Earlier this evening I quoted some figures concerning the performance of this house to date. If I may, I would like to amend those figures slightly. We have sat for 188 days. We have not taken all the fixed days that are permitted under the rules. Six days in September were used for the throne speech debate instead of eight. The other two days went to the government for their use. Six days in October were spent on the budget debate, the full time. Four days this spring were spent on a budget debate, two less than the rules provided for, which meant two more days for the government.

There were 16 opposition days, Mr. Speaker, instead of the 19 to which we were entitled. We agreed we would use 1 of those 19 days as an extra day, so that we might have two days on a NATO debate. The other two days we are still entitled to and have not yet had. We agreed to hold over these two days until, the next session. I have my doubts that we will get them. In fact, Mr. Speaker, I am prepared to make a little bet with the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) that we will not get them. There are two more opposition days which we gave up. That is a total of six extra days for the government.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): On a point of privilege, Mr. Speaker; I voted against public lotteries!

Mr. Benjamin: I wonder if the Liberal backbenchers are aware of this kind of cooperation? Has the government house leader told them, particularly the new members in the backbenches, about all these things? Are they aware of this? I would like to disclose something which may or may not be a secret not disclosed to the caucus of other parties. Some members are beginning to feel we co-operate too much and that we were not elected to provide all this co-operation to the government. How much further are we to go before government members consider that they are receiving co-operation from the opposition?

The case for the need for rule 75c has yet to be presented. No evidence has been provided of opposition obstruction or delay. Until such time as irrefutable evidence is presented, this government, be it majority or any other kind, has no right to expect this opposition, the public of Canada or the news media to accept their case for the need for a rule such as 75c. There may be some reasonable argument, although I do not agree, that debate on two items of legislation in this session lasted an inordinate length of time. It could be argued by some that the debate on the omnibus bill took too long. I happened to feel, at one stage, that debate was taking too long. I have some reason to think the majority of opposition members felt the same way. Rule 75B, Mr. Speaker, would have taken care of that situation very nicely.

I would not for one moment say that the members of the party to my left were not entitled to express their opinions as fully, and as often as they could on matters on which they spoke out of their own conscience and beliefs. I could be wrong, but it seemed to me that the three other parties in this house felt the debate had gone on for long enough. Rule 75B would have taken care of that situation quite well.

It could be argued that, at one stage, the debate on the language bill took too long. I have a feeling that 75B would have taken care of that very nicely. In my opinion, these facts add more weight to the argument I am trying to put forward to the effect that rule 75c is not needed by this government. Until such time as they can provide the evidence that it is needed, the government has no business bringing it into this house.

The government forgets that the opposition in this parliament is very diverse. It is seldom that we have a united opposition. The debates on many of the pieces of legislation so far brought into this house in this session have surely shown this. The three opposition parties have taken turns voting with the government on various amendments or stages of legislation. This opposition is diverse, but on this issue it is united. Rule 75c is neither needed nor wanted. It is not necessary. The fact that this government brings in 75c indicates to me, and I believe to many people in Canada, a fundamental weakness in this government. They cry; they are born losers. They have their majority, but they are afflicted with something else; they have the imagination of a doorknob. They have yet to bring in legislation which no opposition would dare obstruct or delay. Most of the legislation they have brought in so far was not worth obstructing or delaying. There are two indications of the weakness of the government. The Criminal Code bill and the languages bill were old Pearson stuff, hangovers from the former Minister of Justice and from the Criminal Code debates in several previous parliaments.

• (8:10 p.m.)

These two weaknesses are illustrated by what has happened. The Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) gets up during the question period and cries that the opposition are not presenting alternatives. He wonders what the point of view of the opposition is. Hell's bells, Mr. Speaker, hon. members opposite are the government. Why do they not present legislation to this parliament? We are still waiting, and this country is still waiting. We have been dealing with a lot of things that were not too important to the national interest, legislation which, by itself, may have been important in a very small area. We are still waiting. Bring in these bills. Where is the legislation in respect of subsidized interest rates for low income families? The government would be surprised how fast that legislation would go through, and the amount of co-operation they would receive. How about dealing with a silly, little old thing such as the box car situation? Such a little old bill would go through in a day, with unanimous consent. They would not need 75c in order to do something about that problem.

If this government would bring in legislation to do something about all the problems that confront this country now, they would not have to worry about the length of debate. Such legislation would go through so fast that most members over there would not have an opportunity to speak on it. In essence, what I am suggesting to the government is that they should try us, and they should try the people of Canada. Give us a chance to see what the government can do. Give us a chance to have something to say about what the government intends to do. If members of the government would bring in legislation to cope with the cost of living and inflation and show they are prepared to act, we would be anxious to help them tackle these problems. We would not necessarily agree with them. We would have alternatives to present. Any opposition worth its salt would have some alternatives to present. But at least let them bring in something. Instead of doing this, they indicate their fear and inability to deal with the problems of this country. How worried they are! They must be worried to resort to rule changes, something which takes up the time and effort of the members of this chamber unnecessarily. Mr. Speaker, where the devil have government members been for the last twelve months?

There is something else I should like to say to my parliamentary colleagues in the Liberal government. In a parliamentary democracy nobody wins them all. Some day they will be in opposition. They may feel, Mr. Speaker, that I will not live long enough to see that day. That does not matter. Some day they will be in opposition. Last week end I spent some time reading Hansard from 1958 to 1962. It is interesting to read what the Liberal speakers had to say then. When proposals were brought in for a rule change and the majority Conservative government threatened to impose closure, you should have heard those Liberal speakers. They forget that in a democracy nobody, no matter how right he may think he is, wins them all. I hope those on the government side who are younger, like myself, will recall, several years hence when they are in opposition, what they are doing now.

May I also ask members to think about what would happen in respect of 75c in a minority government situation. This situation can occur as a result of any election. What kind of situation would be we in with a minority government and rule 75c? Both the government and the opposition would be faced with terrible choices. If the rule were enforced, the government would be defeated. A minority government could use the rule for the worst purpose. I should like to invite members of this house to think about that. Of course, they could seek the co-operation of the opposition to avoid having to implement 75c, and to that extent there would be an emasculated government and an emasculated parliament. I should like to invite members of the house to think about that as well. I submit this is another reason no government, no party, and no parliament even with some very good evidence should ever want to have a rule of this nature. When a parliament misbehaves, and particularly when an opposition misbehaves—I mean that in the worst sense of the word—in the final analysis those who will decide the issue will be the people with the X's. This government has its majority and if it brings in legislation which this opposition obstructs, then the government has the final choice to make and the people will decide with their X's.

The people have the final decision and I submit that is another reason no self-respecting democratic party, democratic government or democratic parliament would even countenance this kind of rule. I do not often quote someone who is living, but I should like to quote from a speech of a member of this house who all members will agree, even though they may disagree with his political philosophy, represents what is best in Canada's parliament. I refer to the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) who has made many speeches outside this chamber which were not necessarily mailed to his constituents about the rights of members of parliament and the responsibilities of oppositions. He has made these speeches oftten, particularly since 1956. The hon. member has spoken to many organizations, but since I am running out of time I will not quote his remarks but will leave that to one of my colleagues.

• (8:20 p.m.)

May I close by saying, as a new member, to government members who are also new, you cannot do this; you must not do this and you do not need it. Surely, you have sufficient evidence of co-operation from opposition parties to assure you that whatever proposals the government may bring forward, even if the opposition does not agree with them, they will be dealt with well and competently. Until such time as you have irrefutable evidence that the opposition in this house is obstructing, you should not bring in 75c. Only at that time would I, for one, sympathize with you.

[Translation]

Mr. Léonel Beaudoin (Richmond): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to speak, for a few moments only as I should not like to hold up proceedings, on the matter now under study.

I will speak this evening in support of the amendment of the hon. member for Peace River (Mr. Baldwin) and especially on proposed Standing Order 75A and B which would reduce from 20 to 10 minutes the time allotted to each member.

I should like to quote only a few excerpts from this Standing Order to show to what extent I agree with it.

I feel that a solution cannot—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. I see from the last words of the hon. member that he is drifting away slightly from the topic under study, namely the amendment of the hon. member for Peace River which reads as follows:

> That the third report of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization be referred back to the committee, with instructions to amend it by deleting therefrom proposed Standing Order 75c.

I therefore ask the hon. member to limit his remarks to this amendment.

Mr. Beaudoin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

In my opinion, an amendment was submitted because a bill or part of a bill must have been discussed. If a bill or part of a bill is to be studied, it must be mentioned according to the rules. As far as Standing Order 75c is concerned, I suggest—and this cannot be repeated often enough—that we must know its contents in order to discuss it sensibly.

I shall revert, if I may, Mr. Speaker, to Standing Order 75c, to say that I support the amendment providing for the deletion of the following words from the said Standing Order:

> A Minister of the Crown who from his place in the House at a previous sitting has stated—

It is intended to allot a specified number of days and hours for the consideration of each legislation.

I wish to congratulate the government for having considered, while working out that legislation, reducing from 20 to 10 minutes each member's period of time allowed for discussing any bill affected by this procedure. However, I am not at all in agreement on one point—and that is the reason why I feel that the amendment is absolutely necessary—that fact that this section of rule 75c grants so much power to the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald) or to a minister.

Why should hon. members be gagged by means of rule 75c? Is anyone toying with the idea of becoming a dictator some day? Whatever the government in office, if a man is entitled to decide for how long an hon. member should have the floor and discuss a bill or part of it, I believe that this is the end of democracy.

[Mr. Beaudoin.]

What are we going to do to democracy with such legislation? What will become of the undeniable parliamentary rights of the hon. members in the house? What will they represent if this motion is voted without any amendment?

As for us, from the opposition, do we not represent part of the Canadian population? What does the government think of the opposition, be it Créditiste, New Democratic or Progressive Conservative? Are we not as important as the gentlemen of the Liberal party? Have we not as they have, been elected by the people?

What on earth are the ministers and the cabinet members thinking about when they want us to adopt Rule 75c? Do they imagine that they alone have seen the light, do they think that they have the monopoly of truth and that the spirit is upon them?

Standing Order 75c, in my opinion, alters everything that has been done, and destroys all friendly and sincere relations established between to government and the opposition.

If the government does no longer want to co-operate with the elected representatives of the people, I believe that democracy is becoming an empty word. The President of the Privy Council, should, in my opinion, bring in an amendment to protect the basic rights of hon. members or future governments. He should do so right now or support the amendment under consideration this evening, and for the past three weeks, in order to come frankly to a cordial, charitable and equitable agreement, for the good of all hon. members and the Canadian people.

I wanted earlier to congratule the government for having reduced the time limit on speeches from 20 to 10 minutes. I shall immediately apply rules 75A and 75B and speak only for ten minutes.

I therefore conclude my speech. This way, I will not be accused of holding up the business of the house with idle speeches. Moreover, I shall be proud to have co-operated in saving time so that the house may adjourn as soon as possible as all hon. members wish.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Is the house ready for the question?

Mr. Bell: No, Mr. Speaker. You could not see our speaker who was behind the curtain.

Mr. Jack Marshall (Humber-St. George's-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, I should like to offer my comments on the motion now before the house. As a new member and a party backbencher I become more and more concerned each day I sit here with the repeated attempts by this government to camouflage democracy. As a matter of fact, there is blatant evidence of disregard for democracy. I wonder how I am supposed to believe the words of the Fathers of Confederation that the fundamental importance of parliament comes from its representative character. It can speak as no other body in a democracy can, for the people.

• (8:30 p.m.)

The House of Commons is supposed to be the great democratic agency of the government of Canada, the great inquest of the nation, the organized medium through which the public will find expession and exercise its ultimate political power. Proposed rule 75c, permitting a time limit on parliamentary debate, strikes at the very base of our democratic system, namely, that there must be full and open discussion of issues in parliament. It means, instead, an end of free speech and free debate.

Just one year ago the Liberal cry was participatory democracy and the need for public involvement and dialogue. So what kind of camouflage is this? The administrative record of the Liberal régime for the past year makes a mockery of any belief that this policy was ever intended by them to be operative. The Prime Minister has sought to downgrade parliament's role, not only in the rule changes intended to upgrade committees but in the other rule changes already implemented.

Just look at what is happening under the government's closed system of constitutional review. What does it do to confirm government's concern for public involvement? Neither the people of Canada nor their representatives have had a voice in the constitutional review process. With the introduction of rule 75c, the government has once again shown its contempt for our form of parliamentary democracy. Rule 75c is merely another indication of the arrogant elitism of the régime of the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau); it is nothing more than an attempt to establish once and for all the dictatorship of the establishment over the House of Commons. The present grab for power under rule 75c has the effect of emasculating parliament. Ultimately, the people of Canada will be the main victim of the rule if it is passed. The proposed rule permitting a time limit on parliamentary debate strikes at the very base of our democratic system, namely, that there must be full and open discussion of issues in parliament. It means an end of free speech and free debate.

Four parties are represented in the house, and since they reflect differing points of view each deserves to be heard. Moreover, parliament is a national forum and spokesmen from the different regions of the country must be given the opportunity to be heard. It must be remembered that regionalism is an integrating force if accommodated to a certain extent, but if allowed to run wild it quickly becomes a potent divisive force. Rule 75c cannot help but stifle regional voices.

The critical function of parliament is to keep the executive in touch with public opinion. By giving guidance, encouragement, advice and support to the government as well as disparagement and criticism, parliament alerts the government to the opinions of the people of Canada. This presentation and interchange of views makes possible a more exact appreciation of the nature of popular response to government policies.

The companion function of parliament, and one which can scarcely be separated from the first, is to keep public opinion in touch with the problems of government. In this respect the House of Commons is much more than a mere mouthpiece repeating and advertising the views of constituents; it is also an educator and opinion-maker. Many questions are debated in the house on which voters have no certain convictions, or on which they may need further information and guidance. Discussion radiates from parliament in waves; arguments are transmitted, presented, simplified and perhaps distorted, but a common opinion develops and creates new waves which find their way back to parliament.

Rule 75c undermines the basic right of the opposition parties to debate legislation for an adequate time. "Adequate" in this connection means long enough not only to point out any mistakes or dangers in legislation but to make the country aware of them. Unless the opposition that faces an autocratically controlled majority can challenge the government in debates lasting long enough to alert the public to potentially harmful legislation, and to create an opinion throughout the country, parliament itself becomes meaningless and useless. If rule 75c is not defeated, democracy will be replaced by tyranny.

The present régime offers as justification for the acquisition of these tyrannical powers the need for efficiency in parliament. Once again we warn the government that we are not going to fall for this political soft-sell.

The new parliamentary rules and regulations used during this session have resulted in one of the most efficient and productive sessions we have ever seen. Besides, the purpose of parliamentary reform is not solely to serve efficiency. As one author has said:

> The purpose is to work out a process consistent with the democratic values of the Canadian people. We do not simply need a process for passing laws. We need also a process that passes the test of free and adequate debate.

We agree with the government that there is some need for a provision regulating the allocation of debating time, but we insist on a reasonable consultative procedure and refuse to accept the government's insistence on arbitrary imposition of closure in advance of debate whenever agreement cannot be reached. A closure rule for cutting off debate is still on the books. It can be invoked when the government feels the right of debate is being abused or that the public interest is suffering; therefore rule 75c is unnecessary.

Government spokesmen have estimated it will take a minimum of ten days to get a bill through the house if rule 75c is applied. Ten days may be adequate for the leaders of the opposition parties and their chief speakers to express objections to a bill. However, it is far from adequate for the public to become concerned about the implications of a proposed law and to start writing their members of parliament. It is far from adequate to ensure public involvement in our democratic process. Only such public involvement, triggered by debate in parliament, can stop the passage of objectionable legislation when the government has a substantial majority. If there is cause for alarm in respect of any piece of legislation the government may bring down, there must be plenty of time for the people of Canada to be alerted; hence, rule 75c must be defeated.

I was elected to represent some 78,000 men, women and children in my district in the province of Newfoundland. I was sent here to represent them by bringing forth their problems. They elected me because they had confidence that I was capable of being heard. The only way I can be heard to present their problems, and to remind the government of Canada of its neglect, is to stand on my feet and speak on their behalf.

I am completely dismayed and disgusted that the representatives who sat in this House of Commons for some 20 years since Newfoundland entered Confederation were silent and complacent. That is why they were known in Newfoundland as the "Silent Seven". They were forced, by an order from beyond the reaches of the federal government, to keep their mouths shut. But you can only fool some of the people some of the time. The people of Newfoundland were fooled long enough; that is why there had to be a change, and they voted for a change.

The people of Newfoundland are blessed with honesty, sincerity and common sense. They reacted by showing their disappointment and disgust during the election of last June; they were not overcome with flowers and kisses. They now believe in involvement, and are showing they mean business by organizing into associations and councils to protest the neglect and disregard for their welfare. They are shouting out to become involved; they are shouting out to participate. The only manner in which they can become involved is by their member of parliament finding out why they are neglected with regard to common, ordinary public services that the rest of Canada enjoy.

I am expected to do a conscientious job of representing the people of my district, and I cannot do it by wasting my time in this House of Commons because the government is determined to further neglect and disregard the people of Newfoundland. I cannot, and I will not. I must stand on my feet and keep reminding the government that they had better mean what they say when they expound continuously the pledge of equality of opportunity, regardless of where Canadians live, and regardless of race, creed or colour. The government continues to camouflage its dictatorial ideas to its own backbenchers, though I fail to see why these back benchers continue to stand for this complete degradation of their conscience.

But fortunately, Mr. Speaker, there is an opposition in this country. The past year's events have shown the government's disregard for sincerity and democracy. Rule 75c will for a long time to come represent "C" for "contempt" for parliament and for the people of Canada. And let there be no misunderstanding of what will remain in the government's conscience for many years to come.

• (8:40 p.m.)

Mr. Ambrose Hubert Peddle (Grand Falls-White Bay-Labrador): Mr. Speaker, there are several arguments that I want to make in my remarks on the proposed Standing Order 75c that I hope are of a positive and constructive nature. The attitude of this house throughout the session has, I think most members will agree, by and large been reasonable, constructive and loyal. I hope this debate will not too severely detract from that fact, for that acknowledged truth belies any possible merit that Standing Order 75c might have possessed.

Standing Order 75c is an amazing proposal. It would seem to be almost a postcript for a dubious and chaotic assembly of fanatics. This resolution—perhaps I should say this fetish of the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) and/or the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald)—is in essence an usurpation of the independence of the House of Commons. It is an idea so unparalleled and significant as to be justified in its imposition upon a deliberative body only as a certificate of immaturity. For this parliament such certification I hardly think is proper and correct.

I think we as parliamentarians have been responsive and strong in an ongoing society. The ancient role of our parliament as the forum for, and safeguard of, our citizenry has been tempered and modified by accepting the increasing and complex obligations of a democratic and twentieth century statesman. We in this country have shared a desire for an opposition that is constructive, not an opposition that is alienated. Therefore, we have been positive in our approach to the business in this session.

I do not think there is anyone in this assembly who could question the reasonableness, the responsibility and the good faith of the leader of any of the opposition parties. Together with our countrymen we felt the exhilaration of our centennial year. We feel a mature concern toward the increasing spoliation of Canada's environment, the shame of persistent regional and vertical inequality, and the embarrassment of a confused and ambiguous policy toward the rest of the world. My colleagues in the opposition parties are in politics not, as some would believe, to stop things from being done, but to get things done. Throughout the first session of the twenty eighth parliament we have conducted ourselves in accordance with that sentiment.

Although Canadians are a generous and patient people, their problems are becoming more complex and entrenched. Therefore, all of us are concerned that the House of Commons become more immediate, or business-like if you wish, in executing its affairs and in its applications to the national interest. Thus we all agreed that parliamentary reform was vital.

The historic rights of parliament are not absolute in form and have, with our support, been significantly tempered and modified in order to make this house more expeditious in its despatch of public business. This circumstance is a matter of record that defies contradiction. It is also an achievement in which we of the opposition take pride.

Clearly we of the opposition parties supported the vast majority of the proposed changes which were implemented on January 1 last. Our representatives on the all-party committee on procedural reform suggested many of the proposals and, indeed, helped to draft them. Further, we agreed to cut in half the number of days available for supply. We moved to refer the Biafran issue and the postal bill to parliamentary committees, thus saving the house several days of time in order to expedite further government measures.

Let us agree that the attitude of goodwill on our part has helped make this a uniquely positive and efficient parliament. This fact is pretty generally acknowledged. To the present proposals before the house I suspect most of us are not hostile per se. I support proposed standing order 75A and 75B, knowing that in supporting them I waive important privileges that I have as a member of Parliament. They also imply certain perils, particularly for the members of the Official Opposition.

Considering all this, and remembering that the reforms now undertaken make available an additional 50 to 55 days per session for government business, which amounts to 10 to 11 parliamentary weeks, and this at the cost of opposition time, I think our flexibility and goodwill have been clearly demonstrated in no uncertain terms.

We did not agree to make these reforms because we were naïve or childish in our attitude. I think that our reasoning has been practical. Although the vitality of the opposition in democratic parliaments since the birth of industry and the formalization of political parties has seriously waned, in this session alone we have allowed our slice of the time and our traditional privileges to be diminished; there is no question of that. We have concluded that the opposition has had to make this sacrifice in order to revitalise parliament as a whole. The House of Commons has to meet the challenge of society more competently and in a more immediate manner.

• (8:50 p.m.)

If our society is to be vital our parliament must be open, and to me, the central issue is whether the House of Commons is to remain open to our society. I do not think we should let this government have its way without at least putting up a fight. I ask, is the openness of this deliberative body critical to the health of Canadian society I feel that the essence of 75c, with its bizarre journey from government policy to bravado and back to government policy answers these questions quite simply. It says, "The House of Commons be dammed; put parliament in saran wrap and take it away. We don't need it any more." Furthermore, I suspect that this ignominious proposed rule 75c forms the basis of this government's whole approach to parliamentary reform. We glimpse that approach in the government's attitude towards the question period, in the fancy roster of ministers and in the way in which they deal with the serious question of the integrity of committees.

The intention of the Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council seems to be that this assembly shall be one that is not open to the vicissitudes and concerns in our society but amenable to the slavish dictates of the executive. They think the behaviour of the house must be absolutely and utterly predictable. For instance, on Monday they want to know everything that will take place on Friday. They want to know that in advance, and that is not parliament. That is what this government wants to make of parliament.

If because of our present responsiveness to questions affecting Canada's interest we postpone, as a result of our discussions, 10 or 15 government bills the government turns around and says, "This parliament is sick; it needs rule 75c." That is why there is this attempt to have the executive branch orchestrate our legislative enactments via the President of the Privy Council. I bear little malice towards this government, nor do I fear it. I find the President of the Privy Council, with his Napoleonic airs, only amusing. At present we are discussing the future of all parliaments to follow us. We are discussing the fate of open parliament, and therefore it is proper and right for us to discuss this resolution within a wide context embracing the historic dilemmas of protection of the individual, the nature of representation and deliberation and the very contribution of the polity to our life and culture.

Personally, I have long believed in a viable and open parliament as a bedrock necessity if a society is to maintain democratic responses to these questions. This, however, is a practical question and this debate has brought it into the open. We, of the opposition, have been seemingly challenged to restate the efficiency of the House of Commons as a critical political institution. If this is so, by the time this debate is resolved the case for a strong House of Commons will have been thoroughly made. In the time left to me, however, I wish to discuss only what I consider the necessary requirements of a viable House of Commons for our federal politics. Openness, Mr. Speaker, is the encompassing requisite which I see as most seriously imperilled by proposed rule 75c. The openness of parliament seems to have two aspects.

The first aspect is the negative power of the opposition primarily to examine, restrain and dissent in order to resist the arbitrary exercise of governmental power. This is the power to protect the interests of the people against abuse by a majority government. In operation, this means that we must have the ability to alarm and exercise our people, and it is here that 75c would have its most vicious consequence. Even the hypothetical minimum of ten days of debate on a government order is insufficient time for us to rally public support. This is our conclusion and that of most newspapers which have commented on this resolution. Their opinion on this matter after all is worth knowing, for the journalist understands the requisites of communications. May I be permitted to read into the record a short editorial that appeared in the Ottawa Citizen of July 4, 1969. It is headed, "Rights imperilled—Closure rule is too drastic". The editorial reads:

> It is no accident that the government decided to wait until the dying hours of the present session to introduce its new closure rule—and that is what rule 75c is.
>
> The apparent fatigue of all members might help the government slip it through. But the weapon will backfire if the opposition remains determined to fight.
>
> No parliamentarians can become as intractable, as unwilling to compromise, as those who are tired, who want to go home, but can't because they feel put upon and must stay to do battle. Much of the good work accomplished in gaining opposition co-operation to speed the work of Parliament may be undone if the government keeps to its course.
>
> When a majority of the House leaders cannot agree on a time limit for debate on a bill, rule 75c would permit the government to impose a limit of one day at each stage. The result could be a mockery of Parliament's rights.
>
> The opposition should be given reasonable time—perhaps two or three weeks—to rally public opinion against legislation it considers iniquitous. If, after that, the public is still unmoved by opposition arguments, further debate becomes wilful obstruction. Closure can then be imposed without the taint of dictatorship.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Peddle: I think that short editorial ought to be contained in the records of this house.

The second role of an open parliament is its power in helping to legitimize and make more tangible our polity; that is our central government. This power is more subtle and more hypothetical; it is difficult to speak of but is equally serious. What I term the evocative power is the responsibility of the whole house, and the stakes within the political system are primarily those of the government.

It is now generally admitted that one of the vivid dangers of the large administrative unit of the state or economy stems from an individual's sense of participation or power. Men come to see themselves as instruments or as statistics. Some accept this view, and are thereby emasculated. Others retreat to a life of private happiness, while some reply and are more likely frustrated and in this dissatisfaction alienation is born.

• (9:00 p.m.)

Many of us have asked ourselves whether we want a society whose government systems consistently alienate its people and make them unproductive and hostile. I believe many of us in this house are in politics to help avoid such a fate for the Canadian people, yet this government does not seem to want our help. If we try to revive a sense of integration and dignity for our people, one of the most difficult problems we will have to face will be the alienation of the individual from the political process.

The term "participatory democracy" is not ours. Participatory democracy is healthy. A creative relationship between the state and the citizens is absolutely essential. However, as democrats we believe this evocative and legitimate power cannot adequately or safely be allowed only to the executives. Nevertheless, if this present government feels this power needs to be shared with the legislature to assure its potency and avoid tyranny, then what in the name of heaven is the reason for 75c? For this assembly to have the strength and evoke the trust and commitment on the part of our people, it must be representative in the full sense of the word.

The House of Commons must be allowed to remain a human institution of representation. This seems too costly to this government because if parliament were like that, it could not be fully predictable. The government would not be able to tell on Monday every word that would be spoken or every action that would take place on the following Friday. That would not do for this government. It would be completely and utterly unpredictable. The business of this house cannot be only the business of Treasury Board and frontbenchers because, to be trusted and noticed, it must represent and reconcile the passions, ideals and even the prejudices of the people. That must take place here and it is necessary.

The unity of our country will not be found in business practices or procedures. What is the danger to this and future governments if this house is forgotten and loses its evocative power? In a free society where the commitment of its members requires trust and understanding, due process and power are inter-dependent. If commitment and trust are lost, government loses a great deal of its power. For a positive government the power of its measures is not found necessarily in royal assent, but with the assent of the people governed.

Last fall the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) spoke of the obligation of our public men to avoid the kind of civil disaster for Canada that is being experienced in some parts of the United States. Unfortunately, he has learned a few lessons from this nearby tragedy. Was not the essence of the United States crisis that her Congress was allowed to become irrelevant? Was not the Viet Nam issue forced from the councils of government to the streets of the cities of the United States? I argue that in a democratic society the imposition of rule 75c imperils the strength of government and also the strength and quality of national life.

Among us here, many of the young and all the glib, have decided that business procedure is the one and only measure of parliament. Certainly there is an anxiety to accomplish more. I think we all share this feeling. We have all proven our concern for this objective. In appealing to the positive ambitions of the government, I ask hon. members to deeply reconsider rule 75c to save this government from its arrogance so that it may begin to govern with some degree of wisdom. The government talks about streamlining, Mr. Speaker. They say parliament has to be streamlined but, as an hon. member brought out very pointedly this afternoon, this is a big thing to streamline. Canada is a very large sprawling country, Mr. Speaker, with different regions, races, geographical locations, religions and ethnic backgrounds. How far can they go toward streamlining a parliament of 264 members, bearing in mind the concessions that the opposition have already made? Just how far can they go?

Frankly, I cannot see why this government is so obsessed with its streamlining procedure in view of the degree of co-operation that has already obtained in this parliament from all the opposition parties. It is very interesting to note, and this does not escape many people, the times that the government chooses to try to ram such measures through. First they tried when everyone was starting to be imbued with the Christmas spirit. The bells were ringing, there were jingle bells all over the place and the government brought in its infamous rule 16A. The opposition at that time showed in no uncertain terms that they were responsible. They were not sent here to leave at a certain time, even though everyone is tied up in the custom of Christmas. We flexed our backbones and decided to stay.

At that time the government decided they would not push it through, but would try again at the next opportune moment. They decided to wait until they had the heat of the sun with them. Even though they would not have the Christmas spirit, they would have the holiday spirit as well as temperatures of 80 and 90 degrees. They decided they would push it through in the latter part of June, when house was scheduled to close. Here again, Mr. Speaker, there is too much at stake. This country has a long future ahead of it. The opposition will not capitulate when they feel so strongly about this. We know we have to put up with a little bit of discomfort. Most of us had holidays and other things planned. We had planned tours of our ridings. We have had to change those plans. We had things to do, but those things are insignificant compared to what the effect of 75c would be.

• (9:10 p.m.)

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Peddle: That is the position our party has adopted. It is the official position adopted by the other two opposition parties and, so far as I can understand, it is the position we will continue to adopt until the government comes to its senses. I say that for such a measure to be introduced at such a time is an insult to the integrity at least of every member of the opposition. Do they assume that we do not take our duties any more seriously than that, for the sake of getting home with our families, we would jeopardize the future of this country and this parliament? If so, they have another think coming.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

[Mr. Peddle.]

Mr. Peddle: Parliament is not something archaic which was established some years ago and not heard of since. Parliament has evolved through the years through the process of trial and error. Something has been taken away from it and something has been put in during the process. Through this evolution, we have parliament as we see it today. As I am reminded, may I say that coming from the province of Newfoundland I know about dictatorship.

Some hon. Members: Shame, shame.

Mr. Peddle: Even though the numbers in the opposition in the province of Newfoundland are small, I hate to think what would happen in the province without them. This House of Commons is the parent parliament of all Canada. I hate to think of Joey Smallwood trying to copy a page from the book of this government if this rule should go through. There would be no legislature.

I realize that the press is often maligned, but I often wonder if we truly appreciate the real service the press renders to this country. If a government with a great majority were allowed to go its way in this assembly with no one watching them except the opposition, and if there were nothing going out to the people of Canada on which they could formulate an opinion in respect of what was happening, I hate to think what the result would be. The press, in its own way, tends to slow down the process of parliament. If rule 75c were to pass, then someone might get the idea of streamlining a little more. Someone might say, let us get the press out of the gallery up there. They might say, "We do not want too many questions being asked; get them out of here." That could be the next step; there would be a creeping paralysis. Those are the things which worry me and which I think should worry any responsible member of this parliament.

The last member who spoke on behalf of the New Democratic party mentioned the type of government measures which had been introduced in this parliament. Almost the highlight of this parliament was a measure to make homosexuality and abortion legal. Someone said the government was suffering from a hangover. Maybe this is the problem. I think before the summer is over we might supply the cure. The Prime Minister, the hon. gentleman who is retreating and backshrugging every day, vanishes following the question period. I have not seen him since the debate started. The other day he said he had no intention of listening to a foolish filibuster.

When did he listen to a filibuster in this parliament? Unless he has it piped up to his office, he certainly does not listen to a filibuster in this assembly. Now he has gone, as someone said, to mend fences. Maybe he cannot even do that.

Let the government bring in some responsible legislation, as a previous speaker said, and see how much obstruction will be forthcoming from the opposition parties. Let the government bring in a meaningful bill to help lessen the housing crisis in this country and at the same time take off the 11 per cent tax. Then, government members will see how much opposition there is from this side of the house. Never mind bills which contain a few things the government wants to get through or the sugar coating of a lot of decent measures, after which members are informed they must accept the whole package. This reminds me of when we were kids and had to take our cod liver oil with orange juice in order to take away the taste. Many things are bundled into a bill the size of the Ottawa telephone directory, and then we are placed in the position of voting against some sensible measures because they are contained in one bill.

A lot of sloganizing was carried on during the last election campaign in respect of participatory democracy and a just society.

An hon. Member: Just for the Grits.

Mr. Peddle: Obviously just for their own party. The majority of the people of Canada are represented on this side of the house. What about the people of Canada whose representatives to a man are willing to sit here all summer, if necessary, in an effort to talk sense into the government in respect of this insidious rule 75c! This is a question I would like to hear answered. Where is the example of participatory democracy? The only way in which the people of Canada have been able to participate in democracy has been by sending 264 members to this parliament. This is the way they participate. They do not participate by buying a ticket for a $50 a plate political dinner. That is participation for those who have 50 bucks. The only way in which the people of Canada can participate in our democracy is by sending their duly elected representatives to this parliament and, as I say, the representatives of the majority of the people sit on this side of the house and object very very strenuously to the adoption of rule 75c.

When there is a government with a big majority, I suppose it is natural to expect that sometimes it will get carried away by the sweet taste of power. More craves more. Once in a while, however, such a government should be reminded that the opposition has a role to play. Our system has evolved over the century by taking away a little and adding a little. In this way we have come to our present system of parliament. Now, the members on the government side of the house want to take the hatchet to this system and chop away almost every right the opposition has. They would place us in the position of being ineffective vegetables which stand up once in a while when called upon, then sit down and shut up. This is not the type of role I envisaged when I sought a seat in this parliament, and it is not the type of role actually that I will tolerate in this parliament notwithstanding 75c. As some member mentioned, if the government insists on voting this thing through, we will find some way to circumvent it and don't you forget it.

We know that the opposition has a role to play. A few days ago an hon. member of the N.D.P. called the attention of the house to the fact that there was not a quorum. Let me call to your attention the magnificent attendance of hon. members since that time. The opposition is doing its part to revitalize parliament.

My time is just about up, but since we are playing by the rules I will probably use the whole of it. I say today that this government, as mentioned by another hon. member, is suffering from a hangover. Does anyone take seriously the statement made a few days ago by the Prime Minister that 80 per cent of the questions asked by the opposition are hypocritical? This means that 80 per cent of the members of opposition parties are hypocrites who engage in stupid, foolish and hypocritical filibusters. The Prime Minister could not stand it, so he went west.

An hon. Member: He will get his there.

• (9:20 p.m.)

Mr. Peddle: I expect he might face a filibuster out west. We are discussing 75c and I cannot emphasize too much the statement made by my friend in the N.D.P., which I repeat. Let the government withdraw this rule. Perhaps they may not like to do so, but they might look more like statesmen than at any time since the opening of this session. Let them withdraw this rule and bring in some sensible, sound and acceptable legislation. I would almost take the chance of speaking for the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield), and that is taking quite a chance, by saying there will be no real opposition from this side of the house.

Procedure and Organization

Mr. Robert McCleave (Halifax-East Hants): Mr. Speaker, it is a pity that after one year of a new parliament the government is permitting this session to end on such a sour note. It could have co-operation in the house right to the end, just as it has had co-operation from the time we gathered here after the election last year. As a matter of fact, it has been one of the most productive sessions ever enjoyed by a Canadian parliament. I have consulted with our law officer, Dr. Ollivier, who tells me that his biggest problem now is whether they are going to print the statutes we have passed during this session in one or two volumes, so great has been our productivity.

Why are we now meeting a demand from the government for a rule such as 75c? Later on if I have time and the opportunity to use my full time—I will use that time and come back on another occasion as long as we are here—I will outline the co-operation we have given.

This whole matter has been scouted before, and it is obvious to everyone here, as I think it is becoming obvious to all Canadians, that nothing has been left undone that we should be doing before we recess for the summer. There is legislation on the order paper, some of which was introduced in order that the public might get a look at it, and some of which has been left on the order paper for reasons only known to the government.

Great occasions bring forth great speeches. Of all those I have listened to during this debate, and when the topic involves an issue that is fundamental one can expect that good speeches will be made, I think the accolade should be given to the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles). That hon. member has been in this house since 1940, with a short hiatus. In other words, he is marking a quarter century of service to his country in this institution. It ill behooves this parliament that a person who did not even have the grace to listen to the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre and other members who have taken part in this debate, should label the message of that hon. member as sheer hypocrisy. That is what the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) has done.

The Prime Minister has not stayed to listen to the debate up to this time, and of course he will not be here to listen to us this week. Perhaps he will have to listen next week or the week after, as long as something such as 75c is before us. Let us look on the year we have gone through. We have had more committees and more committee meetings than ever before. More legislation has been produced than ever before. Members have been working to the extent that they have had almost no spare time, particularly those who served on two or three committees. We realize the amount we have done, but we must know that the committees cannot work efficiently unless members of the opposition work as hard as members of the government. The record has been a good one for both the opposition and the government. We hammered away at the proposed legislation and we got through it. Some of the committees were not all they should have been and others were absolutely superb. They turned in a job of which we should be proud.

[Mr. Peddle.]

Now, in the final moments of the session, why should whatever carrots were held out before us to lure us on be withdrawn and a whip applied instead. What kind of reasoning is that, and what kind of people are directing the affairs of a once great political party who could believe this is a proper tactic to use in the House of Commons? What kind of people are these who could graciously withdraw rule 16A, which we were considering before Christmas, and then bring it back as a Frankenstein monster dressed up with a little bit of make-up in order that it will look different, right at the tail end of a session? I suppose they thought we were all tired at this point and after a perfunctory shaking of the fist at this rule we would go our way to visit our constituencies. We will not do that until 75c is slain and is as dead as 16A. It must be slain in the same way.

The latest issue of the New Yorker contains an imaginative article about our Prime Minister. I should like to quote something he is reputed to have told a young reporter, Miss Edith Iglauer. The article quotes the Prime Minister as having said:

> I've always dreamt of a society where each person should be able to fulfill himself to the extent of his capabilities as a human being, a society where inhibitions to equality would be eradicated. This means providing individual freedoms—

• (9:30 p.m.)

Individual freedoms to whom? This is the thought that puzzled me when I read this sugar-coated confection in the New Yorker magazine. This article is not critical at all. It is not even a good, basic piece of reporting, because it does not attempt to examine all of the rather interesting facets of our Prime Minister. I can only conclude that Miss Edith Iglauer is one of that stable of neurotic young women who are rapidly becoming the reporting staff of the New Yorker magazine. During this interview she was having either dinner or lunch with the great man, and while they gazed at the spire of a church on the Quebec side of the river he plied her with a very pleasant, dry, light wine. I suspect that the young lady went back to New York still with her mind floating around cloud nine.

There comes a time when traditional liberalism, or the philosophy of that great political party, should be set forth for the benefit of those who up to now have perhaps forgotten the great heritage they enjoyed in the past. I think logically one starts with John Stuart Mill. In this article in the New Yorker the Prime Minister is quoted as saying he does not read very much of John Stuart Mill. John Stuart Mill was a man who worked for the India Company for a long time. He had a great deal of practical experience. He was one of the most gifted minds of the 19th century. He served as a Liberal member in the English parliament for one term. I suppose that explains why the Prime Minister does not read him. If he does not listen to present Liberal members of parliament, there is no reason why he should read the words of a former Liberal member of parliament who is now dead.

The Prime Minister's reading, as he told the young woman reporter of the New Yorker, is of writers like Dostoevski, whom he enjoys. I suppose those Liberals who wondered why they were called idiots might find consolation in reading that great Russian's works. He enjoys reading Stendahl and Tolstoy. Stendahl's work "The Red and the Black" tells the story of a young man on the make. I suppose it offered useful instruction to a middle-aged, single Prime Minister. But in so far as John Stuart Mill is concerned, the Prime Minister has not read much of his work. I suppose the fact that Mill had served at Westminster, and with the Liberal party, made him suspect.

But one of the great works, one that probably should be on every parliamentarian's desk—and I suppose none of us have it there; we all have to run to the library if we want to read it—is J. S. Mill "On Liberty, Etc." I shall read excerpts from that work because it is important to give a refresher course, even if it is to be only 40 minutes, to my hon. friends on the Liberal side. J. S. Mill, dealing with the principles of the liberty of thought and discussion, has some very interesting observations. I quote from chapter II of his work on the liberty of thought and discussion:

> In speaking generally, it is not, in constitutional countries, to be apprehended, that the government, whether completely responsible to the people or not, will often attempt to control the expression of opinion, except when in doing so it makes itself the organ of the general intolerance of the public. Let us suppose, therefore, that the government is entirely at one with the people, and never thinks of exerting any power of coercion unless in agreement with what it conceives to be their voice. But I deny the right of the people to exercise such coercion, either by themselves or by their government. The power itself is illegitimate. The best government has no more title to it than the worst.

In other words, interrupting the flow of that great English writer's thoughts, the argument that the power would never be abused amounts to nothing. It does not go to the heart of the problem with which we are dealing, because it may be abused at some time. It could be abused not at all. It could be abused 100 per cent. But it is not germane to the argument. Continuing with Mr. Mill:

> It is as noxious, or more noxious, when exerted in accordance with public opinion, than when in opposition to it.

Later in this speech, the next or the next, I am going to make the point that the Prime Minister has gone around following a consistent policy of denigrating the institution of which he is supposed to be the greatest champion and upholder. I give him that great line of William Lyon Mackenzie King and say "in spades" on that one, because to me this is the most horrible characteristic the Prime Minister shows, namely, to shrug and pretend he is the great white champion between the people and the House of Commons. But I must not get too enthusiastic about the speech after the next one, and shall continue with the quick refresher course to be obtained from Mr. John Stuart Mill's work:

> If all mankind minus one, were of one opinion, and only one person were of the contrary opinion, mankind would be no more justified in silencing that one person, than he, if he had the power, would be justified in silencing mankind. Were an opinion a personal possession of no value except to the owner; if to be obstructed in the enjoyment of it were simply a private injury, it would make some difference whether the injury was inflicted only on a few persons or on many. But the peculiar evil of silencing the expression of an opinion is, that it is robbing the human race; posterity as well as the existing generation; those who dissent from the opinion, still more than those who hold it. If the opinion is right, they are deprived of the opportunity of exchanging error for truth: if wrong, they lose, what is almost as great a benefit, the clearer perception and livelier impression of truth, produced by its collision with error.

Can we not think of examples in this parliament, and more particularly in the last one, where we had more loose fish—I think that was an expression used by Sir John A.

Macdonald and my hon. friend from Hillsborough (Mr. Macquarrie), the great expert in this house on Sir John A., agrees with me—flying around? One of them is now off promoting separatism in the province of Quebec. I do not suppose many of us thought highly of his opinions. Probably few of us found very much sense in those opinions. But certainly the Speaker of the last parliament, and the members of that parliament, gave Mr. Grégoire every right to express his opinions. In that respect he enjoyed a greater advantage than those who stayed within the recognized political parties in this house. Continuing with this brilliant chapter by Mr. Mill on the liberty of thought and discussion, he makes these points:

All silencing of discussion is an assumption of infallibility. Its condemnation may be allowed to rest on this common argument, not the worse for being common.

That is a key point to remember when dealing with the Prime Minister, the government house leader and the people promoting this iniquitous doctrine. They and they alone are the great repositories of truth. The rest of us in this chamber just go along for the philosophic ride.

I should like to put some more quotations from John Stuart Mill on the record which may awaken memories of times before these Liberals came to Ottawa to become part of some great sausage making complex:

But I must be permitted to observe, that it is not the feeling sure of a doctrine (be it what it may) which I call an assumption of infallibility. It is the undertaking to decide that question for others, without allowing them to hear what can be said on the contrary side. And I denounce and reprobate this pretension not the less, if put forth on the side of my most solemn convictions.

This whole volume is well worth reading and I commend it to my Liberal friends, because sooner or later as this debate goes on they will have to examine their consciences. Our freedoms will in large measure be determined by the stand they take in caucus. We do not expect miracles of them or that they will bolt the party line, but perhaps they will force an early caucus tomorrow and ask themselves whether they are Liberals at heart, whether their ancestor Liberals always fought for freedom of discussion rather than the choking and gagging of the opinions of others. Perhaps the hon. member for Halifax-East Hants, they will say, did have a point to make when he read what John Stuart Mill had to say on liberty of thought and discussion.

[Mr. McCleave.]

• (9:40 p.m.)

Let me put on record some more thoughts for them to take to their caucus. John Stuart Mill continues:

We have now recognized the necessity to the mental well-being of mankind (on which all their other well-being depends) of freedom of opinion, and freedom of the expression of opinion, on four distinct grounds; which we will now briefly recapitulate.

First, if any opinion is compelled to silence, that opinion may, for aught we can certainly know, be true. To deny this is to assume our own infallibility.

Secondly, though the silenced opinion be an error, it may, and very commonly does, contain a portion of truth; and since the general or prevailing opinion on any subject is rarely or never the whole truth, it is only by the collision of adverse opinions that the remainder of the truth has any chance of being supplied.

Thirdly, even if the received opinion be not only true, but the whole truth; unless it is suffered to be, and actually is, vigorously and earnestly contested,—

Is that not what debate is all about, the vigorous and earnest contestation of ideas?

—it will, by most of those who receive it, be held in the manner of a prejudice, with little comprehension of feeling of its rational grounds. And not only this, but, fourthly, the meaning of the doctrine itself will be in danger of being lost, or enfeebled, and deprived of its vital effect on the character and conduct; the dogma becoming a mere formal profession, inefficacious for good, but cumbering the ground, and preventing the growth of any real and heartfelt conviction, from reason or personal experience.

Those are the words of a great Englishman. But even though he was a Liberal member of parliament the Prime Minister does not heed his doctrine.

Where have abuses crept into parliament during the 12 years I have been here? The latest alleged abuse arises from the debate on the Criminal Code amendments, when our friends to the far left put up a battle over the modernization of the law dealing with abortion. I did not share their opinions. Neither did I share the government's formula. But I will certainly defend their right to get what they had to say off their chests. Perhaps the argument was repetitious and overly long, but at least their constituents can now say that the measure that passed is the law, and that it was well and truly considered in parliament. The issue was fought until it could be fought no more. Every argument that could be adduced was put forward in this chamber.

Then, there was the flag debate. I was not here at that time but I would have joined my colleagues and doubtless spoken at some length. The house was then dealing with an issue which to many Canadians struck at the very heart of Canadianism, at their cherished belief in a flag that has now gone. They felt that their representatives were in parliament to express their views and to fight the matter as hard as it could be fought. I am sure that those who wanted a new flag felt the same way. After a lengthy battle, the issue was resolved and the new flag was unfurled. No one can say that the issue was not properly or fully debated and fought to a conclusion.

Another of the alleged abuses that has been spoken of occurred during the era of the four horsemen of the "eclipse"—Mr. Pearson, Mr. Pickersgill, Mr. Chevrier and Mr. Martin. One suffered a certain weariness and dreariness while listening to them as they made their points. I felt some of the sting of many of these points, and in one election campaign they made their points well. Gentlemen on the Liberal side of this chamber say that the lengthy debate in which those people engaged were in the cause of liberalism, though this is not to be permitted when members of other parties do the same thing for some party cause.

The only abuse I can think of at that time, apart from the great waste of parliamentary time, was when Mr. Pickersgill deliberately talked out a motion to appoint several new judges to the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia which would have allowed that court to modernize itself by creating both an appeal division and a trial division. This step had to wait for some months because of the deliberate action Mr. Pickersgill took. He took this action not for any great or noble cause; he took it for sheer political reasons. He did not like to think that any Conservative would be appointed to the Nova Scotia bench. I do not know how he gets along now with the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner), because he has now redressed the inequitable stand that was taken by Mr. Pickersgill.

I should like to go back to an abuse by the Liberal government of the day, one that could be perpetuated time and again if Standing Order 75c where adopted. I refer to the pipeline debate. This debate reflected the quintessence of some gentlemen's ideas about how parliament should be run, how it could be turned into a superb sausage making machine. When closure was imposed the clauses of the bill under debate were rammed through one after the other. The only legislation I might be particularly concerned about, in so far as 75c is concerned, would be the amendment to the Indian Act. I would not permit any government, so long as I can stand up here and speak, to have those powers which 75c would confer on it. If the Indians went on the war path and right thinking Canadians joined them on the war path, parliament would have to act. I would not like to think what would happen if, through invoking rule 75c, the amendments to the Indian Act were to be disposed of in 11 days or so. After all our Indians have the right to expect the white man to keep his word, and the time permitted under 75c would not be sufficient for us to arouse public opinion. That is the basic issue before us.

• (9:50 p.m.)

We do not trust the Prime Minister; let us be frank, Mr. Speaker. We have no reason to trust him. We trust some members of his cabinet, but we do not trust the Prime Minister. We must resist 75c if we are to maintain a modicum of respect for ourselves and if we are to maintain parliament as a viable institution for those members who will follow us.

I wish to correct an unjust impression that may have been left about the government house leader. He had his knuckles wrapped by various people on this side of the house last week with respect to statutory instruments, as will be seen at page 11035 of Hansard. There was a failure of consultation. We had agreed to allow the measure to go through and if there was lack of consultation, it was through my fault. I did not get around to seeing everyone I ought to have seen. I wish to put my apology on record since at present, when we are all tense and when we all tend to quarrel with each other, it is a good idea to vindicate the house leader. I therefore wish to make that correction, Mr. Speaker.

Having dealt with Liberal spokesmen of the nineteenth century, may I now deal with Liberals of the twentieth century. Let us turn to the words of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, one of the great Liberals of this country, surely.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): That's good reading, Bob.

Mr. Bell: Something has gone wrong in the present century.

Mr. McCleave: I am reading from a book entitled, "Political Pamphlets, 1912-15". On the cover is the word "Liberal". I am sure hon. members opposite will think my reading is to good purpose.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): That is a great improvement in the hon. member's reading habits.

Mr. McCleave: It will have been an improvement if hon. members opposite heed the words of Sir Wilfrid. I quote:

> Sir, these rules are to be swept away, they are to be ridden over rough shod; they are to be put aside, and we are to have the gag substituted for them. And what is the pretence? The pretence is that there has been obstruction in the House. Sir, if obstruction be a fault, if obstruction be an offence, I call upon the man on that side of the House who is without guilt to cast the first stone. I read in some Conservative newspapers that obstruction was the murderer of parliamentary government. I do not here now challenge the statement; but if obstruction be the murderer of parliamentary government, the murderers are on that side of the House, and not on this. My right hon. friend has experience, and he will experience still more, that as you sow, so shall you reap; and Sir, it does not lie in his mouth or in the mouth of his followers to say that there has been obstruction in this House by the parliamentary minority.

May I also read from a book with the notation on the cover, "Political Pamphlets, Liberal, 1919-35". This book no doubt has been maintained in the library at the taxpayers' expense. I do not know how it was compiled but it is heady reading, as I am sure the Minister of Justice will agree.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Absolutely.

Mr. McCleave: It may not be amiss to re-echo the starry cries of the 1919 Liberal convention. I quote from this book as follows:

> Liberalism is essentially progressive and open minded. It has a history and traditions of which it has reason to be proud. But that does not mean that it is to rest upon tradition and to become stationary. It is not a dead thing, but a living, growing organism. It thrives in an atmosphere of freedom, and especially of liberty of thought and of speech.

An hon. Member: They don't want free speech now.

Mr. McCleave: May I now quote the words of another great spokesman for Liberalism. These were spoken on the night of October 14, 1935, a night the hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands (Mr. Douglas) will long remember. That was the night he was first elected to this chamber. Mr. Mackenzie King had this to say:

> The individuals and the nations which discard Liberalism, pay by losing their liberty. When liberty goes, little else remains. Today the task of Liberalism is two-fold: it is to maintain what we have already gained of freedom in many spheres, and to gain for our fellowmen more in the way of economic freedom. That battle will not be won by individuals putting their own present and material interests before all else, or by Canada putting her present material interests before all else. In the realm of individual freedom, it will be won by each seeking to gain a larger liberty for others as well as for himself. In the international sphere it will be won by international co-operation and international good-will.

Although I have a few words more, Mr. Speaker, I must end on that note.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

A motion to adjourn the house under standing order 40 deemed to have been moved.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT—VANCOUVER—DISSATISFACTION OF LETTER CARRIERS WITH FIVE DAY DELIVERY

Mr. Heath Macquarrie (Hillsborough): Mr. Speaker, my question was prompted by sit-downs in the Vancouver and Burnaby areas on the part of letter carriers obviously dissatisfied with the single mail processing which was consequent upon the imposition of the five day mail delivery. The reaction of the letter carriers of the western metropolis was typical of that which has been revealed throughout the country. Of all the failures which the minister has chalked up in his year of office that in the field of labour relations is certainly the most gregarious. His threats of prosecutions, his failure to consult adequately before making sweeping changes in employees' work routine, the story of the locked washrooms—all of these are now well known. They have been dramatized by the type of actions which were taken in Vancouver and Burnaby and by other indications of dissatisfaction in other offices. Happily these, while significant, were not sustained and in general the postal workers are to be congratulated for their restraint in the face of what chief adjudicator Martin has described as arrogance and highhandedness on the part of the employer.

It is regrettable that for reasons which still appear mysterious, the report of Mr. Martin was not revealed to the public until July 4, nine and a half weeks after the date of his decision. The suggestion that while the chief adjudicator signed the decision on April 30 he worked on it after that date is an intriguing one, especially since the two other reports dated May 15 and 16 bear his signature as adjudicator. The unusual delay in the production of such an important document is all the more disconcerting in the light of the Postmaster General's (Mr. Kierans) revelation that he had been pressing almost weekly since May 1 to have the reports. Far more serious than the failure of his detection efforts was the fact that for many weeks this vital question of employer-employee relations in this trouble-rent department could not be discussed in this house since the subject matter was before the chief adjudicator and therefore sub judice, as hon. members know.

• (10:00 p.m.)

What happened in Vancouver, and elsewhere, is the visible symptom of a condition which was so scathingly detailed by Mr. Martin in his report of April 30. I have in my political and student career perused many documents commenting on the administrative performance of ministerial and governmental bodies, but never have I seen a verdict so decisively rendered. The indictment of the Post Office is searing and scathing as but a few excerpts will indicate.

> It is quite clear that... management's conduct has resulted in creating unrest, the undermining of morale, and the development of hostility between the parties.
>
> An assessment of employer attitudes... shows that the employer position is characterized by arrogance and high-handedness.

Lest anyone be tempted to suggest that the adjudicator made an even division of his criticism, it should be noted that he stated:

> The employer by its unilaterial conduct, must assume the primary blame for the failure of the consultative process—

But what I am interested in now, as I presume are the letter carriers of Vancouver and elsewhere, is the response to the stinging criticism in the adjudicator's findings. I trust the minister this time will break his usual custom and admit that just possibly something might be wrong in his department. He may be no genius at labour relations, nor any speed artist in getting the mail through, but in the field of rationalization the Postmaster General is in a class by himself. Failure? He salutes them all! Black is white! I can imagine him hailing the retreat from Moscow as a trimphal re-entry into western Europe or recommending the Captain of the Titanic for a gold-headed cane for his speed and accuracy on target.

But here is a subject too important for even skilful rationalization. Nor is anything really to be gained by blaming the Minister of National Revenue (Mr. Côté) or others who preceded the present minister in the Postmaster General's chair. Sir William Mulock can hardly be blamed for the kind of conditions which brought on the Vancouver sit-down or the adjudicator's report.

I would like to know what has been done since Chief Adjudicator Martin found the department so lacking in this aspect of employer-employee relations. What changes have been made? What new personnel have been put to work? Have any transfers been made? Have any new policies been adopted? Has there been any last minute willingness to desist from the stubborn insistence on the five day delivery and the straight-through system where the whole trouble began? Without tangible evidence of a change from the deplorable situation now chronicled for us by an expert and respected adjudicator, there is cause for grave anxiety in reference to this vital part of the public service.

Hon. Eric W. Kierans (Postmaster General): Mr. Speaker, I see that the Merry Monk from Hillsborough (Mr. Macquarrie) rides again! The hon. member for Hillsborough has reverted to his June 9 question dealing with wildcat strikes in Vancouver to continue his scolding of, and nagging harangues against, the Post Office. Since there have been no strikes in Vancouver or anywhere since that time, one would normally conclude that both management and their union colleagues were working out solutions, but not the hon. member for Hillsborough. He prefers to continue to berate the Post Office with a repetitious rehashing of any incident, even weeks and months old, in order to downgrade the service that is provided by the 48,000 loyal and dedicated employees of the Post Office.

He has the ear, and he knows it, of those publishers in this country who want the Post Office and the taxpayers of Canada to subsidize their operations and their customers secretly, under the guise of what they call freedom of the press. If the press of this country want subsidies, and will repeat incessantly the statement of the hon. member for Hillsborough, let that hon. member present their demands to this house.

This government is determined that the 48,000 postal employees shall have security of employment and the better working conditions, facilities and training to which they are entitled. They know this. Both unions know this. This government is spending 40 times the puny amount of $15,000 that the last Tory government spent on management training for 41,000 people.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Proceedings on Adjournment Motion

Mr. Kierans: That is how we will modernize and improve our service, not by the mean and undocumented attacks of members such as the hon. member for Hillsborough. He cites incidents and refuses to discuss the general situation. He knows full well that 99 per cent of the people in this country for 99 per cent of the time receive their mail within 24 hours.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Let us have another round.

An hon. Member: Are there any more fairy tales?

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE—GOVERNMENT POLICY RESPECTING MODIFICATION OF OPERATION

Mr. Thomas S. Barnett (Comox-Alberni): Mr. Speaker, I am sure that neither I nor the parliamentary secretary to the Minister of Labour are likely to exceed the performance we have just witnessed.

I should like to direct the attention of the house to a question I asked on June 26. I asked the Minister of Labour (Mr. Mackasey) whether he had any statement on government policy or intended modification of the administration of unemployment insurance which he might be able to give to the house. I think perhaps I put the point of my question a little more directly earlier in the session when I asked him if he had in mind doing anything about what I called the dehumanizing of the administration of unemployment insurance.

The point of the question I raised arises out of a situation which goes back to early 1967 when a policy was adopted which involved the closing out of many of the local unemployment insurance offices. two of these were in my constituency. Incidentally, the adoption of this policy involved a decision not to proceed with the establishment of a third one which had been regarded as being necessary in the community of Campbell River. In connection with the question I asked the minister on June 26, I sent across to him a copy of a petition containing some 40 pages of signatures of the residents of the community of Campbell River. It was worded in this fashion:

> We the undersigned, vigorously protest the complete lack of facilities at Campbell River to handle applications for Unemployment Insurance Benefits.
>
> We request that the Federal Government immediately open and maintain office facilities at Campbell River to serve the public in this area.

I might point out that this petition actually has two variations. The formulation I have just read I think presents the thinking of the people in a more positive way, but the original version under which some of the signatures were obtained states:

> We, the undersigned, wish to discontinue payment and endorsement to any and/or all public services who are no longer of public service, namely, the Unemployment Insurance Commission, 66 Front Street, Nanaimo, B.C.

In other words, the people who initiated this petition were so exasperated they wanted to take the matter in their own hands and cease making payments of premiums to the Unemployment Insurance fund. I believe usually, in circumstances of this kind, we know that a certain number of people will readily attach their signatures to petitions without giving too much thought to them. Nevertheless, when there is smoke to this extent there must be fire lying somewhere underneath.

• (10:10 p.m.)

I should say I have a file on this subject which goes back to early 1967. Let me quote briefly from a letter which I received from the secretary of one of the larger unions in my area. It is dated February 13, 1967 and in part it reads:

> The present system of a central office in Nanaimo covering all of Northern Vancouver Island is not working out at all. People have to wait for over a month for their claims to be processed and in talking to the manager in Nanaimo, he informed me they are snowed under with claims and away behind in processing same.
>
> There is not too much wrong with the mailing system—

I should point out that this letter was written long before the present incumbent in the office of Postmaster General suggested that we mail our Christmas cards now for next Christmas. Let me quote again from the letter as follows:

> There is not too much wrong with the mailing system, but there are many people who do not understand the forms and since they have no office in the immediate area to go to for assistance it is making it very awkward for these people—

There is a suggestion here that an unemployment insurance officer be situated in the municipality in the manpower office and should assist people in processing their claims. Following that, there was quite a long series of correspondence with the then Minister of Labour, the hon. Mr. Nicholson, and with the director of unemployment insurance. There was a great exchange back and forth of letters from the union officers and the administration. An attempt was made to clarify the situation, and admissions were also made that there were delays but that the commission was taking steps to iron out the bugs which had developed initially in this operation.

I attempted not to be dogmatic about it. I think all of us are willing to have our public services administered with the least possible overhead cost, but I did express, during some discussion I had with the then Minister of Labour, very serious doubts that this system could actually function properly, certainly in the area with which I am familiar. I must say, for reasons I will not go into here, that I had a rather extended opportunity of travelling around the area of Vancouver Island earlier this year and last fall. At times I was not very far from the office of the unemployment insurance commission in the city of Nanaimo, but I had preoccupations which prevented me from going in and discussing this matter with the local management.

I must say that if there was one single subject about which I received a continuing refrain of complaints, more than any other, it was about the undue delay and awkwardness of the present system of trying to administer unemployment insurance by mail from a central office as far away from the places of residence and work of the people as is this office in Nanaimo. It may be ideal for some of the constituents of my friend the hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands (Mr. Douglas), but there is no single office of the unemployment insurance commission in my constituency, which embraces roughly the northern three quarters of Vancouver Island.

I am not necessarily suggesting that we should go back completely to the old system of local office operation, but I am suggesting that there should be competent people to whom those desiring to make claims could go in convenient localities, and certainly in communities with a population of 20,000 or more, such as Port Alberni, or 10,000 or 12,000 such as Campbell River.

Hopefully the people are not going to have to apply for unemployment insurance all that often. I have received a continuous barrage of complaints about people being denied the benefits resulting from the premiums they have paid because the processing of them in some cases was delayed so long they were back to work before they received the benefits.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I am sorry to interrupt the hon. member but his time has expired.

Mr. Jim McNulty (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, in reply to the question asked concerning the intention of the Minister of Labour (Mr. Mackasey) to make a statement prior to the recess on government policy in respect of modification to the Unemployment Insurance Act, the minister does not intend to make such a statement.

The second part of the same question refers to a document received from the residents of Campbell River. This document has now been received in the office of the Minister of Labour. Apparently it is a petition from some local residents to have an office of the unemployment insurance commission opened in Campbell River. Actually the Unemployment Insurance Commission has been aware for some time that such a petition would be forthcoming. Special statistics have been maintained for some months which show the use that would be made of such an office if it were located in Campbell River.

The figures show that, based on the standards in use by the commission on a Canada-wide basis, there is no justification for a permanent office when one considers the use that would be made of such a permanent office in Campbell River. In the past six weeks there have been less than 150 claims from persons living in Campbell River. This is far short of the standard of about 12,000 claims per year that is used as the commission's criteria for establishing an office. It is, therefore, obvious that the volume of potential work from Campbell River does not warrant a full-time office.

I would like, however, to make it very clear that on the basis of a review of current claims residents of Campbell River do receive adequate service from the commission through the use of postal services. The forms they must complete in order to claim unemployment insurance benefit have been so simplified that anyone with minimum education can complete them without difficulty. The actual process of claiming benefit can then be carried out quickly and efficiently by mail with the Nanaimo office which is only a few miles away.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): A few miles?

Mr. McNulty: Despite what I have said, and even though the commission believes it is providing an efficient service to the persons living in Campbell River, it is prepared to further review the situation in the area. The work associated with the unemployment insurance in this locality is somewhat seasonal; at certain times of the year, due to weather conditions a number of persons become unemployed at the same time and claim unemployment insurance. When these lay-off situations occur, it might be possible for the commission to temporarily station staff in Campbell River so that claim processing could be shortened a little. The possibility of operating in this manner will be examined.

In addition, the commission will continue to maintain statistics on the number of applicants for unemployment insurance benefit living in Campbell River, in order to keep the situation under continuous review. The commission will reconsider its decision if it should ever develop that the workload in the area warrants maintenance of a full-time office.

I assure you, Mr. Speaker, that persons living in Campbell River are receiving good and fast service from the Unemployment Insurance Commission, as is the case everywhere in Canada. However, the commission will re-examine its operations in the area to determine whether it would be possible to expedite the system somewhat at periods of peak claim activity by providing some kind of temporary special service at such times.

WATER RESOURCES—DIVERSION OF WATERS FROM HUDSON AND JAMES BAYS

Mr. B. Keith Penner (Thunder Bay): Mr. Speaker, last week in the house I raised a question which my people in Thunder Bay view as being of the utmost importance and urgency. I contend also that it is of considerable significance to the whole nation. I asked the minister who is responsible for energy and water resources, the Minister without Portfolio from Saskatchewan, whether the federal government in co-operation with the province of Ontario is planning a proposed massive diversion of fresh water from the Hudson and James Bay watershed southward into Lake Superior. My immediate concern, of course, is for the people of the region and the changes which would be brought about in their environment as a result of a massive water diversion program.

• (10:20 p.m.)

The consequences of such a scheme have national ramifications as well, and it is time for the matter to be openly and thoroughly discussed before we make a commitment to sell our birthright. The effects of such a diversion program would certainly be drastic, in that thousands and thousands of acres would be flooded in the creation of vast water storage basins. Timber resources, trap lines, wildlife, fish and game would all be affected.

[Mr. McNulty.]

The balance of nature would certainly be upset. The Indian people who live on the reserves and settlements in the area, as well as the tourist camp operators, want to know what is likely to happen to their homes and establishments if and when such a plan is implemented.

There is in existence a report entitled "A Proposed Water Diversion Program Out of Northwestern Ontario into Lake Superior" dated June 25, 1964. Since this report was written, there have been six consecutive progress reports, the last of which is dated November, 1968. This last report contains sweeping plans and recommendations in detail for the diversion of the Winisk and other northern rivers.

All these reports have been submitted in restricted quantity to a federal-provincial co-ordinating committee on northern Ontario water resources studies and to a few officials of both the federal and Ontario governments. The entire study has been conducted under a veil of tight security and almost complete secrecy. I am asking the minister to table these reports in the house, so that we may know the goals and progress of this study.

The report states that the total cost of such a diversion program would be about $2.1 billion. It stresses the need for replenishing the water supply of the Great Lakes basin, and predicts the basin will have a population of 200 million within 100 years. We know many United States cities in the Great Lakes region are anxious and concerned about future sources of fresh water for domestic and industrial consumption.

What will this policy mean for our national sovereignty, Mr. Speaker? Once our northern rivers are diverted southward, we will become even more securely tied to the United States economy. The exporting of such a resource can never be curtailed once the flow begins. We in northwestern Ontario want to know: Is our government going to proceed with plans and proposals for the exporting of our fresh water to the United States?

An official of the Ontario Water Resources Commission said last Thursday that the federal and Ontario governments are conducting a study which could lead to diversion of some northern Ontario rivers and the sale of fresh water to the United States. If such is the policy of the government, Mr. Speaker, my constituents and I wish to be told about it. After all, fresh water has now become our most treasured natural resource. We in Thunder Bay once thought that gold, iron ore and pulp were our major resources, but now we see that our fresh water is even more valuable. Our thousands of unpolluted lakes, streams and rivers are viewed with envy by many, particularly our neighbour to the south.

I am asking the government to lift the veil of secrecy which surrounds this study. Let the people of Canada in on those plans and proposals which will affect them so significantly. We in northwestern Ontario have plans and proposals for our economic development which may be restricted or helped by a water diversion program. I ask the government to consult with us. I ask them to practise participatory democracy, to take us into their confidence. Let them cast some light on the subject and thereby remove so much of the uncertainty, anxiety and apprehension that we feel when we contemplate the overwhelming alterations that are going to be made to our landscape.

Continually, my constituents are wanting to know what all this activity in northern Ontario is directed to and what is involved in all these hydrographic studies. We are asking the government to assure us that our national sovereignty is not in jeopardy. Show us that conservation and concern for nature is part of this over-all proposal.

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister without Portfolio): Mr. Speaker, some days ago the hon. member for Thunder Bay (Mr. Penner) first raised the question of the diversion for export of water from northern Ontario in a way which revealed that those in his part of the country are deeply concerned about the issue of water. Water, of course, is a most important resource and it is our experience in this country that our people are very concerned about this resource, about plans and discussions pertaining to its use, and how they will be affected by that use, particularly when water is to be diverted for export. I think the hon. member for Thunder Bay has done a great service to his constituents by raising this matter in order that this issue and the nature of the study now under way can be discussed, and in order that the fears of his constituents may be put aside.

The studies under way, of course, are exercises in analyzing the nature of the resources in question and what can conceivably be done with them. It is a most difficult problem to consider and it is most difficult for the government to study all the factors tied to the use of water and all questions arising from the effects of water diversion.

The hon. member mentioned problems relating to timber, wildlife and general ecological circumstances that would prevail in the area in the event of a diversion. I wish to assure him, and the people of the watershed being studied, that before any question of diversion or export arises the fullest kind of consultation with the people of the area and the people of this country generally will take place. The full effects and impacts of any decisions will be thoroughly examined. I assure the hon. member and the people of his area that these are merely technical studies into questions of costs and possibilities, and that they in no way indicate that any decision has been taken by government; nor do they indicate what will be or should be done. Before any decision can be taken all aspects of the matter so eloquently referred to must undergo a great deal of further examination.

Motion agreed to and the house adjourned at 10.30 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Tuesday, July 15, 1969

The house met at 2 p.m.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

PRIVILEGE

MR. STANLEY KNOWLES—CONFEDERATION—MANITOBA'S ONE HUNDREDTH YEAR AS A PROVINCE

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege, one in which I am sure all members of the house will be happy to concur. It so happens that on July 15, 1870, 99 years ago today, the first four provinces of Canada were joined by the province of Manitoba, the first province to enter confederation after it had been established. This means that today we are entering our one hundredth year as a province of Canada. As members must be aware, plans have been made for appropriate celebrations of this important occasion. Established by a previous government, a commission headed by Mr. Maitland Steinkopf has been working for some time to make plans for the celebration of our centennial as a province. We in Manitoba hope that many thousands of Canadians will visit us during this year, particularly as we approach the historic date of July 15, 1970.

I am sure hon. members will pardon me if I add one footnote, namely, that it is a particular pleasure for me to note that we are entering this historic year with a new provincial government. I am sure all hon. members will want to extend best wishes to our former colleague, who until a few weeks ago was the hon. member for Selkirk, but who today has become Premier Schreyer of Manitoba.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Sir, you sometimes say to a member who has raised a question of privilege that he has neglected to follow it with a motion. I do not have a written motion but perhaps it could be assumed I have moved, seconded by all the other members from my province, that the house is happy to extend its best wishes to the government and people of Manitoba as we enter this historic one hundredth year of our being part of Canada.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, as one who was born in Manitoba and as one who received his education there may I be permitted, although a member from that great city of Toronto, to join in supporting the motion put forward by the hon. gentleman. It is a great pleasure for me to know that my native province is now entering upon the celebration of its one hundredth anniversary. I can say on behalf of the government that I hope we will be joining in that celebration of the accession of such an important province to our confederation.

Mr. Craig Stewart (Marquette): Mr. Speaker, as a member from Manitoba I wish to join in extending to other members a welcome to Manitoba as it is about to enter its second century as a province of Canada.

• (2:10 p.m.)

TRADE

WHEAT—REQUEST FOR CONSENT UNDER S.O. 43 TO MOTION RESPECTING PRICE, CASH SHORTAGE

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent of the house under Standing Order 43 to make the following motion, seconded by the hon. member for Mackenzie (Mr. Korchinski):

> That the Standing Committee on Agriculture be instructed to examine immediately the consequences for prairie grain producers of the failure to restore the minimum International Grains Arrangement price; to consider and recommend measures to ensure a satisfactory minimum price to the Canadian producer; and to consider and recommend measures to alleviate the critical cash shortage facing western farmers.

Under Standing Order 43 I believe I am entitled to give a very brief explanation of the urgent and pressing necessity for this motion. I am sure it is unnecessary to make any such explanation to hon. members who have the interests of the prairie grain growers at heart, as we all have.

The International Grains Agreement is, in effect, a dead letter. Not only has the floor price been effectively abandoned but the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce (Mr. Pepin), is not even confident that last week's conference has served to stave off another crisis.

Reports are that the price for top quality Canadian wheat may drop by 20 to 25 cents per bushel. Under these circumstances, given unprecedented surpluses of wheat in Canada and the critical cash shortage, the fall-off in retail sales throughout the prairies and the consequent serious threat to the prairie economy, and in view of the failure of the government to announce a policy to meet the emergency, I am sure that no hon. member will dispute that this is a case of urgent and pressing necessity as called for under Standing Order 43, and that no hon. member who is concerned would refuse unanimous consent to proceed with this motion.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Hon. members have heard the proposed motion by the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield). Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: There is not unanimous consent.

An hon. Member: Wait until they hear about this in Winnipeg.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

An hon. Member: How will the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) answer that one in Calgary?

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): He will probably answer it very well.

MOTION TO ADJOURN UNDER S.O. 26

TRADE

WHEAT—LACK OF SUPPORT PRICE UNDER INTERNATIONAL GRAINS ARRANGEMENT

Mr. A. P. Gleave (Saskatoon-Biggar): Mr. Speaker, I ask leave, seconded by the hon. member for Regina East (Mr. Burton), to move the adjournment of the house under Standing Order 26 for the purpose of discussing a specific and important matter requiring urgent consideration, namely, the collapse of the International Grains Arangement in guaranteeing a minimum international price support for wheat, as announced yesterday in the house by the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce (Mr. Pepin), the absence of any government policy for maintaining a minimum wheat price support, and the resultant unprecedented danger facing the entire western economy.

Mr. Speaker: In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 26 the hon. member for Saskatoon-Biggar (Mr. Gleave) has given due notice of his request to move the adjournment of the house for the purpose of discussing th matter outlined in the motion which has just been read to the house by the hon. member. There is little doubt in the mind of the Chair that the matter raised by the hon. member for Saskatoon-Biggar is of great concern and of the utmost importance to the country as a whole. However, the question before the Chair is one of a procedural nature that must be resolved in accordance with the intention and the provisions of Standing Order 26.

The statement made yesterday by the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce (Mr. Pepin) and the communiqué tabled by him dealt with a matter that has been before the house for many weeks. For example at pages 6740 and 6741 of Hansard for March 18, 1969, a number of questions were posed to the minister dealing with compensation for the shortfall of prices under the International Grains arrangement. Again, on May 8, 1969, at pages 8467 and 8468 of Hansard, a number of questions were posed concerning difficulties in the international wheat market. On May 16, 1969, as reported at page 8779 of Hansard, the minister was again questioned concerning the adherence of Australia to the International Grains Arrangement.

The latter part of the hon. member's statement deals with "the absence of any government policy for maintaining a minimum wheat price support". It is suggested to the hon. member that the latter portion of his statement raises a question which, raised in other terms, was resolved earlier this session by decision of the House of Commons. May I refer hon. members to pages 981 to 983 of Votes and Proceedings for May 1, 1969, where a supply motion by the hon. member for Kent-Essex (Mr. Danforth), seconded by the hon. member for Peace River (Mr. Baldwin), was proposed as follows:

That in the opinion of this house the government has failed to deal with the seriously deteriorating net income for Canadian agriculture, as a result of which farmers in all parts of Canada are unable to obtain necessary operating capital to finance the 1969-70 crop year.

In amendment thereto the hon. member for Saskatoon-Biggar, seconded by the hon. member for Regina-Lake Centre (Mr. Benjamin), proposed as follows:

That the motion be amended by inserting therein, immediately after the words "Canadian agriculture", the following words:

"which in the prairie provinces is due in the main to declining grain prices and reduced delivery quotas."

This motion gave rise to a far-ranging discussion which in my view covered fairly well the grounds raised in the proposed motion of the hon. member for Saskatoon-Biggar. It is suggested to hon. members that the situation brought to the attention of the house by the hon. member who proposed the motion relating to the International Grains Arrangement is not of recent occurrence. It is, rather, in the nature of a continuing problem. The minister's statement of yesterday, commented upon on motions and examined at length during the question period, does not appear to reveal such new circumstances as would justify a debate under the provisions of Standing Order 26.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

AGRICULTURE

WHEAT—INQUIRY AS TO MEASURES TO ASSIST WESTERN FARMERS

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I have a very direct question for the Minister of Finance. I hope he is able to give me a yes or no answer, preferably yes. Is the government now actively considering any special measures on an emergency basis to meet the critical cash position of western grain farmers?

Hon. E. J. Benson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the government's policy in this regard will be announced in the house in the usual manner.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Scandalous!

Mr. Stanfield: In view of the seriousness of the situation and the present cash shortage on the farms, especially grain farms, and the fact that this has caused farm machinery sales to fall by some 30 to 50 per cent this year, with the accompanying problems, does the government plan any action to meet the emergency that is developing so rapidly?

Mr. Benson: Mr. Speaker, the government's policy will, as normal, be announced when it is determined.

Mr. Stanfield: Mr. Speaker, I have one further question in view of the unsatisfactory nature of the replies of the Minister of Finance. Has the attention of the minister been drawn to the statement of the Saskatchewan Implement Dealers Association concerning the serious drop in sales and the very critical condition regarding inventories? If so, what is the attitude of the government of Canada in this regard? Has it, for example, any plans to meet the responsible leaders of the governments most immediately concerned? Has it any plans at all?

Mr. Benson: Mr. Speaker, as the Leader of the Opposition knows, the Prime Minister is at the present time in the west meeting the heads of the provincial governments there. It is the intention of the government to do all within its power to assist the people of western Canada.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Nothing has been done.

Mr. Benson: What did you do in the seven years you were in office?

GRAIN

WHEAT—INQUIRY AS TO PAYMENT TO FARMERS OF I.G.A. FLOOR PRICE—RESTORING OF PRICES—GOVERNMENT POLICY

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, I had a question for the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce, who is on the roster today but is unfortunately absent. Therefore may I direct my question to the Acting Prime Minister. Inasmuch as the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce indicated yesterday that there will be a further decline in wheat prices and as the present crop year ends in about two weeks, and since the farmers have a right to know what prices they will obtain, does the government intend to pay the farmers through the Canadian Wheat Board on the basis of the floor price under the International Grains Arrangement?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce is in Winnipeg today having discussions with the Canadian Wheat Board upon many of the matters that are being discussed here. So far as I know it is not the intention to fix the initial price at the minimum under the International Grains Arrangement. That international agreement unfortunately is not working as we would like it to.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Since the government of the United States has announced that in order to meet the wheat price war it is prepared to subsidize wheat prices to United States farmers, does the Canadian government intend to subsidize our farmers for wheat delivered in the 1968-69 crop year?

Mr. Sharp: Mr. Speaker, the policy of subsidizing wheat exports from the United States is long-standing and is a policy against which we have often protested because it is inimical to the interests of our western farmers. So far as our policy of assistance to western agriculture is concerned, I merely repeat what the Minister of Finance said. When that policy has been determined it will be announced.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): A further supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Since we have had similar replies for some months, will the Acting Prime Minister tell the house when we may expect this statement of government policy with respect to assistance to western agriculture?

An hon. Member: After parliament has risen.

Mr. Sharp: Mr. Speaker, as the hon. member knows, it will be necessary for the government to make decisions on some of these matters very shortly because of the opening of the new crop year.

Hon. D. S. Harkness (Calgary Centre): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Since the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce, who is absent today, promised me yesterday that he would produce the schedule of prices that the Wheat Board is charging for wheat, may I ask the Acting Prime Minister if he will table this schedule?

Mr. Sharp: Yes, Mr. Speaker. As my hon. friend knows, this information is published every day and there is no difficulty in obtaining it. He can obtain it by inquiring but I will be very happy to see that it is tabled.

Mr. Harkness: Then why didn't the Minister of Trade and Commerce give it to us yesterday?

[Mr. Sharp.]

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Since it has been announced that the purpose of the initiative of the United States is to restore prices under the International Grains Arrangement, is the government of Canada going to associate itself with the United States in a concerted and joint effort to restore these prices? In other words, has the government of Canada any plans to support the reported efforts of the United States to restore these prices?

Mr. Sharp: Mr. Speaker, may I remind the Leader of the Opposition that it was on the initiative of Canada that the ministerial meeting was held.

Mr. Stanfield: Come, now.

Mr. A. P. Gleave (Saskatoon-Biggar): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. In view of developments which have taken place over the last few years, does the government intend to formulate selling programs that will enable us to move back into the position we occupied previously when we had 25 per cent of the International Grain Market?

Mr. Sharp: Mr. Speaker, it is the aim of the Canadian Wheat Board to restore this country to that position. That is one of the reasons why the government and the Canadian Wheat Board have emphasized the importance of remaining competitive. Of couse, it is our desire to be competitive at a higher price level but when our competitors lower their prices we must meet their competition.

Mr. Gleave: A further supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Since the International Grains Arrangement was negotiated under the auspices of the Kennedy round initiated under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, has the government considered asking the responsible countries to meet and review the present position of this agreement?

Mr. Sharp: Yes, Mr. Speaker. It is within the context of the Kennedy round that all these discussions have taken place. We are very much aware, as the hon. member has pointed out, that the International Grains Arrangement was an intrinsic part of the Kennedy round and that the balance of advantage has been upset because certain countries have failed to comply with that agreement. We have these factors very much in mind in all our negotiations with our customers and fellow members in the agreement.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina-Lake Centre): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. In view of the answer given by the Acting Prime Minister to the previous question and in view of the fact that the I.G.A. was negotiated within the context of the Kennedy round, is it the view of the government that this now negates every Kennedy round agreement to which Canada is a party, and does the government plan to take any countermeasures in retaliation for what has happened to the I.G.A.?

Mr. Sharp: Mr. Speaker, our general position is that under the Kennedy round the balance of advantage was very much with Canada apart from the International Grains Arrangement, though this was an added benefit. Therefore we are striving mightily to retain as much of the agreement as can be salvaged.

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Prince Albert): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. In view of the uncertainty and the vacuity of the answers that have been given in regard to the situation in western Canada, which is serious beyond words, will the Acting Prime Minister say whether the statement made by the Prime Minister yesterday that what the western farmers should do is to cut down their production of wheat represents the consensus of government policy?

Mr. Sharp: Mr. Speaker, when the Prime Minister of Canada speaks he speaks, of course, for the government.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Will the Acting Prime Minister say whether the government has any intention of bringing in something in the nature of acreage payments? Can we not get an answer from this government? When we are dealing with the western farmers, all we receive is contemptuous disregard.

Mr. Sharp: Mr. Speaker, I do not know whether that deserves an answer, but I do know that I should point out to the right hon. gentleman from Prince Albert that great objection was taken to the Prime Minister going to western Canada at this time. I think it is most important for the Prime Minister to be there and to come with direct answers. I know of no one in Canada who is more concerned about the people and farmers of western Canada than the Prime Minister.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Will the Acting Prime Minister say whether the fact that there are only three western ministers in the cabinet has made it impossible for the government to know what is going on?

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. John Burton (Regina East): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker, to the Acting Prime Minister. Has the Acting Prime Minister now reconsidered statements made by himself and others of his colleagues in past years in which the western farmers were told: "You grow the wheat and we will sell it"?

Mr. Speaker: Order. The Chair has been as lenient as possible in allowing these supplementaries in view of the importance of the matter, but having now reached the area of debate I think we should pass on to another subject.

OIL

MACKENZIE VALLEY PIPE LINE RESEARCH, LIMITED—REQUEST FOR STATEMENT ON FORMATION

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Speaker, I had hoped that the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources would be among the ministers present today, but there are only eight ministers in the house. In any event, since the ministers' parliamentary secretary is here I might give him something to answer.

Will the minister shortly make a statement in the house relative to the formation of Mackenzie Valley Pipe Line Research, Limited, a consortium of four leading oil companies, whose purpose is to determine technological and other feasibility studies on a large diameter oil pipe line from the north slope of Alaska and related Canadian Arctic areas along the Mackenzie River valley to Edmonton, and on to the North American market? As a supplementary question—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): The question will only be taken as notice, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. member cannot ask a supplementary question now; perhaps he might ask it later. The question as asked by the hon. member is acceptable under the rules, as he knows, only to the extent that the hon. member is asking the minister when a statement will be made on motions.

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister without Portfolio): Mr. Speaker, since this question falls within my area of responsibility I will dare to answer it by saying no. However, since hon. members may not remember the beginning of the question, may I say that we certainly welcome this development and will watch it with great interest. I think—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I remember the beginning of the question.

INQUIRY AS TO SECRET AGREEMENT BETWEEN CANADA AND UNITED STATES

Mr. Steven E. Paproski (Edmonton Centre): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct this question to the Minister without Portfolio (Mr. Lang). Now that a prominent senator has publicly stated that the 1967 secret oil agreement between Canada and the United States is illegal, will the minister tell the house whether a more recent secret and illegal agreement has been negotiated?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I am not sure whether the question as asked is in order.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

ALEUTIAN ISLANDS—PROPOSED NUCLEAR TESTS—INQUIRY AS TO CONSULTATION

Mr. Mark Rose (Fraser Valley West): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. In view of the misgivings expressed by wildlife conservationists about the possibility of triggering earthquakes along the Pacific coast, has the government of Canada been consulted about the proposed massive underground nuclear tests at Anchitka in the Aleutians next October?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I do not think the hon. member's earth-shaking question is in order.

[Later:]

Mr. Rose: Mr. Speaker, in view of the seriousness of the matter I wonder whether I might have permission to restate my earth-shaking question. Has the government of Canada made any representations to or received any information from the government of the United States concerning the possible ramifications of the proposed underground nuclear tests in the Aleutian Islands?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, personally I have not. It may be that my officials have and I will make inquiries.

[Mr. Lang (Saskatoon-Humboldt).]

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT

RAPIDITY OF MAIL DELIVERY

Mr. Heath Macquarrie (Hillsborough): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the congenial Postmaster General. It is based on the minister's recent pronouncement to the effect that "99 per cent of the people in this country for 99 per cent of the time receive their mail within 24 hours." Considering that for the majority of Canadians there is no mail delivery on Saturday and Sunday, a 48-hour period, can the minister advise whether his statement on speedy mail delivery means that only one per cent of Post Office patrons—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member's question is 99 per cent argumentative.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

ALLEGED STATEMENT BY BRIGADIER GENERAL HAMILTON RESPECTING STARVATION AND WAR

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Has the minister undertaken an investigation into the report that Brigadier General Charles Hamilton, Canadian member of the international observer team in Nigeria, is alleged to have stated that, from all the chronicals of war and personal experience, "starvation is a legitimate weapon of war"?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Yes, Mr. Speaker. I have had a report and I can deny that Brigadier Hamilton said the things he was accused of saying.

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): A supplementary, Mr. Speaker. Has the minister made any protest to the government of Nigeria, an officer of which is reported to have attributed this remark to the Canadian general?

Mr. Sharp: No, Mr. Speaker. I did not know the Nigerian government was involved. What I received was an account of what the officer had said and it was said in the presence of witnesses. I therefore have no hesitation in saying he was misquoted, but I did not know that the Nigerian government was involved.

Mr. David Lewis (York South): A supplementary question to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Did the officer say anything at all about starvation and its relation to carrying on a war? If so, what did he say about it?

Mr. Sharp: Mr. Speaker, I would be happy to obtain the text. I do not know whether it would be appropriate to give it by way of reply or to send it to the hon. gentleman. Mr. Hamilton was being cross-examined by a reporter in a general way. When it came to questions on whether he considered starvation was an appropriate method of ending the war in Nigeria, he said he had nothing to say about it.

Mr. Lewis: May I ask Your Honour's permission for the Secretary of State for External Affairs to table the record of the interview to which the minister has made reference so that all hon. members may see it?

Mr. Sharp: I would be happy to do so.

AIR TRANSPORT

SUGGESTED FLIGHT SAFETY COMMITTEE—AUTHORIZATION OF FUNDS

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Dartmouth-Halifax East): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Transport I wish to direct my question to whoever is acting in this capacity today. Can the Acting Minister say what reply has been made to the Canadian Airlines Pilots Association brief in which it is suggested that a national flight safety committee be established? Will the Acting Minister also say whether the Department of Transport has any plans to form a departmental flight safety committee, either internally or at the national level?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (Minister without Portfolio): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Transport I will undertake to refer the question to him. I understand the minister will be in the house tomorrow and will probably furnish the answer.

Mr. Forrestall: I wish to pose a further supplementary—I ask that notice be taken of it—to the President of the Treasury Board who is also supposed to be here today but is absent. In light of reports that the Department of Transport flight safety committee has not been formed because Treasury Board has not authorized funds, will the minister say what the intention of Treasury Board is in regard to this very important matter?

Hon. Eric W. Kierans (Postmaster General and Minister of Communications): I will be glad to bring that question to the attention of the President of the Treasury Board.

INFORMATION

INQUIRY AS TO REPORT OF TASK FORCE

Mr. Steven E. Paproski (Edmonton Centre): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct this question to the Acting Prime Minister. Has the government received the report of the task force on information, and will the minister advise when it will be tabled in the house?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I cannot answer the first question. I will make inquiries. I have not personally received it. It may have been received in the Prime Minister's office. However, I am not certain.

Mr. Paproski: Are allegations of patronage and news management the reason the government is hiding this report?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

[Later:]

Mr. Sharp: May I add a little more accurately to my reply to a question asked earlier. The report of the task force on information was received in the Prime Minister's office last week. I think the Prime Minister has already given some information to this effect, and I would not want there to be any difference of opinion between him and me.

Mr. Paproski: Would the Acting Prime Minister give the assurance that parliament will have an opportunity to review any changes in government information services, particularly in light of the government's notorious disregard of the rights of a free parliament?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

NORTHERN AFFAIRS

NORTHWEST TERRITORIES AND YUKON—INQUIRY AS TO DECISION ON SELF-GOVERNMENT

Mr. Frank Howard (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development, I wish to direct a question to the Acting Prime Minister. May I say first that the Secretary of State for External Affairs assumes the post of Acting Prime Minister admirably. Has the government come to a decision about self-government for the Northwest Territories?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the question of the constitutional future of the Northwest Territories and the Yukon is under study. No decisions have yet been made.

Inquiries of the Ministry

Mr. Howard (Skeena): A supplementary, Mr. Speaker. Inasmuch as this matter was presented to cabinet last January, can the minister tell us how much longer it may be before a decision is reached or whether he intends to impose closure in the cabinet in order to get the matter through for debate?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

RESERVE FORCES—INQUIRY AS TO COMPLETION OF REVIEW

Hon. J. A. MacLean (Malpeque): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Minister of National Defence. Has the government completed its review of the reserve forces with a view to determining what their strength will be in the immediate future, and did the government seek the advice of the Conference of Defence Associations on this important matter?

Hon. Léo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): The answer to the first question is no, Mr. Speaker. This is because we have been consulting with the Defence Associations and we are going to meet again, I believe, early in August. We expect that after that our plans will be clarified and we will be able to announce them.

POWER

MINAS BASIN FEASIBILITY STUDY—INQUIRY AS TO AVAILABILITY

Mr. Robert McCleave (Halifax-East Hants): Mr. Speaker, may I direct my question to the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. I gave the minister notice of this question last week. When does the minister expect the feasibility study on Minas Basin power will be available?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister without Portfolio): Mr. Speaker, as previously indicated in the house, the report is in its final stages of completion. It is being prepared and is expected some time in the autumn.

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Dartmouth-Halifax East): A supplementary, Mr. Speaker. When this report is made available to the government, will the minister and the government undertake to make it public as quickly as possible?

Mr. Lang: Mr. Speaker, as soon as the report is available, that will be given consideration.

[Mr. Sharp.]

NATIONAL DEFENCE

SAC BOMBER SITES—POSSIBLE LOCATION IN CANADA

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I wish to ask the Minister of National Defence whether there has been any request or approach on the part of United States officials with regard to the possibility of dispersing SAC bomber sites and locating some of them in Canada?

Hon. Léo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): Yes, Mr. Speaker, some time ago, I believe, but no decision has been taken in that regard.

LABOUR CONDITIONS

SUMMER EMPLOYMENT FOR STUDENTS

Mr. David Lewis (York South): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Minister of Manpower and Immigration. He will recall that last Thursday I asked him some questions with regard to a program for student employment this summer and he said he would undertake to make a progress report to the house on the subject. I wonder whether he has it today or when he intends to make it?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I assure my hon. friend I will carry out the undertaking and will either table a report or give it verbally before the house closes or as early as possible.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, may I ask whether it is possible for the minister to indicate the date on which he will be ready to make this report? Surely it has been under discussion for some time.

Mr. MacEachen: Well, Mr. Speaker, I will be certain to give my hon. friend advance notice so that he will not be caught off guard.

PROVINCIAL AFFAIRS

MARITIMES UNION—FEDERAL PARTICIPATION IN HEARINGS

Mr. Thomas M. Bell (Saint John-Lancaster): Mr. Speaker, since the dates for the hearings on Maritimes union have been announced, can the Acting Prime Minister say whether the federal government has given any consideration to holding a watching brief or making an appearance in another form during the course of these hearings?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Acting Prime Minister): Not to my knowledge, Mr. Speaker, but I will take the suggestion of the hon. member under consideration.

Mr. Bell: Because of the direct federal involvement in many aspects which may develop and also the fact that a lack of federal interest may be misunderstood, would the Acting Prime Minister give this matter active consideration and even consider telephoning the Prime Minister out west?

Mr. Sharp: I thank the hon. member for his suggestion.

CANADIAN SOVEREIGNTY

"MANHATTAN" PROJECT—REMARK BY PRIME MINISTER

Mr. Donald MacInnis (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Acting Prime Minister. Was there any implication in the remark of the Prime Minister last evening on television when he referred to the Manhattan project operating north of Canada?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I listened to the Prime Minister's comments and certainly as Secretary of State for External Affairs I find myself in full agreement with what he said.

Mr. MacInnis: Does it have any bearing on the sovereignty of Canada in the north?

Mr. Sharp: I perhaps misunderstood the subtlety of the question put by the hon. gentleman. May I say that I agree entirely with what the Prime Minister said to the effect that the voyage of the Manhattan does not reflect at all on the sovereignty of Canada.

Mr. MacInnis: In view of the fact the Prime Minister indicated last evening on television that he expects to accomplish nothing on his trip west, does the minister consider it a stupid trip?

HOUSING

URBAN RENEWAL—COMMITMENT RESPECTING HAMILTON PROJECT

Mr. Lincoln M. Alexander (Hamilton West): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Minister without Portfolio (Mr. Andras) in charge of housing. In light of the fact that the minister met with representatives from the city of Hamilton when I understand there was a discussion with regard to urban renewal projects, would the minister advise what transpired at that meeting and whether a firm commitment was given with regard to the Hamilton urban renewal project on York Street?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (Minister without Portfolio): No firm commitment was given except that a decision would be made as soon as possible. I hope to announce decisions in respect of urban renewal projects shortly. I had hoped to be in a position to do so today but I find I need further information both within government and from some of the communities. I hope to get on with it as quickly as possible because I realize the delays are causing some difficulty.

