the schooner Independence, the only one of the racing fleet that did not leave for home yesterday. As the Ruby D. Petz left her berth, those on the other vessel wished them bon voyage home. The Lun-

Little Girls Call Wilson An Anarchist.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—President Wilson was denounced yesterday as an anarchist in placards carried by little girls who paraded by the White House. The demonstration, if it can be characterized as such, was staged by Sinn Féin sympathizers, a majority of whom behind the affair were understood to be women.

One of the banners carried by a little girl in white referred to Premier Lloyd George as "Lloyd George the Anarchist and Wilson, his junior partner."

Another banner carried by a little girl bore the legend, "Mr. Wilson, American Women demand that anarchy in the White House be stopped."

Exactly why little children were chosen to take the leading part in the demonstration was not disclosed.

It was suggested, however, that the older persons, those behind the affair, were afraid they would be arrested if they carried the anarchic banners, and so they gave the banners to little girls, whom they knew the police would hesitate to take into custody.

There were nine banners in all, and in each instance the standard bearer was a little girl.

Roumanian Military Men Are Dandies.

The Roumanian, at least the city resident, is extremely fond of perfume, scented soap, rouge, cosmetics and other artificial aids to beauty. This applies not only to the women but to the men.

The average young Roumanian army officer is scented, powdered, rouged and often, it is said, corseted! His habits mark him for a good deal of raillery on the part of foreign officers and visitors. In dress he is as faultless as a Beau Brummel and in manner as polite as a Lord Chesterfield. He is seen at his best on Saturday or Sunday afternoon on the Cause Victoria (the Fifth Avenue of Bucharest.)

Dressed in a sky-blue uniform, gaudily trimmed with red high patent-leather boots with silver spurs that clink musically as he walks, glittering sword at side, white kid gloves and many military decorations, he makes a striking figure.

First Sight of a Pig.

Along the hard, dry, wind-swept road in a suburb came a drove of pigs—a most unusual spectacle in London of recent years. From the by-streets the children of the poor came hurrying to see, and it was clear from their comments that many of them had never seen a pig before.

"Look, Lizer!" cried one of the smallest among them. "Look, there's a plebald one."

"Course there is, stoopid," stid Lizer, who was clearly well versed in natural history. "Where else do yer think they get streaky bacon from?"—London Chronicle.

Gloucester Schooner May Race.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Oct. 13.—Fishermen here are stirred by the challenge of the Halifax Herald for a race for $5,000 between the schooner Delawana, which on Monday won the championship of the Nova Scotia fishing fleet, and a crack schooner of the Gloucester fleet. It is not likely that the challenge will pass unaccepted.

The race, it is arranged, will be a 40-mile triangular affair off Halifax, and the winner will be proclaimed schooner champion of the North Atlantic. It is thought that the Cathartes Burke, of this port will be the logical entrant.