Mr. Alexander: Mr. Speaker, may I take it from that that the minister does not intend to visit any urban centres prior to the time he makes his announcement but rather will be meeting with the representatives of the urban centres in Ottawa?

Mr. Andras: I do not see how any such inference can be taken. It may be necessary for me to visit some centres but, on the other hand, several representatives of the municipalities have been coming to see me. We may work in both ways.

Mr. Alexander: A further supplementary, Mr. Speaker, if you will bear with me. May I take it then that the minister will not be able to hand down a decision until—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I am afraid I cannot bear with the hon. member to this extent. The question is not in order.

AGRICULTURE

WESTERN CANADA—INQUIRY AS TO STATEMENT BY PRIME MINISTER ON RETURN FROM TRIP

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Acting Prime Minister. In view of his earlier statement to the effect that the Prime Minister is in western Canada gathering first hand information about economic conditions there, can we be assured that the Prime Minister will be making a statement to the house upon his return regarding the government's intentions and policy in respect of the economic situation in western Canada?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Acting Prime Minister): Well, Mr. Speaker, as was said earlier in reply to a number of questions, there are certain decisions which cannot be long delayed such as a decision in respect of the initial price of wheat, oats and barley for the new crop year beginning August 1. So I suggest there will be some decisions announced very soon.

HOUSING

INQUIRY AS TO MEETINGS WITH PROVINCIAL MINISTERS

Mr. Robert McCleave (Halifax-East Hants): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the minister in charge of housing whether he has met with any or all of the provincial ministers who are his counterparts, as indicated on May 6 in the house?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (Minister without Portfolio): Mr. Speaker, meetings are scheduled to start the last week of July and continue through the first week of August. I will be in a better position to report after these meetings have taken place.

LABOUR CONDITIONS

SUMMER EMPLOYMENT FOR STUDENTS—PREFERENCE FOR OTHER UNEMPLOYED

Mr. J. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa-Whitby): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Manpower and Immigration which is really supplementary to that put by the hon. member for York South. In the minister's instructions to his officials concerning the summer employment program for students has he taken steps to ensure that jobs will not be made available to students which otherwise would have gone to unemployed men or women, particularly those with families?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, this is a very difficult question to answer offhand. We are doing our best to find jobs for unemployed persons with family responsibilities whether they be students or otherwise. We are trying to meet the requirements of the labour market for both groups.

Mr. Broadbent: The specific question I asked is whether the minister gave instructions to his department that unemployed men and women should be given preference over students?

Mr. MacEachen: Mr. Speaker, in the Canadian manpower centres we have been operating for a good many years under well recognized international standards of selection. We do not intend to import any kind of discrimination.

[Mr. Sharp.]

INDIAN AFFAIRS

REQUEST FOR TABLING OF DRAFT POLICY STATEMENT

Mr. Frank Howard (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the minister in charge of housing. Would the hon. gentleman table the draft policy statement on Indian Affairs that he prepared when he held another position?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (Minister without Portfolio): Mr. Speaker, I will have to give that question a great deal of consideration.

INQUIRY OF THE MINISTRY

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the Acting Prime Minister why the Minister of National Health and Welfare is not in the house? He is outside the chamber answering questions on television when he should be in the house.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

SECRETARIAL STAFF—REQUEST FOR STATEMENT ON PAY INCREASES

Mr. Donald MacInnis (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Acting President of the Treasury Board which he can take as notice. Will he make a statement regarding pay increases for the house secretarial staff?

Hon. Eric Kierans (Postmaster General and Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, I will bring this matter to the attention of the President of the Treasury Board.

AGRICULTURE

REQUEST FROM FARM UNIONS TO MEET PRIME MINISTER ON WESTERN TRIP

Mr. A. P. Gleave (Saskatoon-Biggar): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Acting Prime Minister whether he is in a position to answer the question I asked yesterday with regard to whether the Prime Minister's office had received a request from the farm unions to meet with them when he was out west and whether he had acceded to that request?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I did make inquiries of the Prime Minister's office and he has received an invitation. I do not think he will be seeing these organizations formally but I am quite sure he will see many of their members who will make their views known.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

NUMBER OF INFORMATION OFFICERS IN DEPARTMENT

Mr. Barry Mather (Surrey): Mr. Speaker, having in mind the table presented yesterday indicating that the Department of National Defence has no less than 71 public information officers on staff, will consideration be given to introducing a measure of youth again in the services?

Hon. Léo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I am very glad to be afforded the opportunity of correcting this information. The number of 71 includes all personnel working in the branch and information officers would make up about half that number.

CANADIAN SOVEREIGNTY

MAINTENANCE OF EFFECTIVE PRESENCE IN ARCTIC

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Minister of National Defence whether, apart from the intention to patrol the Arctic waters this summer, the government contemplates any measures extending beyond this summer to maintain an effective Canadian presence in the Arctic?

Hon. Léo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I am gratified to note that the Leader of the Opposition approves the policy of the government which is to extend coverage to maintain Canadian sovereignty all around Canada, including the northern Arctic waters.

Mr. Stanfield: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I did not express approval or disapproval; I asked a question. The minister is one of a few who try to answer questions and I hope he will not lose that reputation.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

PRESENCE IN GALLERY OF MEMBERS OF ONTARIO COMMITTEE ON PROCEDURE

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, before we proceed to orders of the day I should like to call Your Honour's attention to a distinguished group of parliamentarians in the Speaker's gallery from the Ontario legislature, the members of the special Ontario committee on procedure. They have come to Ottawa—

An hon. Member: They have come to the wrong place.

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): —to see how we carry out the official procedures of this house.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

SUGGESTED ARRANGEMENT FOR MEMBERS TO ATTEND SUMMER GAMES

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, before you call orders of the day I should like to ask a question of the President of the Privy Council. I might say it is very difficult to get any information out of him in respect of both government plans and the business of the house. Will he consider working out a schedule for all private members on the government side which will enable them to discharge their responsibilities in the house and also spend some time at the first Canada summer games in Halifax between August 16 and August 25?

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I might say that if the hon. gentleman and his colleagues are prepared to withdraw the filibuster they are now conducting we could carry out that suggestion.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

SUGGESTED DEBATE ON COLLAPSE OF INTERNATIONAL GRAINS ARRANGEMENT

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, now that we are discussing procedures and house business I wonder whether I might put a question to the government house leader. There has been expressed on several occasions, notably today, a desire on the part of many members to have a discussion of the collapse of the International Grains Arrangement. Would the government house leader consider trying to ascertain, through the usual channels, whether arrangements could be made for a day to debate this issue? I have no authority to speak for all the opposition parties but I imagine we could agree to the use of one of the two days still standing to us as opposition allotted days. Perhaps arrangements could be made to have such a discussion later this week or one day next week.

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I will undertake, as soon as the procedural changes have been enacted by the house, to call that as the next order of business.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, first of all may I point out that this matter should be debated before the crop year is over. But the question I should like to put to the government house leader is, will he answer my question as to whether he will consult with other house leaders to see if such an arrangement could be made?

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): Mr. Speaker, I would be quite prepared to consult on that point if the hon. member would consult equally on bringing the present debate to an end.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): That's easy. Just remove 75c.

REQUEST FOR LIST OF OUTSTANDING RETURNS

Mr. Frank Howard (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the government house leader whether he would mind getting someone on his staff to look at the number of returns which the house has ordered to be made as a result of questions and motions and to compile a list so that members can see which ones are still outstanding?

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): I should be glad to make inquiries in that regard, Mr. Speaker.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

PROCEDURE AND ORGANIZATION

MOTION FOR CONCURRENCE IN THIRD REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

The house resumed, from Monday, July 14, consideration of the motion of Mr. Blair that the third report of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization presented to the house on Friday, June 20, 1969, be concurred in, and the amendment thereto of Mr. Baldwin (p. 10963).

Mr. Robert McCleave (Halifax-East Hants): Mr. Speaker, in the remaining five minutes left to me may I first be permitted to bid a fond welcome to our guests from Ontario who, through some process, have happened to find themselves in the House of Commons to learn from our procedures. I think most of us here envy them. Perhaps nobody has ever put this on record to date. While they think they are underpaid in comparison with us, they have a great way of paying those who work on their committees during times apart from the ordinary sessions of parliament. This is unknown to us here.

I had intended to complete my refresher course for my very good friends opposite on Liberalism, the right of free discussion, and free opinion. Unfortunately the Hansard staff did not return a volume on Liberalism and important speeches made by Liberals between 1919 and the present date, so I cannot give them a very fine quotation from the late Right Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie King in which he pointed out very succinctly, in one of the very best paragraphs I have read about this right of free speech, that when democracy obliterated itself things like Hitlerism were allowed to rise in Europe because people made very light of their parliamentary institutions.

This was a complaint I made yesterday about the right hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau), that he was setting himself up as a poseur between the parliamentary process and all the people it is designed to serve and those people who had elected him last June 25. I repeat the argument I made last night by saying that the right hon. gentleman has done a great disservice to himself and to Canada by opposing with the might of his office that prestige and that leadership an important political party could have, by pretending this place was filled with idiots, oafs and buffoons. He has done a disservice, but the disservice will not rest upon our shoulders ultimately. We will have wit to escape this type of approach, and the disservice will rest upon him.

Rule 75c represents tyranny. It is tyranny doubled and compounded, because the right hon. Prime Minister and other gentlemen opposite as well as on this side chose to reject 16A last December. There is no difference between 16A and the new principle of 75c.

• (3:00 p.m.)

Frankenstein has recreated his monster. He has substituted a consonant for a vowel, made some facial changes, pruned the ears back a little more, and perhaps sharpened the teeth; but the fact is that 75c has exactly the same purpose as 16A. I reject it, my colleagues on this side of the house reject it, and we shall be here all summer rejecting it—

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. McCleave: —until the conscience of those opposite, who belong to a party that espouses the right of free speech, is reawakened and resurrected to the extent that this invidious and insidious rule will be thrown out.

Mr. Muir (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): It will not be done under this Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau).

Mr. McCleave: Mr. Speaker, I do not know how many minutes I have left. I would like to make three suggestions as to how we can extricate ourselves from this problem. I shall make my remarks as short as possible but I think that perhaps for the first time in my parliamentary life I will ask the indulgence of the house to enable me to complete putting forward these three ideas. I promise not to trespass outside the few notes I have in my hand.

The first suggestion is simply that 75A and 75B be accepted by the house. Some people may have a caveat or rider to attach to that. However, I suggest that those two rules be accepted by the house on a year's trial.

My second suggestion concerns what is popularly known here as the Globe and Mail formula. In an editorial the Globe and Mail—I think even before we started our deliberations—suggested that the important thing about debate was to give the country a chance to formulate its opinions and make them known to members of parliament. That newspaper suggested that, perhaps not so importantly a member of parliament should initially state those opinions, but somewhere in the parliamentary process the opinions should have a chance to be stated. I think that is a valid point. I do not claim for myself the right to rise and trumpet an opinion that somebody else has put forward, but I think the opinion should be squarely in our minds when deciding collectively what legislation should be passed. I am not a great admirer of the Globe and Mail. I get tired of its sending people from Toronto to Ottawa who go back and do two things.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I apologize to the hon. member, but I must bring to the attention of the house that the hon. member's time has expired. He may continue only with the unanimous agreement of the house. Is this agreed?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. McCleave: Mr. Speaker, I thank my hon. colleagues for their courtesy and I shall conclude my remarks as quickly as possible. I get tired of the peregrinations to Ottawa of reporters of the Globe and Mail because when they return to Toronto they do two things. The second thing is that they write about members of parliament receiving $18,000 a year. And the first thing they write is their expense account. They have the right to come here and charge their expenses, but they do not think members of parliament have the right to come to Ottawa from Vancouver, Halifax, St. John's, or wherever it may be, earn this salary and be paid a travelling allowance. I realize that these people probably solve the office space problem by placing two seats in one stall. However, they write their opinions about us. Now for once in my life I recognize that they have a valid point. When looking for a better way of dealing with our business we have to put it on the most orderly basis. In this respect I am in agreement with the Globe and Mail. To achieve this end means obtaining outside opinion.

I present my third suggestion without having consulted anybody, but in the hope we can resolve the situation in which we find ourselves, and leave shortly for a summer recess, although some of us will not have a summer recess because we have to attend committee meetings in August and September. I suggest that the problem of allocation of time and mustering of public opinion come together not really in the House of Commons but in our committee system. I think we can find the answer there. I make this suggestion to the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald), the Acting Prime Minister, all hon. members and you, Mr. Speaker, as a possible solution to the problem.

I suggest that we form a backbenchers' committee of this place, say of five or six members from either side of the house. In a moment I shall suggest the formula by which they be chosen. These members should consider ways by which the committee system may be made more workable. I am a great believer in the committee system. I think I have probably sat on as many committees as anybody else. I have given the system my all. I said last night, and I firmly believe, that it was of great credit to hon. members on both sides of the house that in the year since the last election we have done our best to receive any subject referred to committee, give it our best thought, discussion and deliberation, and come up with the best answer for the people of Canada.

I still believe in that approach. Nothing in the angry words that people on this or the other side of the house say will ever change my mind in this respect. We can work together. We have proven that we can. We may have come off the track once in a while, but we can get back on it and forget about the little anger we have shown. We can work out a time allocation. A representative group of backbenchers can decide how best this can be done. This does not mean that the government will reach into the committee system. This point has not been dealt with very much in the debate. The fact is that a great many of my colleagues on the back benches are not the beautiful people of the House of Commons; we are not ministers, we are not parliamentary secretaries, we are not chairmen of committees, we are not deputies of this, that or the other.

Mr. Alexander: We are just the workers.

Mr. McCleave: We are the people who make parliament work. There are about 200 of us. We come from all parties and all provinces of Canada. I throw out this suggestion for the consideration of our important elders, the beautiful people to whom I have just referred. The opposition side should pick the three best committee people from the government side of the house. The government side should pick those they regard as the best three, four or five—whatever number is determined—people from the opposition side of the house. Those people should be given time to consider this problem. There should be consultation with everybody in the chamber. However, I believe this could be done in, say, two months.

The members chosen should be given time to work out some kind of formula for the conduct of committees. It should be a good formula so that anybody who feels himself, herself, or if an association, itself, aggrieved by legislation would at least have the opportunity to appear before us. This suggestion may offend those who think purism exists only in the House of Commons. I do not think it will offend those who believe the committee system is a very valuable part of the proceedings of this place.

This is the suggestion I make, Mr. Speaker. I make it in humility and because I believe that when committees are unfettered and allowed to reach a consensus they will go out and do the job required for the House of Commons.

• (3:10 p.m.)

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): Before the hon. member resumes his seat would he mind if I asked a question? His second point, as I gather it, is taken from the Globe and Mail editorial. I gather the position of the Globe and Mail is that 75c would be acceptable provided there is a minimum of one month's time with respect to any bill on the order paper. Is that what the hon. member is proposing to the house?

[Mr. McCleave.]

Mr. McCleave: Mr. Speaker, I confess that I did not read the Globe and Mail editorial as carefully as I should have, or as carefully as the President of the Privy Council appears to have read it. My second and third suggestions ought to be considered together. In some cases one month may be too long; on the other hand with bills like the Indian Act amendment one month might be far too little. The idea is that there must be enough time for us in parliament to inform the country what is happening and to enlighten public opinion. My approach to this matter, in a way of speaking, is the backbenchers' approach or the committee approach. Our opinions ought to be made known to the country. That is what I was trying to say.

Hon. D. S. Harkness (Calgary Centre): Mr. Speaker, I seldom take part in debates on the rules, usually being content to leave discussions on these matters to others who have become more or less experts on the subject. Some are experts on our complicated procedures and on the involved interpretations of rules as set out by Erskine, May, Beauchesne and others.

May I say in passing that I think part of the time which this measure is supposedly designed to save could be saved if less time were devoted to some of the more abstruse discussions on the rules which take place on occasion. Sometimes we may talk about the rules for several hours during any one week.

As has been pointed out by many in this debate, we can utilize many methods to save time in this house other than the one proposed by the government. In this case, however, we are not embarked on the usual kind of rules debate. This really is an effort by the government to emasculate parliament. It is an effort to take away from the representatives of the people in this chamber their right to discuss a government measure at sufficient length so that its weaknesses may be exposed and so that the general public may become aware of those weaknesses.

I think parliamentary histories and histories of countries demonstrate that only as a result of considerable debate can the function of the opposition in parliament be exercised. Only that way can the beneficial results—and I think we all admit they are beneficial—of a proper opposition in parliament be secured for the people of the country.

One could point to many examples of what the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald) is pleased to call a filibuster. Generally people on the government front benches call them filibusters. In many cases far from being filibusters those proceedings ought to have been called debates, designed to alert the general public to the dangers of legislation being presented to the house and to secure a sufficient interest in the matter so that public opinion might be brought to bear, and in turn so that the government might be brought to realize that the legislation being proposed needed to be changed.

One could point to all sorts of examples in recent years of so-called filibusters, the two most outstanding being the debate on Mr. Howe's proposals to retain certain powers under the Defence Production Act, and the pipeline debate. There is no hon. member here who could not cite many other examples. They all show how necessary it is for opposition parties to be able to debate for a sufficiently long time measures brought forward by the government, in order to arouse public opinion. That such debate is necessary I think is self-evident, and any student or lover of the democratic process will readily admit that there is necessity for such debate.

The ostensible reasons the government has for introducing proposed rule 75c are to save the time of the house, to prevent obstruction in the house by the opposition, and so on. I ask hon. members on the government side who are putting forward this proposal, what obstruction are they talking about? What obstruction has prevailed in the past year that makes necessary a rule like 75c? If they answer that question reasonably and fairly perhaps the only measure they can point to in which there was any obstruction at all was the omnibus bill to amend the Criminal Code. In any event I think that proposed rules 75A and 75B would have been sufficient to deal with that situation, and there would not have been any need to invoke rule 75c.

In my view, Mr. Speaker, the proposal to introduce rule 75c demonstrates that the government does not like parliament, that it looks on parliament as a nuisance, and that it is determined to undermine it and reduce its power as much as possible. Except in countries ruled by dictators, or that have been in the past ruled by dictators, one will generally find a conflict between the legislative and executive branches of government. The history of almost every country shows that the executive from time to time has tried to take unto itself greater and greater powers and get away from restraints imposed by the legislature.

In the United States system there is a division of powers which is designed to ensure that the executive is shackled by the legislative and judicial branches. In our system of representative cabinet government although it is theoretically possible for members of the house to control the power of the cabinet by threatening to vote its members out of office, in practice when one considers how party discipline has developed that is a practical impossibility.

Since it is almost impossible to make members of the government party vote against the government, we have lost within our legislatures the power to restrain governments. Unless the opposition retains the right to, shall we say, obstruct government if it feels the government is pursuing a course that is against the best interests of the country, public opinion may never become alerted to the danger, and action to correct the danger may not be taken. The legislation may go through parliament before the country is alerted to its danger.

Where is the evidence that this government looks on parliament as a nuisance, and that it seeks to undermine it, Mr. Speaker? One piece of evidence is the roster system for the attendance of ministers. The absence of ministers impairs the effectiveness of the question period, and by this method the government has shown its contempt of parliament. One of the traditional rights of members of the house has been the right to question in the house members of the executive with respect of government policy. Since at best only half our ministers are supposed to be here at any one time under the roster system, the rights of ordinary members have been impaired. But even more clearly does the government show its contempt for parliament when, day after day, only eight, nine, ten or eleven of the 28 ministers show up for the question period. Today, for example, there were eight ministers here for a time, and later nine. This can only be interpreted as thinking that parliament does not amount to anything, that the ministries do not have to account to parliament for their actions, thus generally circulating the idea throughout the country that parliament is no longer an effective or useful body.

• (3:20 p.m.)

This general attitude on the part of the present government is demonstrated even more forcibly by the absenteeism of ministers and Liberal members during debates. Their absenteeism in this session has been notorious. Last Thursday the house had to adjourn for lack of a quorum. I think it was a very good thing it did, because attendance of ministers and Liberal members has been considerably better since than was the case before. In addition, there has been more life in the house. The house has resembled what it used to be 10 or 15 years ago instead of what it has been during the past months when generally it was dead. Few ministers were here and few questions went back and forth. There was no fight to the proceedings. Since the house had to adjourn last Thursday things have improved from this point of view.

In my view this action should and could have been taken long before. During the last six sitting days of June I noted at times when I was in the house that a quorum was not present, and I do not know how many other times there was not a quroum when I was not in the house. I counted between six to nine Liberal members present, and frequently no cabinet minister. Absenteeism has been going on for a considerable period, but I hope the action taken last Thursday will bring this extreme form of it to an end. I do not think there is any doubt that what this extreme absenteeism demonstrated was nothing but a lack of regard for this institution, the adoption of the attitude that what happens here does not matter.

An hon. Member: It happens with all parties.

Mr. Harkness: I will come to that. Absenteeism has been a problem since I first came to this house in 1945, particularly on Mondays and Fridays. In my early days here there used to be what was known as the Tuesday to Thursday club, people who came here for those three days, spending the remainder of the week with their law business or something else. This club comprised people who lived within a reasonably short distance from Ottawa. The quorum was maintained on Mondays and Fridays chiefly by members from the west and the maritime provinces.

Mr. Howard (Okanagan Boundary): Would the hon. member permit a question?

[Mr. Harkness.]

Mr. Harkness: Certainly.

Mr. Howard (Okanagan Boundary): May I ask the hon. member how many opposition members were present in the house at the time the count was made last Thursday?

Mr. Harkness: I was not here at the time so I cannot answer that question.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Harkness: I do not mind admitting that.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): We pulled out.

Mr. Harkness: My point is that there were only 6, 7 or 8 Liberal members. It is the members of the government who have the primary responsibility for maintaining a quorum in the house. They know they were very much at fault on that occasion, as they have been for months as far as attendance is concerned. They are now attempting to escape the odium that naturally falls on them as a result of what happened last Thursday by claiming that members of the opposition were not here in sufficient numbers either. As I said, the primary responsibility for maintaining a quorum rests with members of the Liberal party, not with the opposition.

I make no apology for, or condone for one moment absenteeism on the part of opposition members during the past year, though by comparison it has been much less than among the members of the Liberal party. Attendance of opposition members at times has not been as good as it should, and I would be the last to say that that was not the case. But it has been much better than attendance of government members, and anyone who has kept track must be appalled at how bad is the record of the Liberal party in this regard.

As I mentioned earlier, the excuse given for introducing rule 75c, and also the other rules that have been put into effect to curtail debate in this house during the past number of years, has been that it is necessary to save the time of the house and get through the great volume of work we have to handle. From my experience I contend this is a fallacy to a large extent.

In fact, it works the other way around. You might say there is a law similar to Parkinson's law, which is that debate is always prolonged to use up all of the time allotted. I think the President of the Privy Council and members of the Liberal party should keep that in mind. Since Parkinson's law is now well recognized, I hope that this law, which is similar, will also soon be recognized.

There are plenty of examples I can call upon to show this law is true. For several years during my earlier period in the house there was no time limit on any debate except debate on private members' business. The throne speech debate could go on for weeks if members wanted to prolong it to that extent, and sometimes they did. Similarly the budget debate was unrestricted.

But in actual practice, if you look back over the record, Mr. Speaker, though debates were sometimes long they were also often quite short. On one or two occasions we dispensed with one or two days on the throne speech debate. Since time limits have been imposed on the throne speech debate and the budget debate, practically always the time is fully taken up. There are only two instances that I can remember when the time allotted to those two debates was not consumed. In other words, if time is allotted to a debate, there is a natural tendency to expand the debate in order to use up the time.

It is often argued that in past years there was not nearly as much business to deal with as there is today, and therefore in former days you could take time to have long debates on the throne speech, the budget, or anything else. It is claimed this cannot be done today because there is too much business to get through. The answer that I point to the first post-war session held in 1946. More measures were passed and business completed in that session than in any other session during the 24 or 25 years I have been here. Nevertheless there were no time limits on any of the debates. I think it was some time in February when the session started and it finished about the end of August. Considerably longer sessions than that have been normal in recent years since time limits came in with regard to debates.

• (3:30 p.m.)

The greatest example of the point I am trying to make is that if you put a limit on a debate it is going to expand it. There will not be any time saved at all. It is instructive to look at the question period before any time limit was laid down for it. I took a bound volume of Hansard at random off my shelves and looked to see what the question period amounted to in those years. I picked up volume V for the 1953-54 session.

Looking at the first day which is covered in this volume, Friday, May 7, 1954, we see that there were three questions asked that day. The questions and the answers take up one page in Hansard. The next sitting day, which would be Monday, May 10, four questions were asked. One page of Hansard was taken up with regard to the matter. The record continues: Tuesday, May 11, three questions, one and three-quarters pages of Hansard; May 12, seven questions, three and one-quarter pages of Hansard; May 13, three questions, three-quarters of a page of Hansard; Friday, May 14, four questions, one page of Hansard; May 17, two questions, half a page of Hansard; May 20, seven questions, three and one-half pages. This was typical of the situation with regard to questions and the amount of time taken up with questions for years and years in this house.

It was normal for the question period to take up five to ten minutes and very frequently only one, two or three minutes. One of the reasons for that was that the rules with regard to oral questions were enforced. A question had to be short and of importance. In my opinion the majority of the questions asked today would have been ruled out of order in that period. This, of course, kept the length of the question period shorter.

But when a specific time limit was put on the question period, allotting 40 minutes a day, what happened? Immediately the question period expanded so that it took up the whole 40 minutes. Last Friday is a good example. There were at least two or three dozen questions asked. The question period lasted the full 40 minutes. Possibly Your Honour was a little lenient and it even went beyond that. The questions and answers occupy ten and a half pages of Hansard.

When you start putting limits on debates and question periods, instead of saving time you do the opposite. You prolong debate. This is the point I am trying to make. If rule 75c were used to any extent, it would not save the time of the house. It would have the opposite effect. More time would be taken up in the house to debate the same matters. Every time an allocation of time would be made under this rule, undoubtedly the full time would be taken up. I submit, Mr. Speaker, that the basic argument which the government puts forward that this rule is necessary to save time is a fallacy. It is based on a lack of study of what happened in the past, particularly the history of the question period, to see what the situation has been with regard to the throne speech and the budget debate which now have time allocations.

As the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield) said in his speech last week, the real purpose of the government in introducing this rule is to force certain questionable measures through quickly. It is simply a less blatant measure of closure and one which the government thinks it can use without contracting the odium which the use of our regular rule of closure might bring down on it.

The fact that we have a closure rule makes introduction of rule 75c superfluous and unnecessary. If real obstruction is taking place, of a nature which the general public disapproves of, the government can use closure without fear. When they cannot use it without fear is when public opinion is against them. It is for cases such as this that they want rule 75c, cases when public opinion is against them. When they are wrong, they want to use 75c. I submit it is a thoroughly undemocratic device and one which any government calling itself Liberal should be ashamed to be introducing into this chamber.

A further argument has been put forward against this measure. My time is getting short therefore I will not go into it. The argument is that this proposed rule is ambiguous. This in itself should be enough for the government to withdraw it. There has been a great deal of discussion and argument as to what this rule actually means, how it will be interpreted, and what the general result of it will be. If the government were a reasonable government this should be sufficient reason for it to withdraw the rule.

I believe rule 75c is a thoroughly bad and unnecessary proposal. I hope the government will realize this and end their efforts to force it through the house.

Mr. Hy Chappell (Peel South): Mr. Speaker, my remarks will be short, but I hope helpful. I have a suggestion to make which could possibly shorten this debate.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Chappell: I believe this suggestion has sufficient merit to warrant consideration by the government and the opposition. I look forward to hearing comment on it from some of the members of the Official Opposition now in the house. It is somewhat different from the suggestion reputed to be mine and put forward last Friday by the hon. member for Vancouver Quadra (Mr. Deachman).

Rule 75B provides that when there is a majority, that is to say, three of the four house leaders agreeing in respect to the allotment of time, the minister can implement that agreement by a motion. The logic seems obvious enough, namely, that a large or relatively strong majority cannot be delayed in their work by a small minority.

If the Official Opposition and the N.D.P. agreed with the government, the majority would be 248 over 14. If the Official Opposition and the Creditistes agreed with the government, it would be 240 over 22. No one argues in this debate that a group as small as 14 or 22 should hold up a large majority. If the Creditistes and the N.D.P. agreed with the government, there would be 190 in agreement and the other 72, members of the Official Opposition, could not hold up what the 190 wish to get ahead with in the house.

• (3:40 p.m.)

So far I follow that logic. But there is another combination which has been overlooked, namely the government and the Official Opposition. That would be 226 over 36. As 75B now stands the Official Opposition with 72 members does not have as much weight as the two small groups with a total of 36. Something is wrong. How do 36 members become more powerful than 72 members?

The hon. member for Edmonton West (Mr. Lambert) when speaking last week said all hon. members are equal in the House of Commons. I would like to agree with him but certainly it is difficult to do so when we see 36 members with more say in respect of allotment of time than 72 members

I say that our thinking is all wrong in two respects. First, we must recognize the importance of the members rather than their parties. There should be no premium or reward in this House of Commons because a member belongs to a third choice or a fourth choice party, or possibly in the future to a fifth, sixth or seventh choice party.

Second, as 75B stands we overlook the essence of democracy, namely, that the party with the greatest majority forms the government. But there is another party that is important, the Official Opposition, the Loyal Opposition, which has carried out that most important role for centuries. It is that party which stands ready to take over should we lose the confidence of this house. No other party in this house can possibly form the government except by a vague hope, and even then only after another election. The small parties may stand ready and hope sometime to become the Official Opposition but they cannot during the life of this parliament. The people elected us, the Liberals, to form the government, and the opposition stands ready to take over. I think we break faith with the people if we do not give the Official Opposition its full responsibility in comparison with the two minor parties.

During the debate on the omnibus Criminal Code bill we listened for weeks to the tedious and useless repetition of the Créditiste filibuster. Just last week the other small party, the N.D.P., caused the waste of a total evening session by calling for a quorum count during the private members hour and then withdrawing themselves from the count. I can hardly comprehend an official opposition being so irresponsible as to waste time by destroying an evening. It is equivalent to a self-inflicted thrombosis in the life blood of parliament.

Then what should be done? There is a simple answer. I put the challenge squarely to the Official Opposition.

An hon. Member: Put it to yourself first.

An hon. Member: Who are you trying to kid?

Mr. Chappell: As 75B is drafted now the two minor parties can agree with the government. Then there can be an allotment of time. Why should we not add there that if the Official Opposition agrees with the government, that is it. Then there can be agreement. I say this with respect. The important thing is that the Official Opposition and the government would constantly share the responsibility concerning whether we would ever use 75C. The house leader for the Liberals and the house leader for the Progressive Conservatives would agree; they would have to agree because if they did not agree they would be called to account by the press who would ask whether the government house leader was unreasonable or whether the Leader of the Official Opposition (Mr. Stanfield) was unreasonable. The Canadian public would constantly judge which one was unreasonable and made it necessary for 75C to be invoked. I submit that both being in a position of responsibility they would agree and seldom would 75C have to be invoked.

In any even 75C, at least from my study of it, is not so terribly vicious. It is a form of closure but I submit it is mild and there is an abundance of safeguards built into it. I think it is wrong that the Official Opposition does not have a position of responsibility here. Either they agree with the government on time allotment and that is it, or they say no and face the responsibility of forcing the government to use 75C. I cannot imagine the two minor parties not welcoming the Official Opposition having that responsibility.

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, I am sure the house listened to the suggestion just made by the hon. gentleman and gave it the attention it deserves. It amazes me that an hon. member of the Liberal party would cast aspersions on the N.D.P., the former C.C.F., and speak of that party in such disparaging tones, because they were the nursery which gave the present government its Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau), and two ministers. That is an attitude which does not indicate that spirit of compassion and consideration which I would have expected of the hon. gentleman. I am sure he could not have been speaking on behalf of the Liberal party for certainly such views border on heresy of the worst kind.

Now, sir, I do not intend to traverse the ground which has been gone over during the last few days. I took the government at its word, very much in the spirit of the Revelation, "I, John, saw a new heaven and a new earth". This government was in power and all was well. The house was going to adjourn on, I believe, June 27.

Mr. Stanfield: June 26.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Everything indicated that conclusion. Then at the last moment that pathological disease that has affected the Liberal party for a period now of 13 years evidenced itself and along came the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald), a man whom one would never dream would try to destroy or participate in destroying this institution. He occupies a high position. You can always find an appropriate reference to Shakespeare. As I look at that hon. gentleman I think of these words of Shakespeare:

> —but man, proud man,
> Drest in a little brief authority,
> Most ignorant of what he's most assur'd,
> His glassy essence, like an angry ape.

It is now the minister's turn to laugh again.

• (3:50 p.m.)

> Plays such fantastic tricks before high heaven
> As make the angels weep.

I cannot understand this government. I find it difficult to recognize in a government a desire on the part of its members to destroy this institution. What is the reasoning for this? I ask this of the ministers and I am faced by a galaxy of two—two ministers sitting across the corridor when parliament is discussing a matter that, if carried into effect, will be the death sentence of this institution. They sit and they smirk. One of these ministers is the Minister of Veterans' Affairs (Mr. Dubé). While veterans all over this country are suffering he does not dare do anything because the Prime Minister has said that it must not be done.

Isn't it a strange commentary that ministers of the Crown today are unable to speak unless directed, and unable to arise unless it is their day to get out of the corral—and they accept it? They glory in it. What a government! Backbenchers talk of the rights of parliament. They cannot call their souls their own. They dare not speak in committee without permission and direction. We must thank the hon. member for York East (Mr. Otto), who made it very clear what the instructions were that debunked this idea that the committee system was going to work free from any consideration of political bias or prejudice. He pointed out that the direction was, "You will vote as you are told." So much for the backbenchers and their power. I should like to see the backbenchers speak up but they are not allowed to speak.

When the cabinet is throttled, what happens to the backbenchers? All they have is the right to vote; all they constitute is the necessary membership to provide a quorum. I was not here last week because I took the government at its word. I am back because I do not want the government caught with its quorum down again.

Why do they act this way? I have done a little research and I have read a little about Machiavelli. The Prime Minister was asked shortly after he became the Prime Minister who was his model politician and statesman, and without hesitation he said "Machiavelli". I have a volume here which describes Machiavelli as having been a talented dissembler, a ready opportunist, a master in the field of human weakness, an accountant of forgotten sentences, a promoter of vanity, a skilful juggler, a lover of cunning and a worshipper of force.

He is the one who has been chosen as the guardian saint of the Liberal Party. I will deal in a moment with the promises made by the Prime Minister. I will not deal with them in a personal way as he is not here. He is out in western Canada and he is finding out what his ministers have not told him.

Just imagine the three silent ministers from western Canada. We have from Winnipeg the hon. gentleman who knows more about wheat, I presume, than any other person in this house if not in the country as a whole. Then there is the hon. member from Saskatchewan. He is a general factotum and has knowledge of almost everything, at least according to the number of portfolios he fills from time to time. Then there is the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Olson) from Alberta who, when he was sitting on this side of the house in the Social Credit party demanded action from the government in loud and stentorian tones till he got close to the point when he made a saltus; a turn over of views, and gave us a major performance when he finally saw the light and took his place. He was in favour of the two price system.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I always hesitate to interrupt the right hon. gentleman and I appreciate that what he is saying is by way of an introduction to his address to the house, but I have to remind him that we are dealing with the amendment to the main motion which has reference to proposed Standing Order 75c. I know that in due course the right hon. gentleman will bare his remarks and direct them to the subject matter.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Mr. Speaker, I was just in the process of showing where the hypocrisy was, and where was the location of the stupidity. The Prime Minister made a statement the other day he ought not to have made, but I know that is the attitude of this government. They want this power for the purpose of carrying out their wishes regardless of the people of Canada. No tyrant could ask for more than this power.

The Prime Minister would go all through the form of having a parliament. He would have it sit, but whenever there was criticism that the government did not like in would come rule 75c to destroy the opposition. I say to you, Sir, that in order to build the argument and to show that this is so, I have the right, I suggest with deference, to point out what is being done here by this government.

Let me go back to Hansard of last fall, September 16, 1968, when the Prime Minister made a dissertation on parliament and revealed his views as to how parliament should act, and also indicated his ideas of parliament in so far as the opposition is concerned. You can read it in Hansard for September 16 at pages 72 and 73. After expressing doubt as to whether parliament is an institution that should be maintained, despite the greatness of its past, he ended up with these words:

> It goes without saying that any proposal for procedural reform must assist both sides of this house to function more efficiently.

Is that what is going to happen if this rule comes into effect; that the opposition is going to be able to function more efficiently? He talks about hypocrisy. There was hypocrisy then, and there is now. All of this is happening while he is pretending that this proposed rule is to bring about a strenghtening of parliament. Parliament is being undermined and eroded.

• (4:00 p.m.)

The three who are gathered together and are united in this aim are those the Liberal party took over holus-bolus from the N.D.P.-C.C.F. The house will remember that early last year we saw the attitude of the government of Canada as revealed by the Prime Minister. This was after the government had been defeated. The Prime Minister was then minister of justice. The government was defeated. The opposition gave it opportunities for extra days, and so on. If the government had then gone to the country, as it should in carrying out its constitutional responsibility, it would not be in the position it is today. What did the Prime Minister say when he was minister of justice? These were his words:

> We are the masters of this chamber. We decide that we are the government.

I repeat, "We are the masters". As that statement finally appeared in the printing of the French translation, it read:

> We are the masters of this chamber in the sense that we should manage its business.

In the English version it read:

> We are masters of the house in the sense that we have to conduct the affairs of government.

If the statement "We are masters of the house" had been made in the mother of parliaments, it would have brought such a degree of resentment on the part of the government and opposition that it would have had to be withdrawn. This is the philosophy behind proposed rule 75c, namely, "We are the masters".

I quote from another minister to indicate the attitude of the government. These are the words of the Secretary of State (Mr. Pelletier), who received notice that I was going to deal with him. He is the conscience of the Prime Minister and the Liberal government of today. He is the man who represents the quintessence of the concept, "We are your masters". Very recently he was interviewed by Nathan Cohen on "Twenty Million Questions". I should like to read what this minister of the Crown said, because it indicates the attitude of the government when the Prime Minister says, "We are your masters. You over there are stupid. You have not the right to speak. We do not agree with you". These are the words of the Secretary of State:

> I was sitting in the house and listening to these people and I said: "if only the majority of Canadians could hear this nonsense being spoken openly as I hear it tonight, they would see how absurd it is".

These are our masters! He then went on to say that it was nonsensical. Mr. Cohen asked, "What makes their views nonsensical?" The answer was, "Because they are talking nonsense". The minister then revealed himself clearly in these words:

> This is a personal judgment, but I make personal judgments and I think I'm right usually when I make them.

There is the picture: the Prime Minister says, "We are the masters" and the Secretary of State says, "They talk nonsense". It must be shocking to the finer sensibilities of those who wander in the intellectual greatness of ivory towers to have to listen to opposition members advancing their views. It was pointed out that the Secretary of State is now responsible for the C.B.C., the National Film Board, the Canada Council, the National Gallery, the Canadian Radio-Television Commission and the Canadian Film Development Corporation.

Can you imagine a man having this power and those views? I will mention what he said about the C.B.C. He made it very clear where he stands with regard to that corporation. This is the man who was going to abolish the Queen. This is the man who voted for the principle of a republic. He does not hide the fact that this is where he stands. He said:

> Now, with the present management of the C.B.C. I must say that I can discuss with them very freely and I feel no resistance and (that) I feel that I'm in the company of people who want basically the same things that I want myself to achieve.

Is that not a frightful proposition? I have been away from the House of Commons. When I am away I always record my absence. I have been away because I trusted this government to do what it said it would. The Secretary of State says with regard to the C.B.C.:

—I feel that I'm in the company of people who want basically the same things that I want myself to achieve.

How many reports on the C.B.C. has parliament considered? I have listened to the C.B.C. every night and have not heard anything on this subject; there has been absolute silence. You would not know there was a debate in the house that concerns the future and the greatness of this institution. Not a word has been said on the C.B.C. On the other hand the sycophants who praise the government find their way on to the channels of the C.B.C.—those who say the House of Commons is a bore, those who say there is here needless repetition, those who say this kind of thing should end, those who say parliament should be at the whim of the lust of power-grasping individuals. These people are reported; their statements are given on the C.B.C. Last Sunday, the report from Parliament Hill would indicate that everything here was boring. That is because these people have decided that something must be done to bolster up the government. The Secretary of State also said the trouble with us in parliament is that we have not the knowledge:

—I'm a little sick myself of hearing about understanding when knowledge is not even there. And you can't come to understanding without knowledge.

This is the man who sits over there, controls these various organizations, and says that he finds in the C.B.C. a brotherhood of thought and idealism. Is this one of the reasons why individuals come to our country for the purpose of stirring up trouble? I do not refer to all those who come to this country, but there are people who come here to stir up trouble, and they always seem to be able to find a place on the C.B.C. to voice their propositions to the Canadian people. And when they do not come here because they would be asked to leave, the C.B.C. arranges for their views to be broadcast. One individual spoke over the telephone from the United States; the C.B.C. arranged this. The C.B.C. representative said to him, "We are glad to have your views. Be sure to call me up."

• (4:10 p.m.)

This is what is happening here. The government house leader has said, "Oh, do not be afraid. We will not use this rule, except in 1 per cent of cases. In 99 cases out of 100 we will not use it." I ask what has the government in mind? Why is it endeavouring to foist this on us at this time? What is the purpose, what is the objective? Why the rush? Who wants what?

Over and over again in this house the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield), the leader of the New Democratic party (Mr. Douglas) and the leader of the Ralliement Créditiste (Mr. Caouette) have asked where the government was held up. The government has not been held up. Nothing has been done for the veterans or for the farmers. Oh, yes, the farmers are to have a visitation from on high. The Prime Minister is in western Canada but he is not there to consult the farmers. This attitude, Mr. Speaker, on the part of the government is the attitude of dictators.

This parliament is a sham. The hon. member on this side of the house who preceded me said that there have been changes over the years. This parliament is dead and if we carry on as we have been we shall become undertakers who are about to bury parliament.

It is the government that refuses to place legislation before the house. The opposition cannot propose legislation. Yet the government cannot point to one piece of legislation that is ready to be put before the house. Instead we hear the Minister of Finance (Mr. Benson) in reply to questions from the Leader of the Opposition say, "We are not going to tell you what is going to happen. It is a secret. Some day we will reveal it." No doubt that will be in the great by and by. When we ask the government what it is going to do, the answer invariably given is, "We are giving thought to the matter." Indeed, it is impossible to understand what the government wants or what it has in mind.

On September 16 when the Prime Minister was speaking about parliament, he said, as reported at page 72 of Hansard:

—whether our systems of government have outlived their effectiveness,—

And, sir, he followed with these words:

—whether . . . new institutions are necessary—

What does that mean? Are we to do away with the parliamentary system and adopt the congressional system of government? Is that the new institution?

This government's attitude was demonstrated when on June 24 the Secretary of State (Mr. Pelletier) directed, contrary to the rules of protocol, that no flag was to be flown at half mast over parliament hill in memory of one of the greatest soldiers of our time, and our former Governor General. Then we discovered that we were blaming the Secretary of State unfairly, because the orders had come from the Prime Minister's office. That was another indication of the government's cavalier disregard for precedent.

The Prime Minister went on to say in his speech:

> There is abroad in Canada and elsewhere a spreading concern that the traditional techniques of governments are incapable of responding adequately and in time to the changing needs of society... We are given an opportunity in this place, in this session, which may not again present itself. It is the opportunity to prove to Canadians, ourselves included, that a parliamentary form of government is not only capable of meeting the demands of this complex age, but that it is more capable of doing so than is any other form.

That apparently is what is in the minds of the Prime Minister and his associates in seeking these powers.

Much was made of debates in previous years, but speeches were not read. I know the effect of strong debate on the part of the opposition. I have sat on both sides of the house. On one occasion when I was prime minister we brought in legislation we thought was good, only to discover after three or four members had examined it that something was wrong with it. You cannot have good legislation without debate, and it seems the government wants us to have a total of four days of debate only which is to be spread over a period of ten days. That is what the government wants.

The self-appointed prophets of radio, television, and the press say this matter is not very important. They talk about a mere 1 per cent of cases. It has been interesting to read Mr. Weasel—Westell, I beg your pardon. That was a slip of the tongue. But he and others like him certainly weaseled around and produced a eulogium on what is taking place here. They said to the opposition in effect, "What are you doing? You are boring us." Well, people like that must bore easily because you seldom see them in the gallery.

The attitude of this government has been one of wanting to trample on the rights of the opposition. The hon. gentleman who preceded me should have offered his remedy to the government. After all, it is the government that is all-powerful. The Prime Minister has said that this is a stupid filibuster. Well, the government cannot back up. It is caught in its own tangled web, and it must keep up appearances. The Leader of the Opposition has said that as long as 75c stands, so shall we stand against it.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Crouse: That message is loud and clear.

Mr. Diefenbaker: I say to the President of the Privy Council that while he may cow Liberal members, he cannot cow us.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): He tries to.

Mr. Diefenbaker: He will not get away with it. I want to be very fair with the President of the Privy Council. Only occasionally does he make a pilgrimage out in front of the house to tell the nation that he did not say what he is said to have said. Each day ministers treat this house with contempt, disregarding questions or answering flippantly. Sometimes, when they are caught and embarrassed, they rush out and in the ante-room of parliament tell the Canadian people what they did not say.

• (4:20 p.m.)

The government are making a caricature of this institution. They do not care about it. Tyranny has no conscience. Hon. gentlemen opposite want to drive this measure through, but they now find themselves caught.

I realize some hon. members sitting around me believed that all was going to be well in this parliament; that committees would be set up similar to those in the United States where partisanship does not always enter. But under our system of government they have found out that this cannot be. If Liberals on a committee voted contrary to what the government wanted, it would be a vote of non-confidence. Such cannot happen on United States committees.

I was particularly impressed by one of the hon. members from Nova Scotia who spoke yesterday. When mention was made of co-operation, he said that there had been too much co-operation, that we have spoiled the government. I told hon. members that if they fed these people opposite with power they would abuse it. If you compromise with them to reach agreement they will use that compromise as a method of denuding and deflowering the opposition. That has been the lesson over the years.

I like to see young backbenchers across the way laughing at my remarks, because that is about the only contribution they make. There are more young members of ability in this house than one sees in many parliaments. I read their speeches, and I could refer to two in particular that were delivered by Liberal members. Although I did not agree with their views, I do agree that they will make unusually fine parliamentarians.

One of them, the hon. member for Sudbury (Mr. Jerome), in a moment of great exhilaration, said in effect that the committee system has been wonderful, that it has revealed the kind of trickeries of government. We now know, said the hon. member, what otherwise we would not have known.

Those of us who have been here for years have a deep and abiding affection for this institution and do not want to see it destroyed. We want to see it made strong and effective, but not by telling the opposition in effect that they have four days to discuss a certain matter and must go to it. That is an old threat.

I remember when the former prime minister, Mr. Pearson, tried to explain away in this house the sterility of the programs that he had brought before parliament. He said that had he had a similar rule to this present proposal he would have been able to do so much. I should like to ask the government what they would do with this power. Efforts to curtail parliamentary power have been characteristic over the years. History proves that autocracy and dictatorships are shadows that forever stand in the wings of parliament.

I should like some minister to tell us what the government are going to do when they get this power. Where are these strong men that form the government? Where is the Acting Prime Minister (Mr. Sharp)? Where is the Minister of Finance (Mr. Benson), that wizard on financial matters? What action are these people taking today? With this rule would they have taken any action to forestall the increase to its highest point of the cost of living in this country? Would they have taken action to ensure that the western farmer would not be in the position he now is, with the economy going down and down and retail sales disappearing on every hand? I think sales have slumped 13 per cent during the last six months.

What does the one per cent to which reference has been made mean? Nobody knows. Ministers do not speak, they sit—if they are here. One would expect ministers to rise in their place to defend this proposal. But no; except for one or two speeches there has been silence. I should like to hear from the Secretary of State (Mr. Pelletier).

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. I must interrupt the right hon. gentleman as his time has expired.

[Mr. Diefenbaker.]

Some hon. Members: Continue.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Is the hon. member for Papineau (Mr. Ouellet) not here? The hon. member for Hamilton-Wentworth (Mr. Gibson) is a congenial fellow with a knowledge of this parliament that few have. I knew his distinguished father and his distinguished grandfather, and the hon. member is always in the house. I feel more at home seeing him here, and I know he would not say anything to which the government would not want to listen.

So I conclude by asking whether the government intend to bring about the abolition of our parliamentary system. Is the Secretary of State now to be given the opportunity to push through in four days a measure dealing with the abolition of the monarchy? Is this what the government has in mind? There is no question the government could do this under this proposed rule. They have a favourable Senate. In recent years that institution has not shown that independence of which so much is often spoken.

No longer have we a constitution. It can now be amended by a simple vote of the House of Commons and Senate. Would the house leader tell us what he has in mind by his reference to one per cent? This is about the ratio that the legislation introduced bears to the total amount of legislation that should have been introduced by this government. What does the government want to destroy? What is the plan?

Last September the Prime Minister stated that the government would have to find out whether other institutions must take the place of parliament. These days this parliament has an appointment with its own destiny. The question facing it will not be answered by an opposition that grovels and goes on bended knee. Although we are all desirous of taking a vacation let me tell the government they are not going to push this proposal through. What the government has done to this country during the last year has resulted in the greatest fall in support in political history.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Hon. members used to quote Gallup polls when they told a story in their favour. But look what happened in Manitoba. Down went the Liberal party.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

• (4:30 p.m.)

Mr. Diefenbaker: The Liberals in Manitoba could not stomach this government here and voted N.D.P. That is why we have a change of government in Manitoba today. If Liberal members have been in their constituencies I would have liked to have been present to listen to what their constituents said to them, because the language would not have been parliamentary. I presume that is the reason those members will not place it before the House of Commons.

Mr. Mark Rose (Fraser Valley West): It is a great honour to follow the right hon. member for Prince Albert (Mr. Diefenbaker). I feel somewhat like a conductor of a high school orchestra being asked to perform following the New York Philharmonic. I am delighted to congratulate the right hon. member for a very excellent speech in spite of the fact that he said many of the things I wanted to say. I would like to thank him also for all his kind words about the N.D.P.

This is a speech I hoped I would never be required to make. Before I am through a number of hon. members will probably feel the same way. It should have been unnecessary to make this kind of speech, but the stubborn cabinet seem to delight in this kind of cliff-hanger. We had their Christmas present in terms of rule 16A and now we face the dubious prospect of sitting around here throughout the stifling Ottawa summer.

Mr. Crouse: Incidentally, where is the cabinet?

Mr. Rose: An hon. member is asking, where is the cabinet? I imagine the cabinet is reviewing some legislation because that is what it has been doing all year.

Mr. Crouse: They are not in the house.

Mr. Rose: I wish to tell hon. members that I for one resent being kept here to prove some point or to save the face of the government house leader. I will stay here night and day—

Mr. Nowlan: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker. I would like the Chair to notice that there is not one member of Her Majesty's Privy Council in the chamber at this time.

Mr. Perrault: That's no point of order.

Mr. Nowlan: I would not like the member for Burnaby-Seymour, no matter how wise he may be—

Mr. Perrault: It is not a point of order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. The hon. member should be allowed to state his point of order.

Mr. Nowlan: I want to draw to the attention of the Chair that there is not one member of Her Majesty's Privy Council in the chamber. To my knowledge I believe this is a tradition that has been so long in observance it has almost become a rule of this house.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I fail to see the point of order.

Mr. Rose: As I was saying before the point of order was raised, I am prepared to sit here all summer to debate this amendment, although I would much rather stay here to debate something useful. I suggest the government should introduce some legislation to lower the interest rates. They should make some proposals to deal with the cost of living. We would then gladly stay here to support the government. But they are playing around here with a gag rule, a kind of subliminal closure which is not needed. For all their talk about parliamentary reform what I believe they are trying to do is cow the opposition with a lot of bull.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Rose: I think most Canadians welcome parliamentary reform. I know our party does. We agree to time limits as long as they are reached in consultation and by agreement, and to such rules as 75A and 75B. By the way, for the most part proposed rules 75A and 75B were articulated by my house leader, the phantom of parliament, that muscular member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles).

We agree there should be a reform in parliament. I do not think there will be any argument in this house that reform is not necessary, but I wish to remind the house that reform in parliament is not everything. What is really needed here is reform in government. When parliament is reformed, it does not automatically follow that government will be reformed and made more responsive to the aspirations and needs of people. We need the kind of government which is much more forthright and open and not the kind which we have now which is furtive and secretive.

How can parliamentary reform guarantee that the government is going to desist from its preoccupation with various "style" issues such as bilingualism and biculturalism, the constitution, and instead, involve itself with the needs and issues that really concern people? Inadequate housing and employment and galloping inflation are the matters that are currently making a mockery of our egalitarian ideal. It is time we spent our summer debating issues such as these rather than a gag rule such as 75c.

It is obvious to everyone the government will not bring forward legislation to deal with unemployment and inflation, and I do not believe it wants to. In spite of the lesson in Manitoba the government continues to be contemptuous of what the Canadian people are trying to tell it. I wish to quote from an article by Peter Regenstreif which appeared in the June 23 issue of the Toronto Daily Star:

> Bilingualism or "the constitution" are irrelevant to the great majority of Canadians. Ask a national sample of voters: "What do you feel are the most important problems government should do something about?" and the answers come back—high taxes, the high cost of living, housing, unemployment. Pose the same question to top officials in government, industry, communications, and to the better educated—in other words to the elites—and the most frequently mentioned reply has something to do with relations between French and English or government.
>
> It is easy to claim that such differences in orientation are to be expected because they spring from the different backgrounds and needs of the various groups involved. Unfortunately, many often go on from this to claim that politics is not simply the business of counting noses but requires what they like to call "leadership." That is, the leaders of a society know best what's good for it and so while the working-class whites in the United States and the mass public in Canada may want something, they shouldn't be allowed to get it unless it squares with what the elite feels it should have.
>
> This argument tends to be heard more often in Canada than in the United States but it hardly matters, it seems to me, what should or should not be the case. If the leadership of a society ever really holds this view for very long, it will find itself without a society to lead.

I did not come to Ottawa to indulge in silly little games like this, Mr. Speaker, but if this is the way the game is played, I guess we will have to play it out to the bitter end. The people of Canada regard parliament and parliamentarians with contempt. When Canadian citizens are on the way to their summer cottages, vacations and camping trips, they read about parliament sitting in the oppressive atmosphere of the Ottawa summer squabbling endlessly, not about important legislation but about some obscure, barely understandable rule, some brainchild of the government, designed to limit discussion on something or other sometime in the future. Here we are frittering our time away on a debate which is virtually meaningless to many Canadians. We are using what little brains God gave most of us figuring out picayune devices like quorum calls and other phoney stunts designed to embarrass the government in order for it to come to its senses and depart from the stupid position it has taken.

• (4:40 p.m.)

An hon. Member: We have no choice.

Mr. Rose: All right. Here we are engaged in a debate in which perhaps everything of real importance has been said in the first four speeches. The value of the contribution by the extra speakers might be judged not in relation to what they say but how long they take in saying it. Any speech shorter than 39 minutes is considered in this debate to be a very poor speech. When the debate on the amendment is concluded we will all be making 39 minute speeches on the main motion just to prolong this war of attrition until something gives and sanity once more is allowed to prevail.

Here we are in the opposition forced into the role of defiant schoolboys, who have been kept in after school in the detention room by an overbearing school principal in the person of the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) and his petulant sabre-rattling hatchet man, the house leader, Mac the Knife, who now has himself manoeuvred into a corner where he can only back down with a tremendous loss of face, accompanied naturally by the justified scorn of the combined opposition, an opposition whose mood of operation I am afraid is now at an end and that now is determined to see this through to the bitter finale whatever and whenever that may be.

It has been said before, but I believe it bears repeating, that this government has had the full co-operation of the opposition all session. Not that we have dealt with anything very radical or new this year. Most of the time admittedly has been devoted to a clean-up of the old Pearson legislation. The major bills such as the drug bill, the Criminal Code amendments and the language bill were in virtually their final form last year when the government was defeated and later dissolved graciously by the new leader. Certainly these pieces can be regarded as important, but what else is new; what else has the government proposed this year that would justify the faith Canadians placed in it last June? What has been accomplished this session to demonstrate the new politics, a new direction, or even to show a glimpse of progress toward a solution of the many problems facing many Canadians today?

Oh, sure, interest rates have been upped through three farm bills, a couple of fisheries bills, and on student loans. In the classic manner of fighting inflation by allowing higher interest rates for the lenders and higher taxes for the borrowers, the government has freed mortgage housing rates to find their own level somewhere in the stratosphere. Concurrently the 3 per cent income tax surcharge has been maintained. Additionally, the magnificent gesture of the added 2 per cent social development tax levied upon wage earners was sanctioned in the name of protecting them from themselves.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I am sorry to interrupt the hon. member but I must direct his attention to the fact that we are debating a question of procedure and I would invite him to return to the subject matter which really is before the house.

Mr. Rose: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I was attempting to show an example of how we might be using our time here debating something of greater relevance at the moment than 75c. You have said I have strayed too far afield, and I will be guided by your wisdom. I shall try to get back on the track and proceed.

I would suggest that the debate in which we are currently involved has a number of ramifications which have to do with the future of Canada and it has been used as a substitute for the real issues that face the Canadian people. What we are engaged in here is not debate which most people understand but rather a debate in which all the relevant things which concern the people of Canada are deliberately avoided. We are engaged in what to most people is an almost incomprehensible struggle, long after we have completed all the regular government legislation, all the legislation with which we have been asked to deal.

Here we are burning the midsummer oil, so to speak, when most members would prefer to be in their constituencies doing the other kind of work a member of parliament is required to do. While we are here in the house discussing 75c we of course cannot be in our constituencies dealing with the kind of problems which crop up from time to time and which need our attention.

As I say we are burning the midsummer oil because this whole thing has been motivated by a stubborn cabinet determined to save the face of the house leader in respect of what I believe to be a rather dumb move and a heavy-handed attempt to stifle debate on some future legislation of which we know nothing at this time. I am certain many members on the other side of the house share the desire many of us have to adjourn and return to our constituencies. But here we are locked in combat. We will remain here until sanity returns or weariness erodes our will to prolong the battle.

I am sure Canadians would have full confidence in what we are doing here and would grant full support to it if we could demonstrate that this struggle is in the interest of progress, but it is not. We are staying here not to solve the desperate income gap between the rich and the poor in Canada. We are here not to bring in legislation to assist the veterans and the pensioners with a solution to their problems. We are here not to quieten the turbulence of and provide social justice to the native people. We are here not to enact legislation to brighten the employment picture for university students and those just graduating from high school. We are here not to protect our industry and financial institutions from foreign takeovers. Finally we are here not to enact laws to preserve our environment from industrial pollution. In fact we are probably contributing to the air pollution in this chamber at this very moment.

On the contrary we are adding greatly to the costs borne by the long suffering Canadian public because of a naked, unsophisticated power grab by an overwhelming government majority in an arrogant attempt to achieve unilateral control which the government does not need. What is embarrassing for the government is that they have no real issue here. Their problem, even in disciplining their own silent and long suffering backbenchers, is that they cannot point to one example this session in which the people's business has been frustrated by an intractable, irresponsible opposition.

What frightens me, Mr. Speaker, is the reason they want this power. Why do they need it? As the hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mrs. MacInnis) said, why do they need the legislative over-kill? What really disturbs me, as it must disturb members on both sides of the house, is that the gag rule will have just as much effect on, and will muzzle members on the other side of the house when they next journey to sit on this side of the house. I know that like Hitler's Reich many Liberals believe they are destined to rule for 1,000 years, but I also know that like Hitler they won't.

• (4:50 p.m.)

When they come over here to sit I wonder how many of them will then be enthusiastic about little old rule 75c. What kind of legislation is the government preparing that they need 75c? Will there be a radical shake-up, a blatant move to the left, to the right, sideways, or up and down, or will this revolutionize the way of Canadian life? I doubt it very much. I do not think this is going to happen. Nothing in the personnel of the government benches or their record thus far would give us any cause to be alarmed on that score.

I think it is more likely that 75c arises from the dissatisfaction of articulate and capable backbenchers on the government side who are frustrated by the fact that there is little for them to say. They sit over there twiddling their hearing aids because the government—and any government would feel this way—is always in some haste to have its legislation passed. Contributions from government backbenchers only prolong the agony.

In emulation of their leader the backbenchers arrived in Ottawa last fall full of "kiss and vinegar" and found to their disappointment and dismay that they were not expected to do very much at all. The front benchers were supposed to do all the talking. The first and most obvious thing to do was get everyone busy on committees. It did not really matter whether the government was guided in any way by committee reports. On the contrary, sometimes the government was not even courteous or political enough to wait for a committee to report before it made decisions in respect of things which were currently under study by the committee. All of us who were members of the transport committee know what I have in mind.

Once committee work became a little dull here in Ottawa the next obvious move was to send 20 or 30 members junketing around the country at great expense, hearing briefs and representations. This had many advantages. It kept at least 11 government members occupied and out of the house, and an almost equal number of opposition members. After all, if there was no obligation to adopt committee reports, to see them translated into legislation, what was better than to entertain government backbenchers at public expense by extended trips around the country? This was at least an appearance of action.

[Mr. Rose.]

However, there seems to be a growing disenchantment with and cynicism about the committee system. Even government members regard some committees as a sham and a waste of time. This is demonstrated by the difficulty some committees have in finding a quorum in order to conduct their meetings. Everyone knows this is not because the opposition members always fail to show up. This is frequently because government members themselves, even though they are members of a committee, do not regard their presence as vital or essential. As a result the committees often cannot meet because they lack a quorum. This could be deliberate although I would not like to suggest that. However, it is a distinct possibility.

What are we going to do now? That is a problem facing the government. What are we going to do with all these talented backbenchers—probably enough to form three cabinets? They are sitting there languishing in gloom. What are we going to do with them? These backbenchers want to speak. They want to get some things they have to say on behalf of their constituents into Hansard. They want to send copies of Hansard back to the folks at home. In short, they are jealous of the opposition exposure, or the opportunity of the opposition to be exposed to the press and broadcasters during the debates in the house.

These members voice their frustrations in caucus. They want to know what is going to be done. The result is rule 75c. What does this accomplish for government backbenchers? The answer is abundantly obvious. It establishes time limits, and when you have time limits you, Mr. Speaker, are required to recognize hon. members in proportion to the strengths of their parties in the house.

So if a four hour time limit is imposed by the fiat of 75c, the preponderance of speakers will come from the government side. Well over half, or over two of the four hours, will be taken up by spokesmen from that side. This will give government backbenchers more opportunity to take part in the debate. Every time we have time limits, speakers favorable to the government point of view will crowd the debate. This is what 75c is all about. I have not seen many backbenchers from the government side on their feet during this debate. Speakers have come mainly from the opposition. Rule 75c will give the government backbenchers more time and will alleviate their frustration as a result of their being silent minions of the government.

What will be left to the opposition of this four hours if the government takes up more than two hours? It will leave just about time for the leaders of the various opposition parties to make a short statement, and that is all. What opportunity will a new member on the opposition side have, who, like some of the government members, is in the backbenches? What opportunity will he have to make the views of his constituents known? I feel it is my right to speak here on behalf of my constituents. I believe my right to speak here will be severely limited by contemplated rule 75c.

In rising today to speak in this debate I am acutely conscious of what a tremendous impact the proposed changes will have on parliamentary democracy in Canada. As a relatively new member of parliament may I say I was attracted to the party to which I belong because I felt it stood for change, innovation and progress. Since coming to Ottawa I have not been disappointed. The New Democratic Party caucus both now and in the past has shown a marked acceptance of change. Certainly in view of the increasing role of government in our modern society some compromise must be reached. The government is taking over an extended role in the society in which we live and some compromise is inevitable. A compromise must be reached between one or two basically opposing forces.

The first of these forces is the need to bring a heavier legislative program before the house each year. Of course the second is the contradictory force of competition in view of the limited time available and the need to examine more thoroughly legislation and the estimates that come before the house. Everybody understands the problem. I think everyone who is sent here has thought about how to get more done in less time while continuing to ensure the right of hon. members to bring to this house their views and the views of their constituents. I do not think anybody argues about that.

Reasonable men are sympathetic about this problem and are searching for an equitable way to solve it. We know this and we know of the efforts made by the special committee on procedures of this house. This committee provides an example of intelligent discussion by men who sought to bring a century old practice up to date, to meet the needs of modern society. Except for the gag rule in 16A and 75c, which is the bastard child of 16A, and possibly with some reservations about the committee system approach to supply, the procedure committee work deserves commendation from all corners of the house.

All change is not necessarily progress. Our country today is beset with an increasing cynicism about parliament, government and politicians generally. Many people feel that government is too big, that it is too remote, and too much beyond their control. Now do you get closer to the people if you do not let their elected members speak? During the recent election campaign I encountered a large number of people who said they were not going to vote. When I inquired why, their replies added up to a shrug and the expression that it would make little difference. I was often asked what difference would it make who got their votes, and what chance would they have with just one vote to influence government direction.

Alienation of this kind is all too common. I believe it is on the increase. What we need to combat this kind of electoral drop-out-ism is not the imposition of 75c but a greater opportunity for members of parliament to participate, to suggest, and to speak in this house. We do not need the imposition of rules that prevent them from doing just that.

• (5:00 p.m.)

Much of the debate on the committee report, whether or not it has been stated in so many words, has been concerned with the individual member's concept of what parliament is really meant to be. I believe everybody would agree that the root of the word "parliament" means a place where people speak. This is how it was conceived. I remind the government that the people of Fraser Valley West sent me here to speak for them on issues of concern. Further, I was elected in precisely the same manner as any other member of the house, whether he be an opposition backbencher, member of the government party, or cabinet member. We were all elected by popular vote. Therefore, I believe I have precisely the same right to speak as anyone in the house, unless I give it up to accept a suggestion on time limit put forward by my house leader.

I will fight any attempt to take away that right. I am not very pleased when anyone attempts to gag or muzzle me, and proposed Standing Order 75c would do just that. The imposition of rules which are unacceptable to parliament concerns me greatly. We should be very careful to see this does not happen, because alienation will grow, not diminish, if situations such as this are allowed to prevail.

It is all very well to say that we do not move quickly enough in dealing with business in the house. I believe we have moved very rapidly this session in respect of legislation brought before us. I said earlier that 75c is clearly a naked power-grab. I am fearful that the government majority next session may be planning to ram down the throats of the opposition legislation that may be complex and far-reaching in its implications, and that will demand a great deal of sober debate and reflection.

It has been asserted more than once to me by Liberal members that they were elected to govern and, by God, that is exactly what they intend to do. No one quarrels with that statement, provided it is not presented with unmitigated arrogance. What makes the government believe they can proceed with papal infallibility? Does all intelligence reside on the other side of the chamber?

Mr. Benjamin: They do not say anything, so you cannot tell.

Mr. Rose: I ask hon. members to consider for a moment what might happen if the normal checks and balances were one by one removed from our democracy. We would be confronted with the situation whereby an all-powerful government, headed by an all-powerful prime minister, would face a completely de-fanged paper tiger of an opposition. What chance would there be of sober examination of legislation the government wished to rush through the house? How would people then be able to protect themselves and protest the passage of hasty, ill-conceived legislation, or that prompted by the lobby of a special interest group which happened to have the ear of the government?

In his book "The Reform of Parliament" Mr. Bernard Crick wrote a great deal about parliamentary matters. In this excellent book he had this to say about the topic I have been discussing:

> The only meanings of parliamentary control worth considering, and worth the house spending much of its time on, are those which do not threaten the parliamentary defeat of a government, but which help to keep it responsive to the underlying currents and the more important drifts of public opinion. All others are purely antiquarian shufflings. It is wholly legitimate for any modern government to do what it needs to guard against parliamentary defeat; but it is not legitimate for it to hinder parliament, particularly the opposition, from reaching the public ears as effectively as it can. Governments must govern in the expectation that they can serve out their statutory period of office, that they can plan—if they choose—at least that far ahead, but that everything they do may be exposed to the light of day and that everything they say may be challenged in circumstances designed to make criticism as authoritative, informed and as public as possible.
>
> Thus the phrase "parliamentary control", and talk about the "decline of parliamentary control", should not mislead anyone into asking for a situation in which governments can have their legislation changed or defeated, or their life terminated . . . Control means influence, not direct power; advice, not command; criticism, not obstruction; scrutiny, not initiation; and publicity, not secrecy. Here is a very realistic sense of parliamentary control which does affect any government. The government will make decisions, whether by existing powers or by bringing in new legislation, in the knowledge that these decisions, sooner or later, will find their way to debate on the floor of one of the houses of parliament. The type of scrutiny they will get will obviously affect, in purely political terms, the type of actions undertaken. And the civil service will administer with the knowledge that it too may be called upon to justify perhaps even the most minute actions.

[Mr. Rose.]

I plead with the government: Don't do it, fellows. Don't try and push this thing through. If you want closure, say so. You have a rule for closure. Use it. At least people will respect you for having the courage to use the rule that is in the book. If there is a real issue and you want to close off debate, use the closure rule. But don't try and sneak in closure by peddling 75c as something you may not use. You know that when the chips are down you will use it.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I plead with the government to reconsider this matter; and I wish them a happy vacation!

[Translation]

Mr. Laprise: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: I regret to interrupt the hon. member, but I would like to advise hon. members of the questions to be raised tonight at the time of adjournment.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

Mr. Speaker: It is my duty, pursuant to Standing Order 40, to inform the house that the questions to be raised tonight at the time of adjournment are as follows: The hon. member for Frontenac (Mr. Dumont)—Canadian Broadcasting Corporation—Vancouver—Closing of French radio station; the hon. member for Kootenay West (Mr. Harding)—Water Resources—Hamilton, Ontario—Pollution by Steel Company of Canada, Limited; the hon. member for Halifax-East Hants (Mr. McCleave)—Senior Officials—Department of Finance.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

PROCEDURE AND ORGANIZATION

MOTION FOR CONCURRENCE IN THIRD REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

The house resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Blair that the third report of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization presented to the house on Friday, June 20, 1969, be concurred in, and the amendment thereto of Mr. Baldwin (p.10963).

[Translation]

Mr. Gérard Laprise (Abitibi): Mr. Speaker, if I rise now, it is with the purpose of supporting the amendment moved by the hon. member for Peace River (Mr. Baldwin) which is aimed at sending the third report of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization back to committe with instructions to amend it by striking out rule 75c.

• (5:10 p.m.)

Mr. Speaker, not only did I follow closely this debate, I also read most of the speeches made in this house in the past ten days. I have been impressed by the statements made on both sides of the house, but especially by the opposition members, who want to protect this institution.

I have also been impressed by the statement of a few government members who, with great obedience, have accepted the idea of their leader of establishing a dictatorship in this parliamentary institution.

As lately as yesterday, a government member, namely the member for Bruce (Mr. Whicher) said that on June 25, 1968 the Canadian people had decided to give the Liberal party and its leader the necessary power to rule and govern this country.

One could discuss this statement at length, Mr. Speaker, but surely the Canadian people did not give their support to the Liberal party in order to establish a dictatorship in Canada.

This statement made by the hon. member for Bruce is completely illogical even though, as pointed out by the member for Prince Albert (Mr. Diefenbaker), the reins of government have been given to three socialists I very much doubt that the Canadians were really aware of it.

If as a result of the last election, the government has full authority to enforce a dictatorship, it must be kept in mind that the electoral campaign was conducted with much publicity.

A political party with plenty of electoral funds can easily hire the best publicity experts and that is exactly what the Liberal party did.

Thanks to a well conducted publicity, campaign, one can make the people accept almost anything, with only a few exceptions.

Then, Mr. Speaker, if the majority of Canadian voters supported the Liberal party, the fact remains that many others gave their support to the Conservative party, the N.D.P. or the Ralliement Créditiste.

Under the circumstances, the supporters of the opposition parties asked their members to co-operate in the drawing up of legislation designed to develop this country and to protect the Canadian people adequately against detrimental measures and, as far as we are concerned, we intend to discharge that responsibility.

Opposition parties have their part to play and they have played it since the beginning of confederation. Now, the procedure which it is intended to apply at this time is precisely aimed at abolishing the role of the opposition.

Last December, on the eve of the adjournment for the Christmas holiday, the government brought in, after consideration in committee, rule 16A which is quite similar to the one we are being asked to pass today.

I should like to congratulate the committee which did a very fine job of considering the standing orders and the procedure of the house. I had the opportunity to attend two or three of its meetings and I found out by myself that the proposals made by any committee member were considered with great impartiality and willingness.

However, at the very end, a few members of that committee brought in that famous rule 16A which had the effect of taking the other members by surprise and the committee introduced it as such.

Because of the determination of the opposition against that rule 16A, the government retreated thinking at first that the members opposite would be anxious to leave for the Christmas holidays. The government thought that it could have that amendment passed quickly. However, it was mistaken and had to retreat.

The same thing occurred in June. After having re-established that committee and reconsidered the new standing orders and procedure of the house, at the very last moment, the government through members of the government moved concurrence in rule 75c and being aware of the objections of the other members, put the question against the wishes of the opposition. Since the Liberal members were in a majority on the committee, it is obvious that this majority won, but against the will of the three opposition parties.

Once again, believing the members were anxious to leave for their holidays, this report was introduced—we know how the government managed it—so that the members would lose interest in the proposal and give up.

Mr. Speaker, as far as we, members of the Ralliement Créditiste are concerned, for anybody, we do not intend to give up, because if the rule were passed, there would really be no more opposition. In fact, not only would the opposition disappear, but even government back-benchers would no longer be useful.

And I would even go as far as to say that the Speaker would no longer be useful since only the government would have its say. The Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) would not need 28 ministers because five or six would be enough to rule or administer the country according to the wishes of a dictatorial prime minister.

• (5:20 p.m.)

Mr. Speaker, we are justified in opposing such a proposal and we have the support of the Canadian people.

Lately, in my riding, I met a number of my constituents and I was asked the following question: Why is the house sitting at this time? Then, following my explanation, they said: Do not give up; carry on. You cannot give up, protect your rights.

Mr. Speaker, we are sitting at a time when hon. members, to whatever party they belong, should be with their constituents in order to consult them, to hear about their wishes and to report on their mandate, asking the people if they are satisfied with the legislation which has been passed since the beginning of the session.

It seems that only the Prime Minister can manage to feel the pulse of the people, and according to reports we have heard, there is every reason to believe that he is not getting such a warm welcome. I hope that when he returns, he will have realized that the Canadian voters, especially in the west, are not satisfied with his administration.

Mr. Speaker, at this time we are discussing a matter which has no interest for the Canadian taxpayers while we should be studying legislation likely to improve the lot of the unemployed. There are too many unemployed in Canada even during the most active period of the year. There are still people looking for work and who cannot find any.

[Mr. Laprise.]

Furthermore, thousands of young students would like to earn a few dollars during their summer holidays so as to pay part of their tuition fees, but they cannot do it.

Many things could be discussed. For example, the producers of industrial milk, especially those in eastern Canada, are faced with serious problems. People are waiting.

The western farmers are also faced with serious problems and the government does not offer any solution. It is studying, it will see, it will inquire. It does not suggest anything to improve this situation.

What could be done to improve the lot of the Canadian workers? Many bills could be introduced in order to improve the situation of our wood workers, miners, construction workers, industrial workers in shipbuilding, transportation and so on. We could do much better than discuss procedure and organization. However, we are forced to hang around here. We are forced to wait and to discuss a subject about which the government knows beforehand it will have to give in.

Mr. Speaker, how can this debate stop the increase in the cost of living? Yet, all the Canadian consumers are asking that this steady increase in the cost of living be curbed because it annoys everybody.

How can this debate solve the housing problem? We constantly get representations from our constituents asking that the government attend to this problem. However, the government does not propose anything. We are forced to hang about and to discuss subjects that are entirely different from those in which our constituents are interested.

Mr. Speaker, on December 10 last, when a similar debate was held on Standing Order 16A, my colleague the hon. member for Shefford (Mr. Rondeau) said, and I quote from page 3779 of Hansard:

> However, one must not think that parliamentary reform will solve at once the economic problem of Canadians. A better parliamentary procedure does not necessarily mean a better government, because a government is not judged merely by the value of the measures it adopts. We can have a better procedure and pass legislation more rapidly but, if the opposition is governed by a mediocre procedure, it can hardly do much better. This means that the government must introduce legislation that will meet the needs of the Canadian people.

Mr. Speaker, that is precisely what we need now. Regardless of what Standing Orders the house has, regardless of how we improve them, if the government does not introduce better legislation, that which the Canadian public asks for and needs, all this will be of little use.

Mr. Speaker, in view of the determination of the government and of the submission of the government members in accepting the proposed Standing Order, we have the right to ask ourselves some questions.

One of the questions we ask ourselves—and I repeat that many of my colleagues of the opposition have already done so, as I have too—is this: what is the government hiding to be so bent on having the right to decide, on its own, in such a short time, what legislation it should have enacted?

Since the Prime Minister is trying so hard to prevent the opposition from commenting on the legislation he introduces, we are entitled to believe, that these laws are very unpopular indeed.

In fact, the hon. member for Medicine Hat, the present Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Olson), said recently that were there to be now an election, it would be awkward for him to seek re-election because the government has brought forth unpopular legislation. The government is trying, by way of a provision in the rules of the house, to prevent the opposition from giving its opinion on the bills the government wants to introduce because this legislation is unpopular and detrimental to the welfare of the Canadian people.

Mr. Speaker, it is for those reasons that we are firmly opposed to that procedure and to concurrence in that report, which I call a minority report since only one party agreed with the content of rule 75c. If we are so firmly opposed to it, it is because we are afraid of what this government is planning for the future. And, knowing the background of the Prime Minister and of his nearest colleagues, I believe, Mr. Speaker, that our fears as to Canada's future, the Canadian people's future, are justified.

In today's edition of Le Devoir, Mr. Claude Ryan deals with this debate in an editorial which he entitles: "A deplorable blunder on the part of the Trudeau government".

In that editorial, Mr. Claude Ryan reflects almost exactly the present state of mind of the Canadian people. He concludes his article with the following words:

> As in December last, the opposition parties can rely, in their fight against rule 75c, on the support of public opinion. The government has erred in putting forward this rule. It has only half-corrected its mistake by trying, last Friday, to divide the opposition through an insidious sub-amendment. Now that this last piece of strategy, just as the equally deplorable one that was the Macdonald motion, has failed, there is only one course open to the government and that is to beat an honorable retreat. Otherwise the opposition will be compelled to carry the fight to its bitter end.

Mr. Speaker, may the government know once and for all that we, the members of the Ralliement créditiste, have no objection whatsoever to spending the summer here if need be, but we would prefer to spend it in dealing with legislative proposals to improve conditions obtaining in Canada instead of a government motion curtailing the freedom of expression of the opposition members.

For these reasons, Mr. Speaker, I strongly support the amendment moved by the hon. member for Peace River. I do not intend at this stage to deal any further with the report of the committee on procedure and organization, but I may take the opportunity of coming back to it when the report is more closely studied.

• (5:30 p.m.)

[English]

Mr. Donald MacInnis (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, I rise on this occasion to strongly object to the proposed rule 75c. I can do no better in opening my remarks than to quote an editorial from the Halifax Chronicle-Herald of July 14:

> How Not to Make Friends
>
> The Liberal government is stomping through a political minefield in attempting to impose parliamentary rule changes that smack of closure.
>
> Because the business of national government is increasing day by day, and decisions on laws require faster action than has been the practice, some method must be found to speed up procedure and schedule the legislative agenda in more orderly fashion.
>
> But the Liberal approach, and it should be pointed out that a substantial number of Liberal MP back benchers are against it, of trying to push through a time limit on debate, and clumsily making it appear that opposition parties are being gagged in the process, is not the way to achieve agreement on rules changes.
>
> Liberal strategists responsible for the current situation ought to be instructed to read two texts: the Commons Hansard for 1956, and "How to Win Friends and Influence People."
>
> The former would certainly remind them it was careless handling of a similar rule of closure on debate that hammered the first nail into the coffin of another Liberal government, branded it (at the time of the pipeline debate) arrogant and dictatorial, and helped banish it from office within months of that episode.

The latter would provide useful hints on the unwisdom of being crudely provocative with people whose co-operation may be useful or even necessary at a later juncture.

That editorial in the Halifax Herald of July 14 will be available in my office as recommended reading for any Liberal member. I will go further and have copies made for distribution among them.

This proposed rule, Mr. Speaker, is an actual desertion from what the government has called participatory democracy. It removes the opportunity for all members of parliament to fully discuss legislation which may come before this house. What is happening to the just society? Who are we participating with and on what? Does the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) measure up to his promise when he comes into the house for the question period and then runs to his shelter? Are we participating with him? Are we participating with the cabinet when they are under orders to follow a roster system which keeps them out of the house, despite the fact they are elected members and first and foremost are responsible for representing their constituencies? It was evident, during recent months, that one cabinet minister who wished to come into the house to reply to a question was denied that opportunity because the roster which the Prime Minister established did not permit him to be present on that particular day. This is a shameful approach by a government which says, all will participate in this democracy.

This debate is another demonstration of the incompetence and stupidity of the government. First of all the government dictator proposed that 75c be put into the committee report. The Prime Minister dictated to the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald). The President of the Privy Council dictated to the Liberal majority on the committee. When the report was placed before the house, it was clear the government had painted itself into a corner. Proposed rule 75B was ambiguous. Rule 75B could deliver the government into the hands of a united opposition and this, of course, could not be tolerated by this arrogant government. Even when the President of the Privy Council was in a position to dictate the report, he was too stupid to dictate it correctly.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. MacInnis: I hear interjections and objections from the other side, Mr. Speaker. I remind these hon. members that the adjective

I used was the one introduced into this house by the Prime Minister, and there should be nothing wrong with quoting this Prime Minister. Any hon. member of the government can say I am wrong. If they do, I am perfectly willing to sit down to hear their objections to a word which their leader, the Prime Minister, introduced into this parliament.

When they realized their mistake, the government brought in their own motion to rectify it. In doing so, the President of the Privy Council made a government tool of the committee chairman, the hon. member for Grenville-Carleton (Mr. Blair). There was going to be a motion of censure of the hon. member for Grenville-Carleton moved from this side. I can assure you the motion would have been debated for some time. If the hon. member had the intestinal fortitude, he would resign as committee chairman.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. MacInnis: The hon. member is probably following the same line as that taken by the other great parliamentarian, the hon. member for Vancouver Quadra (Mr. Deachman) who, as the chairman of the defence committee, brought into this house a falsified report of what took place in the committee. What he said in committee is recorded, as well as his absolute departure from the truth when he reported to the house. If anyone cares to object to that statement regarding the lies he brought back from committee, they can find the basis for my statement in Hansard.

The President of the Privy Council allowed his motion to stand, and we are now back to the committee report. On Friday the President of the Privy Council tried to patch up his original mistake. He had the hon. member for Vancouver Quadra move a subamendment. I think this was another mistake on his part. This subamendment was ruled out of order. The President of the Privy Council is so stupid that he cannot even draft an amendment which is in order. Out of all the huge staff hired to build the Prime Minister's empire in the East Block, they cannot find a man who can draft an amendment that will be acceptable to the Chair. Talk about stupidity! The President of the Privy Council can now be called, "The minister of stupidity". He was even too stupid to keep a quorum in the house.

If this government is interested in saving time, it would be well advised to drop some of the stupid approaches it has taken under the Prime Minister. The government would be well advised to answer the questions which are asked in all sincerity. Questions are asked, an answer is promised, then after a lapse of three months when the same questions are again put to ministers they sit glued to their seat, just as the Prime Minister has this past week.

When government supporters speak of having ample time under rule 75c to examine legislation, they are making a ridiculous statement. It would take this government a day to answer the questions I have put to them, and which they have failed to answer in any way, shape or form. To study legislation is not enough. Members should be informed so that they are aware of the results of the legislation once enacted. I could refer to Bill C-135 but I am sure the majority of members on the other side do not even know what Bill C-135 is. For their benefit I inform them that it is the bill that set up the Devco Crown Corporation to look into the affairs of the ailing Cape Breton coal industry.

Very little of that legislation could be changed. For the most part, it is very good legislation. However, how many members are aware of what has resulted from it? Members on all sides of the house cannot be faulted because this legislation has brought about discrimination among those it was intended to help. On recent visits to my home I have taken advantage of the occasion to explain that all Liberal members of the House of Commons cannot be faulted for the discrimination practised under the early retirement plan of the Devco Crown Corporation.

• (5:40 p.m.)

It is no fault of members of this house that a piece of government legislation has been used to bring about this discrimination. There is no question or doubt because the minister responsible in this house admitted there are cases of isolated discrimination. Now, I fail to understand how the minister can say in one breath there is no discrimination under the early retirement leave plan of the Devco Corporation and then, the next moment, in answer to a supplementary question say there are isolated cases. I ask hon. members, does it matter whether there are isolated cases? There still are cases. One would imagine that in a just society such discrimination would not be condoned. The passage of legislation under normal circumstances could have prevented such an unfair departure. What will be the result if members are denied the right to study legislation in order to prevent such a situation from occuring again? Members may say it is unfortunate but it does not concern them. Today it is my turn, but it may be theirs tomorrow.

Bill C-135 seemed to be the answer to many of the problems. I would be very interested in finding out why the retired chairman of the board acted as he did because I have expressed the opinion all along that the legislation provides the answers for which we are looking. However, the implementation of the legislation has been carried out in a way which is entirely unsuitable to the problems in Cape Breton. This becomes particularly evident when one considers that people 59 years of age are arbitrarily dismissed. This practice is supported by a government which is supposedly leading us into a just society. It is unfortunate that this government is acting as it is. It is in the hands of a troika. The Three Wise Men have taken over and are trying to put into practice what a former Liberal cabinet minister felt could be done as far back as 1951. He felt that he, along with the prime minister and the minister of trade and commerce, were the government. Imagine that! This is the attitude adopted today by these Liberals. They feel three men are the government.

Do not let anyone on that side of the house kid himself that this government is not run by three men only. Step out of line and watch out! Soon you will get your lumps. I should like to quote what this former Liberal cabinet minister had to say. He said:

> As long as the three of us remain where we are, I think it will be fairly generally agreed across the country that we have an exceedingly good government.

The three wise men must be looking back at this statement and saying to themselves, if a Liberal cabinet minister in 1951 felt that three men made up the government there is no reason they cannot take over in 1969. But they should look at what happened to this former cabinet minister, the minister of trade and commerce and the prime minister. They all went down the drain, if you will excuse the expression. They exhibited the kind of arrogance that we saw here last week and the kind of arrogance that is evident every day in this house.

The Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Sharp) can sit there and smirk. He is all ready with the answers to questions before they are asked. He was so pleased to back up his Prime Minister today that he did not even find it necessary to hear the questions. Every day in this house the members of the government have to watch each other in case the troica lowers the boom. The minister will recall that only this afternoon he had to be sharpened up by his house leader.

Mr. Sharp: This is an entertaining speech.

Mr. MacInnis: In reply to the remark of the Secretary of State for External Affairs, may I say that I assume this is the only reason he is sitting in the house this afternoon. He is not sitting here because his conscience tells him to do a good job for the Canadian people. If he feels I am entertaining him here this afternoon I wish he would send over the price of admission. At least he should pay for what he is getting because he is giving nothing in return to the Canadian people in line with the duties connected with his portfolio. He only got that because of the flip he made last spring in favour of the present Prime Minister. I hope the Secretary of State for External Affairs, in sending over a messenger, will not prove himself to be as cheap as I think he is.

This would seem to be the unfortunate attitude of this government. It is headed up by three men. It is unfortunate that the house leader is placed in a position where he cannot think for himself, but is blindly following orders which compel him to allow an unacceptable amendment to be introduced. This supports my earlier remark about a stupid government. Mr. Speaker, I hope I am not wearing out that adjective. The Prime Minister introduced it in the house the other day. If I am not allowed to do so, I will get around to a few others which he used in respect of the Liberals in the not too distant past.

Government supporters would have you believe this proposed rule would streamline parliament and allow for a more efficient parliament. On this, no one is fooled. Backbenchers in the government are not participating now. I repeat that for the benefit of those within hearing. Backbenchers in the government are not participating now, and the more efficient we become the less they will have to do. Members opposite probably do not wish to accept this fact. Perhaps I should support my argument by quotating from the remarks made yesterday by the hon. member for Bruce (Mr. Whicher). I shall quote from page 11174 of Hansard:

> However, there are many new members in our party who do not like sitting around doing what they consider to be nothing.

Well, if we have backbenchers on the government side who are complaining now about the fact they are sitting around doing what they consider to be nothing, if parliament is programmed and streamlined to the extent intended, then I do not see how they will be employed usefully in any sense of the word. Of course we can go back to the Prime Minister and quote his reference to the Liberal party as "The spineless herd". Probably another delegation of Liberal wives is necessary to see the little man since the Prime Minister has such an appeal, or is it the office that appeals? After all, take away the office and what is left? Just a 50 year old bachelor or, would you believe 51—a bag of bones and a hank of hair.

Now that the Message has been delivered, I see that the Secretary of State for External Affairs is just as cheap as I assumed he was. It is most unfortunate that Liberals of today cannot follow the dictates of their late spiritual leader, Prime Minister Mackenzie King who said—

An hon. Member: He was speaking here last night.

• (5:50 p.m.)

Mr. MacInnis: I am glad to note there are a few believers. In any event, he said:

> The government must be by parliament and through parliament. It must not be carried on by cabinet ministers in their secret chambers.

That is from your spiritual leader. I hope he talks to you again tonight. Let me quote further from the late Prime Minister who said:

> The air of Liberalism is to seek a wider freedom for the masses in social, political, religious and industrial life, to restore the control of the people over parliament and to restore the control of parliament over the executive.

Never was this objective more necessary than it is today. The withdrawal of rule 75c might assure the late Right Hon. Mackenzie King that Liberalism is still what he thought it was, then there would be no need for him to turn over in his grave. Surely, the Liberals cannot ignore words of wisdom that come from this source. If they continue to do so I suppose one will have to call upon the words of another Liberal cabinet minister who said, speaking about a Liberal government:

> We are fighting for liberty, we are fighting for democracy and parliamentary institutions. Yet most of our activities are in the hands of little potentates, men of no experience, dictators in the field that has been given to them for administration.

Unless the government sees fit to amend its stupid ways, this indictment by a former Liberal cabinet member of another Liberal government will certainly apply to this government.

Let me refer to the statement of another former Liberal cabinet minister, and this also applies:

> If this is to be the funeral of Liberalism I do not wish to be even an honorary pall bearer at the funeral.

Members of this government, in spite of the fact they are dominated by the troika, should consider this move which will destroy this parliament and this country. It is not too late to change for the better, and in this regard Liberals should take a second look at what they are trying to impose upon all members of this parliament, including their own backbenchers. They should change this course of action before it is too late. It is of the utmost importance to each and every member of this house that the proposed rule 75c be withdrawn. What may not appear to be important today could very well adversely affect every individual member of this house tomorrow.

Again I could refer to Bill C-135 and its detrimental effects. Some of these effects were acknowledged by the minister in charge of this Crown corporation. He has placed on record the fact that discrimination has been practised. I say to you, in spite of the fact that this has been acknowledged by the responsible minister, that it is not the fault of any member of this house. I ask the Liberal members to take a good close look at Bill C-135 and the results that have come from the passage of this legislation, which I maintain is good except for a few minor parts.

One result of this legislation has been a report that members of parliament have not had the opportunity to see. Because members have not had a chance to see it, discrimination has been practised in this country. Every member of this house is at fault for not correcting this situation. Certainly, it is within the authority of the government to do so.

In speaking of Bill C-135 I am reminded of the fact that the present Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) was the minister of justice at the time this legislation was introduced. I could point to some things in it to indicate that there have been some very obvious mistakes made. These could also be corrected, as it is within the authority of the government to do so. At the time this legislation was drafted no one disputed this particular point. I have in mind the authority given to the Crown corporation. Let me repeat, it was the present Prime Minister who was then minister of justice.

This Crown corporation was given the authority to purchase the lands beneath the sea off the Island of Cape Breton. Bill C-135 dealt with the coal industry. This authority was included in the legislation introduced in this house by the then minister of justice. What did this government and the Prime Minister do a few short months later? He made the arbitrary decision that offshore mineral rights belong to the federal government. He has since worked out a formula, but whether it will be accepted by the provinces is another question. The fact remains that this piece of legislation went through this house and was examined without the use of a rule such as 75c. This legislation authorized the Crown corporation to purchase land beneath the sea.

I cannot understand the sudden reversal in approach, but this reversal was made. It is for this reason I object to rule 75c which will, if accepted, prevent the members of this house from thoroughly examining legislation of the type included in Bill C-135. This right will be completely ignored. This will prevent any proper examination of a legislative measure, and therefore errors such as the kind to which I have referred will not be corrected. There have been stupid, undemocratic and even dictatorial actions taken by former Liberal governments. Perhaps hon. members could learn something from their own history if they study some of the worst possible examples available to them of this type of action.

Let me refer hon. members to the defence debate, and the fact that the chairman of that committee came into this house with a pack of lies in respect of what took place in that committee. He told this house lies in respect of the committee's hearings and then had his own Minister of National Defence stand and use those lies in this house for his own purpose. I refer to the hon. member for Vancouver Quadra (Mr. Deachman). Of course, he came into national prominence when he went to the press and leaked decisions in relation to the flag debate.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order, please. It being six o'clock I do now leave the chair.

At six o'clock the house took recess.

Procedure and Organization

AFTER RECESS

The house resumed at 8 p.m.

Mr. MacInnis: Mr. Speaker, at six o'clock I was referring to the Liberal government as stupid, undemocratic and dictatorial. I said they were looking back to former Liberal governments and following the worst possible examples. I was about to refer to the legislation brought before the house with respect to our defences and the unification of the armed forces. I do not wish to be critical of the Minister of National Defence (Mr. Cadieux), who until very recently seemed to be filling that position with dignity and honour. However, he seems to have backed away from the proposition he enunciated earlier.

With regard to the unification of the armed forces and what the legislation was supposed to do, I would point out that not long after the government took office the direction was suddenly switched and we found the Department of National Defence trying to set up a segregated force for this country. The department was trying to establish segregated crews for some of the ships in our navy, and most recently it tried to set up separate squadrons within our air division. This raises a very interesting question and one which the minister will perhaps answer in the very near future, that is, have there been resignations by French speaking Canadians who do not agree with the principle of segregating the French speaking members of the armed forces?

The Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Sharp) is now in the house and I think it would be in order to congratulate him on his effort to hold down inflation. This is further proof that—

Mr. Gibson: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I submit that what the hon. member is now saying has nothing whatsoever to do with the rules. He should resume his seat, because he is not dealing with the rules.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member for Cape Breton-East Richmond (Mr. MacInnis) is aware that we are dealing with an amendment to a committee report in respect of procedure. I invite him to restrict his remarks to that subject, as I invite all hon. members to confine their remarks to the matter before the house.

Mr. MacInnis: Mr. Speaker, I was under the impression that the hon. member was hit with enough bricks this afternoon. When dealing with the rules, it is absolutely necessary that we refer to the people who have tried to impose the rules on the house; therefore, we must deal with the government, which is responsible for the rules. I was dealing with the government, and see no reason why the hon. member should take exception to my singling out the generous Secretary of State for External Affairs, despite the fact that the Prime Minister has referred to him as the minister of foreign affairs, as has the minister himself. I was in the process of congratulating the minister for his effort to hold down inflation. I remind him that he has drawn to my attention how easy it is to entertain idiots.

All hon. members should ask themselves this question in respect of proposed rule 75c: Since the Prime Minister is the author of programming and so-called efficiency, why does he not participate in the debate? What has happened to the principle that Canadians should participate in every way, shape and form in the business of government? The Prime Minister has allowed the house leader to take the brunt of the blame in this regard. He is responsible for the attitude of Liberal members toward their house leader, who is no longer looked to for leadership but is pitied for his stupidity. To realize this we have only to recall a remark made by a member of the house leader's party, who today stated that if he were house leader for ten minutes he could clear up this matter.

This is the type of conversation that we hear in the cafeteria, the hallways and elevators. The house leader is bearing the brunt in this respect because of the stupidity of a Prime Minister who said we would have participatory democracy and then ran off to the west. The Prime Minister said his trip to the west was more important than listening to a stupid filibuster. He did not follow up his good intentions in this regard, because last evening in an interview on national television, when asked what he hoped to accomplish in the west he said, "Nothing". It is obvious that the western farmer will gain nothing from the Prime Minister's trip. This is also evident from the arrogant attitude of the house leader, who this afternoon was the only person that refused unanimous consent to debate the crisis facing western Canada. I repeat that he was the only member in the house who objected to discussing the plight of the western farmer.

An hon. Member: Nonsense.

[The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard).]

Mr. MacInnis: Of course, the Prime Minister's trip out west may accomplish something. It may make amends for his derogatory remarks about the Minister of Supply and Services (Mr. Richardson) who accompanied him west. When I refer to them as derogatory remarks, there is no question that they were because the Prime Minister belittled the minister. If the Minister of Supply and Services had the intestinal fortitude to which I referred earlier this evening he would not follow the Prime Minister. The derogatory remarks to which I refer may be found in the Globe and Mail of last December. As reported in that newspaper, the Prime Minister said:

> Sure I believe that you should have somebody better, but you didn't elect him.

The Prime Minister was referring to the Minister of Supply and Services. He appointed this man to his cabinet, and having done so had the audacity, carelessness and disregard for the minister to refer to him as the Minister without Portfolio, despite the fact he had given him a portfolio several weeks earlier. This demonstrates the careless attitude of the Prime Minister toward his ministers and parliament generally.

• (8:10 p.m.)

In the Prime Minister's absence a subamendment, which was ruled out of order, was brought before the house. It was clear, if one read that subamendment, that the government was prepared to make concessions. Perhaps it is a good thing the Prime Minister is absent. Perhaps goodwill will once again prevail in his absence. Perhaps when he returns he can be prevailed upon to abandon the roster system and to allow cabinet ministers to attend during the question period. Often fewer than half our cabinet ministers are present for the question period. The Prime Minister's presence does not make up for their absence, nor is it a case as in 1951 that a certain cabinet minister, the Prime Minister and the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce (Mr. Pepin) together constitute the government. They may think so but we do not. I also hope that the government will consider seriously rectifying the serious wrongs Cape Breton miners have suffered as a result of legislation passed by this house. The government itself must rectify these wrongs. It is no use looking to the Minister for Regional Economic Expansion (Mr. Marchand) in the hope that he will correct what is wrong. If one pays attention to rumours flying about one may hear that he is not nearly so interested in his portfolio as in the idea that he may succeed Jean Lesage as Liberal leader in Quebec. Some say the minister wants to become premier of Quebec.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I am sorry to interrupt the hon. member but I wish to remind him that we are dealing with the report of the standing committee.

Mr. Gibson: Hear, hear.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The rules of relevancy demand that so far as possible, hon. members restrict their remarks to the subject being considered. I invite the hon. member to do so.

Mr. MacInnis: Mr. Speaker, I do not want to be responsible for having the hon. member for Hamilton-Wentworth (Mr. Gibson) break his hands in pounding the desk. He ought to keep quiet. After all he is deviating from his orders to keep quiet. The Liberal backbenchers have been marvellously silent recently, presumably because the government has told them to keep quiet.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. MacInnis: It is not their fault their Prime Minister called them bums and idiots. Yes, Mr. Speaker; the Prime Minister called them that. And who are they to take exception to what the Prime Minister said about them. It is he who said they are bums and idiots, not we.

Proposed rule 75c should not be included in our rules because it will apply to government backbenchers as well as to members of the opposition. You know, Mr. Speaker, it is not often that I have defended Liberals, but I did so on one occasion when I said that, surely to goodness no one in his right mind would countenance what has been done to the Cape Breton miners. I was defending Liberals then. I say to hon. members opposite that it is about time they kicked over the traces in caucus and stood up like independent men. I shall be listening to their whispers in elevators and coffee shops and I shall be waiting to hear them say, "we said to our house leader in caucus that we are going to stand up and be independent; we are going to rectify what is wrong here." We need hon. members to be independent. Hon. members opposite ought to tell the government house leader that they are not prepared to do the damage to parliament that has been attempted in these last two weeks.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I am sorry to interrupt the hon. member but his time has expired.

Some hon. Members: Carry on.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous agreement for that?

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Bell: Closure.

Mr. Lincoln M. Alexander (Hamilton West): Mr. Speaker, I congratulate the hon. member for Cape Breton-East Richmond (Mr. MacInnis) upon his approach to this entire problem and for the way he chastised this government.

An hon. Member: Don't be sarcastic.

Mr. Alexander: He criticized the government's attitude vigorously. Yet, even in his bitterness, he had mercy on those who sit on the back benches. He felt for them. He tried to reach out to them and all they did was laugh.

An hon. Member: Right.

Mr. Alexander: And then my hon. friend for Hamilton-Wentworth (Mr. Gibson) pounded the desk. Clearly he is one of the trained seals. I wish, Mr. Speaker, that I had the nerve of the hon. member for Cape Breton-East Richmond and was capable of saying that the government and its supporter are brainless. I wish I had the nerve to say that government supporters are stupid; I wish I had the intestinal fortitude to say they are bums; and, how I wish I had the courage to call them idiots. But, Mr. Speaker, I am a charitable man. I could never stand here and make those remarks. But I can always think them. I can always think they are idiots.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Alexander: I will not take much time. I believe that in its debates this house must reach responsible conclusions. I wish to register my protest to the Prime Minister's (Mr. Trudeau) statement in this house that this debate is stupid. I do not think this debate is stupid; after all, we on this side are fighting for our very lives.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Alexander: We are fighting for our very existence. I was therefore shocked to hear the Prime Minister say that we on this side are hypocrites. I take issue with him most strongly on that.

I am not an expert on the rules, Mr. Speaker, but then, neither are most hon. members opposite. As a matter of fact, there are probably only ten men in this house who know just what the rules say and who can stand up with a certain amount of integrity and tell the government that these proposed changes are wrong. Although I am not an expert on the rules, unlike others who have said they do not intend to participate in this debate, I have felt it my duty to participate because I am concerned, Mr. Speaker.

• (8:20 p.m.)

I want to speak on behalf of the 80,000 to 90,000 people who sent me here, though the government does not want me to do so. I want to speak on behalf of the trained seals at the rear who have so absorbed the philosophy of "keep your mouth shut, or else" that they cannot stand up like men and be counted. So, with their permission I speak on behalf of several of them, because I know several of them think the way we think.

There is no question that we on this side have been in favour of parliamentary reform. We showed our good intentions in December 1968. As a matter of fact, it was the members of this party who gave leadership in showing which rules should be reformed, why they should be reformed, and what would happen as a result of their reformation. I believe we must have parliamentary reform because the mounting problems that are facing this country daily become more complex and demand immediate action. I also believe we must have parliamentary rules reform because parliament, and its standing committees, must be efficient. They must be able to deal with the many bills that come before them quickly and with a certain responsibility so these measures may come back to the house, pass third reading, and eventually become the law of the land.

These are days of social unrest, when people become extremely impatient with government whether at the federal level, the provincial level or the municipal level. Therefore, parliament must think and act in contemporary terms. In other words, it must become streamlined. I should like the members of the government to know that we have shown our good faith in the area of parliamentary reform, and this good faith was expressed last December by accepting the rules changes holus-bolus. Many of these we had determined. Notwithstanding that, at no time did we say that reform included government without opposition, or that reform meant that parliament should be a rubber stamp to be used at the whim of the government. At no time did we give any indication to the government that this was what we had in mind when we talked of reform. Quite the contrary.

We have also shown our good faith in that, as I understand it, we have accepted proposed Standing Orders 75A and 75B in principle. I do not think that is questioned. Rule 75A provides for a time allocation when there is all party agreement; 75B provides for time allocation when the majority of the four parties agree. However, what we do not accept and will never accept is rule 75C, which gives the government power to limit debate without the agreement of any other party. That is the provision to which we take exception, and it is what this debate is all about.

This is why we on this side are standing and will continue to stand and fight for our very lives. Having first been presented with rule 16A, the iniquitous rule 75C is further proof of the arrogant attitude taken by this government in its attempt to downgrade parliament and the role of its members. What is ironic about the government's attempt to downgrade the effectiveness of parliament and the worth of its members is that not only are the member for Hamilton West and the hon. member for Cape Breton-East Richmond (Mr. MacInnis) affected, but all members are affected, including the government backbenchers.

Our parliamentary institution is one of the great bastions of our democratic way of life. History has shown this to be a fact, and it will continue to show it to be a fact if only we can bring this government to life. Our parliamentary system should not be tampered with lightly under the guise of improving efficiency; this is a great institution and we cannot treat it lightly.

It seems to me that a very frightening pattern has been established since I have been a member of this parliament. Although I am a baby at the game, I am certainly learning fast. One need be here no longer than eight months to know what it is all about, where it's at and all the rest of it.

An hon. Member: What about your partners?

Mr. Alexander: My partners are ready to shaft you any time you want to stand up. I do not expect too much interruption from the other side, Mr. Speaker, because I am talking responsibly. I am concerned at the frightening pattern that is being developed by this government. And I am not the only one who is frightened. Members of the government—those who cannot speak—people on the street, those who sent us here to protect our rights, are becoming concerned at the deliberate trend that appears, to me at any rate, to be leading us ultimately into the realm of dictatorship.

We use this institution to question cabinet ministers on matters of urgent and national scope. But the Prime Minister has said that no matters are national or urgent any longer, and accordingly we have the cabinet roster. Today, there were present six ministers. I should like to know where the Minister of Transport (Mr. Jamieson) was because I had a question for him. He was supposed to be here today. I also had a question for the Secretary of State (Mr. Pelletier). Where was he today? It was not an earth shaking question, but it was one that I thought would be of interest to the house and the nation.

Mr. MacInnis: Certainly not hypocritical!

Mr. Alexander: No, not hyprocritical. Another worsening attitude, one I find disgusting, is the flippant manner of ministers during the question period. After all, they are ordinary members of parliament just like the hon. member for Hamilton West. I demand respect from them as I, in turn, give them respect. I am not here to play games. Perhaps they are and that is why they are not here for such long periods. I suppose they might as well get their licks in while they have the opportunity.

Then, there is the rudeness of the Prime Minister. I wish I had the nerve to stand up in my place and tell him a few things. I wish I were the hon. member for Cape Breton-East Richmond. When the Prime Minister uses a word like "hypocrisy" in talking about a responsible and loyal opposition, then it goes down very hard, if it goes down at all. He says that this debate is a filibuster, but I do not think he knows what a filibuster is.

Mr. Crouse: A "stupid" filibuster.

Mr. Alexander: Yes, I did not mention the adjective. This is the place for debate. There will always be debate as long as there is an opposition and, believe me, we are going to continue to have an opposition. That is part of the pattern. What about the unwarranted rudeness of the Prime Minister? What about standing committees, Mr. Speaker? This was part of the just society, and participatory democracy.

• (8:30 p.m.)

Have you ever seen such a shambles as the presentation of the Transport Committee report? The most important part was omitted, the part that had to do with the "Newfie Bullet". Where did that recommendation go? I do not want to say anyone was playing hanky-panky in the standing committee. Heavens no! That is a fault we on this side recognize.

Then we come to rule 16A. I will not go over that. Notice the pattern, Mr. Speaker. What about the general disrespect of the opposition? It is becoming increasingly worse. Why? That is what I want to know. Here is an opportunity for some intelligent Liberal backbencher to stand up and tell me why.

What about instructions to government members on standing committees? Legislation is supposed to go to a committee, be discussed and come back in the same state. Those are not my words, Mr. Speaker. Those are the words of the hon. member for York East (Mr. Otto). The great Canadian phrase, untouched by human hands, is applicable. I believe him because I do not think that hon. member would be quoted in the newspapers of this country and face possibility of being checked by his government for telling lies. I believe him.

Mr. Bell: He is very honourable, for a Liberal!

Mr. Alexander: What about the pattern? A report that was presented by the chairman of the rules committee was abrogated by that brilliant pussy-footer, the government house leader. He attempted with all sincerity and viciousness, to abrogate that report.

An hon. Member: Vicious sincerity?

Mr. Alexander: I am not really so worried about the chairman as about what he did. He uttered disrespect for a standing committee that was formed by parliament. He said parliament does not count, it is nonsense. This attitude was discussed here to such an extent that the government house leader said, I am sorry; I was wrong. It is a terrible day when he has to say he is wrong, and it is a rare day.

To continue with the pattern, Mr. Speaker, we now have rule 75c, the ultimate in demagoguery! It appears that the philosophy of this government is power for power's sake at any cost, even if they have to cut the throat of the opposition. Apparently that is allowed in the new politics on the other side of the house. We cannot and will not accept that philosophy. We are prepared to fight this week, next week, the following week—

An hon. Member: Merry Christmas!

Mr. Alexander: As the hon. member to my left has said, Merry Christmas to you and a Happy New Year!

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Alexander: Yes indeed, order your Christmas turkey now and get your Christmas shopping done because I tell you we are here to stay!

I must give this great city of Ottawa a plug. I usually talk about Hamilton, but something tells me that September in Ottawa can be very exciting. There is the green belt, the Arts Centre and all the urban renewal that is going on here. I am sorry I cannot get to Hamilton. However, I am still optimistic.

As the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield) stated, we have no intention of caving in; we can go on indefinitely. The Leader of the Opposition is a very responsible person. He does not make the statements I do. Do not think that we on this side are playing games or hanky-panky. Our leader has said we can go on indefinitely.

Speaking on behalf of many opposition members, if not all, we welcome such involvement, Mr. Speaker. We have to fight. We have to fight to hang on. We have to fight to protect our role as parliamentarians and, in particular, as opposition members. For a while I was a little concerned about whether this message that we were attempting to project was being received across the country, and whether those who sent us here would understand what we have been trying to do. I was very happy the other day. I received a letter—

An hon. Member: One letter!

Mr. Alexander: Don't worry! You just sit there and wait. God, that's an ignorant group over there.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Alexander: At one time, I called many of them my friends—that is outside of the house. When we get in the chamber there are no holds barred. If members on the government side keep on messing around, I am liable to get like the hon. member for Cape Breton-East Richmond (Mr. MacInnis)! I can be just as vicious. Let me read my letter because this is very encouraging to government members also. The letter is dated July 2, 1969.

An hon. Member: Pretty good postal service!

Mr. Alexander: That is what I call stupidity! The member does not know when the letter was sent or when I received it, and yet he is saying, pretty good postal service. That is the attitude of a member of the government. With all due respect, Mr. Speaker, I shall now be like the hon. member for Cape Breton-East Richmond and say they are stupid. I will now read the letter which I received from Mr. Donald J. Allan. It is dated July 2, 1969:

Dear Mr. Alexander:

I am writing you on a matter of grave concern to all Canadians. The governments bill to set the time limit of debate at all stages through parliament. The government is already equipped with the rule of closure should it want to limit debate, and this is enough power in the hands of any body of legislators. Should the government be given more powers, the day may come when an inept or corrupt government could rule the country in any way they desired.

This is the most important part of this letter. When he refers to me, he is also talking to the leader of the Opposition, the leader of the New Democratic Party and the leader of the Créditiste party:

Mr. Alexander, I beg of you, continue opposition to this bill. Fight it with every means at your disposal before the very means themselves are legislated out of existence.

I do not know this person who wrote this letter. Hon. members know I am a man of integrity. They can accept my word for this. I do not know who wrote it, but there are countless other letters like that. We must be concerned now. There is a principle involved. The principle involved is the accepted role of the opposition. Is such a principle valid in a democratic system? Is the accepted role of the opposition valid? The answer unqualifiedly is, yes. The word "democracy" supports the role of the opposition and precludes any other conclusion. Oh, but we have the draftsmen of the just society. I remember that in my maiden speech I said that was a slogan without definition. Yet the draftsmen of the just society and the draftsmen of the other slogan, participatory democracy, would disagree with what I just said. Because of the alleged mandate handed to them last June 25 they have interpreted the new politics of the Prime Minister as meaning there is no role at all for the opposition or, at the most, an insignificant role, whether it be the loyal opposition, the N.D.P. or the Créditistes.

• (8:40 p.m.)

You know, Mr. Speaker, I think many people across this nation, and all of us on this side, have come to the conclusion that this government is drunk with power and is hung up on this mandate about which they continually talk. I never heard so much talk, until I came here, about the great mandate they received. It is as if this were the end of everything. Do you know what the mandate means to them? To hon. members on the other side, with a few exceptions,—I must be fair in that regard—mandate means the granting of an unrestricted licence to do anything to anybody, regardless of the consequences, solely for the ultimate purpose and benefit of the Liberal party.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Alexander: I am becoming sick and tired of hearing hon. members throw across the chamber in a taunting way the reminder that they have a mandate. They are just like a bunch of babies. They seem to suggest they are the masters of the house.

Let me tell you this, Mr. Speaker. We are not frustrated because of their mandate. We do not cringe in fear because of their mandate. We are not weak because of their mandate. We shall not be bullied because of their mandate and we shall not be harrassed because of it. We shall not accept rule 75c because of their mandate.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Alexander: Why do I say this? There is a relatively simple approach to this matter. We on this side of the house also received a mandate. We, too, in the loyal opposition received a mandate. Do you know what our mandate was? It was a mandate to criticize constructively; it was a mandate to probe government action; it was a mandate to be responsible.

Mr. Stanfield: A mandate to keep them honest.

Mr. Alexander: It was a mandate to be the defender of the rights of people. It was a mandate which implied a future role as the government of this great country, and do not sell that last one short.

This government, as well as any government in the future, must be aware of the fact that the opposition does in fact legally exist. Perhaps, Mr. Speaker, you will allow me to read another quotation. I do not like reading quotations. I must say I am not the most brilliant orator nor am I the most brilliant speechmaker, but when I see something good I like to pass it on. I was going to say "pass it on to my stupid friends", but that would not be parliamentary. I should like to refer to Sir Kenneth Wheare's book entitled "Legislatures". I cannot give the citation, but it is really up to date. It was published by the Oxford University Press, New York and Toronto, in 1968. I wish to quote from page 77. The title of this particular chapter is, "Making the Government Behave".

Mr. Stanfield: Oh! How do you do that?

Mr. Alexander: With the general agreement of the house, perhaps I should read the whole book.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Alexander: I wish to refer to just a few paragraphs. The first appears at page 77:

> A famous American, Lawrence Lowell, professor of government at Harvard, and later president of the university, wrote in his Government of England: 'His Majesty's Opposition embodies the greatest contribution of the nineteenth century to the art of government.'

Did hon. members in the government know that?

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Alexander: The quotation continues:

> We need not settle an order of merit in these matters; we can easily concede that the invention was important. Indeed, it is not too much to say that in the British constitution today the office of Leader of the Opposition is regarded as of no less importance—though it may be less desired—than that of Prime Minister.

Is that not significant to hon. gentlemen? This institution of ours comes from the Mother of Parliaments, and that is what is said by a great historian. Let me carry on a little further. Do hon. members realise that by the Ministers of the Crown Act of 1937 a salary was provided for the Leader of the Opposition? In that same act, the Prime Minister and the Leader of the Opposition were recognized as being of fundamental importance to the system of government. What is important is that Canada probably was the first country in the world, as far back as 1905, which decided to pay a salary to the Leader of the Opposition. A great figure at that particular time, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, then prime minister, said:

> The Leader of the Opposition under our present system is just as much a part of the constitutional system of government as the Prime Minister himself.

Where is Mr. Trudeau today? I hope he reads my speech. I am not the best speaker, but I hope he pays me the courtesy of saying, "I wonder what that hon. member said about me". Let me continue with the quotation from this book. I find this very important, particularly when we know this government is attempting to emasculate the opposition. Do the members of the government really know what the opposition is all about? I should like to read from page 79:

> —in so far as one of the functions of a legislature is to make the government behave, the chief part in performing that function falls to the opposition and its leader. It is important to stress that they are not expected to undertake the whole of this task. The government's supporters are not supposed to be mere yes-men; influence can be exerted from outside the legislature, as we explained in Chapter 3, by individuals or by organized interests, which help to keep the government up to the mark. But in the legislature itself, though government supporters may grumble behind the scenes and occasionally in public—

Isn't that so true?

> —it is the members of the Opposition who are charged with the duty of examining and criticizing what the government has done and proposes to do.

• (8:50 p.m.)

> Through questions to ministers in the house, through motions of censure and no confidence, through the debates that accompany the passing of financial legislation and so on, the opposition in the British and other Commonwealth legislatures carries on its task. And the leading idea upon which it is organized is that it offers itself before the country as an alternative government. It criticizes upon the understanding that, given the opportunity, it could do better itself. In this way, so runs the theory at least, it is possible to have not only responsible government but responsible opposition also.

I could say much about the latter, but about the former I am devoid of words. The introduction of 75c gives a minister the power to arbitrarily propose the setting of a time limit on debate. This proposal ridicules the writer, Sir Kenneth Wheare. It ridicules his conclusion and makes a mockery of parliamentary rights.

I must stand up and be counted as voicing my objection to a rule which appears to me to be a deliberate attempt to emasculate the role of the opposition. Rule 75c can only be interpreted as a calculated, selfish, partisan theory for relegating the opposition to a state of impotence. It is a deliberate attempt to abrogate the right to criticize. It is a deliberate attempt to abrogate the right to debate. It is a deliberate attempt to abrogate the right to dissent. All of these are unquestionably time honoured rights of the opposition, through which the opposition is able to make the government behave. The right to criticize, debate and dissent, Mr. Speaker and hon. gentlemen, are fundamental to the opposition's effectiveness. If this is so, and I really believe it is so, how could this government be so naive as to believe that we in the opposition would relinquish these rights without a murmur? Their memory is not very long. They seem to have forgotten December of 1968.

Rule 75c is only a modified version of 16A and it is totally unacceptable. In 1968, after much debate, 16A was withdrawn by the government. Public opinion indicated last December that 16A was not acceptable. Why should a modernized version, equally as vicious and equally as unacceptable, be acceptable now? Why should the government insist on 75c anyway? That is what I want to know. I have listened to some brilliant speeches from both sides of the house but nobody seems to be able to tell me why this is necessary. Have we on this side of the house been irresponsible? Have we not been co-operative? Have we not been reasonable? What is the necessity for 75c?

As a matter of fact, all the legislation the government desired to deal with has been dealt with and there is nothing on the Order Paper except this rules package. What is the necessity for 75c? It has been said that 75c is required in order to get on with legislation. What legislation are we talking about? Is the government talking about assistance to old age pensioners who are being strangled by the high cost of living? Is the government going to bring in legislation to cope with that problem? Is the government talking about the superannuates who are also being strangled by the high cost of living and inflation? Is this what the government is talking about? Is it talking about relief for the farmers in respect of the wheat problem? Is this the type of legislation it is talking about? Is the government talking about the plight of its first citizens? Is that the type of legislation about which this government is talking? Perhaps the government is going to bring in legislation which will determine a great oil policy for this continent. Perhaps, and this is my pet peeve, the government is going to create a ministry of housing and urban development. What a great innovation that would be. Is that what the government is talking about when it talks about legislation?

Is the government talking about housing or is it talking about inflation and high costs? If these are the things about which the government is concerned, it does not need 75c because we will co-operate with regard to them.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Alexander: The government does not need that rule. I have outlined enough work to keep the government busy for two and a half years. It does not need 75c, and I would say that this government has proved miserably—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I have to interrupt the hon. member as his time has expired.

Some hon. Members: Carry on.

An hon. Member: No.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member's time has expired.

Mr. John Burton (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, my first words must be to congratulate the hon. member for Hamilton West (Mr. Alexander) for an outstanding contribution to this debate. In a very eloquent fashion, the hon. member tried to persuade some members opposite to change their ways, to change their minds and to repent before it is too late. It seems to me that throughout the address of the hon. member for Hamilton West there was the implication of that saying; hope springs eternal. It seems to me that if hon. members opposite show no sign of response to the very eloquent appeal just delivered by the hon. member, and if the only thing they are capable of is the type of interjection we heard during his speech, then really I am afraid both his and my faith in human nature may drop just a little bit.

This debate is an amazing spectacle. I entered this house in 1968 and I have been a member for a little over a year. It is some 10 months since this present session was convened. We are already witnessing a second major debate on the rules of this house. I noted with interest that the rules changes introduced before Christmas, which included rule 16A as well as quite a large number of other changes, were generally accepted throughout the house. That debate lasted nine days. We have already spent six days on this debate. By the end of this week we will have reached nine days of debate as well. Some 18 days of the time of this house will have been spent debating the rules, all because of the persistence of this government in respect of this one particular matter.

It seems to me, after listening to the speeches by government members and the arguments presented by the government, that much of the motivation is based on occurrences in the last parliament. They are not up to date, and they are not dealing with the situation before parliament now. It seems to me this government is attempting to give the impression that it is moving forward into the future with its eyes firmly fixed on the past.

There are all sorts of images and comparisons which come to one's mind in trying to figure out what this government is trying to do. One image that comes to my mind is that this government somehow gives the impression of a new car hurtling down the road in which there is a beautiful blond sitting alongside the driver who has neither of his hands on the steering wheel. Some of the members might suggest that in this modern technological and technocratic age that car was being operated by remote control. It seems to me there might be some validity in that impression on the basis of the attendance both of cabinet ministers and government members in this house during the question period and during other debates in this house.

• (9:00 p.m.)

Long before I became a member of parliament I was convinced that the rules of parliament needed a thorough overhaul and an updating. In my opinion, parliament needs a safeguard to protect freedom of debate and to recognize the proper, useful and essential role of debate, while at the same time recognizing the needs of the nation and the rule and work to be performed by parliament. Some hon. members will know that prior to my election last year I was an unsuccessful candidate in several federal elections. My first run as a candidate was in the general election of 1957. I have to confess that on several occasions during the 11 years between 1957 and 1968 I was secretly relieved that I had not been elected. There were occasions when members of the house were called upon to work intolerable, inhuman hours for more than a year at a stretch. There were situations devoid of commonsense and reason. I should not need to recall to members of the house that on several occasions in recent years there was a general feeling in Canada that parliament was no longer relevant and no longer capable of coping with the needs of Canadian people. There was a feeling that parliament was slowly strangling itself, as well as the nation, as a result of its failure to restructure its operations.

My feelings on this subject were reinforced by one small incident last September. On that occasion, shortly after my arrival in Ottawa, my four year old son commented, on seeing the parliament buildings for the first time, "It's a castle". This made me think: Surely this is the way many young people must feel about parliament. One of the things I looked forward to at the commencement of the session was the prospect that the rules of parliament would be revised to enable the house to cope with an ever-expanding workload occasioned by the increasing scope and scale of public activity and concern. I was mindful of the fact that members of my own party, in particular the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles), had long pressed for an adequate revision of the rules. Their concern was based on a recognition of both the desirability and the inevitability of expansion in the scope of governmental activity and concern.

When the session commenced last September I thought there was real reason for hope. Members and spokesmen for the government had indicated that they wanted to improve the rules. There seemed to be a disposition on all sides of the house to update the rules and make them more meaningful and relevant to today's needs. I thought there was real hope that progress would be made, while at the same time safeguarding the basic rights of parliament.

I should have known better than to think you could trust Liberals to have a controlling voice in making such changes. One reason I should have known better was that my father once sat as a member of this house, as well as a member of the Saskatchewan legislature, and had plenty of experience with Liberals. He learned through experience, sometimes bitter experience, to never trust a Liberal.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Wise old Joe.

Mr. Burton: I am well aware of the background and experience that gave rise to this conclusion and thoroughly justified him in that belief. If any hon. members would like to hear some stories in this regard, I would be glad to tell them either now or on another occasion. I thought times had changed somewhat. I thought: Surely, some Liberals have learned some things over the years; surely some of the Liberals are a new breed of cat who have a more up to date outlook.

An hon. Member: They have the same meow.

Mr. Burton: I was rather hopeful about the situation. But these thoughts turned out to be illusions. The Liberal approach to the rules has turned out to be a case of typical Liberal arrogance, autocracy and dictatorial conduct.

An hon. Member: What about your attitude?

Mr. Burton: We are talking about the rules of the house which you are attempting to foist upon parliament and the entire country. Rule 16A before Christmas, and 75c, are being imposed from the top without regard to the fact that the effect will be of crushing any opposition in the path of the Liberal cabinet juggernaut. Hon. members will note that I said "Liberal cabinet juggernaut", because hon. members across the way know, as well as anybody else, that this is the area from which the real pressure is coming. These two rules, 16A and 75c, imposed upon the committee by the heavy hand of the government, have placed many of the government's own supporters in a very difficult position. When I expressed my feeling last fall that there was hope for good rule changes, it was based in part on the knowledge that on the government back benches there are many capable men who are intelligent, well educated and well motivated.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Burton: All hon. members with those characteristics are now being put to a cruel test and a cruel choice. Either they stand up for their convictions and principles by opposing 75c, or they give in to the heavy hand that is bringing pressure to bear upon them and which they know will eventually bring their government to defeat. I look across the way and see many hon. members with the characteristics I have mentioned; the hon. member for Scarborough East (Mr. O'Connell), the hon. member for Sarnia (Mr. Cullen), the hon. member for Kamloops-Cariboo (Mr. Marchand), the hon. member for Prince George-Peace River (Mr. Borrie) and others. I know these are sincere, hardworking members. But I suggest that each of them, and in fact all members of the House of Commons, reach a point when they have to make a decision whether they are going to fight for some of the principles basic to the good operation of democratic institutions, or whether they are going to give in to the heavy hand that is pressing on them at the present time.

I suggest that if they are content to become puppets in the hands of their leaders, and remain as such, they must make that choice now. This is the turning point for many hon. members opposite. They will have to make a very difficult and important choice. There are other sincere, hardworking members on the other side of the chamber. There is the hon. member for Grenville-Carleton (Mr. Blair), who introduced the motion now under debate. He is certainly a sincere, hardworking member. I am sure he is trying to do a good job, but he is operating under a very special difficulty.

• (9:10 p.m.)

I recall when the hon. member for Grenville-Carleton attended the same university as I did a number of years ago. At that time a bright future was already being forecast for the hon. member, that some day he might be a federal cabinet member of the prime minister of the country. One gains the impression that in fact he really would not mind too much if he were brought into the cabinet of the present government. I do not criticize the hon. member for this ambition, but I suggest that he, too, is now in a position where he has to make a very difficult choice. He must decide whether he will bow to the pressures brought to bear upon him by those in inner government circles, or whether he will stand up for his convictions. The hon. member looked very uncomfortable on several occasions when this debate commenced and we were discussing the various points of procedure and order that were raised. I suggest that if any hon. member has in fact such ambitions, in the long run he will be much better off to stand up for his principles and convictions at the present time. History can and does repeat itself. Former Liberal governments have grown arrogant and autocratic with age. This government has developed such characteristics more quickly than Liberal governments in the past. Such attitudes can lead to the downfall of a government, regardless of its political stripe. Some hon. members, particularly on the government side, are prone to think that the public does not care much about such things as rules and rule changes. But, Mr. Speaker, history has shown the public to be far more sensitive to things affecting fundamental rights than politicians are often prone to think. On occasion public response might be slow or tardy; but it is there and any politician ignores it at his peril. Thus government backbenchers are faced with an important and difficult choice. Do they stand up to the autocratic decrees delivered to them by those in control of their party or do they allow their party to slide down the long, slippery slope which eventually leads to political oblivion.

At the beginning of this session, Mr. Speaker, a special committee was established to examine the rules of the house. The report of that committee was submitted to the house before the Christmas recess, and it was debated at that time. Some changes proposed were acceptable on this side of the house. Those included substantial changes in the structure of operations in parliament. The benefits of those changes are now evident in terms of dispatch of business this session. While problems remain, such as the manner and effectiveness of the operations of committees, there can be no question that business has been expedited. There are other questions, as well, that remain to be considered, among them being the whole question of communication between parliament as an institution, individual members in this house and the public at large.

Similarly, the question of whether legislation is adequate in the view of an individual member has nothing to do with the assessment of the effectiveness of these rule changes. Rule changes, just by themselves, do not produce a better parliament, do not produce better legislation or better government programs. These depend on the programs that in fact are introduced by the government, and the effectiveness of those programs. However, Mr. Speaker, in the midst of these very acceptable rule changes which were introduced before Christmas, rule 16A stuck out like a sore thumb, or like one rotten apple in a barrel, to use another type of expression. It was bad in itself and in time would spoil everything around it. As justification for the proposal to give the government arbitrary and sole power to limit debate, government members pointed to the small amount of business disposed of up to that time. In that debate I dealt with this point as will be seen by reference to pages 3896 and 3897 of Hansard for December 12 and pages 3914 and 3915 of Hansard for December 13. I will not go into detail with respect to points I made at that time, but I commend those pages to all members in order that they may gain, by reading them, a better picture of the business that had been transacted and dealt with by this house even prior to the rule changes adopted before the Christmas recess.

Briefly, Mr. Speaker, I pointed out that from September 12 until the commencement of the rules debate, there were 60 sitting days. Some 36½ of these days were consumed with the opening day, the throne speech debate, the first budget and budget debates, supply and interim supply debates the length of which was based on agreement reached between the leaders of the various parties, and one day on which we did not sit. On that day no business was transacted because the house adjourned out of respect for the late premier Johnson of Quebec who had just passed away. Also there were debates involved in establishing the committees on procedure and statutory instruments. Although the Prime Minister stated at that time that only nine measures or bills prior to the Christmas recess had passed through parliament, the actual number of bills was eleven, and consideration had commenced on five other measures.

The President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald), and others on the government benches, complained about a number of measures which had not received consideration in the house during the present session. However, the President of the Privy Council fails to recognize that the house spent nine days debating rule 16A prior to Christmas; those nine days could have been used to consider other items of business.

I grant you, Mr. Speaker, that some time would have been required for us to consider other arguments stemming from the committee report—indeed, some aspects required further consideration—but there can be no question that the government's attempt to bulldoze rule 16A through the house consumed valuable time. In my view, they cannot have it both ways. If they insist on foisting measures such as rule 16A and rule 75C on the house, they are going to have to accept the consequences.

Hon. members know that the subject of time allocation was referred to a special committee in the new year as a result of the agreement that was reached just prior to the Christmas recess. This occurred after it became clear even to the government that they could not ram rule 16A down the throats of the house or country. Surely, it would have been reasonable to have expected the government to be sensitive to its experience with rule 16A. But, Mr. Speaker, rule 75c demonstrates that such was not the case. Rule 75c introduced following the demise of rule 16A, demonstrates that this government is determined one way or the other to acquire a degree of raw, naked power that goes far beyond what the people of this country conceive as properly belonging to the government.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Burton: This question must be asked: why do they want this power? What do they intend to bring before parliament in the coming months? Is there legislation coming which will be unacceptable to the house and country, and which the government is going to ram down the country's throat? Can they only do this if they have rule 75c at their disposal?

The manner in which operations of the house are carried on, and the way we can expect the government to use this rule, was illustrated today when the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles), my colleague, suggested seriously to the government as a result of questions asked both yesterday and today that one of the allotted days the opposition had foregone prior to the end of the session should be used to discuss the serious wheat situation and the consequent farm income situation in western Canada.

This one day, could have been granted without any problem. The wheat question is very important, as is obvious, and as is recognized on all sides of the house. The debate would have lasted one day, and that would have been the end of it. But again we saw how unresponsive the President of the Privy Council is to positive and constructive proposals coming from this side of the house. If this is the type of response we are to continue to get from the government benches, and from the President of the Privy Council, then we have to view with suspicion some of the powers the government is attempting to acquire unto itself. My colleague, the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre, and other members have already demonstrated that there has been a reasonable dispatch of business during the present session. In fact, had some of the legislation that was presented been more adequate, there would have been less debate, not more. Debate is often occasioned by the inadequacy of the legislation and measures that are placed before the house.

• (9:20 p.m.)

It should also be pointed out that in another session there will presumably be need for only one budget rather than the two we had this session. Some of the other rules changes, such as the changed approach to supply bills, will have effect for a full session and will result in further time for the conduct of other items of public business. Hopefully, unless the government persists in the type of approach it is adopting at the present time, we might even have less time spent on the discussion of rules changes, presuming that somehow or other we will be able to get through to the government and persuade them that they are not going to ram this sort of proposal down the throats of members of parliament.

Why does the government need these powers for which it is asking? It has been demonstrated during this session that the opposition members have been reasonable. Among other things, the opposition has relinguished two days of the throne speech debate. It allowed the time for consideration of the 1968-69 business of supply to be cut from 35 days to 17½ days. I note as well that following Christmas, the 1969-70 estimates were dealt with in committees. Two days of the second budget debate were surrendered by the opposition, and there were two opposition allotted days which were postponed at the end of June and not taken up by the opposition.

Is this what the government calls obstruction? Is the opposition being difficult? Anybody who suggests that the opposition has been obstructive in this session lusts for powers that all members should be wary of granting. Members of the government and supporters of the government should take heed of the old proverb: "They who live by the sword shall perish by the sword". This proverb has application in two ways. First, it could lead to the demise of this government. Secondly, I suggest members on the government benches should consider carefully just what their situation is going to be when once again they are sitting on this side of the house—at least, those with some chance of political survival.

I have made a number of references to the rules debate that took place prior to Christmas. It seems to me that some of the principles that were enunciated on several occasions should have been kept in mind by the government and those who support the proposal now being debated in the house. On December 12 I commenced my speech with these words, as reported at page 3894 of Hansard:

> The debate on the rules now before us is of the utmost importance to Canada, it involves critical and essential components of the functioning of a democracy. Consideration of the matters under discussion should not be viewed from the standpoint of the mechanics of the matter, but rather from the standpoint of the principle involved and the consequences of our considerations on our democratic institutions. The mechanics are important in their place, but that place is still secondary to the principles involved.

The very manner in which rule 75c was pushed through the committee, having been introduced at the last moment and voted upon almost immediately, is an example of how the government has not heeded the advice given to it from all quarters of the house during the last rules debate before Christmas. It seems to me we must keep in mind some of the considerations raised at that time.

When the Leader of the Official Opposition (Mr. Stanfield) moved an amendment to the motion adopting the new rules prior to Christmas, his amendment in fact accepted the principle of time allocation in debates. This principle as such was recognized and accepted, I think, by all sides of the house.

As members will be aware, the key question is: How will this principle be applied? The application of the principle is the important thing. At that time the members of all opposition parties made their stand clear. They made it clear that they were not prepared to accept rule 16A or anything like rule 16A. It now seems that somehow or other their message failed to get through to the government.

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): Will the hon. member permit a question?

Mr. Burton: Certainly.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

An hon. Member: Trudeau's hatchet man.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I should like to object to the shouting; I think it is quite unbecoming. An hon. member does not have to accept a question, but if he does the hon. member who wants to ask the question should be allowed to do so without being subjected to this kind of conduct.

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): The hon. member, and all hon. members opposite, accepted last December 20 the fact that the committee should look into the British procedure in relation to allocating time for debates. Would not the hon. member agree that the British procedure is more strict on the opposition than the proposal here?

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): But we do not have to accept it.

Mr. Burton: I agree that this was one of the proposals that the committee was to look into, following its terms of reference agreed to on December 20. The hearings of the committee were held in camera, but I trust that the committee gave full consideration to the British procedures. It seems to me that the terms of reference in no way imposed an obligation or duty on the committee to accept those particular procedures. Although they were valid points for study, anyone who listened to the debate at that time would realize that rule 75c would not have been acceptable to the opposition parties had it been proposed prior to Christmas.

In December, the principle of time allocation was accepted, and this principle was embodied in the wording of the amendment, as I pointed out in the debate at that time. It seems to me we have to be very careful in considering the British procedure and the British parliamentary practice. While we can certainly learn useful lessons from British parliamentary practice, and as all members know the pattern of our parliament is based in large part upon British parliamentary tradition, the fact is that there are important differences between the British parliamentary system and the Canadian House of Commons, our own practices and needs.

We live in a different type of country from Britain, which for the most part is a homogeneous nation where matters can be debated in more capsulized form. Britain does not have our geographical dimension with its many regional interests and concerns. It is at a more advanced stage of economic, political and social development.

Mr. Fairweather: The committee chairmen there are also neutral.

Mr. Burton: As pointed out by the hon. member for Fundy-Royal (Mr. Fairweather) the committee chairmen there are neutral. In addition, it should also be noted that the British House of Commons has some 625 members, whereas the Canadian House of Commons has 264. This simple arithmetical fact means, it seems to me, that members must accept a different method of operation in order to carry on their business.

I came to Ottawa on the basis that I had been elected to a democratic institution. I was elected a member of the House of Commons in order to participate in debate on public issues and to make decisions thereon. I was not elected as the member for Regina East to accept a muzzle and I do not intend to accept a muzzle under any circumstances. I intend to fight proposals such as rule 75c in every way possible. When the government and its supporters come to their senses, we can resume reasonable discussions about the rules and urgent items of public business. We can deal with some of the items referred to in the question period today at any time the government may wish.

• (9:30 p.m.)

The government knows that rules 75A and 75B are reasonable and that they have been accepted in principle by the opposition. They provide for time allocation when there is full agreement among the house leaders of the various parties. They provide for determination of time allocation when all parties but one agree on the allocation. Why not accept rules 75A and 75B, find out how they work, and if they do not meet the need then let the matter be discussed further.

The government should know by now the position of the opposition. As I mentioned previously, rule 16A was voted to a standstill. Rule 75c will also be voted to a standstill. As soon as members opposite understand this we can begin to make some progress. Why not do it now? Why not adopt the slogan of one of the government's own agencies, "Do it now"? Why does the government not use intelligence and avoid this senseless confrontation? It is only rule 75c that stands in the way. Rules 75A and 75B represent a reasonable solution.

We are reasonable men and women. I suppose I should say woman, because regretfully, Mr. Speaker, there is only one woman in the house. I can assure all members that the hon. lady is a reasonable woman. If we are reasonable then we will reach agreement by adopting rules 75A and 75B. Let's get on with the job.

As a result of listening to some hon. members across the way, both in debate and private conversation, I gained the impression that part of their motivation for presenting this particular rule change which we find so objectionable is based on fear. It is based on the fear of veto, that somehow the opposition will be successful in vetoing and hold up government business. Several hon. members have already pointed out the example of the Criminal Code debate and the extensive amendments proposed by members of the Creditiste Party. This situation could have been dealt with under proposed rule 75B. I have no argument with the proposition that some of the debate on the amendment to the abortion section of the Criminal Code was unreasonable. I say that as one who in fact had some sympathy for some of the amendments in respect of abortion. As has been pointed out, this situation could have been dealt with under proposed rule 75B. I am sure a reasonable agreement could have been reached.

If the members of the government do, in fact, hold such fears about what the opposition is going to do, I suggest members opposite should consider that members on this side of the house have just as much right to be fearful of what the government is going to do, what its intentions are and what actions and decisions it will take in the future. Indeed, Mr. Speaker, the manner in which the government has forced debate on this particular proposal at the present time, knowing there was going to be strong opposition to rule 75c, is one example that cannot help but increase fears that the government is going to use this rule 75c in an unacceptable way.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I suggest that if we are to have a parliament that is going to practice the principles of participatory democracy, about which we heard a good deal over the past year and a half, we are going to have to reject firmly the type of proposal contained in rule 75c. As I stated, we certainly agree with proposed rules 75A and 75B.

Mr. Speaker: I have to interrupt the hon. member since his time has expired. The hon. member cannot continue unless he has unanimous consent of the house.

[Translation]

Hon. Théogène Ricard (Saint-Hyacinthe): Mr. Speaker, when the measure now before us was introduced, I was far from thinking of speaking to it, first, because I do not consider myself an expert on the rules of the house and secondly, because I believe that the objections raised, both in the house and outside, would make the government understand that rule 75c should be withdrawn in the general interest.

I must admit today that I was entirely wrong as each and everyone of the government members are still possessed with the arrogance that was always shown by this government. And it is because of the consequences that would result from the concurrence in the proposed rules, that I decided to make some demands which are also, I believe, those of the people I have the honour to represent in this house.

Does the hon. member for Papineau wish to say something?

Mr. George C. Lachance (Lafontaine): For Lafontaine.

Mr. Ricard: The hon. member for Lafontaine could surely abide by the rules and stop interrupting me unnecessarily, besides, no one can understand what he says.

Mr. Lachance: Would the hon. member allow me a question?

Mr. Lambert: You will make your speech later.

Mr. Ricard: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member can make his speech in due time.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. member for Saint-Hyacinthe.

Mr. Ricard: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I have listened, without interrupting them, to the members opposite, and I would like the French Canadians, those from the province of Quebec at least, to show me the same courtesy I have shown to all previous speakers, whether on this side or on the other side of the house.

I was sent here by the people of Saint-Hyacinthe to speak on their behalf, and I am sure that as well as the rest of the people in Quebec, they do not approve of the members being gagged. In general, the population does not approve of such methods to silence the members of the house. Our constituents have entrusted us with a specific mandate: to protect their interests and to express their views in the house of commons.

My fellow citizens want their rights to be respected by the government in power, whether it be Conservative, Liberal or other, and they will not tolerate that I be silenced by the will of only one man. They think that if I want to speak, I must have the right to do it as often as I see fit, especially when their interests are at stake, while I respect the rules of the House of Commons.

Mr. Speaker, my constituents think that only the Speaker has the power to call me to order and to ask that I sit down if I do not follow the rules.

In its simplest expession, rule 75c means that even before a legislative proposal is known to the house, closure will be forced upon us and after four days of debate, no member will be able to rise in order to enforce the rights and privileges of his constituents.

It goes without saying that I object and that I will object with all my strength to this measure because I think it is a dictatorial one. In addition, I am sure that the people in general are opposed to it, not only because I want to have the right to express in the house the ideas that are dictated to me by my constituents, but also because I want to be sure that those who will come after me will also be able to enforce the interests of the constituents of the St. Hyacinthe areas as often as they see fit.

My constituents believe strongly that the rights which are guaranteed to us by our democracy do not allow the government to resort to dictatorial measures in order to silence their representative.

There is another reason which leads me to oppose the adoption of the measure now under study.

• (9:40 p.m.)

In fact, we know that in 1964, if my memory serves me right, a debate which is now history, took place with regard to the adoption of a distinctive national flag. At that time, closure was imposed upon us and in a circular which I sent out to my constituents, I explained the reasons for the stand which I had taken with regard to the adoption of a distinctive national flag. I stated then that I would object with all my might to the imposition of closure, and I quote:

> Closure is an undemocratic measure. I voted against its application because I believe it is unfair to prevent a member from making his views known in the house as often as he deems necessary to do so. Even if such a measure were presented by my party, I would still vote against it.

I cannot miss this opportunity to say that I am against adopting a closure rule. With my colleagues of the Conservative party and the other parties of the opposition I shall do my outmost to try to bring the government to its senses.

Mr. Speaker, I fail to understand the submissiveness of my friends across the way. I fail to understand how they could, deliberately, from sheer wantonness, adopt a measure that will prevent them from speaking on behalf of their electors. If they vote in favour of Standing Order 75c, they will repudiate their commitments towards those who have sent them here. It is unbelievable that party discipline should have them submit so blindly to the will of their boss.

Everyone agrees, Mr. Speaker, that parliamentary procedure must be improved. Still, it must be recognized that we have, in the last few years, made much progress in that direction. During the present session, the opposition has proved repeatedly its goodwill, its eagerness to co-operate with the government to speed up the business of the house. Others, before me, gave several examples of this.

Allow me to recall one again that we gave up days allotted to the opposition, that we also agreed to shorten our speeches that a greater number of members might be heard.

All this, Mr. Speaker, was achieved by mutual agreement between the members of the opposition and those of the Liberal party. I am firmly convinced that more work can be done, that there can be none agreement if we proceed as we have done until now, that is by mutual agreement.

Statistics reveal, Mr. Speaker, that at the time of the debates on the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne, on the budget and other important topics, the government members used their right to speak according to their numbers.

But it is rather surprising to see that today those same members in some particular cases, ask that their rights be recognized when they, in the same breath, would like to prevent the opposition members from enjoying the rights given them under the rules.

A few years back, Mr. Speaker, I sat on the committee set up to review parliamentary procedure. This committee included members such as Messrs G. W. Pickersgill, Lionel Chevrier and, if my memory serves me right, Paul Martin also. I can assure you, that none of these gentlemen would ever have accepted a bill such as the one now under consideration. In fact, when proposals were brought forward to improve parliamentary procedure, which would have prevented somewhat the opposition members from speaking as long as they wished, they cried out loud about dictatorship, if not worse. Their contribution on the committee on parliamentary procedure was strictly limited to the benefits it could bring to their party.

Perhaps is it also relevant to recall some of my first memories from the time when I first came here.

I was elected on June 10, 1957. As you know, we came in after a government known for its arrogance throughout the country if not the world over. The government we replaced had refused for many hours and even for many days to provide the opposition which information it was entitled to. And finally, to prevent the public from knowing some very unflattering things about several friends of the Liberal party, the government we replaced finally resorted to the gag. As a result of that attitude taken by the Saint-Laurent administration in 1956, that government was defeated during the elections held on June 10, 1957. The people took advantage of that opportunity to show in a concrete and tangible way its disapproval as well as its indignation. It refused to trust that government again with the result that the Conservative government, then headed by the right hon. John Diefenbaker, came into power.

I attended in this house the proceedings which begun after parliament met in October 1957—if I am not mistaken—and I can say that the humiliation of defeat has failed to convince the people opposite to put an end to their arrogance. From the way they acted, you could see that they intended to keep on claiming that power was theirs forever by right and to consider the administration of public affairs as their own province.

You should have seen the Chevrier, Martin, Pickersgill and even the right hon. Pearson systematically and continuously challenging the authority of the Speaker, rising on points of orders that actually were not founded, resorting to any means to embarrass the ministers and the government. All they wanted was to filibuster and they made no bones about it.

If the young members opposite really want to learn about the behaviour of those who came before them in this house, they have but to read the official report of the House of Commons from 1957 to 1963. They will realize that the authority of the house was never so much abused as when the Liberal party was in the opposition. It would have been very interesting to see their reactions at that time if the government had tried then to introduce a legislation such as rule 75c, which they are trying to impose upon us now. They would have shouted "tyranny", "dictatorship", if not deplored the death of freedom in this country.

Today, Mr. Speaker, they want us to swallow this same pill which has been sugar-coated, without a word of protest.

In presenting rule 75c, the president of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald) said that he wanted to ensure a more rational, more logical use of the house's time. This reason is far from being very convincing since it has not won the approval of all opposition parties. The solid bloc which the opposition represents, Mr. Speaker, is proof that it is not in the best interest of Canadians to adopt this measure.

Mr. Speaker, may I call it ten o'clock.

• (9:50 p.m.)

[English]

Mr. Speaker: It being ten o'clock, a motion to adjourn the house is deemed to have been made and seconded at this time.

[Translation]

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

A motion to adjourn the house under standing order 40 deemed to have been moved.

CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION—VANCOUVER—CLOSING OF FRENCH STATION

Mr. Bernard Dumont (Frontenac): Mr. Speaker, on June 4 last, I asked the Secretary of State (Mr. Pelletier) if it was true that the French radio station in Vancouver was on the point of being closed?

Before making any comments on the changes that have taken place since I asked my question, let me state the facts, because in Canada, history has taught those who have studied it that in olden days, there was the dispersion of Acadians and the 12 French-speaking employees of the C.B.C. in Vancouver had the impression of going through the same experience.

As a matter of fact, a formal complaint had been lodged with the management of the Crown corporation, to draw their attention to what was happening. For those employees, it seemed like the beginning of the end of the French-language station, CBUF-FM.

At any rate, movers had come to the first floor of the Vancouver Hotel where the French network employees had their offices to move the furniture elsewhere and thus scatter the team among the large group of English-speaking personnel.

The English network now has 450 employees in British Columbia. For administrative purposes, French-speaking employees come under the British Columbia region. But, according to the policy announced some time ago by the management of the Crown Corporation there are two networks and, in that case, those employees should come under the French network.

The policy which the Director of the English network in that region is trying to apply in Vancouver is therefore contrary to the policy of the Corporation, as stated by the employees who made this information known by telephone.

According to a report, the management felt that a faction was in action. Now, the 14 employees have already signed a first petition in which they object to the break-up. A second petition bearing the signatures of nine of them followed; three people had not signed because one was back in Montreal and a secretary and a technician were on holidays.

The 12 employees put up 20 hours of local production per week, six of which are transmitted over the national network. One of them said, and I quote:

> It is important that we work together, to maintain efficiency and also to protect our language. However, we are determined not to let our office furniture be carried away.

Moreover, the employees concerned stated that all those who thought that they would give up their rights can on the contrary be sure that they intend to defend them. As far as I am concerned, I wish also to be on the side of those defenders of the truth, in order that justice be granted to all our people. Otherwise, Canada will no longer exist.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, here is how the incident ended. The employees of the C.B.C.'s French-language station eventually won their battle to stay together and maintain their cultural identity. There was talk of moving members of the CBUF-FM station in an administrative wing with the English-speaking officials, but the announcer André Vigeant said:

> We have no intention of moving, except as a group.

A compromise was finally arrived at and the station is to keep on operating. However, we must keep our eyes open and be on the look-out.

I have in hand a statement to put on the order paper. I shall read it to you word for word. It follows the government's decision to grant an educational television station to western Canada. Here it is:

The hon. Gérard Pelletier, Secretary of State, has announced that an agreement has just been signed under the aegis of the Department of the Secretary of State between the C.B.C. and the Department of Education of Alberta. Under that agreement, the C.B.C. will ask the Canadian Radio-Television Commission the authorization to establish a French TV station in the Edmonton area which will also be used to broadcast educational programs provided by the Metropolitan Edmonton Educational Television (MEETA).

The Secretary of State has pointed out that he has recently received a petition with 28,000 signatures asking the establishment of a French TV station in the Edmonton area.

On October 24, 1968, realizing the urgency of the situation, the Secretary of State announced the creation of a task force on educational broadcasting which, among other things, would look for interim measures to be taken before the adoption of the bill.

The agreement which has just been signed, must be considered as a happy one, provided that in reply to the proposal accepted by the government, we do not hear too many statements such as the one I read today in a newspaper article entitled: The Voice of Western Canadians Does Not Want French Radio or Television in Edmonton.

In my opinion, Mr. Speaker—and unfortunately, I will not have enough time for all I would like to say—such statements should not be made or published in neespapers.

I shall quote a few sentences therefrom, because I do not want anyone to think that I made those statements. However, I wish the whole of Canada to know that, if there are separatists in Quebec, you can also find people who do not accept French Canadians as they should do. I shall therefore quote the opening of the statement:

—A group called "The Voice of Western Canadians" sent a letter to the Canadian Radio-Television Commission stating that the establishment of a French TV station in Edmonton was neither justified nor desired.

Last month, the C.B.C. filed with the C.R.T.C. a petition for a French TV station in the Albertan capital. No decision has yet been announced by the C.R.T.S.

In April, 28,000 Albertans forwarded a petition to the Secretary of State . . . asking him to support the establishment of that station. It is following that petition that the C.B.C. presented its request.

As for the Association canadienne-française d'Alberta, it rates at 40,000 the number of French-speaking Canadians in the Edmonton area alone—

"The Voice of Western Canadians", on behalf of its 400 members, protests against the establishment of that station, and as the watch-dog of the rights of Canadians, I wanted to ask this question. Whenever our people will be discriminated against—with the hope that the injustice will be quickly corrected—I will always be among the defenders who wish Canada to remain the Canada we know today.

[English]

Hon. R. J. Orange (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, the hon. member from the Ralliement Creditiste has said that many in western Canada have their heritage rooted in Quebec. Not only do they wish to be involved in the affairs of western Canada but they also wish to retain their relations with other French speaking people in this country. He talked about the establishment of a French language television station in the capital of Alberta, Edmonton, and suggested this is of paramount importance for French speaking people living in that part of Canada. With that I agree. In my own part of Canada, the Northwest Territories, the missions which have ministered to many of our people have come from French Canada and other French speaking parts of the world. The people of western Canada, and particularly of northern Alberta, know how to get along with each other. Thousands of our Ukrainians, Eskimos and Indians have learned how to get along with each other, and that is demonstrated in communities like Lac-La-Biche and St. Paul, where the basic language is French. The French speaking people of these communities know how to get along with their neighbours.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I am sorry to interrupt but the parliamentary secretary's time has expired.

WATER RESOURCES—HAMILTON, ONTARIO—POLLUTION BY STEEL COMPANY THROUGH DUMPING OF ACID

Mr. Randolph Harding (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, several weeks ago I directed a question to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Greene) and asked whether his department had investigaged a report to the effect that in February the Steel Company of Canada dumped 150,000 gallons of hydrochloric acid into Hamilton Bay. I asked, if that were so, had a report been made and would it be tabled. I repeat that question this evening.

Other members of this house have talked about the severe pollution problem which presently exists in Hamilton Bay. That area apparently is one of the worst polluted areas of Canada today, and I am pleased to see members of all parties are taking a keen interest in this problem. I am fully aware of newspaper stories of this incident, and of the investigation carried out by the Ontario Water Resources Commission. However, the federal government also has a responsibility in this particular area of Lake Ontario, and this matter certainly comes within the orbit of several federal departments.

If an investigation has been carried out by the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources or any other federal department, we should certainly be entitled to see the report. If the investigation was carried out in co-operation with other authorities, the report should still be available. If there was no federal participation, then we have every right to ask the minister to tell us why there has not been compliance with the pollution regulations laid down by government. I understand that the Great Lakes system, and its pollution problems, come under federal jurisdiction.

• (10:10 p.m.)

The Minister without Portfolio (Mr. Lang) indicated on May 29 that the government was concerned with the general pollution problem in Hamilton Bay. He stated also that there are certain federal legislative powers in existence which can be used in certain instances. For example, there are powers under the Fisheries Act, under the Shipping Act and under the health act. His own department also exercises certain powers, and there are powers under the International Joint Commission. In my opinion, these powers could have been used to investigate the incident to which I have referred.

If none of the above agencies was used to investigate the acid spill, I ask why this was so. It is the dismal lack of enforcement, even by our present inadequate pollution standards, which is partly responsible for the dangerous pollution hazards that exist everywhere. Why are regulations written by certain departments and then ignored? The acid spill in Hamilton Bay clearly falls within federal jurisdiction and we are awaiting the minister's report. If a jurisdictional problem is involved, I ask the minister to outline it and to tell us what is being done to solve the problem.

Let me just refer to a few of these regulations. Hamilton Bay falls within the jurisdiction of the National Harbours Board. Among the regulations pursuant to that legislation is the following:

Nothing shall be thrown, drained or discharged into the water, allowed to come in contact with the water, or deposited anywhere within the limits of the harbour, which may in any manner—

(b) cause any nuisance or endanger life or health;—

This regulation clearly includes the pollution that occurred in this case. There are also regulations pursuant to the Fisheries Act, one of which provides that:

No one shall throw overboard ballast, coal ashes, stones, or other prejudicial or deleterious substances in any river, harbour or roadstead, or in any water where fishing is carried on—

It goes on to provide:

Every person who violates this section is guilty of an offence and liable for the first conviction to a fine of not less than $100 and not more than $1,000, or to imprisonment for one to six months, or to both.

For the second and any subsequent conviction, he is liable to a fine of $300 to $2,000 or to imprisonment of two to twelve months, or to both.

In addition, the Governor General in Council may make regulations respecting the obstruction and pollution of any waters frequented by fish.

I should like also to put on record part of a letter written by the Minister of Fisheries and Forestry (Mr. Davis) that appeared in the Globe and Mail on June 14, 1969:

The federal government has full and comprehensive jurisdiction over Canada's fisheries. Under the British North America Act this covers "sea coast and inland fisheries". From 1868 onwards the federal Fisheries Act has contained clauses dealing with the quality of water and measures designed to protect fish and other forms of marine life.

While some sections of the present Fisheries Act need to be updated, I feel that this particular piece of legislation provides an excellent vehicle for federal participation in the war against pollution, not only on our sea coasts but also in our inland waters as well.

I ask the minister concerned why some of the federal powers in this field have not been exercised. In my opinion, there is no doubt that the spill in Hamilton Bay falls under the jurisdiction of several federal government departments and they cannot escape their responsibility. We need immediate action on pollution problems, not only in Hamilton Bay but everywhere. The federal government cannot escape its responsibility in this field. I urge the minister and the house to make this question one of the top priorities in the years to come. Man and his very existence on earth depends upon the solution of this pollution problem.

Mr. R. J. Orange (Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): The hon. member for Kootenay West (Mr. Harding) is a member of the Energy, Mines and Resources Committee. I hope he speaks for his party when he says that the federal jurisdiction in relation to water management and water pollution must become the concern of Canadians. I hope when the legislation dealing with the Canada water act is introduced into the House of Commons that, apart from the details of the act, we will be able to rely on hon. members across the way for their full and complete support in the event that there are jurisdictional problems.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Bring it in tomorrow.

Mr. Orange: We could bring it in tomorrow, but we would like your support in a way that is meaningful for Canada.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Why not do something with the legislation you now have? Why are you sitting around?

Mr. Orange: I think the hon. member is aware of the jurisdictional problem. He was once the premier of a province. He recognizes the problems connected with introducing legislation. He should recognize also the problems of jurisdiction between the province and the municipalities. What we are faced with here, at the moment, is the important provincial problem.

We have a report that 150,000 gallons of acid were dumped into Hamilton Bay by the Steel Company of Canada. This has never been confirmed by the Ontario Water Resources Commission or any other source. This happened a month ago. With the greatest of respect to the hon. member, he really has not brought this before the house since that time. However, that is not the point.

The point is that we, as federal legislators, should recognize that water pollution and water management are major problems in this country. Please recognize that it takes a little bit of time to get organized. We recognize that there are jurisdictional problems.

Mr. Harding: Did you investigate it?

Mr. Orange: We investigated this.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): What did you find?

Mr. Orange: Never mind. We have jurisdictional problems. I look to opposition members for support, particularly those who feel so hearty these days because they have some representation in the province of Manitoba. I wish to congratulate the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) for recognizing the Manitoba centennial today. We need this support for which I am asking in order to convince the people of Canada that water management and pollution affect the quality of life of all people in Canada. As the result of the major policy statement tonight by the hon. member for Kootenay West (Mr. Harding), I assume we have that support.

SENIOR CIVIL SERVANTS—DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE

Mr. Robert McCleave (Halifax-East Hants): Mr. Speaker, on June 11 I asked the following question as recorded at page 9997 of Hansard:

> Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Finance. Does the minister intend to expose senior civil servants in his department to the difficulties and frustrations of the marketplace, as suggested by the hon. member for Trinity (Mr. Hellyer)?

My question arose from a speech the hon. member for Trinity (Mr. Hellyer) made, I believe, in Toronto on June 11 to some cost accountants. Because of the hon. member's recent association with the ministry, I thought it might be relevant to ask that question of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Benson). At that time Mr. Speaker said:

> Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The question is rather mysterious, as far as the chair is concerned. Perhaps it might be considered in the hour of mystery some time after ten o'clock.

Since we have had some mysterious answers here this evening, I suggest I am not out of place in bringing this question before this huge assembly at this time. One aspect of the suggestion made by the former minister of transport was that senior civil servants should perhaps have a different type of training before assuming their positions. From time to time we hear rumbles that the top level of the public service should rise and fall with the fortunes of government, similar to what happens in the United States where all the top people are replaced when a new president assumes office.

• (10:20 p.m.)

While I have raised only one question of mystery, upon which I hope the Parliamentary Secretary will throw some light, concerning whether the member for Trinity was flying a real balloon, a lead balloon or his own balloon, perhaps the Parliamentary Secretary would also deal with this other question about which there is a rumour around Ottawa. We will be interested in what he has to say, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. H. E. Gray (Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance): I do not know, Mr. Speaker, whether my remarks will lift or add to the veil of mystery to which Mr. Speaker referred when he shunted the hon. member's question into this late show period. I think it is important to note that the government and its officials do in fact make an effort to be aware of the views not only from the world of business but also from the worlds of labour, the professions and the universities. I think the government has been working to expand the range of these contacts. In my opinion a very important role in this regard can be and is being played by members of parliament like ourselves. We are in a particularly good position to bring the views of groups and individuals to the attention of the government. I think I must conclude by saying if there are to be changes in existing government policies with regard to the role of the civil service, then I am sure the hon. member knows such changes will be announced in due course and in the usual way.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): What about their pensions?

Motion agreed to and the house adjourned at 10.24 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Wednesday, July 16, 1969

The house met at 2 p.m.

[Translation]

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

NATIONAL CAPITAL

TABLING OF SIXTY-NINTH REPORT OF COMMISSION

Hon. Jean Marchand (Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I would like to table in French and English two copies of the 69th report of the National Capital Commission. I apologize, Mr. Speaker, for not having tabled that report yesterday, which was the deadline, but one of the essential signatures was missing, due to the summer holidays. I hope that the house will excuse me for this slight irregularity.

[English]

CAPE BRETON DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION

TABLING OF CORRESPONDENCE WITH CHAIRMAN RESPECTING RESIGNATION

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, further to an undertaking given earlier by the Prime Minister I should like to table copies of correspondence between the Prime Minister and Mr. Fullerton, the chairman of the Cape Breton Development Corporation, in respect of the latter's resignation.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

MESSAGE FROM CANADIAN HIGH COMMISSION IN LAGOS RESPECTING ALLEGED STATEMENT BY BRIGADIER HAMILTON

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I should like to table a copy of a message from the Canadian High Commission in Lagos, dated July 14, 1969, on the subject of the report in the Globe and Mail of July 12 relating to a statement alleged to have been made by Brigadier Hamilton.

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

INFORMATION SERVICE, DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

Qusetion No. 2,217—Mr. Robinson:

1. Does the Department of Justice provide an information service and, if so, what was the cost for each of the years 1960-1968 inclusive?

2. How many publications and/or periodicals and/or information sheets and/or public releases were provided by the Department for each of the years 1960-1968 inclusive, and what was the cost for each publication for each of the years 1960-1968 inclusive?

3. How many copies of each publication are provided, to whom are they distributed, and how is the distribution effected?

Hon. John N. Turner (Minister of Justice): 1, 2 and 3. The Department of Justice does not provide an information service. However, I am informed by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police who, before being transferred to the Department of the Solicitor General on October 1, 1966, as follows: 1. Yes. 1960, $18,320; 1961, $22,800; 1962, $37,765; 1963, $39,269; 1964, $42,449; 1965, $46,704.

2 and 3.

Year	Cost	Publications	Distribution	Public Releases
1960/61	—	Not available	—	Not available
1961/62	—	Not available	—	28
1962/63	$ 347.04	"Serve Canada With RCMP"	11,568	22
	$ 1,273.63	"Career in Scarlet"	2,549	—
	*$ 2,932.00	"Crime in Your Community"	54,700	—
1963/64	$ 435.48	"Serve Canada With RCMP"	14,516	32
	$ 1,117.84	"Career in Scarlet"	2,178	—

Questions

Year	Cost	Publications	Distribution	Public Releases
1964/65	$ 280.00	"RCMP Service Dogs"	1,000	19
	$ 447.15	"Historical Outline"	4,065	—
	$ 99.00	"RCMP Band Posters"	550	—
	$ 909.00	"RCMP Blue Book"	5,050	—
	$ 423.00	"Serve Canada With RCMP"	13,200	—
	$ 1,853.70	"Career in Scarlet"	6,179	—
1965/66	$ 846.30	"Historical Outline"	10,270	37
	$ 2,912.56	"RCMP Blue Book"	21,464	—
	$ 583.50	"RCMP Musical Ride"	8,066	—
	$ 818.00	"Serve Canada With RCMP"	35,500	—
	$ 3,420.58	"Career in Scarlet"	10,815	—
	*$ 2,431.10	"Crime in Your Community"	34,730	—

*Reimbursed 50 per cent by Bank of Canada.

POLYMER CORPORATION—LANGUAGE SPOKEN BY EMPLOYEES—CAPITAL EXPENDITURES, ETC.

Question No. 2,248—Mr. Fortin:

1. How many persons on the Executive of Polymer Corporation speak, as their mother tongue (a) French (b) English (c) other, and how many are bilingual?

2. How many persons on the Board of Directors of Polymer Corporation speak, as their mother tongue (a) French (b) English (c) other, and how many are bilingual?

3. What is the amount of capital expenditures by Polymer Corporation (a) in Ontario (b) in Quebec?

4. Is Polymer Corporation planning to establish a production branch or a subsidiary in the Province of Quebec and, if not, for what reason?

5. How many employees does Polymer Corporation have (a) in Quebec (b) in Ontario?

6. What was the return on invested capital for the last three years?

[Translation]

Hon. James Richardson (Minister of Supply and Services): In so far as Polymer Corporation Limited is concerned: 1. (a) One; (b) Eight; (c) None. One member of the Executive is bilingual.

2. (a) One; (b) Eight; (c) None. Two Board members are bilingual.

3. The capital expenditures in Ontario as represented by fixed assets, amounted to $163,593,000 as of December 31, 1968. The Company does not have any fixed assets in Quebec and does not have a record of the value of the capital assets it has purchased in Quebec.

4. No. The capacity of the Company's existing Canadian operations is sufficient for its current needs and the Company, therefore, does not have any current plans to establish a subsidiary or branch elsewhere in Canada.

[Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton).]

However, it is continually seeking attractive opportunities for further expansion and growth.

5. Polymer does not have any employees located in Quebec and had 2,649 employees in Ontario as of May 31, 1969.

6. The return on invested capital for the last three years was as follows: 1966, 11.2%; 1967, 5.6%; 1968, 6.7%.

[English]

INFORMATION SERVICE, DEPARTMENT OF NATIONAL HEALTH AND WELFARE

Question No. 2,317—Mr. Robinson:

1. Does the Department of National Health and Welfare provide an information service and, if so, what was the cost for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive?

2. How many publications and/or periodicals and/or information sheets and/or public releases were provided by the Department for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive, and what was the cost for each publication for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive?

3. How many copies of each publication are provided and to whom are they distributed and how is the distribution effected?

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of National Health and Welfare): 1. Yes.

	Costs of Information Services
1960	Not available
1961	" "
1962	$259,986
1963	268,336
1964	331,800
1965	391,879
1966	442,402
1967	508,560
1968	479,207

2.

	Publications	Periodicals	Posters	Press Releases
1960	26	8	1	127
1961	37	8	1	135
1962	480	8	137	104
1963	522	8	144	90
1964	474	8	106	70
1965	893	8	134	98
1966	1178	8	254	86
1967	668	8	168	99
1968	750	8	127	143

All publications are the responsibility of each separate division of the Department of National Health and Welfare, and their cost varies according to the requirements of the division. Thus, costs involved are difficult to obtain as new publications, reprints and revisions are done through a number of different channels. To assess costs of each publication would involve an excessive amount of staff research and would be most difficult under the present resource limitations.

3. See answer in 2. Distribution is effected as follows: (a) health publications through the Provincial Departments of Health; (b) welfare publications through Canada Pension Plan, Old Age Assistance and Family Allowance Headquarters and Regional Offices.

CROWN ASSETS DISPOSAL CORPORATION—SALES PROCEDURE

Question No. 2,354—Mr. Beaudoin:

1. What criteria does the government use in the choice of its tenderers in relation to the disposition by Crown Assets Disposal Corporation of trucks, jeeps, etc.?

2. How many of these tenderers were from the Province of Quebec?

3. How much has the government realized each year from the sale of goods by Crown Assets Disposal Corporation for the period 1960 to 1968 inclusive?

4. On what basis does the government compare the original costs of such goods?

[Translation]

Hon. James Richardson (Minister of Supply and Services): In so far as Crown Assets Disposal Corporation is concerned: 1. The Corporation maintains lists of all companies, establishments and individuals who have in some manner recorded with the Corporation their interest in the sale of trucks, jeeps, etc.

2. There are 632 companies and individuals located in the Province of Quebec listed on the solicitation lists to receive tenders.

3. 1959-1960, $6,671,475; 1960-1961, $7,201,-810; 1961-1962, $7,166,131; 1962-1963, $6,708,-661; 1963-1964, $6,430,775; 1964-1965, $11,-019,634; 1965-1966, $10,932,480; 1966-1967, $14,741,192; 1967-1968, $9,820,259; 1968-1969, $8,586,045; Total, $89,278,462.

4. Most of the materials and surpluses sold by the Corporation consist of military equipment having little commercial application.

The bulk of the surpluses is sold on the basis of recovery of the value of the basic material content, as salvage and prices realized in most cases do not bear any meaningful relationship to the original cost of such goods.

[English]

NATIONAL PARKS—RENEWAL OF BUSINESS LICENCES

Question No. 2,432—Mr. Sulatycky:

1. How many applications by an existing business for a renewal of its licence to function in a National Park have been refused since 1957?

2. What is the name of each person, firm or corporation to whom or to which a renewed business licence has been refused since 1957?

3. Prior to the refusal to grant such renewed licence, did the Crown in any case make an offer to the lessee of the property from which the applicant for such licence carried on business, for the purchase of the leasehold interest, which offer was refused?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): 1. There are many business licences issued in National Parks each year and it would be necessary to examine each licence for each year since 1957 to yield this type of information. Records are not kept in such a way as to find this information without considerable cost financially and in man years. Business licences for established businesses are rarely refused renewal and when they are, if the operator agrees to meeting the minimum standards, the licence is issued or reinstated as the case may be.

2. As indicated in the answer to part 1, the costs financially and in man years to the taxpayer to search for the information would be exorbitant.

3. If the long-range plans of the Department involve a change in land use where substandard facilities exist, the Department may offer to purchase the unexpired leasehold interest, if sufficient funds are available and if the acquisition has sufficient priority.

PUBLIC RELATIONS STAFF, DEPARTMENT OF DEFENCE PRODUCTION

Question No. 2,436—Mr. Robinson:

1. Does the Department of Defence Production have a public relations staff and, if so, how many?

2. What was the total cost of the public relations for the Department for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive?

Hon. James Richardson (Minister of Supply and Services): 1. The former Department of Defence Production is now part of the Department of Supply and Services. The Department of Supply and Services has no public relations staff as such. Relations with the public media are part of the regular duties performed by the Information Division of the Department.

2. Not applicable.

AIRPORTS—LAND OWNED BY GOVERNMENT

Question No. 2,512—Mr. Gilbert:

1. What amount of land (in acreage) is owned by the Government of Canada for the purpose of airports?

2. At what location and what amount?

3. What is the market value of such lands?

4. Is all land employed for use by the government or for the specific use of air transportation?

5. How much land at each location is used for other purposes?

6. What are the contractual arrangements for such use?

7. What is the government's remuneration as consideration for the use of those lands?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport):

1. Province	Area in Acreas
Alberta	16,828
British Columbia	41,313
Manitoba	12,228
New Brunswick	4,722
Newfoundland	90,963
Nova Scotia	4,981
Ontario	33,220
Prince Edward Island	470
Quebec	111,951
Saskatchewan	6,325
Yukon Territory	9,559
Northwest Territories	57,382
Total	389,942

2, 3, 5 and 6. The information requested is very extensive and it will be time consuming to prepare. If the questions were related to specific airports it could be made available quite readily.

4. When land is acquired for airport purposes it is sometimes necessary to purchase whole units of land for example, a whole farm where only a portion of the farm is required for airport purposes. This severance land is therefore surplus to airport requirements but is used for revenue purposes mainly through agricultural leases.

7. The total revenue earned from land rentals for the fiscal year 1967/68 was $822,-369. The land rental rate policy for land for commercial or industrial use at airports, with some exceptions, is calculated to earn interest on the market value of the land plus recovery of development costs plus an airport maintenance charge; and land for agricultural purposes is put out to tender periodically. At some airports land for commercial or industrial use is leased at standard rental rates established in accordance with a former land rental policy, but as leases come up for renewal their rental rates are brought in line with the existing policy.

TSAWWASSEN INDIAN BAND—ACQUISITION OF PROPERTY BY NATIONAL HARBOURS BOARD

Question No. 2,517—Mr. Rose:

1. What was the reason for the acquisition by the National Harbours Board from the Tsawwassen Indian Band of British Columbia of its property and/or rights?

2. Was there any consultation with the Tsawwassen Indian Band regarding this acquisition?

3. If so, what was the response of the Tsawwassen Indian Band?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): The National Harbours Board advises as follows: 1. Acquisition of thirteen acres from Indian Band was necessary for relocation of B.C. Hydro D.C. cable installation between lower mainland and Vancouver Island. B.C. Hydro had planned their installation of a highly specialized cable previous to the decision to develop Roberts Bank. The development of Roberts Bank necessitated that B.C. Hydro's plan be changed and the only practical alternative was through the Reserve.

2. There was very close and lengthy consultation with the Band respecting this acquisition both through their solicitor and by direct contact with Band officials.

3. Indian Band has accepted an arrangement arrived at through the negotiations mentioned above.

WAR SURPLUS GAS MASKS—BAN ON SALE

Question No. 2,527—Mr. Mather:

1. Is the Department of National Health and Welfare considering placing a ban on the sale of war surplus gas masks?

2. Has the Department received any representations from the Ontario Government regarding this matter?

3. If so, what was the Department's reply?

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of National Health and Welfare): 1. The Department of National Health and Welfare is consulting with other federal agencies with respect to the most appropriate means of controlling the sale of war surplus gas masks.

2. Yes.

3. The Department indicated that it was consulting with other federal agencies with respect to this problem.

SALE OF PICTON, ONT. AIR STATION

Question No. 2,533—Mr. Skoberg:

1. What was the government's selling price of the air station at Picton, Ontario to Piasecki Aircraft of Canada Limited?

2. Who are the chief executive officers of this company?

3. Was there a competitive tender for the purchase of this airport?

4. If so, who were the other bidders and what were their respective bids?

5. If not, what were the reasons for not requesting competitive tenders for the sale of this Airport?

Hon. James Richardson (Minister of Supply and Services): In so far as Crown Assets Disposal Corporation is concerned: 1. A portion of the Canadian Forces Base at Picton, Ontario was sold to Piasecki Aircraft of Canada Limited for the sum of $260,000.

2. Directors: Frank M. Piasecki, H. George S. Bain, Arthur J. Kania, H. J. Bird. Officers: Frank M. Piasecki, President; Arthur J. Kania, Secretary-Treasurer; Donald M. Myers, Vice-President; Ernest Summers, Vice-President; James W. Clopp, Vice-President.

3. No.

4. N/A.

5. About two years ago, Piasecki Aircraft Corporation of Philadelphia decided on the establishment of a Canadian based operation to develop a compound helicopter utilizing Canadian Pratt & Whitney engines and has since been looking for adequate existing facility for such a program. A Canadian subsidiary, Piasecki Aircraft of Canada Limited, was incorporated in March 1968. Upon representation that Picton Base appeared to meet the company's requirements in most respects, particularly timing, the Government, anxious to take advantage of the opportunity to introduce in Canada a major helicopter industrial plant with export potential and considering the adverse effect on the regional economy caused by the closing of the Picton Base, authorized CADC to enter into immediate negotiations with Piasecki Aircraft of Canada Limited on the basis of the appraised value.

DARTMOUTH, N.S., PUBLIC WHARF—DEVELOPMENT POLICY

Question No. 2,535—Mr. Forrestall:

What specific steps are now being taken by the government to formulate a development policy as referred to in the reply to Question No. 2,086, for the Dartmouth side of Halifax Harbour?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): The National Harbours Board advises as follows: Specific steps to formulate a development policy for the Dartmouth side of Halifax Harbour will depend on the outcome of consultations with local interests.

CROWN ASSETS DISPOSAL CORPORATION SALES

Question No. 2,541—Mr. Robinson:

1. What was the total revenue received from sales of Crown Assets Disposal Corporation in each of the years 1945 to 1968 inclusive?

2. What was the book value of the assets at the time of disposition to Crown Assets Disposal Corporation?

3. What percentage of the items were classified (a) obsolete (b) obsolescent?

Hon. James Richardson (Minister of Supply and Services): In so far as Crown Assets Disposal Corporation is concerned: 1. The total revenue received from the gross sales of Crown Assets Disposal Corporation in each of the years 1948 to 1968 inclusive is as follows: 1944-1945, $9,116,131.55; 1945-1946, $124,878,368.66; 1946-1947, $219,205,531.91; 1947-1948, $74,046,218.69; 1948-1949, $30,495,-341.87; 1949-1950, $11,650,550.30; 1950-1951, $20,770,555.12; 1951-1952, $3,864,777.40; 1952-1953, $4,311,238.51; 1953-1954, $4,330,310.47; 1954-1955, $5,578,069.36; 1955-1956, $6,727,-490.13; 1956-1957, $8,524,750.05; 1957-1958, $7,841,996.51; 1958-1959, $9,910,619.78; 1959-1960, $8,638,052.91; 1960-1961, $9,577,566.79; 1961-1962, $13,229,716.82; 1962-1963, $8,881,-212.97; 1963-1964, $11,239,647.39; 1964-1965, $17,267,031.33; 1965-1966, $16,368,882.28; 1966-1967, $25,861,947.15; 1967-1968, $14,790,114.43; 1968-1969, $15,239,067.54.

Questions

2. The book value of the assets declared surplus to the Corporation was never provided to the Corporation by the declaring departments. However, from the years 1965/66 on, in accordance with the recommendations of the Public Accounts Committee recorded in Votes and Proceedings No. 205 of December 7, 1964, departments and agencies report the cost, as recorded in their perpetual inventory accounting system, of (1) obsolete but serviceable and (2) surplus but serviceable material declared surplus. The latter information appears in the annual issue of the Public Accounts of Canada.

3. The Corporation does not maintain its records in such a manner as to provide this information.

CARIBOU, N.S.-WOOD ISLAND, P.E.I. FERRY TERMINAL FACILITIES

Question No. 2,552—Mr. MacEwan:

1. Is the government giving consideration to providing additional necessary facilities at the Ferry Terminals at Caribou, N.S. and Wood Island, P.E.I. for the Nova Scotia-P.E.I. Ferry Service?

2. If so, when is it expected that a decision will be reached?

3. Is consideration being given to the provision of a third ferry for the service?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): The Canadian Transport Commission advises as follows: 1. Additional terminal facilities are being provided at Wood Island, P.E.I. to be completed about mid-July. Provision of additional facilities at Caribou, N.S., await conclusion of forthcoming discussions with the Province.

2. See 1.

3. Yes.

KAISER JEEP CANADA LIMITED—POSITION UNDER AUTOMOTIVE PACT

Question No. 2,587—Mr. Broadbent:

1. Was Kaiser Jeep Canada Limited defined as a 'manufacturer' under the terms of the Canada-U.S. Automotive Pact?

2. For each year since 1960, what have been Kaiser Jeep Canada Limited's exports and imports of automotive products?

3. Since the Automotive Pact was signed in 1964, what has been the estimated loss in Canadian duties accorded to Kaiser Jeep Canada Limited?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): 1. Yes.

2. Detailed information on the internal affairs of each company participating in the automotive program is given to the Government on a regular basis. This information is confidential. Its public disclosure could be detrimental to the company concerned and adversely affect the flow of confidential information to the Government from other participants in the program.

3. There is every indication that Kaiser Jeep has fully complied with the terms of the automotive program allowing duty free flow of its Canadian made products into the U.S. and vice versa. There is, therefore, no estimated loss in Canadian duties accorded to this company.

KAMOURASKA, QUE.—C.M.H.C. LOANS, HOMES FOR AGED

Question No. 2,592—Mr. Dionne:

What was the total amount of loans granted by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation for the construction of homes for the aged in the federal constituency of Kamouraska in 1965, 1966, 1967 and 1968?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (Minister without Portfolio): The number and amount of loans approved by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation to Non-Profit Corporations under Section 16A of the National Housing Act to house elderly persons in the Kamouraska area for the period 1965 to 1968 is as follows.

Net NHA Loans Approved to Non-Profit Corporations Under Section 16A of the National Housing Act in the Kamouraska Area 1965–1968*

Period	New Housing				Existing Projects				Total
	Loans	Units	Hostel Beds	$000	Loans	Units	Hostel Beds	$000	Loans	Units	Hostel Beds	$000
1965.....	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
1966.....	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
1967.....	2	8	100	720	—	—	—	—	2	8	100	720
1968.....	1	5	38	313	—	—	—	—	1	5	38	313

*All activity to house elderly persons under the National Housing Act in Kamouraska area during the period 1965 to 1968 occurred under Section 16A. C.M.H.C. statistical data are not recorded on a constituency basis. The data contained in the above table approximate the activity in the constituency.

[Mr. Richardson.]

FEASIBILITY STUDY, BUILDING CONSTRUCTION IN FRANCE BY CANADIAN METHODS

Question No. 2,623—Mr. Orlikow:

1. Was there a competitive tender by the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce regarding the feasibility study on introducing Canadian timber-frame construction methods in France?

2. If so, what were the names of the bidders for this study?

3. If not, why was Campeau Corporation of Ottawa chosen for this study?

4. What financial amount was given to the Campeau Corporation for this feasibility study?

5. What were the results of this feasibility study?

6. What financial and other arrangements have been made with the Campeau Corporation as a result of this study?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): 1. No. This is a private enterprise project with Government assistance directed at increasing the export of Canadian building materials.

2. Not applicable.

3. The Canadian Home Manufacturers Association, whose members comprise prefabricated housing producers from across Canada, was asked to suggest representation on the Special Housing Study Mission to France, March 30 to April 6, 1968. Their selection included Campeau Corporation Limited of Ottawa. As a result of the Mission, Campeau Corporation Ltd. concluded that a project of this nature would be of interest to them if assistance from the Canadian Government could be obtained. In considering their request for assistance, the Department noted that Campeau Corporation Ltd. had the necessary expertise in major single family housing project developments and factory assembly of components, as well as a French-speaking capability for supervisory and labour training purposes. In these respects, they met the essential criteria suggested by the special mission.

4. The agreement with Campeau Corporation Ltd. covering the feasibility and information study provides for the payment of the costs of the study in an amount not to exceed $97,000.

5. The study, the results of which will be made available to Canadian home builders, is not yet complete. Findings to date support proceeding with five prototype houses to confirm these findings.

6. The Department is negotiating with Campeau Corporation Ltd. with respect to assistance to be provided for the construction of the five prototype houses for demonstration purposes, the amount of such assistance not to exceed $140,500.

WEATHER FORECASTING, SOUTHERN SASKATCHEWAN

Question No. 2,627—Mr. Southam:

1. Has the government studied the problem of weather forecasting in Southern Saskatchewan particularly with respect to the forecast for the higher altitudes and, if so, what are the results of such studies?

2. If such facilities are not available to assist farmers in accurately planning their day-to-day operations, on what date is it expected that such facilities will be available?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): 1. Yes.

2. In addition to facilities already in being, improvements planned for the area over the next two fiscal years include the installation of two new weather reporting stations and the expansion of the weather reporting program at Kindersley.

QUESTIONS PASSED AS ORDERS FOR RETURNS

GRAIN—AMOUNT SOLD AND PAYMENTS POSITIONS OF FOREIGN COUNTRIES

Question No. 2,196—Mr. Dionne:

1. What amount of wheat, oats and barley was harvested in Canada during the years 1966, 1967 and 1968?

2. How much of this grain was sold to mills in Canada during the same years and for what prices?

3. How much of this grain was sold to foreign countries during the same years and for what prices?

4. What was the amount paid by each of the purchasing countries during the same years?

5. Which of the countries purchasing wheat or other grain have not paid for their purchases to date, and what is the amount owed by each?

Return tabled.

DEFENCE PRODUCTION—COST OF INFORMATION SERVICE AND NUMBER OF PUBLICATIONS

Question No. 2,462—Mr. Robinson:

1. Does the Department of Defence Production provide an information service and, if so, what was the cost for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive?

2. How many publications and/or periodicals and/or information sheets and/or public releases were provided by the Department for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive and what was the cost for each publication for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive?

3. How many copies of each publication are provided and to whom are they distributed and how is the distribution effected?

Return tabled.

Increase in Bank of Canada Interest Rate

MOTION TO ADJOURN UNDER S.O. 26

FINANCE

INCREASE IN BANK OF CANADA INTEREST RATE

Mr. Max Saltsman (Waterloo): Mr. Speaker, I ask leave, seconded by the hon. member for York South (Mr. Lewis), to move the adjournment of the house under Standing Order 26 for the purpose of discussing a definite matter of urgent public importance, namely, the rise in the bank rate to 8 per cent announced yesterday by the Bank of Canada, which will have the effect of raising the interest rate and the cost of living to an unprecedented level and increasing the hardships to all those on fixed incomes.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member has given the Chair the notice required under the provisions of Standing Order 26. The problem raised by the hon. member for Waterloo is obviously an important one; it refers to a situation which is undoubtedly urgent. At the same time, I am sure it is a matter which is of continuing interest to all hon. members of the house.

As everyone knows, there has been a pattern of changing interest rates in recent months and from time to time announcements have been made by the Bank of Canada of alterations in the bank rate. The inevitable conclusion is that the problem is of continuing concern. As evidence of this the Chair need only refer to the fact that on June 25 the very matter referred to in the hon. member's motion was referred by the house to one of its standing committees for consideration. The order of the house reads as follows:

That the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs be empowered to consider the present level of interest rates in Canada and their relation both to rates in other countries and to economic conditions in Canada and elsewhere.

In this sense the matter is before a committee of the house. As I have said, the fact that the house has already been dealing with the situation for some time is an indication that we have here a problem which is of a continuing nature. In this sense I doubt very much that it falls within the purview of Standing Order 26. For these reasons I regret very much that it will not be possible at this time to put to the house the motion proposed by the hon. member for Waterloo.

[Mr. Robinson.]

[Translation]

MOTIONS FOR PAPERS

Mr. Yves Forest (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, notice of motion No. 256 is acceptable to the government.

[English]

MANPOWER TREND STUDIES

Motion No. 256—Mr. Orlikow:

That an Order of the House do issue for copies of the recent studies on manpower trends in Canada undertaken in the Department of Manpower and Immigration referred to by the Minister of Manpower and Immigration in his speech at Wolfville, Nova Scotia, on June 26, 1969.

Motion agreed to.

[Translation]

Mr. Forest: Mr. Speaker, would you be so kind as to call notices of motions Nos. 140, 206, 214, 255 and 257?

I ask, Mr. Speaker, that the remaining notices of motions be allowed to stand.

[English]

GUIDELINES ISSUED TO IMMIGRATION OFFICERS

Motion No. 140—Mr. MacDonald (Egmont):

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of all telegrams, correspondence and other documents received by the Prime Minister, Minister of Manpower and Immigration or the Secretary of State for External Affairs, with respect to the admissibility by the Government of Canada of deserters, draft dodgers or military personnel from any other country seeking immigration to this country and a copy of all instructions, regulations, guidelines or memoranda circulated by the Minister of Manpower and Immigration to departmental officials at Immigration centres respecting immigration to this country issued since January 1, 1967.

Mr. Gérard Loiselle (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Manpower and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Manpower and Immigration has no objection in principle to gathering together all the correspondence called for in the first part of this motion. However, the papers requested in the second part are directives circulated within the department from headquarters to field staff. It has not been the practice to make public such papers because of their confidential character. In view of this, perhaps the hon. gentleman would agree to withdraw his motion, because we accept the first part.

Mr. David MacDonald (Egmont): Mr. Speaker, since another motion of mine applies to the second part and it was put over for debate, I agree to the request of the parliamentary secretary.

Order discharged and motion withdrawn.

SALES TAX ON DRUGS

Motion No. 206—Mr. Saltsman:

That an Order of the House do issue for copies of any reports, reviews or studies of the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs regarding the removal of the federal sales tax on pharmaceuticals and drugs.

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the reports, reviews or studies referred to by the hon. member consist of working sheets and memoranda composed for internal use in the department and passing between officials and the minister. As such they are privileged documents, the production of which is contrary to public policy. In view of this, I ask the hon. member to withdraw his motion.

Mr. Max Saltsman (Waterloo): Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact the taxpayers of Canada made these concessions, I think these documents should be made public. Therefore I ask that the motion be transferred for debate.

Mr. Speaker: Is it agreed that the motion shall be transferred for debate pursuant to Standing Order 48?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

NATIONAL POSTAL ZONING CODE

Motion No. 214—Mr. Mather:

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of the interim study undertaken by one of the task forces in the Department of Communications regarding a national postal zoning code as referred to by the Minister of Communications in Hansard of June 9, page 9870.

Mr. Yves Forest (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Communications has asked me to refuse this motion on the grounds that the final report of the study to which reference has been made of a national postal code has not yet been received and that it is therefore not possible to determine at this time whether the publication of this report in whole or in part would be in the public interest. I therefore ask the hon. member to withdraw his motion.

Mr. Barry Mather (Surrey): Mr. Speaker, I accept the government's explanation and I withdraw the motion.

Order discharged and motion withdrawn.

MESSAGE FROM PRIME MINISTER TO GENERAL GOWON

Motion No. 255—Mr. Nystrom:

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of the message sent by the Prime Minister to General Gowan as mentioned on July 2, 1969, as reported in Hansard on page 10751.

Mr. Yves Forest (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, communications between heads of government are normally confidential and their contents not made public. In any case such action cannot be taken unilaterally. In the circumstances I ask the hon. member to withdraw his motion.

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Because of the importance of the matter, Mr. Speaker, I would like to transfer the motion for debate.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker: The motion is transferred for debate and placed on the order paper under the heading Notices of Motions (Papers), pursuant to the provisions of Standing Order 48(1).

[English]

PRELIMINARY STUDY, CONFLICT OF INTEREST LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS

Motion No. 257—Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre):

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of the preliminary study of existing legislation on conflict of interest provisions for Members of Parliament, the Senate and other public officials as referred to by the President of the Privy Council in a recent statement to the press.

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the documents in response to this motion are made up of internal studies prepared by members of my own staff, in addition to a study prepared by the research branch of the library. I would, of course, claim privilege in respect of my own internal documents, but if the hon. member is agreeable I would be prepared to table the study just mentioned in response to the motion.

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I will accept what is offered and then decide where to go from there.

Mr. Speaker: Subject to the reservations and conditions expressed by the minister, is it agreed that notice of motion No. 257 shall be deemed to have been adopted?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Speaker: Before calling oral questions, I would like to suggest to the house that we be allowed to return to motions. The hon. member for Lotbinière indicated by letter that he proposes to make a motion. Unfortunately we are moving with such speed and expeditiousness today—

[Translation]

—we have forgotten or lost the hon. member for Lotbinière (Mr. Fortin) en route. Therefore, we revert to motions to allow him to propose his motion.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

AGRICULTURE

MILK—REQUEST TO PRESENT MOTION THAT AGRICULTURE COMMITTEE STUDY HARMFUL EFFECTS OF CANADIAN DAIRY COMMISSION POLICY

Mr. André Fortin (Lotbinière): Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Pursuant to Standing Order 43, I am asking the unanimous consent of the house to move, seconded by the hon. member for Richmond (Mr. Beaudoin), the following motion:

That the standing committee on agriculture be immediately requested to inquire into the extremely harmful effects suffered by the milk producers of the Province of Quebec, in respect of deliveries above their quota set by the Canadian Dairy Commission, on which the witholding rate of 52 cents per cwt. of milk constitutes an unbearable penalty.

Mr. Speaker, without taking needlessly the time of the house and delaying its business, even if very often Créditistes are ahead, I should like to ask for the consent of my hon. colleagues in order to bring this question before the house, so that the hon. members from the province of Quebec will have the opportunity to bring forth the problems facing their constituents at the present time and the government to make known its policy with regard to the dairy industry.

Mr. Speaker, there is a serious problem. Dairy producers are penalized; they are taxed 52 cents per cwt. for milk for which they are not paid. Such a tax drives most of those producers to bankruptcy, as can be seen in the Canada Gazette.

• (2:20 p.m.)

I conclude my comments on this matter by expressing the hope that my colleagues from the province of Quebec, realizing the importance of the situation, will co-operate and try to bring their colleagues to give their unanimous consent so that the dairy producers of Quebec may be protected.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member has moved a motion under Standing Order 43 for which unanimous consent is required.

[English]

I therefore ask the house whether there is unanimous agreement to consider the problem referred to by the hon. member for Lotbinière.

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker: I regret to advise the hon. member that among the comments which have just been made, I have heard some negative ones and, under the circumstances, it will be impossible to proceed under Standing Order 43.

[English]

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

AGRICULTURE

REPRESENTATIONS BY CANADIAN FEDERATION OF AGRICULTURE RESPECTING ASSISTANCE TO WESTERN FARMERS—REQUEST FOR DEBATE

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Minister of Finance, in view of the urgency of the telegram sent to the minister and four of his colleagues today by the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, which referred to the disastrous income losses being suffered by western farmers and called for immediate and substantial action to be taken by the federal government by way of providing cash assistance, whether he would tell the house what reply is being given to the urgent representations made to the government in this telegram?

Hon. E. J. Benson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, apparently the Leader of the Opposition received the telegram before I did; I have not seen it yet.

An hon. Member: Go to your office.

Mr. Stanfield: Mr. Speaker, I am shocked that the minister does not know what is going on. May I redirect the question to the Acting Prime Minister; at least he must be aware of what is going on.

In light of the allegation by the Canadian Federation of Agriculture that the government has made no response to the proposals submitted by the Canadian Federation of Agriculture on May 28, almost two months ago, will the minister say what decision is being made in regard to their proposals of May 28 which are referred to in the telegram to which I have just alluded? Are the proposals still under consideration and, if so, when may we expect a statement?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition is quite correct. The proposals that were put forward by the Canadian Federation of Agriculture are still under consideration.

Mr. Stanfield: Mr. Speaker, in view of this situation may I direct a question to the genial President of the Privy Council. In light of the situation disclosed a few days ago by the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce and referred to in the telegram from the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, and in view of the emergency situation on the prairies, will the President of the Privy Council now agree to consult with the opposition parties in order that arrangements can be made to provide during the next few days one of the opposition allotted days so that special consideration can be given to the emergency at a time when the appropriate minister is in the house?

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, as I indicated yesterday, I would be glad to arrange for a discussion of this kind as soon as the rules debate is disposed of. If the hon. gentleman has any influence with his colleagues, perhaps he might persuade them to bring that matter to a head.

Mr. Stanfield: Mr. Speaker, I think it is preposterous that we cannot have a debate on this important subject.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Stanfield: With your co-operation, Mr. Speaker, I will meet the minister here tomorrow night at ten o'clock.

Mr. A. P. Gleave (Saskatoon-Biggar): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Acting Prime Minister. Since apparently no plans have been made to comply with requests of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, is the Prime Minister in the course of his western tour prepared to meet representatives of that organization?

Mr. Sharp: Mr. Speaker, it is my understanding that the Prime Minister will meet a number of companies and others who are members of the Federation of Agriculture. But his chief purpose in going out west is to meet the people of western Canada and not organized groups.

Mr. Diefenbaker: He is staying away from the people.

Mr. Gleave: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Is the government aware that in western Canada there are two substantial farm organizations, namely, the Canadian Federation of Agriculture and the National Farmers Union?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I do not think that supplementary is in order.

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Prince Albert): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Since members of the cabinet seem to take the attitude that the present situation in western Canada is one they may treat with jocularity and contempt—

Mr. McIlraith: Withdraw, withdraw!

Mr. Diefenbaker: You know better than that.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. McIlraith: Withdraw!

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps, with those introductory remarks, the right hon. gentleman might ask his question.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Now that it has been established that the cabinet does not hold that view I am hopeful of obtaining a favourable answer from the adamantine President of the Privy Council. Will he adjourn the debate on the rules so that something may be done to meet the serious situation on the prairies which has been cavalierly brushed aside by the government?

Inquiries of the Ministry

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): Mr. Speaker, if the right hon. member is seriously interested in the matter he will let the debate come to a vote. After that we could get on with the matter he raised.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Diefenbaker: So the farmers are not to be helped.

Mr. Bell: Merry Christmas! That's how long we will stay here.

FINANCE

INCREASE IN BANK OF CANADA INTEREST RATE

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Minister of Finance. Did the governor of the Bank of Canada consult him on the matter of raising the Bank of Canada's interest rate to 8 per cent? Has this step the government's approval and concurrence?

Hon. E. J. Benson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, of course the matter of the interest rate is a decision for the governor of the Bank of Canada, but I ought to indicate that I was consulted.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Since the chartered banks have often raised their commercial interest rates after the Bank of Canada has increased its rate, has the minister taken any steps to persuade the chartered banks not to raise their commercial interest rates inasmuch as there is no law requiring that there be a spread of one percentage point between the commercial and Bank of Canada rates?

Mr. Benson: Mr. Speaker, as the governor of the bank explained in his statement, the bank rate was raised primarily for external purposes. Interest rates prevailing in other parts of the world are so attractive that Canadian funds have been moving out to be invested in other parts of the world through swap deposits. This flow increased by some $180 million last week. To rectify the situation the governor of the Bank of Canada first of all requested that the banks maintain swap deposits only at their present level and, second, he increased the Bank of Canada rate to 8 per cent. I sincerely hope this does not mean that there will be an increase in the commercial prime rate which is now at 8½ per cent.

[Mr. Diefenbaker.]

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): While all hon. members share the pious hope of the Minister of Finance, what I am asking is whether he has had or intends to have any meetings with the representatives of the chartered banks in order to persuade them, by whatever means at his disposal, not to raise the commercial rate and not to use the increased rate of the Bank of Canada as an excuse for doing so as has been the case so often in the past?

Mr. Benson: Mr. Speaker, may I say that I do not direct the banks in respect of what rates they may charge and neither does the governor of the Bank of Canada, as he indicated in his testimony before a committee of this house. I do not see any occasion for an increase in the prime rate in these particular circumstances.

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, as I understood the minister, I believe he said the Bank of Canada rate was being raised because funds owned by Canadians were flowing out of the country. How does he think this step will be effective in retaining funds in Canada unless it is reflected in higher interest rates in Canada?

Mr. Benson: Mr. Speaker, swapped deposits, as my hon. friend will understand from the statement of the governor of the Bank of Canada, are carried out through the banks. The increase in the bank rate means it will cost the banks more to get money if they should turn to the Bank of Canada. The governor has also placed a ceiling on swapped deposits. The request of the governor of the Bank of Canada should discourage this outflow because interest rates are higher in other countries than in Canada.

Mr. Stanfield: Mr. Speaker, could the Minister of Finance indicate what effect the higher interest rates have had on the holdings of Canada Savings Bonds?

Mr. Benson: To date there have been no undue redemptions of Canada Savings Bonds. They are moving along relatively at the same rate as in the past.

[Translation]

Mr. Henry Latulippe (Compton): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance.

Could the minister tell us whether the Canadian constitution has been amended, and when, to give the governor of the Bank of Canada such powers to increase interest rates?

[English]

Mr. David Lewis (York South): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Minister of Finance along the line of the question asked by the Leader of the Opposition. In view of the fact that the minister in his reply indicated that unless the commercial bank rate is raised the effect on the outflow of funds is likely to be fairly small and, indeed, negligible, is it not more appropriate for the government and the governor of the Bank of Canada to take other steps to stop the outflow of funds by means of limited, discretionary foreign exchange controls rather than by starting the interest rates going up all over again?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. It seems to me the question is argumentative. It gives that appearance, but in view of its importance perhaps the minister might be allowed to reply.

Mr. Benson: We are not contemplating foreign exchange controls at the present time. I should say that our reserves are not being seriously depleted but a continuation of what was going on, as indicated in the swap deposits figures published by the Bank of Canada last week, would indicate that there is a problem which should be faced, and we have faced it.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, may I ask the minister what value there is to the people of Canada in starting a further upward hump in the interest rate if the effect on the outflow is likely to be negligible?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I think this supplementary is argumentative.

[Translation]

Mr. André Fortin (Lotbinière): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Minister of Finance.

In view of the fact that the governor of the Bank of Canada has decided to raise the discount rate and also that according to his statement the minister was not consulted in that regard, is the latter ready to tell us if he is willing to urge the Canadian chartered banks not to raise their interest rates?

[English]

Mr. Benson: Mr. Speaker, first of all I said I was consulted, not that I was not consulted, by the governor of the Bank of Canada. I previously indicated I would hope the chartered banks would not increase their prime rates.

[Translation]

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, I should like to address a supplementary question to the Minister of Finance.

I realize that the minister perhaps has not grasped my question. I was asking whether he intends to enter into discussions with the chartered banks to regulate the interest rates and prevent an increase.

Mr. Speaker: I suggest that the hon. member repeats a question that was asked a few moments ago.

Mr. Latulippe: Mr. Speaker, I also wish to ask a supplementary question.

Would the Minister of Finance tell the house whether foreign countries or this government should make decisions concerning the interest rate?

[English]

Mr. Max Saltsman (Waterloo): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Minister of Finance arising from this morning's report that bank loans are up by $221 million despite pressures from Ottawa. In light of the effect of the pressures from Ottawa, is the minister considering any additional steps to curtail the issuing of credit in Canada and to bring interest rates down?

Mr. Benson: I think the effect of the pressure from Ottawa is being and will be felt by the banks. The figures to which my hon. friend is referring are applicable, I believe, to a week or ten days ago, and this situation changes weekly.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Waterloo on a final supplementary.

Mr. Saltsman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Can the minister assure the house that he is preparing emergency measures to make sure that the interest rate does settle down if the spiral continues?

Mr. Speaker: I think I would have to rule that the question is hypothetical.

OLD AGE SECURITY

POSITION OF SEPARATED MARRIED COUPLES

Mr. P. B. Rynard (Simcoe North): Mr. Speaker, I should like to address this question to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. It has to do with the plight of thousands of married couples qualifying for the old age pension who have been separated for years but not legally. Because of their married status they do not qualify for full social benefits.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member might agree with me that this is a question of a very general scope and the type of question which normally would call for a statement on motions. I wonder whether the hon. member might like to qualify his question in this way.

Mr. Rynard: Mr. Speaker, as a supplementary question, may I ask the minister whether he will make a statement on motions in respect of this problem?

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, as I understand the question or statement made by the hon. member I do not believe a statement is required. This matter is under consideration for review and revision of the act.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

RESERVE FORCES—FURTHER DISCUSSIONS WITH CONFERENCE OF DEFENCE ASSOCIATIONS

Hon. J. A. MacLean (Malpeque): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Minister of National Defence whether he can assure the house that there will be further discussions, either by himself or by representatives of the department, with the Conference of Defence Associations before a final decision is taken with regard to the continuing strength of the reserve forces, especially the militia?

Hon. Léo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): Yes, Mr. Speaker. I indicated yesterday that we already had consulted with the Defence Associations. There is to be a further meeting or meetings some time in early August I believe. Discussions and negotiations will be continued with the Conference of Defence Associations.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

MAINLAND CHINA—PROGRESS IN NEGOTIATIONS REGARDING DIPLOMATIC RECOGNITION

Hon. George Hees (Prince Edward-Hastings): Mr. Speaker, this question is for the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Has he anything to pass on to the house regarding the progress being made in the conversations which have been going on in Stockholm for some time now regarding recognition of Communist China by this country?

[Mr. Rynard.]

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, toward the end of last week there were further discussions on the outstanding issues. I cannot really say anything more about them except that the negotiations are tough and may continue for some time.

Mr. Hees: Mr. Speaker, could the minister advise the house what advantages the government believes will accrue to Canada, if we are permitted to recognize Communist China, that will make up for the humiliation this country has succumbed to for the past eight months?

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. member will recognize that if the minister is to reply it should be on motions and not by way of a reply to a question.

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, probably the minister would be able to clarify the situation in connection with the negotiations going on with Mao's representatives. Has there been any indication given, as rumour has it, that the Communist government of Red China is prepared to accept recognition provided Taiwan is sacrificed, and will in compensation purchase additional wheat rather than purchasing wheat from Australia which does not recognize it?

Mr. Sharp: No, Mr. Speaker, as far as I know the question of wheat has never entered into the negotiations on recognition.

DRUGS

TETRACYCLINE—ALLEGED FRAUD BY U.S. COMPANIES IN OBTAINING PATENT

Mrs. Grace MacInnis (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs of which I have given him notice. In light of the fact that the United States government has filed a $25 million damage suit against American Cyanamid and Chas. Pfizer and Co. for fraudulently obtaining a patent for the antibiotic drug tetracycline, can the minister indicate whether his department is investigating if similar fraudulence has occurred in Canada in respect of the same companies?

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, following receipt of information about this officials will be getting in contact with United States officials to obtain more information than is available in the press reports. We will be following the course of the United States inquiries or investigations to determine whether there is any basis upon which to believe an investigation should be carried out in Canada. We need more information because of the fact there are a number of tetracycline patents in Canada and we do not know from United States reports which are involved.

CONSUMER AFFAIRS

WAGE INCREASE OBTAINED BY CARPENTERS AND JOINERS

Mr. Keith Hymmen (Kitchener): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs whether he is aware of a wage settlement announced in Toronto involving one segment of the building trades, namely, carpenters and joiners, providing for a 43 per cent wage increase over a period of less than two years? Is the Prices and Incomes Commission studying this settlement and will it investigate the inflationary aspect of this and other wage settlements?

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I am aware that there has been a substantial wage settlement although I am not certain of the precise percentage. I am also aware that there have been other very substantial wage and cost increases in respect of construction, which in turn are reflected in increased construction costs. I am sure this is a matter of concern to us all. The Prices and Incomes Commission which is independent will, I have no doubt, regard the construction industry as one of the key sectors of the economy. I am sure this is one of the areas in which it will have an interest.

Mr. Frank Howard (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Acting Prime Minister. Is he prepared to tell us whether that question is one of the hypocritical ones?

NATIONAL DEFENCE

SAC BOMBER SITES—POSSIBLE LOCATION IN CANADA

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask a question of the Minister of National Defence because it is suggested that he cannot tell the difference between a bomber and a fuel carrier. I do not believe this. I am wondering whether he will tell the house that the United States defence authorities have in fact made two distinct and separate requests in respect of dispersal of SAC sites and the renewal of the old agreement, or was there some misunderstanding involved in the answer the minister made yesterday?

Hon. Léo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I think the misunderstanding originates from the fact that the question was posed in this way:

> I wish to ask ... whether there has been any request or approach on the part of United States officials with regard to the possibility of dispersing SAC bomber sites and locating some of them in Canada?

My answer, of course, was a bit confused following that question. I said yes, because I could not say no, the SAC system comprising both bombers and tankers. The request we received was for a refuelling system for tankers in Canada.

An hon. Member: Mr. Speaker, I should like to—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I have some doubts whether this question ought not to have originally been placed on the order paper. Perhaps the whole question might be "sacked". In view of the fact the Leader of the Opposition has been allowed a supplementary question, perhaps the hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands ought to be allowed to pursue the matter.

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that the Pentagon has asked for refuelling bases in Canada, according to the minister's statement, I should like to ask what reason the Pentagon gave for reactivating an agreement which was rescinded in 1963?

Mr. Cadieux (Labelle): Mr. Speaker, I do not know that I am qualified to go into the reasons. This is part of an over-all dispersal plan because conditions have changed. The request made to the Canadian government is for the renewal of the agreement which existed then, with some difference to the extent that no aircraft will be permanently stationed on these bases, that the bases will be used only in case of an international crisis, and that the aircraft will fly from Canadian bases to carry out their assigned missions and return to their home bases on termination of the crisis. Peacetime operations would be held to test the operation. What is basically requested actually are landing strips, some facilities for the refuelling of aircraft, and parking areas. That is all that is requested.

Inquiries of the Ministry

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Does the request by the United States government involve the stationing of U.S. military personnel on Canadian soil, and will the program include not only a military alert but also tactical or strategic exercises?

Mr. Cadieux (Labelle): Mr. Speaker, whether exercises in a time of crisis would be called strategic exercises is not for me to determine. The request is that these bases would be used in time of international crises.

Mr. Stanfield: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, it is now clear that my questions of yesterday and today are of urgent public importance. Therefore I should like to ask the minister when the request was made by the United States and what answer the government of Canada proposes to make?

Mr. Cadieux (Labelle): First of all, Mr. Speaker, I have an indication that discussions took place through the permanent joint board and at different levels to reinstate the former agreement. They began about May, 1967. They have been going on ever since. I cannot indicate what the decision of the government will be because it has not been taken.

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact the agreement, as I recall it, was made during the period of my administration, is it a fact that what is being sought by the United States now merely involves changes and new conditions referred to by the minister? Is there any reason in the interests of Canada and the protection of this country for not acceding to the request so long as our sovereignty is maintained?

Mr. Cadieux (Labelle): If I were permitted to express a personal opinion I would agree with the right hon. gentleman.

Mr. Speaker: I understand the hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands has a supplementary question, following which I will recognize the hon. member for Edmonton West.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): The minister answered only the latter part of my question. I also asked him whether or not the request of the Pentagon involved the stationing of United States military personnel on Canadian soil?

Mr. Diefenbaker: What would be wrong with that?

[Mr. Cadieux (Labelle).]

Mr. Cadieux (Labelle): Mr. Speaker, I think one of the provisions, if I remember correctly, involves United States personnel for training, if some arrangement has been made with the Canadian authorities. My understanding is that these personnel would be flown in with the operation itself in the event of an international crisis.

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Speaker, in light of Canada's difficulty in obtaining tanker refuelling planes for our CF-5's, would one of the considerations be having available on Canadian soil K-135 tankers with the refuelling capacity necessary for our aircraft in order to make them operationally possible?

Mr. Cadieux (Labelle): The tanker to which my hon. friend has referred is actually one that we are considering.

CANADA PENSION PLAN

EXEMPTION OF OLD ORDER MENNONITES

Mr. Max Saltsman (Waterloo): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct my question to the Minister of National Health and Welfare.

An hon. Member: He has been out looking for a cigarette.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Saltsman: It is in connection with a reply he gave me during the adjournment debate regarding the exemption of Mennonites from the Canada Pension Plan. At that time the minister indicated he would discuss this matter with the cabinet. Has he discussed it with them and, if so, what conclusions have been reached?

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, this matter is under consideration by the government at the present time. No decision has yet been reached.

Mr. Stanfield: Like everything else.

Mr. Saltsman: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Could the minister give us some indication when a decision will be reached? Will it be before parliament adjourns?

Mr. Munro: Possibly some time in the next few weeks, Mr. Speaker.

Inquiries of the Ministry

NATIONAL DEFENCE

PRESENCE OF SOVIET VESSEL OFF QUEEN CHARLOTTE ISLANDS

Mr. David Anderson (Esquimalt-Saanich): Mr. Speaker, my question is supplementary to the previous line of questioning directed to the Minister of National Defence with regard to the subject of foreign personnel on or near Canadian territory. Has the minister had any reports of a Soviet vessel, allegedly on an oceanographic survey, which has been anchored off the Queen Charlotte Islands for some days during the past week, and have units of the Canadian defence forces been maintaining surveillance of this vessel?

Hon. Léo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I believe the Secretary of State for External Affairs probably has more information on this matter than I have. All I know is that the Canadian forces are maintaining surveillance of the ship. This is just a normal operation for the forces. We understand that the ship is outside our limits on the west coast, and therefore it does not present any security problem.

AIR CANADA

EFFECT OF WORK TO RULE ANNOUNCEMENT BY CANADIAN AIRLINE EMPLOYEES ASSOCIATION

Mr. Lloyd R. Crouse (South Shore): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the congenial Minister of Transport. Has the minister any statement to make on the effect the Canadian Airline Employees Association announcement of working to rule as of 6 a.m. today will have on Canada's major air line at the height of our tourist season?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): No, Mr. Speaker, I have no definitive statement on that matter at the moment. We do not really know what the ramifications will be or just how effective the working to rule will be. We are looking into the question in order to ascertain what we can do to alleviate the difficulty which may be experienced by the travelling public, but I do not have anything specific to say at this time.

Mr. Thomas M. Bell (Saint John-Lancaster): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the minister. Now that Premier Smallwood has decided to remain as Liberal leader in Newfoundland, will the minister now be able to devote full time to his duties?

TRANSPORT

RAILWAYS—MAINTENANCE OF PASSENGER SERVICE STANDARD

Mr. Lincoln M. Alexander (Hamilton West): Mr. Speaker, my question is related to one already asked and has to do with tourists during the peak of the summer season. Is the minister now in a position to reply to the question directed to him earlier regarding the lack of service on Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, the problem is that there are two periods each summer, early July and early September, when there is an extremely heavy load on and demand for the transcontinental trains. To cope with that additional load and at the same time provide for the normal over the year traffic would require a great deal of extra, new equipment. The alternative is to put back into service old equipment. This generally results in complaints by the travelling public. The peak seems to be over for the start of this summer but the problem will arise later in the year. I believe the railways would be prepared to put on some of the older equipment if the public understands that the service will not be up to the normal level.

Mr. Alexander: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Can the minister assure the house that he will take back to the railway officials the suggestion that notwithstanding the fact there may be some objection to old rolling stock being used this can be done to alleviate the situation, and would he have the railways advertise this fact to the travelling public?

Mr. Jamieson: Yes, Mr. Speaker, that is the nature of the representation I propose to make to the railways.

EXTERNAL AID

BIAFRA—REPLY TO CANADIAN OFFER TO PROVIDE NEUTRAL RELIEF FLIGHT OBSERVERS

Mr. Andrew Brewin (Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, the Acting Prime Minister today tabled a communication from the High Commissioner in Lagos, presumably referring to a Canadian offer to provide inspectors for mercy flights. Will he tell the house whether the High Commissioner's communication indicates that the Nigerian federal government is willing to accept the Canadian proposal without crippling conditions?

Inquiries of the Ministry

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, perhaps I ought to correct the first part of the statement made by the hon. member. What I tabled today was in response to a question from the hon. member for York South. He asked me to table a report we had received about the statement alleged to have been made by Brigadier Hamilton, which has nothing to do with this question.

In answer to the hon. member's question, we have had no direct response. We do understand, however, that the conversations now going on between the International Red Cross and the government in Lagos are proceeding on a somewhat better basis. Conditions have improved to some extent, and we are still hoping for the best.

CAPE BRETON DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION

CLAIMS OF DOMINION COAL COMPANY SHAREHOLDERS

Mr. Robert Muir (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion. I have given him notice of it. It is prompted by a statement by a Mr. Charles MacCulloch with reference to the takeover by the government, through the Cape Breton Development Corporation, of Dominion Coal Company. Mr. MacCulloch is quoted as saying:

> We feel the government has been dragging its feet on the matter, and quite deliberately, so we're prepared to take it to court.

I ask the minister whether this assertion is correct. I ask, in addition, whether this corporation has in the past ever dragged its feet or evaded its responsibilities?

Hon. Jean Marchand (Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I have been advised by the Department of Justice that they are still assessing the properties of Dominion Coal Company and there have been no undue delays. Of course, the government is not ready to accept all the claims made by the shareholders. If they want to take this matter to court, it is up to them, but we will not accept any threat from Dominion Coal.

COMMUNICATIONS

COMPLAINTS RESPECTING DELAYS IN TRANSMISSION OF TELEGRAMS AND CABLES

Mr. Heath Macquarrie (Hillsborough): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. It is prompted by widespread complaints, especially from the Toronto area, concerning excessive delays in the transmission of telegrams and cables by the C.N.-C.P. group. Will the minister, through the C.N. or otherwise, undertake to have this obviously serious matter investigated?

[Mr. Brewin.]

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): Yes, Mr. Speaker.

INDIAN AFFAIRS

WESTERN RESERVES—INQUIRY AS TO VISIT BY PRIME MINISTER

Mr. R. N. Thompson (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Acting Prime Minister. In view of the fact that the Prime Minister did not include in his formal western itinerary a visit to even a single Indian reservation, would the Acting Prime Minister inform the house whether the itinerary has been adjusted to include such a visit in order that the Indian people may meet with the Prime Minister and, if not, why not?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, my recollection from what I have seen of the Prime Minister's itinerary is that he is getting the views of the Indian people directly from the Indians.

AIR TRANSPORT

SUGGESTED FLIGHT SAFETY COMMITTEE—AUTHORIZATION OF FUNDS

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Dartmouth-Halifax East): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Transport. Is he in a position to answer my questions taken as notice yesterday? To be precise, can the minister say what reply has been made to the Canadian Airline Pilots Association brief, which suggested that a national flight safety committee should be established? Can the minister also say whether the Department of Transport has any plans to form a flight safety committee, either internally or at the external, national level?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I will be meeting with the pilots association within a short time. With regard to the question of a flight safety committee, if it turns out to be the most appropriate forum with which to achieve the results the pilots are advocating, we will be quite prepared to consider it. I hope we can resolve this matter satisfactorily in a short time. Incidentally, the hon. member did not reiterate the question asked yesterday with regard to whether there are financial considerations. There are none.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I should like to remind hon. members that we have only two or three minutes before the end of the question period. Therefore I ask the co-operation of hon. members in asking short questions and making short replies.

CONSUMER AFFAIRS

NEWSPRINT—INVESTIGATION INTO PRICING POLICIES

Mr. John Gilbert (Broadview): Mr. Speaker, last Thursday I asked the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs whether he had been informed that an investigation had been made by the United States Department of Justice into the paper industry. The minister replied that he had heard of a grand jury hearing in New York. I now ask the minister whether he has a report to make in this respect.

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I have made further inquiries, as I told the hon. member privately, and have every reason to believe that the answer I gave on Thursday last was correct. I am informed that a subpoena was issued by the United States Department of Justice against Domtar Incorporated, which is a United States company, and that no subpoena was issued against the Canadian company.

CRIMINAL CODE

PROCLAMATION OF AMENDMENTS

Mr. Robert McCleave (Halifax-East Hants): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Justice. I have given him notice of it. Can the minister advise when he proposes to have the omnibus Criminal Code amendments proclaimed, and will they all be proclaimed at once or at different times?

Hon. John N. Turner (Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, I thank the hon. member for giving me notice of this question. Section 11 of the amendments to the Criminal Code relating to race tracks under the jurisdiction of the Minister of Agriculture was proclaimed by Order in Council June 27, taking effect on July 1. Aside from that, we hope to proclaim the major part of the Criminal Code amendments some time in August. We have had discussions with the Attorneys General of all provinces relating to certain aspects of the amendments which will involve the administrative responsibilities of the provinces. I refer particularly to the drinking and driving aspects of the amendments, the licensing of firearms, licensing of lotteries and some other matters. When the Order in Council is passed I will ensure that the Canadian people and the law enforcement officers across the country receive ample notice of the proclamation of this bill.

AGRICULTURE

REQUEST FOR DEBATE ON CRISIS IN WESTERN CANADA

Mr. Donald MacInnis (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker I wish to direct a question to the Acting Prime Minister. In view of the fact that the Prime Minister has given a much higher priority to western Canada than to the rules debate, will the government and the Acting Prime Minister support the Prime Minister by allowing an emergency debate on the crisis in western Canada?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Acting Prime Minister): If the hon. gentleman agreed with my colleague the government house leader, he would bring the rules debate to a vote and we could then go on with other urgent business.

Mr. MacInnis: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Does the Acting Prime Minister not recognize the fact I am agreeing with the Prime Minister and am asking for support for him?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

PROCEDURE AND ORGANIZATION

MOTION FOR CONCURRENCE IN THIRD REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

The house resumed, from Tuesday, July 15, consideration of the motion of Mr. Blair that the third report of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization presented to the house on Friday, June 20, 1969, be concurred in, and the amendment thereto of Mr. Baldwin (p. 10963).

[Translation]

Hon. Théogène Ricard (Saint-Hyacinthe): Mr. Speaker, for the next few minutes, I would like to call the attention of the house to the fact that the proposal of the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald) concerning rule 75c meets neither the views of the hon. members of the opposition nor those of the people. Indeed public opinion is beginning to realize that hon. members of the opposition are absolutely right.

We are receiving from all over messages encouraging us to continue the fight, and to attempt to make the government understand the soundness of our claims which are, for all practical purposes, those of the Canadian people.

Several dailies have even published articles dealing with the proposal of the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald). I have here an article written by Claude Ryan, in yesterday's Le Devoir, dealing with the proposed rule 75c. It is interesting to note that Mr. Claude Ryan is in complete agreement with the opposition in regard to the proposal of the President of the Privy Council, and in my view he is even encouraging the opposition to keep on fighting.

Here is what Mr. Claude Ryan said in his editorial of July 15, and I quote:

Further to his strong statement made on this subject in the House of Commons last Thursday, Mr. Robert Stanfield reiterated yesterday his firm determination to fight to the finish against the proposed changes to the Standing Orders, which appear on this page.

The debate on that matter has taken up a good part of the time of the house for some fifteen days. Now, it is obvious that the new proposal (especially rule 75c) is only a finer redrafting of another proposal—rule 16A—which incurred last December the proper censure of parliament and public opinion. Consequently, it deserves exactly the same fate as its unfortunate predecessor.

Mr. Claude Ryan is unequivocally blaming the new attempt of the President of the Privy Council who would like to reinstate standing order 16A repudiated last December.

Further, in his editorial, Mr. Claude Ryan stated, and I quote:

—Let us note by the way that standing order 75B rests on the principle of agreements reached "by a majority of the representatives of the several parties" and does not provide any special status for the government party. Was it done on purpose or was it an oversight on the part of the government? Anyway, the leader of the government in the house, Mr. Donald Macdonald, has made in this connection an intolerable misuse of authority by trying, through a government motion, to alter the text of the rule in obvious contempt of the will of one of the house committees. Last Tuesday, Mr. Macdonald was forced to yield on that point and he had to give priority to the committee report. But his attitude showed in an alarming way how he considers relations between the government and the house.

[Mr. Ricard.]

Mr. Speaker, opposition members are not the only ones to criticize the approach of the President of the Privy Council, and to think that he is being arrogant; newspapermen are also beginning to believe that we are right and they support us in our present campaign. I continue the quotation:

Notwithstanding their objective value, proposed Standing Orders 75A and 75B unfortunately lose all their meaning when flanked by rule 75c which derives from a very different inspiration.

The first two rules are based on the principle of the fundamental equality of the parties concerned and of their ability to agree freely on procedural matters.

• (3:10 p.m.)

Rule 75c, on the contrary, proceeds from the philosophy of arbitration by an authority, which, in that case, is nothing else than the majority party. That looks like, as stated in the house by Mr. Knowles, a negotiation in which one of the parties, while recognizing itself equal to the others, would secure the right of being able to impose on them compulsory arbitration.

This is what Mr. Claude Ryan, an editorialist whose competence is acknowledged throughout the country, thinks of the proposal of the President of the Privy Council.

In his article, Mr. Ryan writes also the following:

Beyond the stands that are opposed, a further matter is of interest. Why did the government choose to revive at this time a proposal which was clearly defeated in December last and which since that time has made no progress in the public opinion?

One argument could have justified the government's attitude, the one he would have had if these last months the opposition parties had indulged in sterile filibustering. But according to numerous observers, it is the opposite which took place. Thanks to the reasonable co-operation of the various parties, the Commons have been operating at a much improved speed for the last few months. In many case, there was agreement to limit considerably the duration of certain debates.

Not only are we the only ones, Mr. Speaker, to be able to say that we reached agreement, but many newspapers recognize that fact. In general, they admit that under our leader (Mr. Stanfield), we have given much proof of our sincere desire to improve and speed up the way things are done in the house. As members of the opposition in this house, we have a mandate and an obligation towards the population.

We do not make representations to the house only in the interest of the opposition, but because we are much concerned with the best interests of the Canadian people. I think it is high time for the hon. members opposite, for the government and for the members of the Privy Council to stop being as arrogant as they have been up to now and to understand at last that what we are asking for is quite reasonable.

We will not suffer being reduced to silence by the wishes of a couple of ministers. We do not want the public to be deprived of their voice in the House of Commons through their representatives, which, Mr. Speaker, does not apply to opposition members alone. As a matter of fact, while silencing opposition members, the measure will have the same effect on hon. members opposite. I do not understand the fact that the backbenchers on the other side of the house do not have anything to say on occasion to safeguard their constituents' interests.

I appeal to my friends opposite, the backbenchers. I plead with them to do everything they can to make the frontbenchers of their party understand that the national interest is at stake, that the best interests of democracy are at stake, so that we may, in the house, at any time, express the aspirations of our constituents.

Mr. Ryan also said, and I quote:

The government, therefore, did not have, during this session, any serious reasons to complain against obstructionists tactics from the opposition parties.

As a matter of fact, there was only one such case, and that was the omnibus bill, of which the members of the Ralliement créditiste unduly delayed passage. But that case does not, by itself, justify introducing a rule such as 75c.

The government could have taken advantage of the favourable conditions prevailing to increase co-operation between the free men who make up Parliament. Instead, it chose to propose a rule which would have the effect of changing parliament into a college. Unacceptable in principle, such an attitude betrays, in practice, a deplorable disregard for the human factor, without which the most promising technical schemes are doomed to failure.

Hon. members across the floor would be well-advised to give to those comments all the consideration required, having regard to the gravity of the situation.

Since we are short of time, let me only mention the title of some other articles that have been published concerning the proposed motion of the President of the Privy Council.

In the Montréal-Matin of Thursday, July 10, Mr. Clément Brown, in an article entitled "Unfortunate Stubbornness" said that the Trudeau government will not increase its prestige by forcing adoption of said 75c.

And in the Ottawa Citizen of July 4, one could read an article under this heading:

[English]

"Rights imperilled. Closure rule is too drastic".

[Translation]

In The Gazette, on July 14, there was this heading:

[English]

"Compromise needed in rules debate".

[Translation]

And in that article one could read the following paragraph:

[English]

The government would be unwise to insist on its proposed rule 75c. If this rule is adopted, it would give any government with a majority the power to limit debate at any time. This is a drastic power. And it is needless.

[Translation]

Further, one could read and I quote:

[English]

If the government is really seeking the power to limit debates, surely rule 75B would be sufficient. Why proceed to the still more drastic provisions of rule 75c?

• (3:20 p.m.)

[Translation]

I repeat, Mr. Speaker, that we are only asking for something reasonable. We are asking for the possibility to make ourselves heard as often as circumstances compel us to do so, as representatives of the people, in order to express their views.

I do hope that members opposite will take in hand the destiny of this parliament and will not do anything to reduce the importance of the debates in this house. If hon. members are to be deprived of their right to speak, under Standing Order 75c, this will be a very sad day indeed. Such a day will come when the government because it has the majority, reduces to silence the representatives of the people.

I hope that hon. members—the new-comers especially—on the other side of the house will join us and oppose the voice of reason to the arrogance of those who sit in the front benches of the Liberal party.

[English]

Mr. Lloyd Francis (Ottawa West): Mr. Speaker, about two days ago one speaker on the other side of the house who is here now, the hon. member for Prince Edward-Hastings (Mr. Hees), indicated that one of the reforms that might be very effective in this house would be a reduction in the time used to make speeches. Certainly I, along with other members of the house, was very interested in this aspect of his remarks. This speech was one of the most absorbing that I have heard from him. Incidentally, I noted at the time that he took 40 minutes to convey that message. I will undertake to say what I have to say today in a shorter period of time.

During the period 1962 to 1968, the government of Canada was formed by a minority party in this house. During this period many changes were made in the practices and procedures of the house. In many respects the proposal that we have before us today is a product of the developments during a long period of minority government. Instead of two major parties we now have four parties. The key to the proposed rules changes that are before us, I contend, is the substitution of a new doctrine, the doctrine of equality of parties for that of equality of members.

The objective of rules changes that must be made and are being made in this house, Mr. Speaker, must be to strike a careful balance between the very necessary right of the opposition to call to the attention of the public any possible errors, mistakes or unwise provisions in government legislation, and the undoubted right of the majority to bring its measures before the house and have a decision made within a reasonable period of time.

Mr. Gilbert: No one has been stopping the government.

Mr. Francis: The issue before us clearly and simply is one of programming government business. Our Committee on Procedure and Organization was instructed by this house on December 20 last to consider again a rule which had been brought forward in the form of 16A. A number of objections were taken by hon. members of the house at that time. The rules were considered in committee and the committee report contained a proposal for three separate rules.

The first of these, 75A, provides that when there is agreement among all the parties in this house, a motion to allot time may be moved. Rule 75B carries this one step further. It provides that when a majority of three of the four parties represented in this house, including that of the government—since obviously a minister of the government will be proposing the motion—have come to an agreement a motion for time allocation may be placed before the house. These two rules work on the basis of agreement. Where there is agreement, an order to limit debate may follow.

The reason for the prolongation of this debate arises as a result of the government's concern that proposed rules 75A and 75B, without adequate safeguards, would lead to the denial of the principle that the majority under democracy has a right to put its measures before the house for decision and have the decision made within a reasonable period of time. Why is rule 75C needed, Mr. Speaker? I should like to make three basic points at this time, but of course I shall offer little that is new since, in a debate that has gone on this long, most points have been fully covered.

People say, for example, that we have rule 33, the closure rule. Why do we not use it? My simple answer is to point to what happened during the report stage when the Criminal Code amendment was before the house. Under the new rules of the House of Commons there is unlimited right to amend at the report stage of a bill, and properly so. Originally 44 amendments were proposed, being consolidated to 30 after Mr. Speaker had made his rulings. Application of the closure rule would have meant that each amendment would have had to be considered for closure, an obvious impossibility under the circumstances since it would involve a disproportionate amount of the time of the house. Those amendments were introduced as a result of the change in committee procedure which permits an unlimited number of amendments to be adopted for consideration at the report stage in the house. Under those circumstances, the application of the closure rule would have been almost impossible. The simple application of closure will not serve as a means of allocating time effectively.

We then come to the other situation to which the government takes exception. The representatives of the N.D.P. on the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization argued their case in this regard very effectively. Section 49 of the British North America Act says that questions arising in the House of Commons shall be decided by a majority of voices. I, and hon. members on this side of the house, contend that rules 75A and 75B alone, and without any further safeguards, would veto the ability of the government, even if it had the support of the official opposition party, to bring measures before the house and have them dealt with within a reasonable period of time. If one of the two smaller parties in this house digs in on any important question, the other small party will be in an absolutely key position. It will be in possession of a veto because of its right to unlimited filibuster. That is the basic defect of having rules 75A and 75B stand alone, without additional safeguards.

I hear hon. members on the other side saying, "But this has been a very reasonable parliament up to this point." Perhaps hon. members are not quite so reasonable now, after the somewhat protracted debate. As I say, if one of the two parties in this house digs in its heels, it will give the other small party the power to veto and thwart the will of the democratically elected majority of the House of Commons.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): And just what have we thwarted?

Mr. Francis: The hon. member for Fundy-Royal (Mr. Fairweather) said in effect, at page 10987 of Hansard, that there is nothing left on the order paper and that everything that had to be done has been done.

I have been looking at the order paper, Mr. Speaker, and I see there item 61, second reading and reference to the Standing Committee on Broadcasting, Films and Assistance to the Arts of Bill C-179, to do with broadcasting. The hon. member for Fundy-Royal said the minister is not prepared to move forward with this item. He is mistaken. The minister would be only too delighted to move ahead with this legislation.

Mr. Peters: Go ahead. We will not stop you.

Mr. Francis: I think hon. members of this house will agree that for a long time items have been left on the order paper.

An hon. Member: We will pass that one.

Mr. Francis: I am looking at item 80, second reading and reference to the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs of Bill C-198, an act to amend the Canada Corporations Act and other statutory provisions related to the subject matter of certain of those amendments. I know the hon. member for Fundy-Royal will disagree with me, since he said the minister is not prepared to proceed with this, but the minister is. Underneath that is item 81, which is very important. This relates to Bill C-200, an act respecting the expropriation of land. The matter is to be referred to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs, and it is on the order paper because this house has not yet seen fit to deal with it. Then, there is item 85 in the name of the Minister of Finance, items Nos. 87 and 88 also in the name of the Minister of Finance, and a number of other items which represent efforts to reform private members hour and to provide for a means of disposing of cases which have merit. It has been very difficult to get these matters referred to committees. They stay on the order paper and are not dealt with.

Then we have item 92 in the name of the Minister of Justice. This item relates to a bill to amend the Criminal Code and deals with hate literature. Does the hon. member for Fundy-Royal say that legislation dealing with hate literature is of no consequence and the fact that it has not been dealt with in this session does not matter?

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Will the hon. member permit a question. Since the government may call any item it chooses when Mr. Speaker calls orders of the day, will the hon. member explain why the government would sooner indulge in this protracted debate than call these important items?

Mr. Francis: Mr. Speaker, I will answer that question by developing my argument. Item No. 96 relates to a bill respecting investment companies. Neither items 97 nor 98 have been acted upon. Unless the rules are amended there will be at all times, as the government develops its program and as the house extends its sittings, measures on the order paper to be brought forward. There is a need to deal with these items and a need to come to grips with the government's program. If rules 75A and 75B were allowed to stand alone, without adequate safeguards, either of the small opposition parties would have the power of veto to thwart the rights of the democratically elected majority.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Who vetoed the pensions of retired civil servants?

• (3:30 p.m.)

[Translation]

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. Does the hon. member for Lotbinière wish to ask a question or raise a point of order?

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, I would like to put a question to the hon. member, with his permission.

Since the legislative program, according to the hon. member for Ottawa West, is very heavy, does he not agree that the government should impose Standing Order 33, which is of the same nature as rule 75c, so that we can put an end to this futile debate and move on to the legislative program?

Mr. Francis: Mr. Speaker, the government is obliged to present to the house the legislation we have to adopt. But to make sure that we can pass laws, I believe we must first settle the problem concerning the rules of the house.

[English]

The basic problem is allocation of time. One of the other devices available to hon. members of the opposition under the new rules we have adopted as we are moving forward to that careful balance between the rights of the opposition and the rights of the government is the use of alloted days for the opposition. There are 25 of these days now provided during a session. Hon. members of the opposition are perfectly free to choose the subjects for debate on these days. Therefore, if they feel there is any abuse or any provision of any legislation which in their opinion should not be passed or has been wrongly presented to the house, or if they feel any measure is being adopted which in their opinion is not in the public interest, they have this additional means by which they can bring about a debate in the House of Commons in order to focus the attention of the public, the newspapers and all the organs of public opinion on these questions. They have this means of safeguarding democratic rights.

Mr. Barnett: Mr. Speaker, if the hon. member would permit a question I should like to ask whether in fact the allotted days are a substitute for the old supply motion opportunities of the opposition rather than additional opportunities as he suggested.

Mr. Francis: Mr. Speaker, I have had a number of questions from the other side of the house which raise fundamental problems which are not easily or quickly answerable by anyone in this house. In attempting to establish new rules there is a desire to balance two things, the rights of the opposition and the rights of the government. The opposition should have the right to bring matters to the attention of the newspapers and the public which they think are wrong or are against the public interest. Against this, we must adopt measures to expedite the handling of government business and permit some reasonable allocation of time.

Among the innovations are the supply motions, the reference of estimates to the committee and the debate in committee instead of in the house. It is for hon. members to judge the extent to which these innovations are successful. We might note that in other houses, such as the Mother of Parliaments at Westminster supply is not even referred to committee any more. I believe it is just a matter of tabling and no debate. If the hon. member for Comox-Alberni (Mr. Barnett) is of the opinion that something has been lost by way of democratic rights in this house, there are avenues open to him to express his opinion and seek to convince other members of this house.

Our rules are changing. We are seeking to balance the obligations of the government to program time against the democratic rights of the opposition in the house. In my opinion, and in the opinion of hon. members on this side of the house, the combination of 75A and 75B is not a sufficient safeguard for a government or for that matter for a party which has a reasonable prospect of having that obligation. These two rules if adopted in their present form in my opinion suffer from a grave difficulty. If one of the opposition parties should object to any one government measure it could place the other two opposition parties in a key position, the control of the house. In the two smaller opposition parties there are 36 members combined. I do not believe that a group that size, as opposed to the 226 members in the other two parties, should have the opportunity to veto and hold up government business. This opportunity should not be granted and, in my opinion, should not be encompassed in the rules of this house.

Mr. Barnett: Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct another question to the hon. member. I wonder whether in effect he is suggesting that if agreement were reached to drop from the proposed Standing Orders 75B he would also agree to the dropping of 75C which would leave only 75A.

Mr. Francis: Mr. Speaker, I am sure there are matters which could be discussed along the lines the hon. member has suggested. However, I am not able to say what the position of the party to which I belong would be.

Mr. P. B. Rynard (Simcoe North): Mr. Speaker, I rise to take part in this debate because there are members here who are willing to sacrifice their summer holidays for the principles of democracy and freedom. They will continue to do so, and either they will win or remain here all summer. We find that in the dying days of this session, after the Prime Minister's (Mr. Trudeau) timetable had been met, all at once we are told this closure clause, rule 75C, is to be brought in without any reason or excuse. Mr. Speaker, the government has no legislation of any kind before this house except the closure rule, 75c. There is no urgent legislation waiting, because the time of adjournment had been set by agreement.

I am amazed at the audacity of the government. What is their purpose? What is the motive behind this? The government set the time for the adjournment of the house and then turned around and brought in this joker, closure, thinking they had a submissive parliament. I think they are beginning now to realize they do not have a submissive parliament. I wonder what the Prime Minister wants now. Last December, as pointed out very ably by the Leader of the Opposition, (Mr. Stanfield), the leader of the N.D.P. and the leader of the Créditiste, when clause 16A was being considered there were many procedural changes adopted to speed up the work of the house. At that time the government brought in this joker clause. We did not go for it in December and we will not go for it in July. I wonder what the purpose is behind this, because last December the Prime Minister said he did not expect the joker clause to be adopted in any event, but that he wanted to get the other clauses through. That was the lever he used. What is the sinister purpose now? He has not taken parliament into his confidence. What can we expect?

• (3:40 p.m.)

People are getting upset and alarmed about this attempted change. Did he think this was a good time to attempt this change, when United States astronauts are going to land on the moon, and when hundreds of thousands of people are at their summer cottages, not seeing newspapers or watching the news media? Was that his thought, and is that what is behind this? What measure does he expect to bring in, respecting which he intends to use this sinister clause? That is the whole crux of the matter. How can we trust him? Even the students at universities are alarmed. They do not believe in this rule. I have here the Ottawa Journal for today, July 16, in which it is stated:

> Two University of Ottawa students' council executives have mounted a Canada-wide public opinion campaign against controversial rule 75c which would limit debate in the House of Commons.
>
> Students' council president Allan Rock, vice-president Hugh Segal and about ten volunteers worked late Tuesday night preparing petitions to be sent to all Canadian university campuses. They are asking for the support of the public and students. The students hope to have at least 5,000 signatures within a week.

Mr. Rock said the apathy of Canadians in general over the proposed debate limiting rule has been "appalling" and now it looks as though the matter may be settled by closure.

> "It is time we did something about it" he said.

It is not much wonder that students are alarmed. One can become alarmed sitting in this chamber because we are not even getting this feeling across the chamber to the government members. The students suggest it is about time we did something about this proposal. The article then continues:

> "We didn't start earlier on this thing because we didn't think there was the slightest possibility the rule would ever pass."
>
> The students have set up an organization called "Students for Free Parliament" to direct the cross-country protest effort.
>
> "The least we can hope for is postponement of a Commons vote on the rule until fall to give people more time to think about it."
>
> In Ottawa the petition will be circulated on both U of O and Carleton university campuses. Write-in signatures will also be accepted if mailed to students council within the next few days.

I have a high regard for students. They value liberty. They are studying history and political science. They know the facts. When the Prime Minister suggested this rule change last December, he was just using it as a lever.

Let us look at the editorial page of today's Ottawa Journal in an attempt to find out what this man is trying to do with parliament. The editorial reads:

> Eclectic is an interesting word—

Apparently this is a reference to an article in the New Yorker magazine in which the Prime Minister was quoted as describing himself as "very eclectic". Apparently this is a new word, but what does it mean? The editorial then goes on to quote what the Prime Minister said:

> "I bet many people in my position have read more than I have in the field of history and economics. I have probably read more Dostoevsky, Stendahl and Tolstoy than the average statesman and less of Keynes, Mill and Marx."
>
> Eclectic it is; but right now his critics say we need a little more Keynes and a little less Stendahl.

One begins to wonder whether sophism is at work again. Is it fair to assume that the Prime Minister is reacting in the same way he did last December? Perhaps for reasons of sophism he wants this closure rule adopted in order that he can put through other measures he could not get through otherwise. Perhaps this involves a matter of philosophy, whereas we are the masters of this house. We must assume that sophism is at work again. What will this do to parliament?

Some 704 years ago Simon de Montfort called the first parliament together. It was made up of barons, nobles and knights. It was not made up of the common people like the members of this house. It was made up of members of the upper class who were in revolt against the King's Henchmen. Simon de Montfort called that parliament together and down through the years we have developed a democratic parliamentary system. Kings and Queens have lost their heads during the process. People have been burned at the stake, and rulers have been destroyed.

One could get emotional about this whole thing, but we must remember we were handed this heritage; we did not develop it. Down through the years principles, rules and regulations have been fought for and put into our parliamentary system. I think of the Magna Carta and the Bill of Rights. They have been adopted to build up this system. One can go to the corridor of the sixth floor in this building and observe some mementos of history there, from the first Prime Minister to the present covering over 300 years of history.

When parliament was formed there was no time limit in respect of debate, and that was long before the 19th century. Closure was never heard of until the Irish nationalists, of the end of the last century by prolonging debate in the house, tried to destroy parliament. We did not hear of closure in this house until this century. The rules have been changed in this house from those which existed in earlier days. Let us look back over the records.

On more than one occasion the house sat all night. We did not have many rules or regulations in those days and a member could speak as long as he wished. It was not unusual for Tupper, Sifton and Blake to talk for several hours in this house, and all of them have a record of at least 9 hours. It was not until 1902 when Lord Balfour said something must be done to limit debate in the British House of Commons that closure was introduced. He suggested this to end the long-winded debates that were taking place in Parliament. It was not until then that people started to think about rules and regulations.

In 1906, under the leadership of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, this house began to refine and revise our rules and regulations. Down through the years they have been revised and time limits have been adopted. Now, an hon. member can speak for only 40 minutes, without permission to speak further, rather than the previous long hours. We have made great advances. We must remember that we might reach the point where one further step in the direction of revision may destroy what we have built up over the years.

Let me suggest to the Prime Minister of Canada and other members of the government that we now may have reached a point of parliamentary destruction. If the government wants to adopt another system, it should take us into its confidence. If the government wants our support, it should tell us about this new system. We should know what they intend as a substitute when they destroy our system. If that is not what the government is doing it should tell us what it intends. This government has not been delayed during this session by the people on this side of the house. During this session the government has put through a great deal of legislation. To reiterate closure was never used until the Irish nationalists tried to destroy the British parliament. Closure was used in 1913 in this house for the first time. At that time it was brought in by Borden and the Conservative government. It is interesting to note that Arthur Meighen introduced the bill, and then condemned it. He condemned it because it gave the government too much power. On that occasion Borden did go to Sir Wilfrid Laurier to discuss this issue, and asked for a time limit. He offered to allow him to name the time limit but Laurier would not do this. At that time closure was applied in respect of the naval bill after prolonged debate.

At that time Sir Wilfrid Laurier made a famous statement which has been repeated in this House of Commons by other hon. members including the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles). He said he would rather sit in the opposition without power than have to do what the Tories did at that time with power.

• (3:50 p.m.)

That is what a great Liberal, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, thought about closure. Closure was used in the Canadian Parliament on six bills, all in this century. It was used in 1917 on the Northern acquisition bill, and the Wartime Elections Act. These bills were brought in by the government of that day, and there was not prolonged discussion in respect of either of them. The next time closure was used was 1926, during the throne speech, debate by Mr. King. If my memory serves me aright, in 1932 Mr. Bennett used closure in connection with the Unemployment Act after only one clause out of four had been studied.

It is amazing to consider what happens when you give people power and set a precedent in this respect. Twenty-four years later the Liberal party, under Mr. St. Laurent, quoted the precedent that Mr. Bennett had set. This was done in respect of a bill only 3 or 4 clauses of which, out of several, if I am correct in my recollection, had been examined. I have forgotten the exact number of clauses in the bill. In any event, the Liberal government brought in closure at that time. There was no excuse for imposing closure in respect of all these bills because there had not been prolonged debate. It may be said there was probably prolonged debate in respect of three bills, only but I do not believe one could claim there was an abuse of the right of parliament to debate important issues.

A government may believe it is right in saying, "We will stop this nonsense", but human frailty being what it is, its judgment may be wrong. The heat of parliamentary debate can lead one to make faulty judgments. Our fear is that if the government is given that power, they will use it.

The last time closure was used by the government of Mr. St. Laurent was 1956. Mr. Harris, the minister of finance at that time, in a radio address about a week later said that closure was brought in only if, first, the government had a timetable it wanted to keep—he was not concerned about the rest of parliament—and, second, if the government wanted to cut off prolonged debate.

There are in the house many young, capable members. Some of them have not been here very long and have not the experience of other hon. members. I hope they will not fall for the reasons given by the government for imposing closure, because the backbenchers are the ones who will suffer. These decisions are made by the members on the front benches, but the backbenchers will suffer. As the leader of the New Democratic party pointed out so ably every time the rules have been amended it has had the effect of cramping the opportunity of backbenchers to speak.

This has been proven over the years. When our rules have been changed, the ability of backbenchers to adequately represent their constituencies has been impaired. The leader of the New Democratic party also pointed out in his able fashion that backbenchers will never have the opportunity to speak if this closure rule is passed. The leaders of the various parties will speak on legislation, and that will be it. I ask, Mr. Speaker: If this is to be the situation, why are backbenchers brought here? Why not let the executive run the country? Why be burdened with the great expense involved in running parliament? Is this what the Prime Minister has in mind, namely, allowing the executive to run the country? These are questions we have to ask ourselves. They are important questions.

If past governments were able, in retrospect, to reconsider the imposition of closure, I am sure they would not have used it. This is the seriousness of the situation. The Liberals say they were wrong in using it in 1956. I remember Jack Pickersgill. Don't think he was not a clever fellow. I have heard the Four Horsemen, Mr. Chevrier, Mr. Pickersgill, Mr. Martin and Mr. Pearson, day after day in the question period speak for as long as they were allowed. At that time the question period ran over an hour on many occasions. They were talking about the price of eggs, butter, and so on, and we had a daily diet on the question of unemployment. They even had their own Bureau of statistics. They brought newspaper clippings into the chamber and read them; then they asked, "What does the minister say about that?" They read openly from pieces of paper and asked questions based on them.

There is no doubt that Mr. Pickersgill was clever. He got the transport portfolio and then fixed up a job for himself which was to his liking. You cannot say a man like that is not clever; if anybody does, there is something wrong with his thinking. Some of the ministers across the way were here at that time. Mr. Pickersgill said there was something wrong with the senses of any government that would dare to bring in closure; no government would impose it in the future. One can only conclude that this government has not done its homework; it has not looked at history. One should always go back to history upon which to base ground rules; then you should go ahead and build on those ground rules. We in the house have been handed a great heritage. We have copied the Mother of Parliaments. Westminster is the Mother of Parliaments wherever democracy rules in the world. We have been handed this heritage unsullied, and we must protect it. It was handed to us to protect and preserve. I wonder how many of us realize this. I am not happy about some of the things the government has done. To give it the power of closure in this way would be putting another axe in its hands.

I shall now refer to the committees system. The hon. member for York East (Mr. Otto) is in his seat, and it is very appropriate that he is. I want to say a few words about him. I sat on the drug prices committee. The committee asked for witnesses to be called. They never were called, some experts wrote a letter to the committee, asking to appear. Strictly speaking, they should have appeared before us. Witnesses were sent an invitation to attend, but the invitation was so worded that they could not possibly appear before us. The invitation told them not to come, but at the same time invited them to attend.

The hon. member for York East told us that no amendments were permitted in committees. He said that government members on committees did not change things because they had their orders. This is what happened in the drug prices committee. Not one amendment was accepted. The legislation came back to the house without amendment although there was a great deal of criticism in committee. The Liberals were silent on that occasion. Hon. members can read this in Hansard. Not one Liberal member raised objection, although they were in the house to voice their opinions and complaints.

• (4:00 p.m.)

When the members of the other house saw this bill, they said they required expert witnesses because the members in the House of Commons had not done their homework. They called witnesses.

It is very revealing to note that the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) did not accept any amendments to the Criminal Code bill from the floor of this house. He said it had been through the committee and we had to protect the committee system. He said that any bill that had gone through a committee should not have changes made to it in this house. How can this government function? Government members receive their orders from the Prime Minister not to make any changes to a bill in a committee. I am not saying this happens in every committee because certain members may not comply with all the orders, but it did apply to that committee. Then, the Minister of Justice said he would not accept any amendments and refused to consider any in the Languages bill.

How can you ever assess how competent this government is because they cast doubt upon themselves. The Minister of Justice said that the hon. member for Crowfoot (Mr. Horner) had presented an excellent amendment. The minister spent the dinner hour going over it, but said there were some things in it that possibly we should not consider because they might defeat the purpose of the bill. Ten or fifteen minutes after the Minister of Justice said what a fine amendment it was, the Secretary of State (Mr. Pelletier) said it was a terrible amendment; that the member for Crowfoot did not know what he was talking about; that it was such a stupid amendment he could not have read the bill.

How can a cabinet like that function? How can we be expected to have confidence in them? We have been very co-operative with this government. We have allowed legislation to pass. We were nice to them but, now the pay-off is the Guillotine.

Mr. Crouse: We sat extra hours.

Mr. Rynard: As the hon. member has stated, we even sat extra hours. The government would not divide the omnibus Criminal Code bill. Instead, they penalized the conscience of members and forced them to talk until they were understood. They could have divided this bill, but they refused. What would they do with closure when they would not even divide the omnibus bill to allow certain members who had conscientious feelings about parts of that bill to vote on individual sections? The government is asking for closure, the last thing in the world we want to give them.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Rynard: That is not all, Mr. Speaker. I will now deal with another item. I wish to draw attention to a statement of the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Basford). Every morning the Prime Minister has four chaps in his room to decide what the government is going to do that day. I will not mention their names. They are the "thought factory". They not only lead the cabinet, but lay down the rules about what is going to be done. It is a mystery how those fellows stay together in cabinet. How do they get anywhere with their divisive views? The Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs said the price of beef was too high, boycott it. The Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Olson) said the price increase was the greatest thing that could happen, the farmers were entitled to it.

On many occasions I have quoted the leader of the New Democratic party (Mr. Douglas) because I thought his speech was extremely good. He said that if this situation were not sad it would be comic, or something to that effect. That is about the size of it. Are they jokers? Are they playing games or what are they doing? Do they feel we are puppets? I have illustrated the divisions in the cabinet. I do not have to tell hon. members that there were other divisions.

One cabinet minister had to quit because he could not get anywhere with housing. He was forced out. I notice the Minister of National Defence (Mr. Cadieux) is now holding meetings in the anteroom of parliament. I happened to be there today when he was busy explaining the situation that occurred in the House of Commons. This is what goes on with this government. It gives me a feeling of sadness.

I have a lot of sympathy for members opposite. I do not think they are the kind of fellows who would do this sort of thing. They come from Canadian farmlands and cities. I cannot understand why they are being subjected to the psychological brainwashing which they are receiving from the Prime Minister. I do not understand how they can take this sort of treatment day after day. There are many disagreements in cabinet, yet nobody pays any attention to them. While disagreements are being voiced, the Prime Minister has his group of four each morning to decide what is going to be done. He also has regional offices.

What position do government backbenchers have? I do not say this to be critical, I say it out of sadness; what are we doing to parliament? That is the big question. I say to hon. members that if Canada is to be given the service she deserves, and if hon. members are going to play their part in preserving the democratic institutions that have been handed down in trust to us, they should make their voices heard against the Prime Minister and those who wish to push this folly through and destroy parliament.

Many members opposite come from areas similar to my own. They come from good homes and have been educated in Canadian schools. I expect them to rise in the next few days and say to the Prime Minister of this country, "you cannot do this any longer; you have no purpose; you have no reason. You have not taken parliament into your confidence. Why do you want this rule? What do you want to accomplish? Do you want to destroy parliament? Where are you going? I say to hon. members opposite that in the final analysis they will suffer just as much as we will.

Mr. Paproski: They will suffer more when the Prime Minister gets back from the west!

Mr. Rynard: Canadian history and the Canadian parliament will suffer. These are the real issues. Closure is not important. When it is necessary to resort to closure, there has been a failure to communicate. There has been a failure to sell the bill of goods they are presenting. This is the problem with this government. There is no need for closure. If communication lines are working, if the bill is good, if the government is a proper salesman, the measure will be accepted by every one on this side. It is as simple as that. No one refuses legislation which is good for the people of Canada.

Over and over again we have asked for the rights of old age pensioners to be respected. That has been pointed out time and again. The government raised the pension 4 per cent while costs have gone up 16 per cent. We have been asking for help for those men who are unable to help themselves. This government has let things run wild. Surely, the economic position of this country is far more important than anything else. Yet the government is trying to push through a proposal that would give them power they do not need and for which there is no reason to ask at the present time. Why did they not take us into their confidence?

• (4:10 p.m.)

Perhaps hon. gentlemen opposite want to say to us in effect: "We want to change parliament and we have some ideas about it. You fellows get elected and we will call you here. Then, following the Speech from the Throne you can go home and an executive council will run the country for the next four years. We will then call you back here and dissolve parliament and have an election". The trouble with that proposition, Mr. Speaker, is that the government might do exactly what it is doing now, bring in closure and stay here forever.

There are some intelligent men across the way. I know there are some good members on the other side. I hope that in the next few days these members will issue an ultimatum to the Prime Minister and demand he stop this nonsense. We have had many trials in our democratic history, but we have yet to suffer at the hands of dictators like Hitler and Mussolini, as have other countries.

Mr. Paproski: Don't forget Joey Smallwood.

Mr. Rynard: Well, he is far enough away at the moment not to bother us. The interesting thing about democracy is that it always destroys itself from within. Civilizations perish from within. I ask members on the other side of the house carefully to consider that statement. Let it not be said that we in this parliament allowed the government to destroy itself. Let it not be said that in the year 1969 we allowed the Prime Minister of Canada to destroy this institution which all of us, when we came here starry-eyed, hoped in some way to strengthen.

Mr. John Gilbert (Broadview): Mr. Speaker, after hearing the speech of the hon. member for Simcoe North (Mr. Rynard), I feel very humble as I stand in my place to participate in this debate. It is with a sad and heavy heart that I do so. I am also shocked and ashamed that some of the senior cabinet ministers have not taken a vital part in this debate. I observe the Minister of Public Works (Mr. Laing) in his seat and wonder why he and others of his colleagues have not persuaded the cabinet, and more especially the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald), to bring some sense of co-operation into this debate.

Many Canadians have said that we are suffering physically from the heat and are making a great sacrifice. We may be making a great physical sacrifice, but when we think of the consequences that would flow from the adoption of rule 75c, this is a mere nothing in comparison. We intend not only to suffer physically from the heat but also to apply some political heat in order to bring about some changes to this particular report.

Many of us are making a sacrifice by being away from our families and friends and by not participating in some of the activities and work in our constituencies. But this matters not in view of the serious consequences which would flow from adoption of this report. It is sad that we have reached an impasse on the rules, particularly in regard to the proposed rule 75A, 75B and 75C. We have reached a senseless confrontation which has backed the government and the opposition into their respective corners, that has generated firm convictions, ill-feelings and reminded us of the December impasse on rule 16A.

It has been said, and I repeat, that we would not object to remaining here if we were to discuss some of the serious matters that confront Canada today. During the last few days we have been reminded of the crisis on the farms, and the government's inability to cope with it. We have been reminded of the serious problem of inflation and the increase in the lending rate to chartered banks by the Bank of Canada. We would not object to staying here to debate such issues as these. Other matters, such as the serious housing shortage, unemployment and high taxes are also of concern to every member of the house. Yet we are in this house today discussing rules 75A, 75B and 75C, and this fact tends to destroy the goodwill that has been built up since the beginning of the session.

I think of some of the tensions and acrimony engendered in this house since I represented the riding of Broadview during the period 1965 to 1968. I refer to tension not only between persons but regarding some of the great issues facing Canada. For example, I recall the tension and acrimony that was generated when the opposition defeated the government on the postal rates increase and also on the imposition of additional personal taxes. In the result, much ill feeling was created between members.

Then in June 1968, the people of Canada spoke and returned to the house a majority government. An attempt was made to improve the procedure and organization of the house by restructuring the committee system and by imposing time limitations on debates like the Speech from the Throne and the budget, and debate on certain bills. Then, to top it all off, a serious attempt was made to apportion the year so that we might have a definite allocation of time for debating certain business of the house.

All of this was done in a spirit of co-operation, and this was very encouraging. The members of the committee on procedure and organization are reasonable and talented men who are sincere and knowledgeable. They contributed much valuable work, and in many areas there was unanimous agreement. But a bomb was exploded in the house by the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald) when, after general agreement on rule 75A and 75B, he brought forward rule 75C. It is this which has triggered the ill feeling generated since that time. He has taken a stone wall approach and government members have become mere puppets to be counted only as heads in the votes that ensue.

• (4:20 p.m.)

One looks back to last December and to rule 16A with not too much happiness. I think we all recall the efforts of the opposition to bring about change and how successful we were in making the government realize that it would be a serious mistake to adopt proposed rule 16A. The matter was returned to committee, and we all remember how the chairman of the committee was embarrassed by the treatment afforded him by the President of the Privy Council. The determination and dictatorial attitude of the President of the Privy Council is unbecoming and unworthy of a minister of the Crown.

Some say the government is trying to blackmail the opposition. This session was to end on June 27. One wonders why the government left this vital matter until the end of the session. Did it hope that hon. members would be tired, anxious to go home, and would therefore dispose of this matter? If so, that indicates government thinking. If the government is not trying to blackmail us then, in the alternative, it is showing a tremendous disrespect and disregard for the principles of opposition members. Its actions are degrading parliament.

Consider the lack of a quorum in this house last Thursday, Mr. Speaker. Without the integrity, intelligence and co-operation of Mr. Speaker and his ruling on that important matter, the government would have degraded parliament even more. We were working to rule when the quorum vote was taken. As I recall, many hon. members of this house and many members of the public were annoyed with the employees of Air Canada when those employees worked to rule during the recent difficulties. I recall an Air Canada employee at Malton Airport telling me to check a small handbag, and I recall being annoyed. Yet that employee was merely working to rule, just as we were in this house when an hon. member drew to your attention that there was no quorum. If our post office employees were to work to rule, the chaos in the post office would be greater even than that brought on by the minister.

An hon. Member: That is not possible.

Mr. Gilbert: Last Friday the Prime Minister made a disgraceful, unworthy and disappointing comment about the conduct of parliament. When I spoke words of welcome to members of the Liberal party on the Friday after the quorum vote, I was greeted in a most unworthy manner. When the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) rose to his feet, even before he had a chance to say a word, the members of the Liberal party made known their feelings of displeasure. On top of that we had to contend with the Prime Minister's schoolboy sauciness when he described this debate as a stupid filibuster and the attitude of opposition members as hypocritical. It is possible that his arrogance and ignorance at that time exceeded that of Mr. C. D. Howe in the 1956 pipeline debate. This government is a dictatorship by a dilettante. His hatchet man is the President of the Privy Council, and the Liberal party members who support him are mere hush-puppies who play little role in this house. The Liberal party needs a man with the convictions and courage of the former hon. member for York-Humber, Mr. Ralph Cowan. He called a spade a spade, and he acted as the conscience of the Liberal party when it abused the exercise of its powers. We need men like Ralph Cowan in this house. More than ever, the Liberals need Ralph Cowan back.

An hon. Member: Bring back Ralph Cowan.

Mr. Gilbert: The only one remotely like him here is the hon. member for York East (Mr. Otto) who brought to the attention of hon. members the attitude of the government towards its supporters when they are in committee. His revelation has been very worth while and we only hope that he will be more active in persuading other Liberal party members to stop being mere rubberstamps and to take an active part in the work of this house. When I consider the performance of the portly potentate for High Park (Mr. Deakon), who seems to suffer from mental paralysis when important issues come up, I become disappointed that Ralph Cowan is no longer in the house.

Rule 75c will apply to the backbenchers of all parties and I think the hon. member for Scarborough East (Mr. O'Connell), who was one of the whiz kids of the Walter Gordon days, who has great experience in economic matters and in matters affecting foreign ownership and who has made a great contribution to our Canadian Indians and Eskimos, ought to remember that. We hope he will take a more active part as a backbencher in the debates of this house. The same goes for the hon. member for Kamloops-Cariboo (Mr. Marchand), who should be taking the lead here when Indian questions are discussed. He seems to be tongue tied. I hope he realizes that if the government adopts rule 75c he will be even more tongue tied.

During the past year we have heard little from the hon. member for York West (Mr. Givens), who is a former mayor of Toronto and has considerable experience in urban affairs, housing and urban transportation. On numerous occasions he has told the press that he would like to participate in a more active and meaningful way in the debates of this house. Does he not realize that once rule 75c is accepted his opportunities to speak will be very much curtailed?

And why does not the hon. member for Sarnia (Mr. Cullen), who has had great experience in law, not say more about matters like the rehabilitation of criminals, expungement of criminal records, corporal punishment and the like. If he is under restraint now, does he not realize that rule 75c will tighten that restraint? He, too, should take part in debates and he and others like him should resist the adoption of rule 75c.

The government's backbenchers have deafened me with their silence in this debate. They are silent when most matters come before the house and when many matters are referred to committee. I am thinking of the hon. member for Davenport (Mr. Caccia), who has had wide experience on Toronto city council and who has the respect of the Italian community; I appeal to him to speak up when matters relating to immigration and to the Italian community of Canada come before the house.

• (4:30 p.m.)

These are some of the backbenchers for whom I feel sorry and whom I ask to take an active part. If I may be rather poetic I would say, "On Danson, on Givens, on Hopkins, on Otto" to meet some of these important matters. This problem would never have arisen had we had the present Solicitor General (Mr. McIlraith) as the house leader. He is a man of reason, sympathy and compassion. He exercises those talents in his portfolio as Solicitor General. We never would have had this problem with the Minister of Manpower and Immigration (Mr. MacEachen) as house leader. When he was house leader he worked well with the other house leaders to formulate timetables which were acceptable to members of the house. The fly in the ointment has been the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald). Some members have said disparagingly that he is "Mac the Gag." I really do not believe he has stooped to that position.

The President of the Privy Council is a representative of the riding next to mine. I might say that it is Rosedale, the upper part of which embraces a great many wealthy people and the lower part of which embraces many poor people. I thought he would be really concerned about putting recreational facilities into Moss Park and would be working toward that end. I thought he would be concerned about housing for the people in the south part of his riding who are suffering from the effects of high interest rates and poor housing. I thought he would be interested in some of the unemployment problems which prevail and that he would co-operate with house leaders to adopt 75A and 75B so that we could move on to a discussion of these particular matters, but that has not been so. Probably he has rightfully earned the tag of "Mac the Gag."

We have heard many speeches from members of the opposition. When one heard the moving speech by the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield), and the speech by the leader of my party, one could not help but be persuaded that 75c has no place in parliamentary democracy in Canada. When one heard the speech of the hon. member for Hamilton West (Mr. Alexander), one could not help but be moved. Here we have a member who in his maiden speech said:

> —men should be judged not by the colour of their skin nor by the way they fight, love or sin, nor by the gods they serve or vintage they drink, but by the quality of thoughts they think.

After hearing the hon. member for Hamilton West last night, one appreciates the way he thinks. He is a man of integrity; he is a man who wants to co-operate with members.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Gilbert: His plea seemed to fall on the deaf ears of the backbenchers of the Liberal party who lack the initiative to participate in this debate or take a very active part in their caucus meetings to point out to the President of the Privy Council the error of his ways. We have been fortunate to have a colleague like the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles), a man who is knowledgeable and sincere; a man who has brought to the parliament of Canada the dignity it deserves.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Gilbert: To be treated by the Prime Minister in the way he was last Friday does not belittle the hon. member; it belittles the Prime Minister.

I should like to direct my attention in particular to 75A, 75B and 75C. It has been said we need to know our a, b, c's to understand these particular sections. I should like to read section 75A so that we will better understand it. According to Votes and Proceedings for June 20, 75A reads as follows:

When a Minister of the Crown, from his place in the House, states that there is agreement among the representatives of all parties to allot a specified number of days or hours to the proceedings at one or more stages of any public bill, he may propose a motion, without notice, setting forth the terms of such agreed allocation; and every such motion shall be decided forthwith, without debate or amendment.

I have heard no criticism in respect of 75A. This is one of the rules whereby the house leaders of all parties can act and act advantageously. Rule 75B reads:

When a Minister of the Crown, from his place in the House, states that a majority of the representatives of the several parties, including that of the Government, have come to an agreement in respect of a proposed allotment of days or hours for the proceedings at any stage of the passing of a public bill, he may propose a motion, without notice, setting forth the terms of the said proposed allocation; provided that for the purposes of this standing order an allocation may be proposed in one motion to cover the proceedings at both the report and the third reading stages of a bill if that motion is consistent with the provisions of Standing Order 7(13). During the consideration of any such motion no member may speak more than once or longer than ten minutes. Not more than two hours after the commencement of proceedings thereon, Mr. Speaker shall put every question necessary to dispose of the said motion.

I understand that this proposal did have a great deal of discussion in the committee, and is the result of a consensus among committee members. I think I am safe in saying most members of the house are prepared to accept 75A and 75B. There appears to be a slight problem with regard to the determination of what constitutes a majority, but I rely on the wisdom, experience and goodwill that prevails among the members of that committee to bring forward a determination of what constitutes a majority.

It is 75C which is the reason we are here. I shall read 75C:

A Minister of the Crown who from his place in the House at a previous sitting has stated that an agreement could not be reached under the provisions of Standing Order 75A or 75B in respect of proceedings at the stage at which a public bill was then under consideration either in the House or in any committee and has given notice at that sitting of his intention so to do may propose a motion for the purpose of allotting a specified number of days or hours for the consideration and disposal of proceedings at that stage; provided that the time allotted for any stage is not to be less than one sitting day and provided that for the purposes of this standing order an allocation may be proposed in one motion to cover the proceedings at both the report and the third reading stages on a bill if that motion is consistent with the provisions of Standing Order 75(13). During the consideration of any such motion no member may speak more than once or longer than ten minutes. Not more than two hours after the commencement of proceedings thereon, Mr. Speaker shall put every question necessary to dispose of the said motion.

This is the section which puts fear in the hearts of the opposition members, and which should put fear into the hearts of thinking members on the government side, because it is a naked power which many of us in this house are not prepared to give to the government. Mr. Speaker, I should like to quote to you, and members of the house, some of the statements I have read which are pertinent to this particular debate:

Power abdicates only under stress of counter-power.

That was said by Martin Buber in "Paths in Utopia" in 1950. This is the reason we in the opposition parties are bringing forward our counter-power to offset the naked power which is sought by the government.

• (4:40 p.m.)

The second quotation is "the greater the powers the more danger of abuse". That statement was made by Edmund Burke in a speech he made at Middlesex in 1771. One would think that this remark could certainly apply to 75C if it were implemented.

Lord Acton, who has been mentioned many times, said that power corrupts and absolute power corrupts absolutely. It is for these reasons we in the opposition party are not prepared to give the government the power contained in 75C.

During the debate last December in respect of 16A, I received a letter from a radio station in Toronto called CHUM in which an argument against this bill was set forth effectively and persuasively. I should like to ask your indulgence, Mr. Speaker, while I read parts of this letter:

No government requires absolute power to run this country of ours and CHUM cannot understand why the Trudeau government is insisting on absolute power before getting on with the just society's business.

The government's stubborn insistence on the right to determine in advance how long debates of the nation's business shall run—suggests an impatience with the machinery of democracy.

It is hard to believe that our fantastic Centennial year spirit is being followed up by a government bid for absolute power.

It is also hard to appreciate why the Trudeau government isn't content to make do with the generous majority of seats handed to it in the last election.

Surely 155 seats out of 264 is sufficient for this majority government to handle parliament in a businesslike manner. It can always impose closure —after sufficient debate.

This government does not need the right to cut off debate in advance in order to give the people of our country the just society it has promised. Reconsider, Mr. Prime Minister. Especially in view of the popular opposition to your proposal.

Take the section dealing with your right to cut off debate in advance out of your reform book.

And make no further attempts to arbitrarily impose your government's will on parliament.

This letter from CHUM indicates why we oppose the granting of this naked power the government wants. We have heard much talk about the experience of the United Kingdom, and the President of the Privy Council has risen on many occasions to ask members whether they are knowledgeable of the experience of England and the fact that the allocation of time there is far more strict and stringent. Let me remind the President of the Privy Council of the differences which prevail in the United Kingdom. There are differences in numbers of members, differences in respect of independent chairmen, differences in attitude and differences in tradition. There is nothing wrong with studying the views and procedures as well as the rules of other governments, but you only apply those rules which have relevance to Canada.

The hon. member for Grenville-Carleton (Mr. Blair), who is chairman of the committee, attempted to bring forth a spirit of co-operation not only in the committee but in the house. He indicated the experience in the United Kingdom, as recorded in Hansard for July 8 at page 10958:

It is estimated that 50 per cent of the business of the House of Commons in the United Kingdom proceeds in accordance with an agreed timetable; that 25 per cent is so uncontentious that it requires the application of no timetable and that of the balance of 25 per cent deemed to be contentious, the majority or a substantial part, is dealt with through the ordinary process of negotiation, with the result that orders allocating time are not the procedures which are usually or habitually employed at Westminster.

We have the statement by the President of the Privy Council that 75c would probably be applied to no more than one per cent of the legislation. Further than that, we have the experience during this session with the passing of the omnibus Criminal Code and languages bills. The only bill the government singles out is the omnibus bill, and it unfairly and unjustly points that finger of guilt at members of the Creditiste party who exercised their right in respect of certain sections. As a member previously said, when you think of the many sections and subjects dealt with in the omnibus bill in respect of criminal law you can appreciate the necessity of debating time. One should also appreciate the necessity of members reflecting the views of their constituents in respect of these important subjects.

When one looks at the languages bill one will find there was little criticism, yet that bill is a milestone in respect of bringing forth unity in Canada. Therefore, the debate which took place was both proper and in order. When one thinks of the necessity for 75c during the next session, one can only envisage it being applied to certain matters. It may be applied in respect of the problems of foreign ownership. Suppose we do have a limit introduced in a respect of the Canada Development Corporation. Surely, no hon. member would suggest that we should debate it on the basis of 75c, only allowing about four days for this very complex and important subject.

I felt rather sorry for the hon. member for Grenville-Carleton when he made a slip in respect of the ten days of debate rather than the ten days lapse of time. It was only after persuasion by members of the opposition that he corrected himself and said that what he was referring to was the ten days lapse of time. I have heard different members on the government side mention different times. One referred to 30 days and another to two months, as the time period before a bill might be passed.

An hon. Member: Thirteen sitting days.

Mr. Gilbert: An hon. member suggest 13 sitting days. When you start establishing time limits in respect of important matters you will have an indication of the lack of spirit, good will and co-operation which should prevail among members of the house in connection with debates on these important matters.

When I think of the time limits that may be imposed in respect of taxation changes which have been alluded to, it makes me realize that it is only by a spirit of co-operation that this matter can be properly aired. When I think of the possible new mini-bill the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) may bring forward containing further amendments to the Criminal Code, I cannot believe that problems in respect of bail, the expunging of criminal records and corporal punishment can be properly debated with the time limit changes the government has suggested.

Yesterday when I heard the hon. member for Peel South (Mr. Chappell) talk about the arithmetic of parliament, and observed his attempt to divide the opposition by saying that it should be a majority of the government and the official opposition which should prevail, I realized his inexperience as a result of his short period in the house. This is a man who is interested in the expropriation bill. The debate on that matter should last at least two or three weeks if it is to be properly aired. When one thinks of the legislation in respect of patents one must realize the necessity for the utmost co-operation in dealing with this important matter.

• (4:50 p.m.)

It could be fairly asked: What does the opposition want? It could be simply answered: The opposition wants the amendment to refer this question to the committee to be passed, so that it may delete 75c.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Gilbert: Why do we want this? The answer is that there has been no past need, there is no present need, and there certainly does not appear to be any future need for it. The experience of the past year indicates a necessity for the co-operation of house leaders in allocating a reasonable length of time to debate important matters. The attempt by the government last Friday to bring forward a subamendment to split the opposition was properly dealt with by the Speaker. We, of the opposition parties, will have no part of splitting the opposition on such a vital matter.

The main issue that prevails today is a decision between dictatorship and democracy. When we talk about democracy we are really talking about the persuasive process that should prevail in Canada, whereby representatives of all parts of the country come to this chamber and deal with legislation on the basis of discussion, co-operation and agreement. This is the proper process to be adopted in parliament; consensus should be arrived at. This is why, if we are to continue on the road of democracy, it is highly necessary that rule 75c be deleted in order that we may restore the good will and co-operation that heretofore prevailed this session.

Mr. Reid: Mr. Speaker, before the hon. gentleman resumes his seat I wonder whether he would accept a question.

Mr. Gilbert: Certainly.

Mr. Reid: The hon. member mentioned the British experience. Would he be prepared to accept British standing orders Nos. 31 and 32, which are to be found in Hansard of July 10 at pages 11080 and 11081? Is the hon. member prepared to accept the British system in this respect, in lieu of 75c?

Mr. Gilbert: Mr. Speaker, I am really surprised that the hon. member should rise in his place and ask me a question of that nature. I am not sure whether he belongs to the Liberal party or the Liberal Labour party. I am not sure whether he will exercise his right with regard to 75B and say that a majority of the Liberal Labour party will be necessary before we proceed with legislation in the house.

It is absolutely necessary that the members of the committee get together and work out a reasonable compromise with regard to the rules and organization of the house. The insertion into his debate of the standing orders used in the British house is not important; in fact, it is irrelevant. It is important to arrive at a consensus of the members of all parties in the house so that we have a system of rules and orders by which we can abide and with which we agree. If we do this we will restore the friendliness and co-operation that has prevailed this session.

Hon. J. A. MacLean (Malpeque): Mr. Speaker, I think at a time when it is estimated that over 500 million people are glued to their television sets watching the Apollo 11 mission, which if successful will probably go down in history as one of the greatest accomplishments of mankind, is hardly the time to assume that there is a great deal of direct interest by the public in what is taking place this afternoon in the House of Commons, or that by speaking on this occasion one is in the spotlight, as it were, of public notice.

The wide effect that electronic communications have had in our lives is illustrated by the story told about a teacher of ten-year-olds who took her class to see the famous painting "Whistler's Mother" and asked them to write a few words about it. One little lad wrote: It seemed it was a picture of an old lady waiting for the repairman to bring back her television set.

I believe we live in an age when we do not give enough time and contemplation to some of the basic things we take for granted. For example, if we wanted to be cold-bloodedly practical it might be more efficient, for the opposition parties, if they could afford it, to try to buy a 20-second commercial from Walter Cronkite this afternoon to put in a plug for the importance to minorities of the basic rights we are now discussing.

I rise in this debate because I think we are discussing an extremely important issue. It is not my purpose to be offensive to anyone. If anything I say is offensive, it is inadvertent and unintentional. I hold the view that everyone, no matter how exalted he may be in his own view or the view of any other person, can learn something from somebody else no matter how humble that other person may be.

I believe that a great many people in this house, including myself, still have a great deal to learn about the traditions of parliament, its rules, what they really mean and their significance. I think it is ill-becoming for anyone, no matter how brilliant he may be, to stack up one or two years' experience—I have seen this happen in parliament—five or six years, or even ten or twenty against the accumulated experience of 700 years of parliamentary development under the leadership of the greatest men the English speaking world has known. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, this is a subject we should consider very carefully.

I wish to speak through you, sir, chiefly to members whose experience in parliament is limited. We should remember that we are a parliament whose collective experience is very short; we have only very few members who have served in this chamber for any length of time. Political life expectancy in this institution has been very short in the last few years. Therefore we should pay particular attention to other authorities who have studied this matter, lived with it and in some cases recorded their thoughts.

It is not my intention to be condescending. I am not in a position to take that attitude. My experience in this chamber is limited. It is true that there are many whose experience is even more limited. We should not think lightly of the responsibilities of being a member of parliament. We hold a great trust. We sometimes think too much of the honour involved, the stimulation of political victory, and so on.

• (5:00 p.m.)

We should not forget that each of us is here to represent, on the average, almost 70,000 Canadians who have no means of expressing their views on a subject which is perhaps of prime importance to them, namely the type of governmental system they are going to live under, except through their respective members of parliament. It is our responsibility as members of parliament to serve minorities in our own constituencies. It is our responsibility to represent the people who have voted against us as well as the people who voted for us. It is our duty to speak for them and to represent them in a way which will bring them collectively the best possible government under the best form of government, which I believe to be the democratic form.

If I were to talk to members of parliament who had just been elected, I would recommend to them that the first thing they should do is read some good books on parliament and parliamentary procedure. As a start I would recommend Beauchesne's Parliamentary Rules and Forms. For many distinguished years, Beauchesne served as clerk of this house. I want to quote fairly extensively from Beauchesne, for which I make no apology. On page 16 of Beauchesne, fourth edition, in a general discussion of what parliament means, there is this statement:

> We use the words "House of Commons" very often without pausing to reflect upon what those words mean. The word "Commons" means the people. This is the house of the people, sitting on both sides of this house; and on both sides of the Speaker are representatives of every constituency of Canada. Collectively those of us who meet in this Chamber represent all Canadians. That is our responsibility! That is our duty. Our rights are important only to the extent that those rights represent the rights of the people themselves. If the traditional rights of the members of this House are released, limited or arbitrarily curtailed in any way, it is not our rights that are of concern. What is vitally important is that in that curtailment of rights—there is a limitation of the rights—of the people themselves. The freedom that we have here to shape and guide legislation, no matter on which side of the House we may sit, is part of the very freedom which we cherish here in this country of ours. It is here in the House of Commons, to which all the people of Canada must look for just laws properly considered and properly made, that Canadians in every part of Canada must look for the greater part of their freedom and for the assurance of that type of government which will be itself an expression of the freedom which has come down to us through so many generations of sacrifice and of tremendous efforts.

We hear a great deal about the necessity for speed, Mr. Speaker. We hear that it is necessary to have speed in legislation and that we have to get a list of bills as long as your arm through in each session of parliament. I am the first to admit that government is becoming larger and is impinging into many more fields than used to be the case. As a consequence, there is a great deal more parliamentary business than there used to be. Nevertheless, I wholeheartedly believe that the theory that the volume of legislation passed by a government is in direct proportion to that government's worth is a complete and fallacious myth. It is the quality, not the quantity of legislation that determines the value of a government and the benefit it may be to the people it governs.

Parliament not only has a responsibility to pass good legislation, but the responsibility to amend or reject bad legislation. In a democracy, that is its most vital responsibility. The notion that because we are living in a modern computer age with instant communication we have to do everything quickly, in less and less time in my opinion does not follow. To hear some people speak, their logic appears to be that the rules of parliament were laid down before the theory of relativity was discovered and therefore they are out of date. They say modern rules of parliament should be such as to expedite the business of parliament at a speed greater than the speed of light. Nothing could be more fallacious.

If we carry through this desperate desire for shorter and shorter debates, more voluminous legislation passed in a shorter period, we arrive at a point of absurdity. We will reach the position where members of parliament will be advised a day or two before parliament is to sit that the legislation the government proposes to consider is deemed to have already been passed and therefore we need not sit at all. We would be in the position of the lady in the limerick:

> There was a young lady named Bright
> Whose speed was greater than light,
> She left home one day,
> In a relative way,
> And returned home on the previous night.

The government would like to be in the position where, when they think something is right, the shorter the time spent on it the better. If we got to the position where the length of time would be a negative figure, that would be even better. In this connection, Mr. Speaker, I wish to quote again from Beauchesne, page 110:

> The mere object of shortening sessions may lead to an undue curtailment of the freedom of speech. The duties of a representative Parliament are too important to be performed in a hurry. No question should be decided until it has been fully discussed. Although some effort ought to be made to economize time, every shade of opinion has the right to find expression and members who desire to give their views should not be prevented from doing so. Canada is a vast country, extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean. The problems of the West are not those of the East. The viewpoints of members of Parliament from British Columbia and the Prairie Provinces differ from those of Ontario; Ontario differs from Quebec; and Quebec from the Maritime Provinces. For this reason debates in the House are necessarily lengthy. A two-month session, if it is mismanaged, is more wasteful of time than a six-month session during which no time has been lost. Debates have to be free and they must also be relevant. In Parliament every corner of the country is represented and no rule should silence elected representatives when they think they have a message to deliver. Freedom of speech is a sacred principle and if there is a place where it should be fully respected that place is the Parliament of the nation, and it is the Speaker's responsibility to see that this principle is not infringed upon.

• (5:10 p.m.)

Most people without thinking too much about it, glibly equate democracy with the existence of a parliament. Examples that come to mind immediately are of Canada, the United States, Great Britain and France. In each of these countries there is a parliament; therefore, it is assumed there is also a democracy. I suggest, Mr. Speaker, it just does not follow that if you have a democracy you have a parliament, or that if you have a parliament you have a democracy. This is tantamount to saying that because all Parisians are Frenchmen, all Frenchmen are Parisians.

There is a parliament of sorts in Russia which does things very expeditiously. The government tells parliament its program for the year and parliament rubberstamps it in a matter, I think, of three or four days. Then, the parliamentarians go home, and that is their role.

I suggest that what determines whether you have a democracy is whether you have an opposition that is free, that has the right to dissent, to expose to public debate the importance of differing points of view, to expose weaknesses in any program proposed by government. This is the keystone of the democratic system. Democracy has flowered when parliamentarians have held mature and enlightened views, when it has been recognized that in electing them to office the public did not want them to be dictators but rather to hold office for a short period as the servants of the people. Governments should never lose sight of the fact that they are elected to be the people's servants and not their masters.

We should remember that the rules and practices of parliament are the possession of the whole house; they are not the government's possession or the prerogative of the government of the day. It is true that in the matter of time allocation a minister of the government must move a motion under the rules, but it is not the exclusive right of the government to make rules, or to try to impose on parliament as a whole its view on what the rules should be.

It is true that under the rules the government has certain privileges that are not open to the opposition, such as the introduction of money bills and so on. But, equally validly and truly, the opposition has rights that are not necessarily open to the government. I often hear members, chiefly new members, advancing the plausible but nevertheless invalid argument that the government has been elected and given a mandate by the people to carry out its program and hence the government has the right to make the rules of parliament to suit themselves. No argument could be more fallacious. It is like saying that a football team that won its last game can change the rules to suit itself for the next game. Or it is like saying that the heaviest football team has the right to determine the rules. Or it is like saying that if a lawyer wins a case in court he can determine the court procedure to be used for his next case. All of these examples, of course, make complete nonsense.

May I again at this point quote from Beauchesne, commencing at the bottom of page 54. I am about to make a fairly long quotation, but I do so without apology since I think this is a summation of some of the most important points that are pertinent to this discussion:

The principle that the majority rules was conceded in section 49 of Magna Carta which reads: "In all those things which are appointed to be done by these twenty-five Barons, if it happen that all the twenty-five have been present and have differed in their opinions about anything, or if some of them who had been summoned would not or could not be present, that which the greater part of those who were present shall have provided and decreed shall be held as firm and as valid as if all the twenty-five had agreed in it."

That is the principle of the convention of the majority having its way in the passage of legislation.

This principle is also enunciated in Section 49 of The British North America Act which reads: "Questions arising in the House of Commons shall be decided by a majority of voices other than that of the Speaker, and when the voices are equal, but not otherwise, the Speaker shall have a vote."

(3) In every country attempts have been made to ensure that there shall be some check on the powers of the majority. Lord Bryce said in "Modern Democracies": "That a majority is always right, i.e. that every decision it arrives at by voting is wise not even the most fervent democrat has ever maintained seeing that popular government consists in the constant effort of a minority to turn itself by methods of persuasion into a majority which will then reverse the action or modify the decisions of the former majority."

[Mr. MacLean.]

Decision by majority is not an absolute and unquestionable principle. "Our constitution, to use Burke's phrase, is something more than a problem in arithmetic." There is no divine right of a mere numerical majority any more than of King's. Majority decision is a measure of convenience essential to the dispatch of business, the result, "of a very particular and special convention, confirmed by long habits of obedience." The idea that a majority, just because it is a majority, is entitled to pass, without full discussion, what legislation it pleases, regardless of the extent of the changes involved or of the intensity of the opposition to them, the idea in fact that majority edicts are the same things as laws, is wholly alien to the spirit of the constitution.

(4) A minority party may question ministers, may criticize but cannot control in the ordinary case a Government with a reasonable large majority. There can be no control of the Executive where the supporters in Parliament are prepared without question to obey the leaders of their party—through the Whips. All that the minority party—the Opposition—can do without support from members of the majority party is to question, inquire and criticize, but whilst this does not amount to control it is an important method of checking abuses of power.

I do not want to give the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald) any ideas in this regard.

• (5:20 p.m.)

With the support of a majority of Members it would be possible for a Cabinet to suspend the sitting of Parliament, have the minority members arrested, withdraw the safeguards of liberty such as Habeas Corpus and freedom of speech, and to establish virtually a dictatorship. All this, too, could be done within the law. It is surprising how few members of the general public appreciate how uncontrolled the Cabinet is where it has the support of a loyal majority in Parliament and that "the supremacy of Parliament" in this sense is absolute and subject to no real safeguards of any kind.

Beauchesne continues:

We may add that the majority of the House of Commons does not always represent the majority of the electors in the country. It often happens that, owing to the redistribution of electoral districts, a party may come out of the general elections with a majority of elected members without having received the majority of the votes given by the electors who went to the polls or whose names are on the electoral lists. That party may form a Cabinet, but the official Opposition together with other anti-ministerial groups, though sitting to the Speaker's left, are the real representatives of the people; and their right to challenge by legitimate means every measure or proceeding sponsored by ministers cannot be disputed. In such cases, when the House divides, members who oppose the Administration may act on behalf of the majority while Government supporters represent the minority of the people of Canada.

That is the position we are in at the present time. Although the government has a comfortable majority in the house, it represents a minority only of the Canadian people. I do not say that to be belligerent or to depreciate the government's electoral victory. I say that because I hope the government will listen to my plea. I plead with the government to pause and to consider what it is doing. They should realize that they have no divine right to govern.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. MacLean: We heard a great deal about the allocation of time. I have heard it said that we should follow the example of the Mother of Parliaments. That is the example we are admonished to follow. The trouble is that our two situations are not comparable. In many cases comparisons are not valid. The rules under which the U.K. parliament works in many cases have been misinterpreted. There are many reasons, of course, for allocating time, one of them being that there is an increase in government business. Also, the allocation of time idea is attractive to governments because they put through much second grade legislation. Since I have been a member I have seen governments introduce legislation which they have told the people of this country was the paragon of all virtues and must not be changed. Having refused to accept all opposition amendments, the government has been forced, sometimes one year after the original enactment, to bring the measure before the house again to have it amended. Parliament has had to go through the entire process of considering the matter again.

The notion of limitation of time is likely to appeal to those members, and they are mostly new members, who because of inexperience do not know just what parliament is all about. They are not fully conscious, perhaps for four or five years, of the great trust they hold, for the Canadian people. They are custodians of our treasured rights and freedoms and it behooves them to follow in the great traditions of their predecessors who looked on themselves as the servants of the people.

I appreciate the many difficulties facing governments. Often when a government is elected it has among its supporters many inexperienced members who may misinterpret the significance of their election. They have the impression, mistakenly, that they have been elected because their electors think they can do no wrong. Nothing is further from the truth. Having been a member of a government I realize, in retrospect, how difficult it was for a small group of 50 experienced parliamentarians to lead and set an example for 150 new members who had no experience of this game. And this process has been gone through several times in the past. As a result, many members do not realize why the rules of this house, which are based on tradition, are as they are.

Since the election of this government we have changed the rules drastically. The parties making up the opposition, and private members on both sides of the house, have forfeited vast numbers of rights which our predecessors enjoyed. For example, estimates are no longer considered in this chamber but are considered in committee. That is a tremendous concession on the part of the opposition, and it should give weeks of additional time for the government to bring forward government business.

Why does the government demand these new, extraordinary and arbitrary powers to limit debate? I am, of course, referring to the effect of proposed rule 75c. What legislation can the government possibly have in mind that requires this severe restriction on our freedom of speech? Why does the government need this gag? What legislation would a right thinking government wish to introduce that would require a rule like 75c to force it through? I have racked my brains about this, and I cannot imagine what the legislation could be. Of course, since the government this year permitted homosexuality under certain conditions it may wish next year to make it compulsory—that is about as far as my imagination extends. Seriously, Mr. Speaker, why does the government require this power?

My experience has always been that when an opposition debates for a long period any measure that the government has brought in, and sometimes such debates can go on for many weeks, the opposition has usually been right. Experience, time and again, has proved that in these cases the opposition has been right.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. MacLean: Therefore it should be an axiom that no government ought to introduce legislation that will need to be forced through the house by the application of a rule that limits the freedom of speech. Time has shown that the government's attitude in the pipe line debate was wrong. I remember that when we were in government we proposed to give the Minister of National Revenue power to decide by himself the classes and kinds of certain articles manufactured in Canada. The opposition debated that proposal I believe for only three weeks. I believe the opposition of that day was right. I believed it at the time, although I did not wish to admit it. The result was the Senate refused to pass that legislation, and it was never implemented. The smart thing for the government would have been to have never made such a proposal to parliament, because I believe it was wrong.

• (5:30 p.m.)

I support the amendment which is before us because its intent is to eliminate 75c. The amendment reads as follows:

That the third report of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization be referred back to the committee, with instructions to amend it by deleting therefrom proposed Standing Order 75c.

That amendment has been put forward in good faith, in the belief that it is a reasonable proposition. I would appeal to the government to consider the acceptance of this amendment. If they should find that unpallatable I have an even simpler suggestion by which the government could get itself and us out of this log jam. I suggest that the government just move the adjournment of this debate and then adjourn the house until October. In the meantime, the government would have an opportunity to do some thinking about this situation. There is no urgency about this rule. If we should adjourn for the summer, which I understand is the idea after this motion is passed, the rule could not be operative in any event until parliament sits again in October. There would be no parliament on which to impose it. I could see more logic in this situation if what we were involved in were legislation which would come into effect at a certain deadline during the summer, such as the business of supply or something like that. This rule, however, will be useless until we return in October. As I said, there will be nobody here to impose it. I should like the house leader and members of the government to think this over and take some advice from experienced members and others, not necessarily on this side of the house.

I suggest that the government take some advice from their own caucus. If the President of the Privy Council does not feel it appropriate to seek advice of this nature from his own colleagues, then I wish he would ask someone for advice. I would like to feel he had at least asked his wife about the wisdom of this procedure. Then he could perhaps think it over and in the fall come back with something more sensible.

A great many comparisons have been made between the situation here and the allocation of time in the United Kingdom. In the United Kingdom, the pressure under which parliament operates is even much greater than it is here for obvious reasons. Therefore the pressure for allocation of time is even greater. That does not mean that the allocation of time is good. It is something which should be avoided if at all possible. In the United Kingdom, however, it is more difficult to avoid, because they have a unitary system of government. Roughly speaking, the parliament of the United Kingdom deals with all the things with which we deal and many other things in addition. The Parliament of the United Kingdom deals with everything the ten legislatures in Canada deal with in the course of a year, and deals with these things in relation to more than twice the population. In addition, in the United Kingdom there are more nationalized industries.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. I regret to interrupt the hon. member but his time has expired.

Some hon. Members: Carry on.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Is it agreed that the hon. member may continue?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. MacLean: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I am grateful to the house for giving me unanimous consent. I shall wind up my remarks quickly.

I was making the point that the two situations are not comparable. Canada is a diverse country with great distances, many ethnic groups, many regions, two languages and perhaps more important than anything else so far as the population being conscious of what is happening in parliament is concerned, in Canada we do not have a truly national press. Any press which aspires to be a national press generally speaking is not even located in Ottawa, the capital city. On the other hand, in the United Kingdom there is a national press located right at the heart of parliament and anything which takes place in the House of Commons is common knowledge throughout the United Kingdom almost immediately.

I should like to make one more reference to the situation in the United Kingdom. The position of the Speaker—and I am not speaking of personalities—is much stronger. He is appointed for life or until he wishes to retire. He may be a person who formally was associated with an opposition party. He appoints to the business committee men whom he knows to be objective and as non-partisan as possible. The business committee is responsible to the Speaker. The committee is composed of a chairman and members appointed by the Speaker. In that way, in the United Kingdom the Speaker has been given by parliament the undoubted power to act as referee, as it were, in contentious situations to a much greater degree than is the case here. This is an important matter. I wish to point out, for example, that not only does the Speaker have special powers but also, for instance, in relation to the closure rule when a member rises to propose a motion of closure the Speaker decides right there and then whether or not it is appropriate that the motion be put. If he does not think it is appropriate, because he believes the rights of minorities are being infringed, then he does not accept it at that time and allows the debate to proceed.

I should like to see Mr. Speaker here given some such powers by parliament so that he could be the adjudicator, the referee or umpire. In that way we could get on with rules which would be acceptable to everybody. Only in that way can we function adequately as a parliament. A great deal of talk has been heard about the guillotine rule in the British House of Commons. What the government is asking for here is not a guillotine. It is asking for a blunderbuss. Considering the government's refusal to divide the omnibus bill into various sections and allow a free vote on that, and considering the vast concessions made to the government in respect of changes in the rules, it is my belief the government has acted in a way which should lead us to think it cannot be trusted with a blunderbuss at this time, especially when it wishes to have it on the shelf so that it will be convenient for use when we reconvene in October.

• (5:40 p.m.)

[Translation]

Mr. Henry Latulippe (Compton): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to take part in this debate but I should like to say at once that I am sorry about the present situation. I am sorry to see that after hundreds of years, we still have to fight for our rights and our prerogatives.

While the Canadian people fought so hard and with such dedication, while our ancestors worked so hard to promote and protect the interests of the people, we are still faced with the same conditions.

This, Mr. Speaker, breaks our hearts and we are disappointed to see that this parliament, in 1969—in the 20th century, a century of science and progress—still has to waste time, to fight and to protest strongly in order to preserve its rights.

I think that these rights are dear to us, Mr. Speaker. They should be protected to the utmost because they are what is most precious, noble and great in a country where democracy has a right to exist and where everybody has a right to insist on his prerogatives. At present, this government wants to force upon us a real dictatorship. Now, if they were in the opposition, perhaps they would not say the same thing.

I have been here since 1962 when the Liberals were in the opposition. They were then taking part in the debates and wasting the time of the house. In those days, they were fighting vigorously to maintain their rights. They claimed that the government was interfering with their rights and prerogatives.

Indeed, the Liberals monopolized the time of the house to the extent where no rule could be adopted.

The situation has now changed. The opposition has accepted certain reforms. It has been quite reasonable; it has taken several steps in the right direction to improve the Standing Orders of the house. There is not one member of the opposition who is not in favour of making some improvements. There is not one of them who does not want progress and to do something for the people.

As for us, we have been forced to take certain steps to be recognized, to be heard. To represent the elite, and the people, the opposition has been forced to do that because the government has introduced impossible laws, laws that are unfair to the people.

When the government introduced the omnibus bill, to which 80 per cent of the people were opposed, we used every right and prerogative at our disposal in order that the rights of those who did not want it should be respected. The bill was adopted just the same. Unfair laws like that one will be used to hold up the business of the house.

If social, humane laws were introduced, if improvements were made to our economic system, if the rights of the individual, the human being, were recognized, it would be something new, and the opposition would then be happy to co-operate with the government.

Indeed, when the government introduces social laws, humane laws, with which the people agree, the opposition does not oppose them; it votes for their adoption.

We vote for any good legislation that happens to be introduced.

That is what we have been sent here for. We are not here to filibuster. We have been elected to administer, to represent the people, to take part in the making of legislation, in the best interests of the people. That is the reason why we have been elected.

Such is the position of the Ralliement créditiste and that has been our approach, so far.

As a matter of fact, Mr. Speaker, the government is practically denying the rights and the principles of the opposition. It has decided to relinquish the safeguards of the laws and to curtail the prerogatives of the opposition.

We are against that and we are going to fight to the end so that the opposition may preserve its rights and prerogatives..

There would have been many subjects to discuss if the government had allowed, for example, a debate on agriculture. We barely had time to discuss agriculture. Canadian agriculture is in the worst state of stagnation it has ever known. We did not have enough time to discuss its plight because the government did not see fit to introduce legislation in that field and because it was afraid of being forced to do something for agriculture. It preferred doing something for finance, not for agriculture.

Many other measures concerning industry could have been introduced.

Indeed, the government could have proposed measures, Mr. Speaker—

• (5:50 p.m.)

Mr. Ouellet: Mr. Speaker, would the hon. member permit a question?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. The hon. member for Papineau wishes to ask a question of the hon. member for Compton.

[Mr. Latulippe.]

Mr. Ouellet: Mr. Speaker, I ask the hon. member if he agrees with me that if the Creditiste members had not engaged in a filibuster on the omnibus bill, the government would probably have had the opportunity to bring forward the legislation he is talking about.

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege.

With all due respect, I wish to point out that the authority of the Chair is unmistakably put in question while the hon. member for Compton is making his speech.

I have noticed that since the beginning of his very interesting remarks, the clowns opposite have not had the decency to listen to them. They are busy talking among themselves and joking.

Mr. Speaker, I want to point out that this is detrimental to the authority of the Chair and that we, from the opposition, are ready to cooperate with you so that your authority may be respected. If you need our help, we could tell off those clowns across the way.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. I am very grateful indeed to the hon. member and I shall follow his advice.

Mr. Latulippe: Mr. Speaker, as for the filibustering to which the hon. member for Papineau was referring, I had already answered by saying that we were filibustering because the legislation was unfair and that 80 per cent of the people were against it. That is why we have used this tactic.

Mr. Speaker, we are here to make laws and a laws is the result of several factors. Before passing a law, we must examine every aspect of it, we must put it through trial. A law should not only be conceived by lawyers, because even if they represent their profession well, if they are good at drafting laws, a law applies to every citizen. In order that a law be socially just, it must reflect the image of the nation as a whole.

Well, here, the whole nation is represented. The house has farmers, industrialists, businessmen, lawyers and doctors in short all classes of society are represented here.

Therefore, any bill that is passed must reflect the aspirations of Canadian society, and must not merely be a written text prepared by lawyers who handle words with great skill to make the laws incomprehensible.

The measure that the government is now proposing, that is rule 75c, does not reflect public opinion. Canadians are living in a democratic country and have not yet accepted a dictatorship. The Canadian people do not approve of this rule which was written by a few members of the government party who appear to be determined to ram it down the throats of the people and of the opposition.

The people of Canada still want democratic principles to be respected, and you of the government party have been elected under the label of democracy and not under that of dictatorship because at the present time, dictatorship has no place in Canada.

I should tell the government that we are sorry to see the character of this debate. If the debates of this house were protracted and there was a filibuster, as my hon. friend said a while ago, the fault lies not with the opposition but with the government. The reason was rule 75c that the Liberal party wanted to force on the population in spite of objections from a large majority. That is not democracy but dictatorship, actually. That is contrary to democracy, a type of government that we cherish and want to preserve.

If the Liberal members were sitting in the opposition, I feel that this house would be in a turmoil. I believe that none of them would have the courage to accept such a rule, a rule devised by some of them who turn up their noses at democracy. Today, they are all prepared to give in, to follow like sheep and to vote in favour of such a rule, and that against the will of the Canadian population.

Mr. Speaker, we heard all kinds of comments during this debate and, in my opinion, hon. members have brought out all that is important. They have tried to explain conditions, to give their views and they have asked the government to give in. They said that we from the opposition had up to now made several attempts in order to improve the rules and to speed up the business of the house.

The opposition has tried to attain a certain goal, but from now on the party in office must make concessions. It must catch up with the opposition so that an agreement may be reached and so that the sovereign rights of democracy may be fully respected. It is the duty of the government at the present time to take the lead and meet the opposition, in order to reach an agreement.

I agree with the previous speaker who asked the government whether it would not be possible for both parties to agree and postpone the debate in order to bring the session to an end, in accordance with general consensus. It is certainly not to the credit of Canada that the house is sitting under conditions such as those existing at the present time, without any agreement or settlement in sight. Therefore, parliament should adjourn and proceed with the debate later on.

Until then we might all have time to find other solutions and other steps liable to give to the Canadian nation a real goal, that is, the existence of a sound and lively democracy, of a democracy which will give Canadians security and some freedom, and not only yokes, as it is presently intended.

Until now, Mr. Speaker, high finance has been favoured, it has received everything. Interest rates have increased, as well as those of bonds. For instance, as of July 1, 1969, bonds for which the rate was 5 per cent were renewed at 8 per cent. Those who used to get $50,000 in interests on a million dollars worth of bonds will now receive $80,000.

Some hon. Members: Order, order.

Mr. Latulippe: That is what was done, Mr. Speaker. Nothing has been done for the people. Finance got everything—Let us think about the people, and—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. It being six o'clock, the house stands adjourned until 2 p.m. tomorrow.

[English]

At six o'clock the house adjourned, without question put, pursuant to standing order.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Thursday, July 17, 1969

The house met at 2 p.m.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

HOUSE OF COMMONS

MOTION UNDER STANDING ORDER 42(1) TO ADJOURN AT 4 P.M.

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I rise for the purpose of making a motion under the authority of Standing Order 42(1). Your Honour has in recent days had to deal with a number of motions tendered under Standing Order 43. This one is under Standing Order 42(1), which reads in part as follows:

> Forty-eight hours' notice shall be given of a motion for leave to present a bill, resolution or address, for the appointment of any committee, or for placing a question on the order paper; but this rule shall not apply to bills after their introduction, or to private bills, or to the times of meeting or adjournment of the house.

My motion will have to do with the time of the adjournment of the house this day. May I point out that citation 51 of Beauchesne's fourth edition, to be found on page 40, reads as follows:

> No notice is required for a motion relating to "the times of meeting or adjournment of the house."

There appears in parenthesis "S.O. 45", which referred to Standing Order 45. That was its number when this book was published but it is now Standing Order 42(1). I continue with citation 51:

> The word "times" is translated by "heures" in the French version of S.O. 41. It seems therefore that if a motion does not relate to the hour but to the day on which the house is to sit, a notice must be given. See decision given by Speaker Rhodes on May 21st, 1920.

There are a few more words in that citation, and the concluding sentence is:

> The reason why no notice is required is that Standing Order 41 which provides for notices to be given says that the rule shall not apply "to the times of meeting or adjournment of the house".

I would also draw Your Honour's attention to a ruling made in the course of a debate which took place in the house on Thursday, December 20, 1951. It just so happens that the motion made that day was in the name of the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Its procedural validity was contested by certain members of the house who were not very friendly to us on that occasion. Times have changed.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): When the Conservatives objected to the validity of the amendment I moved that day, a point of order was raised and Mr. Speaker Macdonald made a ruling which appears at pages 2257 and 2258 of Hansard for December 20, 1951. My motion on that occasion—it was perhaps a bit novel—proposed that the hours of sitting for that day be altered, specifically that we not rise for the luncheon or dinner breaks and that we sit, if necessary, after the evening time of adjournment.

Some hon. Members: Carried.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): I am not moving that one today.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): When the matter came to a head procedurally, Mr. Speaker Macdonald made a very clear ruling. He went back to Mr. Speaker Rhodes and read the Standing Order in both languages, and so on. He made it clear that if my motion had had to do with days of sitting it would have required notice, but since it dealt only with the hours of sitting on that day, and that day only, it was in order. Mr. Speaker Ross Macdonald so ruled at the top of page 2258 of Hansard for December 20, 1951.

I have carried out further research on this matter and I find there have been other such occasions and it has always been held that if an effort is being made to determine the days the house might sit, 48 hours notice must be given, or it requires unanimous consent; but a motion dealing only with the hours of sitting on that day does not require notice. That provision is still in our rules under Standing Order 42(1) which I read a few moments ago.

• (2:10 p.m.)

It is on the basis of these precedents that I wish to make a motion which I shall read in a moment. I want to speak briefly to it because, under the Standing Order, it is a debatable motion. Therefore, I do not want to present it in such a way that I will have to resume my seat. We can deal with points of order if necessary, but in any case my motion reads: That the house adjourn this day at four o'clock p.m. I point out, although it is crystal clear in the wording, that this relates only to this day's sitting; it relates only to the question of the hour of adjournment. This is fully covered in Standing Order 42(1). My purpose in making this motion at this time is also clear, I hope, namely, that it will provide an opportunity for us to try to cope in a different way from what we have been doing with the problem with which the house is now seized.

The president of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald) in statements made to the press yesterday, which surprised some of us but which I accept at their face value, declared that he found it difficult to arrange a meeting with the opposition house leaders to discuss the procedural battle in which we are engaged at the present time. I practically live on the hill and I do not see any difficulty in being called to a meeting. I am ready to attend a meeting with the other house leaders at any time. But I submit, Mr. Speaker, that it would be a good idea, that it would be common sense, and that the country would approve of this course, if we were to adjourn the house this afternoon at four o'clock so that the government house leader can call a meeting of the house leaders, or even go further and call an informal meeting of the members of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization, to see whether, within the confines of such a meeting, we can come to some understanding on the problem that is before the house.

I recognize, from the communications we seem to be having through the press, that our positions seem to be irreconcilable. The President of the Privy Council says that he wants the principle of rule 75c without question. We on this side say that we want rule 75c to be dropped. However, I submit that our positions are no more irreconcilable than they were in December on rule 16A. Yet in December, as a result of a conference of several hours, we did come to an understanding on the basis of which the members of this house went home for Christmas. I submit that that conference produced more than that. It produced a package of rules under which the house has operated very well for the past six months. I believe that by holding such a conference this afternoon we might be able to achieve more than we can by carrying on a debate in which we have reached an impasse and in which neither side seems to be giving in at all.

[Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre).]

That is my main reason for the motion. Some hon. members may have thought I was moving that we adjourn at four o'clock because it is such a hot day. That is an ancillary reason, and I am sure that the staff in this place would be delighted if we adopted this course. I would also point out that I have fixed the time so as to allow for a short debate, if that is necessary, and also time for the question period. I would not quarrel if someone wanted me to change the motion to five o'clock so that we could have the question period and a somewhat longer time for the debate, but I do think it makes common sense to follow a course of this kind.

This is my response to the appeal that the President of the Privy Council made through the press yesterday and this morning, namely, that he would like to meet with us. I did not think it was necessary to go about it in this way, but this is my response, the suggestion that the house not carry on this debate today, a debate which seems to be getting nowhere, but that there be an appropriate kind of meeting in the office of the President of the Privy Council or, if necessary, I would invite the meeting to be held in mine.

Therefore I have pleasure in moving, seconded by the hon. member for Vancouver East (Mr. Winch):

That the house adjourn this day at four o'clock p.m.

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Is the hon. member rising on a point of order in connection with the proposed motion?

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): No, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The motion has not yet been put to the house. Although I may have some doubt concerning the motion, in view of the fact that it has not been questioned procedurally I will put it to the house at this time.

The motion, moved by Mr. Knowles, Winnipeg North Centre, and seconded by Mr. Winch, is that this house adjourn this day at four o'clock p.m.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Speaker, I was rising originally to support the admissibility of the motion.

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps the hon. member might now like to speak to the motion itself.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Speaker, without wishing to appear to curry any particular favour may I say that perhaps this motion had a happy origin in the gathering Your Honour convened yesterday afternoon where people were able to, shall we say, get together and look at things from a slightly different point of view. So we would hope, having Your Honour's happy inspiration as a precedent, that the house would now take the example of the initiative of Your Honour, and of the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) in moving the motion.

I think it is quite clear to Your Honour and to hon. members that this would appear to be a logical outcome of the position taken by the Leader of the Opposition in a press conference on Monday in which he indicated there was some approach, some modification or some form of agreement that could be reached on certain terms. The reply yesterday by the government house leader was to another version, but I do not consider that the versions are self-excluding and I would urge hon. members, particularly on the government side, to accept this opportunity to convene a meeting to see what kind of a meeting of minds there might be to resolve this problem.

I am sure, on the basis perhaps of something that was indicated by some ministers privately and indicated by house leaders or representatives of the various opposition parties, that there is some common ground on which to move. After all, this is the way a consensus may be arrived at. This is the way a solution is sometimes found to a problem that all too often appears impossible of rationalization. After all, the opposition is composed of reasonable men and so is the government.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Speaker, they do not all wear horns and have forked tails—just some of them. In any event, let us see whether an attempt can be made at this time. I think we would be much poorer in our attempts to resolve this matter if we did not make this effort because, if there is not to be a solution, at least no one can then point the finger at members of the house and say that they did not really try to explore all avenues. To that extent I would support the motion put forward by the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre.

• (2:20 p.m.)

[Translation]

Mr. André Fortin (Lotbinière): Mr. Speaker, for some days now the House of Commons has found itself in an unfortunate dilemna. The standing orders governing our proceedings are under consideration.

Both parties are far apart and apparently a solution cannot be found. I am reminded of labour conflicts which can sometimes hurt a lot of people before they are settled.

Mr. Speaker, the motion of the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) for the adjournment of the house at 4 o'clock, to enable the committee on procedure and organization to hold an important meeting, in order to find a compromise or to negotiate, is an excellent idea. We must congratulate the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre for having thought of it and for having introduced that motion.

As far as we are concerned, we, of the Ralliement Créditiste, would like to support and encourage Your Honour to give his approval, so that consultations among representatives of all parties in the house may begin, in order to restore the understanding and co-operation that have always existed among the parties, and to avoid the virulent and unreasonable attacks we have been witnessing recently.

We are not getting anywhere. We find ourselves in an impasse. The government says: You are wrong. The opposition tells the government: You are mistaken. And day after day, discussions go on and on without any light or solution. Mr. Speaker, this is a ridiculous situation, because of a lack of co-operation, good will, and consultation among parties.

In a word, if this motion is ruled in order by the Chair, we hope it will also have the support of government members, because I feel the stalemate we are in must come to an end and negotiations must begin.

I should like to join the other hon. members so that it may be said that the House of Commons has kept its prestige and has been willing to set an example showing to the Canadian people that, when things are deadlocked, it is always better to negotiate than to attack.

[English]

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the first thing I should do is to welcome the change of heart on the part of the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre.

Mr. Hees: There he goes again.

Mr. McGrath: That is not the way to do it.

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): I appreciate his statement that he is available for consultation. I would have appreciated some consultation in advance in connection with his intention to move this motion, but I make nothing of that.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): I have been here all the time for the past three weeks.

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): The hon. member was presumably available this morning and could have consulted me about the motion. However, I make nothing of that. I note that the hon. member is accepting the description of his and other opposition members' participation in the debate as a filibuster, that it has been a useless and pointless exercise. This is an acknowledgement on their part.

I would be very glad to hear from the hon. member. I have been sitting with him in the committee since Christmas. He has taken a certain position that I respect and for which he has held out, and he knows what my position has been. But I would be delighted to close the gap if we could and therefore would be quite prepared to meet with him. I notice the house leader for the Official Opposition is not here, but I would be prepared to meet an appropriate representative of that group, and also of the Ralliement Créditistes, with the hon. member. On the whole I think this will probably be a useful initiative. It will not serve any useful purpose if we continue hearing speakers from the other side in this regard. We will therefore accept the motion.

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the house to adopt the said motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion (Mr. Knowles, Winnipeg North Centre) agreed to.

[Mr. Fortin.]

CANADIAN WHEAT BOARD

TABLING OF PRICE SCHEDULE FOR SPECIFIED DAYS, MARCH AND JULY, 1969

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): Mr. Speaker, I wish to table, under Standing Order 41(2), copies in English and French of the Canadian Wheat Board wheat price schedule for specified days in March and July, 1969, as promised.

ORAL QUESTIONS

AGRICULTURE

REPRESENTATIONS BY CANADIAN FEDERATION OF AGRICULTURE RESPECTING ASSISTANCE TO WESTERN FARMERS

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the Acting Prime Minister whether he or his colleagues have located the telegram dated July 15 which was sent by the Canadian Federation of Agriculture? If so, what response has the government made to the urgent representations made in that telegram? At the same time, can the minister say whether his attention has been drawn to a public statement by the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, dated yesterday, in which it is presumed that the federation's proposals of May 28 have been rejected because no response has been made? Does the minister agree with that interpretation?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the whole subject of agricultural policy is, needless to say, under very active consideration by the government. The problem, as the hon. member knows, is extremely complex, and I have no apology to make for saying that the matter is still under consideration.

Mr. Stanfield: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Is it the position of the government of Canada that it has a moral obligation to see that farmers receive the equivalent of the floor price they would have received under the International Grains Arrangement? It is my understanding that the government subscribed to that agreement.

Mr. Sharp: No, Mr. Speaker. That was an international agreement that we supported very strongly. We had every hope and reason to hope it would work satisfactorily. Of course, if other countries are not complying with the agreement and we have to meet competition, I do not think it would be appropriate for the Canadian government to guarantee domestically those international minimum prices.

TRADE

WHEAT—INTERNATIONAL GRAINS ARRANGEMENT—EFFORTS TO RE-ESTABLISH MINIMUM PRICE

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): I have a further question to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce, Mr. Speaker. In view of the disorganization resulting from the abandonment of the minimum price under the International Grains Arrangement, as reported by the minister, and in view of continuing pressure on world wheat prices, can the minister say whether any continuing consultative committee representing the various countries involved is operating on a day to day basis with a view to restoring order in the market and re-establishing the minimum price under the agreement? I am referring to a consultative group which might meet day by day as opposed to occasional meetings of ministers representing the various countries.

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): Mr. Speaker, I think the Leader of the Opposition is ahead of events. He and some members of the press have been ahead of events for the last couple of days. Reference has been made to a collapse in prices, to a dramatic price decline, and so on. Of course, all these things may happen, and I have been perfectly frank with the house in my assessments. They may happen but they have not happened yet. That being so, it is wrong for anyone to leave the impression that they have happened. As a matter of fact, the purpose of the meeting in Washington was to avoid such a happening. In order to do so, it was essential to restore co-operation among the exporters. I am not in a position to say that will happen, but I have been perfectly frank with the house in saying what the situation is and what is being done.

The working group representing the I.G.A. exporting members, established in part as a result of agreements reached in Washington, is about to become operative. In the meantime I am in touch with the I.G.A. exporting members. The maximum communication exists between the different capitals of the exporting countries participating in the I.G.A. The meeting in Washington last week might well have prevented a price collapse from happening.

Mr. Stanfield: I thank the minister for his statement regarding the functions of the working committee. Anything I said is based on the minister's own statement in the house that the minimum prices under the I.G.A. were under suspension at least temporarily. Those were the minister's own words.

Mr. Pepin: The words I used were: "have been de facto temporarily suspended." Perhaps I could have made a better choice of words but, as hon. members know, I am limited in English. I should possibly have said—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Pepin: —they have become de facto temporarily inoperative—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce. In view of the minister's statement that the floor prices under the International Grains Arrangement are temporarily suspended and a lower plateau was agreed upon by the exporting nations in the I.G.A., can the minister tell the house what that plateau will be and within what price range the exporting nations will be selling wheat from now on?

Mr. Pepin: We are debating very fine points. What I said in my report to the house was that at the meeting in Washington it was realized that there had been "distortions" and that "adjustments" were needed and would have to be made. I do not know exactly at what level the adjustments will finally be made but it has to be presumed that in the present circumstances the level would be slightly lower than the minimum of the I.G.A. pricing schedule. All depends on the willingness of some exporters to restrain their aggressiveness. As I said the other day, there are different ways in which this could be done. So far as Canada is concerned, the lowest decline if there must be one is the objective at this time. We are trying to avoid an accentuated, a dramatic price reduction. This is our objective, and I would like the hon. member to believe we are working hard at it.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): A supplementary Mr. Speaker. Inasmuch as the minister met with the Wheat Board last Monday, can he give the house any information as to the outcome of those discussions with the Wheat Board and whether he conveyed to the Wheat Board on behalf of the government the latter's willingness to make up the difference between the price received by the Wheat Board and the floor price under the International Grains Arrangement, $1.95½ a bushel f.o.b. Fort William?

Mr. Pepin: My discussions and the Prime Minister's discussions with the Wheat Board were connected with the efforts made by the Wheat Board to market wheat internationally. I do not think I should be asked to report on that. With respect to the government making up the difference between the I.G.A. minimum price and the present and future price, this would have to be a government decision. As the Acting Prime Minister stated, we are obviously working at preventing a government commitment too high to contemplate. Any success that we have in preventing a downward movement will result in less compensation being requested from the government in the future.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): May I ask a further—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Perhaps the hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands might be allowed a further supplementary. Other hon. members are anxious to ask supplementary questions on the same subject.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): My supplementary will be brief, Mr. Speaker. In view of the fact the crop year has only two more weeks to run, how soon will the government reach a decision with respect to guaranteeing the farmers the minimum price established under the I.G.A.?

Mr. Pepin: The Acting Prime Minister has already answered that.

COMPETITIVE POSITION OF REDUCED WHEAT BOARD PRICES

Hon. D. S. Harkness (Calgary Centre): Mr. Speaker, as the schedule of wheat prices which the minister tabled a little earlier today shows No. 1 reduced 5⅞ cents, No. 2, 7 cents, No. 3, 10 cents, and Nos. 4 and 5 only one cent each, I ask the minister whether these prices are now competitive with those being charged by the United States, Australia and the other wheat exporting countries?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): Mr. Speaker, that is much too complicated to answer in the question period because the situation varies in different parts of the world. It varies because of so many different circumstances that it is unfair to expect me to give an answer. The general attitude in the world of exporters at this time is that through "advantages" they had some exporters have gained more than what I might call their fair expectations and others have not. The purpose of the exercise is to try to equalize advantages by price "adjustments" and co-operation.

Mr. Harkness: A supplementary, Mr. Speaker. Is the minister not able to say that these prices are competitive? Are sales actually being made at the present time at these prices? Have the government and the Wheat Board made a firm decision to continue to meet prices if they continue to fall?

Mr. Pepin: This decision was made on March 14. It applies today, it applied yesterday and it will apply tomorrow. But as I said one day to the right hon. member for Prince Albert, we are trying to be competitive at the highest possible level and not at the lowest possible level. Again we are trying to be competitive at the highest possible level.

Mr. Harkness: The minister did not answer the question whether sales are actually being made at these prices. If so, can the minister say whether two or three such sales have been made?

Mr. Pepin: I am being asked to give market information. A couple of weeks ago a rather important sale of 7.5 million bushels was made to Peru. That sale was made by the Wheat Board with the full co-operation of the credit facilities provided by the Canadian government.

GRAIN

WHEAT—ABILITY OF GRAIN HANDLING SYSTEM TO ABSORB FIVE BUSHEL QUOTA

Mr. A. P. Gleave (Saskatoon-Biggar): I wish to direct a further question to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce. As a result of the minister's meetings with the Canadian Wheat Board, can he give the house any assurance that the grain system will be able to take in the five-bushel quota as of August 1?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): I have before me the usual daily report on progress made. I have been very generous in showing these reports. It is still the opinion of the board that it can physically be done. What is physically possible as the Creditistes say, could be done materialistically also. I can assure the hon. member that maximum efforts are being made by the Wheat Board and by the railways in order to reach this objective. I will be relieved if and when they achieve it.

Mr. Gleave: Mr. Speaker, I fully accept the assurance and the intent of the minister. Will he agree that if this objective is not achieved he and those responsible under him are prepared to consider an extension of the crop year until the five-bushel quota is achieved?

Mr. Speaker: Order. This appears to be a hypothetical question.

Mr. Gleave: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. With all due respect to Your Honour, the question is very close to not being hypothetical.

Mr. Cliff Downey (Battle River): Mr. Speaker, would the minister consider extending the crop year, whether or not deliveries are made, so as to enable the farmers to receive their final payments within the coming year to help them in financing the following year's operations? With the crop year terminating at the usual time, it will be some 18 months before the farmers are in a position to receive their final payments.

Mr. Pepin: Mr. Speaker, my hon. friends on the other side are too knowledgeable for me to have to explain to them the disadvantages of extending the crop year, one of which is that people who are not in a position to deliver before the end of the present crop year might find ways and means of delivering afterward if the year were extended. This would be unfair to those people who could not deliver as much as they would have liked and had been able to deliver, but were not allowed to do so. That is one of the obvious disadvantages, and there are others. Again, as has been said, the question of whether or not we will reach this objective of a five bushel quota still remains unanswered but we are working with the Wheat Board in an effort to make sure this can be done.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, has the minister had any discussions with the Wheat Board or the Board of Grain Commissioners with a view to authorizing the elevator companies to use off-track, off-site or other storage facilities, or has he considered authorizing the elevator companies to store grain on the ground at those shipping points which have not got the five-bushel quota by July 31? If these discussions have not been held, will the minister hold them or will he authorize the board to allow the elevator companies to do this?

Mr. Pepin: Some of these points were discussed at the last meeting and they are still being considered.

[Translation]

INDIAN AFFAIRS

ROBERVAL COMPOSITE SCHOOL

Mr. Adrien Lambert (Bellechasse): Mr. Speaker, I shall give the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce some respite and direct my question to the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development.

In answer to my question of May 29 with regard to the federal contribution to the cost of building the composite school in Roberval, I was told that the amount of that contribution had not yet been determined.

Can the minister tell us today what progress has been made in the negotiations with the local school board and if the amount of the federal contribution has been determined?

Mr. Speaker: In my view, that question should be put on the order paper. If it is urgent, the hon. member could ask the minister to discuss it with him at the time of adjournment.

Mr. Lambert (Bellechasse): Mr. Speaker, should the house keep on sitting, we will then have some additional evenings. I therefore ask that my question be dealt with at ten o'clock.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Perhaps we might come to some arrangements in order that it be discussed during an additional evening, even if the house is not sitting.

[English]

TRADE

DECLINE IN SURPLUS—INQUIRY AS TO ACTION

Hon. George Hees (Prince Edward-Hastings): Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that Canada's trade surplus has decreased by more than $300 million during the first six months of the year, is it the intention of the government to take steps immediately to correct this serious trend in order that serious unemployment will not develop as a result of the volume of imports into Canada increasing much faster than the volume of exports?

Inquiries of the Ministry

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): Mr. Speaker, I think in any economy like ours it must be expected that in some years the growth in exports will be higher than in other years, depending upon what is taking place in the country. I understand that when you have industrial development imports are bound to increase. Such growth in imports is not necessarily bad. I have nevertheless issued a paper in which I have invited exporters to become even more aggressive than they were when the hon. member was Minister of Trade and Commerce. It may not have been possible at that time, but it may be now as we have improved our facilities with the Export Development Corporation coming into effect in September. For the time being, the E.C.I.C. is more active than before because—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I apologize to the minister for interrupting him. I appreciate that the hon. member has a supplementary question. I expected he would have one. I had some doubts about the question in the first instance. Had I suggested it be placed on the order paper we might now have an easier situation. Hon. members know that the Chair always hesitates to allow questions which ask for general statements by ministers and to which ministers respond in a proper fashion by making lengthy statements. This places the Chair in a different position because the Chair must interrupt the minister who is in effect only answering the question which has been allowed. I would think that normally this type of question should be placed on the order paper. However, in view of the fact, as has been pointed out by another hon. member, we are not going to be here for an eternity, perhaps the hon. member should be allowed to ask the supplementary.

Mr. Hees: Mr. Speaker, having great respect for your rulings and the way you control the house I shall desist from asking my usual supplementary question.

Mr. Speaker: I wonder whether the hon. member might not want to change his mind later. If he does I shall accept it.

Hon. D. S. Harkness (Calgary Centre): Mr. Speaker, I had intended to ask the minister a similar question. Is the serious reduction of over $300 million in six months in great part the result of reduced wheat sales and, if so, to what extent?

Mr. Pepin: Mr. Speaker, I will find out the extent of its effect. It certainly has had a part, but there are other factors involved. For example last year there were strikes in the United States and other circumstances which helped to increase our exports. I would think that the decline in the sales of wheat has not been so important this year compared with last year—exports of wheat was 310 million bushels this year as opposed to 325 million last year. It was in comparison with the previous year that the big decline took place.

EXTERNAL AID

DEVELOPING NATIONS—INQUIRY AS TO INCREASE IN ASSISTANCE

Mr. David Lewis (York South): Mr. Speaker, my question arises from a report in todays' newspapers emanating from the O.E.C.D. which suggests that Canada is the lowest among members in respect of assistance in external aid in relation to gross national product. I should like to ask the Secretary of State for External Affairs whether the government is preparing plans to increase Canada's assistance to developing nations this year?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Yes, Mr. Speaker. I am aware of this report and have been for some time. I gather it has now been published. I share with the government the hon. member's desire to increase the volume of our aid. One of the rather unusual factors that arose last year was the replenishment of I.D.A. The International Development Association was allotted certain amounts which we would ordinarily have contributed last year. Our expenditures in the first six months this year in respect of development assistance as officially defined are $149 million compared with $76 million last year. This indicates that not only are we increasing our aid but that there were some very special factors operating last year.

Mr. Lewis: I should like to ask the minister, in view of the fact that during the last number of years the amounts actually spent by Canada in aid to developing nations were sometimes as much as one-third below the amounts voted by parliament, whether he and the government will consider picking up the lag in these amounts, particularly through the provision of wheat and flour to needy countries throughout the world in view of our wheat surplus?

Mr. Sharp: Mr. Speaker, it is the purpose of the government to try to overcome this lag.

I might point out to the hon. gentleman that one of the reasons our aid sometimes lags behind appropriations is that it does not lapse at the end of the year, whereas some other contributing countries insist that the money be used during the year. Since we have been concentrating on development we had allowed the amounts to accumulate, and sometimes they are not expended as rapidly as would otherwise be the case. With regard to aid in the form of wheat, if there are people who need our wheat I can assure the hon. member that we will be only too happy to increase our appropriation in this respect.

Mr. Lewis: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I would suggest that we move on to another subject. There is only a short time left in the question period and several hon. members wish to ask questions. If there is time at the end of the question period we might return to this very important matter.

AGRICULTURE

QUEBEC—HAIL AND RAIN DAMAGE SUFFERED BY MARKET GARDENERS AND APPLE GROWERS

Mr. Walter Smith (Saint-Jean): With your permission, Mr. Speaker, I would like to address a question to the Minister of Agriculture through his parliamentary secretary.

[Translation]

Would the Minister of Agriculture have received a telegram from the Association of truck gardeners of the Montreal area in connection with damages incurred through hail and rain in the Sherrington, Saint-Michel and Ville-Laval areas? Would he also have received one from the Hemmingford and Covey Hill apple growers?

Mr. Florian Côté (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The question as asked is out of order. The hon. member cannot ask simply whether a telegram or a message has been received. In that sense, the question is out of order. On the other hand, the Chair will perhaps allow the Parliamentary Secretary to answer the question of the hon. member.

Mr. Côté: Mr. Speaker, at the beginning of the week, when the hon. members for Saint-Jean, Laval and Laprairie (Messrs. Smith, Roy and Watson) made representations in this regard, we had not received that telegram. However, we have received the telegram since then.

In general, the problem of crops damaged by bad weather is entirely one for the provinces and, in the past, when the provincial authorities could not cope financially with the damages caused by bad weather, they would ask the federal government for help.

But in the last few years, the federal government has established crop insurance and has granted close to $1,200,000 to the province of Quebec.

Mr. André Fortin (Lotbinière): Mr. Speaker, I would like—

Mr. Speaker: Order. I believe I have already shown a certain generosity by allowing the question. The hon. member might want to continue discussing it at the time of adjournment, if there is urgency, as he seems to suggest.

[English]

INDIAN AFFAIRS

DEPARTMENTAL POLICY—ATTITUDE OF PROVINCIAL INDIAN ASSOCIATIONS

Mr. R. N. Thompson (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, I direct my question to the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development. In view of the recent announcement that representatives of British Columbia Indians would not meet the minister, will the minister advise the house as to the number of provincial Indian associations that have taken a similar stand toward his new policy?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I would think the hon. member is asking for the type of information which would normally be asked for in written form. However, the house may want the minister to reply.

[Translation]

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Mr. Speaker, I am just back from British Columbia where I met many Indian chiefs. I put myself at the disposal of those who wanted to talk with me and most of them were quite reasonable. They discussed the Indian policy and I think that Indians are now interested in examining it. If they have alternate proposals to make, we shall be pleased to consider them.

[English]

Mr. Thompson: I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Will the minister assure the house that the special departmental study group will not go into those provinces in which recognized leaders of Indian associations are not prepared to discuss this question directly with the study group?

[Translation]

Mr. Chrétien: Mr. Speaker, a distinction has to be made. We are prepared to talk with the Indian people. However, nobody should be allowed to forbid the minister or his officials to meet with the said Indian people when it is deemed necessary.

I have started on a visit of all the Canadian provinces and talked with the Indian leaders who were willing to meet me. I consider that I shall always have the privilege, on behalf of the citizens of Canada, of meeting any Indian in Canada without having to proceed forever through the medium of certain people whose sole purpose is to create a sensation.

[English]

Mr. Frank Howard (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I should like to address a supplementary question to the minister. I am trying to help him not participate in this divide and rule policy. When does he intend to make funds available to the native Indian people so they may make arrangements to meet the minister themselves and participate amongst themselves in a consultation process that is meaningful in order that they may come to a consensus on this question rather than selecting, as is being done, private groups and individuals to meet and obtain prepared answers?

Mr. Chrétien: Mr. Speaker, I would like to correct the hon. member. I make no selection at all. I make myself available to all Indian leaders who want to talk to me. I would tell the hon. member that I hope to have these funds available soon.

Mr. Howard (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I wonder whether I could ask another supplementary question?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I wonder whether I could have the co-operation of the hon. member, as I have had in respect of other hon. members, so we may get on with the question period.

HEALTH AND WELFARE

MEDICAL RESEARCH—REQUEST THAT GRANT BE INCREASED

Mr. P. B. Rynard (Simcoe North): Mr. Speaker, I would like to address a question to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. In view of the institution of an increased training program to provide doctors in Ontario, will the minister state whether he will give further consideration to restoring the cut of 30 per cent made in respect of medical research?

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of National Health and Welfare): I do not agree with the conclusion the hon. member has reached, Mr. Speaker. There has not been a 30 per cent cut in medical research.

LABOUR RELATIONS

VANCOUVER, B.C.—POSSIBILITY OF LONGSHOREMEN'S STRIKE

Mr. Harold E. Winch (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a most important question to the Minister of Labour. Is the minister in a position to bring members of the house up to date on the situation regarding negotiations between employers and the longshoremen's union in Vancouver, in view of the fact that a lockout or strike in August would have a deleterious effect upon the already serious position of Canadian grain growers?

Hon. Bryce Mackasey (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I received the conciliation board report yesterday and have mailed copies of it to both sides, the employers and unions involved. I do not know, of course, what their reaction will be to the report. I understand that talks are continuing. There is a grave possibility that there will be a strike in the Vancouver area at the end of July, which would have an effect upon wheat that would normally be shipped through that port.

I must remind hon. members that if a strike occurs it will be a perfectly legal one, and if a lockout occurs it will be a perfectly legal one. It is not the policy of the government to interfere with the legal rights of either companies or unions involved unless the situation develops into a national emergency, and it is certainly too early to think in that vein.

Mr. Winch: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Has the minister considered changing the approach of his department to this matter and having observers present so that the negotiations will assume a more official status?

Mr. Mackasey: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the question, coming from a member of a party that is closely allied with labour. Surely the hon. member knows as well as anybody in the house that so far we have followed the law explicitly and that a conciliation board has heard union and management representations. The report of the conciliation board was received only yesterday by my department. I think it is a little premature to suggest openly, if I am prepared to suggest it at all, what the next step would be. I do not think it would be in the best interests of anybody to report unofficially, or officially through the question period, what steps will be taken, if any, by the Department of Labour.

[Translation]

AGRICULTURE

MILK—REQUEST TO ABOLISH TAX IMPOSED BY CANADIAN DAIRY COMMISSION

Mr. André Fortin (Lotbinière): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Agriculture, but in his absence, I put it to his parliamentary secretary.

Does he intend to recommend to the minister to review the 52-cent tax per hundredweight of milk imposed by the Canadian Dairy Commission and to abolish it in respect of the unsubsidized surplus production?

Mr. Speaker: I do not think the question as asked is in order. The hon. member is not allowed to ask the parliamentary secretary if he intends to make a recommendation to the minister.

[English]

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE COMMISSION

METHOD OF IMPOSING FINES

Mr. Jack Cullen (Sarnia): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Labour, and I wrote this one myself.

Mr. Howard (Skeena): It might be allowed, then.

Mr. Cullen: Would the minister discuss with the Unemployment Insurance Commission their procedure of imposing punitive fines by way of penalty unilaterally without giving the alleged offender an opportunity to be heard either on the question of whether a fine is warranted or on the amount of the fine?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I am not sure as to the urgency of the question or even as to its significance. May I advise the hon. member that I am tempted to interpret it as a representation made to the minister, and I am sure the hon. member can assume the minister will take his suggestion into consideration.

An hon. Member: Get another writer.

Mr. Cullen: Mr. Speaker, on the point of order may I say that it was necessary for me to bring this matter to the attention of the house because of the publicity it received. I find that sometimes this is a very effective way of getting a message across to politicians and to the public.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

FISHERIES

REQUEST FOR REPORT ON INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE

Mr. Lloyd R. Crouse (South Shore): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct my question to the Minister of Fisheries, and I welcome him back from his fishing expedition in Nova Scotia. Has the minister any report to make on the results achieved at the important international fishing conference which he recently attended in Halifax?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I suggest to the hon. member that while this is a matter of importance he is asking for a statement by the minister which I suggest should be made on motions.

Mr. Crouse: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. Could we have the unanimous consent of the house for the minister to make a report since international fishing regulations and the conservation of fish are involved?

Mr. Speaker: I hear the hon. member's confirmation that this is a matter of importance. If the house wishes to revert to motions for the purpose of allowing the minister to make a statement—

An hon. Member: Never.

Mr. Speaker: Apparently that consent is not forthcoming.

Inquiries of the Ministry

VETERANS AFFAIRS

WOODS REPORT RECOMMENDATIONS—REQUEST FOR ACTION

Mr. W. C. Scott (Victoria-Haliburton): Mr. Speaker, I have a most urgent question for the Minister of Veterans Affairs. Inasmuch as over 10,000 pensioners have died in the 16 months since the tabling of the Woods report, can the minister give us any assurance that the recommendations made in the report will be implemented before many more veterans pass on?

Hon. Jean-Eudes Dubé (Minister of Veterans Affairs): Mr. Speaker, as we all know, the House of Commons Committee on Veterans Affairs will meet on September 15, and at that time it will study both the Woods committee report and the government white paper which should be ready by that time.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

SIMILARITY OF CANADIAN AND BRITISH COINS—INQUIRY AS TO CONSULTATIONS

Hon. J. A. MacLean (Malpeque): Mr. Speaker, I should like to address a question to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Has there been any consultation between the Canadian government and the government of the United Kingdom regarding the introduction by the United Kingdom of the decimal system of coinage among which there is a coin with the physical properties of our quarter but only half its value, which can be used in coin machines in Canada, including post office stamp vending machines?

Mr. Speaker: I wonder whether this question is not one that might be placed more properly on the order paper or debated at the time of adjournment.

Mr. MacLean: May I say with deference, Mr. Speaker, that this is a very urgent matter because people in Canada have been known to collect large numbers of these coins in an attempt to fight inflation.

An hon. Member: What is the value of a quarter?

FINANCE

INTEREST RATE—STATEMENT BY CHAIRMAN, TORONTO-DOMINION BANK

Mr. Max Saltsman (Waterloo): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct my question to the Acting Prime Minister and draw his attention to a statement made by the chairman of the Toronto-Dominion Bank which seems to be a direct challenge to the hopeful aspirations—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member has to ask a question.

Mr. Saltsman: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, I was coming to it. The Minister of Finance has indicated he is hopeful that the prime rate will hold. In view of the fact that this has been challenged in statements by the chairman of the bank, is the Acting Prime Minister, as a former holder of that office, willing to come to the defence of the Minister of Finance?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The question as asked is not in order.

HOUSING

URBAN RENEWAL—REQUEST FOR DATE OF STATEMENT

Mr. J. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa-Whitby): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the minister in charge of housing. In view of the fact that the municipality of Oshawa is being pressed to make an urgent decision on an urban renewal scheme and, further, in view of the fact that certain members of the city council had reason to understand that the minister would make a statement on the federal government's urban renewal proposal on the 15th of this month, would the minister give a clear indication to the house of the date on which he intends to make such a statement?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member reiterates a question which, if my memory serves me correctly, was asked on Tuesday.

INQUIRY OF THE MINISTRY

Mr. Steven E. Paproski (Edmonton Centre): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct this question to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. In view of the statement attributed to the Minister of Supply and Services that talk of western alienation simply melts away with the Prime Minister's presence in the prairies, will the Minister of National Health and Welfare send a team to the west to ascertain whether the Prime Minister has been affected by sunstroke or whether he has fallen foul of sillabub?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

WESTERN AGRICULTURE, SUGGESTED DEBATE —PROCEDURE COMMITTEE REPORT, SUGGESTED ACTION

Mr. John Burton (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct my question to the President of the Privy Council. Since it is likely that the hon. gentleman will be meeting with the other house leaders later today, would he consider the possibility of discussing with them the use of one of the opposition allotted days to discuss the serious agricultural situation in the west, and at the same time discuss the possibility of asking the house to refer the report of the Committee on Procedure and Organization back to that committee in order that the committee may reconsider those portions of the report which have been found objectionable?

An hon. Member: Don't you trust your own house leader?

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): I will be glad to consider the hon. member's suggestion, particularly the one with regard to agricultural policy.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

LABOUR RELATIONS

B.C. TELEPHONE STRIKE—INQUIRY AS TO ACTION BY MINISTER

Mr. Ray Perrault (Burnaby-Seymour): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Labour. During his visit to western Canada was the minister in contact with either or both sides in the British Columbia Telephone Company dispute?

Hon. Bryce Mackasey (Minister of Labour): Not officially, Mr. Speaker, but I did meet with officials of the Department of Labour in the west and discussed with them very thoroughly the B.C. Telephone Company dispute. I can only reiterate what I have said on other occasions, that it is a perfectly legal strike. The Department of Labour has no intention of intervening, but I am sure we will take the initiative in bringing the sides together when we think the time is appropriate and when talks would be meaningful.

Mr. Perrault: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. We have almost gone beyond the time allotted. There is time for one additional question. Perhaps the Opposition might be allowed to ask the last question.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

NIGERIAN RADIO BROADCAST OF ALLEGED STATEMENT BY BRIGADIER GENERAL HAMILTON

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Secretary of State for External Affairs whether, following the tabling of the message of the High Commissioner at Lagos dated July 14, he has ascertained that Brigadier General Charles Hamilton was misquoted on the Nigerian government radio with regard to the use of starvation as a proper means of waging war? If he has not ascertained this, would he undertake to do so?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I do not know whether any record is kept of what is said on the Nigerian radio, but I think the main point is that Brigadier Hamilton did not say the things he was alleged to have said.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

PROCEDURE AND ORGANIZATION

MOTION FOR CONCURRENCE IN THIRD REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

The house resumed, from Wednesday, July 16, consideration of the motion of Mr. Blair that the third report of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization presented to the house on Friday, June 20, 1969, be concurred in, and the amendment thereto of Mr. Baldwin (page 10963).

• (3:10 p.m.)

Mr. Mac T. McCutcheon (Lambton-Kent): Mr. Speaker, may I comment at the outset on the dandy position in which I find myself when called to make a speech on procedure. What a time to be elected to that job! First the house leader says it is a useless filibuster. Second, the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) says it is a stupid debate. Now at four o'clock we are about to adjourn for a meeting of minds. However, I have certain ideas and opinions which have been formed over the last few days on why we are in this impasse.

Today my opinions are confirmed when we see the arrogant, overbearing attitude of the government house leader. He could not be even civil or gracious in accepting the offer of the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles). This was an olive branch offer that the minister, had he had common courtesy or respect for his own colleagues, should have made himself. He is a very decent guy outside the house but terribly obnoxious inside the house.

In beginning my remarks I have one quotation which I should like to place on the record. It is the following:

> It is not up to a particular man, convinced of the soundness of his opinion, to express the will of the house.

I take that to mean that no one man should presume unilaterally to take unto himself the right to express the will of this house. I submit that that is a pretty sound statement. I could lend support to that position, and I intend to do so. As a matter of fact it seems to me this has been the crux of this whole debate. This is the central theme of this so-called stupid filibuster. The parties in opposition feel that proposed rule 75c does exactly what is mentioned in the quotation. In other words, a particular man, convinced of the soundness of his opinion, can in effect express the will of the house. May I repeat the quotation:

> It is not up to a particular man, ... to express the will of the house.

Do you know who said that? The Prime Minister of Canada, who was then Minister of Justice, said that on February 27, 1968. It is to be found at page 7038 of Hansard of a year and a half ago. That was his opinion. Does he still subscribe to that view? It does not look very much like it. The government he heads in effect says that what is good for the Grits is good for the nation. I am reminded of a famous cartoonist, Al Capp, who depicted a character called General Bullmoose, who always ended up by saying that what was good for General Bullmoose was good for the nation.

What do members of the government say to the opposition? They say in effect, "Here is a piece of legislation, fool around with it but do not try to change or improve it because we know what is best, and at ten o'clock a week from Thursday"—or whatever date they select—"it will become the law and that is it."

Perhaps it is an oversimplification to refer to just one particular man expressing the will of the house. It might be more accurate to say it would be the troika, plus two, who make the decision to express the will of the house. A troika is a three horse hitch. We have a triumvirate over there of the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau), the Secretary of State (Mr. Pelletier) and the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion (Mr. Marchand). That is the troika or triuvirate. Then that is augmented by the addition of two men, the government house leader who fires the balls, and the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Olson) who is on there because of his vast knowledge of the rules. It is a pity he does not know a little bit about agriculture.

Since that day in 1968 when that profound statement was made a lot of things have happened. We have had an election and the man who made the statement, "It is not up to a particular man...to express the will of the house", has become our Prime Minister. Since that time we have operated under some new rules, or modifications of the old ones. I submit that they have not worked too badly. Nothing of course is perfect. I am sure, however, there has been quite a marked improvement over days gone by. There is no question about it; we in the opposition have co-operated. We have tried to give them a chance. The fact that they have muffed their opportunities is really not the fault of the opposition. But they would like to suck in someone on whom to blame some of the trouble.

The hon. member for Peel South (Mr. Chappell) came up with a dandy proposal on Tuesday. He had a complicated mathematical formulation which involved the opposition in implementing 75c. I believe the hon. member for Peel South was quite sincere in his proposal to end this impasse in the house. The fact that his suggestion was most impractical does not detract from his obvious sincerity. It does, however, point out a favourite Grit ploy—when things go well take all the kudos; when they go bad try to lay the blame on something the opposition did. In severe cases where neither of these devices works, do as the Minister of Finance (Mr. Benson) does and imply that things are not as bad here as they are in the United States, or in the United Kingdom, and that there is really nothing we can do about it anyway. You see, they know full well that 75c is a bad rule. The hon. member for Peel South in typical Grit fashion tried to arrange it so that the use of this iniquitous rule could in the future probably partially, if not totally, be blamed on the opposition.

If you do not think that is correct, let me quote from page 11231 of Hansard for July 15:

> The important thing is that the Official Opposition and the government would constantly share the responsibility concerning whether we would ever use 75c.

Well, we are not buying it. During the past year there have been certain evolutionary developments, some of them quite noticeable and some not so noticeable. But a trend certainly is discernible, a trend toward an absolute power cell control, more centralized control by the central committee, control by the troika, ultimate, absolute control. That is the plan. The first step already has been taken. That was to muzzle the government backbenchers. The second step is to muzzle the opposition. The third step is under way right now—to control the press. They have already pretty well got the C.B.C. and certain other press people and reporters who have prostituted themselves, but thank God there still remains a corps of dedicated independent reporters and publishers who tell it as it is.

The press can see the trend. Members of the press were rebuked in London and lately they have been blamed for not properly explaining the government's languages bill. Indeed the Prime Minister has felt constrained to write an explanation himself.

• (3:20 p.m.)

Another development over the years has been increased committee activity. Every member has had to serve on at least two committees. The committees have met at all hours and dealt with any number of subjects. Some committees even travelled across the country on fact finding missions, so-called. But one thing that became abundantly clear was that the emphasis put on committees had but one purpose in mind, and that was to keep the "silent service" occupied.

The real reason for the great emphasis on committees did not actually become apparent at first, though it soon became obvious. We were told that matters would be referred to committees where the less formal nature of the proceedings would elicit more information. We were told greater opportunity would be given to examine witnesses. In effect it was said that the committee system would do such a thorough job of examination as to guarantee much closer scrutiny of witnesses and documents. This would make it much easier to modify legislation or to effect amendments. Then, hopefully, when a committee reported to the house its report would merely need rubberstamping by the whole house.

With such a promotional scheme under way I am told there was great competition among hon. members opposite to be appointed committee chairmen. The committee system had a new look and was going to revolutionize the old House of Commons. We were going to resemble the U.S. Congress, and the hopefuls opposite imagined headlines similar to those that appear in the U.S. press. For example, they imagined a headline like this: "Senator Upjohn"—or some such person—"chairman of the all-powerful committee on ways and means, said today that if the executive did not agree to his demands he would withhold his committee's support from the President's anti-poverty program".

Our backbench friends opposite pictured themselves in this light. If only they could get the nod and be appointed committee chairmen they would become power brokers, forces to be reckoned with. I cannot vouch for the accuracy of the rumour, but I am told some of them even considered taking elocution lessons so they could cut records, as Senator Everett Dirksen does. As a consolation prize those who did not make the grade were invited to intimate luncheons at 24 Sussex Drive.

I now return to rule 75c. Did this dream world of which I have spoken materialize? I guess not. The heroes, those who became chairmen, were given a certain bill, their material and kit of instructions, and were told to follow those instructions. They were told to vote the party line, to accept no amendments or changes. This is what the triumvirate had decided was best.

Although these chairmen have their committees, one thing the government neglected to give them was authority. Rule 75c will further emasculate them. If the backbenchers opposite were not so naive they would be a disillusioned lot by now. They would have realized that all the committee system has accomplished is to keep the silent service occupied so no embarrassment is caused. It was impossible to avoid embarrassment with such an awkward squad, but the purpose of the exercise was that the embarrassment to the executive caused by the Trudeau coat-tail riders would be minimized.

The troika knew that the election posters bearing the inscription "Come work with me", and showing a surrealistic picture of the Prime Minister urging Canadians to join him, had attracted a lot of political neophytes, people who were long on ideas but short on common sense and practical judgment. What should the government do with these people? It decided to keep them busy on committees but cautioned them to accept no amendments because the troika knew what was best.

And so we have in this country a new silent service. The silent service used to be the navy, but that was in the years B.H.—"before Hellyer". One would think these hon. members would realize how they have been silenced by this power cell. Surely they realize that if the opposition is muzzled as effectively as they have been, there is little opportunity in this country for democratic government.

If any of them do have the temerity to rise in their places it is because the government wants them to fill in a little time. After all, they have not been heard from for so long, and they cannot do any harm anyway. I am sure the government thinks that it will keep them so occupied that they just will not realize how unnecessary they are to the brains trust.

If the Liberal backbenchers are prepared to pay such a price just to be members of the Trudeau team, then that is a matter for them. But this is too high a price for me to pay as a member of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition. I will not be bound and gagged, allowed only the privilege of sitting in the house to rubberstamp legislation fed to me by a power mad, small group, power cell.

Last June 25 approximately 55 per cent of the people who cast votes in the riding of Lambton-Kent supported me. They gave me a mandate to represent them in this house to the best of my ability. In giving me that honour they did not suggest for one minute that I monopolize the time of the house. Nor did they want me to be irresponsible or frivolous. They wanted me to speak out when their interests were involved. They wanted me to co-operate with the government when that co-operation was for the good of Canada.

The people of Lambton-Kent do not want their representative in this house silenced. I am the current member for that riding, but this can be said with equal emphasis of my successors in the years ahead.

I am concerned about what is happening in the house. It is most depressing to see such a confrontation in the chamber at this time in our history. There is so much in this country of which to be proud. Although we have many problems to solve, we are hamstrung because of the intransigent attitude of three or four members.

Mankind is capable of fantastic feats for the common good at this juncture in our history. Today three men are embarking upon a journey to explore the unknown on another planet. When you stop to think of the thousands of sincere, dedicated people whose fantastic know-how has made possible the Apollo moon shot, do you not wonder why it should be necessary for this little group of power hungry people to try to regiment an institution like parliament?

• (3:30 p.m.)

Some hon. Members: Shame.

Mr. McCutcheon: If we are to accomplish anything worth while in the future we must make full use of our human resources. We cannot hope to do that if we permit ourselves to be dominated by two or three men, no matter who they are or what their intentions. One has only to pick up any daily newspaper to realize that this is so. I suppose if I were a member of the legal profession I should say that the evidence speaks for itself.

As I said before, although mankind is equipped now as never before to do good, this parliament is fiddling around over rule 75c. This situation, according to Bill Robinson of the London Free Press, has one virtue. Time being used in this debate is time that would normally be spent on vacations or in constituency work. Consequently, this debate is not interfering with the progress of legislation.

The tragedy is that we could have spent our time to better advantage by doing something to curb water and air pollution, instead of adding to it. We have been promised action on a new water policy for two or three years. Of course there has been more promise than action. In the meantime our precious resources of clean water and clean air continue to deteriorate.

When the government is questioned about these matters in the house, the answer is always the same. Spokesmen for the government say, "Give us the right to dictate and we will talk about agriculture; give us the right to dictate and we will talk about the high cost of living; give us the right to dictate and we will talk about everything else that affects the life of the average Canadian." Sure! The government will talk about these things and make sure the opposition is gagged.

When I consider that the members of this house belong to the same race of beings who are capable of sending a man to the moon, and when I consider that the people of today's world are very far advanced in technology but very little refined in the art of co-operation, it makes me wonder just where we have gone wrong. What has happened? Where have we gone wrong?

I think an article by Mr. Lubor Zink in the Toronto Telegram of July 14 puts the entire matter of rule changes in fair perspective. He writes:

> The key to a way out of the impasse is in the wording of the opening sentence which stipulates that rule 75c can be invoked only after a Minister of the Crown "has stated that an agreement could not be reached under the provisions of standing order 75A or 75B."
>
> The catch in this conection is in rule 75B which says that, failing unanimous agreement among the four House leaders under 75A, allocation of time for debate can be decided by "a majority of the representatives of the several parties," i.e., by three of the four House leaders.
>
> In other words, if the opposition groups agree among themselves on time allocation under 75B, the Government cannot truthfully say that "an agreement could not be reached under the provisions of standing order 75A or 75B."
>
> On the other hand, rule 75B in its present form does not make it mandatory for the Government to implement the agreement reached by the House leaders of the opposition parties. It says that "a Minister of the Crown—may propose a motion—" There is nothing to compel him to do so.
>
> Both the Government and the opposition have thus been caught in the ambiguity of the wording of the proposed time allocation rules. Both sides must insist on a redraft of the whole thing which can be accomplished only through agreement.
>
> The Government, which spotted the pitfall too late for correction in the standing committee on procedure and organization, tried to remedy the oversight by the highly irregular procedure of presenting to the House a suitably changed version of the committee's report as its own motion.
>
> The opposition protested so vigorously that the Government House leader, fearing adverse public reaction to the tricky manoeuvre beat a hasty retreat and the report of the committee was presented for debate in its original version.
>
> The problem both sides are facing now is how to get rid of the two-edged ambiguity on mutually acceptable terms.

I hope the house leaders will be able to come to an agreement in the meeting that is about to take place. Much of my remaining material is not relevant, Mr. Speaker, and I will not refer to it now that the house leaders have decided to meet. Nevertheless, perhaps what I am about to say could be a yardstick for the people negotiating on our behalf.

I am probably as unskilled in the technicalities of house rules as is any hon. member here. I am sure I could qualify as a non-expert, if there is such a designation. Nevertheless I suggest that it is not reasonable under 75B to have a majority that does not include the government. In the hope that some of our negotiators may overhear what I have to say I suggest to the government, why not forget all about 75c? It is unnecessary and unnecessarily restrictive.

Let us change rule 75B so that it clearly indicates that the government must be a party to a majority decision. It must be one of the majority. As Mr. Zink has suggested, the government and opposition are caught by the ambiguity of the wording of the proposed time allocation rule. Let us redraft the whole, dashed thing, Mr. Speaker, remove the ambiguity and make sure that the rule says that the government must be included in the majority. That is only reasonable, I think. I say to the silent service on the government side, do not let three or four power hungry people in your party destroy democracy. Who knows, next time you may get here on your own without having to ride in on someone else's coat tails.

I will close my remarks as I began them, Mr. Speaker, by echoing a worth-while sentiment expressed by the Prime Minister. He said it is not up to a particular man to express the will of this house. I wish he would practice what he preaches.

Mr. Ray Perrault (Burnaby-Seymour): Mr. Speaker, I know I speak on behalf of most supporters of the government when I express the hope that negotiations now under way will be productive of results. As most of us who have served in any elected assembly know, if matters relating to rules can be resolved harmoniously the entire institution of democracy benefits.

• (3:40 p.m.)

I say that most of the government members, indeed all of them, feel that way. We hope a fair agreement can be achieved. I must say, Mr. Speaker, I prepared a speech I feel is rather complete. Time will not permit full delivery. Like the last speaker, there are certain paragraphs I think would be best left unsaid under the circumstances.

I wish to spend a few minutes discussing the need for rule changes relating to the limitation on the length of speeches. A point which has been made time and again and, I think, very well by the spokesmen for the various parties, is that the business of the Canadian people must be expedited more effectively. There is no disagreement on this point.

And we all feel, especially those of us who have served at some point in Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition, that democracy must never be sacrificed for efficiency. It must never be sacrificed in the name of expediency. This is very difficult under modern circumstances. We are faced with a vast volume of public business which must be done not only in this assembly but in the provincial assemblies across the country. The two concepts must always be mutually compatible.

One aspect of the present need for reform can be illustrated by examining the vast increase in public spending since the turn of the century. Today we, as Members of Parliament, are being asked to authorize the spending of moneys in the order of $13 billion a year. That is a vast increase over the budget of 1899-1900. The total budget at that time was $46,286,550. That is a 28,000 per cent increase since the turn of the century.

We all know that we live in a new Canada with new and pressing problems, yet there remains the basic and fundamental question of how we compress into the same 365-day year more business, more subjects, and more issues. The question remains how we can sensibly and logically allocate the vast amounts of money which have been placed at the disposal of the government by the Canadian people?

Obviously we need changes to accommodate these facts of modern day life. Some of us have served in opposition. It is a worthwhile experience. Indeed, if we all stay here long enough we will all be in that spot some day. Those of us who have served in opposition have every respect for the role of the opposition in this house. In many ways it occupies a position as important as government. Every day we are reminded of this fact by political science texts.

One of the opposition members has spoken eloquently in this debate. The hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) has made a number of speeches before non-political forums. In 1964 this acknowledged parliamentarian, speaking at a summer conference in Ontario, said:

> If you are on the opposition side, you usually contend for freedom of speech; if you are on the government side, you contend for arrangements to get the business done.

I must admit the hon. member did not make this statement in the House of Commons but at the Couchiching Conference. I continue with the quotation:

> The amount of business is increasing so much that I think ... that we have to think more in terms of getting things done, and I think that this can be done without interfering with freedom of speech.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

[Mr. Perrault.]

Mr. Perrault: This is what the hon. member said. As we all know, he is perfectly right. I repeat the words he said on that occasion:

> The amount of business is increasing so much that I think even as an opposition member that we have to think more in terms of getting things done, and I think it is possible for us to do this without interfering with freedom of speech.

Again, I turn to this opposition source, the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre, who has considerable experience in this house and a great and deserved reputation. He was not speaking in the house but was speaking candidly and frankly to a summer academic forum in that same year. He stated:

> Parliamentarians start with a notion that freedom of speech somehow means freedom to talk forever. Cutting off debate is felt to be a denial of a basic, democratic right. But the fact is that we do this in many ways in Parliament. The 40-minute limit or the 30-minute limit or the 20-minute rule that we have are denials of unlimited free speech—

He continued:

> Although years ago there were no time limits on any debates, we did, in 1955 impose a limit of a certain number of days on the debate on the address, the debate on the budget, and on debates on supply motions. When the point is reached when these debates must end, nobody ever says that free speech is ended.

This is what a spokesman for the New Democratic Party said on that occasion. I am sure he remembers this address because it was a good speech. He also said:

> We accept the proposition that it is good to organize such things.

I am sure the hon. member feels the same way today and that his sentiments have not changed. But there is a difference; in this debate he has been far more vehement in his belief that all party agreement must be obtained in the matter of allocating time. This is what he has been emphasizing during this debate. Significantly, however, he admits that implicit in rule 75B, the rule which would permit house business to move along with the assent of three parties in this house, is the belief that the government party should be one of the three. This is an acknowledgment of the fact that a majority, and not the minority, must ultimately assume the responsibility to move along the business of the house. I refuse to believe the hon. member would seriously contend that one or two parties in this house should be endowed with the power to frustrate the will of the people for any inordinate length of time. He cannot hold this belief and still subscribe to the principles of parliamentary democracy about which he has spoken so eloquently on so many occasions.

Is freedom threatened by restricting debating time in this house? Regardless of what happens at four o'clock this afternoon that is still the real question. The former prime minister, the right hon. member for Prince Albert (Mr. Diefenbaker), made a very colourful and controversial speech in the house the other day. He said that 75c is a measure designed to subvert parliament. What did he say in the house when he had the important responsibility of being the Queen's first minister? I quote the right hon. gentleman's remarks as recorded in Hansard of July 21, 1960:

> I see no reason why that debate should not be reduced so far as the number of days is concerned. Immediately, I suggest that the opposition will say that they are being throttled.

That is what the right hon. gentleman said when faced with the monumental responsibility of government. He said in order to expedite the business of the Canadian people it was necessary effectively and responsibly to limit the length of speeches in the House of Commons. On November 26, 1962, again speaking in the House of Commons, the right hon. gentleman said:

> I am not one of those who argues that there should be any interference with the right of hon. members to express themselves, but I do agree with the hon. member that if the house leaders of the parties could get together and apportion the time, it would be a most effective and welcome expedient in order to achieve a high degree of efficiency in parliament. They do it in the United Kingdom, but we have never been able to do it here—

• (3:50 p.m.)

Unfortunately for Canada the reforms about which the right hon. gentleman spoke so wistfully never came to pass under his Prime Ministerial guidance. Perhaps the government of the day, and I do not wish to be critical of that government because things are accomplished by most governments at one time or another, did not present to the house a firm proposal to modernize the house rules, and it is unfortunate for Canada that this was not done years ago.

Is freedom of speech truly being threatened? That is the question about which some fine speeches have been made. The changes proposed in the rules are less stringent than debate limitation measures in other commonwealth jurisdictions. I have here the rules of all the Commonwealth governments—of India, New Zealand, Pakistan and Australia. Perhaps someone would like to hear how they do things in Australia. That is a country which has been mentioned during this debate. At page 26 of the standing orders of the Australian House of Representatives it is stated:

> When any motion of any kind whatsoever has been moved, a minister may at any time declare that the motion is an urgent motion, and, on such declaration, the question "That the motion be considered an urgent motion" shall be put forthwith—no debate or amendment being allowed—and on such question being agreed to, a minister may forthwith move a motion specifying the time which shall be allotted to the motion.
>
> Upon such motion or motions with regard to the allotment of time being moved, no debate thereon shall be allowed for more than 20 minutes, and in speaking thereon no member may exceed five minutes. If the debate be not sooner concluded, then forthwith upon the expiration of that time the Speaker or the Chairman shall put any questions on any amendment or motion already proposed from the Chair.

This is more stringent closure than we have in the House of Commons here.

An hon. Member: That is ordinary closure and you have it now.

Mr. Perrault: No, that is more stringent and it is totally apart from the schedule of government business proposed by the government. We could go through all these Commonwealth standing orders and rules.

An hon. Member: Do it now.

Mr. Perrault: I will do it when I have more time. We are looking at the spiritual cousins of our friends second to my left down there. These proposed changes they say are an affront to the British parliamentary democracy. Last week the device called the guillotine was used by the Labour government in Britain. It is a measure to bring a debate to an end.

Let me read the headline which appeared in the Ottawa Journal of July 9. It said, "Wild scene as M.P.'s protest move to impose Guillotine". The article states:

> The biggest row in years broke out in the House of Commons Tuesday night as members hurled books, paper missiles and invectives at each other in a dispute over parliamentary boundaries.

The report then continues:

> Nearly 500 parliamentarians mounted a clamour of insult over a decision by the government leader in the commons, Fred Peart, to impose a guillotine on a controversial bill affecting parliamentary boundaries ... The guillotine, a parliamentary procedural device, sets a deadline for pushing the bill through into law by next Monday—

That is a six day period.

Mr. Winch: Did you hear of the pipeline debate in 1956?

Mr. Perrault: We are not talking about the pipeline debate of 1956, we are talking about the situation in 1969 in Canada, and the sooner we forget about the class struggle in parliament in 1969 the better it will be for this country.

An hon. Member: You tell them, loudmouth.

Mr. Perrault: It is nonsense that somehow democracy has been damaged in Canada as a result of 75c and other measures. This suggestion is clearly ludicrous and is not supported by any fair examination of the facts.

The distinguished professor of political science at the London School of Economics told Canadians in a national television interview a few weeks ago—and I might say that he is not unsympathetic to the views of our friends to the left—that:

> The government here never has any doubts about how long parliament will take over any given measure. And when we read occasionally in the U.K. of your pipeline debate, your flag debate, it just seems ludicrous ... I mean it's unbelievable that a government trying to get through a piece of business that it thinks important should be in doubt about when the debate ends ... You can't have debates that go on indefinitely.

Let me quote further from the same interview. Mr. Charles Lynch then went on to make the comment:

> Well, there's also a point, I think. Canadian public opinion being more sluggish, I think, or more difficult to reach than British public opinion, because of geography if nothing else, needs a little time and it's been argued that it's not a bad thing for the public understanding of an issue to have a prolonged debate.

Mr. McKenzie of the London School of Economics then replied:

> Arguably, yes. Although I hope you're not going to suggest to me that you believe in government by public opinion. This is not something that exists in Britain and doesn't really exist here. Governments are elected to do a job ... and as long as there's a fair opportunity for the opposition of the day, one or several parties, to make the alternative case, we aren't really sitting around surely in the case of the pipeline debate or the flag debate waiting for the public to decide. It's governments that are elected to decide. The public chooses the decision maker. It doesn't make the decisions itself.

Those are the facts, Mr. Speaker, and these are the words of an expert on parliamentary procedure who has told us exactly the way things are done in Britain and other Commonwealth jurisdictions.

Professor McKenzie closes, as I do now, by saying:

> There's nothing revolutionary about them—

He is referring to measures such as 16A. He goes on to say:

> —that's all I'm saying. I'm not now saying that because I happen to live in London I think they do things inevitably better there, but this is an absolutely clearly established principle that governments control parliamentary time—

That is the way it should be.

I beg leave to move the adjournment of the debate and point out the fact that it is four o'clock.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. It being four o'clock, pursuant to special order made this day, the house stands adjourned until tomorrow at 11 o'clock a.m.

At four o'clock the house adjourned pursuant to special order made earlier this day.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Friday, July 18, 1969

The house met at 11 a.m.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

AGRICULTURE

REQUEST FOR DEBATE ON CRISIS IN WESTERN CANADA

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the President of the Privy Council. In view of the statement attributed to the Prime Minister in Saskatoon to the effect that some form of cash injection into the western farm economy is necessary, and in order to give the cabinet time to consider the specific nature of such an emergency program, would the President of the Privy Council consider arranging an opposition allotted day, say on Tuesday, so that a member of the government may be in a position to state a conclusive policy in this regard?

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I would be glad to have discussions on this and other points. Perhaps this would be the best opportunity to suggest that immediately following calling of orders of the day the house leaders meet in my office to discuss this and a number of other matters which fall within the house leaders' realm.

FINANCE

COMMERCIAL INTEREST RATE—INQUIRY AS TO MEETING WITH CHARTERED BANKS

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Minister of Finance. In view of the fact that the senior officers of two or three chartered banks have indicated that they are seriously considering increasing the prime commercial rate on bank loans and as the minister has already said that he thinks no such increase is justifiable, does the minister intend to meet with the heads of the chartered banks in an attempt to dissuade them from increasing the commercial bank rate at this time?

Hon. E. J. Benson (Minister of Finance): No, Mr. Speaker, I have given them my opinion.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): May I assume from the minister's reply that despite the fact he does not think an increase is justifiable he is now washing his hands of the matter and abdicating his responsibility?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member's question is argumentative, to say the least.

[Translation]

BANK OF CANADA INTEREST RATE—PURPOSE OF INCREASE

Mr. Henry Latulippe (Compton): Mr. Speaker, I should like to put a question to the Minister of Finance.

Would he tell us if the Governor of the Bank of Canada has increased the prime rate for the sole purpose of preventing the flight of capital to foreign countries?

[English]

Hon. E. J. Benson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, as the governor of the Bank of Canada said in his statement, this was the primary purpose.

PROCEDURE AND ORGANIZATION

THIRD REPORT OF COMMITTEE—SUGGESTION THAT MR. SPEAKER ACT AS CONCILIATOR

Mr. Harold E. Winch (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, I should like to make a most sincere suggestion to the President of the Privy Council. In view of his statement a few moments ago that after oral questions there is to be a meeting of the house leaders in his office, would he give consideration to transferring the meeting to the Speaker's office with the Speaker present as a non-partisan conciliator?

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I would hate to introduce you into the middle of any partisan controversy.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Inquiries of the Ministry

SPACE EXPLORATION

APOLLO XI FLIGHT—SUGGESTED HOLIDAY

Mr. J. P. Nowlan (Annapolis Valley): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Acting Prime Minister whether, in recognition of the realities of life and in tribute to that momentous day in history when man will step from one planet to another, the government will consider Monday as a government holiday?

Mr. Lewis: The government has been on a holiday for a long time.

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, perhaps the greatest tribute that can be made to this day is for us to continue to carry out our responsibilities as members of parliament.

Mr. Nowlan: Mr. Speaker, I think the Acting Prime Minister should refrain from imputing motives or trying to put my question in—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Nowlan: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member is rising on a point of order.

Mr. Nowlan: Mr. Speaker, my question about a government holiday was very deliberate and sincere and had no reference whatsoever to the House of Commons. I referred specifically to the realities of life and I had in mind the fact that people are going to be watching television at two or three o'clock in the morning. I am wondering how much hope—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member's point has been made.

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Perhaps my supplementary question has been stated, Mr. Speaker, but could we have an answer from the Acting Prime Minister to the question whether consideration will be given to making Monday a holiday for federal government employees?

Mr. Sharp: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the spirit in which the hon. member has put forward his suggestion. May I say that I did not intend in anything I said in reply to impute any motive or anything like that.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Sharp: May I say I believe that all of us as members of the human race will be watching with great interest on Monday the landing of the astronauts. I do not think it is really necessary for the government of Canada to take the kind of action suggested. I believe all our civil servants will rejoice just as much at their desks over the success of the astronauts as anywhere else.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, may I ask the Acting Prime Minister whether he, in addition to the members of the human race, will be watching?

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

FISHERIES

OFFSHORE BANKS—CONSERVATION CONTROLS —REACTION OF F.A.O. CONFERENCE DELEGATES

Mr. Lloyd R. Crouse (South Shore): Mr. Speaker, will the Acting Prime Minister state whether the more than 250 delegates from 42 countries who attended the fisheries conference in Halifax, sponsored by the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization, indicated any agreement to his suggestion that conservation controls be implemented internationally in respect of our offshore fishing banks?

Hon. Jack Davis (Minister of Fisheries and Forestry): Mr. Speaker, the conference which was convened by the Food and Agriculture Organization was concerned with the inspection of fish and fish quality, not with the other matter to which the hon. member referred.

GOVERNMENT ADMINISTRATION

REMOVAL OF AGENCY HEADQUARTERS FROM OTTAWA

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, in view of the contradictory statements being made by the Minister of Supply and Services for the benefit of western ears, and by the Minister of Justice for the benefit of Ottawa ears, on the subject of moving the headquarters of various government agencies from Ottawa to other parts of the country, will the Acting Prime Minister indicate what is the official government position in this regard?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I have to suggest to the Leader of the Opposition that his question as asked is not in proper form. Perhaps we might overlook the first part of the question and allow the minister to answer the second part.

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, it would take more than a short answer at this time to outline government policy in this respect. It has been the policy to introduce some decentralization. For example, this is evident in the fact that some government offices are being moved to Hull. There may be other occasions when it would still be consonant with efficiency of government operation, which I think must be the first consideration, to locate some of our agencies outside of this area.

Mr. Thomas M. Bell (Saint John-Lancaster): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Will the Acting Prime Minister say whether the Solicitor General or the Minister of Justice is actually in charge of patronage in the Ottawa area?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Stanfield: A supplementary question. May I ask the Acting Prime Minister whether the Minister of Justice was stating government policy when he said that the national capital is the national capital and cannot be subdivided nationally? In addition, was the Minister of Supply and Services stating government policy when he said that the movement of certain offices and government agencies now established in the national capital to other parts of the country was actively under consideration?

Mr. Sharp: Mr. Speaker, I am sure the Leader of the Opposition is perfectly well aware that there are many government agencies located outside this area. One example is the National Film Board which is in Montreal. This is not at all extraordinary.

Mr. Stanfield: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, my question to the minister was in relation to the movement out of Ottawa of agencies now established here.

Mr. Sharp: Mr. Speaker, the example I gave is one where a national agency was moved to a place outside Ottawa, and it was not thought that this changed the capital of Canada, which is Ottawa.

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Order. I am not sure we are going to achieve anything by allowing a series of supplementaries inasmuch as we have now embarked upon a debate. However, I will recognize the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre on a supplementary.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the Minister of Supply and Services a direct question: Is consideration being given to moving the Mint to Manitoba?

Hon. James Richardson (Minister of Supply and Services): Mr. Speaker, there is always some speculation about moving government agencies and departments, but no recommendation is before the cabinet at the present time in regard to moving the Mint.

Mr. Donald MacInnis (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Acting Prime Minister. Is the head office of the Cape Breton Development Corporation being moved from Ottawa to Cape Breton, where it is supposed to be doing its work?

Mr. Sharp: Mr. Speaker, I have not had any information about this, and so far as I know no recent decisions have been made in this regard.

Mr. Speaker: I again express reservations about the line of questioning upon which we are embarking. We have had many questions about moving many departments to many cities and towns across the country, from Victoria to Cornwall and from St. John's to Cornwall. We might pass on now to another subject.

[Later:]

Mr. Steven E. Paproski (Edmonton Centre): Mr. Speaker, there was a question earlier to which I never had an opportunity to ask a supplementary. I would appreciate it if I could have the opportunity now of presenting that supplementary.

In view of the Prime Minister's studies of economic isolation on the prairies and in view of the fact that the west must be given a sense of participation in Canada and must share in the economic benefits of Confederation if it is to overcome its feeling of alienation, will the government consider establishing the Mint in Edmonton—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. That is not a related question; it is a related speech.

VITAL STATISTICS

BIRTHS—REQUESTED EXPLANATION OF 1968 FIGURES

Mrs. Grace MacInnis (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, this is a new subject. I shall address my question to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce inasmuch as the Bureau of Statistics falls within his jurisdiction. Would the minister say what studies, if any, have been made to determine why the birth rate last year in the province of Quebec was the lowest in Canada while that in Newfoundland, a neighbouring province, was the highest?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. That is a question for the late show.

TRANSPORT

QUEBEC NORTH SHORE AND LABRADOR RAILWAY—MOVEMENT OF FUEL TO WABUSH AND LABRADOR CITY

Mr. Ambrose Hubert Peddle (Grand Falls-White Bay-Labrador): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. Will the government confirm that an order has been issued by the Canadian Transport Commission to the Quebec North Shore and Labrador Railway to resume transportation of fuel to Wabush and Labrador City?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): Yes, Mr. Speaker. I am glad to confirm that that is the case.

Mr. Peddle: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Will this order include both domestic and automobile fuels? Will it also include automobiles so that residents of the area can get out of there on vacation? Also, does it include shipments consigned to Churchill Falls?

Mr. Jamieson: Mr. Speaker, on the first part of the question, so far as I am aware it involves all forms of fuel. Automobiles were not included in the representations made to me directly. Whether the C.T.C. has included them I do not know, but I expect not. Also, the shipments do not include consignments to Churchill Falls.

LABOUR RELATIONS

CANADIAN PACIFIC AIRLINES DISPUTE—REQUEST FOR REPORT

Mr. D. W. Groos (Victoria): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Acting Prime Minister. Since it is not the Minister of Labour's turn to be in the house, has the Acting Prime Minister anything to report on the Canadian Pacific Airlines dispute? I am referring to the strike that was to be called at ten o'clock this morning.

[Mrs. MacInnis (Vancouver-Kingsway).]

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to say I was informed just a few minutes ago that a strike has been averted and that an agreement has been signed which, of course, is subject to ratification.

An hon. Member: You could have listened to the radio.

CANADIAN SOVEREIGNTY

"MANHATTAN" PROJECT—LACK OF CANADIAN NEWSMEN ON SHIP

Mr. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Will he say whether he has investigated why Canadian journalists are not being allowed to join United States newsmen aboard the oil tanker Manhattan which is to sail through Canadian waters under Canadian coastguard escort next month?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Yes, Mr. Speaker. I have inquired into this matter. I understand Canadian newsmen are to be given the opportunity of being there on that occasion on Canadian vessels. I think they will be able to report fully.

Mr. McGrath: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Will the minister not use his good offices to bring pressure to bear on the United States authorities so that Canadian newsmen may be allowed to be present on the tanker Manhattan itself?

Mr. Sharp: No, Mr. Speaker. I think it is better that Canadian newsmen should go on Canadian vessels.

TRADE

WHEAT—AGREEMENT WITH SOVIET UNION—BALANCE OF COMMITMENT

Mr. John Burton (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce. Have there been any discussions between Canada and the Soviet Union recently with respect to the wheat agreement which is to expire at the end of this month? If so, or even if there have been no discussions, are there any indications that the Soviet Union will be taking the balance of its commitment? Is there any possibility that the terms of that agreement may be extended?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): Mr. Speaker, contact exists between the Canadian Wheat Board and Export-Khleb, but I am not in sufficient touch with everyday developments to say more. With respect to the second part of the hon. member's question my information is that there is no indication now either that the Soviet Union will or will not take its commitment. There is still one month to go, I think—

An hon. Member: Two weeks.

Mr. Pepin: There are still two weeks to go. They may get in touch with us in the meantime, but at present there is no indication either way.

Mr. Burton: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Can the minister indicate whether the government is agreeable to extending the agreement? Also, has the question of present pricing policies of the Soviet Union in exporting grain to countries such as the Argentine entered into the discussions?

Mr. Pepin: I am considering these matters, Mr. Speaker. I do not think we have to decide today because there is still two weeks to go before the end of the allocated period. We will advise the house in due course.

[Translation]

AGRICULTURE

EGGS—INQUIRY AS TO REDUCTION IN IMPORTS

Mr. Adrien Lambert (Bellechasse): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce.

Considering the problems currently facing egg producers in Canada, could the minister tell us whether there has been a decrease in imports of that commodity have fallen in the last weeks and, if so, to what extent?

Mr. Speaker: It seems to me that the hon. member is asking for statistics, but if the minister has the information required, he could perhaps give it to the house.

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): I am taking this question as notice, Mr. Speaker.

[English]

EXTERNAL AID

BIAFRA—REPLY TO CANADIAN OFFER TO PROVIDE NEUTRAL RELIEF FLIGHT OBSERVERS

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Has he received any word from Lagos about the proposal he made some days ago which was designed to be of assistance in the furnishing of relief?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Not yet, Mr. Speaker, but at least we have not received an adverse reply. I might add that I also had the opportunity to meet Dr. Johnson yesterday afternoon. He was here with me. Both of us are very anxious to do whatever we can to promote daylight flights. It is in that spirit that we are acting.

Mr. Stanfield: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. In view of the delay in obtaining a response, and in view of what I am sure the Secretary of State for External Affairs will agree is a very grim situation in Nigeria-Biafra, have additional steps been considered in an attempt to secure an answer from Nigeria?

Mr. Sharp: The short answer is yes, Mr. Speaker.

SUPPLY AND SERVICES

ARMED FORCES WALKING-OUT UNIFORMS—QUALITY OF CLOTH

Mr. Harold E. Winch (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a most interesting and important question to the Minister of Supply and Services. In view of the fact a multimillion dollar contract was granted to one company for the production of cloth for walking-out uniforms for the armed services, will the minister immediately investigate reports that the quartermaster stores of the armed services are issuing the green uniform in seven different shades and sometimes two extra yards per uniform because of defects in the cloth?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member's question might be placed on the order paper.

Mr. Winch: It is now being supplied and is costing the taxpayers a lot of money.

AIRPORTS

CHARLOTTETOWN—INQUIRY AS TO EXTENSION OF FACILITIES

Mr. Heath Macquarrie (Hillsborough): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the minister from the prolific province, the Minister of Transport. Can he advise whether he is making any progress in the provision of interim increased facilities at Charlottetown airport where the situation is very serious?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): Yes, Mr. Speaker, some progress is being made. We have done an assessment of the situation. It really does not appear to be reflected so much in the increase in air traffic as in the number of people coming out to see other people off. The first step appears to be to get a larger parking lot and a bigger coffee urn. These are facilities which are very easy to set up.

Mr. Stanfield: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, I feel the minister is confused. I am sure the crowding is due to people coming out to welcome people to Prince Edward Island rather than to see them leave.

Mr. Jamieson: I am quite happy to concede that I put it in the wrong order.

ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

VANCOUVER—TREATMENT OF PRISONER AT AIRPORT

Mr. Grant Deachman (Vancouver Quadra): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Solicitor General. Is he aware that the R.C.M.P. brought a shackled and manacled prisoner through the concourse at Vancouver airport? If so, what is he doing to check this kind of barbarity?

Hon. G. J. McIlraith (Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, I am not aware of that. I will look into the matter immediately.

An hon. Member: It was in all the papers.

Mr. Harold E. Winch (Vancouver East): I wish to ask a supplementary question in support of the member for Vancouver Quadra. Will the Solicitor General look into the fact, proven by photographs, that this man was taken through the Vancouver airport in a strait-jacket as well as being manacled?

Mr. McIlraith: Yes, Mr. Speaker. I will be very glad to look into all the circumstances surrounding the alleged incident.

PUBLIC SERVICE

ACTIVITIES OF ECONOMISTS AND OTHERS FOLLOWING WAGE INCREASE

Mr. Steven E. Paproski (Edmonton Centre): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct this question to the President of the Treasury Board. With regard to the announcement that a 19.5 per cent wage increase over a three-year period has been granted to economists, sociologists and statisticians in the federal public service, will the President of the Treasury Board say whether these economists, sociologists and statisticians will be spending their time studying the so-called inflationary demands of organized labour unions?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member's question is interesting and important, but the way it was asked precludes the Chair from allowing it to be answered.

NATURAL RESOURCES

TOUR OF NORTHERN CANADA BY U.S. GROUP

Mr. Randolph Harding (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, this question is for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. In view of the recent tour of water and other resources in northern Canada and Alaska by a group of 68 United States representatives including Senator Moss and in view of their expressed wish to obtain Canadian water from northern Canada for United States use, I should like to ask the minister whether his department has been notified of the reasons for the trip and whether any officials from the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources accompanied the group?

Mr. Speaker: I would think that this question should be placed on the order paper or considered at the time of adjournment.

[Translation]

FINANCE

INQUIRY AS TO EXPATRIATION OF CANADIAN CAPITAL—EFFECT ON ECONOMY

Mr. Henry Latulippe (Compton): Mr. Speaker, I also have a question for the Minister of Finance.

In view of the fact that the discount rate was maintained by the Bank of Canada for 22 years, including a period of war, depression and inflation, can he tell us whether during those years Canadian capital was exported in such a way that our economy became more unbalanced than it is today?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member's question seems to be much too general in nature to be asked at this time.

[English]

NATIONAL DEFENCE

BASE CONSOLIDATION—CONSULTATION WITH PROVINCIAL AND MUNICIPAL OFFICIALS

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Dartmouth-Halifax East): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct my question to the Minister of National Defence but first may I congratulate him on the performance of the Bras d'Or. Can the minister advise the house whether the Department of National Defence or the government will enter into consultations with provincial or municipal officials prior to the announcement he intended to make concerning the base consolidation program, which he hoped to be able to do by August 1?

Hon. Léo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, first of all I should like to accept in the name of the services the hon. member's congratulations concerning the Bras d'Or. I do not know whether I am right in saying that this is the first time we can say we have something which is either the biggest or the fastest in the world.

With reference to negotiations and consultations with municipalities or local authorities concerning possible base closures, may I say that we have a procedure whereby in such cases we consult with and inform the local authorities ahead of the announcement. In this instance, however, I believe there will be an accompanying statement on the base closures regarding a possible form of relief or assistance to the people who will be affected. This has not yet been determined, but it is a recommendation which has been presented and is being studied. This is the reason I previously said in answer to a question on this same subject that I might not meet the target date of August 1 which I announced previously.

Mr. Forrestall: Mr. Speaker, the point I have in mind is with regard to the question of school opening and so on. Can the minister indicate whether there may possibly be an announcement or a report prior to September 1?

Mr. Cadieux (Labelle): All announcements pertaining to base closures would involve in any event at least a year's notice and in some cases a little longer. I think the shortest period we have considered so far is at least a year.

[Later:]

Hon. J. A. MacLean (Malpeque): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of National Defence supplementary to the question asked earlier. Do I take it from the minister's remarks that no announcement on base closures will be made until there has been consultation with the area concerned and with other departments of government with a view to finding substitute government employment in the area in order to relieve the economic dislocation caused by the closure of bases, or will that process take place only between the time of the announcement and the closure?

Mr. Cadieux (Labelle): Mr. Speaker, the Department of Manpower and Immigration and the Department of Regional Economic Expansion will be involved in the study of each base which we plan to close. The form of the help that will be provided has not been determined yet. So far as consultation with local authorities are concerned this will be done, except that we must proceed from a firm decision to dispense with the base. The cases which can be discussed on this basis are limited. In some instances we will be able to give longer notice but in any event it will not be done in isolation. We will discuss the matter with the local authorities.

Mr. R. E. McKinley (Huron): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary for the Minister of National Defence. Would the minister agree that before any official announcement is made he will inform any member of this house who may represent a constituency in which a base might be closed?

Mr. Cadieux (Labelle): Mr. Speaker, unfortunately on previous occasions we have had to close bases and our regular procedure is first to give priority to the Member of Parliament by informing him of the impending announcement and after that the local authorities. We also have a special team which goes on the base itself to brief the people involved in the closing. The same kind of procedure will take place this time.

STUDENT LOANS

EASING OF REQUIREMENTS BECAUSE OF EMPLOYMENT SITUATION

Mr. Mark Rose (Fraser Valley West): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct my question to the Minister of Finance. In view of the difficult employment situation faced by university students this summer, has the Minister of Finance considered discussing with the provinces programs to ease the requirements for students to qualify for loans next term?

Hon. E. J. Benson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I thank the hon. member for giving me notice of his question. In reply may I state that financial assistance is available, of course, to students under provincial programs and from private sources as well as under the Canada Student Loans Act. As I have reported to the house from time to time, federal officials have regular consultations with the provinces on the student loans program. We have all been very much aware of the more difficult employment situation for some students this summer. This was taken into account, for instance, when the house approved my recommendation that the basic provision for students loans this year be increased to $100 million. The loans are available to students who need financial assistance, and I can assure the hon. member that the criteria applied for this purpose take into account the fact that a student has not been able to find summer employment.

FISHERIES

F.A.O. CONFERENCE—REQUEST FOR PAPERS DELIVERED

Mr. Thomas S. Barnett (Comox-Alberni): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Fisheries which relates to one asked earlier about the F.A.O. conference in Halifax. Is the minister proposing to make available, either through tabling or distribution, copies of the papers presented, in particular the basic position paper reportedly delivered by Dr. Needler on the effect of the use of d.d.t?

Hon. Jack Davis (Minister of Fisheries): Mr. Speaker, I will certainly look into this and make copies of the papers available to any interested members.

AIRPORTS

PELEE ISLAND—REQUEST FOR IMPROVEMENT

Mr. H. W. Danforth (Kent-Essex): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Minister of Transport. Has the minister had an opportunity yet to study the representations made by the citizens of Canada's most southerly territory, Pelee Island, with regard to the modest improvement of their airport, and to arrive at a decision?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I think this question should be placed on the order paper.

TAXATION

WHITE PAPER ON REFORM—INQUIRY AS TO DATE OF PRESENTING

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the Minister of Finance when we may expect the white paper on tax reform which we were led to expect in June, then in mid-summer or September, and which we now learn from the press may not be available until October?

[Mr. Benson.]

Hon. E. J. Benson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, parts of the white paper are now being written. I can assure the hon. member that as soon as some important decisions are taken by the cabinet I will present the white paper. I am as anxious as the Leader of the Opposition to have it completed.

Mr. Stanfield: Do I take it from that, Mr. Speaker, that the minister is either unable or unwilling to state a date now when the white paper will be available?

Mr. Benson: It is just impossible to do so, Mr. Speaker.

HOUSING

REQUEST FOR STATEMENT ON RISING INTEREST RATES

Mr. John Gilbert (Broadview): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the minister in charge of housing. In view of the continuing rise in mortgage interest rates, what measures, if any, does the minister intend to take to stop this upward spiral?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member is asking for a statement which would normally be made on motions. To that extent the question is not in order.

Mr. Gilbert: I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member cannot ask a question supplementary to one that is not accepted. However, I invite the hon. member to ask another question while he has the floor.

Mr. Gilbert: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Would the minister make a statement on motions with regard to the continued upward rise of mortgage interest rates and tell us what steps, if any, the government will take to correct this situation?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (Minister without Portfolio): Mr. Speaker, I will examine this suggestion, but I do not think I can compete very adequately with the Governor of the Bank of Canada at this time.

PROCEDURE AND ORGANIZATION

THIRD REPORT OF COMMITTEE—REQUEST FOR PAIRING PROGRAM WHILE UNDER DEBATE

Mr. Jerry Pringle (Fraser Valley East): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Acting Prime Minister. In view of the fact that the Official Opposition are obviously using the platoon system and taking their vacations during what was to be the summer recess, will the minister use his good offices to suggest to the President of the Privy Council that while in session today with the house leaders he arrange a pairing program so that government members can also enjoy at least a partial vacation before we commence the second session of the 28th parliament?

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

AIRPORTS

CHARLOTTETOWN—INQUIRY AS TO EXTENSION OF FACILITIES

Mr. Heath Macquarrie (Hillsborough): Mr. Speaker, I have a delayed supplementary question for the Minister of Transport, delayed because I was mortally offended by his implication that the islanders were becoming mere coffee drinkers. Would he give thought to providing space at the terminal so that they might leave their automobiles there? Also, would he think of such things as an instrument landing system?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I am afraid I was a little facetious in my answer. The truth is that it is a complex problem in view of the very large increase in the amount of traffic during a short period of the year and the relatively limited traffic in other periods of the year. I am taking a serious look at this matter and we are trying to do something worth while about it.

HOUSING

URBAN RENEWAL—REQUEST FOR DATE OF STATEMENT

Mr. J. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa-Whitby): Mr. Speaker, I have a question essentially similar to the one I asked yesterday which Your Honour ruled out of order on the ground that you thought it had been asked previously this week. However, I have checked Hansard and I do not think that is the case, and I hope Your Honour will recognize the question. It is directed to the minister responsible for housing. Would the minister consider informing the house now what the outside date will be for his announcement of government policy on urban renewal schemes? There have been many requests on this subject. Will the minister say what will be the outside date for his announcement?

Hon. Robert K. Andras (Minister without Portfolio): Mr. Speaker, my desire as I have indicated on previous occasions, is to do it as soon as possible. I hope it can be done within two or three weeks.

FISHERIES

COHOE SALMON—BANNING OF OPERATION IN STRAIT OF GEORGIA

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Fisheries and Forestry. Some time ago he indicated that he was considering restricting commercial fishing on the Pacific coast on weekends. Has he reached a decision whether such a restriction should be put into effect? If so, for what period of time, and will the restriction include sports fishermen?

Hon. Jack Davis (Minister of Fisheries and Forestry): Mr. Speaker, I hope the final announcement concerning restrictions on commercial fishing has been made. It is to the effect that fishing for cohoe salmon must be restricted to week days and not carried out at weekends. We are faced with the lowest run of cohoe salmon on record and we are very concerned about the resource.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. If the run of cohoe salmon is low and the minister has found it necessary to restrict commercial fishing to week days, will he apply the same restriction to sport fishing for cohoe salmon?

Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, the number of sports fishermen is much greater, but their take is a small fraction of the take of commercial fishermen.

ST. MARY'S BAY, N.S.—DISPUTE BETWEEN SEINERS AND WEIR FISHERMEN

Mr. Lloyd R. Crouse (South Shore): Mr. Speaker, I have a related question for the Minister of Fisheries and Forestry. Now that the minister has had an opportunity to view at first hand fishing conditions along the coast of Nova Scotia, especially the herring fishing industry in St. Mary's Bay, when can we expect a decision concerning the future operations of herring seiners and weir fishermen in this area?

Hon. Jack Davis (Minister of Fisheries and Forestry): I hope before the end of July, Mr. Speaker.

Inquiries of the Ministry

INFORMATION

INQUIRY AS TO REPORT OF TASK FORCE

Mr. Barry Mather (Surrey): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Acting Prime Minister. Has the government reached a favourable decision with regard to tabling the report of the task force on government information?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the report of the task force on government information has not yet been discussed by the cabinet.

POLLUTION

BRITISH COLUMBIA—HERBICIDAL SPRAYING ALONG BORDER WITH U.S.

Mr. Bruce Howard (Okanagan Boundary): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Fisheries and Forestry. Has any action been taken regarding the possible pollutant effect of herbicidal spraying along the Canada-United States border in British Columbia?

Hon. Jack Davis (Minister of Fisheries and Forestry): Mr. Speaker, I have asked my departmental officials to look into this matter and report back as soon as possible.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

TRAINING OF ITALIAN AIR CADETS

Mr. Andrew Brewin (Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, I have a question that may be answered by either the Minister of National Defence or the Acting Prime Minister in his capacity as Secretary of State for External Affairs. Has the Italian government asked Canada to train Italian air cadets and, if so, has a favourable decision been reached on the request?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I am not sure of the urgency of the question. I would think it is the kind of question that would normally be placed on the order paper or considered at the time of adjournment.

[Translation]

FINANCE

BANK OF CANADA—SUGGESTED RESIGNATION OF GOVERNOR

Mr. Henry Latulippe (Compton): Mr. Speaker, I would like to put a further question to the Minister of Finance.

In view of the fact that the economic situation of the country is getting worse and that the Governor of the Bank of Canada can find nothing better than to increase our troubles and our problems, would the minister consider asking for his resignation?

[English]

CANADIAN SOVEREIGNTY

POSITION RESPECTING ARCTIC ARCHIPELAGO, CONTINENTAL SHELF AND INTER-ISLAND WATERS

Mr. John Burton (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Acting Prime Minister. In view of recent statements by the Minister without Portfolio from Saskatoon-Humboldt that there is no question of Canada's sovereignty over the Arctic Islands, the continental shelf and the spaces between the islands, could the Acting Prime Minister indicate whether this is in fact the case and whether all the problems have been resolved with respect to Canada's sovereignty? What is the situation in this respect?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I am sure hon. members will agree that the complexities of international law are such that it would not be possible for me to answer this question in a short time even if I had the competence to answer it.

Mr. Burton: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Could the Acting Prime Minister indicate whether the problems connected with Canada's sovereignty, particularly with regard to the waters between the islands, have been resolved? That was the purport of the statement of the Minister without Portfolio. Would the Acting Prime Minister deal with that aspect of the situation?

Mr. Sharp: Mr. Speaker, the position is that Canada has a view about Canada's sovereignty. Unfortunately it is not universally accepted.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

PROCEDURE AND ORGANIZATION

MOTION FOR CONCURRENCE IN THIRD REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

The house resumed, from Thursday, July 17, consideration of the motion of Mr. Blair that the third report of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization presented to the house on Friday, June 20, 1969, be concurred in, and the amendment thereto of Mr. Baldwin (p. 10963).

Mr. Ray Perrault (Burnaby-Seymour): Mr. Speaker, before we adjourned at four o'clock yesterday afternoon I attempted to relate a number of statements made at various times by spokesmen for the other parties in the house in support of time limitation on debate. There is a vast catalogue of speeches made in the house, or before non-political forums, supporting the concept that governments have a responsibility to govern and must ultimately express the wish of the majority of the people of a nation. I quoted the N.D.P. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) and the remarks he has made on a number of occasions. I quoted the former prime minister, the hon. member for Prince Albert (Mr. Diefenbaker).

Basically, we are faced with the question whether after reasonable opportunity for full debate and discussion has been accorded all parties in the house, the government of the day, be it the government of Canada, one of the provincial governments or one of the governments of other parliamentary democracies throughout the commonwealth, has the right to expedite the business of the house and determine when a debate shall end.

• (11:50 a.m.)

There are a number of peripheral issues here. There is a question with respect to how this may be accomplished fairly and within reasonable limits, but our basic question is one of principle. Again we come back to the basic problem, the challenge of attempting to fit into the 365 days of the year the vast proliferation of matters which must be considered on behalf of the Canadian people, and at the same time ensuring the maintenance of a high standard of parliamentary democracy.

The hon. member for Hamilton West (Mr. Alexander) made an excellent speech the other afternoon.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Perrault: I have only 20 minutes left.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Perrault: I know hon. members are enthusiastic about their member who is a good member, but he suggested a very exotic thought, namely, that somehow freedom of speech is endangered under proposed rule 75c because it would restrict the right of members of all parties to express fairly the views held by their constituents. Yet, the same hon. member and his colleagues are enthusiastic supporters of proposed rule 75B. What does rule 75B do? It would expedite the business of the house with the support of three parties in the house. These members would effectively cut off the right of a fourth party to unlimited free speech. Of course they accept the principle that there must be responsible limits to speeches made in the house.

Let me quote a well known Conservative, a former member of the house, to establish the point which I am attempting to make with respect to limitation of time. The hon. Davie Fulton, speaking to the Couchiching conference in 1964, in a moment of candour perhaps, said:

> An important restraint which members should impose upon themselves is to accept as a matter of routine an "allocation of time" system as it operates in the United Kingdom parliament, by which representatives of each party meet in advance to decide how many days will be spent on each major matter of government legislation.
>
> In the unusual circumstance where it is not possible to obtain agreement, the government itself takes responsibility for—and there is a vote upon—a motion for allocation of time on the matter in question.

This is precisely what we have been considering these long and dreary summer days.

Mr. Paproski: Why doesn't your house leader say that?

Mr. Perrault: In that non-political forum a respected Conservative spokesman stated very explicitly that the government indeed has the responsibility to govern and also to exercise the mandate conferred on it.

Again, speaking for that great party sitting to my left in opposition, Mr. Fulton spelled out the following in the same speech:

> No matter what mathematical disposition has been arrived at by the voters, parliament has the duty to get on with the business of the country. And the government has the right and the responsibility to govern, so long as it enjoys the confidence of parliament, or at any rate unless and until parliament accepts the responsibility of defeating it.

This is precisely the position which the government of Canada is taking during the course of this debate. This is a crystal clear presentation of the facts of parliament, whether it is at Westminster in Great Britain, in Canada, Australia, New Zealand, or any other Commonwealth country. But how different in his philosophy from that expressed by some opposition spokesmen during recent days in this debate!

In the face of an earnest desire on the part of the government to initiate reforms in the public interest, words have been heard in this chamber which have done little credit to those who uttered them, words like "restriction of freedom", "dictatorship", "the extinction of parliament", and all the rest. Yet, paradoxically, the same government which members in the opposition attack with such vigour, voted the opposition a quarter of a million dollars in research funds, made available to opposition backbenchers and which were not available to government backbenchers. This was done so that opposition members could do a better job in the House of Commons.

Some hon. Members: Shame.

Mr. Stanfield: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker I know the hon. member does not want to exaggerate on a point which can be checked immediately, but he had better check the figure he mentioned, which should be $125,000.

Mr. Perrault: I know that if the Leader of Her Majesty's loyal Opposition (Mr. Stanfield) makes a request and provides a justification for it, the increase may come along next year.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Perrault: The right hon. gentleman who presided over the affairs of Canada between 1957 and 1962 may be a colourful and interesting orator, but the promise he made in 1949 to strengthen the role of the opposition in the House of Commons faded like a prairie violet at high noon when he propelled his way to power in 1957. Nothing was done to help the opposition in this house.

Opposition members have engaged in a vigorous and personal attack on the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau). May I remind them that one of his first actions as Prime Minister was to extend these grants to the opposition, and not only that but also to attempt to ease the lot of the backbenchers of all parties. For this he should be thanked.

May I suggest that if the right hon. gentleman from Prince Albert had taken action during those years of Conservative government to organize more efficiently the business of the Canadian people, then our political history might have been written differently today. Today's government is willing to establish the areas where reforms are required and is willing to act, even if controversy ensues, to correct abuses and to improve procedures.

On October 27, 1949, the right hon. member for Prince Albert (Mr. Diefenbaker) said the following:

> An opposition does not properly perform its functions unless it examines all expenditures made with a searching eye and fearless criticism, yet members of the House of Commons have no proper facilities to enable the full examination of the public accounts and estimates. Debates on estimates are futile—An expenditure of millions of dollars that are totally unjustified could conceivably be passed without much danger of detection. Canadians have become so used to the expenditure of billions that a million here or there seems of little consequence.

The budget in the fiscal year 1948-49 was $1.9 million. The budget in the fiscal year 1956-57 was $4.528 million, but no reform was initiated by that government to correct this abuse.

Let them attack this government, Mr. Speaker. It is a government which has the courage to say that the status quo is not good enough, that we are going to have a committee system which, when it becomes fully operative, will be a safeguard against an imprudent waste of funds something which was charged by the right hon. gentleman 20 years ago. And some of the opposition critics accuse this government of attempting to trample on democracy!

It was 20 years ago that the right hon. gentleman made the following statement:

> If parliament is to be made as effective an instrument in the modern world as it should be, the procedure of parliament should be modernized and brought up to date.

That is what he said, but what did his government do about it?

Today we have a government willing to initiate procedural reforms with all of their strength and possible weaknesses, and if there are weaknesses in this package of rules 75A, 75B and 75C, at least there is a government in power with the courage to initiate the proper reforms to correct these weaknesses.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Perrault: Members may recall the speech of the former prime minister made on March 11, 1960 at page 1973 of Hansard of that day. At that time he said:

> We are now in our forty-second day and the order paper does not seem to be diminishing at any great rate of speed. I hope that after a number of matters are dealt with in the legislative program, the subject of defence may receive early attention in committee.

Then on July 21, 1960, almost nine years ago, he appealed for shorter speeches. He said:

> Do not tell me that once an item has been dealt with repetitious utterances by other members having similar views add either to the forcefulness of the argument or the effectiveness of the examination.

This is a point which the government has been making in this debate. Of course the time of parliament and the money of the Canadian people have been wasted by an inordinately long debate on certain matters. That former government complained, and this government is taking action.

Changes are being sponsored by a government with a sense of responsibility. The former prime minister said:

> I say that nowhere else in any other parliamentary institution is so much time taken in the examination of particular items as is taken here in connection with estimates.

He was right of course, but absolutely nothing was done to correct this abuse.

• (12 noon)

This government, criticized and villified by the opposition, is prepared to act and will act on the basis of suggestions articulated by the right hon. gentleman long ago. Time does not permit me to go through all the other examples about which the opposition parties have complained, but spokesmen for all parties have said insufficient time is being given to the consideration of estimates, and that speeches are too long. This government has acted. We simply say that those of us on the government side have been asking for co-operation. Some of you may say you have co-operated and 75c is not needed. We have been co-architects of many reforms which have taken place in this house but leadership has been given by this government.

Given reasonable co-operation by the opposition 75c may never be required. Who will question the right of the government to exercise power, when no agreement can be reached under 75A and 75B, to set in motion a procedure which would allow it to limit debate? To repeat those words of the former distinguished justice minister for the party to my left:

> In the unusual circumstance where it is not possible to obtain agreement, the government itself takes responsibility for—and there is a vote upon —a motion for allocation of time on the matter in question.

In other Commonwealth jurisdictions, those nations which cherish zealously the tradition which we have inherited in Canada, the guillotine, closure and other devices are employed to limit debate. These are devices employed without any protestations and without any motions from the opposition.

If it can be demonstrated that 75c allows insufficient time, then let more time be allowed, but the right and responsibility of this or any other government to invoke 75c or equivalent rules cannot be challenged successfully. Surely the members in opposition, in view of the statements of their former leaders and spokesman, will at least test 75c. Let them give this package a trial.

The minority right to dissent must never be jeopardized, but it is true that in the ultimate the wishes of the majority must prevail. Nowhere in this package of 75A, 75B and 75C is this principle violated or placed in jeopardy.

Some have alleged that closure is sufficient and that there is no need for 75c, yet closure permits a minister unilaterally to stifle all debate. Rule 75c only imposes the obligation for advance consultation with the opposition under 75A and 75B. In virtually all cases 75A and 75B would be sufficient, and 75c would be employed only when the majority opinion of the nation, represented by a majority of members in the house, supported action on a matter of importance to the country.

Rule 75c as it is, or modified to provide greater time for consideration and debate, will be a safeguard. I do not oppose this concept at all, or the idea of giving the opposition more time under 75c, so long as the principle remains that the government must have the right to schedule the work of the house when it comes down to the crunch. That is a right which must be observed.

Rule 75c as it is or modified will be that safeguard and a symbol of the determination of the majority of Canadians, after fair debate and after opposition members have had their opinions heard, that the government be able to proceed through a democratic vote in this house and get on with the people's business.

Speaker after speaker has made reference to the fact that this has been one of the most productive sessions in the history of this parliament. Members of the opposition parties have admitted the government has been successful, and have suggested that we do not need 75c because this has been one of the most productive parliaments we can recall. The only dissenting voice was from a member of the N.D.P. who said that so far as his party was concerned there has not been any legislation good enough to block or oppose. One wonders what their qualitative standards might be.

The rule changes made earlier in the session have strengthened the Commons without doubt, and they have made this institution more meaningful to the Canadian people. The wonder of it all is that previous governments moved so slowly to reform the rules. While our Commonwealth cousins have been initiating changes and reforms in all directions, our parliament has become more and more ineffective in the face of modern challenges. When a committee of this house visited Westminster and conferred with British leaders a while back, the U.K. government house leader, Richard Crossman, told Canadians bluntly that we have been living with 19th century rules of procedure.

Those very spiritual cousins of our friends to the left have been telling us that it has taken time but change has come. Many people resist change because they cannot abide it. They say, halt and stay awhile. Let us adopt a few tentative reforms. Some say we cannot and must not contemplate anything like 75c. Progress has been made during the past months, and there have been some major steps in spite of the failure of previous governments to initiate progressive and regular rule reforms.

What have we accomplished? Despite all their shakedown problems the standing committees have a new status in the house. After years of complaints by members that estimates were given too little time, our standing committees are being entrusted with detailed examination of the estimates, and they have been accorded a new role in the matter of examining public bills. For a government which the opposition alleges is hell-bent on the destruction of the parliamentary system it must mark a new departure from the standard plot of subversion to accord opposition parties so many days wherein they can bring forward policy issues in a series of motions that they can bring forward with notice and have debated.

The report stage of public bills now provides opportunities for members to direct attention to amendments and to stimulate debate in a way that has not been possible in the past. Is this another way of subverting democracy and crushing parliament? For a government which the opposition charges is against democracy, surely it was unwise for it to fulfil a long standing Tory promise to provide research budgets for all opposition parties in order that they might make a more helpful contribution to parliament?

This debate has continued long enough. Conversations should be resumed, and we are hopeful they will lead to the settlement of difficult differences.

[Mr. Perrault.]

An hon. Member: Don't believe it.

Mr. Perrault: There is no doubt whatsoever about the determination of the government to adopt 75c. If there is majority agreement to extend the time limits under 75c, or in respect of other modifications which would make it acceptable, I would not dissent or disagree with such a decision. No one in the house could reasonably dispute the fact that the government, after all other negotiations have failed, in the last extremity has the right to establish the limits of debate with the full and certain knowledge that if, in the mind of the public, the action is unfair it will be turned out of office and given time to contemplate its sins of omission and commission.

Mr. Heath Macquarrie (Hillsborough): Mr. Speaker, it seems strange to be locked in debate in mid-July in a session of parliament which has had 192 sitting days. It is stranger still when there was supposed to be a clear understanding that we would break off our deliberations and debates on June 27.

The recommendations of the committee on procedure concerning the virtues and values of the semester system—a word which I always thought was rather inappropriate—now seem strangely unreal. While I appreciate the beauties of our nation's capital, I would prefer to be amid them in the weeks after Labour day and prior to Dominion day. This is not only because I come from a part of the country where summer is a glorious season when warmth and winds are alike, kind and gentle, but I think there is something wrong when a parliament cannot so organize itself that its members and its staff are out of here in July and August.

This is wrong, but there is here a greater wrong being perpetrated. That is why we are debating, and that is why I join in this debate. That is why I have no idea how long we may be engaged in this important debate. This must be obvious after the performance of the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald) last night.

• (12:10 p.m.)

If the performance of the President of the Privy Council on television last night is indicative of the attitudes of hon. members opposite, then I must confess to great anxiety for the future as far as compromise and reasonable conciliation is concerned. His performmance, his suggestions and their implications did no service to him or to this parliament. They were a total misrepresentation of what was suggested by some very able and sincere parliamentarians yesterday.

This is a very important debate, but it has become a very painful one as well. Much of the reason for this stems from the fact that the person who should have brought most to this debate and raised its tone, who should have given it fine and noble emphasis, the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) himself, was one of the chief of those who cast denigration upon it by suggesting that members battling for the rights of parliament were indulging in a "stupid filibuster".

Denigrating parliament is a serious matter. We as individual politicians are used to being the stereotyped butt end of jokes; that is part of the game. But when the institution of parliament itself is denigrated in the eyes of the public, and the leader of the institution from within joins in that denigration, then the situation is serious. Never in the history of this country have we had a Prime Minister who has led the ranks of those who would belittle this institution.

Sir John A. Macdonald, the father of this country, was a member of parliament at the age of 29 until his death at the age of 76. He loved parliament and sometimes played it like an organ. But he always recognized its importance and value. As Arthur Meighen said of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, parliament was the home of his intellect and he liked it. Sir Robert Borden from Nova Scotia, our second last Nova Scotian prime minister, found it a workshop. He worked hard and well. Arthur Meighen electrified and glorified its debates.

A former Prime Minister, the right hon. gentleman for Prince Albert (Mr. Diefenbaker), was one of the great performers in parliamentary institutions. I may say that of all the criticisms that I have heard levelled against the right hon. gentleman, today was the first time I had heard him criticized for not imposing closure and for not limiting the rights of the minority.

Certainly this could have been done in the years after the election of 1958 when the Liberal opposition was decimated. Even the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) was gone. The opposition consisted of hapless and hopeless remnants. The hon. member for Prince Albert led a triumphant group of 208 members. But never did he or his associates ever suggest that the smart thing to do would be to bring in some device whereby the opposition might be muzzled. I think this is to his eternal credit, not to his detriment.

I, much like my colleague for Calgary Centre (Mr. Harkness), do not pretend to be an expert on the rules. I leave this subject to those who are. I also agree with him that some of our most lengthy debates are those devoted to discussions about saving the time of parliament.

This debate is more than a discussion of the rules. It is not just a narrow discussion of a law, a regulation or a rule, but of the spirit behind it. This is what we are reflecting upon in this debate. There is more involved than the mere words of rule 75A, 75B and 75C. I think it is the essence of representative government that we are evaluating and appreciating at this time.

We all know, of course, that parliament should be efficient. While precedent and tradition are important to us, we do not necessarily weaken the institution when we change its rules or guidelines. There have been in recent years some real contributions toward achieving greater efficiency and I welcome them heartily. Over the years members have adopted many self-denying ordinances. We limited set debates such as the Throne Speech and budget. Time limits on speeches of individual members have been set. Then we reached the stage where we limited the question period, and I think that was a good step. I welcome these measures, but I think the committee would find it profitable to consider further improvements.

Although there has been a proper limitation of time in the question period, there has been an improper limitation of participation on the part of ministers. Therefore, I think we may have to take a look at the question period in a new perspective.

I also wonder whether consideration might be given to putting into our order paper some concrete and definite guidelines on the question period which would be more practical and contemporary than the provisions of citation 171 of Beauchesne. In fact, I wonder whether, under the existing restraints, we need consider other guidelines than those of relevancy, propriety and brevity to steer us through the question period.

I believe that Standing Order 40 has been a contributor to more meaningful debate in the house. On the other hand, perhaps further consideration should be given to Standing Order 26. Waste of time while waiting for votes has long been a pet beef of mine, and I would welcome improvement in this regard. We need constantly to improve our procedures and to revise our standing orders.

But the proposed rule 75c is something more than procedural; it is fundamental. The discussion that has been evoked in this debate has indicated clearly that we are not just arguing about form but about substance. Certain people in this house, such as the Prime Minister, have scorned this debate. Some of the press representatives are sadly unaware of what it is all about and spend more time in measuring the length of debate than in appraising what is being debated. This is one of the most serious and fundamental subjects that could be discussed in these torrid July days.

In parliamentary debates and in politics generally, I suppose we do not need much encouragement when it comes to the art of dramatization. Perhaps we are inclined to hyperbole, and certainly understatement is not the most outstanding attribute of the politician. But this debate is not one that needs the art of the dramatist. Exaggeration for emphasis is not necessary. The subject itself is sufficiently serious as to require no adornment, no additional or external calls for urgency.

What we, the people's representatives, are dealing with today could mark a great watershed between a parliament which, with all its imperfections, was and is a meaningful instrument of democratic action and something that is much less valuable, much less significant and much less expressive of the popular will. As I say, we are dealing today not with the routine, but rather with the essence of parliament. We would be less than true to the spirit of parliamentary democracy, that precious but sometimes frail product of centuries of human achievement, if we did otherwise.

We should remind ourselves always that popular democracy is not an easy or a natural human development. It has not flourished universally. Indeed, it has often failed and faltered. Men of wisdom and perception like Abraham Lincoln, and Wilfrid Laurier after him, have warned that "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty". Especially has this been so in reference to political liberty. So, it is well that hon. members are sensing that there is great danger in what is being imposed; there is great danger in this seemingly innocuous rule 75c.

• (12:20 p.m.)

Before coming to this chamber I spent a good many years perusing Hansard and other parliamentary papers. It is my view that, in general, the speeches of hon. members in this debate have so far been of very high quality. I am not particularly referring to speeches made today. Speeches in this debate have been thoughtful, perceptive and, in the main, they have been utterances of men who realize that what is happening is very serious in the evolution of our parliamentary system. This is not just another debate, not just another argument, not just another confrontation between parties.

An hon. Member: It is not just a stupid filibuster.

Mr. Macquarrie: I am not one who is given to criticizing the C.B.C. or the media generally—not that silence is to be taken as enthusiastic endorsation. Nevertheless, in this vital phase of parliamentary deliberations I think the free press has generally failed, and there are important exceptions to this, to realize that without a free parliament there will be scant room or scope for a free press.

I must confess to being an avid C.B.C. listener and I report with sadness, Mr. Speaker, that little has come from the many representatives of the cognoscenti whose views it airs concerning the true inwardness of the situation confronting the House of Commons of Canada today. I believe in this respect—and I do not know whether the weather has had anything to do with it—the press has been less alert to the dangers at hand than was the case with rule 16A last December. I agree with my friend the hon. member for Halifax-East Hants (Mr. McCleave), that Frankenstein is still Frankenstein and his monster is still the monster.

There are important exceptions to the general run of press coverage, and my hon. friend, the hon. member for St. Hyacinthe (Mr. Ricard), mentioned some of them. It is significant that one man who knew at first hand the tyranny of a political system which banished free institutions should be in the forefront of those who see the dangers lurking in this current effort on the part of the government. Lubor Zink, with whom I do not always agree, has from the first syllables uttered in this debate given this issue the emphasis it properly deserves. I congratulate him and salute his perceptiveness. I salute him and others like him who are fully awake to the importance of this debate. I say that they are acting in their own interests, in the interests of the fourth estate, when they direct attention to the importance of what is going on.

Some time before we had a parliament in Canada there was another newspaperman who analyzed the parliamentary institutions of his own land, Britain. So shrewdly did he perceive and so succinctly did he record that his writings have become a classic, if not the classic, dissertation on the British parliamentary system. As my colleague from Halifax-East Hants said in the house the other night, John Stuart Mill was a man of tremendous intellect and prestige, and a giant in parliament. Unfortunately, as my hon. friend said, John Stuart Mill has been relegated if not forgotten by many who should cherish his views. On the other hand what Bagehot had to say is still read. While his style may be quaint, and the political society in which he moved vastly different from ours, he is as contemporary today as the best efforts of our modern editors. I wish to read Bagehot's comments about the House of Commons in Britain. He said:

> The House of Commons needs to be impressive, and impressive it is: but its use resides not in its appearance, but in its reality. Its office is not to win power by awing mankind, but to use power in governing mankind.

He went on to say:

> The second function of the House of Commons is what I may call an expressive function. It is its office to express the mind of the English people on all matters which come before it—
>
> The third function of Parliament is what I may call—preserving a sort of technicality even in familiar matters for the sake of distinctness—the teaching function. A great and open council of considerable men cannot be placed in the middle of a society without altering that society. It ought to alter it for the better. It ought to teach the nation what it does not know.

And no teacher can teach when he is gagged, Mr. Speaker. No one can teach when freedom to do so is denied to him. Then he went on to say that the fourth function of the house was to enable the government to legislate. My hon. friend from Malpeque (Mr. MacLean) touched on this matter the other night. This house is not a bill passing machine, Mr. Speaker. This is a great, deliberative assembly and it can be great only if it is free.

One of Canada's great men in the field of political science, a man at whose feet many of us worshipped, as we began our studies, MacGregor Dawson, had something worth-while to say when he looked at our Canadian institutions. Some of the things he had to say are worth saying again. He said this:

> The House of Commons is the great democratic agency in the government of Canada; the "grand inquest of the nation"; the organized medium through which the public will finds expression and exercises its ultimate political power. It forms the indispensable part of the legislature; and it is the body to which at all times the executive must turn for justification and approval.

If I may interpolate, it is not the other way round. I continue:

> The fundamental importance of the House of Commons is thus derived from its essential representative character, the fact that it can speak, as no other body in the democracy can pretend to speak, for the people. It presents in condensed form the different interests, races, religions, classes, and occupations, whose ideas and wishes it embodies with approximate exactness. It serves as the people's forum and the highest political tribunal; it is, to use Mill's phrase, "the nation's committee of grievances and its congress of opinions." One of its greatest merits is derived from the fact that it is not a selection of the ablest or most brilliant men in the country, but rather a sampling of the best of an average run, an assembly of diverse types and varied experience, the members of which are genuinely and actively concerned with the promotion of the national welfare as they see it. No Cabinet which keeps in constant touch with this body can be very far removed from fluctuations in public opinion, for the House is always acting as an interpreter and forcing this opinion on the attention of its leaders; conversely, a Cabinet which grows out of touch with the Commons is courting disaster.

He goes on to say:

> The companion function of the Commons and one which can scarcely be separated from the first is that of educating and leading public opinion on many questions. The House is much more than a mere mouthpiece to repeat and advertise the views of the constituencies. It will, of course, do that to a large extent, but it will also discuss many questions on which the voters have as yet no certain convictions or on which they may need further information and guidance. The House will talk, argue, investigate, oppose, decide, and frequently postpone action on many matters, and in doing these things it arouses interest and helps to create a more enlightened opinion throughout the country.

Can it do that under rule 75c, Mr. Speaker? I say it cannot. Dare we, sir, if we take our duty seriously, forget the imperishable truths which Walter Bagehot and Dawson set forth so cogently? Can we assume that an institution so precious, so delicately balanced, and with such immense demands upon it can sustain the assaults of those who see only narrow administrative or partisan aims or goals?

While the House of Commons or any dynamic parliamentary body is of course a proper arena for debate, vigorous controversy and sharp conflicts of opinion, there must be values which are above and beyond the clash and clamour of partisan conflict. The rights of hon. members and the place, honour and role of the institution itself are in this category. These things belong to parliament—not to the executive, not to the majority, but to parliament itself.

My leader said the other day, and the hon. member for Oxford (Mr. Nesbitt) was of the same opinion, that there are indications that people in high places believe or are persuaded that we should be governed in this country by a presidential system of government. My friend from Lambton-Kent (Mr. McCutcheon) mentioned it again yesterday.

• (12:30 p.m.)

When we used to study the presidential versus the parliamentary system in our political science classes, we made many analyses and comparisons. It was a favourite question of the examiner. There is much virtue in the Congressional system as it is known south of the border, but the presidential system which the government has in mind is not the healthy, vigorous system of the United States. You would have to go farther south than that to find the Congressional system which is in the minds of some people today.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Or to de Gaulle.

Mr. Macquarrie: Perhaps if it is not found in Latin America, it will be found in certain countries in Europe whose parliaments may be an instrument of adornment, but they are not instruments which function. No self-respecting United States congressman or senator would tolerate for one moment the pusillanimous role given to committees by this parliament. I refer to what is an actuality, and that is bad enough, not what may be envisaged by those who would do away with this nuisance and diminish the stupid filibustering and the bother of the people's representatives expressing themselves on the people's business in the people's chamber.

An essential ingredient in the successful working of the parliamentary process is compromise and common sense. You can see this in 75A and 75B. There is something in 75B which the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) would probably describe as stupid. It was an omission. I would say in a more gentle piece of phraseology that it seems a bit strange. Proposed rules 75A and 75B could be made suitable repositories for compromise and common sense.

Any debate which produces quotes from Edmund Bruke cannot help but be a good debate. Edmund Burke said:

> All government,—indeed every human benefit and enjoyment, every virtue and every prudent act—is founded on comprise and barter.

[Mr. Macquarrie.]

The system cannot work of course unless on the vital issues there is an attitude of accommodation, a desire for consensus and a reasonable approach to compromise in the institution itself.

Rule 75c represents and reflects something entirely different. Not there do you find the wisdom of compromise and the value of consensus, but the impatience of the autocrat, the power madness of the arrogant and the brittle abrasiveness of the technocrat. That is what 75c reflects. What saddens me most is the chance we had when this new parliament came into being. We could have had reasoned and reasonable reform far beyond that which we attained in some of the items which we passed last December. Where would one find a more moderate man than the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield)? Where would we find a man more reasonable and patient? Of course some people believe because he is consultative, he is indecisive, because he is reasonable he is weak. These people are now finding out these are misconceptions.

Where could we find a more understanding man than the hon. member for Peace River (Mr. Baldwin)? Who is less given to fractious activity than that man? Who could we have chosen to typify goodwill more than that man for our house leader? And the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles)? I sometimes call him venerable. He has been here a long time, he has said a great many things, but I have never heard him say a mean or little thing about any member of this parliament.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Inside or outside the house.

Mr. Macquarrie: As his leader says, inside or outside this house. There were opportunities for goodwill. How much better it would have been had compromise been the vehicle instead of the bulldozer. Bulldozers wreck and destroy, and sometimes the surface is never the same as it was before.

The lessons of last December have not been learned. Once again parliament is hungup in an angry debate. What is the reason? One of the perspective political writers in our country today is Mr. Dalton Camp. I read from one of his columns:

> The trouble with the Trudeau administration which the New Yorker did not report, is that it is overlayed with arrogance and it is hell-bent to impose its authority upon the Canadian Parliament to a vastly greater extent than any previous government, which is saying a good deal. Mr.

Trudeau's demand for further rules changes represents another invasion of the shrunken ground of authority and self-respect still held by the members of the Commons, after years of steady attrition.

If imposed, the rules will ensure not only that less will be heard from the opposition but a good deal less from government backbenchers as well. What are they to do with their time?

Given the Prime Minister's distemper the other day, few Liberal members are likely to expose themselves to his charge that all who oppose him are "stupid" or "hypercritical."

And Mr. Macdonald, the Prime Minister's jack-of-all-troubles, has told them, at a recent caucus, not to forget the fact that they are in parliament because they were borne there on the coat-tails of their leader. But the life of a parliamentary acolyte must be hard! It is only too bad that some of them will not say publicly, about now, what they are saying privately.

I do not like to enter into harsh, unkind debate. In my political career I have never developed an instinct to go for the jugular. I do not care where a man's jugular is because I have not the intention of going after it. However, there are certain things one must note and, noting, must react to. I have been wondering in this interesting poltical phase if there is some elixir of arrogance which is quaffed by members of the present cabinet before or after their meetings. Dicey used to talk about the "endless audacity of elected men" and I think of the presumptuous arrogance of some of those who are ministers of the Crown today.

Is there some cloak of condescension which must be worn by the sacred group who sit at the great table? Even the Postmaster Genral (Mr. Kierans), whose administrative actions when they are not failures are fiascos, even he can be arrogant. Do some members miss this arrogance because they are not exposed to the centre of things? Is this why the Minister of National Defence (Mr. Cadieux) is always such a reasonable, gentlemanly man? Is this why the Solicitor General (Mr. McIlraith) and the Minister of National Revenue (Mr. Côté) do not possess these attributes, because they are farther away from the new era and the new type of politics? Because I mentioned those two I do not want to suggest I have exhausted the list.

I do not enjoy this sort of debate but I cannot in all conscience find any good or worthy reasons for what is being attempted in 75c.

• (12:40 p.m.)

The convictions I had were made more grim last night as I watched the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald) try to convey to the Canadian people what is going on in this house. I think his performance was shameful—

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Macquarrie: —and the reason we are not in agreement today. I do not know why such a man was chosen for such an important position as house leader. Where was the Solicitor General (Mr. McIlraith); where was the Minister of Manpower and Immigration (Mr. MacEachen)? Why could one of these men not have been designated? Not only do they have a knowledge of the rules of the house but also they have the kind of parliamentary maturity which is necessary in dealing with hon. members and which perhaps would have ensured to them success. I suggest with all respect that the designation of the President of the Privy Council for the delicate role of negotiation in a matter of such importance is just about as wise as would be the nomination of Genghis Khan as Moderator of the Presbyterian Church.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): And with the same result.

Mr. Macquarrie: I hope I did not hear someone across the way cast aspersions on the Presbyterian Church. Say what you like about me but mind yourself when talking about the Presbyterian Church because I might have to forego my usual role of humble gentility if this should come about. Like my fellow Presbyterian, the hon. member for Broadview (Mr. Gilbert)—you are calling for my confession here—I am angry, I am disturbed, I am anxious and worried about what is happening. But also like the hon. member for Broadview I think perhaps the heaviest emotion I have at the moment is one of sadness.

I say why is this necessary? Why must this vital national institution be so torn and traumatized as it is at the present time? Why do we have these recurring efforts to block free expression of opinion in this chamber? In a day and age when many established institutions are under severe stress and strain why are we not all uniting to buttress and strengthen this one instead of having to fight within ourselves against efforts which would debilitate it?

There are too many things today being assailed by unreasonable anarchists. Surely we should preserve this institution. I should like to say in passing that I do not commend those who showed some lack of manners in dealing with the Prime Minister in the west, but I would say that part of the trouble is that in this house the sound suggestions which have come from this side of the house to deal with western problems have been repudiated. I would say also that he should show a greater respect for organized, reasonable and proper debate in this chamber and not thereby encourage that kind of thing outside.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Macquarrie: All around us we see ill organized, ill directed patterns of dissent and hear on every hand the raucous cry of those who would destroy and not build. Why do we not unite to preserve, to sustain and to strengthen this essential forum of national opinion, this indispensable organ of the people's will? That is what it is. It is not, I hope, too late for these people across the way to reconsider. This is my plea to the government: desist before it is too late; reflect, consult, and abandon rigidity in favour of reason. Let us preserve the essence of the parliamentary system to which at our best we are all or should be dedicated, every one of us.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Max Saltsman (Waterloo): Mr. Speaker, on previous occasions it has been my privilege to have listened with pleasure to the hon. member for Hillsborough (Mr. Macquarrie). I cannot recall an occasion in the past when he has been more eloquent, more sincere, and has expressed more adequately his concern for this great institution. I therefore would wish my first words to be ones of congratulation to the hon. member for Hillsborough, and indeed to all hon. members who have participated in this debate.

I ask you, Mr. Speaker, to observe the special nature and condition of this debate. Surely it is obvious that never have so much effort and thought been put forward by a united opposition as in this debate. I have observed that members who in the past have normally spoken from very rough notes, as is the practice in this house, have engaged in a great deal of preparation and thought about what is involved in rule 75c. They have come here well prepared to express their great concern over the effect 75c will have on this institution.

I wish to observe also that in my recollection this is one of the few occasions when not a single member of the opposition has risen to support a government measure. This is unusual. As I look back on most of the debates in this house I can recall that seldom has the government brought in a proposal when there has not been a willingness on the part of one of the opposition parties, or of some members in the opposition, to support the measure. A member of parliament does not like to break with his party. Yet there are occasions when a member feels compelled to do so. You will not find this situation in this particular debate, Mr. Speaker.

I should like to recall previous occasions. Let me speak about the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield) who, at great risk to his own position in his party, and to his eternal credit, had the courage to stand up and support the government measure in respect of the language bill, even though he wanted some changes made in it. Here was a new leader of a party who had the courage to say to those in his party who did not agree with him, "This is necessary." This is a tribute to his leadership.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Saltsman: I can also recall a previous occasion when the former leader of that same party, the right hon. member for Prince Albert (Mr. Diefenbaker), stood up in this house, with most members of his party opposed to him, arguing for everything he was worth for the abolition of capital punishment. To me it was a memorable occasion and one I shall never forget. Again it is a tribute to the character of the people who are members of parliament that on matters of principle which concern them they are not afraid to dissent from their party's position. I believe there is hardly a member in the opposition who, at some time or other, has not felt compelled because of reason, conscience or principle, to differ with his own party and take exception to some issue. But not on 75c.

• (12:50 p.m.)

If it is not obvious to those on the other side of the house, let me spell it out: We in the opposition are prepared to stay here as long as we can, and as long as it is possible to continue this debate. We shall do this to indicate our defiance of a measure which we believe will have a profound effect upon future freedoms of the house.

Yesterday the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) rose and in a graceful gesture offered the olive branch to the government. He offered them a chance to get out of the terrible position in which they have put themselves. The government could have got out of this position with dignity and grace. What happened? I have never heard a more arrogant speech than that made by the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald).

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Saltsman: Even if we forget that this kind of response was designed to heat up tempers in the House of Commons rather than cool them, it was a disrespectful act for a member of parliament to make toward another who was offering him an opportunity to move forward with the business of the house. One could have forgiven the house leader had he said he was caught by surprise and this was the reason for responding as he did. He could have been forgiven had he said he had not prepared an answer. But he left the chamber and deliberately repeated this piece of arrogance to the entire nation. Surely there is no forgiveness for that kind of discourtesy.

Some hon. Members: Shame.

An hon. Member: He does not know any better.

Mr. Saltsman: The members of the government and those of the opposition are in this sense very much alone in this debate: men are on their way to the moon and public attention is focussed on that historical event. Many people outside the chamber cannot understand—and the press certainly has not helped them understand—the vital issues involved in this debate. They wonder frankly and honestly what all this is about. They ask: What are these two groups doing to each other? The public has not really made up its mind who is right and who is wrong in this regard.

It may take a while for people to make up their minds on this issue. Important as this debate may be, it will not strengthen people's confidence in the parliament of Canada. If we were debating the interest rate, if our debate built one more house in Canada, created one more job—

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Sold some wheat.

Mr. Saltsman: —helped one farmer, or sold some wheat, people would understand. It is difficult for people to understand this issue when grown men, the elected representatives on one side take one position and the elected representatives on the other side take another. We recognized this yesterday when we said to the government: Let us sit down and talk about it. But we were rebuffed in a rude, crude, crass manner.

It is interesting to note that the whips are very happy these days. Normally the whips have a great deal of difficulty finding enough members to take part in a debate. There is difficulty because members have other commitments, they are in committees, have speeches to make and constituency work to do. Now the difficulty is that the whips have to placate all those who wish to speak on this subject; they have to find spots for those who are determined their voices shall be heard in the debate on an issue so vital to their future and the future of this institution.

It should have been recognized from the beginning, when the committee chairman brought in the report, that we were heading toward this difficult situation, particularly with a stubborn government on our hands. I cannot recall a committee report that did not have the endorsation of at least some members of the opposition. In this case it was not a committee report at all; it was a government report. There was no agreement on the committee. The flag debate was the most contentious issue that I can recall, but even in that case some opposition members endorsed the committee report which was put before the house. That is not the situation here. It has been obvious from the beginning of this debate that as much as we in the opposition have been prepared to give, the government has been prepared to give absolutely nothing.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Saltsman: From the beginning the government has displayed a determination to have its own way. There has been no spirit of consultation, no spirit of compromise. When the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) said, "We are masters of this house", the whole body politic was adversely affected. I like to recall the President of the Privy Council as he was before assuming his exalted position. We sat on committees together. I remember him as a reasonable, intelligent man who in those days understood the various positions being adopted. I like to think that when we have statements emanating from the President of the Privy Council he still has some reservations about them. I suspect that although it may be—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order, please. It being one o'clock I do now leave the chair until 2 p.m. this afternoon.

At one o'clock the house took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The house resumed at 2 p.m.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

TAX REFORM

APPOINTMENT OF SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I wonder if there might be unanimous consent to revert to motions for the purpose of dealing with the proposed order with respect to the tax reform committee.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Is there agreement to reverting to motions?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The house having reverted to the order for motions:

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): Mr. Speaker, as I mentioned there have been discussions regarding the best procedure for dealing with the order of the house with respect to the establishment and terms of reference of the committee on tax reform. If the house is agreeable to the special order which I am now going to suggest, I suggest that my colleague, the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Gray) will propose a motion and make a statement.

But before doing so I should like to ask for the unanimous consent of the house to the following terms which, I think, will be found generally agreeable: First, that the notice of motion required of my colleague be waived under the circumstances; second, that there should be one speaker representing each group, who would have the opportunity to speak on the matter; and third, that there be no amendments but that the question be put after each of these representatives has been heard. As I said, if there is general agreement perhaps that could be made a special order of the house.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Is it so agreed?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): This is agreed, Mr. Speaker, but may I make the point that it is the result of consultation.

[The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard).]

Mr. H. E. Gray (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): Before beginning to move the motion may I ask for the indulgence of the house with reference to a related matter of order. Ordinarily, once I have moved the motion and made any remarks connected with it I would not be able to speak again. I was wondering if it might meet the satisfaction of the house if I begin by simply moving the motion and reserving any remarks on it until other hon. members have spoken, thus enabling me to answer questions or give explanations arising out of the remarks of the spokesmen for the other parties. I am making this suggestion in order to be helpful.

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West): May I speak on the point of order raised by the parliamentary secretary. The hon. gentleman opposite would not expect me to make a comment on such an important subject without knowing the government's intentions. If there are questions to be answered surely the house would find it appropriate to have the parliamentary secretary make his remarks on the motion now and deal with the questions later.

Mr. Gray: I move, seconded by the hon. member for Sarnia (Mr. Cullen):

That the House of Commons do unite with the Senate in the appointment of a special joint committee of the Senate and House of Commons, to be known as the special Joint Parliamentary Committee on Tax Reform, to consider the government's proposals for tax reform, with powers to report from time to time its opinions and observations thereon; to send for persons, papers and records; to sit during sittings and adjournments of the house; to print from day to day such papers and evidence as may be ordered by the committee;

That Standing Order 65(5) be suspended in relation to this special joint committee;

That 20 members of the House of Commons, to be designated at a later date, act on behalf of the house as members of the said committee, 11 of whom shall be required for a quorum;

That the presence of a quorum shall be required whenever a vote resolution or other decision is to be taken by the committee, provided that the committee by resolution may authorize the chairman to hold meetings to receive and authorize the printing of evidence when a quorum is not present;

That any member of either house who is not a member of the committee may, unless the committee otherwise orders, take part in the public proceedings of the committee, but may not vote or move any motion, nor shall such a member be part of any quorum; and

That the committee be authorized to retain expert, technical and secretarial assistance;

That a message be sent to the Senate to inform that house accordingly.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order which I believe may be helpful. In following the text read by the parliamentary secretary it has occurred to me that perhaps there is an inadvertent omission in the first paragraph which reads that the committee may sit during the sittings and adjournments of this house. This implies that it could not carry on following the period of prorogation. This being a special joint committee I do not believe it will be appointed only for the life of parliament, as is the case with the standing and joint committees of the house. There might be a procedural difficulty there in that the committee may do a considerable amount of work before the prorogation of the present session, whenever that may occur, which would be lost following the prorogation of the session and would have to be repeated in the next session. Perhaps this might be cured by the addition of the words "during the sittings and adjournments of the house and periods of prorogation".

Mr. Gray: Mr. Speaker, I should like to thank the hon. member for bringing this to my attention. I think he has a valid point. I think that what we should want to do is not only to enable the committee to sit during any period when there may be a hiatus following the prorogation of one session and the beginning of another but also to enable it to be in the same situation as are the standing committees which carry on during the life of parliament. Perhaps in the course of our remarks on this I may, with the assistance of the table, draft appropriate wording and, with the unanimous consent of the house, add that wording to the motion because, as I said, I think my hon. friend has in fact made a most useful and valuable contribution.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): May I ask, Mr. Speaker, whether, if the wording is changed, their Honours in the other place will be called back to change their part of the motion?

Mr. Winch: If I am wrong, I apologize, but my understanding of what we have just heard is that this committee will be able to sit during the summer recess, if we ever have one. I understand that the other house has adjourned until October 14.

Mr. Gray: I am informed that the motion for adjournment of the other place is such that it can be called back on a 24 hour notice, and I have been informed that it would be possible for this to be done, if it were necessary, to ensure that this particular motion be in the form most conducive to carrying out the aims sought for it. I think that the hon. member for Vancouver East (Mr. Winch) has also raised a good point, that is that the change which the hon. member for Edmonton West (Mr. Lambert) mentioned may in fact require the concurrence of the other place to modify their own motion. As far as I am concerned I would have no hesitation in asking, through the proper channels, that the Senate be asked to come back to carry on such work as may be necessary for this purpose.

• (2:10 p.m.)

While some thought is being given to the proper wording which will enable the committee to carry on beyond any prorogation of this present session, perhaps I can say that the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald) attempted several weeks ago to obtain leave of the house to move the motion to set up a special joint committee of the house and the other place to deal with matters of tax reform. When unanimous consent was not obtained there occurred a period of consultation not only with spokesmen of the opposition parties but also with members on this side of the house. This resulted in the form of the motion being changed substantially, such that it now reads in the way I have just stated.

If I am not misinformed, and I do not think I am, it is fair to say that the provisions of the motion, at least with respect to the participation of members of the House of Commons, reflects the consultations that have taken place with members on both sides of the house. Let me review these provisions briefly.

I think the most significant is the one calling for the appointment or designation of 20 members of this house to make up the House of Commons component, if I may call it that, of the special joint committee. You will recall that the original motion called for the appointment of only 12 members.

Having 20 members from the House of Commons on this special joint committee will, of course, mean a widening of the opportunity for participation of members of this house in the discussions on this important matter. The practical effect will be that members of the finance committee of this house will be in a position to act on behalf of their respective parties on this joint committee. Also this will make it possible for members of the committee, if they wish, to ask the present chairman of the finance committee to act as the House of Commons chairman of the joint committee.

I believe it is the intention of various groups in the house to give their members on our finance committee the opportunity to serve on this joint committee on tax reforms. The provisions of this motion about the use of quorums are in effect identical with the wording of our standing orders on the use of quorums by standing committees. The motion is designed to ensure that the special joint committee will follow the same provisions on this as are presently followed by our standing committees.

The next paragraph deals with the right of someone who is not a member of the committee to participate in its public proceedings. This again is taken from our standing orders and is designed to give members of either house, who want to do so but who are not members of the committee, the same opportunity that is given in our standing orders with respect to participation in the work of standing committees.

There is also a provision in the motion which will authorize the committee to retain expert, technical and secretarial assistance. I think the need for this is self-evident. By putting this provision in this particular motion we will make it unnecessary for the committee to come back to this house at a later date to ask for this authority.

To conclude, let me say that this motion asks this house to unite with the other place to create a special joint committee of the Senate and the House of Commons to be known as the Special Joint Parliamentary Committee on Tax Reform. The wording dealing with the participation of members of the house has been modified from the wording of the motion originally presented several weeks ago. This is the result of consultation with members on all sides of this house. The creation of a joint committee of the house and the other place I think it can be argued, will bring about a measure of convenience for the public. All those who are interested in presenting briefs on the government's initial proposals on tax reform will not have to do so twice—once in the house and again in the Senate. They will make only one appearance before this joint committee.

I certainly commend to the favourable consideration of the house, this motion to set up this joint committee. By accepting this motion we will be empowering it to sit although the house itself may not be sitting until some time in the fall. If that should turn out to be the case at least some necessary preparatory work could be carried out thereby enabling us to begin, all the more quickly, the study we all agree should be given to the forthcoming proposals of the government on tax reform.

[Mr. Gray.]

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Speaker, I thank the hon. Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Gray) for his explanation of the motion before the house. In respect of the point of order I raised I should like to say there is another point I might have raised in relation to the events and circumstances surrounding a potential white paper on this subject.

It is quite conceivable that this house will be prorogued and reassembled before the white paper is presented. Any question of the committee considering the white paper after it has been considered in the house in proper order is merely academic at this time.

This matter of tax reform has been with us now for seven years. If my memory serves me correctly a commission was appointed in 1962, the report of which was tabled by today's Acting Prime Minister (Mr. Sharp), on February 24, 1967. Like a knight in shining white armor he proudly, and with a degree of what he felt was self-satisfaction, promised us a white paper for January, 1968—

Mr. Stanfield: He was held up by parliament.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West):—not withstanding that fact a number of members, particularly those to my left, thought the minister should be prepared to implement some of these provisions by June of 1967. We have now reached July of 1969 and there is no sign of this white paper. All we had this morning was an indication that this famous white paper was being written.

There are original drafts and original drafts. The paper may be written but I do not know through what maze of government our committees may have to circumnavigate, or attempt to wiggle through, before the government will dare let us and the public proceed to examine its ideas, not only on tax reform but on other measures. This is the thing I find extraordinary. There was never any indication in 1967 about the presentation of this limited report.

I do not know how many times the then minister of finance said the white paper on tax reform was being prepared. On many occasions he said it would be presented before too long. This apparently was a delightful and classical expression from the never never land.

Hon. members will remember that last year the present Minister of Finance (Mr. Benson) completely disavowed any intention of presenting a white paper. He said there would not be a white paper but there would be legislation. I suppose someone got to the Minister of Finance and put a little sense in his head about this subject. Last spring, in March or April, we saw a shift, and we all observed the shift which was made in respect of the white paper. We are now going to get it, but it was supposed to be presented in April, then June, and then July. We are now on the eve of August.

• (2:20 p.m.)

I do not know when the house will reconvene, if it ever adjourns, and then prorogue. Let me take, for example, a target date of October 1. I am willing to wager one of our Canadian quarters against its equivalent in the United Kingdom that it will be much closer to October 1 than to any earlier date before we see this white paper.

The Minister of Finance has told us that it will deal only with income and corporation taxes. The Carter report is the report of a royal commission on taxation. Does the minister mean by this statement that we will be presented with a white paper on income and corporation taxes, which will then be followed by legislation; that we will then be presented with a white paper on sales and excise taxes and customs duties and that we will then be presented with a further white paper on estate and succession duty taxes? In other words, is the matter to be proceeded with on a piecemeal basis?

If that is the case, this house is going to be asked to reform our taxation system slice by slice, not knowing what each successive slice is likely to involve. With what has been deemed by many to be a taxation system that has gotten out of joint, there is the very grave danger that we will be asked to assume some other taxation system that may be even more out of joint. Consequently I am not at all happy with the approach that is being adopted by the government.

I think we have already been given a clear indication of what is going to happen in the budget presented on October 22, 1968, in which there was quite a shift of government policy in regard to estate and gift taxes, a shift that bore the influence of the Carter royal commission. I suppose the minister will ultimately tell us that the government have accepted the Carter proposals with regard to state and gift taxes. We are now going to be asked to accept what the government think about income and corporation taxes; and five years from now we will likely complete our study of the whole of the Carter commission report.

I should like to refer to some of the things the Carter commission dealt with under the heading of tax reform. I ask the house to note that they dealt not with income tax reform but with tax reform. I have in my hand a summary in the Canadian Tax Journal, published by the Canadian Tax Foundation in April 1967 of various sections of the Carter report. Among other things the Carter Commission studied the use of the tax system to achieve economic and social objectives. In other words they asked what the purpose of a tax system was. I should like to know whether we are going to be able to study this subject when we are dealing merely with income tax reform. I do not think we will, yet the question is most important.

The second item was taxation of individuals. I suppose we will be able to talk about this when we consider income tax.

The next heading related to taxation of income flowing through intermediaries. Possibly that too can be considered under the heading of income tax.

Then they dealt with determination of business income. That relates to corporation tax.

Then there is a matter I have not seen previous reference to, but it is dealt with under the simple heading of "international".

The next heading relates to sales and excise taxes and duties; and the last heading is general tax administration.

These matters are so inextricably linked together that I find it rather difficult to see why the government should have adopted the procedure it has. I think we are entitled to know whether it is the government's intention to continue to proceed with tax reform, shall I say, slice by slice.

The report of the royal commission was, basically, a package deal; its recommendations are closely interlinked. Changes in income tax are to be compensated for by changes in estate and gift taxes. Changes in the corporate tax structure are to be compensated for by changes in the taxation of individuals. Certainly on the allocation of tax revenues as between the federal government and the provincial governments questions arise as to how you handle, for example, sales tax. Do you abolish it, or do you collect it at the provincial level and refund part to the federal government? Such matters involve the question of tax reform. I hope we will be given a much clearer indication of what the government proposes to do in regard to the whole subject of tax reform.

One further point I should like to make before I resume my seat relates to the degree of consultation—and I mean active consultation, not merely information that is given to the provinces—that should be undertaken in regard to the question of income tax and corporation tax. The province of Ontario commissioned a study which culminated in an excellent report being presented, entitled the Smith report. Similarly the province of Quebec commissioned a very excellent study of its taxation system, the Belanger report if my memory serves me aright.

As a result of our federal constitution and the separate jurisdictions that exist in Canada today, we are overtaxed. Our taxation system is complex. It has some grave inequities and inconsistencies created by the intermeshing of our provincial and federal taxation systems. If the government of Canada, having considered our taxation system, has not taken into account the legitimate interests of the provinces as expressed in these two leading tax studies—I am sure that most of the other provinces will follow closely the general principles outlined in these two tax studies—then we are merely going to be asked to exchange one form of irritant for another. As we all know, there is an old Biblical story about the woman who swept her house clean of devils, only to find that other devils ten times worse came in to take possession.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I suggest that without appropriate study of the three reports dealing with income and corporation taxes we will lead ourselves into an unholy mess. According to the 1967-68 figures, in excess of 34 per cent of the gross national product is taken up by the public sector. A great proportion of the gross national product is going to be affected by an unwieldly, an uncoordinated, and frankly a wasteful tax system.

• (2:30 p.m.)

I am quite pleased, Mr. Speaker, that we are to have the committee that has been constituted. On it will be 20 members from the house, and undoubtedly they will include representative members from the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs, and ten members from the other place who, I am sure, will be fully qualified to deal with the subject. After all, Mr. Speaker, the other place is as much part of the parliament of Canada as this place is, and we welcome its joint participation.

Mr. Max Saltsman (Waterloo): Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the New Democratic Party I take the strongest exception to the establishment of this joint committee of the House of Commons and the Senate. I see no reason at all to include members of the other place on this committee, and there are some very compelling reasons for not including them.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Hear, hear.

Mr. Saltsman: The committee is to deal with tax reform, something that will affect all citizens of this country. I submit that any committee dealing with such a sensitive matter ought to be above suspicion and ought not to have on it members whose interests may conflict with that of the people. In short, there should be no conflicts of interest. I fail to see how conflicts of interest can be avoided if some of the members proposed for this committee from the other place are appointed to it.

The subheading of the July 12 article by Robert McKeown in Weekend Magazine is, "Senators Should Be Above Suspicion—But They're Not". In part Mr. McKeown said this in the editorial:

> A reporter put this question to Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau:
>
> 'Is this a matter of concern to you—that many senators become directors of companies after they enter the Senate?'
>
> Trudeau: 'Do they? Is that a fact?'
>
> A fact? The Senate collectively holds hundreds of directorships and other business retainers. Once they become senators, men not previously noted for their business acumen find themselves being ushered into the top board rooms of the nation.

Before this measure had even been introduced to the Commons and before this house had deliberated the matter, the other place had appointed ten men to study tax reform. Even from the very incomplete list of senators with corporate appointments that I have been able to obtain, it is very obvious that most senators to be appointed to that committee will be faced with conflicts of interest. I am not imputing motives or intentions to the people of the other place; I do not say that they have become deliberately involved in this situation. I am merely saying that it is too much to ask human beings to be completely impartial in situations like these. Considering their responsibilities in other areas, some of these senators will have difficult choices to make.

May I list some of the corporate appointments of some of the senators, Mr. Speaker. Senator Beaubien holds appointments to Canadair Limited, Empire Life Insurance Company—and we in the other place legislate with respect to life insurance companies—Holt Renfrew & Company Limited, Marshall Steel Company Limited, Beaubien Corporation, Belding-Corticelli Limited, Canada and Dominion Sugar Company Limited, Dominion Structural Steel, London & Yorkshire Canada Limited, and M.G.F. Management Limited.

Senator Cook holds directorships or appointments in the following companies: Cook, Bartlett, Chalker, Marshall & Thons, United Towns Electric; Dominion Buck Company; William Nosworthy Limited; Maritime Life Assurance Company; Newfoundland Fluorspar Limited; Great Eastern Oil Company—and it is significant to note that the Carter report has launched a major attack against the oil industry's depletion allowances. And this senator is a director of one of the oil companies of Canada. His other directorships are with Bank of Montreal, Colonial Cordage, and and United North American Holdings Limited.

Senator Everett is the president of Royal Canadian Securities Limited, and his other appointment is with Dominion Motors. Senator Gelinas has appointments with The Mercantile Bank of Canada; Distillers Corporation (Canada) Limited; Canadian International Paper Company; Canadian Cement Company; John Labatt Limited; Canada Permanent Trust Company; Foster Wheeler Limited; Manicouagan Power Company; Sicard Incorporated; Global Life Insurance Company; National Drug & Chemical Company of Canada Limited; EMCO Limited; Hilton of Canada; Robert Mitchell Company Limited and North American Holdings Limited.

Senator Grosart is not shown, so far as I am aware, as holding any directorships. I think he ought to remain on the committee.

Senator Hayden holds appointments to the following enterprises: The Bank of Nova Scotia; Union Carbide Canada Limited; Rio Algom Mines Limited; Atlantic Sugar Refineries Company Limited; Acadia-Atlantic Sugar Company Limited; United Steel Corporation Limited; Parker Pen Company; Allied Towers Merchants; Scotts Restaurants; Capital Wire Cloth Limited, and Electric Furnace Products. He holds ten other appointments as well.

Senator Laird has directorships with Western Ontario Broadcasting Corporation Limited, International Wire and Cable Limited, and Liquid Glaze of Canada Limited.

Senator J. D'Arcy Leonard holds directorships with Canada Permanent Mortgage Corporation; Toronto and London Investment Company Limited; Canadian Industries Limited; Canada Permanent Trust; Consumers Gas and Triarch Corporation Limited.

Senator Thorvaldson holds directorships with Western Gypsum Products Limited; Wesco Paints Limited; Weshoe Industries; International Savings and Mortgage Corporation; Marshall Wells of Canada; International Laboratories Limited; Anthes Imperial Company; C.A.E. Industries Limited; Canadian Premier Life Insurance Co.; Canada Security Trust Company.

I regret having to list these directorships and would have avoided doing so if the matter had been of less serious import. If the work of the committee is to meet with success it is important that the members of the committee in all ways be above suspicion. There is no room for divided loyalties. If the government persists with its intention to appoint members to the committee with divided loyalties it will be quite obvious that this government's child will come into the world stillborn. It will be clear that the government is not really interested in tax reform and that the setting up of this committee is merely another delaying tactic. It will be clear the government will do little about the recommendations made some years ago by the Carter Commission.

The concluding words of Robert McKeown's article are:

> Sorry, senators, but that's the way it must be if you are to avoid suspicion of conflict of interest. No directorships, no retainers, no legal fees. Nothing.

Unless the government can assure us, and unless the Senate can join in giving that assurance, that those appointed from the other place to the committee will be above suspicion, the birth of the committee will be shrouded in suspicion.

• (2:40 p.m.)

[Translation]

Mr. Henry Latulippe (Compton): Mr. Speaker, we are for the setting up of a Special Joint Committee of the Senate and the House of Commons in order to consider the financial structure of the government.

However, I agree with the hon. member of the New Democratic party who believes that since many senators belong to such or such a company, that could have strong bearing on the matter because some decisions could favour high finance.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, we are for tax reform, but it is the whole structure from top to bottom, as it were, that should be examined. There are in the field of taxation gross injustices which could be labelled as antisocial.

Basic exemptions are not high enough and in relation with the increased cost of living, low income groups pay too much in taxes.

In our economy, several companies are not taxed as they should be. There are many kinds of reserves that big institutions may keep. They withdraw from those reserves, and they are legally allowed to do so. The law guarantees those rights they enjoy. There are many kinds of reserves which should be taxable in part, because they are much too big.

Some citizens pay too much in taxes. As for those who enjoy extraordinary benefits that are granted to them by the house or joint committees such as the one whose establishment is now being considered—in order to give all possible opportunities to large institutions which already enjoy great privileges—they should pay more taxes.

If we have to pay interest on money for high finance by overtaxing, it should be done equitably and all taxpayers should be on the same footing. The same income tax return should apply to everybody. That would only be fair, Mr. Speaker.

If that committee intends to study the problem in that light, we are for its establishment. We do not object to sitting between sessions; we are ready to devote the necessary time to study that serious matter of taxation. Moreover, we should consider the other existing problems. It is well to tax citizens but they should be able to receive some income.

A great many people do not earn enough to live on. We must look into this problem in an attempt to find some solutions so that everybody may get an adequate income, because it would be pointless to set up further taxes only to pay interest to financiers. Let us bring down interest rates, let us cut taxes, so that the taxpayers may breath a little, may live.

Mr. Speaker, if the Carter report which cost $3.5 million is not to be studied by that committee, we will object to its being established.

[Mr. Latulippe.]

However, if that committee is set up to study the report and implement all its recommendations, we are favourable, that is that we will not only promote the setting up of the committee but will also be prepared to sit on it.

We expect only one thing: some improvement in our tax system and a little more justice for the taxpayers.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Is the house ready for the question?

Mr. Gray: A point of order was raised by the hon. member for Edmonton West (Mr. Lambert). I thought it was a useful point and on moving the motion I undertook to check it with the officers at the table. I believe I should deal with this now because once Your Honour hears it stated, I think Your Honour will agree it should be disposed of now.

The hon. member for Edmonton West pointed out that while the motion would authorize the committee to sit during sittings and the adjournment of the house, it did not deal with the question as to what it could do in any hiatus between the prorogation of a session and the beginning of a new session, and also with respect to the effects of prorogation on the existence of the committee itself.

I am advised that it is correct that the Standing Orders of the house do provide that the membership of the standing committees and the joint committees mentioned therein would be continued from session to session in a parliament. I am referring to Standing Order 65(4)(a), but that in any case any order of reference to such committee will expire on prorogation. In so far as a motion to set up a special joint committee of the House of Commons and Senate contains within it an order of reference, which I think in effect is the case here, this aspect of the motion at least would of necessity expire on prorogation.

I wish to suggest to the house that at the very least we can deal with the matter of continuing the membership of the joint committee by adding to the motion the wording on this point which is found in Standing Order 65(4)(a). We could add the wording that the membership of this joint committee "shall continue from session to session within a parliament." This is exactly the same wording—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I thank the hon. member for the argument he has submitted to the house. I suspect what he is now proposing to do to the motion is a nullity. My view of the matter is that the point of order raised by the hon. member for Edmonton West (Mr. Lambert) is interesting, but it is only theoretical at this moment.

The Chair does not rule by anticipation. It may be that the work of the committee will be terminated before the work of the current session. There is no indication how long the current session is going to last, either now or next year. Certainly the Chair cannot be asked to decide now what would happen if this committee did not terminate its work before the end of the current session, whenever that comes.

I think the suggestion made by the hon. member is not too helpful, although I do not think I should even rule on this. It is his motion and it is up to him to make the amendment if he wants the motion amended. If the hon. parliamentary secretary wishes to amend the motion in the way he suggests, it is up to him to do it, but I am rather suspicious he may not achieve the aim he thinks he will by making that motion.

Is the house ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the house to adopt the said motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: On division.

Motion (Mr. Gray) agreed to.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

PROCEDURE AND ORGANIZATION

MOTION FOR CONCURRENCE IN THIRD REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

The house resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Blair that the third report of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization, presented to the house on Friday, June 20, 1969, be concurred in, and the amendment thereto of Mr. Baldwin (p. 10963).

Mr. Max Saltsman (Waterloo): Mr. Speaker, before one o'clock I had pointed out to the house the united stand of the opposition on this particular measure. I pointed out at that time that there must be a reason when an opposition unites. When people who have actual differences with each other decide to take a common stand against a certain measure, which I might point out is most unusual in this house, there has to be a very obvious reason. It is because we all believe it to be wrong.

We believe the government is being incredibly stubborn and arrogant. For a long time there was a minority government. We thought perhaps the leopard would change its spots somewhat, but it is still the same old leopard.

• (2:50 p.m.)

The Liberals have a majority now and are determined to have everything their own way. They are requesting powers they do not need. The main point I should like to make in my intervention today is that the government do not need 75c. In addition I believe that 75c will come to haunt the government. They will find that by using 75c, although they may think they are protecting themselves, in the long run it will spotlight their own inadequacies, and remove them from a dialogue with this house and with the people of this country. With a dictatorial rule of that type there may be no need for them to understand. I am suggesting that in the long run it will be the government which will be hurt more than the opposition itself by 75c. Parliament will survive but the government will not.

There can be no question that we in the opposition have given a great deal. The opposition has given the government almost everything it has wanted. For a long time now our party has been asking for reform of parliament. We have made our position fairly clear. In many cases we have prodded the government into action. We are glad to see the rules which have been adopted. I know that many members of the Official Opposition have overcome their reluctance to grant the government certain powers. Private members with some reluctance have given up the power they had to push the government in order to get some of the necessary things for their ridings. They gave this up in the interest of making parliament more effective.

We have pointed out that we are prepared to accept 75A and 75B. Why then is 75c necessary? Surely it must be obvious that if we have 75c, 75A and 75B are a mockery. Who will negotiate and what kind of meaningful negotiations can take place when there is a gun held to one's head? This is all 75c is.

I would not think, particularly with the type of attitude displayed by the present house leader, any meaningful negotiations would ever take place, and instead of 75c would be used all along. I remember occasions in this house when governments have taken a very strong position saying that the opposition was not letting legislation go through. Then suddenly the opposition said, "You know, we would not want to be put in this position; let the legislation go through". Then what happened? The government did not have any legislation prepared to bring before the house. The opposition has often been placed in the position of having to call upon the government to bring in legislation.

There have been many instances when legislation has not been ready to be brought before the house, legislation with which the opposition wanted to deal. We in the opposition have said that there are certain problems in this country which must be dealt with, but where is the legislation? It is not here. Instead the government has decided to inflict its stubbornness upon the house.

There would seem to be a special psychology to this parliament which has been sensed by most members who have been here for some time. That psychology depends upon members' reactions to government legislation. When a government brings in a good piece of legislation, or the kind of legislation people want, and which can command the respect of the country, the opposition does not oppose it because the opposition is responsible to the electorate.

Hon. members of the opposition know which legislation must go through, which legislation is important and which legislation should not be opposed. They oppose it in those areas which need to be examined. But the opposition is not foolish. The opposition knows something about what the people of this country need and want, and would not hold up legislation that has significant meaning to the people of the country.

Then there is the matter of the filibustering about which the government speaks so much. One would think the house is continuously occupied in a filibuster and that all we are doing here is filibustering. When we look at the record we find that we have passed an enormous amount of legislation.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Saltsman: Even when we had a minority government legislation was passed. When the government sat for years without a majority it was able to get its significant legislation through the house. It went through because it was good legislation which the people wanted. I can recall a minister of the government virtually asking the opposition to defeat the government. The opposition did not do so because it knew the legislation that was being brought in was good and desirable legislation. The government knew that no responsible opposition would defeat the government when it was bringing in good legislation. The only time a government has to fear an opposition is when its legislation is bad.

I suggest that by the introduction of 75c the government is attempting to protect itself when it brings in bad legislation from having to bear the consequences of that legislation.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Saltsman: There is a thing called feedback. On this side of the house we are as responsive as hon. members over on that side to feedback. I remember an occasion when former Prime Minister Pearson came back mopping his brow because the government had been defeated. He appeared on television and said a number of things to the Canadian people. Within a few days it was obvious to most of us in this house that the Canadian people did not want that government defeated at that time, on that particular issue. The government survived, not because it had the numbers necessary to survive but because the Canadian people wanted it to survive.

There are ways to find out how well a government is doing. All we need do is take a look at the situation in Manitoba to see how the Liberals are doing in Canada as a whole. When by-elections produce members other than of the government party this is a reflection of what goes on in this house. One might think at times that Mr. Speaker does not have control over the events in the house and does not call members to order on questions of irrelevancy. It is interesting, however, to note that as the debates unfold and the longer they progress the more the Chair becomes insistent on relevance. It may be my imagination but it seems to me that very considerable discretion exists with the Chair in this house, and that that discretion is used wisely and well.

A great thing is being made about the fact that the Creditistes put up a long fight on the amendments to the Criminal Code. I might point out that I was in total disagreement with the position taken by the Ralliement des Creditistes at that time. But I want to say one thing; they represented a sizeable block of opinion in this country and whether I agreed with them or not they had a right to be heard in this house.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Saltsman: It would seem from the arrogance exhibited on the other side of the house that members over there would like to see the world created in their own image and that they would like to see this whole house peopled with people of their kind. That is not the way it is going to be. When you look at the membership of the House of Commons you see the people of Canada. Some Canadians are arrogant, and this attitude is reflected in those on the other side of the house. Whether or not one likes the members in this house, they are here because the electorate of the country decided they were to be their representatives. The government has never had any difficulty finding support for even the harshest measures when the House of Commons thought those measures should be passed. I again refer to the flag debate of 1964-65. It was not the government that had the courage to call for closure. This was done by a member of the Conservative party who said: We are killing ourselves. This debate has to end. That sentiment was expressed by other parties.

• (3:00 p.m.)

Hon. members opposite have very short memories if they forget this institution has a way of correcting things that go wrong. Many of us love this institution; we care for it and do not want to see it dragged down. I hope that respect exists in hon. members opposite. Under our system of responsible government the electorate gives the government party all the legal powers of a dictatorship. Let us not be squeamish about that. Under responsible government the party in power has the powers of a dictatorship, albeit temporarily. Some of these powers are necessary. However, they are modified and the people of this country do not become too concerned about the strength of the powers because they know there is in the House of Commons the tradition of not abusing them. Nobody uses all the power he has. The people of Canada also know there is an opposition which has countervailing powers.

We are being asked to enlarge the already dictatorial power of government and diminish the power of the opposition. We are, in effect, being asked to upset a balance that is necessary and which in the long run will not work in the best interests of this institution. Government already controls information in this country. It floods the press gallery with press releases. The government has access to advertising. It brings in a labour code and Canada Pension Plan and claims credit for them, even though the opposition fought hard for these measures. The government takes all the credit for measures such as these and advertisements concerning them carry the pictures of the responsible ministers.

How much more power does the government really need? How much more should it have? Has it made out a case for additional power? I do not think it has. The government claims there have been substantial changes in our committees system. I do not understand how committees can overcome the already enlarged areas of authority the government possesses. As important as rules are, no set of rules can be devised to guarantee co-operation in the house if consent is absent or there is no desire to make things work. I say this with the greatest frankness, Mr. Speaker: Even if the government gets 75c, what will it have? If the opposition decides to take four days to deal with every measure introduced by the government, almost nothing will be done in the house. The government may be successful in having a specific piece of legislation passed, but how much of its program will go through?

In the final analysis it is the mood of parliament that determines how much legislation goes through. Proposed rule 75c creates an unco-operative mood in the house, and in the long run the government will jeopardize its hopes for a successful program. This is a truism; it is true of the home, as well as the factory, and it is true of the relationship between business and labour. There has to be consent, agreement and understanding of each other's role. The government is going back to an autocratic age. I would have thought that with all the talk about participatory democracy the government understood what democracy was, but it does not understand anything about it. Democracy survives, and institutions like this survive, because there is consent and willingness on the part of people to make it work.

It is true that there is a great deal more efficiency when you have an absolute dictatorship. All dictators love that; they do not have to answer to anyone for what they are doing. Democracy may be considered to be an inefficient system; let us face it. But is this a factory? Is it General Motors? Is this the type of institution we have here, or is it the forum of the Canadian people? Do we pretend there are not in the country serious differences of opinion which must be resolved? Do we not recognize that the fights that take place in this chamber are brought about because we reflect the intensity of the feeling that exists in a nation like Canada.

Hon. members on the other side of the chamber say that Great Britain has adopted rules similar to those we are discussing. How ignorant of history can they be? Great Britain is not Canada, and Canada is not Great Britain. We are a country only 100 years old. We are just learning to live together. It is here that the warfare is conducted, because parliament in a way is war. We are concerned with very serious business; this is not a gentlemen's club. We come here with fire in us and fight to resolve the grievances of the people. It is to the glory of English speaking people that they have devised an institution for resolving difficulties without people going around cutting each other's throats. Parliament is a substitution for war and rebellion, and we must recognize it as such.

We must have freedom in this institution to express differences and resolve them. When a government brings in measures such as 75c it is an indication of their impatience and lack of understanding of what goes on in this nation. The government is not interested in resolving problems; it is interested in suppressing the opposition and not bringing controversial issues to the surface. This is a short-sighted approach, because if these issues are not brought to the surface here they will surface somewhere else.

If we consider the British House of Commons, we can more clearly understand the nature of this institution. I sometimes think we should have, as they have in Westminster, two lines running down the chamber the distance of two swords apart. This is to indicate the true nature of the Commons and how we have learned to live with serious differences and resolve them.

• (3:10 p.m.)

I said earlier that there is a psychology to this house and that this house knows when the government measures are good and when they are bad. On occasions when the government is strong, the opposition knows it. When the government is weak and is falling apart, the opposition also knows it. It has been said during the course of Canadian history that it is not the opposition that defeats governments, it is governments that defeat themselves; the opposition merely puts them out of their misery.

I suspect that what the government is trying to do is to head off the inevitable. I ask myself, as has every member who has spoken, why do they want rule 75c? What real difference is 75c going to make to them? After all, they have not used closure at any time because they know what happens when closure is applied. One measure is passed, but what happens to the rest of the legislative program? Why do they really want rule 75c? Obviously they have not needed it all year. They are not even pretending to make a case that they need rule 75c because of what has happened in parliament this year. If you press them hard enough, they say, "we might need it in the future, and therefore we had better be prepared for that future". I suspect that there is fear in their bones, like the fear of an ageing lover afraid of losing the favours of his mistress, the public. This year the government has had a honeymoon because the country wanted their Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) to be given a chance. I suspect they know now that the honeymoon is over; the glamour is gone and the government must live by achievements instead of words or fancy gestures. They can survive only on the basis of a legislative program. So what they are trying to do is to bring in rules that will prevent their demise, and rule 75c is that kind of rule.

This rule is a foolish Maginot line the government is building because it can be outflanked and skirted, as only members of parliament know how to do. Or is the great Liberal party trying to be what it has been in the past, all things to all people? Is it trying to avoid a polarization of opinion in this country, by having members make great Liberal speeches about what we should do about poverty, about this, that and the other, and then having members vote the other way?

Mr. Pepin: I thought you were that kind of people.

Mr. Saltsman: We hear an intervention from the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce (Mr. Pepin). No, it is the Liberal party which is that way and which likes that pattern of Liberalism while they pursue reactionary policies. With measures like rule 75c, under which a debate can be closed, they can put more of their own restless backbenchers into the debate. It will give their backbenchers an opportunity to make flaming, progressive speeches and then, when the vote is taken those members will quietly vote with the government as though they had not heard or read their own words.

This is what the government wants. They want to continue confusing the country as they have in the past. Again, I do not think this will work for them. I do not think anyone is going to be fooled by the kind of measures that they are introducing. In my opinion, we have given a great deal. The opposition has made tremendous concessions to the government because it recognized there had to be changes in procedure. I sincerely ask the government to consider whether or not they need rule 75c because I do not think they need it. In the long run it will prove to be their downfall, just as closure proved their downfall in 1956. They will pretend they are getting things done when, in fact, they will have their eyes closed to public opinion about certain issues.

In some ways we are really helping you. The Opposition is going to survive regardless of what you do, and so will parliament.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I have to remind the hon. member that he should address the Chair at all times, although he may not do so now because his time has expired.

Mr. Walter C. Carter (St. John's West): Mr. Speaker, in rising to take part in this debate on the motion before the house I should like, first of all, to associate myself with other hon. members on this side of the house who have stressed the obvious need for reform, indeed, our party's willingness to support the adoption of many of the measures that would achieve that end. Since the present government took office, they have introduced a new principle into the rules of parliament, that is one of arrogance. They are obviously acting contrary to the age old tradition which has been the foundation of our freedom, namely that parliament must control its own procedure.

The government is asking the opposition to limit its power to oppose. It is asking members of parliament to gag parliament, and I contend that if this motion is allowed to pass, members of this parliament and indeed other parliaments, will be like driven cattle. Parliament will be the tomb and not the defender of Canadian freedom. Hon. members opposite, especially the new members, must know in their own hearts that it is not parliament that is ruining the reputation of this government and of the Liberal party. They must know perfectly well what has happened to their so-called just society and how it is held in contempt by so many Canadians. What is happening to the government and to the Liberal party has nothing to do with the length of debate in parliament or with the imagined abuses which rule 75c is supposed to correct.

The troubles in which the government finds itself all began just after the election. Canadians were affected beyond words by the indescribable mass slaughter and starvation of women and children in Biafra. They were disturbed when they saw almost daily on television pictures of children who were actually starving. The Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) of Canada, with his usual elegance, grace and wit, asked, "Where is Biafra?" Many weeks later, with the same sense of history and perspective, balance and justice, which are so much admired, the Prime Minister compared the situation of those women and children to that of the Nazis at Stalingrad. I would strongly suggest to the house leader, to the Prime Minister and to the government that before they try to ram through rule 75c which would have the effect of shutting up parliament, he should consider the advisability of putting a rein on his own tongue. Is there any wonder that a great many people in this country are disillusioned with the so-called just society?

• (3:20 p.m.)

Some time ago the Prime Minister made a cruel statement which related to a large part of our population. He said, "Why should I sell your wheat?" He said this to those people on the prairies who are gravely concerned about the tight financial squeeze in which they find themselves. This statement by the Prime Minister was not very consoling. I contend that rule 75c is not going to stop that sort of statement in this house. Apparently that statement was a calculated insult. There has been no statement about the problems faced by the oil industry in Canada. The Prime Minister also made a statement to the effect that certain civil servants who are not bilingual will be demoted to running elevators. These are examples of the thoughtless and callous statements the Prime Minister has made in recent weeks.

As a result of such statements the Liberal party and this government have reached a low ebb in popularity. It is obvious they want to ram through rule 75c to enable them to gag the opposition, then they will bring forth legislation which is deserving of debate. I contend this is why they are bringing in 75c. The Prime Minister's statements in recent months have been attacked by the press. Following an invitation to the press some time ago to attend the Prime Ministers' Conference here, our Prime Minister told them to go home and take a bath. These suggestions would hardly endear him to members of parliament or the Canadian people. Such statements should not be made, and they do not become the Prime Minister of this country. Members are aware that these thoughtless, arrogant statements have dealt a serious blow to the reputation of this government. One cannot blame parliament for these statements and I do not think rule 75c will prevent the Prime Minister from making them. I am sure that if hon. members knew that 75c would have this result they would certainly give unanimous approval.

Members opposite know very well that the ramming of 75c down the throats of the opposition will not improve the reputation of the government or the Liberal party. I suggest to backbenchers on the government side that this is not an improvement to our rules. It will not affect them because very few of them speak. They should not forget, however, that in the near future they will be sitting on this side of the house, and that will be a different matter. They will then be objecting to this sort of rule. They will want a chance to say their little bit in opposition to legislation introduced by a new government.

I ask hon. members opposite to give serious consideration to the suggestion that 75c may be important to them, particularly when they sit on this side. Hon. members opposite who are in touch with their constituents know perfectly well that this rule is an unpopular one. It has been condemned by the press and I understand condemned recently by university students. They have circulated a petition throughout universities across Canada concerning this very obnoxious rule.

An hon. Member: Have you checked with your parish priest?

Mr. Carter: The hon. member has made his usual contribution from his seat. I should like to ask him to stand up and make a speech.

Mr. McBride: Would the hon. member permit a question? I should be interested to know how much the opposition had to pay the organizers of the university students to get the campaign going to which he has referred?

Some hon. Members: Shame.

[Mr. Carter.]

Mr. Carter: Mr. Speaker, such a statement is a reflection upon the university communities in Canada and is unworthy of a member of this house. I do not think university students have to be bought or bribed.

An hon. Member: Especially by a so-called Christian.

Mr. Carter: They do not have to be bribed or bought in respect of what they feel is right. The hon. member may be that type of person, but I do not think those who belong to the university community are of the same type. They don't have to be paid to express their opinions in respect of what they believe. I cannot say the same thing about certain members on the other side of the house.

This government and the Prime Minister are obsessed with constitutional theories. Perhaps it is not known in Canada that these constitutional issues have been brought in as red herring, but that is the case. Canadians expected to be given the right to participate in the business of this nation. This promise was made. They desire to take part in finding the solutions to the serious problems which face this country. They were led to believe that they would get action from the government to solve problems of pollution, housing and poverty. So far there has been very little action.

Members on this side of the house in recent weeks have been trying to extract answers from the minister in charge of housing, but it has been like pulling teeth. We have tried to find out when we may expect a statement from this minister regarding the so-called guidelines on urban renewal. This statement was promised some months ago.

Constitutional issues have their place in parliament. There are many more important things in Canada at this time with which we should be concerned. We should not be wasting our time debating rule 75c. There are many more important things we should be discussing, including the wheat situation, the problems in respect of our fisheries, housing, poverty and pollution. Last fall we wasted weeks discussing a similar proposal. We are now wasting time discussing rule 75c when we should be devoting our time and energies to finding solutions to these other serious problems. These problems have been treated with nothing but indifference and contempt by the Prime Minister and his government.

Members on the other side must be aware of our role in NATO and the defence of North America. They must know that we are not going to get a clear statement in respect of our policy as a result of debating rule 75c. Those hon. members opposite who are associated with war veterans and their associations must recognize the sense of frustration these people have as a result of the failure of this government to take concrete and firm action to improve their lot. Members must know how difficult it is to explain the actions of this government. I should not want to be placed in the position of a member opposite in trying to explain the inaction of this government and its indifference toward the serious problems facing this country. I admire some of the members opposite for their gall. I do not know how they manage to sit silent. When they shave in the morning it must be difficult for them to look at themselves when they think of some of the actions and statements, both callous and stupid, of the Prime Minister and other members of his government which they are told to support.

• (3:30 p.m.)

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): The chair is finding it difficult to link NATO, wheat and housing to the proposed Standing Order 75c. I would ask the hon. member to restrict his remarks to the subject before the house.

Mr. Carter: With great respect to your ruling, Mr. Speaker, the matters I have referred to are relevant in that they are subjects we could be discussing now instead of wasting our time discussing rule 75c. The point I am trying to make is that it is not the opposition that has hindered the government from bringing in its legislation. We have been very co-operative, and if legislation is good we approve it. But as opposition members there are certain things we cannot accept.

If the government is not ready with legislation to deal with housing and urban renewal, with additional benefits for veterans, and to deal with other crucial questions, then the government should not blame us for filibustering this debate. We do not delay the government on legislation which, in our opinion, is good legislation.

All hon. members realize the serious economic problems facing Canada today. I could cite the increased bank interest rates and the increased interest rates on mortgages. These are matters to which we should turn our attention, instead of wasting our time and energy discussing this proposed measure. As I have said, the opposition is anxious to co-operate with the government in adopting legislation that it feels is important and good for Canada. We are begging the government to bring in such legislation.

Questions have been asked daily in the house for the last two or three weeks about so-called guidelines in relation to urban renewal, but we have been unable to obtain satisfactory answers. We are only too ready to co-operate with the government on such legislation. Yet we have to discuss this obnoxious rule which will have the effect of gagging parliament.

Let me tell hon. members opposite that it is not the opposition that is ruining their image in Canada. The government came to the house about a year ago with a mandate from the Canadian people. I am sure hon. gentlemen opposite are frustrated by the knowledge that their image has slipped badly since that time. They must not blame us for that; let them blame their own Prime Minister and some of his statements.

Mr. McBride: What about the orders that have come down?

Mr. Carter: The hon. member is quite familiar with the orders that have been passed around.

Mr. Crouse: He certainly knows all about that.

Mr. Forrestall: I can think of no one more qualified to talk about that than the hon. member.

Mr. Carter: The hon. member is rapidly learning the smart alec attitude taken by his leader. Why does the hon. member not rise in his place and make a speech? We would be delighted to hear from him, instead of listening to his smart alec remarks. This sort of thing will not get the government, the Prime Minister, or for that matter the people of Canada anywhere. This matter is too serious for that sort of thing.

As the hon. member for Hillsborough (Mr. Macquarrie) suggested this morning, the government house leader is acting like a bull in a china shop. He lacks the tact to reach agreement with the other house leaders. As a result, we are wasting our time discussing this proposal. I would ask hon. members opposite to bear in mind the fact that it will not be long before they are over on this side of the house—two or three years.

An hon. Member: A Tory dream.

Mr. Carter: This is not a dream. Hon. members opposite may like to think it is but it is not. Hon. members opposite will then realize how unfair they were to bring in Standing Order 75c. I ask them to vote the way they feel they should, instead of acting like trained seals who do what they are told.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. I ask all hon. members of the house to co-operate with the Chair, and I would ask the hon. member to restrict his remarks to the amendment before the house.

Mr. Carter: In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I ask hon. members opposite how they can let this sort of thing happen. They get up in the mornings and shave the same as I, so let them act like men. Let them vote the way they feel they should, in which case I am sure they will vote against this unjust proposal. Let these great orators across the aisle, who sit in their seats making snide remarks, stand up and express their views. And when the time comes to cast their vote, let them vote against this unpopular measure.

Mr. Robert C. Coates (Cumberland-Colchester North): Mr. Speaker, there seems to be a great deal of jealousy among members on the other side of the house. Earlier today one of them asked for the institution of a rotation system for government members so they could have their holidays. These poor unfortunate souls do not like to be here now the heat is on. Let me tell my hon. friends on the other side of the house that when the snows are coming down they will still be here.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Coates: The type of comment made by the house leader yesterday guarantees that they will not even get a Christmas vacation.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Don't be too hard on them. It is at least nice to see them here on a Friday afternoon.

Mr. Coates: As the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) says, it is nice to see them here. It is nice to see them participating in the democratic process, which is what parliament and this debate is all about. We are here to defend democracy.

• (3:40 p.m.)

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Coates: I enjoy debate, and I hope to enjoy many more days like this because, unless this autocratic government bends, it will break. It will founder on the shoals of rule 75c. The people of this country know that the opposition is protecting its rights and their rights; that it is protecting its freedoms and their freedoms, and that it will not permit an autocratic government to take away any of our rights.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Coates: The rules of the House of Commons have been distilled over 900 years. They have been formed in all parliaments as a result of agreements between political parties. Rules have never been imposed on parliaments by governments. They are not government rules. They are rules affecting all members of Parliament, and they apply to all hon. members. That cannot be said of rule 75c. This rule has been introduced for the convenience of the executive. Under the parliamentary system of parliament it is not an acceptable rule. It is a tool of the executive. We have been told over and over again that parliament is not efficient enough. Many people are led to believe that parliament and not the executive runs the nation. The executive may be given responsibility for running the nation, but it has no right to push parliament around and to limit reasonable debate on matters coming before parliament. The government now is saying, "We do not like the rules as they are and want to change them. We want the power to say that in three days a bill is to become law and the House of Commons shall pass that law in that time. Debate is to be limited." Well, Mr. Speaker, the opposition does not go along with that proposition. It will never agree to it.

A great deal of harmony between the parties has been evident during the present session. At Christmas we accepted a new set of rules which were agreed to by members on all sides. In the resulting atmosphere of harmony legislation went through the house with a minimum of debate in most cases. We considered that our opposition was responsible and felt that the government was most fortunate in having its programs considered in an atmosphere of harmony. Then, what happened? We were all told parliament would rise on June 27 and come back in October. People in the country were saying, "Parliament is adopting a businesslike attitude and it is evident the new rules are working." Then, the government house leader and some of his colleagues made the serious mistake of assuming that the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield) could be pushed around. They thought after a couple of days debate on any measure his resistance would buckle. Well, Mr. Speaker, the leader of the Liberal Party and the government house leader have discovered that the Leader of the Opposition is not made of stuff that will buckle when principles are at stake. He will not buckle and permit freedom of speech in this institution to be impaired.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Coates: Because it seemed to the government that not all members of this party held similar views on all pieces of legislation coming before the house, it assumed that our ranks would be divided on this question. They are not. We stand firm behind our leader and members of other opposition parties stand firm behind their leaders. We will fight this legislation to the end, no matter when that end may come.

Although the government is anxious to streamline the rules and to introduce the guillotine, it has not told us why it wants this guillotine.

An hon. Member: The Prime Minister wants it.

Mr. Coates: Let the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau), the house leader and others on the government side tell us why they want these new rules. During the present session there has been no indication that we need new rules, or that we need any but the ones we are now using. Nevertheless, just before we were to rise for the summer the government house leader brought forward for adoption new rules that would give the government virtually unlimited power to do anything it wished within a short time.

Some hon. Members: Shame.

Mr. Coates: The government is anxious to secure this power because it wishes to introduce legislation about which it will not tell the country or this house. That legislation must be most damaging to the public interest. It seems that only after rule 75c has been adopted, and that will only come about if the government forces closure, will we learn what is to happen. Only then will the public learn that all Canadians applying for old age security, a cornerstone in the social justice system of this country, will have to undergo a means test. The people of this country will be told, "If you want to collect the old age security pension, which was yours as of right, you will now have to submit to a means test." Mothers who every month receive in the mail family allowance cheques will be told that henceforth they will have to undergo a means test if they are to continue receiving family allowances. And why do I say this, Mr. Speaker? I say it because the government, as a result of irresponsible spending programs, has backed itself into a corner. It lacks financial flexibility and finds it impossible to undertake those programs it ought to undertake. These programs are necessary if we are to have the just society the leader of the Liberal Party talked so much about during the election campaign and which is further away than ever.

• (3:50 p.m.)

Who in the country today would say the society in which we live is more just than that of June 25, 1968? No one can say that, Mr. Speaker. Any man who on June 25, 1968 felt it was going to be easier to own his own home if the present Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) and his party were elected is today in a position where it is twice as difficult, if not impossible to own a home.

Some hon. Members: Shame!

Mr. Coates: The Prime Minister is finding out from the wheat farmers in the prairies how just they think this society is after he has been one year in office. The fishermen on the east coast are finding out how just this society is after this government has been in office one year. The shipbuilding industry and the shipbuilding workers in this country are finding out how just this society is under the Prime Minister. The veteran, old age pensioner, the blind and disabled, they are all finding out how just this society is.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Coates: This has happened after only one year, Mr. Speaker. Heaven help this poor country if we have to put up with this government for four years, and heaven help us if they have 75c to work with as well. There have been other Liberal governments in other eras that have moved in this chamber for awesome powers, powers that Adolph Hitler did not even expect from the Reichstag in Germany. These are powers which are common in communist countries. If rule 75c passes there really will not be much difference between a country that has only one government for which everybody votes because there is no alternative, and a country with a government that has power to say to the opposition any time it wishes, "You have three days to pass this bill; have a good time because it will be law before the public knows about it, even with the instant communications of today". That is not the kind of parliament the opposition is thinking about and that is not the kind of parliament we are going to have if we can do anything about it. This would not be parliament, Mr. Speaker, it would be an oligarchy taking unto itself every day in every way new powers.

The government told us that with this new efficiency that would come with the new rules and that the new committee system they had set up there would be much more participatory democracy in this country. Well, Mr. Speaker, we have committees. We have a proliferation of committees. We have so many committees we don't know whether we are coming or going. What a wonderful reception those committee reports receive when they are submitted to this chamber! The government does not even wait until these reports get into the house before they introduce their own policies, having no regard for the recommendations contained in those reports. The government manipulates other committees so that they do not even report what transpired in the committee. In other committees, such as in the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization, the government endeavours to usurp completely the role of the chairman and the members of the committee.

This is the committee system we have today. It is as democratic as 75c, and that is all that can be said about it. There must be some steps taken to see that when there is unanimous agreement in a committee the government is forced to take action on the recommendations of the committee. These steps will never be taken by this government because it operates by saying one thing to the public and doing another thing in parliament. It will not be able to perform in that way much longer because the Prime Minister's abortive visit to western Canada I am sure has proven to him that you cannot fool the people by telling them one thing and then doing something else in parliament.

The days of Mackenzie King are gone. He is dead. This is not the same as saying God is dead. Mackenzie King is dead, as well as the philosophy he preached. The same rules must be applied in all parts of this nation. The same kind of social justice must be available in all parts of this nation. There has to be the same kind of approach to democracy. We are not getting that today. If this government ever secured the powers available under 75c, there would never be any hope that the people of Canada would get social justice because then we would have government by Trudeau, and Trudeau alone.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. It being four o'clock, the house will now proceed to the consideration of private business as listed on today's order paper, namely, private bills, notices of motion, public bills.

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): There has been some discussion in the house, Mr. Speaker. I think there might be general agreement to suspend the private members' hour for today, and adjourn the sittings today at four o'clock.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Is it agreed?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale) moved that the house do now adjourn.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Is it the pleasure of the house to adopt the said motion?

Mr. MacLean: Before the motion is put, Mr. Speaker, may I ask the government house leader the business the government proposes to place before parliament next week?

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): Mr. Speaker, the business for Monday will be a continuation of the present debate. As the hon. member knows, all house leaders expect to meet on Monday morning for the purpose of discussing further the business for the balance of the week.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. Once the motion is agreed to, this house stands adjourned until Monday afternoon at two o'clock.

Motion (Mr. Macdonald) agreed to and the house adjourned at 4 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Monday, July 21, 1969

The house met at 2 p.m.

MAN ON THE MOON

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the rules of this chamber properly restrict statements to matters or events which the government deems it necessary to make known to the house. The events which occurred during the past 24 hours are known by all hon. members and will gain little from repetition now. They are, nonetheless, of such an incredible nature, and illustrate so vividly the accomplishments of man in the fields of science and technology, that it is fitting for us to pause with all humanity to reflect on the magnificent accomplishment of this "giant leap".

[Translation]

Since the dawn of history men have turned their eyes heavenward to gaze at the mysterious moon. Through the courage of three men and the talents of many thousands of others, that heavenly body has suddenly given up its mysteries and has come within the grasp of earth. The adventure which we observed last night is surely one of the greatest achievements of all time.

[English]

On behalf of the government and the people of Canada, may I in this place congratulate the three astronauts and the people of the United States for this deed. We all wish the astronauts Godspeed and a safe return to earth.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I would like personally and on behalf of my colleagues to associate ourselves with the congratulations extended by the Prime Minister to the astronauts, their families, and the United States of America. We join him in wishing the astronauts a safe return. It was a tremendous achievement. The science, engineering and technology behind the achievement are almost beyond the comprehension of a person such as myself, as is the degree of precision achieved and, of course, the courage of the men involved.

It was a great day for mankind, but it did provoke some sober thoughts in those of us who watched the achievement. It reminded us that the same man who is capable of reaching the moon in this way daily involves himself in practising inhumanity on other men. I hope, as I am sure everybody does, that the sublime achievement of the men responsible for the landing on the moon will remind us that while we are frequently as men rather petty, thoughtless and selfish and sometimes rather vicious, mankind is capable of this kind of achievement. We hope this example will serve not only to mark a great step forward scientifically but to remind mankind generally of what man is really capable of achieving.

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, the members of this party would like to associate themselves with the Prime Minister and the Leader of the Opposition in paying tribute to the astronauts who yesterday accomplished a feat which staggers the imagination. This may well open a new chapter in the history of man's long development as he reaches out beyond his own planet to other planets and the stars. Even while we speak the two astronauts who landed on the moon are involved in one of the most dangerous manoeuvres of the exercise. I am sure all of us are hopeful that they will be successful and will shortly be returning to earth to receive the plaudits of an admiring world.

While we are praising the astronauts, I am sure all of us will keep in mind the thousands of men and women whose research and tireless work made this flawless performance possible. It now only remains for those of us who are still chained to earth to do everything we can to see that man's social and moral development keeps pace with his technological advancement.

[Translation]

Mr. Bernard Dumont (Frontenac): Mr. Speaker, we wish to join with the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) in congratulating the people of the United States for such a great achievement.

I also wish to take this opportunity to congratulate the Prime Minister for sending to the moon a message from Canada, both in French and English. We are sure that the voice of French Canadians has been heard the world over.

We also express the hope, as the Prime Minister did, that if we are capable of such a feat in 1969, all men of good will should co-operate in the future to feed mankind.

[English]

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

HOUSE OF COMMONS

SALARY INCREASE FOR MEMBERS OF STAFF

Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to lay upon the table of the house an extract from the minutes of a meeting of the Commissioners of Internal Economy held Friday, July 18, 1969, concerning revision of the salaries of employees of the House of Commons.

FINANCE, TRADE AND ECONOMIC AFFAIRS

CONCURRENCE IN TWENTY-FIFTH REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Mr. Gaston Clermont (Gatineau) moved that the twenty-fifth report of the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs, presented to the house on Friday, June 27, be concurred in.

Motion agreed to.

SYNTHETIC DETERGENTS MARKETING

PROVISION TO MAKE PRODUCTS BIO-DEGRADABLE

Mr. David Anderson (Esquimalt-Saanich) moved for leave to introduce Bill C-213, respecting the marketing of synthetic detergents.

Some hon. Members: Explain.

Mr. Anderson: Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this bill is to make sure that all detergents marketed in Canada are bio-degradable. At present most are, but some products are imported and marketed here which are not. The bio-degradable constituent assists in preventing pollution after a detergent has been used.

Motion agreed to, bill read the first time and ordered to be printed.

[Mr. Dumont.]

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND CAUSEWAY STUDIES

Question No. 1,832—Mr. McCleave:

1. Has the Stanford Research Institute report on the cost benefit evaluation of a Prince Edward Island causeway been reviewed by an independent economic authority and, if so, by whom and with what conclusion?

2. (a) Have any studies been carried out to indicate what subventions would be required if a corporation were formed to build, finance and operate the crossing (b) on what assumptions were these studies made and what did they indicate (c) what are the economic advantages or disadvantages of an immediate start on a crossing?

3. Have comparisons been made of the annual costs of a fixed crossing and of a ferry system projected over 50 years and, if so, with what results and conclusions?

4. What effect on the economic improvement plan recently agreed to between the governments of Canada and Prince Edward Island is anticipated if construction of a fixed crossing is begun (a) at once or (b) if delayed indefinitely?

Mr. Yves Forest (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Department of Transport and the Department of Regional Economic Expansion as follows: 1. Yes, by C. B. Haver of Montreal for Northumberland Consultants Limited. The report however was prepared for internal use and as such the contents are confidential.

2. No.

3. Yes, an internal government study showed the discounted cost of a fixed crossing to be substantially more than the discounted cost of a ferry system over this period.

4. (a) The plan would require major revision; (b) No effect.

CARRAGEEN—EXTRACTION FROM IRISH MOSS

Question No. 2,188—Mr. Macquarrie:

1. What consideration is being given to the suggestion of the honourable Member for Cardigan (Mr. McQuaid, Hansard 1968, p. 3616) that a plant for the extraction of carrageen from Irish moss be built in the Maritimes?

2. If the matter is under consideration, what departments of government are involved in studying the feasibility of such a suggestion?

3. What amount of Irish moss was exported to (a) Denmark (b) the United States in the years 1965, 1966, 1967, 1968?

4. What was the cash value of part (3) above?

5. What is the value of the carrageen imported into Canada from the countries mentioned in part (3) above?

6 What is the estimated cost of constructing a carrageen extracting plant in the Maritimes?

7. Have representations been received from the Government of Prince Edward Island or any other groups or organizations advocating the establishment of such a plant or plants?

Mr. Yves Forest (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): 1. The Department of Fisheries and Forestry has been following developments and it is its understanding that private interests are studying the feasibility of locating extraction plant facilities in the Maritimes region.

2. The Department of Fisheries and Forestry is involved in this matter however other departments are involved in other aspects of this industry.

3 and 4. The quantity and value of exports of Irish moss to (a) Denmark (b) the United States in the years 1965, 1966, 1967, 1968 are as follows:

	Denmark		United States
Year	Quantity cwt.	Value $'000	Quantity cwt.	Value $'000
1965	30,633	289	62,445	681
1966	69,032	634	72,515	793
1967	45,603	602	90,665	1,270
1968	69,074	979	113,838	1,619

5. Imports of carrageen are recorded in DBS commodity class 219-99—"crude vegetable materials inedible n.e.s. (not elsewhere specified)" and no separate statistics are available on this commodity.

6. One million and upwards.

7. Yes.

INDIAN AFFAIRS—CONSIDERATION OF GOVERNMENTAL RESPONSIBILITY

Question No. 2,399—Mr. Robinson:

Does the federal government intend to meet with the provinces to consider the respective governmental responsibility for Indian Affairs in the fields of (a) education (b) employment (c) use of lands as farming, mineral resources and power resources?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Yes.

BILINGUALISM PROGRAM—INDIANS AND ESKIMOS

Question No. 2,408—Mr. Robinson:

Does the federal government intend to embark on a program of bilingualism with the native populations of Indians and Eskimos in Canada and, if so, will both French and/or English be offered?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Indian and Eskimo children across Canada whether enrolled in a provincial or federal school follow the provincial or territorial curriculum of the province or territory in which they attend school. Therefore, programs of bilingualism developed in provincial/territorial departments of education will be made available to Indian and Eskimo children. The federal government does not intend to embark upon a separate or distinct bilingual program for the Indian and Eskimo population of Canada.

SALES TAX ON PHARMACEUTICALS AND DRUGS—EFFECT OF REMOVAL

Question No. 2,494—Mr. Saltsman:

1. What was the sales tax on pharmaceuticals and drugs before its removal by the federal government?

2. When was the sales tax on pharmaceuticals and drugs removed?

3. At the time of removal of the sales tax, what was the prescription index of the consumer price index for Canada and the major cities of Canada according to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics?

4. Three months after the removal of the sales tax, what was the prescription index of the consumer price index for Canada and the major cities of Canada, according to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics?

5. What specific machinery was established to ensure that the removal of the sales tax on pharmaceuticals and drugs was passed on to the consumer as stated by the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs in Hansard of June 5, 1969?

Mr. Yves Forest (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Department of National Revenue, the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce and the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs as follows:

1. 12 per cent on the manufacturer's sale price.

2. September 1, 1967.

3. and 4.

Pharmaceuticals Component of the Consumer Price Indexes for Canada and Cities

	Aug.	1967 Sept.	Oct.	Nov.	Percentage Changes Aug. to Nov. 1967
		Index 1957 = 100
CANADA	103.1	99.6	97.8	97.7	— 5.24
St. John's, Nfld.	108.2	105.2	104.4	104.0	— 3.88
Halifax	100.8	96.6	96.4	96.0	— 4.76
Saint John	100.7	95.8	95.5	95.1	— 5.56
Montreal	100.5	96.1	95.0	94.9	— 5.57
Ottawa	101.8	94.9	94.7	94.0	— 7.66
Toronto	104.2	102.0	99.1	99.5	— 4.51
Winnipeg	102.2	98.4	98.0	98.8	— 3.33
Saskatoon	121.7	114.6	115.0	114.9	— 5.59
Regina	116.7	113.5	110.8	110.6	— 5.23
Calgary	105.6	104.1	101.5	101.3	— 4.07
Edmonton	116.8	113.5	112.6	111.8	— 4.28
Vancouver	101.5	99.3	96.5	98.3	— 3.15

5. Following the removal of the sales tax on drugs, the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs examined the price structure of the drug manufacturers to ascertain their price reaction to the removal of the sales tax. Notwithstanding that this study involved a single industry which uses published price lists and was confined to the manufacturing level only, it took several months to complete.

For this purpose, the department obtained from virtually all the manufacturers supplying a significant quantity of drugs to the Canadian market, copies of their price lists in effect before the removal of the sales tax and of those issued after the removal of the sales tax.

Arrangements were also made for the Department to be supplied with copies of price lists or notifications of price changes subsequently issued.

SOUTH REGINA—ESTABLISHMENT OF SUB-POSTAL STATION

Question No. 2,505—Mr. Benjamin:

1. Is it the intention of the Department of Communications to establish a sub-postal station in South Regina?

[Mr. Forest.]

2. If so, is it the intention of the Department to construct or to purchase property for a sub-postal station in South Regina?

3. If so, what is the planned location and when will the facility go into operation?

Mr. Yves Forest (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Post Office Department and the Department of Public Works as follows:

1. Yes.

2. This is still undecided.

3. The proposed location is in the vicinity of Parliament Avenue and Gordon Road. It is planned that the postal station will be placed in operation in the fiscal year 1970-1971.

PUBLIC RELATIONS, CONSUMER AND CORPORATE AFFAIRS

Question No. 2,571—Mr. Robinson:

1. Does the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs have a public relations staff and, if so how many?

2. What was the total cost of public relations for the Department for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive?

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): 1 and 2. See reply to Question No. 2,578.

CONSUMER AND CORPORATE AFFAIRS—INFORMATION SERVICE

Question No. 2,578—Mr. Robinson:

1. Does the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs provide an information service and, if so, what was the cost for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive?

2. How many publications and/or periodicals and/or information sheets and/or public releases were provided by the Department for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive, and what was the cost for each publication for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive?

3. How many copies of each publication are provided and to whom are they distributed and how is the distribution effected?

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): 1. Yes, the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs has a general information service administered by the Information and Public Relations Branch, and a specialized consumer information service administered by the Consumer Service and Information Branch. Cost: 1960 to 1966, N/A; 1967 to 1968, $8,448; 1968 to 1969, $148,409. Staff: The information and Public Relations Branch is composed of seven persons including one Director, one Press Relations Officer, one Editor, one secretary and three clerks. The information Division of the Consumer Service and Information Branch is composed of four persons: an information officer, a program administrator, and two secretaries.

2. 1967-1968: One pamphlet informing the public about the Department, at a cost of $4,300; five information sheets explaining the various functions of the Department, at a cost of $200 each; seven press releases at a cost of $385 each.

1968-1969: Issued by the Consumer Service and Information Branch: Two Consumer Communiques ("Box 99—A Consumer Listening Post" and "Carpet with Care") at a cost of $1,095 and $1,500 respectively; two information bulletins (releases on reports of the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission) at a cost of $496 and $416 respectively; two press releases at a cost of $20 and $60 respectively.

1968-1969: Issued by the Information and Public Relations Branch of the Department: Six information sheets at a cost of $315 each; 25 press releases at a cost of approximately $465 each. The press releases consist of speeches by the minister and officials of the Department and announcements of appointments and conferences, etc.

3. Numbers of copies of each publication: pamphlets, approximately 50,000; consumer communiqués, approximately 21,000; information bulletins, approximately 10,000; information sheets, approximately 1,200; press releases, approximately 2,350.

Copies of publications issued by the Consumer Service and Information Branch of the Department are distributed by mail or hand to Members of Parliament, Senators, the news media and the general public according to branch subscription list.

Copies of publications issued by the Information and Public Relations Branch of the Department are distributed in the same manner to Members of Parliament, Senators, news media, companies, trade unions, universities and the general public, including those who write for information.

MACKENZIE RIVER—CONSIDERATION OF CONSTRUCTION OF BRIDGE AT FORT PROVIDENCE

Question No. 2,580—Mr. Mather:

Is consideration being given to the construction of a bridge across the Mackenzie River at Fort Providence to ease the reported problem of transporting freight by ferry and the increased costs entailed in food prices?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Yes.

HOUSING CONSTRUCTION—INDIAN RESERVES

Question No. 2,594—Mr. Dinsdale:

1. How many houses have been built under the new five-year housing program for Indians initiated in 1966 for each year since the inauguration of the program?

2. What has been the rate of family formations among Indians each year during this same period?

3 What programs are available or contemplated to take care of the urgent backlog need for houses?

4. How many houses have been built under these other programs each year since 1966 (a) on reserves (b) in cities (c) in rural areas off the reserves?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): 1. 1965-66, 1,302; 1966-67, 1,769; 1967-68, 2,005; 1968-69, 1,794.

2. 1965-66, 1966-67, 1967-68, 1968-69: approximately 1,250 per year.

3. Indian housing program, on reserves; Indian housing program, off reserves.

Questions

4. (a) 1965-66, 1,302; 1966-67, 1,769; 1967-68, 2,005; 1968-69, 1,794. Includes houses built on Indian reserves and established Indian communities. *(b) and (c) 1965-66, Nil; 1966-67, Nil; 1967-68, 96; 1968-69, 129.

* No separate record kept of houses built or purchased in cities or rural areas off the reserve.

 Figures include construction of new houses and purchase of existing houses.

CHAMPLAIN BRIDGE—DEBT OUTSTANDING

Question No. 2,597—Mr. Beaudoin:

1. How much of the original debt on the Champlain Bridge is still outstanding?

2. What is the cost of servicing the debt?

3. What is the annual amortization?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): The National Harbours Board advises as follows: 1. The original debt on Champlain Bridge as at December 31, 1968, was $52,176,876.

2. Provision for interest on loans and advances in 1968 was $2,804,640.

3. Annual amortization, nil.

HEALTH AND WELFARE—CONTRIBUTIONS TOWARD HEMOPHILIA RESEARCH

Question No. 2,602—Mr. McCleave:

Does the Department of National Health and Welfare make any contributions or grants toward hemophilia research and, if so, in what amount and to whom?

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of National Health and Welfare): The Department of National Health and Welfare does not make contributions or grants toward hemophilia research. However in response to applications in 1968-69, the Medical Research Council made grants totalling $59,700 in relation to research into the cause and cure of hemophilia.

CANADIAN PENITENTIARY SERVICE—REQUEST TO UNDERTAKE REHABILITATION PROGRAM

Question No. 2,604—Mrs. MacInnis:

1. Has Dr. Bruno Cormier of the Forensic Psychiatry Clinic, McGill University requested the Commissioner of the Canadian Penitentiary Service to permit him to undertake a rehabilitation program in one of the federal prisons across Canada?

[Mr. Chrétien.]

2. Was his request refused and, if so, for what reasons?

3. Is his request still under consideration?

Hon. G. J. McIlraith (Solicitor General): 1. No.

2. Not applicable.

3. Informal discussions have been held between Dr. Cormier and officials of the Department of the Solicitor General on the subject of Dr. Cormier undertaking a rehabilitation program in one of the federal prisons. These discussions are continuing.

FEASIBILITY STUDY OF ESTABLISHMENT OF WORLD UNIVERSITY

Question No. 2,607—Mr. Thompson:

1. Have steps been taken by the government toward undertaking a feasibility study of the idea of establishing a world university?

2. Have there been any proposals made to the Canadian Government for the establishment of such a world university in Canada?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): In so far as the Department of External Affairs is concerned: 1. No. It has been, and remains the view that proposals for the establishment of a world university in Canada, or proposals for a feasibility study of such a project, should be at the initiative of the provincial and municipal authorities concerned rather than with the Federal Government.

2. Yes. These have come from private persons and organizations such as the Canadian World University Committee and the Canadian Home and School and Parent-Teacher Federation.

LEONARD BORG—ELIGIBILITY FOR PAROLE

Question No. 2,642—Mr. Schumacher:

Were any instructions given to the National Parole Board concerning the eligibility for parole of Leonard Borg when his death sentence was commuted?

Hon. G. J. McIlraith (Solicitor General): No.

SEAT BELTS IN COMMERCIAL VEHICLES

Question No. 2,644—Mr. Mather:

Is consideration being given to promoting federal-provincial action to require the equipping of trucks, truck-tractors and inter-city buses with seat belt assemblies and to make mandatory the use of such equipment?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): 1. In so far as new vehicles made in Canada or imported into Canada are concerned, consideration is being given to including all vehicles mentioned in the proposed Legislation regarding motor vehicle safety standards. Vehicles already in use come under provincial jurisdiction as does the mandatory use of safety equipment.

EARL ALEXANDER—FLAG TRIBUTE

Question No. 2,645—Mr. Dinsdale:

1. Did the Secretary of State issue instructions that the usual tribute of flags at half-staff should be paid Earl Alexander as a former Governor General and member of the Privy Council and, if so, on what date were the instructions issued?

3. Was this order cancelled and, if so (a) on what date (b) for what reason?

Mr. J. E. Walker (Parliamentary Secretary to Prime Minister): 1. Yes, on June 16th, in accordance with the "General Rules for Flying and Displaying the Canadian Flag and Other Flags in Canada," which provide that "the Flag on the Peace Tower of the Parliament Buildings, Ottawa, is flown at half-mast on the death of the Sovereign or a member of the Royal Family related in the first degree to the Sovereign (that is to say, husband or wife, son or daughter, father, mother or brother or sister), the Governor General, a former Governor General, a Lieutenant Governor, a Canadian Privy Councillor, a Senator, or a Member of the House of Commons."

The flag on the Peace Tower was half-masted following news of the death of Lord Alexander on June 16, 1969, and on June 17, 18, 19 and 20, the remaining working days of that week. Although not provided for in the General Rules, there was mounted in addition a special display of half-masted flags at the National War Memorial in recognition of Lord Alexander's wartime role as a commander of Canadian forces. These flags flew at half-mast from June 17 through June 20.

Flags at Canadian government establishments in England were flown at half-mast from June 16 and including June 24, the day of Lord Alexander's funeral.

Other tributes and marks of respect paid to the late Lord Alexander by the Canadian government on his death included: (a) Telegrams of condolence sent to Lord Alexander's family by His Excellency the Governor General and by the Right Honourable the Prime Minister; (b) A statement of tribute by the Prime Minister in the House of Commons on June 16, the first sitting day after news was received of Lord Alexander's death, followed at his request by a minute of silence on the part of the House of Commons; (c) The opening of a memorial book at Rideau Hall; (d) Presentation of a special memorial carillon recital in the Peace Tower on Wednesday, June 18; (e) Attendance at Lord Alexander's funeral of the Right Honourable Lester B. Pearson as personal representative of the Prime Minister, the Canadian High Comissioner to the United Kingdom, Mr. Charles Ritchie, and the Chief of the Defence Staff, General J. V. Allard, representing the Canadian government and Canadian veterans who served under Lord Alexander; (f) Participation in the funeral cortege of a special R.C.M.P. guard of honour.

2. The initial instruction that the flag be flown at half-mast "on other federal government buildings, airports and military bases and establishments" throughout Canada on the day of the funeral, as permitted but not required by the aforesaid General Rules in the event of the death of a former Governor General not related in the first degree to the Sovereign and not resident in Canada was cancelled on June 19 when it became known that Lord Alexander's funeral would not be held until June 24, eight days following his death and on the day recognized by Parliament as a holiday in the Parliament of Canada and by statute in the Province of Quebec. It is the practice, as the General Flag Rules state, that, during periods of half-masting, the flag is raised to full mast on statutory holidays. It was considered inappropriate that, in showing this mark of respect for one so highly regarded by all Canadians, divergent practices should be observed in various parts of the country.

QUESTION PASSED AS ORDER FOR RETURN

PUBLIC SERVICE—APPLICATION OF BILINGUAL BONUS

Question No. 2,176—Mr. Corbin:

Of the 1,951 employees of the Public Service of Canada who are presently entitled to the special bonus made available to bilingual employees, as mentioned in the answer to Question No. 1,309, how many have, as their first language or mother tongue (a) English (b) French (c) another language?

Return tabled.

Wheat Export Prices

Mr. Burton: Mr. Speaker, before we pass on to the next item of business I wonder whether the President of the Privy Council would inquire about question 2247, asked on May 8, and 2349, asked on May 23. It should not require much research to obtain the information to answer question 2247. It would also be most helpful if we could have the answer to question 2349 before the house rises for the summer.

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): I will endeavour to do so, Mr. Speaker.

MOTION TO ADJOURN UNDER S.O. 26

TRADE

WHEAT—REDUCTION IN U.S. EXPORT PRICES—THREAT TO CANADIAN ECONOMY

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, I ask leave, seconded by the hon. member for Regina East (Mr. Burton), to move the adjournment of the house under Standing Order 26 for the purpose of discussing a specific and important matter requiring urgent consideration, namely, the new threat to the Canadian wheat economy arising from the announcement by the United States government that it has lowered its export price of wheat by 12 cents a bushel, which will further erode the financial position of the Canadian wheat farmer.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands has given the Chair notice of his motion, as required by Standing Order 26. As hon. members know, a number of similar motions have been proposed during the last week or ten days. On each occasion it has meant that the Chair has had to make a difficult decision. I ruled before that there had been a debate which in some ways was related closely to the subject matter of the motions then presented by other hon. members. I have had the same doubts about the motion the hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands has just proposed. At the same time, the motion refers to a very important new factor and I feel that perhaps it would be the desire of the house that we set aside a few hours of debating time for the purpose of considering the very important matter referred to in the motion of the hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands.

[Mr. Corbin.]

Having taken all factors into consideration, I feel it is my duty to allow the hon. member's motion so that a debate can take place after eight o'clock this evening provided, of course, that the hon. member has leave of the house to propose his motion. Is that agreed?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: If 20 hon. members rise, the motion is opposed and will not be put. If 20 or more hon. members rise in opposition to the proposed motion, that is the right of hon. members.

Mr. Muir (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): What do you boys over there say to that?

Mr. Speaker: If hon. members will look at Standing Order 26(8) they will see, I believe, that 20 or more members may rise to indicate that a debate shall not take place. I have to leave it to hon. members to decide whether 20 or more wish to rise in opposition.

• (2:20 p.m.)

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, with great respect, is it not the other way round?

Mr. Speaker: I was going to read the Standing Order. It is 20 members supporting the motion who have to rise. This would be the condition determining if there is opposition. Are 20 members rising on this point?

And more than 20 members having risen:

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): Mr. Speaker, I wonder whether I could make a suggestion? It would be quite agreeable on this side, if hon. members would like to start earlier, to start perhaps at four o'clock rather than at eight, o'clock this evening.

Mr. Speaker: If there is agreement. Hon. members know what the terms of the Standing Order are. Under Standing Order 26(9) leave would be deemed to be granted and the motion would be proposed for consideration at eight o'clock this evening. If there is unanimous agreement the hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands could be allowed to proceed immediately.

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: Is it the wish of hon. members?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): So far as this party is concerned, we would be prepared to start at four o'clock, as suggested by the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald), or as soon as orders of the day are called.

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): Perhaps it would be most workman-like to start as soon ar orders of the day are called.

Mr. Speaker: Is that the wish of hon. members?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: Is it agreed unanimously that we will proceed with the motion of the hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands under Standing Order 26 immediately after orders of the day are called? Is this agreed?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

TRADE

WHEAT—EFFECT OF REDUCTION IN U.S. EXPORT PRICES

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I would like first of all to welcome the Prime Minister back to the friendly atmosphere of the House of Commons. While I do not wish to trespass upon the subject matter of the debate, I wonder whether it would be in order to ask the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce if he has had an opportunity to consult with the Wheat Board and whether he can state briefly to the house what effects the price cuts by the United States may have upon the outlook for this country?

Mr. Speaker: I have some doubts as to the question now being asked by the Leader of the Opposition. We have just agreed there will be a debate in 40 minutes' time. It seems to me that perhaps that would be the time to get answers to questions which normally might be asked during the question period.

Mr. Stanfield: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, I thought it might help the debate somewhat if the minister were to make a brief statement.

GRAIN

INQUIRY AS TO INCOME PROTECTION PROGRAM FOR CEREAL PRODUCERS

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the right hon. Prime Minister. In a speech which the right hon. gentleman made in the city of Winnipeg last year on June 2, he said:

> —the government will immediately involve all interested parties in the development of a self-sustaining program of income protection for western cereal producers.

Later in his statement he said this would be done early in 1969. Has the government yet evolved this program for income protection, and is the Prime Minister prepared to announce what it is either now or in the course of the debate which will be held later today?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, as will be apparent in the debate later, there are certain forms of income protection which have already been implemented by the government. I think it would be well if we waited until the debate began to go into this question.

UNECONOMIC FARM UNITS—POSSIBILITY OF PURCHASE

Mr. S. J. Korchinski (Mackenzie): Mr. Speaker, I should like to address a question to the Prime Minister. In view of the fact the Prime Minister has apparently been reported as having stated that some uneconomic farm units might be purchased, will the Prime Minister say whether this would apply to western Canada inasmuch as the Secretary of State for External Affairs has apparently said it would only apply to eastern Canada?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. With respect, I must suggest to hon. members that perhaps they should not have their cake and eat it too. Hon. members agreed a moment ago that there should be a debate on this subject. Therefore they will have the whole day in which to make suggestions and ask the questions they are seeking to ask now. I think it would be appropriate to wait until we reach the debate later on to ask these questions. It is a basic rule applicable to the question period that questions should not be asked about matters which are to be discussed immediately. Such questions normally have been ruled out of order. I realize that questions must be asked about certain matters and I do not wish to appear to be unduly restrictive. However, not much would be gained by making an exception to the rule and then proceeding to the debate immediately thereafter.

Hon. members know that on occasions when there has been protracted questioning on a particular subject during the question period I felt there was no need to have an adjournment debate on the same subject later under Standing Order 26. I would think it should be one thing or the other. I believe it would be the part of wisdom not to insist on these questions unduly at this time.

Mr. Hees: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, may I then ask whether it is the intention of the Prime Minister to remain in the house during the debate to answer questions on this matter which is of such great importance to the country?

Mr. Baldwin: I too rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. Accepting the basic principle of your ruling, of course, as I would in any event, I ask whether Your Honour would not agree that there might be a selective application of the rule so that questions might be asked which are genuinely for the purpose of obtaining information that would be useful during the course of the debate? This might in fact save considerable time in the debate and might permit a more useful contribution by members who have very legitimately raised this issue. I ask Your Honour to give consideration to that proposition.

Mr. Speaker: I have, of course, given this point consideration and I recognize it is in many ways a valid point. It is just that in the past we have followed the practice that when a debate is set down for the evening or the next day we have waited until that order is reached to make suggestions and seek information. It is only the application of this rule that I have taken the liberty of bringing to the attention of hon. members. I would hope we might try to follow this rule.

Mr. Hees: Mr. Speaker, following my point of order, through you I would respectfully seek an answer from the Prime Minister concerning whether or not he intends to remain in the house today, take part in the debate and answer these questions at that time?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York South.

Mr. Hees: Does he or does he not?

Mr. Trudeau: No.

Mr. Hees: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, obviously the Prime Minister did not mean a thing he said in the west last week and does not give a damn about this whole problem.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for York South.

[Mr. Speaker.]

LABOUR RELATIONS

QUEBEC-LABRADOR IRON ORE INDUSTRY—APPOINTMENT OF MEDIATOR

Mr. David Lewis (York South): Mr. Speaker, may I go to labour—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Lewis: I really cannot conceive what hon. members are laughing about. Has the Minister of Labour received a telegram from the union negotiators, who have recently been negotiating with the Iron Ore Company of Canada and the Quebec North Shore and Labrador Railway in an effort to settle the strike which has been in effect for quite a number of weeks and in respect of which negotiations have broken down, requesting the appointment of a mediator to help settle the dispute? If so, what was his reply?

Hon. Bryce Mackasey (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, shortly before noon I did receive a telegram signed jointly by representatives of the United Steel Workers and the Machinists asking if we would provide joint mediation with Quebec. Subsequently we have contacted the Department of Labour of the province of Quebec to see whether they would agree to joint mediation. I shall be in a position to report more fully on Wednesday.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, have the union negotiators and the companies been informed of the minister's decision to pursue the course he has just indicated?

Mr. Mackasey: Mr. Speaker, instructions to the labour department have already gone out to inform both parties of this decision, and I presume that by now—or certainly later this afternoon—management and labour will be informed that the province of Quebec and the Dominion of Canada have jointly provided a mediation team in order to bring this very prolonged strike to an end.

OIL

INQUIRY AS TO SECRET AGREEMENT BETWEEN CANADA AND UNITED STATES

Mr. Eldon M. Woolliams (Calgary North): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister on a different subject, and may I say that we were rather sorry he did not visit the city of Calgary. In view of the economic anxieties in western Canada on the part of the agricultural and other industries, can the Prime Minister advise the house whether there is a secret agreement now between Canada and the United States in respect of petroleum, and is the government prepared to make a definite statement in respect of any agreement now in existence between the two governments?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that this question has been asked a few times and that the answer has been given by other ministers. There is no secret agreement. The present agreement between the United States and Canada has been in existence for some years. There is no secret agreement which has been added to that.

Mr. Woolliams: I take it the Prime Minister means the agreement that was secret in 1967 is the one that is still in existence. Did he have a discussion with the Premier of Alberta in relation to the petroleum industry and exports, and did he have discussions with any officials of the petroleum industry?

Mr. Trudeau: Mr. Speaker, I did meet with the Premier of Alberta and his officials. I travelled with those officials and with people associated with the petroleum industry. Of course we discussed various aspects of this industry.

Mr. Woolliams: When the Prime Minister had discussions with the Premier of Alberta on aspects of the petroleum industry, did he have any discussion and were facts divulged which would indicate there will be an increase in exports in view of the development taking place in the north and elsewhere in western Canada?

Mr. Trudeau: Mr. Speaker, there were discussions regarding the question of increasing exports. This did not involve the matter of reaching an agreement between the premier and myself. It did involve knowing what agreement we might reach on exports and imports with the United States, and under what conditions this would be advantageous to the oil or petroleum industry. This matter was discussed, but no agreement, secret or otherwise, was reached between the premier and myself.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

ALLEGED TESTING OF NERVE GASES BY UNITED STATES—CANADIAN POSITION

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Secretary of State for External Affairs whether he is concerned in any way about the alleged try-out of nerve gases by the United States on Okinawa or one of the Pacific islands, or does he regard this as purely a matter of concern to the United States?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I am sure all the people of the world are concerned about the use of these biological or chemical forms of warfare. Certainly it is the policy of the Canadian government to do everything possible to eliminate their use.

Mr. Stanfield: Mr. Speaker, is the Secretary of State for External Affairs engaged in any discussions or does he propose to engage in any discussions with United States authorities about this matter?

Mr. Sharp: Mr. Speaker, we have been engaged in discussions with the United States and other countries during the disarmament talks in an attempt to reach an agreement to eliminate these forms of warfare. We have not been specifically in touch with the United States about the incident on Okinawa, but we are generally concerned about activities in this field by all countries, including the United States.

Mr. David Lewis (York South): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the minister whether or not the proposal for eliminating this kind of warfare which was placed before the disarmament conference in Geneva, I think by Great Britain, has come up for discussion there and what the position of our representative has been? If it has not yet come up for discussion, what will be the position of our representative, and is the government taking any initiative to push that proposal for early discussion and decision?

Mr. Sharp: Mr. Speaker, this matter is of such importance I should like to be able to give a precise answer. I will take the question as notice.

MAINLAND CHINA—DIPLOMATIC RECOGNITION —POSITION RESPECTING TWO CHINAS

Mr. David Anderson (Esquimalt-Saanich): Mr. Speaker, in view of continuing, speculative press reports concerning the talks now taking place in Stockholm between representatives of the government of Canada and the government of Mainland China, will the Secretary of State for External Affairs clarify his statement made on July 16, and will he assure the house that as far as Canada is concerned there will be no breakdown of these talks over the question of the so-called two Chinas?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I welcome this question because I am sure it is important that the matter be clarified. I have a brief but precise answer to the question which I should like to give.

We are not promoting either a two-China policy or a one-China, one Taiwan policy. Our policy is to recognize one government of China. We have not asked and do not ask the government of the People's Republic of China to endorse the position of the government of Canada on our territorial limits as a condition to agreement to establish diplomatic relations. To do so might cast doubts on the extent of our sovereignty. We do not think it would be appropriate, nor would it be in accordance with international usage, that Canada should be asked to endorse the position of the government of the Peoples' Republic of China on the extent of its territorial sovereignty. To challenge that position would, of course, also be inappropriate.

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, will the Secretary of State for External Affairs tell the house whether, in the event of achieving diplomatic exchange with the government of Peking, it is the intention of the government of Canada to withdraw diplomatic relations with Taiwan?

Mr. Sharp: Mr. Speaker, since the government of the People's Republic of China claims to be the government of China, obviously we cannot recognize two governments. The statement I made is quite precise on that point.

Hon. George Hees (Prince Edward-Hastings): Mr. Speaker, if the Canadian government does succeed in being allowed to recognize the government of Communist China, is it the government's intention to recognize the government at Taiwan as a separate government?

Mr. Sharp: Mr. Speaker, it is exactly for that reason I made my statement today. I hope the hon. gentleman will read it.

PENITENTIARIES

ST. VINCENT DE PAUL—STUDY RESPECTING SECURITY MEASURES

Mr. Harold E. Winch (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Solicitor General whether he is now prepared to answer a question posed several days ago as to action to be taken to make a study and, if necessary, improve security measures at St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary following the escape of two murderers and another person?

[Mr. Anderson.]

Hon. G. J. McIlraith (Solicitor General): Yes, Mr. Speaker. I should like to advise the hon. member that a commissioner has been appointed. Judge Bisson of the Quebec Superior Court has been appointed as a commissioner to investigate that incident.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

INQUIRY AS TO ENFORCEMENT

Mr. Joseph-Philippe Guay (St. Boniface): Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that another officer of the law was shot and killed in the line of duty over the weekend in St. Boniface, is the Solicitor General giving consideration to enforcing the death penalty in such cases as stipulated by the law?

Hon. G. J. McIlraith (Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, since the courts have not yet passed on the charges that will arise out of that tragic occurrence I think any answer I might give today would only have the effect of prejudicing a fair trial of the accused. I believe I should not answer the question further.

Mr. Eldon M. Woolliams (Calgary North): Mr. Speaker, I think this is what the hon. member was really asking. Is it now the policy of this government to commute all death penalties?

Mr. McIlraith: No, Mr. Speaker, I answered the same question when it was asked by the hon. member a few weeks ago. There is no question of a policy to be drawn from the decision of the Governor in Council in any single commutation case.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

CZECHOSLOVAKIA—RUDOLPH HOLOTA, ASSISTANCE IN TRIAL

Mr. G. W. Baldwin (Peace River): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Is the minister aware of the fact that a trial is taking place in Czechoslovakia of a man called Rudolph Holota considered to be a Canadian citizen, and is the Canadian government taking steps to see that a fair trial is accorded this man in respect of whom I understand certain charges have been made?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Yes, Mr. Speaker, I am aware of this case. I have been following it, and we have offered our good offices to him if he is in need of them. As I recall it, he has been charged with some offences committed before he came to Canada.

THE CANADIAN ECONOMY

INFLATION—MEASURES OUTLINED BY PRIME MINISTER ON WESTERN TRIP

Hon. George Hees (Prince Edward-Hastings): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the right hon. Prime Minister. During his trip to the western provinces last week did he outline to the people of that region the steps that the government intends to take or is taking to control the rising inflation which is going up at present at the rate of 10 per cent a year? If so, would he take the first opportunity on motions to outline these steps to the house?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Yes, Mr. Speaker, I did have several occasions to indicate to them what measures the government was taking to combat inflation, and they sympathised with me when I said that one of our greatest difficulties was rejecting the irresponsible demands of the opposition to spend more money.

Mr. Hees: As the Canadian people and this house are very interested in the precise steps which the government intends to take and which have not yet been outlined to us, would the Prime Minister take the first opportunity on motions, as requested, to outline these steps to the house?

Mr. Trudeau: Surely the hon. member cannot be all that interested in combatting inflation if he has not taken note of the several steps that have been taken, including those that were mentioned in the budget speech.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Hees: I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Is the Prime Minister not aware that the steps of which he speaks have been outlined to the Minister of Finance as absolutely unworkable and useless, and he did not deny—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT

VANCOUVER—FAILURE TO REMIT CHEQUES FOR OVERTIME

Mr. Barry Mather (Surrey): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Postmaster General. Can he say whether a complaint has been received from the post office workers in Vancouver over the reported failure of the central pay office in Ottawa to provide them with payment for their overtime work and if so, what action has been taken?

Hon. Eric W. Kierans (Postmaster General and Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, my friends in the postal unions tipped me off that this question was likely to come from the Conservative party. I did not expect it from a member of the hon. member's party. I may say that I will be glad to take up this matter with my colleague, the Minister of Finance, to find out why there is a delay in making available overtime cheques for the month of June.

PRICE STABILITY, INCOMES AND EMPLOYMENT

REQUEST TO PROCEED WITH MOTION ESTABLISHING COMMITTEE

Mr. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question related to that of the hon. member for Prince Edward-Hastings to the government house leader. Would he give consideration to bringing forward government order No. 91 on the order paper, the measure to set up a joint committee of the house and the other place on price stability, incomes and employment, in order to meet the very serious rise in the cost of living?

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Not at this particular time, Mr. Speaker.

REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT

REQUEST FOR ANNOUNCEMENT OF DESIGNATED REGIONS

Mr. David MacDonald (Egmont): My question is directed to the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion. Now that the industrial incentives bill has been passed by both houses, and in view of its rather unusual nature, how soon will the minister be in a position to announce the provisions that will be in operation, in particular the designation of the various regions where this legislation will apply?

[Translation]

Hon. Jean Marchand (Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): I hope, Mr. Speaker, that it will be within the next few weeks, two or three at the most, I would think.

Inquiries of the Ministry

[English]

CONSUMER AFFAIRS

APPLE-FLAVOUR CRYSTALS—REPRESENTATIONS BY MANUFACTURER CONCERNING PRODUCT

Mrs. Grace MacInnis (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. In view of the fact that thousands of consumers across Canada are being deceived into buying a product which they think contains fruit when in fact it does not, can the minister indicate to the house whether his department is investigating the representations of Sun-Rype Limited of British Columbia in regard to the packaging and advertising of Nabob Sungold apple-flavour crystals?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I think this question can be put on the order paper or more properly debated at the time of adjournment.

COMPANY OF YOUNG CANADIANS

REQUEST FOR REPORT ON STATUS OF PROGRAMMING FUNCTION

Mr. Stan Schumacher (Palliser): Mr. Speaker, as a result of a question asked by me ten days ago which Your Honour suggested might be answered by the Secretary of State in a statement on motions, may I ask the minister whether he will make a statement this week on the reasons and authority for reductions in the program department of the Company of Young Canadians, which changes appear to be against the expressed position of the provisional council that there be no major changes in the company before the permanent council is elected later this month?

[Translation]

Hon. Gérard Pelletier (Secretary of State): I will be happy to get more information on this situation, Mr. Speaker.

[English]

LABOUR RELATIONS

B.C. TELEPHONE STRIKE—ACTION TO TERMINATE

Mr. Thomas S. Barnett (Comox-Alberni): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Labour. What does the minister think of the increasingly harried and agonizing tones of the male voices that currently respond at the telephone exchanges in British Columbia, and have he and the officers of his department been able yet to take any useful steps to bring about a termination of the strike and thus put an end to the misery of these poor, unfortunate men?

Hon. Bryce Mackasey (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, those poor unfortunate men can put an end to their misery any time they want to give up manning the switchboards. As I have said on many occasions before in the house, the Department of Labour will act at a time when we think that action would be opportune, but we do not think the time has arrived yet and it may be another week or two before both parties are in the right frame of mind.

REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT

ARMED FORCES BASE CONSOLIDATION—CONSULTATION WITH PROVINCIAL AND MUNICIPAL OFFICIALS

Mr. David MacDonald (Egmont): Mr. Speaker, may I direct my question to the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion. Can the minister indicate whether, in light of recent announcements by the Minister of National Defence that a number of military establishments may be either substantially reduced or closed, there has been not only consultation with officials of his department but whether there is machinery now available for consultation with provincial and, in a number of cases, municipal officials before any major decisions are taken?

[Translation]

Hon. Jean Marchand (Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): I can say, Mr. Speaker, that the Department of National Defence is in touch with my department and we are now considering the problems relating to the military bases under discussion.

[English]

Mr. MacDonald (Egmont): I have a supplementary question in relation to the latter part of my question. Is there or will there be machinery available for consultation with provincial and municipal officials?

[Translation]

Mr. Marchand (Langelier): I have reason to believe, Mr. Speaker, that as soon as decisions are made at the federal level, consultations will take place with the provinces.

[English]

Mr. MacDonald (Egmont): I have a further supplementary question, Mr. Speaker, which I ask for clarification. Did the minister suggest that consultations would take place only after decisions have been arrived at by his department or by the Department of National Defence?

[Translation]

Mr. Marchand (Langelier): Mr. Speaker, I merely assume that on the subject of military bases, one refers only to matters under federal jurisdiction. Therefore, the decision is up to the federal government. However, in those cases, we believe there will be consultations, but the central government keeps the authority or the power to make decisions.

[English]

Mr. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion. Has he consulted his colleague, the Minister of National Defence, with a view to bringing pressure to bear to have a defence establishment set up in the province of Newfoundland in accordance with the request to the minister by the Royal Canadian Legion?

[Translation]

Mr. Marchand (Langelier): No, Mr. Speaker, it is not my duty, professionally, as Minister of Regional Economic Expansion, to make representations to the Minister of National Defence.

[English]

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Dartmouth-Halifax East): Mr. Speaker, I wonder whether I may direct my supplementary question to the Prime Minister who was absent last week when the matter came up. Would he not give consideration to prior consultation with the provinces, particularly those provinces where the removal of armed forces bases would cause severe economic hardship?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that the minister covered this subject very well.

Mr. Forrestall: I wonder whether you even know what is going on.

Mr. Trudeau: Put your earphones on.

Mr. Forrestall: Go back out west.

TAX REFORM

SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE—SUGGESTED DECLARATION OF CONFLICT OF INTEREST BY MEMBERS

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Prime Minister. In view of the importance of the work of the Special Joint Committee on Tax Reform and in view of the Prime Minister's clear and well stated concern about the question of conflict of interest, would the right hon. gentleman consider seeking an agreement between this house and the other place under which all the members of that special committee might be invited to declare their directorships and other financial interests which could come into conflict with any proposed changes in Canada's tax legislation?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I should not like to determine what the other house may wish to do in putting members on this committee. I am sure the suggestion put forward by the hon. member will be conveyed to them in one way or another. After all, they all have interests as taxpayers in what happens in connection with tax reform; it might be difficult to eliminate all people with an interest in taxation.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Perhaps the Prime Minister would look more closely at what I said, either now or when he gets Hansard. I referred to members from both houses on that committee. My suggestion is that there might be some guidelines in accordance with which members of the committee would be encouraged to declare their interests in advance. I recognize the point that the Prime Minister cannot compel members to do this, but I wonder whether a lead could not be given?

Mr. Trudeau: I believe the whole question of the Senate and House of Commons Act is to be brought before a committee, and this aspect could then be dealt with generally. I realize, and I have said this earlier, that the whole question of conflict of interest as tackled by the present statute is not adequately dealt with in the light of modern practices, and I agree that the whole subject might be looked into. I hesitate to say it ought to be done specifically for the purpose of this committee; it seems to me we are thinking in terms of a general question relating to many committees.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT CENTRE

INQUIRY AS TO ESTABLISHMENT AND PARTICIPATION

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Secretary of State a question about the International Development Centre proposed in the Speech from the Throne in relation to aid programs. Can the minister tell us whether such a centre has been established? If it has not, can he tell us whether the conception is that there shall be participation in this centre by other countries?

Mr. Speaker: Order. I have some doubt whether this matter is so urgent that it may be considered at this time.

Mr. Stanfield: On a point of order—

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps I might be allowed to finish. I was attempting to say that in my view this is not a matter of very urgent importance and that it could easily be put on the order paper. If hon. members think the decision is wrong, the question can be considered at the time of adjournment.

LABOUR CONDITIONS

SUMMER EMPLOYMENT FOR STUDENTS

Mr. W. B. Nesbitt (Oxford): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Manpower and Immigration. Some days ago I asked the minister whether he would make a statement on motions concerning plans with respect to employment for students during the summer months in view of the widespread unemployment in this field. The minister indicated he would do so. Can he tell us when he may be in a position to make such a statement and, if so, can he advise the house whether additional student loans may be available to students this fall in consequence of their present financial difficulties?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I shall be happy to report to the house either by making an oral statement or by tabling a report early this week. As the hon. member knows, the administration of student loans is not the responsibility of the Minister of Manpower and Immigration.

Mr. Nesbitt: I realize that the minister has no direct responsibility for the administration of student loans but perhaps, with his manpower portfolio in mind, he would consult the Minister of Finance—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I have reservations about questions which suggest that ministers should consult with their cabinet colleagues, or questions which inquire whether a minister has consulted with another minister. I would think that such questions are not in order.

[Mr. Stanfield.]

[Translation]

PROCEDURE AND ORGANIZATION

THIRD REPORT OF COMMITTEE—INQUIRY AS TO RESULT OF NEGOTIATIONS

Mr. Alexander Cyr (Gaspé): Mr. Speaker, I should like to put a question to the President of the Privy Council.

Can he report to the house on the meetings held during the weekend with representatives of the various parties, so that the third report of the standing committee on procedure and organization might be concurred in this week?

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, we had discussions with representatives of all parties and I hope we will again meet this evening at 7 to carry them on.

[English]

INQUIRY OF THE MINISTRY

Hon. George Hees (Prince Edward-Hastings): Mr. Speaker, I should like to address a question to the Prime Minister. As a bachelor who has not had an experience like this before, have his abrasive meetings in the west last week now convinced him that the honeymoon is over?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

IMMIGRATION

REQUEST FOR PUBLISHING OF DIRECTIVES IN FORCE AT BORDER POINTS

Mr. David MacDonald (Egmont): I have a question for the Minister of Manpower and Immigration, Mr. Speaker. In light of the continuing unease about departmental directives, particular those relating to immigration, and the controversy over the past weekend at border points near Montreal, has the minister considered or raised with his cabinet colleagues the question of either making these directives public, so that there would be public knowledge of the directives issued by the department with regard to immigration, or referring them in the first instance to an in camera meeting of either the Committee on Manpower and Immigration or the Committee on Statutory Instruments, so that full consideration could be given to the immigration policy of this country?

Mr. Speaker: I am not sure the question as asked is in order. I shall allow it, while reminding hon. members of what I said a few moments ago—that it is not in order, it seems to me, to ask whether a minister has consulted cabinet colleagues. The hon. member can ask directly what decision has been taken, and to this extent the question is in order.

Mr. MacDonald (Egmont): May I ask, then, whether the minister has given this matter his consideration and whether the government has come to some conclusion with regard to it?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): Whatever unease the hon. member refers to was likely related to guidelines which had been in force with respect to the treatment of military deserters. The policy has been changed and the guidelines formerly in existence have been withdrawn.

Mr. MacDonald (Egmont): During the past weekend there seems to have been uncertainty with regard to an ambivalent situation in connection with immigration procedures at border points near Montreal involving some changes which might have resulted from a departmental directive. Would the minister not agree to these directives being considered by a committee in camera, or consent to their publication?

Mr. MacEachen: I would hesitate to suggest referring to a committee any matter which is stated so vaguely as the hon. member has stated it.

ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

VANCOUVER—TREATMENT OF PRISONER AT AIRPORT

Hon. G. J. McIlraith (Solicitor General): On Friday last, Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for Vancouver Quadra asked me whether I was aware that the R.C.M.P. had brought a shackled and manacled prisoner through the concourse at Vancouver Airport and, if so, what I was doing to check this kind of barbarity.

The hon. member for Vancouver East asked a supplementary question:

> Will the Solicitor General look into the fact, proven by photographs, that this man was taken through the Vancouver airport in a strait-jacket as well as being manacled?

I replied that I would look into the matter immediately. I have now done this, and I find that the man was being brought from Prince George to Vancouver. He was in custody on a charge arising out of holding a robbery victim as a hostage at gunpoint for two days, and he was being taken to another place where it was expected that a further and considerably more serious charge would be laid.

By reason of the nature of the charges and because of certain conduct since his arrest, I am perfectly satisfied that strong security measures were required in this case. As a result of certain direct action which he himself had taken, affecting his wrists, the man could not be handcuffed. A strait-jacket was used instead of handcuffs. The plane was a C.P.A. jet from which passengers exit only by way of a passage leading to the terminal; the manner of unloading normally used by the police could not be employed in this case. This is why the prisoner was taken through the passageway. Photographers had apparently been alerted, and waited in the passageway to get pictures.

COMBINES

REPORT OF ECONOMIC COUNCIL

Mrs. Grace MacInnis (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs whether he has yet received the report of the Economic Council of Canada on combines and competition? If he does not receive it before the adjournment, will he be publicizing it during the recess?

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): I have not received it, Mr. Speaker. I think the usual procedure is for the report to be given to the Prime Minister and released by the Economic Council itself. The report is certainly not submitted to me and I am not in charge of making it public.

Mrs. MacInnis: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I have in mind the minister's statement of July 3, to be found at page 10789 of Hansard:

> All we can do is hope the council reports as quickly as possible. If the house is sitting when I receive the report, then naturally I will be making a statement as soon as I receive it.

If the house is not sitting, will the minister publicize the report when he does receive it?

Mr. Basford: Mr. Speaker, I am not in charge of publicity for the Economic Council of Canada. My statement that the hon. member quoted was to the effect that when I receive a copy of the report, which will probably be at the same time the hon. member receives it, I expect to have something to say about it.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

MOTION TO ADJOURN UNDER S.O. 26

TRADE

WHEAT—REDUCTION IN U.S. EXPORT PRICES—THREAT TO CANADIAN ECONOMY

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands) moved that the house do now adjourn.

He said: Mr. Speaker, my reason for moving this motion relates to the announcement, made last Friday by the government of the United States that that country was reducing some of its wheat prices by 12 cents per bushel. This statement has been reflected in the announcement just made in Winnipeg that the Canadian Wheat Board has reduced its prices for hard wheat by two cents to as much as seven cents per bushel, depending on grade, and for durum wheat by 11½ cents per bushel. These reductions, which bring the price well below the minimum price set by the International Grains Arrangement, further aggravate a situation that has been growing increasingly more serious over the past nine or ten months.

It should hardly be necessary to tell the house that western agriculture is in a deplorable state. Last week the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) made a visit to the prairies, and I think if anyone is conscious of the fact that the wheat growers of western Canada find themselves in desperate straits it is the Prime Minister.

But it should not have been necessary for the Prime Minister personally to visit the prairie provinces in order to find out that the western farmers are in the financial doldrums. A standing committee of this house, the Agricultural Committee, visited western Canada and submitted a report to the house, a report that I assume the Prime Minister and his colleagues read. That report indicated that the wheat growers of western Canada faced virtual bankruptcy, and urged upon the government the need for an infusion of cash income into the pockets of the prairie farmers.

Apparently the Prime Minister either did not read the report or he did not believe what was said in it, for he undertook to visit the west himself. It is too bad, I think, that we had to have noisy demonstrations to convince the Prime Minister of Canada that the farmers are, to say the least, upset.

The prairie farmer is a very patient person. He has put up with a lot of hardships. He is the one person in our economy who buys in a protected market but has to depend upon the world market to determine the price that he will get for his produce. Over the years the prairie farmer has been caught in a cost-price squeeze, with the price of almost everything that he has to buy going up and the price of most of his produce going down. He now finds himself in a catastrophic situation that borders on disaster.

I am glad that after spending six days on the prairies the right hon. gentleman finally told the farmers: "What you need is dough". If "dough" is money, then he is right. If he means by "dough" flour and wheat, the farmers have plenty of that. The western farmers need money, and the reason they need money is very obvious.

In their brief to the government the Canadian Federation of Agriculture pointed out that in this crop year there has been a reduction in grain receipts of $430 million. There has been a $140 million reduction in deliveries and a drop of $290 million in Wheat Board spring payments, which in this crop year will amount to less than $70 million compared with $360 million in the previous crop year.

If this were a sudden crisis the farmers might weather the storm. But this situation has been continuing for some time. In the last crop year the farmers of western Canada received a final wheat payment of 17.8 cents per bushel less than they received in the previous year. Their final price for barley was down 9.4 cents per bushel, and for oats 1.5 cents per bushel.

Therefore, the western farmer has been facing essentially two problems. First of all he faces a reduced delivery, which means he is unable to sell all of the grain he has on hand. Secondly, he is getting a reduced price even for the grain which he is able to sell. Consequently, he finds himself in an impossible position.

When the Prime Minister was on the prairies he talked about the problem of helping out farmers, because there were rich farmers as well as poor farmers. The Prime Minister referred to the fact that some farmers, according to what he was told, had assets amounting to $100,000. These assets are worth $100,000 only if they can be realized, and if they can produce a financial return. The $100,000 assets that a farmer might have are, first of all, assets of which he cannot dispose. No one would buy a $100,000 farm if he cannot sell the wheat produced by that farm, or if, when he does sell the wheat, it is sold at a price that is below the cost of production.

I want to make it perfectly clear that the prairie farmers are not asking the government for charity. They are not asking for handouts. It is all very well for the Prime Minister to talk about farmers who are on uneconomic farms, those farmers who cannot make a living. This is a separate problem, a problem that has to be dealt with, but we are talking here about those farmers who are efficient, those who have been productive. In fact they have been so productive that at the present time there are close to one billion bushels of grain in Canada, and by the time this year's crop is taken off the farms this amount will probably rise to 1.5 billion bushels.

• (3:10 p.m.)

These are not people who need charity. These are people who are facing bankruptcy and whose assets are useful only if they can obtain a price for their product that will enable them to meet their costs of production and give them a reasonable return on invested capital. They must sell the produce of their farms.

I think this parliament must be seized of the problems facing prairie farmers. Our aid should not be in handouts but in actions that will salvage the industry. After all, a short time ago hon. gentlemen opposite gave about $80 million to two automobile companies. Ford Motor Company of Canada was given $75 million, and the Chrysler people got $5 million. Neither of these concerns was bankrupt; neither could be described as poor. The government gave this money because it thought it necessary to keep these companies in business.

Mr. Pepin: Mr. Speaker, that question was answered in committee to the satisfaction of the committee and it is unfair for the hon. member to repeat his accusations at this time.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): The matter may have been answered to the government's satisfaction and to the satisfaction of Liberal committee members, but it was not answered to the satisfaction of other committee members, as I know very well.

Mr. Broadbent: On a point of privilege, Mr. Speaker, I wish to reply to the minister's suggestion that members of the committee were satisfied with the answer. I was a member of the committee and I was not satisfied with the government's answer.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): I do not wish to introduce an irrelevant issue into this debate. My point is that the Prime Minister and his colleagues did not wait until the automobile companies were bankrupt. They gave going concerns large government handouts. I am saying that while the wheat economy is still solvent, before farmers go bankrupt and before hundreds of them have to abandon their farms, the government must act.

I have had a steady stream of letters from farmers who are having their machinery repossessed. One Manitoba farmer wrote saying that he had $64,000 worth of machinery repossessed and that he had a 70 per cent equity in that machinery. How can he take a crop off if his machinery has been repossessed? I have had letters from representatives of implement companies, car and truck salesmen, and merchants across the prairies. All tell the same story of declining sales volume and declining business activity. This is not a matter of handing out charity to some poor farmers. We are now talking about salvaging the wheat economy as a viable part of the Canadian economy. That is what we are talking about.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): This great wheat surplus is not the farmers' fault, Mr. Speaker. Surely the farmers are not to be blamed or penalized for being so efficient and productive. In the last 20 years the productivity per farm worker has tripled, and no other industry in Canada can claim that record. By virtue of modern technology, ingenuity, and much hard work our farmers have been able to produce this tremendous quantity of high quality wheat. They were encouraged to do so, being told repeatedly by government spokesmen, "Grow the wheat and we will sell it."

Now it is a different story. Now the government is beginning to say, "We have too much wheat; we do not know what to do with the quantity we have; our farmers are just too productive." That is not what the farmers heard in the past.

I wish to read briefly from a speech the Prime Minister made in Winnipeg on June 2, 1968, in the midst of an election campaign. It is in the form of a written text and I therefore assume that the Prime Minister seriously meant what he said, and that his words were not sheer campaign rhetoric to secure the votes of western farmers. I am assuming that the Prime Minister was announcing a carefully thought out program of which the farmers should take cognizance and upon which they should act. The part of the speech I shall refer to is headed, "Canada's Export Objective". The Prime Minister said this:

> The Canadian government is confident of Canada's capacity to grow and sell the wheat that the world demands. Both the government and the Canadian Wheat Board are determined to maintain and improve Canada's share of the world wheat market. The objective is to secure 25 per cent or better of world wheat trade or, in quantitative terms, 1.3 billion bushels of wheat exports in the next three years.

I pause there, Mr. Speaker. That was a pretty direct promise to the farmers of western Canada. The government was prepared to improve Canada's share of the market and to secure 25 per cent or better of the world's wheat trade. The Prime Minister said the government was prepared to dispose of 1.3 billion bushels in the next three years. That is about 433 million bushels a year.

When our farmers heard the Prime Minister say that, they were encouraged because our share of the world's wheat market had been declining steadily. From 1948 to 1952 Canada managed to retain 21.3 per cent of the total world wheat market. In the last crop year, however—in the 1967-68 crop year—our share of the world's wheat trade dropped to 11.6 per cent, about half the previous figure. When export figures for this year become available I suspect we will find that our share of the market has declined even more.

Mr. Pepin: For what year did the hon. member quote the figure of 11.6 per cent?

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): That was for the 1967-68 crop year. I continue reading from the Prime Minister's speech:

> To attain this level of wheat exports, the government is prepared to give all necessary support to the selling operations of the Canadian Wheat Board. In furtherance of these objectives, the government will:
>
> (a) Continue to subscribe to and fully suport the International Grains Arrangement.
>
> [Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands).]
>
> (b) Review and amend credit facilities available to improve the competitive position of Canadian wheat on world markets.
>
> (c) Continue a high level of wheat and flour in Canada's Food Aid Program. The government has announced a goal for total aid of one per cent of the gross national product. Wheat and flour will continue to represent an important share of this increasing expenditure.

I draw attention to subparagraph (b), which says that the government will "...review...the competitive position of Canadian wheat on world markets". I hope the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce (Mr. Pepin) will tell us, when he speaks, what the government has done to improve our competitive position.

Mr. Pepin: I will.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): The minister says he will. I hope he will tell us what the results of government actions have been.

Mr. Pepin: The hon. member should know that.

• (3:20 p.m.)

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): I will know if the minister tells us what he has done, and if he will show us the results. I say to the minister that on the basis of the results his tenure of office has been a total failure.

I draw attention to subparagraph (c), which says that the government will "continue a high level of wheat and flour in Canada's food aid program". Our goal for total foreign aid is 1 per cent of our gross national product. My deskmate, the hon. member for York South (Mr. Lewis), on Friday, I think it was, put some figures on the record which had just been published by O.E.C.D. and the last year for which figures were available showed Canada's contribution to foreign aid was .49 of one per cent, less than one-half of one per cent of our gross national product.

For years the government have been telling us they were going to reach this goal of one per cent. They are not halfway there yet. I wonder what the minister is doing about including more wheat, cereal grains and flour in the foreign aid program. It certainly does not show up in the figures published by the O.E.C.D. As a matter of fact in recent years the government have not even been spending the full appropriation voted by parliament for foreign aid. That is how little has been done about trying to get our surplus food and other supplies into our foreign aid program.

Mr. Speaker: I have to interrupt the hon. member to remind him and the house that the hon. member's time has expired. He may continue only if he has the unanimous consent of the house.

Some hon. Members: Carry on.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, I was under the impression that 40 minutes was the maximum for debate under Standing Order 26. Am I wrong.

Mr. Speaker: I am subject to correction. My understanding is that the rule has been cleared up. Standing Order 26(14) states:

No member shall speak longer than twenty minutes during debate on any such motion.

I gather the hon. member qualifies under 26(14).

Some hon. Members: Carry on.

Mr. Trudeau: Make your suggestion. You can do it in 30 seconds.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) wants my suggestion.

Mr. Trudeau: In 30 seconds.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Let me start with the Prime Minister's suggestion. He is the one in charge of the show. He is the boss. He sits in the seat of power. Let me read what the Prime Minister said to the people of western Canada in the same speech of June 2, 1968. He said:

Variations in world cereal supply-demand give rise to year to year fluctuations in Canadian grain sales and farm income. These fluctuations create difficulties for grain farmers in making forward operational plans. To meet this problem the government will immediately involve all interested parties in the development of a self-sustaining program of income protection for western cereal producers.

He went on to say:

Resolution of this problem will be sought in sufficient time to bring in legislation to permit implementation of a program early in 1969 should it be required.

There can be no doubt about it being required. When I asked the Prime Minister on orders of the day about this promise of an income protection program he implied that he was talking about cash advances on farm stored grain. I want to point out that the very next paragraph in his speech dealt with that. When he talked about an income protection plan, he did not include the cash advances as being part of the income protection plan. He went on to say:

To meet farmers' needs for operating funds at harvest time, advance payments will be increased, as soon as possible, to provide for the doubling, to $6,000, of the amount available to individual farmers as interest-free loans on farm stored grain. At the same time the burden of repayment will be eased by reducing the rate of repayment.

The Prime Minister indicated over a year ago that early in 1969 the government would be introducing an income protection program for the western farmer. We have been trying for at least eight months to find out what that program is.

The government wants suggestions. Ministers have received suggestions from this side of the house again and again. Even more important, they have had them from the farm organizations and from the wheat pools. It has been suggested that in order to meet the immediate situation the government might pay an acreage bonus of $2 an acre up to a maximum of 1,000 acres. We in this party have suggested that the government consider a more speedy way of getting money out to the farmers by making a deficiency payment of 20 cents a bushel on the wheat which was delivered in the 1967-68 crop year, up to a maximum of 5,000 bushels. That would just about make up to the farmers the drop in the price which took place in that crop year.

The other suggestion, which I am sure has been made to the Prime Minister and his colleagues again and again, is that the government has a responsibility to see that the floor price of $1.95½ a bushel, basis Fort William, which was set under the International Grains Arrangement, be the guaranteed price to the wheat producer. If the Canadian Wheat Board finds it necessary to embark upon a price war in the sale of wheat, then surely the price of waging that war ought not to be borne exclusively by the people who produce the wheat.

If the government and the Wheat Board decide on a price war in order to stay in a competitive position with those exporting countries that have violated the I.G.A., then surely this battle ought to be waged by the Canadian people as a whole and not just by the farmers of western Canada. Nothing could be more logical and fair than to ask the government to say that as far as the farmers are concerned the Wheat Board will pay them on the basis of $1.95½ a bushel for their wheat, basis Fort William, and any difference in price which they must accept below that figure in order to sell wheat will be borne by the treasury of Canada.

I suggest the government must do a great deal more to implement the Prime Minister's commitments of June 2 than it has done today. The Prime Minister said he was confident of Canada's capacity to grow and sell wheat. If it is really going to do what the Prime Minister said, then the government must be prepared to embark upon an aggressive sales policy.

The Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce has been very coy in telling us what has happened to the agreement with the Soviet Union, which expires at the end of this month, and under which roughly 165 million bushels have not yet been accepted by Russia. What have the minister and his department done about getting the Soviet Union to accept the balance of this contract?

I am told by those who visited the trade fair at Budapest that the Canadian government was not even represented. But the province of Ontario was represented. The British government was represented and the United States government was represented. Canada was not represented at all. I am told that Ontario had a pavilion there. That may be news to the minister. Perhaps the minister does not know what goes on in world affairs.

• (3:30 p.m.)

Mr. Pepin: We cannot take part in everything.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): No, but any man who is a minister of trade and commerce of a country which has such an agreement under which 165 million bushels of wheat are still to be sold, should have a representative at fairs held behind the Iron Curtain or in any country which is likely to be interested in securing Canadian wheat. The minister has not told us, for instance, whether there is any possibility of renewing that agreement or extending it so that we would still have some hope of selling these 165 million bushels. The minister has not indicated whether he is carrying on any discussions with wheat importing countries regarding bilateral trade agreements.

I notice, for instance, that Great Britain made very large sales to Roumania of equipment for irrigating land and is receiving wheat and other foodstuffs in exchange. I notice that France has been taking payments in the form of goods from other countries, and that the United States has been taking partial payment either in soft currency or in goods. To what extent are the full resources of the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce being put behind the Wheat Board in order to enable that body to sell wheat in competition with other countries?

[Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands).]

If Canada is to sit back and say "Cash on the barrelhead", while everybody else is working out agreements for long term credit, or partial payment in goods and partial payment in soft currency, we will continue to sit here with one billion bushels of unsold wheat. The responsibility lies squarely on the shoulders of the government to see that we sell more wheat and to realize that in order to do so we must use the techniques of our competitors. We cannot continue to use the methods that were adequate when there was a shortage of wheat in the world and we were in the fortunate position of having a surplus.

I hope the minister, when he reports to the house, will tell us just how much wheat and flour have gone into our foreign aid program, and how much it has increased each year. Also I would hope he would tell us what is being done to extend this program for the disposal of western wheat and Canadian flour.

May I conclude by saying I regret that the attitude of the Prime Minister and of the government generally seems to be that we have a surplus of wheat in the world, that this is a tragic situation, that there is nothing we can do about it except make some cash advances which will not solve the problem for the farmer who still has wheat which he cannot sell after he has filled his quota, but which has cost him a great deal of money to produce. Is the government taking the position that we are in a hopeless situation and the only answer lies in allowing the farmers to go broke and be pushed off the farms, or in reducing the number of farmers and consequently reducing the amount of wheat produced? This is not the answer.

If the government want diversification, they should say so. They should bring down a diversification program, as the Federation of Agriculture suggested and provide $160 million this year, which would be reduced each year by $40 million, which would be used to help farmers transfer from grain to beef. If they do that they will have to stabilize the market and give the farmers some assurance that if they produce beef they will be able to sell it, and will not be told that there is no market for beef and that they should go back to producing grain.

Surpluses of wheat are not new phenomena. I remember standing in my place in this house in the 1940's and saying, amidst laughter from some members, that the day would come when we would be scraping the bottom of every bin in Canada trying to get enough wheat to meet world demand. That was considered to be very funny but in a few years it turned out to be true. Wheat production and wheat consumption have gone in cycles. Ever since the days of Joseph in Egypt, in biblical times, there have been periods of surplus followed by periods of scarcity, and periods of abundance followed by periods of drought. A day will come when again there will be a demand for Canadian wheat.

The important thing for the government and this House of Commons to do at the present time is to take the necessary steps to keep the efficient farmers in operation against the day when Canadian wheat, which is still the best wheat in the world, will be in demand all around the globe. I therefore hope we will have some statement from the Prime Minister, or from his associates, outlining specifically what they propose to do.

I do not think we should be told once more that a policy is forthcoming and will be announced in due course. Ever since last fall it has been perfectly apparent we were headed for this crisis. Now the crisis is here. In that period the government ought to have evolved a policy, and should now be able to tell us what that policy is. It should be able in the next few days to announce a policy that will give the farmers of western Canada some assurance of two things: first, that there will be a massive infusion of cash income to see them over the present crisis and, second, that there will be some stability of prices in the future to enable them to stay in operation as efficient producers.

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I had hoped that at this stage perhaps the minister or the government would state the position of the government, particularly in view of the rapidly developing situation. I am grateful, however, for an opportunity to participate in a debate on this subject. Apparently it took a new body blow delivered to the wheat producers of Canada for this house to be able to debate this subject, one which we have been anxious to debate following the temporary suspension—which I believe are the minister's words—of the minimum price under the I.G.A. This matter obviously involves an emergency of great importance to the grain farmers who are directly involved, to the whole of western Canada, and indeed to the whole of Canada. There is no question about the fall in Canada's share of the world market during the past year. Although the minister may mention this, I am not now talking about the longer term events over ten year periods.

There is no question that during the last two or three years Canada has lost a substantial share of the world market and that western farmers are now faced with a record backlog of wheat for which they are seeking sales. I remember hearing the Prime Minister of Canada (Mr. Trudeau) on television, during a certain event a year ago last May or June, speaking in Winnipeg and admit that Canada had not done a good job in selling wheat in recent years. I took for granted he was saying to the western farmers that his government would do better, and that he recognized there was a lot of room for improvement in the way things had been handled.

We had a world wheat agreement for a year. Now we have an agreement in respect of which the minister seems to be helpless in either enforcing it or getting anything done about violations of it. I do not want to be unfair to the minister but I think it is correct to say that for the last two or three years Canada has been trailing along behind developments, has been following the market downwards, and has fallen behind others who have made wheat sales. Canada has reduced its price, but so far as we can judge we have derived very little benefit from that process.

• (3:40 p.m.)

It is important to understand the true nature and the dimensions of the present crisis, much of which had its origin in 1966. The federal government has had its responsibility since then for developing policies to meet the coming crisis but it certainly has not discharged that responsibility despite the assurances of the Prime Minister a year ago that such would be done.

In 1966, for example, the United States made a number of changes in wheat policy which adversely affected Canadian growers. These were obvious at the time but our government did not act. The United States wheat acreage allotment was increased by about 30 percent, and it adopted a modified two price policy in order to grasp commercial markets.

It is correct that in 1967 and 1968 the United States was a major exporter of wheat while total world exports declined by about 15 per cent. As a result of Canada's indecisive response to these new changes our wheat exports declined by almost 40 per cent. I hope the minister will correct me if I am wrong in any of these assertions which I believe to be correct.

As I say, recently the minister and the government seem to have been following the market downwards. I should have hoped that long ago Canada might have been able to convince the United States that there was to be nothing gained by cutting prices. One does not extend the market to any extent by reducing prices, because the demand for wheat is inelastic. Canada and the United States have basically the same interests in maintaining a solid basic price for wheat, yet Canada seems to have failed completely to convince the government of the United States that it is in the interest of the two governments and the two countries to act in concert.

The price reductions announced toward the end of last week by the United States represent further confirmation of our failure in this regard. I wonder whether part of our difficulty can be related to the fact that the Canadian government may not have a very good odor so far as the government of the United States is concerned. Whatever the reason we seem to have failed.

As a consequence our farmers have what appears to be a record backlog of wheat on hand. However, there is another side to this matter in terms of the proportion of total wheat sales. Wheat in storage is not as large in percentage terms as it was ten years ago. In the past a succession of good growing years was frequently followed by poorer crops in a number of countries which were normally big suppliers. We know that in the past any surplus or storage of wheat was usually used for a good purpose in the end. I do not think we should be too pessimistic. We should not assume that just because we are in these present difficulties the market will continue to deteriorate over the long run, or that the market for wheat will be weak in the long run.

The Prime Minister seems to have accepted the point of view that over future long terms of adjustment there must be less wheat grown in the west. If that is the case I think he certainly owes it to the wheat farmers of the country to tell them what the plan is, and indicate what methods should be used to reduce wheat production. Certainly we have to recognize that all the farmers who are growing wheat cannot turn to producing something else. A lot of their farms are not adaptable to other crops, and certainly not adaptable to the production of beef.

It is not good enough for the government of Canada to talk about a decrease in the market and a need for adjustment and change, and just leave it at that. It is not good enough just to tell the wheat farmer that there is a glut of wheat in the world and that he has to turn his hand to something else. If the government of Canada is convinced that the outlook in the long term is bad, then let it produce a program which will provide for some orderly adjustment.

Surely part of any such program must take the form of some assistance in the short term, because there is a back-up on the farms. Farmers are strapped for cash, and this is having a backing up effect in their communities and throughout the whole region. Surely there is an urgent requirement for the immediate infusion of assistance into this great industry.

I heard the Acting Prime Minister last week—the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Sharp)—say on television that it would be contrary to the government's anti-inflationary program to provide any cash assistance to the western wheat grower. I think that is rubbing it into the farmer pretty badly. Surely there is nobody in the country who has suffered more from the squeeze created by inflation than the western farmer, or the farmer generally. For the official spokesman of the government to tell the western wheat grower that much needed assistance cannot be granted because it would be contrary to the government's anti-inflationary program is really rubbing it in where it hurts.

Does anybody seriously contend that it would add to the inflationary forces in western Canada for such assistance to be granted? Does anybody seriously contend that the situation in the wheat growing areas contributes to the inflationary pressures in Canada today? What has happened to the selective policy of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Benson)? I refer to those anti-inflationary measures to be applied where there are inflationary pressures. Has this policy been abandoned or does the Minister of Finance and the government envisage that the budgetary surplus will be of such a size that the government cannot grant some assistance where it is badly needed, not just to shore up the farmers but to prevent a serious breakdown in the economy of this whole region?

• (3:50 p.m.)

The Prime Minister spoke a good deal about the difficulty of working out a policy that does not involve farmers who have lots of assets but are strapped for cash. These farmers are in their present situation because they did what they were urged to do. They improved their method of production, they bought equipment, and perhaps they bought some land. Are we going to sit back in this parliament and see some of the best farmers in the west destroyed while the Prime Minister figures out some way of making certain that farmers who have substantial assets, but are badly strapped for cash, do not get any assistance from the government?

What we are talking about is the saving of an industry from facing grave difficulties. I suggest that what the Prime Minister said is quite irrelevant to the issue, and that these farmers may be in dire need of assistance. If they do not receive it agriculture in this country may receive a very heavy blow.

A variety of programs might have been adopted as an emergency measure. It might have been possible to work out a program with regard to payment for storage on the farm. This would have had the merit of paying for service rendered by the farmers in preserving an asset expected to be of value. I think the time has come when there is very little choice available to the government except to resort to some form of acreage payment, which has the merit of getting cash into the hands of the farmers quickly.

The Prime Minister spoke about a program of income support for farmers. When he was chided a few minutes ago for not having carried this program out, he said, "We did". I think he would have a very difficult time convincing members of this house that his pledge was carried out, and a much more difficult time convincing farmers in the western part of the country that he carried out his commitment, or even that he commenced to carry it out. The best example of this is the fact that the submission to the government, made by the Canadian Federation of Agriculture as long ago as May 28 has so far received no answer.

I think it is very clear that the government of Canada is taking the attitude that the present difficulties are entirely due to international developments beyond its control. I do not accept that. I think the Prime Minister was right when he said a year ago that Canada has not done an adequate job in selling wheat. I think that that statement which was true a year ago is even more true today.

The Prime Minister is back from his lecture tour in the west. He talked tough to the prairie farmers for the benefit of the eastern audiences. The western farmers certainly do not need to be told about the hard realities in the long term or in the short run. But they need to be told about the plans that this government has to be of assistance to them.

At a time of very serious uncertainty regarding agriculture, the government in the last months has simply added to the uncertainty. The Prime Minister spoke about cutbacks in wheat production, but no one has indicated what policy the government has to encourage alternatives to grain production if there is to be a cut-back in it. The Prime Minister proposed, apparently offhandedly, to pay farmers a salary for life under the condition that they surrender their land to the state. The Prime Minister continues to suggest that the farmers do not understand the national problems, but he does so without giving any indication that he understands the farmers' problems.

Parliament wants to know what emergency program the government plans to adopt to meet the short term crisis when the government will begin to implement this program, and when it will tell parliament what it proposes to do. We and the country generally have been asking for this for months, and we received only evasions.

Inflation is no answer. The government's anti-inflationary program is no excuse. The fact that some of these farmers have substantial assets but no cash is no excuse. This is no excuse for allowing the industry to get into deeper and deeper difficulties, and allowing many of our best farmers to go under economically. The fact that the international difficulties have increased in depth is no excuse for sitting back and refusing to deal with an emergency which exists in this country today.

I say to the Prime Minister and the responsible minister in this government: Act, and you will receive the support of members of this house. Act to meet a serious situation. The time is long past when it is sufficient simply for a Prime Minister of this country to ask questions, either in this house or on the farms of this country. What we need is action, and we expect it.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Wheat Export Prices

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): Mr. Speaker, I listened with great care to the two previous speeches, and in particular to the last words of the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield) about action. They brought to my mind something that was said about his predecessor, namely, that he mistook acting for action. I point out again that I listened with great care. When he spoke about what kind of action is needed, the only thing he could come up with was the solution offered by the right hon. member for Prince Albert (Mr. Diefenbaker) when he was prime minister, namely, acreage payments. This is a remedy of some kind, but it is my hope that if we were to adopt this solution we will try to do it with somewhat more refinement than the way in which it was done in 1958, 1960 and 1962. Obviously it did not solve the problem at that time. If it had, we would not have to deal with it today.

An hon. Member: Who is acting now?

• (4:00 p.m.)

Mr. Pepin: Again may I say that I listened with great care to the Leader of the Opposition and to the leader of the New Democratic party (Mr. Douglas). For example, the Leader of the Opposition said that the Canadian government has been "trailing behind developments" regarding wheat, and he said "We derive very little benefit from this process".

We tried desperately hard and are still trying to save the International Grains Arrangement. In the process we may have lost a number of sales, but it was worth the effort. The other day in Washington when the Australians made a great to-do about getting out of the road temporarily in order to accommodate other exporter members of the I.G.A., I had no hesitation in saying we had made our effort previously. It was six months ago that Canada contributed greatly to the maintenance of this agreement. In my view the sacrifices we made at that time were worth while.

The Leader of the Opposition points to the fact that by "trailing behind" we may have done wrong—that may be too strong a word—to the Canadian wheat economy, and he points to the United States as an example of a country that has moved ahead. I do not see it this way. Last year the United States sold 750 million bushels; this year they are down to 525 million bushels. This should help me make the point that I thought I had made previously, namely, that this is not exclusively a Canadian problem; it is an international problem. For this reason I believe we have to find the right combination in trying to influence events and also in adapting to those events.

I was in Washington just a week ago. I have spent five days there in the last month. I was in Washington with representatives of the other exporter members of the I.G.A. Canada tried as hard as possible to prevent a collapse of wheat prices in the world. We tried to restore co-operation among exporters under the I.G.A., without this co-operation nothing can be done.

I have been asked in the house on a number of occasions to say what kind of success or failure we had. I said on a number of occasions that I did not know. I think the Leader of the Opposition and the Leader of the New Democratic party should give me credit for not having tried to take them down the golden path in any way. I was very sincere in my answers, because I did not know. Nobody else knew—neither the Leader of the Opposition nor the leader of the New Democratic party—exactly what would happen, because wheat marketing depends upon a number of circumstances that are not within the exclusive control of the Caandian government. Two things the Canadian government does not control are the weather and the policies of other countries.

Mr. Woolliams: Mr. Speaker, would the minister permit a question? He is dealing with this matter on an international basis, as if it were an international crisis. For six weeks 29 ships were waiting in Vancouver harbour. Was that an international problem or a problem of this government?

Mr. Pepin: Mr. Speaker, I believe I have answered the hon. member's question on a number of occasions. Weather had a great deal to do with that situation, but I cannot convince those who do not want to be convinced to accept my views.

We tried very hard at Washington. On Friday afternoon the Americans announced the "corrective measures" they were taking. As is known by now, they were reducing the price of ordinary, hard, red, winter wheat at Gulf and Atlantic ports by 12 cents a bushel.

A number of other specific cuts have been made by the United States for other types of wheat. I have since been asked by the press whether I was surprised by these announcements. I have been asked whether they were in the spirit of the Washington meetings. Frankly, I prefer not to comment on that subject at this time because it would not be wise so to do; it would not be in the best interests of Canadian farmers and of the Wheat Board. We have not yet heard from Australia and the European Economic Community on that subject.

This morning the Canadian Wheat Board announced its own adjustments to cope with the new situation created by the United States move and moves made previously by other exporters. As hon. members know, price reductions announced this morning range from 1⅛th cents a bushel to eight cents a bushel for spring wheat, depending on grade and export position. These are the corrective measures we have had to take.

I have been asked whether this is the final move or only the first round. It is not possible for me to predict this, because I do not know what will be the reaction of other countries to the Canadian announcement. The Canadian government hopes that a new plateau has been reached and exporting countries will rally at that level. It is not possible to know what the future has in store.

The two hon. members who spoke before me seemed to find this an extraordinary situation and said it was catastrophic that in the last year Canada exported only about 310 million bushels. I shall try to put the record straight. I am not trying to make anything out of these figures but simply to put forward the right assessment of the situation. The golden years to which the two hon. members referred, in comparison with this year's picture were extraordinary in Canadian wheat history. In order to assess more precisely what present exports are, I think one should refer to figures for a number of previous years. I quote the following figures for the record: 1958-59, 294.5 million bushels; 1959-60, 277.3 million bushels; 1960-61, 353.2 million bushels; 1961-62, 358 million bushels; 1962-63, 331.3 million bushels:

One has to bear these figures in mind. When one comes to more recent years, the figures rise tremendously: 1963-64, 594.1 million bushels; 1964-65, 399.6 million bushels; 1965-66, 584.9 million bushels; 1966-67, 516.3 million bushels; 1967-68, 335.6 million bushels; and this year about 305 million or 310 million bushels. But 1963-64 and 1965-66 were extraordinary years. However, when one tries to assess the present situation in regard to Canadian exports one has to consider a longer period of years, and 310 million bushels is not such a catastrophic export figure.

All kinds of figures have been quoted about the percentage of Canadian exports compared with those of other exporters. The figure 10 per cent was quoted by the Leader of the Opposition. I should like to know where he got that figure. The figure I have here in respect of Canadian exports for 1968 is 19.20 per cent. For the previous year the figure was 17 per cent, for the previous year 26 per cent, and for 1965 27 per cent. The figure for 1959 was 20 per cent, for 1958 22 per cent, for 1956 21 per cent, and so on. Therefore, there is no tremendous difference which could create the impression that is being created here today.

Mr. Stanfield: Mr. Speaker, I do not know that it matters very much, but the minister was not referring to what I said; he was referring to the figures quoted by the leader of the New Democratic party.

Mr. Pepin: Yes, Mr. Speaker. I apologize if I gave the wrong impression.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, on a question of privilege, the figures I quoted the minister will find in table No. 1, copied from figures released by the F.A.O. and submitted to the minister and his colleagues in a brief presented by the Canadian Federation of Agriculture on May 28, 1969. These figures are given taken from the F.A.O. and deal with Canada's share of the world's grain trade.

• (4:10 p.m.)

Mr. Pepin: There are all kinds of ways of assessing these things. You have commercial, non-commercial, concessional sales and so on. I would have to go into detail in order to make a proper assessment. Mr. Speaker, we now have a situation in wheat production that is, I do not know whether I should say abnormal, but certainly strange.

Mr. Woolliams: I have never seen it so strange.

Mr. Pepin: Stay with us and you will see other things that are strange. The last three years have seen exceptional harvests. As a matter of fact, all over the world in each of the last three years a record has been broken. As a result it is obvious that the grain trade in the world has gone down substantially.

In the year 1965-66 the world trade totalled 2.3 billion bushels. In the most recent crop year, shipment of wheat was less than 1.7 billion bushels, a reduction of more than 25 per cent. This represents a reduction in world trade of 600 million bushels of wheat.

It would be somewhat unusual if this tremendous decline that has taken place had not been reflected in the Canadian trading picture. I think if one wanted to be fair in one's assessment of the situation—which I am not sure some members of the opposition wish to be—one would have to bear this in mind.

Reference has been made to the fact that the Soviet Union has not taken up its commitments for Canadian wheat. If the Soviet Union had taken the 135 million bushels still due under the last contract, then Canadian sales would have been about 305 million or 310 million bushels, plus the 135 million bushels to the Soviet Union, for a total of 440 million bushels, quite a good trading year.

Mr. Stanfield: You cannot live on ifs.

Mr. Pepin: No. But the Leader of the Opposition could not have predicted either that this would happen, and had the Soviet Union fulfilled its commitment the market situation would have been different, and we would not have had today's debate.

The same situation obtains in relation to stocks held throughout the world. The drop in world trade in wheat has been matched by the increment in stocks held by the five major exporting countries. On June 30, 1969 stocks reached a record level of 2.4 billion bushels. At the conclusion of the Kennedy round negotiations in the spring of 1967, stocks amounted to only 1.4 billion bushels.

I am trying to indicate that the conditions when the I.G.A. was signed were quite different from present day circumstances. One of the purposes of the I.G.A. was to provide for necessary adjustments to newly arising circumstances, but unfortunately we did not have the kind of co-operation between I.G.A. exporters and importers needed to meet this objective. It is very difficult for countries to co-operate when there is a surplus of production.

The Leader of the Opposition seemed to accuse the Prime Minister of having promised that this government would sell 1.3 billion bushels of wheat in three years. As I said, we have sold 305 million bushels this year, so I do not think we will meet our objective for this year at least. However, things may improve in the next two. In 1968-69 had we sold 135 million bushels to the Soviet Union, as contemplated we would have totalled 445 million bushels, which if multiplied by three would reach our objective quite easily.

May I now move to the next part of my remarks. It has been implied that the government has not been as co-operative as it should have been in regard to the western wheat economy. The leader of the New Democratic party questioned the claim of the government that it gives all the support it can to the Wheat Board. He asked what we had done to support the I.G.A., what kind of credit facilities we had made available and what kind of food aid in terms of wheat the government had given.

Since time is short I should like very quickly to review the situation. I am not trying to say that what the government has done is enough; I am just indicating that it would be well if members of the opposition knew what had been done and is being done by the present government. I also want the Canadian public to know what has been done to protect and to assist the Canadian wheat economy.

First of all, we have made initial payments. As is well known, the Canadian government makes some initial payments every year, currently on the basis of $1.70 per bushel for Manitoba Northern No. 1, other grades being adjusted accordingly.

Mr. Korchinski: This price is getting a little shaky.

Mr. Pepin: Yes, it is indeed. I think it is well for members of the opposition to realize what a floor price really means. Allowing 15 cents a bushel for storage and operating costs, on the basis of a $1.70 a bushel initial payment, the Canadian Wheat Board must sell No. 1 wheat at an average price of $1.85 per bushel in order not to call for government support. Should there be further declines in prices throughout the world, the Canadian government would find itself committed to very substantial amounts of money. The floor price acts as a guarantee for the western farmer, a very important protection in times like these.

Secondly, there are the provisions of the Prairie Grain Advance Payments Act. I was told by people who accompanied the Prime Minister on his visit to western Canada that there are some who are still unsure of the effects of the measures the government has taken. As is well known, or should be well known to hon. members, in November 1968 this act was amended to provide for a doubling of the maximum amount of interest free advance available to producers, namely, an increase from $3,000 to $6,000. We have also taken action to enable producers to obtain interest free emergency cash advances for the purpose of drying wheat amounting to $600 per producer.

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order, please. I am sorry to interrupt the minister, but his time has expired.

[English]

Some hon. Members: Carry on.

Mr. Pepin: Mr. Speaker, to help offset the effects of reduced delivery opportunities, the government has directed that prairie grain farmers will be eligible for full interest free cash advances in the new crop year even though outstanding advances have not been fully repaid as at the end of this crop year. Last year these advances amounted to something like $156 million. As at the end of this year between $60 million and $65 million remains unpaid. Added to this $60 million to $65 million there are next year's cash advance payments, so one can conservatively estimate that about $250 million will be put into circulation in this way on which the government will pay interest. This amount represents quite a substantial contribution by the government of Canada to the economy of western Canada.

The leader of the New Democratic party also asked me about credit facilities. The wheat sale a couple of weeks ago to Peru was based on the new credit facilities the government is now offering, namely $6 million this year and $6 million next year. This arrangement facilitates sales of wheat in a number of developing countries where the Canadian government feels it should assist the marketing efforts of the board. Again, this is an important contribution. Again, this is something for which the Wheat Board is grateful to the government.

• (4:20 p.m.)

Very often questions are heard here: "Is the minister doing everything he can for the Wheat Board?" I do not know what more I could do to help the Wheat Board. If you consult the commissioners I am sure that is the report you will get

I will not go into the provisions of the Temporary Wheat Reserves Act but, Mr. Speaker, action taken under this legislation this year represents a further contribution of some $60 million from the Canadian government to the wheat economy. That is not peanuts. I am merely trying to put the record straight and demonstrate that something is being done. One would not believe it on listening today to the speeches of the leader of the New Democratic Party and the Leader of the Opposition.

I wish to draw attention to the increased foreign aid that has benefited western farmers. For instance, when the right hon. gentleman for Prince Albert (Mr. Diefenbaker) allowed acreage payments to western farmers, in 1958, 1960, and 1962, the total of those payments, represented $120 million. In that period, of four years running from 1958, to 1962, the amount of foreign aid given by the Canadian government represented $66 million. If you take the last four years you will see that the present government has provided wheat and flour aid worth $260 million to developing countries of the world. I repeat from 1964 to 1969 Canada has given $260 million in wheat aid. So I suggest that the leader of the N.D.P. was not well informed when he said that tremendous amounts of money could be put into these programs. A tremendous amount of money has gone into them, and that is why I was a bit sarcastic when I said he should know better than make the statements he was making.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Will the minister permit a question? Will he specify how much money was paid out in each of the crop years? Could he tell us how much has gone into foreign aid with respect to wheat and flour.

Mr. Pepin: I have the figures.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Has the minister the figures for the last three crop years? If so, do they include the figures for the present year?

Mr. Pepin: In part. Let us not be too political, Mr. Speaker, let us begin with the period 1963-64. The figure is $4.4 million. For 1964-65 it is $20 million; for 1965-66, $30 million; for 1966-67, $89 million; for 1967-68, $63 million and for 1968-69, $56 million. One of the main reasons our aid has been declining is that there is simply less need for us to give food to the world. It is well known that Pakistan and India are, at the moment, almost self-sufficient in wheat. Because of that our aid to that area has not been so necessary.

I listened to opposition spokesmen saying that this government is not doing well enough in the publicizing and marketing of our grains. They left the impression that the Wheat Board is in a Fuller brush type of operation. That is not so. Very few individuals in today's world are actually buying wheat, and I am sure that they are properly visited and attended by the Wheat Board. The leader of the N.D.P. left the impression that the Canadian government had not done its homework and that the Wheat Board was not publicizing Canadian wheat properly. That is not so. The Wheat Board has numbers of missions coming in and going out. As a matter of fact I ought to be in my office at this moment receiving a delegation from Tanzania and Uganda.

The Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce has a number of missions, both ingoing and outgoing, that publicize Canadian goods, and wheat in particular. The department has offices in some 70 odd countries. We have trade commissioners who devote an extensive amount of time looking for sales and trying to help the Canadian Wheat Board. On numerous occasions the Wheat Board has said to me how grateful it is for the help these trade commissioners are providing.

As I look around the world I ask myself, where is there a better system for the marketing of wheat? I do not know of one. Yet the opposition inveighs against our system of wheat marketing. If our sales are not as great as we wish, that is because circumstances are not what they were. A number of countries that were importers in the past have now become self-sufficient; and a number of those that were self-sufficient have now become exporters, Roumania, Bulgaria, and Kenya are examples in question.

The wheat glut was mentioned. The leader of the N.D.P. hoped that the present world situation will not continue to exist for ever. I was about to say, "Amen", but that might not be very Christian. I might only mention that the cycles he referred to are very real and that sooner or later there should be a greater need for Canadian wheat. In those circumstances we will meet the objectives the Prime Minister set for Canadian exports.

That is about all I had to say, Mr. Speaker. I shall be glad to answer questions. Of course the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Olson) will also take part in this debate.

Mr. Korchinski: Will the minister permit a question, Mr. Speaker? I wonder if the minister would indicate whether at the recent meeting in Washington the members of the European Economic Community, France in particular, agreed not to go to the Far East because of excessive freight rates and close competition? Did they not at the same time leave themselves this opening: that they could still compete at a lower level? Was that not why the United States dropped its price, and why Canada had to follow suit?

Mr. Pepin: Mr. Speaker, at the Washington meeting the E.E.C. was represented by an official and not by a politician. Consequently the official made a report to the E.E.C. After receiving that report the E.E.C. made an offer to the United States, the terms of which in part are those to which my hon. friend has referred, but probably not for the reason he gave. What the E.E.C. will do in view of the United States action of Friday afternoon I do not know. We shall find out in the coming hours.

• (4:30 p.m.)

[Translation]

Mr. Bernard Dumont (Frontenac): Mr. Speaker, we are dealing here today with what might be called the "deadly incoming tide of wheat". The problem is acute, as I have had the opportunity of noting on a visit out West with the committee on agriculture.

Indeed, the situation is serious, for the income of the farmer no longer suffices for him to pay for his equipment or enlarge his land, which, as the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) said, may be worth $100,000 or $125,000.

Last spring, I met farmers in Saskatchewan and Alberta who had to move their equipment outside in order to store the wheat they had produced in huge quantities in the last few years.

Now, if a farmer cannot sell all his wheat, even though his farm may be worth $100,000 or $125,000, he still needs his daily bread. Surely, under those circumstances, he should be guaranteed on honest sustenance.

A bill allowing farmers to get interest free loans would enable them to survive but it would not solve the problem, which is one of finding outlets and, in our present economic system, where can those outlets be found?

Half of mankind suffers from malnutrition. Farmers have to let wheat rot in the fields or in barns, as I said a while ago, leaving the economic system at the mercy of the chartered banks, with the co-operation of a government that will not base money upon production which if monetized, could be distributed to the underfed part of humanity.

Last Sunday, I heard a missionary back from Paraguay who said that in that country two million people suffer from malnutrition. Their average income is less than $200 per year and does not even enable them to eat once a day, while we in Canada live in the midst of plenty. I do not blame the government for that, but the system that the government promotes and maintains and on account of which such plenty which is left to rot and is not shared with those who would need it.

I explained that a while ago when congratulations were expresed for the Appollo journey. When, in a world of scientists, we can afford accomplishments of that kind, while living people cannot ship wheat where it should be sent, I say there is something wrong with the economic system and that we should most urgently change such a defective system so as to be able to distribute such abundance, for we insult God every day.

We of the Ralliement créditiste say let those millions represent the value of wheat. Let the Bank of Canada create money as quickly as wheat yields, namely 60 seeds out of one per year, and let that abundance be distributed according to the will of the superior being, who enabled us to see such magnificent things these last days, let wheat, a seed of which can yield 60 more per year, be shipped to everyone so that Canada may be considered tomorrow as the bread basket of the world.

Let us no longer allow the banks to withdraw the money, with the co-operation of the Bank of Canada, instead of letting them control the volume of money by making the farmers and the workers work and by charging them interest at 10 per cent. Rather than concentrating the wealth in the hands of a few people and impoverishing those who really do the work, like the western farmers for instance—and I know several who are very hard workers, who produce today just as they did in wartime, which made it possible for us to fight against these who wanted to impose dictature upon us, and to feed the armed forces—let us find today the necessary funds to ship this wheat to those who need it.

I say it now and I have said it before, that we would not object to some assistance being provided to less privileged countries if we were able once and for all to settle our problems which in fact are rather of an economic nature.

Means of transportation are not lacking. Farmers have reached the goal they had set for themselves and have increased their production as was required of them. In fact we did ask them, during a tour over there: What do you want? More than 1,000 people, who had come as far as 200 miles in order to meet the federal members in the hands of whom they had placed their hopes, asked us to settle those problems once and for all. They said: we want the West to be the granary of the world and we wish to feed all mankind.

Those people are so truly willing that I think that in addition to insulting God who has allowed such abundance, we are insulting those who have produced that wheat, who have toiled and laboured and who expected to be the providers of the human race. Let me remind them however—unless I need not do so—that they have heard that quite often, during the recent tour of the Prime Minister.

In 1962, I had the opportunity of talking of the problems of the Quebec farmers. I am very well acquainted with those problems since I have been myself a farmer, having inherited some land from one of my uncles.

We have also lost our family farm, in Quebec. If the government does not take the necessary steps, in the West, there will no longer be any family farm. The capitalists, who take advantage of the farmers, as they did in Quebec, are going to buy a lot of land and within the next 50 years, the government will say: we must impose socialism or communism; we must redistribute the land.

There appears to be many people of good will since, as we saw a while ago, all those who have asked for and requested this emergency debate will co-operate to solve this problem once for all.

It is perhaps necessary that people study especially a little further the story told us by the Bible of how they managed to preserve for seven years the wheat in the warehouses at the time of Joseph. They were able, with the backwards means at their disposal in those days, to foresee that there would perhaps be famines one day. Now there is famine today in some countries. As for us, we ask, as I said before, that production should exist at the same time as the making of money so as to convey this plenty to those who need it.

I know that the Prime Minister also explained that many farmers in the Maritimes are struggling with economic difficulties, like those in Quebec. We also talked of it, especially in relation to the dairy industry.

• (4:40 p.m.)

But those problems exist, in the Maritimes as well as in the West. People are always complaining. We have there an obvious proof that our economic system does not meet the needs and that it is high time in 1969, for intelligent men to work together and find an economic system which will enable a distribution of that wealth and which should be a blessing to the extent where people will cooperate. Let it not be said, as is too often heard, that it is a curse. Such a statement is made each time the problem is brought to the attention of the house.

As for us, who are taking part in the drafting of legislation, we must act so that those people will have from now on three meals daily. Legislators should be able to find an economic system which would allow a distribution of this wealth, because at the moment, we do not know where we are going.

As I said, if the right hon. Prime Minister asserts that farmers in the Maritime provinces and in Quebec are poorer, it means that there are problems to be solved. In fact, it means that Canada is going bankrupt and that agriculture which is a basic industry in any country—and which we should protect to feed the Canadian people—is in jeopardy. We should provide for a fair distribution of this affluence—money, wheat—to feed this portion of mankind which survives on one meal a day.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I say that we approve of this urgency debate. At the same time, I ask the people from the West to have consideration for the farmers in eastern Canada who also find themselves in great financial difficulties. We shall endeavor by working hand in hand to find not simply a band-aid solution but a means whereby work will be paid for and each farmer will get a sufficient income to meet reasonably the needs of his family.

When we visited western Canada, the farmers told us outright that if they were not to receive any additional grants, they would have to put up with what they called the depreciation of their farm implements, of their buildings and of their lands. However, I must remind them that in eastern Canada, in the Maritimes, farmers have been living with that for more than ten years—and this is why they gave up their lands—and that is the reason why the policy now in force in the West amounts to a fiasco. As far as I am concerned, I put the blame on our economic system. Let us work together so that we may change it very quickly.

[English]

Mr. G. W. Baldwin (Peace River): Mr. Speaker, I listened with delight to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce (Mr. Pepin) as I always do. He has this fatalistic approach which is summed up in the old song "Que Sera Sera"—"Whatever will be, will be". I think that is the approach the minister has taken in respect of this particular problem. I see nothing in what he has said today to change my opinion. I believe he made only one statement with which I was in wholesale agreement. He admitted that he really does not know what the answers are. I think he should have sat down at that point. That is a good statement. It sets out the government's position; they do not know.

Mr. Pepin: That is not what I said.

Mr. Baldwin: That was the impression I received and I heard it repeated twice. The minister went on to say that this is not exclusively a Canadian problem. Of course it is not. But to my knowledge no other government have with such great skill and ingenuity exaggerated the problem as have the Canadian government. In plain fact they have been inept in their handling of this particular problem.

Let us look at the situation. A year and a half ago one could see this problem, and variations and refinements of it, developing. The party opposite which now forms the government was very engrossed in the fascinating job of choosing a leader, and then in setting the groundwork for an election. I suggest that this government has lost for this country a year, or a year and a half in which it could well have been dedicating its attention to the problem which was apparent to so many of us. During the election campaign I and a number of my colleagues on this side of the house could see what was developing, and discussed the matter during the course of the election campaign.

I agree with the minister when he says that there also is less of a need now than there was in the past in certain areas of the world in which grain was purchased and used by the emerging countries. I feel, however, that although there is less of a need in certain countries there is still a need in the world as a whole, and will be for a great many years, for Canada to make available a greater portion of the agricultural production which it has been so skillful in developing.

I suggest that the government and its agencies have had hardening of the arteries in their approach to this problem, that there is a capacity in the world to absorb a greater degree of our surplus agricultural production, and that the government cannot excuse itself by saying in certain areas there is less need.

We have all known for some time that the development of new strains of wheat in other parts of the world, particularly Mexico, and the capability of some of the newly emerging countries to make use of fertilizer have eased the agricultural problems in those areas. But there are millions of people to which this situation does not apply. I believe this government stands indicted for its failure to recognize that fact, and it is useless for the minister to quote very selective statistics, as he did today, in an attempt to get rid of this impression. The government stands indicted for its failure to look after its traditional markets. The abilities of the agencies of government and of the government itself have not been adequate to do this.

Other members have said this in better words than I can use. My leader, and the hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands (Mr. Douglas), have indicated in very eloquent terms that this is the fact. I am sure other speakers will follow me.

Mr. Pepin: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the hon. member would permit a question. The hon. member says the government is guilty of not marketing aggressively enough. Marketing is the function of the Canadian Wheat Board. Is the accusation one against the Canadian Wheat Board? I think if that is what the hon. member has in mind he should say so.

Mr. Forrestall: As the hon. member for Crowfoot (Mr. Horner) would say, accept your own responsibility.

Mr. Baldwin: This government, led by a new leader, sought and secured election on its claimed ability to solve the problems with which we are faced. It is certainly not for me to indicate to the minister or his colleagues precisely whether or not their responsibility should be increased. But there is no doubt that a government such as this government which, as I said, sought and secured election on the basis of what it would undertake to do, has failed, and in doing so has failed to give leadership to all the agencies in this country which, together with the government, must initiate and carry out programs. What is being done is not adequate and it cannot find an escape in the words of the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau).

I will go so far as to say that there should be more vigour and more persistence on the part of all the agencies which come directly under the government, and which are ultimately responsible through the government to the people of Canada, in dealing with this problem. I think there is a need for inspiration and leadership. I am convinced that over the course of the last year and a half we have lost some of our traditional markets which we will have great difficulty in renewing in the days which lie ahead.

Finally I should like to deal with one aspect of the question; that is, how to get some of the people engaged in the agricultural industry, who in the past have been involved specifically in wheat production, into other areas of agricultural production so that there may be available for the areas which are most competent to grow wheat the ability and the right to do so?

• (4:50 p.m.)

I should like to give the house a case history involving the Peace River area. This is not the first time I have brought this matter before the house. As a result of asking oral and written questions, by attempting to obtain the unanimous consent of the house for discussion on previous occasions, and through personal communications with the minister involved I have attempted to point out that in the great, fertile northern part of Alberta there have been specific problems. This is an area which for many years grew some of the world's best wheat.

The name Herman Trelle was known in association with championship wheat at all the wheat expositions throughout the world. For years Herman Trelle and those who followed him obtained the world wheat title for this north country. But because it has become apparent to some of the people up there that they have to diversify the agricultural industry, this is no longer the case.

These people have not entirely stopped growing wheat, but they have found other ways of expressing a capacity to produce, and they have been diligent about doing so.

Some weeks ago I drew to the attention of the minister and his colleague, the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Olson), the fact that a meeting was to be held in the town of Falher in the Peace River country to discuss a very special problem. I read into the record of this house a copy of a telegram I received from the president of the chamber of commerce in which he invited the minister and his colleague to attend.

Mr. Stanfield: Where's the minister today?

Mr. Baldwin: The Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce (Mr. Pepin) is here, but I look in vain for the Minister of Agriculture who is no doubt exhausted by his efforts to attempt to shepherd the Prime Minister through parts of western Canada.

This invitation was extended personally to the minister. I did not seek to make a political issue of this because the problems of thousands of people were involved, but I did genuinely hope and desire that the minister and his colleague, the Minister of Agriculture, would attend. Falher is, generally speaking, the centre of a large French-speaking area in northern Alberta. Agriculturists from Quebec have come to this area and they are some of the best farmers we have in the Peace River country.

At the time of this particular meeting these people were deeply interested in a debate which was being carried on in this house on the official languages bill. They were particularly anxious that the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce as a minister from Quebec, and the Minister of Agriculture from their own province, would attend the meeting. In any event this invitation was extended.

I went up there and learned about problems of which I was aware, at least to a certain extent. These people presented me with details of a solution to a problem about which the government had done nothing. In the agricultural industry there are general problems and specific problems, which exist in various areas. In this regard the government could have acted. It is of some interest to note that the northern part of Alberta, and what is known as the B.C. block of the Peace River area, have more farmers on a unit basis in their populations than exist in any other part of this country.

This meeting was attended by a number of farmers, representatives of agricultural industries, farm unions, co-operatives, municipal organizations and elevator companies—all the people who are dependent and concerned in respect of their livelihood upon this agricultural industry in northern Alberta.

I discovered that in this Peace River area there were between five million and six million bushels of feed grain. This grain does not have to be exported or carried in box cars to Vancouver or Fort William where it is piled up waiting to be unloaded in order that the cars can be sent back. This is grain which could be sold, and there was a market for it in British Columbia and in parts of eastern Canada. It included barley, oats, and a lot of lower grades of wheat available for sale as feed, and it was wanted by the feed mills for agricultural purposes in the two regions I have mentioned.

It is also a fact that a great many of these farmers did not have a one bushel quota. The majority of them had two bushel quotas, although a few had a three bushel quota. This information was confirmed by representatives of elevator companies. Many of these farmers could never achieve a five bushel quota which I understand has been underwritten by the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce and the government.

These people were asking for the opportunity to have boxcars moved in, so that they could be filled with this grain and dispatched to those areas in Canada where they could be unloaded immediately and the grain utilized. Some of these farmers admitted to me that they had illegally hauled grain in their trucks, or by custom trucking, a distance of 100 to 125 miles to elevators at Dawson Creek in British Columbia. Some of them were turned back and one or two were prosecuted. Uultimately the police were alerted, and I understand this practice has now stopped. This was grain needed by buyers of feed grain in Dawson Creek, who had urged these people to bring it over.

I was told by certain farmers that they had gone to Edmonton in a desparate effort to find markets for their feed grain, and that this grain could be sold. When these potential buyers were told that the grain was in Peace River they in turn informed the farmers that when they obtained an undertaking for the supply of boxcars they would buy the grain.

As I have said, this whole problem involves some five million to six million bushels of grain, the sales of which would have brought in revenue to the extent of $4 million or $5 million. These people would not need some of the government's guarantee, about which the minister has told us. This is the sad story of these people in the northern part of Alberta. It represents the unwillingness of the government to acknowledge the problem, and the failure of the government at the appropriate time to appoint, as it could have done, people to expedite the marketing and transportation of this grain. Had this government asked this house for the authority to do so, I am sure it would have obtained it. This is a sad story of the ineptitude and the failure of this government to recognize a problem which so seriously affects all the people of western Canada, and particularly those people of Peace River for whom I am trying to make this case.

• (5:00 p.m.)

This failure is recognized. I have in my hands a recent editorial in the Winnipeg Free Press, a paper which usually supports the government but which is objective when it comes to the recognition of the problems of agricultural Canada. This editorial says in part:

> The federal task force on agriculture, in a report in March, was strongly critical of policies of both the government and the Canadian Wheat Board which had put undue emphasis on the production of wheat. It found that the temporary Wheat Reserves Act which provided assistance to farmers with farm stored wheat, "subsidizes producers' incomes after they have produced in excess of market demands, and encourages them to continue producing." It held that the Prairie Grain Advance Payments Act was stacked in favour of the production of wheat: it pays a higher price per bushel on wheat than on oats and barley. It held that the Canadian Wheat Board had been traditionally prejudiced against feed grains and in favour of milling wheat—

Further, on, in dealing with probable solutions—I come back to the question which the minister slid over regarding one of the proposals which emanated from this party, and from other opposition parties, on the matter of acreage payments—it reads as follows:

> Acreage payments were three times used by the Diefenbaker government to cushion farmers over bad years, though the payments then were $1 an acre with a maximum of $200 per farmer. It is the quickest way of getting cash—which is the immediate need—into farmers' hands.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I apologize to the hon. member but his time has expired. He may continue with the unanimous agreement of the house.

Some hon. Members: Carry on.

Mr. Baldwin: I have one more sentence, Mr. Speaker. Therefore I say that there are solutions, and that we are not prepared to forget the defects and the deficiencies of the government over the last year and a half. I suggest that they seek out the ways and means which can be utilized to bring the farmers of western Canada over the most difficult of periods, and if they do so I assure you, Mr. Speaker, that they will find ample support from this side of the house.

Mr. E. B. Osler (Winnipeg South Centre): Mr. Speaker, first of all I should apologize for speaking on agriculture as in a way I am a city person whose only real experience with agriculture has been working on ranches in Alberta in my youth, which does not qualify me to speak on present day wheat problems because, first, I was not on a wheat farm, and second, my youth was long enough ago that the knowledge I gained then is almost irrelevant today.

Mr. Baldwin: Don't you worry, the Prime Minister speaks about them.

Mr. Pepin: And so do you.

Mr. Osler: But I wanted to speak in this debate, and I think I know a little about the problem. I felt therefore that I must get up and speak; especially when I find that the much-publicized western rump of the conservative party is so poorly represented in the debate this afternoon, and someone must give a western point of view.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Osler: I think that we have all had a very instructive speech from the hon. member for Peace River (Mr. Baldwin). I just hope that there will be more hon. members who will express their thoughts because though they have been vocal at other times, this is the time for them to be constructively so.

Mr. Aiken: They will be. Just wait, they are here today.

Mr. Osler: I suppose they will speak when their roster system allows them to do so.

An hon. Member: Don't be jealous just because you cannot work one out.

Mr. Osler: However, speaking seriously, I do not think anybody, anywhere would try to say that there is not a large problem. Every man and his dog have an opinion about how they can help the farmer, but most of their solutions are so costly, and would be so ruinous to the country as a whole that not much of the country would be left if they were adopted.

However, there is a very bad world wide problem in agriculture and I suppose that no matter what government were in power the problem would exist. There are at least four countries that share the problem with Canada. As the minister pointed out, it is not a uniquely Canadian problem. Price structures have been breaking down throughout the world, and Canadian farmers cannot earn a decent return on the capital that is involved. A little while ago a letter came to my hands which I find rather typical. It is from a man in Manitoba who runs a fairly good sized operation, and who wrote as follows:

> At the moment our current operating debt is in the neighbourhood of $19,000 acquired over the past year and a half. Our interest charges this year have been in excess of $5,000 and farming over the past years has not been able to generate that kind of money—

He is operating 820 acres. He has about a $90,000 investment, and he is considered a model farmer in his area. He has 12,000 bushels of wheat, plus a lot of other crops, but he has no cash and he cannot meet his commitments. This is like any other industry that is going through a long-term problem to which long-term solutions must be applied. The traditional export markets have evaporated. The types of wheat in demand in the world have changed. To a large extent we are growing types of wheat that are no longer needed because milling techniques have changed. Inflation has driven up operating costs. According to an article in Maclean's magazine, which states the obvious but in a rather dramatic way, farm costs have been rising consistently. It reads:

> By 1967, according to the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, they were 68 per cent higher than in 1949, yet farm income was up only 9.7 per cent in the same period. On the basis of 1949 dollars, income was down by 33.1 per cent.

There is another thing which I do not think any government should try to sidestep, that is that governments in the immediate past encouraged farmers to grow everything that they could grow and told them that they could sell it. But if you look at the record, again broadly speaking, whether under the former Conservative régime or under this régime, large quantities of wheat have only been sold effectively when there has been trouble; and it is a poor type of practice in any business if you can only succeed when someone else comes a-cropper.

If you have a famine in Russia, in China or somewhere else, then the major wheat producers can unload their surpluses; otherwise they cannot. What I am trying to suggest is that we hear a lot about short-term solutions, but this government would be less than honest with people if it did not say the sort of thing the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) has been saying, and it would be less than conscientious if it did not go for long-term solutions.

There is no use being sentimental at the expense of the poor guy who is out on the farm and saying that we have always produced all the wheat in the world and we can always sell it in the long term, and that sooner or later it will work out; let the boys sit on their wheat for a few years and let the people of Canada carry them for a few years because one of these days the wheat will be sold. I think that is being romantic at someone else's expense. It really is time that the fundamental problem was faced.

There are several solutions to which reference is made all the time. People want two-price wheat. I do not think you can ask the people in the rest of Canada to pay extra for their bread on a long-term basis so as to keep wheat producers producing all the wheat they want, especially at a time when the trend in tariffs is down in eastern Canada and in the central markets of the world.

• (5:10 p.m.)

We cannot have it both ways. If we encourage a tariff-protected industry in western Canada—which we have never had to this date—at the same time as we discourage tariffs in the east, we are being more schizophrenic than anybody would expect even a democratic government to be. I am all for democratic government, but we are sometimes accused of trying to buy people with their own money.

The same argument applies to acreage payments on a long-term basis. Perhaps a case can be made for acreage payments to enable people to live through an emergency, if they are tied in with a policy which encourages farmers to change from wheat to other types of production. However, I believe that long-term acreage payments for the sake of subsidizing a farmer are a dishonest approach to the solution that is required.

Rhetoric such as we have heard here all winter will not help much; neither will misquotes or partial misquotes of the Prime Minister's speeches when he goes west and makes famous statements such as, "I am not going to sell your wheat." I was there, know what he said and what he meant when he said it. If I had been a little less new at the game I would have gone right back and given the rest of his speech at every opportunity, so the message would have been conveyed loud and clear, rather than its being sullied and misquoted for several weeks.

To illustrate that the present government is not completely ignorant of the situation and completely misunderstands it, I should like to quote from a lead editorial which appeared in the Financial Times this week, dealing with problems in the west. The editorial reads in part:

> To say that there is no chance of a general and unselective payment being made to wheat farmers is to face the facts of government economics in this day and age.

This is what we have heard so much talk about: general, unselective payments with no long-term objectives in mind. I believe this type of program would do a disservice to the Canadian farmer in particular and the country as a whole. I hope the government will continue to have enough guts not to advocate such programs, but will move forward with imaginative, long-term policies that do not involve unselective payments generally.

With regard to general subsidies, the New Democratic party seem to want people to be subsidized for this, that and the other thing when the mood of the country is to try to get away from subsidies. A short time ago the Winnipeg Tribune, commented editorially on the difficulties experienced in Europe, where in the 1967-68 season because of subsidies 30,000 tons of Italian oranges were destroyed. The article continues:

> This year grapes and apples have joined the waste in rivers and garbage dumps. In France and Belgium thousands of tons of potatoes, peaches, pears, cauliflowers and fish have been destroyed while the cost of living for city people has grown at an ever faster rate. The high cost of food is a major factor.

This situation developed because of the policy of subsidization that all the common market countries have been following; so let us not join our N.D.P. friends in following that Pied Piper very far. As I said before, Mr. Speaker, I am not an expert on these matters, but I believe that short-term solutions to meet specific problems such as we have can be devised. In the long run these would not hurt the country as a whole. Short-term aid is already given for drying wheat, and there are advances on unsold and undelivered grain. Further advances will be made next year, as the Prime Minister has said, amounting to millions of dollars. It is all very well to say that these advances are purely loans. They are cash infusions which, if hon. members opposite are correct, should be enough in themselves to help the situation because their purpose is to tide people over to the time when we shall again be selling unlimited quantities of wheat to Russia.

But over and above these, there should perhaps be some form of cash subsidy for a stated length of time to help the farming industry to meet specific, long-term objectives. These objectives might be defined as diversification, rationalization of farm size and efficiency and replacement of some farm employment by industry, using government "seed" money through the Department of Regional Economic Expansion, with the co-operation of provincial governments. Another solution would be the encouragement of food banks by the United Nations or other international agencies. These are long-term objectives, and any further short-term aid should be tied in with them.

I apologize again for not being an expert on these matters. We have heard a great deal in the last few months about the great government of Manitoba that was recently defeated at the polls, what a terrific job they were doing and what a lousy job everybody else was doing. We have been told how terribly difficult it was to get Ottawa to pay any attention to them. According to a brief presented to the Manitoba legislature by the Meat Packers Council of Canada last May, within the province of Manitoba itself lies the solution to at least part of its agricultural problem; yet the province did precisely nothing about it.

This is why it is very important to take a long-term view of these problems and to achieve co-operation between the federal and provincial governments in working out policies which are of lasting benefit, rather than shouting names at each other. Hog production in Manitoba has seriously declined, as has cattle production. They are not producing nearly as many cattle and hogs as they should be. The province has the capacity to improve their situation, with federal government help, presumably, if they ask for it and if they have plans that are worth considering and can be used as a basis for co-operation.

Iowa produces 22 million hogs a year. Manitoba, which has about the same population as Iowa and is about the same area, produces only 750,000. North America is a huge meat market and there is no reason for Manitoba producing so few hogs. The Manitoba meat industry is working to only about 65 per cent capacity, mainly for two reasons. The first is that Manitoba farmers are not producing enough cattle and hogs, and there is not within their shipping area a market of sufficient size for the packing houses. Second, they are not producing cattle or hogs of the quality required.

Many farmers in Manitoba are primarily concerned with dairy products and sell "on the side" the cattle they do not need. There are exceptions, of course, but statistically this is true. Somebody will have to take steps to upgrade the industry in that province and obtain a sizeable proportion of the available market. Manitoba has less than one per cent of the North American hog market, and approximately one per cent of the cattle market. This is one reason for the decline in the industry. From the point of view of quality, 43 per cent of hogs produced in Canada are graded A; in Manitoba only 35 per cent are graded A. The same is true of meat: 56 per cent of cattle slaughtered in Canada are graded as red or blue beef; in Manitoba the figure is 47 per cent.

• (5:20 p.m.)

Manitoba's average is considerably below the national average, both in quality and quantity. Instead of bleating about wheat production and inability to sell, some federal action should be taken in co-operation with the provincial government to improve grades and achieve 100 per cent production capacity. If necessary, more plants should be built to reach a future 100 per cent capacity. The market potential is well-nigh unlimited, but quality must be improved and the product merchandised, the same as with other commodities. But as I say, there must be co-operation between the federal and provincial governments toward these ends.

If this immediate past history of the late provincial government of Manitoba means anything at all, it is indicative of a lot of time-wasting and wringing of hands instead of tackling problems that exist. I guess the late government has now received its just deserts.

I do not have any easy solutions. As I say, even the four major wheat producing countries of the world cannot seem to find solutions. However, I do think that short-term cash infusions are required, and I hope such infusions will be increased. We also need long-term, well thought out plans. Even if we have to listen to the opposition criticise our "inaction" for another six months we would do better to stick to sound principles and prepare some long-term plans to assist the west to return to what it should be, a farming community though not necessarily a predominantly wheat farming one. If we have to take another few million acres out of wheat production, this is not going to be a long-term tragedy. Let us not be romantic about the fact that because we have always grown millions of bushels of wheat we will have to continue to do so, even though the poor farmer has absolutely no way of making an economic living therefrom.

[Mr. Osler.]

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, this debate is but one of a number held this session on agriculture, particularly on agricultural problems in western Canada. Many of the arguments and statements that have been put forward today are a repetition of the arguments addressed since last September. A number of times Your Honour has been requested to grant an emergency debate, and in your wisdom on most occasions Your Honour has ruled it out because the matter had already been brought up repeatedly. I trust Your Honour will understand that we of the opposition have felt obligated, as one of our responsibilities, to keep raising the question, no matter how inconvenient it may be or how untimely or uncomfortable for people in some places. This is an issue that affects the entire nation. It is not narrowly confined to just one or two provinces; all of Canada is affected.

I was hoping that the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce (Mr. Pepin) would have some announcement to make about new government initiatives to deal with Canada's agricultural problems, particularly in the area of immediate concern today, western Canadian cereal grains and world markets. The minister spoke of it being an international problem, and of course it is. He has told us nothing that we did not already know.

I submit that the minister is incapable of dealing with the problem or of taking new initiatives to find solutions. I say this because when the minister goes to Washington or to Winnipeg he is handcuffed by the government of Canada's lack of policy. In this way the Canadian Wheat Board as well as the minister have been continually handcuffed for the past year. Until the government of this country takes new initiatives and introduces new policies to enable the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce and the Canadian Wheat Board to do the kind of job of which they are capable, there will be no quick solution or improvement to the present situation.

It is all very well for the minister and for the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) to talk about an objective of 1,300 million bushels of wheat sales in three years, or whatever the figure is. It is, of course, good to have objectives, but unless the government has the policies to achieve such objectives, or to give some reasonable chance of achieving them, they are all to no avail.

The Prime Minister's recent trip to western Canada, uncomfortable although it may have been for him, is the most recent example of the kind of callous disregard there is for the wheat farmers, as well as an illustration of the government's complete failure to understand the size of the problem, let alone its immediacy. The remarks of the hon. member for Winnipeg South Centre (Mr. Osler) illustrated this in a first class manner. The hon. member does not comprehend the size of the problem, let alone its immediacy. Only when the government declares that agriculture is a primary industry that is basic to the health and wealth of the entire Canadian economy, and takes action accordingly, will some short-term and long-term policies be forthcoming.

Mr. Osler: Mr. Speaker, a question of privilege.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. member for Winnipeg South Centre on a question of privilege.

Mr. Osler: Mr. Speaker, it did not seem to me that I had indicated that I had no realization that agriculture was a major industry. What I was trying to express, though it may have been difficult for some members to comprehend my remarks, perhaps because I spoke badly or perhaps because of a natural disadvantage, was that agriculture was a major industry, one that had to be given serious consideration. I said that perhaps the emphasis within the industry should be redirected. I was not advocating that agriculture be neglected.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. member is hardly raising a question of privilege. I think the hon. member for Regina-Lake Centre (Mr. Benjamin) should be allowed to continue his remarks.

Mr. Benjamin: This is a fresh illustration that the hon. member for Winnipeg South Centre, like a lot of his colleagues, does not understand the totality of the problem. The hon. member talked about diversification and referred to hogs and cattle. The farmers have been hearing this kind of talk from Liberals for the last 25 years. One has only to go back to the 1950's when the plea was for diversification. The farmers diversified their operations, and what happened to hog and cattle prices? We were up to our eyes in hogs. We were told that too many hogs were being raised.

The hon. gentleman expects the farmers to diversify their operations and compete with corporate enterprises. I would ask the hon. member if he is prepared to support measures to prohibit corporate enterprise operating farms? If he is, then I will believe that he does understand the problems of the farming industry. We are not talking about a private corporation and its board of directors. We are talking about farmers who work on the land, about people, not corporations. This is what the government, the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce and the hon. member for Winnipeg South Centre still do not understand.

During his trip out west last week the Prime Minister made reference to income protection and mentioned a number of measures that are supposed to ensure income protection. First of all, the Prime Minister felt somewhat insulted by some of the signs and yelling at some of the meetings held in Saskatchewan. The Prime Minister may find things difficult when he arrives at a place where nobody loves him, but I suggest he will become increasingly aware of this sort of thing unless he quits shrugging his shoulders and starts rubbing his shoulders with the problems confronting Canada.

I may say that the kind of demonstration carried on last week by the farmers of western Canada is unusual and extremely rare. Demonstrating is not something that they are prone to do, unlike some people in large urban centres. The farmers are just not built that way. They never have been. If ever there was a sign of outrage, of their extreme disgust and despair, then this was it. The prairie farmers do not make a habit of that kind of demonstration. But for years they have been back and forth to Ottawa with resolutions, briefs and agricultural delegations. At times, when they have become desperate, they have elected a few Liberals, but to no effect. All the time they have received the run around. The government which has refused to face facts, has victimized them. This government has not taken into account the fact that the Canadian agricultural community is basic to the nation's welfare and that western problems cannot be treated as separate problems. The Prime Minister has talked about income protection, the Farm Improvement Loans Act and the Farm Credit Corporation. Well, farmers do not need more loans. They have debts enough already. And what did the amendments to farm legislation that the Prime Minister spoke about accomplish? In the end, the result of those measures was to raise the interest rates that farmers have to pay from 5 to 7¾ per cent.

• (5:30 p.m.)

Mention has been made of cash advances. It seems that all those on the government side have forgotten these must be paid back. The more you advance to a farmer, the more he must pay back. Opposition parties share the government's view that cash advances are necessary. The opposition spent years trying to persuade Liberals to implement those advances, and only after they were defeated in the late 1950's did they become converts to the idea. Although these advances are interest free, they must nevertheless be paid back. The farmer, in fact has not had income protection but he, in common with his fellow Canadians, has been victimized by parasitic, high interest rates. The farmer has been victimized also by the private grain trade, and I hope the hon. member for Winnipeg South Centre (Mr. Osler) will agree with me, I submit that this private trade in grain should be subject to controls. These traders have been parasites on the backs of the Canadian agricultural community for too many years.

The Prime Minister talks about income protection at a time when grain prices are low and about to go lower. Bearing these factors in mind, our party proposed a cash deficiency payment program of, say, 20 cents per bushel to be based on deliveries in the 1967-68 crop year, for a maximum of $2,000 in each case. What was the government's response to that? Nothing. It has made no response. If our suggestion is no good let the government explain why it thinks so. Over two dozen proposals have been made by opposition spokesmen, and we are still waiting for the government's reaction to them.

The Prime Minister asks how he can give "X" million dollars to the farmers when he must also consider fishermen and pensioners. He asks, how will he explain it to these other elements, in the population. We are not asking him to explain anything to the farmers, fishermen, pensioners or the unemployed. We want him to explain why he can do nothing for farmers, fishermen, pensioners or the unemployed at a time when his Minister of Finance (Mr. Benson) will be sitting on his fat surplus of $250 million for this fiscal year. The Prime Minister says nothing about bank profits or outrageously increased corporate profits. Why do the Prime Minister, the Minister of Finance and all the other mouthpieces on the government side, talk about fighting inflation and then hurt the people who are not causing inflation. Farmers who have no cash cannot contribute to inflation. Fishermen, pensioners and the unemployed are not guilty of contributing to inflation, on the other hand, all the so-called bastions of private enterprise that contribute to inflation are aided and abetted by this incompetent government.

May I make a few suggestions to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce? To implement them he will need the authority of the government, because neither he nor the Wheat Board can do very much unless the government changes its policies substantially. I hope the minister will go to the cabinet and say, "Let's give these suggestions a try." I hope he goes to caucus and says, "These are the measures you must adopt; if you do not go along with me, get yourself a new boy." If he does that, he will go down in our history as the minister who struck a blow for our farmers.

I suggest that the minister ought to go to the Prime Minister and his colleagues in cabinet and say that the authority of the Canadian Wheat Board must be tremendously extended, and that we must provide it with finances that will enable it to undertake the export of our wheat in competition with other countries. If necessary, let us wage an export war. Countries that break their agreements have victimized us. Canada did not break those agreements. If Australia wants to play games, we too can play. We can teach them a lesson or two. I say to the minister that it is unfair and immoral to leave Canadian farmers alone to compete with the treasuries of the United States and other countries. If the agricultural community of this country is left in that plight, it will be destroyed. That is quite right, and that is why I say that the Canadian Wheat Board needs financial resources to do the kind of job that must be done. If in order to sell wheat we have to cut our price to $1 a bushel, let us do so—but not at the expense of the farmer. Let us not call on our farmers to pay the whole shot. Is it not socially desirable that we maintain in Canada maximum number of economic farm units? I am sick and tired of hearing vague hints from the government side that we should have fewer farmers. Where are the farmers we take off the farm to go, Mr. Speaker?

Instead of supporting ex-farmers in metropolitan centres, is it not cheaper to help them maintain themselves on their farms?

Another suggestion is this. Could the government not enter into barter arrangements? Has the government considered seriously accepting as part payment for grain sold abroad, the currency of the country to which the grain has been sold? We could leave the currency in that country and invest it in whatever way would be best. For instance, has the minister considered the quantity of fertilizer that India needs? Would it not be a good idea to accept rupees—or the appropriate currency—in part payment for grains and use that money to build a fertilizer plant, a hospital, or whatever else is needed? Have Wheat Board officials considered these barter arrangements? Have these suggestions with respect to foreign currency been brought to their attention? Has the minister thought of authorizing the Wheat Board to wage a wheat war to meet foreign competition? If that is what our foreign competitors want, they will get it. But, surely, Mr. Speaker, this government does not expect our farmers to carry the burden of that war. Our farmers need to be backed up by the resources of the whole nation. The set back they received when the bottom dropped out of the I.G.A. was bad enough.

But it seems that the government and this country's transport industry are incapable of organizing the movement of grain to ensure even a five-bushel quota by the end of July. I may add that this five-bushel quota is the lowest in our history. May I draw to the attention of the house an instance when the minister, unknowingly misled the house? On July 3, in reply to a question raised in this house, the minister read a telegram from the Chief Commissioner of the Wheat Board, as reported at page 10784 of Hansard. I do not think I will be taking this statement out of context if I quote from the middle of the paragraph. It had to do with the grain movement. The telegram read in part:

• (5:40 p.m.)

Would further advise that both railways currently have a very substantial number of cars under load to lakehead and Pacific coast—

This is true.

—and are spotting cars for additional loads each week to the full unload capacity of the terminals.

On July 1, Mr. Speaker, the President of the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool issued one of the strongest statements I have ever seen from a president of that organization. He reported 10 million bushels in their terminals at the lakehead. He reported that, in order to handle their expected export or unload shipments into ships, plus filling that space, their grain company would require 11,000 box cars of grain. They would require a minimum of 440 cars a day to unload. But at that time they were unloading exactly half that number, yet the Commissioner of the Wheat Board states in his telegram that the terminals were being supplied with cars to their maximum unload capacity. That was not true then, Mr. Speaker, and is not true now.

The minister knows what kind of railway equipment is required to have a grain movement that will complete the delivery of the five-bushel quota. We all know the number of cars required. What we want to know is, are they being supplied? A few days ago, in a telephone conversation with people in the grain trade and the transportation business, we were talking about the unload capacity of the terminals. At the lakehead, on July 9, there were 3,600 carloads of grain, give or take 50 or 100. I cannot vouch for the exact figure, but that is very close. There were 3,600 carloads of grain waiting to be unloaded. Of that number, only 414 were for the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool terminals. The Saskatchewan Pool terminals, going full blast six days a week, three shifts a day, can unload over 600 cars a day. In order to fill up the space they have to handle their outgoing shipments, as well as to properly utilize a maximum staff, on overtime, going six days a week, they would require 1,200 cars.

The same situation occurred at Vancouver. One day this month they ran out of cars to unload. They worked half a day and sent the workers home. This kind of record for the grain movement indicates incompetence on the part of the government and the railroads, Mr. Speaker; there is no other way to describe it.

While half the shipping points in the three prairie provinces are all on three or four-bushel quotas, the minister is still too willing and ready to accept the assurances of the railroads that they are co-operating. Of course, they have a lot of cars for the grain movement. What else is new? I have some questions which I wish to address to the minister. I hope the minister will read a statement on motions tomorrow or Wednesday at the latest. As of now, what number of railway cars are in the grain movement? What number are required to complete the delivery of the five-bushel quota? I am sure that, as of now, this figure is somewhere between 20,000 and 25,000 cars. The minister can get the exact figure.

What number of cars, additional to those now in the grain movement, are required from the railways between now and July 31 to complete delivery of the five-bushel quota? This could do wonders for the cash income position of the farmers. What additional number have already been supplied, compared to the number in the grain movement on July 1?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. I regret to interrupt the hon. member, but his time has expired. Unless there is unanimous consent—

Some hon. Members: Carry on.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Is it agreed?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Benjamin: What action have the government and the Canadian Wheat Board taken to ensure that the terminal facilities of the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool at both the lakehead and Vancouver are, in fact, being utilized to full unload capacity? Will the minister advise whether the grain companies have been authorized to buy grain after July 31? If not, will they be?

Will the minister advise if the crop year will be extended? Will the government authorize the Canadian Wheat Board to complete the purchase of a five bushel quota from farmers? They can deliver it any time in August, September, or whenever required. Will the minister discuss with the Canadian Wheat Board and the Board of Grain Commissioners the possibility of allowing offsite and offtrack storage, including the piling of wheat on the ground? Will the minister assure the Canadian Wheat Board that if there are any losses incurred as a result of this kind of handling, the tab will be picked up by the government of Canada? In that way, the minister will get the five-bushel quota delivered.

Will the minister discuss with the railways the possibility of using different kinds of railway equipment? I made a trip to the United States, through North Dakota, Minnesota and Wisconsin, a few weeks ago. I stopped in a number of rural communities to inspect their country elevators. They are not only using box cars, they are using gondola cars. At one point they had even boarded up stock cars, filling them with grain or corn. At present there are several hundred gondola cars, which hold almost 2,000 bushels of grain each, and which are normally used for hauling of potash, sitting idle in gravel pits and side tracks. Will the minister ask the railways to use their imagination in order to turn this and other kinds of equipment into grain moving equipment?

The hon. member for Peace River (Mr. Baldwin) mentioned the situation in Peace River. You can go anywhere in the prairie provinces and see the same thing. We have found a consistent pattern of lack of co-operation by the railways, lack of imagination by the government, refusal by the government to authorize the Wheat Board to take extraordinary measures, because they know how to do the job. What they need from the government is authority and money.

I wish to repeat to the minister one of my earlier sentences. Surely, the minister will agree it is socially desirable to have the maximum number of people possible on the land on economic units. We do not want to hear this nonsense about less farmers. We need a government which will put the resources of the entire nation behind an industry that is basic to our whole economy. The ramifications of dropping farm income will hit the constituency of every single member in this house. Any member who does not believe that is under a great disillusion.

The ramifications of the drop in farm income over the past year and succeeding year are being felt by the farm implement industry, automobile industry, steel industry, transportation industry, fertilizer industry, building industry and lumber industry. Even the fishing industry will suffer. This is not proper. This is not civilized. It is not even good business. That phrase should appeal to hon. members across the way.

A basic industry should not be in this kind of financial condition. All we are asking the government to do is to come up with proposals, both short and long-term. We may criticize some, but we will undoubtedly support some. We may make alternative suggestions. We in this party, as well as farm organizations, have pleaded with the minister. The minister has yet to mention the latest submission from the Canadian Federation of Agriculture. Surely, they must have some knowledge of the subject. Proposals have been made to the minister week after week and month after month by farmers' unions, but we have yet to have any definite response from the government as to whether they will accept any of these proposals.

If the government is not going to accept the proposals what are they going to do on their own initiative? After the experience of the Prime Minister last week, I hope the government will now wake up and bring about some positive action, if not on what the opposition parties have mentioned then on the proposals of the people engaged in the farm industry, or their own, if they have any. We have waited, and we do not want to wait much longer.

Mr. Pepin: May I be allowed to say, Mr. Speaker, that a lot of the things the member mentioned are already being done. Potash cars are being used and cars are being rented from the United States. Also, with respect to the Wheat Board using money available for temporary wheat storage. I would not like to leave the impression that what the hon. member suggests is not already, in part at least, being done.

• (5:50 p.m.)

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. The minister has already taken part in the debate.

[English]

Mr. D. R. Gundlock (Lethbridge): I should like to say at once, Mr. Speaker, that I notice the absence of the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Olson) and the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) from this most important debate. There may be some slight excuse for the Prime Minister because he has been looking into this matter personally. The Minister of Agriculture cannot be excused. I have before me an extract from Throop's Scrapbook at page 112. The heading is Political Humour. Mr. R. B. Hanson having interrupted Mr. C. G. Power, Mr. Power is reported to have said:

> The honourable member had better not talk so much or they will make him a minister and keep him quieter.

That is what I think about the Minister of Agriculture. He should be here. This is an agricultural matter. The Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce (Mr. Pepin) should be complimented in one sense, and I shall have more to say about that later. The hon. member for Winnipeg South Centre (Mr. Osler) dealt particularly with subsidies as a western member. What he said was new to me and I come from a little farther west than he does. I compliment the Prime Minister on his visit because he conceded there was a problem in western Canada relating directly to the wheat situation. This is what we are talking about.

Mr. Barnett: It took him a long time to find out.

Mr. Gundlock: Yes, as my hon. friend says, it took him a long time to find out. It certainly did, but at least he came to that opinion. He found out there was a problem. During his visit he said there would be no handouts. I take it that that means subsidies. That is what my hon. friend from Winnipeg South Centre said.

I should like to refer to the 1968-69 estimates in respect of subsidies paid by the Canadian government. Quoting the Minister of Finance (Mr. Benson) page 3474 of Hansard, the 1968-69 subsidies amount to $415 million. Running down the page one can see that the quality premium on high grade hogs and lamb carcasses amounted to $110 million. Freight assistance on western feed grain totalled $21 million. The payment under the Emergency Gold Mining Assistance Act was $15 million. Payments in connection with the movement of coal were $35 million. The carrying cost of temporary wheat reserves totalled $29 million. Subventions in respect of eastern coal were $2 million. Payments to the railway companies under the Maritime Freight Rates Act were $14 million. Payments to the railways under the provisions of the National Transportation Act were $127 million. Steamship subventions for coastal services amounted to $12 million. The trading loss on the agricultural products account and the agricultural stabilization account were $113 million. Other subsidies amounted to $11 million. The only one I can see here which would appear to relate directly to what we are talking about, western wheat, is the freight subsidy on western feed grain. In reality, this subsidy helps other parts of the country as well.

My arithmetic, as well as my English, are not too good, but according to my arithmetic the goverment is paying $386 million in subsidies today. So I would ask the hon member, through you, Mr. Speaker, what is all the talk about helping the western grain farmers by way of subsidies. I have not even mentioned the $80 million given away to the automobile industry. I do not know whether it is permissible to mention that in this debate, but it might be. I complimented the Prime Minister for having found a problem in the west. Some people on his side of the house do not agree.

He says the problem arises because there is overproduction of wheat and the farmers should not grow so much. I have been here for some time and was here when the Liberal party was in opposition. At that time they were saying the same thing. They ridiculed a minister of that government who said, "Grow more; we will sell it". Today, they are saying, "Do not grow it; we cannot sell it". There is a point here. Wheat boards and brokers cannot sell to governments, but governments can sell to governments. I should like to say more about this later in my speech. May I call it six o'clock, Mr. Speaker.

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): It being six o'clock, I do now leave the chair.

[English]

At six o'clock, the house took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The house resumed at 8 p.m.

Mr. Gundlock: Just before I called it six o'clock I referred to the absence of the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Olson). I see he is present now, so perhaps I should repeat what I said. Earlier I complimented the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) on his visit to the west, as a result of which he found there was a problem there. I hope you will forgive me for the time I am taking at this moment in reference to the Minister of Agriculture Mr. Speaker, who is my neighbour. Perhaps I could call him my friend. He may want to hear what I had to say earlier, in order that he might reply.

I recall the time when the minister had a great deal to say about the government, and I recall the time when he joined that government. In looking through some scrapbooks today I was reminded a little bit of the Minister of Agriculture. I have in mind particularly Throop's scrapbook at page 112. Mr. R. B. Hanson having interrupted Mr. C. G. Power, Mr. Power is reported as having said:

> The hon. member had better not talk so much or they will make him a minister and keep him quieter.

I think that is what has happened to our Minister of Agriculture.

I note that the Prime Minister is not in is seat at this particular moment. How in the name of heaven can we resolve an important debate like this when the house is adjourned for a specific purpose and the ministers responsible are not here? This whole matter also involves the rule question, but perhaps we should go into that on another day.

When the Prime Minister was out west he expressed the conclusion that there would be no handouts to people with assets of $100,000. I think the press was very kind to the Prime Minister. At one time he said they were not, but I think on his recent visit both writers and broadcasters were reasonable. In spite of the Prime Minister's visit, and the moon trip, the press paid particular attention to a particular problem in Canada. Everyone admitted there was a problem. The Prime Minister said that he could see the problem. I should like to ask the Prime Minister, through you, Mr. Speaker, and the other ministers of the Cabinet, what they consider to be assets of $100,000 in today's economic situation and with today's interest rates.

The present government must accept the responsibility for the high interest rates which now prevail. The Minister of Agriculture is from the same part of the country in which I live and knows full well that interest rates average about 15 per cent, having regard to assets of $100,000. Farmers have to pay anywhere between 8 per cent and 10 per cent on bank loans, and higher rates on borrowings from other sources. Anyone who is operating a wheat ranch, if you would like to call it that, is paying an average of 15 per cent interest on financing.

I pointed out earlier in respect of subsidies that only $29 million of $415 million in Canadian subsidies is being paid to the Canadian wheat grower. This means that over $380 million is being paid in subsidies to people other than wheat growers. Let me bring to your attention, Mr. Speaker, that neither the Minister of Agriculture nor the Prime Minister are listening to what is being said. It has been suggested that the government does not subsidize people with assets of $100,000 or more, but this government obviously has been subsidizing other industries, including the gold mining industry and the railway companies, to say nothing of the C.B.C. and other Crown corporations. These are virtually monopolies, not prime producers.

The Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce (Mr. Pepin) is now here and I should like to deal with another subject before I conclude. This minister who has direct responsibility for this subject was recently in Washington. Was the Minister of Agriculture with him at that time?

Mr. Pepin: Yes, he was.

Mr. Gundlock: Was the Prime Minister with him? The answer is no. I remember an occasion when I spoke in this house when the Prime Minister and the minister responsible for this problem were both in Washington. They conferred with the President of the United States. In the first instance they asked him, "are we friends and allies or are we enemies?" I hope both the ministers realized this. The President of the United States said, "Of course, we are friends. What do you have in mind?" But the matter of wheat was never brought up. It seems to me this is a question of management. They went on from there, reminding the United States that we are their best customer and their best supplier. In other words, they want our iron ore, our oil, our gas, our water, and even our air space as well as refuelling stations. Is that not a bargaining position? What did our government do when they were in that bargaining position? They never mentioned one of those points. Let the minister tell us, I would be glad to hear him.

• (8:10 p.m.)

Mr. Pepin: The Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) spoke to Mr. Nixon on that subject.

Mr. Gundlock: You just said the Prime Minister was not at that meeting.

Mr. Pepin: I was in Washington three times last month and the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Olson) was there on a couple of occasions.

Mr. Gundlock: That is beside the point. I was talking about the last wheat agreement. The minister says he was there three times. He only needed to be there once.

Mr. Pepin: You asked a question, I answered it.

Mr. Gundlock: That was not the question. You said you were there three times. I asked if the Minister of Agriculture was there and if the Prime Minister was there. The Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce (Mr. Pepin) said no.

Mr. Pepin: I said yes.

Mr. Gundlock: You said you were there three times. Probably at one of the three meetings the three of you were there but, I ask, who were your advisers on the wheat agreement?

Mr. Pepin: In Washington? The Canadian Wheat Board, the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce and the Department of Agriculture. They were all represented there.

Mr. Gundlock: That is exactly what I thought. The Wheat Board has no authority to deal with a government. Only the government can deal with another government. I say this loud and clear to the Minister of Agriculture and to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce, that the heads of the wheat boards are very selfish people who are interested only in storage, not in handling and selling. I refer particularly to the Saskatchewan farm union, which almost disgraced this whole country at their meeting with the Prime Minister. I am very happy that, in my constituency, he was treated with courtesy and dignity as a Prime Minister should be. He understood that there was a problem out there, but his ministers and his advisers did not.

I should like to ask one more question. How much money has the government supplied to the grain council as of June 1?

Mr. Pepin: The Department of Agriculture is providing $50,000 and my department is providing $50,000 this year.

Mr. Gundlock: My information is that it is $2,500, not even enough to hire a secretary.

Mr. Olson: You need some better information.

Mr. Gundlock: I am not so sure. I will call Paul Martin. He has a good bureau of statistics. This is the information I have as of June 1. It is not even enough money to hire a secretary. How do they expect that council to work? Who are the members of that council? This reminds me of a remark a friend of mine, formerly a member of the house, once made, that you might just as well put a bunch of weasels in charge of a hen house. The reference was the way this government managed our business.

They tell us to sit here in the house while they go across the country telling the farmers not to raise wheat. This takes me back ten years. I remember when the Liberals were on our side and we were on their side of the house. At that time they said exactly the same thing. I remember when the minister of agriculture of that time said, "Don't listen to the opposition; grow wheat and we will sell it". What happened? We sold it, and they can do the same thing.

Mr. Olson: You mean Alvin Hamilton?

Mr. Asselin: He was a good minister.

Mr. Gundlock: It can be done. All it requires is good management. To say, in Canada or anywhere else in the world, "There is too much wheat; do not grow it" when there are millions starving and millions half starving just does not add up.

As I said a moment ago, if you deal with your allies and so-called friends properly, you will not have that problem.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order, please. I regret to interrupt the hon. member but his time has expired. Is there unanimous consent to allow the hon. member to continue?

Some hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): I regret but there is no unanimous consent.

Mr. Forrestall: Chopped down by the minister.

Hon. H. A. Olson (Minister of Agriculture): In case the last remark was recorded in Hansard, may I say that the Minister of Agriculture did not chop anybody down.

I welcome the opportunity this evening to talk about the problem which we have in the wheat economy in particular, and in the cereal economy in western Canada generally, because I have just spent a few days in western Canada talking to farmers from many parts of that area where wheat and related products are an important base to their agricultural enterprises. I do not believe that a good purpose can be served at this time by reviewing the international situation and trying to analyze what should be done in those areas where we, as the government of Canada, only have the power to persuade, to discuss, and to try to influence representatives of other governments. I believe that the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce (Mr. Pepin) adequately covered that in the debate earlier today. However, I believe that an additional explanation should be given of several measures, and of one measure above all others, that this government has taken to alleviate the situation with respect to cash flow through the grain economy in western Canada because of the restricted markets or the contracted markets as compared with a couple of years ago.

It seems to me that the most useful thing that we could do at this stage is, first of all, to analyse the problem and see if we can agree on this before we try some of the so-called shotgun assistance programs that have been advocated by the opposition and by others as well. I think that all members in this house, even those who come from the grain growing areas in the prairies, will agree that the major problem today is the cash flow in the hands of those people who rely almost exclusively on the sale of wheat and other grains. It is not that they have no product to sell or that their assets have been reduced, bringing them down to the poverty line. The fact of the matter is rather that they have some desperate problems in some cases because the cash flow has been reduced substantially from what it was in 1964, 1965, 1966 and part of 1967. There is no argument about that so far as I am concerned.

• (8:20 p.m.)

Surely, the obvious answer to this problem is to substitute a program that will provide a significant flow of cash. I suggest the government has done this. There is one other kind of problem some farmers in western Canada are having, as well as those in other parts of the country. I refer to restricted net income, that is, income that is not at an acceptable level because of the so-called cost-price squeeze.

Let us get back to the other problem about which the opposition are complaining. I am not criticizing them for complaining, because it is a very real problem. I refer to the problem of the contraction and restriction of the cash flow necessary to meet commitments for operating, capital requirements and income on which to live. If this is the problem, we ought to institute a substitute program which would provide the cash flow required. I suggest we have done that. It seems to me—this was drawn to my attention rather forcibly during the last few days I spent in western Canada—that there is a misunderstanding, or at least a lack of understanding, of both the significance and the magnitude of the cash advances program that will become effective August 1, 1969.

Let me deal with acreage payments. There are 84 million acres on the permit books of western Canada. If we were to make an acreage payment of $1 an acre, or even $2 an acre, to most farmers in western Canada who are suffering severe problems in obtaining enough cash to meet their current operating requirements, it would not be enough. On the other hand, there are millions of acres of the 84 million involved in connection with which the cash flow through the farmers' hands has not been reduced in 1969 but is, indeed, substantially higher than it has been in the past. This is mainly because a large part of the farmers' agricultural enterprise is based upon livestock, the prices of which have risen significantly in the last six or eight months. So if we are to be fair and honest in our analysis of the problem, making advances on the wheat farmers have in store is the way to provide them with an income. This refers to farmers who rely on wheat for their income.

Commencing August 1, as the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce (Mr. Pepin) has already announced, there will be full reinstatement of the entitlement of every permit holder, producer if you like, to go to his elevator agent and obtain $1 a bushel, times the number of specified acres in his permit book, times six. This is regardless of whether or not he has been able to deliver sufficient wheat up to July 31 this year to retire the cash advance made during the 1968-69 crop year. Hon. gentlemen opposite, and perhaps farmers in western Canada, have the right to an explanation of what this means. It means that on August 1 and thereafter, the farmer will be able to go to his elevator agent and apply for a cash advance if he has grain on hand, which we assume he has. He will immediately get $6 per acre, times the acres on his permit book, up to a maximum of $6,000.

Mr. Korchinski: Provided he has not had a loan.

Mr. Olson: His having had an advance will not interfere with his entitlement for the new crop year. That is the statement made by the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce in June.

Mr. Korchinski: You had better explain that.

Mr. Olson: Hon. gentlemen opposite should have listened to that statement and understood it.

Mr. Korchinski: You had better explain it, because the press do not understand it.

Mr. Olson: We carried out some calculations in this regard. If you subtract the acres in excess of 1,000 that are in the permit books, you arrive at 472 million acres. If every farmer in western Canada had the necessary amount of wheat and applied for a payment of $1 a bushel on his wheat, there is the potential of injecting $472 million into the western economy. That program is already under way. Of course, every farmer will not have the necessary maximums of wheat; therefore, we have to scale the program down somewhat. The Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) said in Lethbridge last Saturday that the program would probably amount to something in the order of $250 million.

Mr. Bigg: In two years.

Mr. Olson: In one year. In fact, it could happen in 90 days. The program is already under way and will be effective in nine or ten days, I believe. Two hundred and fifty million dollars is a fairly substantial amount to inject into the economy during the next two or three months. Indeed, it will be available on August 1. However, I am realist enough to know that all the qualifications needed by a farmer to make application will not be present at that point in time. I suggest that after they harvest their 1969 crop and have wheat on hand, they will be able to qualify. That is a fairly realistic amount of money. As I say, it is somewhere between $250 million and $300 million. This amount will be injected into the western economy and will assist in the grain harvest this fall.

I ask members of the opposition to compare this with the references made to past glories when $1 an acre, up to 200 acres, was injected into the economy. This program gives five times as much. There is one other thing that should be made very clear.

Mr. Bigg: Mr. Speaker, would the minister permit a question?

Mr. Olson: Mr. Speaker, the minister will permit a question if he has time at the end of his remarks. Let us be very clear on one point. Arguments have been put forward that farmers do not wish to go into debt in order to take advantage of the cash advance. There is no debt, in terms of money, which has to be repaid until a farmer has been given an opportunity to deliver his grain to the elevator, and is unable to do so. Then, of course, it becomes a debt and is repayable in cash; that is, if he is given an opportunity to deliver and does not do so. That is the only qualification. In the meantime, there is no interest on the advance; the carrying charges are paid by the government of Canada through the Canadian Wheat Board. Let there not be any confusion about its being the farmer's own money in this respect.

Mr. Gundlock: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I remind the minister that any charges due the wheat board are paid by the farmer and not by the government.

Mr. Olson: Mr. Speaker, I suggest that the hon. member do a little more homework. I remind him that the treasury of Canada pays the interest on cash advances.

Mr. Gundlock: Further to the point of order, Mr. Speaker, the minister was not talking about storage.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order, please. That is not a point of order.

• (8:30 p.m.)

Mr. Olson: The point I am trying to make is that the cash advances on wheat stored on farms are certainly the best possible substitute for actually being able to deliver grain to the elevators.

Mr. Korchinski: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. The hon. member for Mackenzie is rising on a point of order.

Mr. Korchinski: The Minister of Agriculture stated that the treasury of Canada picks up the interest rate. I think the minister himself should be aware that there is a reserve fund within the Wheat Board itself—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order, please.

Mr. Korchinski: —and a portion of this is transferred—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. That is not a point of order.

Mr. Boulanger: A point of order, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): The hon. member for Mercier on a point of order.

Mr. Boulanger: Mr. Speaker, my point of order is this. Although the debate in progress was initiated by the leader of the socialist party across the aisle, I should like the house to note that not a single member of that party is presently in the house.

Mr. Olson: Mr. Speaker, so there is no confusion let me review in detail the exact procedure that a farmer must follow to obtain the benefits of the program. On August 1, or on any date thereafter during the crop year 1969-70, a farmer may go to his local elevator agent and apply for a cash advance on grain stored on the farm up to six bushels multiplied by the specified number of acres in his permit book. In line with the statement made by the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce, any carryover from the 1968-69 crop year as far as cash advances are concerned will not be held against his entitlement unless the farmer is in default; and the only way he can be in default is if he has had an opportunity to deliver grain but has not done so.

Let it also be clear that the farmer must sign a declaration that he does have that amount of grain on which he receives advance payment stored on the farm. The total acreage appearing in the permit books is in the region of 84 million. Multiplied by six, the total is something over 500 million bushels. There must be subtracted from this total that number of acres over 1,000 that appears in each permit book. This reduces the figure to 472 million acres, and it is these 472 million acres on which acreage payments may be made.

Mr. Woolliams: You have said that twice.

Mr. Olson: I will say it a dozen times more until people both here and in western Canada understand it. This is the entitlement as of August 1. I am certain that something in the neighbourhood of $250 million, perhaps $300 million, will be paid out during the next 90 days under this program, unless, of course, there is a significant increase in the volume of grain that passes through the elevator system.

Again, I suggest that an analysis of the situation will lead most people to conclude that the restricted market is the problem here. I contend there is no more fair, feasible or just way of dealing with this transitional problem, as we hope it will be, than by providing farmers with cash whether or not they are able to deliver their grain, and this is exactly what is happening under the program I have outlined.

I should like to answer one or two further questions that were raised. The hon. member for Lethbridge (Mr. Gundlock) stated that a former minister of agriculture had told the farmers: "You grow the wheat and we'll sell it". The only minister I can recall saying that was the former member for Qu'Appelle, who at one time was Minister of Agriculture, and the house knows what happened to him. I should think that if a Minister of Agriculture told the farmers that they could indiscriminately grow large volumes of farm produce which he would undertake to sell, he would be making an irresponsible statement. I think the former member's greatest claim to fame—I do not want to abuse him because the electors took care of him—was when he arrived in Hong Kong three days after a big wheat deal was signed in order to make the announcement.

Mr. Asselin: That was when the farmers were happy.

Mr. Olson: Another matter that was raised was this. It has been said a number of times that farms are being foreclosed, or sold at below current values, and so on. I should like to put on record some statistics produced by the Farm Credit Corporation, which is by far the largest lender of funds to farmers on the prairies, indeed to farmers all over the country.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. I regret to interrupt the minister but his time has expired.

Mr. Stanfield: Mr. Speaker, we would be happy to give unanimous consent and pay the minister that courtesy that he would not pay the hon. member for Lethbridge.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Does the house give unanimous consent for the minister to continue?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Olson: I will be very brief, Mr. Speaker. There is one matter I should mention that is of interest to members on both sides of the house. Experience has shown that even in the serious circumstances that are presently existing in western provinces there is a wide range between the amount and proportion of income lost and the financial circumstances of individual farmers. For example, this is borne out by the fact that in spite of current marketing problems at least 75 per cent of the prairie farmers—I am sorry I cannot be more precise than that—holding mortgages from the Farm Credit Corporation met their May 1 commitments within one month of the due date.

Another important factor is that of the 25 per cent who did not manage to meet their payments within this period, over half had arrears outstanding from previous years. Therefore, it must be pointed out that this particular problem is not quite as serious as some people have indicated.

In conclusion, may I say that other programs may have to be instituted in order to deal with farmers facing serious income problems that are not necessarily directly related to restricted opportunities for marketing grain. The Prime Minister did make mention of this particular aspect, and we are working on the problem. But let me be fair on this question of cash flow. It seems to me that the greatest amount of financial assistance that can be provided to those who need it the most will flow from the program that will come into effect on August 1. In my view this program is both large and significant.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): The hon. member for Athabasca.

Mr. Woolliams: Mr. Speaker, before the next speaker commences his remarks may I ask the minister one question. When the right hon. member for Prince Albert (Mr. Diefenbaker) introduced the cash advance legislation in 1957, did the minister speak about that legislation with the approval that he gave it tonight? The hon. member was at that time a Social Credit member of the opposition and I ask whether he voted for it.

Mr. Olson: Mr. Speaker, I cannot remember all the speeches I made on that occasion but I think as a matter of principle I supported that legislation.

Mr. Woolliams: I must tell the minister that our memories are better than that of the minister. I ask him to check on how he voted on that occasion.

• (8:40 p.m.)

Mr. Olson: Mr. Speaker, I could check on that. I should also advise the hon. member that we have substantially improved the legislation since then.

Mr. Woolliams: I will not listen to any more.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Is the hon. member for Mackenzie rising on a question?

Mr. Korchinski: No, Mr. Speaker. I had hoped to have the floor.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): The Chair was about to recognize the hon. member for Pembina, but recognized the hon. member for Mackenzie temporarily, being under the impression that the hon. member was about to ask a question. The hon. member for Pembina has the floor.

Wheat Export Prices

Mr. F. J. Bigg (Pembina): Mr. Speaker, I am glad the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Olson) is here to hear my remarks. I have waited some time for this opportunity. The people in my part of the country think agriculture is of prime importance. Having been in office for one year, the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) has at last discovered western Canada, and we are very pleased.

An hon. Member: What is the question?

Mr. Bigg: I am not asking a question but making a speech and I would appreciate it if hon. members on the government side allow me to continue.

As I said, having been in office for one year, the Prime Minister has discovered western Canada, and we are pleased. Unfortunately, he speaks first and thinks later, as is his custom. His first reaction on discovering western Canada, and being told the government should consider western farmers, was to say that the government could do nothing. That is exactly what I expected him to say, and I am not disappointed. I did not expect this government to aid western farmers. The Speech from the Throne contains the warning that this government will do little, if anything, for the farmers of Canada. The speech of September 12, 1968, shows that the western farmer can expect little help.

Because the government established the Grains Council everybody hoped western Canada would benefit. I have been patient in my hope that western agriculture would be aided—notwithstanding this administration's record of not helping farmers. Of course, nothing happened. It has been most difficult to get questions answered in the house. When we have received answers they have been offhand answers or non-answers, so to speak. No sooner had we completed the throne speech debate than I drew to the minister's attention serious difficulties in western Canada involving damp grain. Western farmers suffered because their grain was damp. Any grain that had been harvested had not been dried, and any government action had come too late. There was too little of it, and what there was came too late. And what happened, Mr. Speaker. The Prime Minister went to western Canada and said, "The government can do nothing more." Well, the government could do much more; the Minister of Agriculture could do a tremendous amount of good, particularly on the prairies. As I say, I am not disappointed in what has happened. I am a westerner and for one year I waited patiently for the government to act. For one year I hoped that the government would answer my questions which touch intimately the bread and butter of thousands and thousands of people.

[The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard).]

Of course, nothing has been done because, since 1963, this government has pursued an entirely wrong course in Canadian agriculture from coast to coast. They wanted farms to grow bigger and bigger, and they wanted small farmers to get out of farming. The government boasts about the bigness of all sorts of farm loans. Not long ago the Minister of Agriculture spent half an hour telling us how many millions of dollars had been advanced to the farmers of Canada. I hope he is not serious when he says that he is injecting money into the farm economy, because how in the world can you inject money into the farm economy when farmers have to repay debts. In some cases it is impossible for farmers to pay back money they have borrowed. Farmers do not want to borrow; I know perfectly well they want to stand on their own feet.

This government, Mr. Speaker, wants to nationalize all land in Canada. That is its policy. That is why it wants proposed rule 75c, and I shall remain in Ottawa all summer to make sure that the rule is not adopted. The government wants to nationalize all the farms of western Canada, and I for one will not permit it to do so. I do not think the people of western Canada will be bamboozled by an itinerant prime minister. Let him use his charisma in the chain stores of the nation. He may use his charisma on 13 year old girls and in the shopping centres, he may wear different flowers in his buttonhole each day, but I say to him the people of western Canada are tired of this. They are tired of the flower show; now, they want the grain show to begin.

If the Prime Minister has charisma, let him use it in Washington on his United States friends. Let him stop quoting Mao and begin quoting Mr. Nixon. The United States will buy our products; that country is competing with us in world markets. It is Mr. Nixon who will help us to set up a food bank, do research, make better use of our resources and, in the end, help us to sell our grain. Why do I say that, Mr. Speaker? I say it because in this world hundreds of millions of people go to bed every night hungry and Canada and the United States will help to feed them. The manner of our payment will have to be settled by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Benson) and the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce.

In this government, ministers do not know what their colleagues are doing. Our Indian policy was introduced by our fine young Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development (Mr. Chrétien), but it seems his colleagues did not know anything about it or they would have not have made their faux pas.

It is said there is too much wheat in the world. Is there, Mr. Speaker? Where? Are there not 700 million or 800 million people in the world who go to bed hungry every night? Are we to deny them food when we have it? Is that how the just society behaves? I say to the members of the cabinet that they are not world statesmen because they are not big enough to be Canadian statesmen. If they cannot put Canadian agriculture on its feet, how do they expect to participate in international affairs and become leaders there. Before venturing into the international field our politicians had better make sure that the hungry of Canada are fed and that the underprivileged of Canada have better living conditions.

If the Prime Minister says that we cannot have a two price system for grain because it will mean that a loaf of bread in this country will cost five cents more, I say that we should subsidize that bread. For goodness sake, do not take it out of the farmer's pocket. I was impressed when I heard the Minister of Agriculture tell us that in the next 90 days about $250 million is to be injected into western agriculture. What does he mean when he says "injected"?

• (8:50 p.m.)

The acreage payment was a subsidy needed by marginal farmers on small farms in Canada. It was the greatest boon to the small, marginal farmer that western Canada ever received. The name of the right hon. member for Prince Albert (Mr. Diefenbaker) is still a byword in western Canada. Apart from anything else he may have done in his political career before or since that time, a great deal can be attributed to the statesman-like idea of giving money to the people who needed it most.

The policy of this government in the field of agriculture has been one and the same, to give more money to those who need it least. In this session of 1968-69, three promises were made with respect to agriculture. These were made back on September 12. There was the Farm Improvement Loans Act, which provided bigger loans to big farmers but no help to the little man, and the Farm Credit Act, which provided bigger loans to big farmers. Then, there was the crowning act of all, the Farm Machinery Act.

The farmers in my area have to sell their wheat now, if they have any, or their cattle now, if they have any, because the price of farm machinery is a crushing burden, particularly when they have to borrow money at 8, 9, 10 or 12 per cent. Only owners of large farms are able to borrow money for farm machinery or farmers who belong to a farm machinery syndicate. Even if you smell socialistic, you can get money. There will be bigger and better farms until the all-knowing, all-powerful Liberal government of Canada owns every acre of land. This is their style of socialism.

I have a Bible in my hand, not written by Moses, but by no less a man than Pierre Elliott Trudeau. I commend it to hon. members. The name of the book is "Federalism in Canada". In this book he says there is only one answer, deep socialism, and you will take it or we will ram it down your throat. Participatory government? By whom? For whom? By Liberals for Liberals. That is the new name of the socialistic government in Canada.

I am surprised because I believe there is a great deal of good in Liberalism, the Liberalism I was raised on and which is found in school books. Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Gladstone of England are great names in Liberalism. It was this dream of Liberalism which swept across Canada on June 25, 1968 when people said, Laurier has come again. They did not know they were being sold a pig-in-the-poke. They did not know they were being sold a negative program.

If hon. members do not think this program is negative, let them pick up any article written by this man. They will find, statements to the effect, I am not going to say this; I am not going to say that, and I am not going to not know they were being sold a pig-in-a-book, he has never told us what he is going to say. Would you like to hear some of it

Some hon. Members: Yes.

Mr. Bigg: This is hate literature. I will read it.

An hon. Member: Read the book.

Mr. Bigg: My Liberal friends say, "Read the book". On page 164 of "Federalism and the French Canadians", this is the kind of Canadian Liberalism he states will unite Canada. I quote from the second paragraph on this page:

> So the Anglo-Canadians built themselves an illusion of it by fencing off the French Canadians in their Quebec ghetto and then nibbling at its constitutional powers and carrying them off bit by bit to Ottawa.

Some hon. Members: Read on.

Mr. Bigg: I am going to read on.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order, please. I might point out to the hon. member that the book he is reading from should have some relation to the actual debate on wheat.

Mr. Bigg: It has, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Basford: It is not solving the wheat problem.

Mr. Bigg: The wheat problem cannot be solved until we know what this government is going to do.

Mr. Basford: Go back to the book.

Mr. Bigg: The wheat problem cannot be solved because it is tied in with the economic problem. If government members have not read this book, their Bible, they are poor Liberals. This book was written and printed in the spring of 1968. It is not ancient history. You should know about it. If you have not read it, you should.

There is only man in the Liberal Party who admits having had no knowledge of what the book contains, and that is the hon. member for Trinity (Mr. Hellyer). He had the courage to leave the cabinet.

The negativism in the whole approach to the wheat problem in Canada is sickening. The Prime Minister went out west. He thought all he had to do was smile, change his suit, smell his rose and all would be well. The people of western Canada are not that easily fooled. They want to pay their bills. They want to support their children. Many owners of small farms in western Canada are not satisfied to sell out to owners of larger farms, no matter what the deal is. A great many of them are not content to go deeper into debt, even though for 18 months they do not have to pay on the money that is going to be injected into their economy. They want to sell their grain for cash. They know their taxes will go up. Somebody has to borrow the money at 10 per cent to pay the carrying charges. This is only a stop-gap measure.

We were told acreage payments were only stop-gaps. The small marginal farmer in Canada needs a little help when the government will not sell his products at reasonable prices so that he can stay on his own land. No matter what my socialistic friends on the left think of this socialistic government, we in this party are thoroughly fed up with it.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Bigg: What is the answer? I think the acreage payment is worth while. The three acreage payments brought in by the Diefenbaker government amounted to a total of $120 million. This is less money than we wrote off to the city of Montreal to help pay for Expo. I do not begrudge paying the bills of Expo, but what is fair for Paul is fair for Peter. In this case it is not Pierre, but Peter out west who needs the help. He needs it badly. When you help the farmer out west, it is reflected here.

There are places in western Canada full of farm machinery, most of which was made in eastern Canada. The backlash has not hit the east yet. It is all very well to say, never mind them; they are a long piece away. Some day we will find the corporations in Ontario and Quebec will not be able to pay the fat dividends they have paid for the last two or three years.

The western farmer is the best spender in Canada when he has the money. He can only spend it once. If he has to borrow money, someone has to pay the interest. The minister is only fooling himself when he speaks of injecting $250 million into the economy. He knows perfectly well he is doing no such thing. He is lending money, at the expense of the people of Canada, to enable an economy which is sagging badly to continue. There is much that can be done. I would suggest some things if I had time, but I will just make one suggestion now.

More research should be done with regard to the uses of wheat. A day or two ago I heard of some research that had been carried out with regard to the use of fish. The fish are being dessicated, mixed with cereal products and sold or given away under our international give-away program to the hungry people of this world. This product is heavy in protein value. Wheat is the finest protein grain in the world.

• (9:00 p.m.)

It can be ground up with fish from the maritimes and in that way two problems can be solved. It can be ground and mixed up with codfish and if you do not like codfish, then science can look after that. The taste of the fish can be taken away and it can be made to taste like wheat or pizza or anything you like. There are 40 Ph.D.'s in the Department of Agriculture. What are they doing except emulating the Prime Minister by saying, we cannot do anything about it. Such attitudes do not help one bit in this situation. If there is nothing the government can do about it, then may I say that I, myself, could do a great deal more than the whole tribe over there put together.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Bigg: We do not want a dictatorship in this country, but if we did I would volunteer for the job because I have more brains in my little finger than the people over there have in all their heads put together. I have given them more ideas in the last five minutes than they have had in the last year. I say, give us some reason to believe in you; give us some morale so we can tell our people the Parliament of Canada likes them and wants to do something for them. But let me say that when the government says it cannot do anything, the just society will never be built on that.

Mr. P. M. Mahoney (Calgary South): Mr. Speaker, it is not often I have the opportunity to agree with the editorial department of the Calgary Herald, but I should like to take my text for this evening from an editorial in that distinguished Conservative newspaper for Saturday, July 19. The editorial entitled "Don't Pretend" reads:

> It would be wonderful if oratory could sell Canada's wheat.
>
> Then something worth while might be expected to result from the special debate to be held next week in the House of Commons on the wheat crisis.
>
> But it's no use pretending that rousing words and rolling phrases are going to do the trick. That has been tried countless times before and didn't work. The pages of Hansard that have been filled through the years with words about Western Canada's wheat problems could well command a small fortune as scrap paper.

Unfortunately, the clairvoyance of that newspaper in discerning that a debate would be held here this week was not shared by members of the opposition. Because this party, through its co-operation and concern, permitted the debate to commence early, the opposition speakers were not prepared at all. They simply were not ready and as a result dusted off old speeches and were undeterred by facts relating to what is developing in the world. Furthermore, they have permitted this debate to proceed without the hon. member for Crowfoot (Mr. Horner), St. John the Baptist of the wheat farming people. The hon. member who spoke no less than eight times on the farm credit bill, no less than five times on the farm improvement loans bill, once on the farm machinery syndicates credit bill and four times on the prairie farm advance payments bill, has not been given an opportunity to participate in this debate. I think this is a gross unfairness to him.

The Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield) saw nothing wrong with assistance for farmers short of cash, regardless of their substantial assets. Again, if I may, I should like to refer to the editorial in the Calgary Herald, and I agree with it:

> It is hard for people to understand why an industry such as wheat farming cannot withstand the economic rigors of one or two bad years like other industries without demanding government hand-outs.
>
> Prime Minister Trudeau said it is hard for a fisherman earning only $2,000 a year to understand why a farmer with land and equipment worth $100,000 should consider himself eligible for government assistance. It is hard to understand because it simply cannot be justified.

The Leader of the Opposition sees nothing wrong with this. I think the perspicacity of the Leader of the Opposition is destined to assure him in his present position at least until he is replaced by the hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands (Mr. Douglas) or the hon. member for Témiscamingue (Mr. Caouette). The Leader of the Opposition does not accept that conditions in the grain industry are the result of international circumstances beyond the control of the Canadian government. With respect I would suggest that the following would summarize the facts of the case.

The last three years have seen excellent harvests throughout the world, mainly as a result of favourable climatic conditions. In each of these three years, world production was higher than in any preceding year in history. Much of this increased production occurred in importing countries whose requirements of wheat were thus increasingly met from domestic supplies. As a result, imports of wheat declined and world trade dropped in the last four years. In 1965-66 world trade totalled 2.3 billion bushels. In the most recent crop year, shipments of wheat were less than 1.7 billion bushels, a reduction of more than 25 per cent.

The drop in world trade in wheat has been matched by an increment in stocks held by the five major exporting countries. On June 30, 1969 these stocks had reached a record level of 2.4 billion bushels. At the conclusion of the Kennedy Round negotiations in the spring of 1967, stocks amounted to only 1.4 billion bushels. In the meantime Canada has maintained its share of the export market at about 20 per cent. Again, gentlemen, I should like to refer to the editorial with which I started:

> The best that can be hoped from next week's debate is that it might produce some ideas to assist the government. If so, surely it will be only too glad to accept them.
>
> Unfortunately, the debate may be short on ideas and long on politics.
>
> No amount of talking should be allowed to conceal some important facts. One is that the Canadian government did not create the wheat surplus; it is world-wide. Another is that farmers were warned repeatedly during the bumper-sale years of this decade that they could not depend on Communist countries as steady customers. The big sales to the Soviet Union and China came about because of droughts and wheat-crop failures in those countries. Some of the fat profits from those years should have been used by wheat farmers to branch out into other lines of production.

The hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands was caught when the debate was sprung on him a little early. He did not have a single, solitary suggestion. However, this was not so in respect of the hon. member for Regina-Lake Centre (Mr. Benjamin). His first suggestion was that we expand the power and authority of the Wheat Board by giving unlimited ability to enter into the price war, with no holds barred. Is that what Canada should do? Are we to take the leadership in this price war? He also wants to reverse the trend to urbanization. He wants to keep the people down on the farm and make sure that the taxpayers of Canada support those who want to stay on the farms. This is really a very progressive move and one, I suggest, we would hardly expect from a member of his party. The third suggestion was that we should accept foreign currency and invest in fertilizer plants. What would these foreign countries which would have these fertilizer plants do with the production they would have? Would they grow grain?

The Leader of the New Democratic party referred to the A.I.D. record and the Leader of the Opposition referred to the acreage payments. I think we might deal with both these at once. I should like to refer to the same O.E.C.D. figures referred to by the leader of the New Democratic party. They indicate that France is first with .95 per cent of its national income devoted to A.I.D., followed by Portugal with .77 per cent and Australia with .74 per cent. One might think it strange to inquire as to how much of France's foreign aid program is devoted to payments of notes due to its colonial empire, how much of that aid goes to north Africa? In the case of Portugal, one might question whether Mozambique or Angola have anything to do with this. In Australia we might think of the Polynesian empire and New Guinea colonies; possibly even the Vietnamese participation.

• (9:10 p.m.)

The other countries which have any significant amount of foreign aid over that of Canada, are the United Kingdom, Belgium and the Netherlands. This brings us down to 6/100ths of one per cent of the national income over the Canadian contribution. In each case we are dealing with ex-Imperial nations, and in each case I suspect strongly that the foreign aid programs are coloured very much by contributions to former colonies.

Le us look specifically at the aid program so far as Canadian grain is concerned. We could increase income by straight payments to farmers or we could increase it by moving wheat through food aid programs or through other subsidies. The opposition continues to refer to the three crop payments of $40 million each it paid to the farmers in 1958, 1960 and 1962, totalling $120 million. In those same years only $66 million worth of grain was moved out in foreign aid. I feel very strongly that farmers would be quite prepared and quite happy, indeed would prefer, to accept a government payment by way of foreign aid than receive subsidies. We also believe in moving wheat and we have done so with our foreign aid program on a scale almost four times as large as that of the previous government.

During the four crop years from 1958-59 through to 1961-62 the foreign aid expenditures in wheat by the Canadian government amounted to something over $66 million. In the most recently completed crop years these have amounted to $240 million, almost four times as much. The total amount of foreign aid, plus crop payment indulged in by the previous government, was about 25 per cent less than the total in foreign aid exports of grain by the present government.

The hon. member for Pembina (Mr. Bigg) in the midst of a diatribe involving the present Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau), which quite frankly assumed almost pathological overtones at some points, suggested that the barter system would be a good idea. This is another sort of progressive recommendation from one who avowedly admired the liberalism of Laurier and Gladstone. I am sure that he might have found the conservatism of disraeli and Macdonald somewhat radical even for him.

In any case, the barter system just does not work in respect of commodities as great and as important as wheat to Canada. We cannot possibly get involved in a barter system in respect of our grain or we immediately are going to start facing demands from some of our larger potential customers, and our larger customers in the past including Red China and so on, who are themselves short of cash, who will insist on dealing with us on barter terms when it comes to buying our grain. We must maintain the integrity of our marketing system.

None of this denies the fact that there is a real cash problem which has been well identified by the opposition, for which they are to be congratulated. It would seem from the speeches of the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce (Mr. Pepin) and the Minister of agriculture (Mr. Olson) that these problems had indeed previously been identified and that many worth while steps had been taken to meet them. However, the cash shortage is there, and certainly some farmers are suffering very seriously.

I do not share the feelings of the Leader of the Opposition that all deserve help regardless of their assets. I do not really believe that we should indulge in this area in another program of universal assistance when we have disavowed such programs for the future in any case. We must provide cash for farmers who find themselves in real need because of the failure of the grain market. We must be selective in this provision and we should, if necessary, resort to a form of means test. I do not think there is much point in trying to solve the cash problem unless we can also try at the same time to solve the market problem.

One thing that the government might consider is the possibility of seeing whether there are not markets for No. 5 or No. 4 grain, which we are not in a position to sell. We could then let our assistance program take the form of paying all or part of the spread between the price we can get for grain of those grades and the value or the price of the actual grades delivered. In this way we might solve both cash and market problems. The types of advances being recommended on acreage payments and so on will leave us next spring with the same problem we have today, intensified by whatever surplus we might enjoy from this year's crop, and it looks as though it is going to be a pretty good one.

The two price system has been advocated. Roughly speaking we consume for domestic purposes about 10 per cent of what we have grown in the last few years. The two price system involves fundamentally a tax on the consumer to support the producer in this area. Once this idea is introduced, it will be a simple matter to sit here regularly in this House of Commons listening to the extent of the grain farmers plight and determining just how much the city and town dwellers are going to be taxed by way of extra cost for their bread in order to make up this difference. I think the two price system is a very dangerous thing, and we should avoid it altogether if we can.

Certainly, the long range solution is diversification. This has been recognized by such eminent authorities as Premier Ross Thatcher and the Hon. Alvin Hamilton, a man who is at least regarded in some quarters as being an expert in this area. Certainly, a reduction of wheat acreage is absolutely essential.

I do not see that our economy can possibly support a U.S. type system under which we would be making continuous payments to maintain land out of production. I do not see why we cannot utilize the same sort of programs here that are utilized in the maritimes, and places where industry has fallen into distress, where relocation grants are given to people who are willing to change their vocation. It is questionable indeed that taxpayers should have to pay for something that farmers might well have done for themselves and which, in many cases, progressive farmers have in fact done. These are not miners or people employed in Cape Breton coal mines. These are basically self-employed businessmen, with wide discretion as to how they should handle their affairs. When they find themselves in some trouble we very definitely must give them assistance, but the programs that we advocate in this area must be selective; they ought not be universal.

Mr. S. J. Korchinski (Mackenzie): After listening to that last word of authority on this problem, I am somewhat taken aback. I felt that this was perhaps another Senator in the making. One of the suggestions he made was that there was a need for some sort of assistance to the western economy. Naturally, this would include the province of Alberta. The hon. member suggested that we should be very selective. Does his reasoning also relate to old age security, which is paid to millionaires? Is that the type of reasoning he has in mind, and does this apply across the board? Is this Liberal policy that is being enunciated, because apparently the member has been selected as one of the spokesmen from the west.

• (9:20 p.m.)

The Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Olson) suggested that only 25 per cent of the loan payments were not made as of the date they were due. If he would look up the previous record, he would find that about a year ago only 6 per cent of the loans had not been repaid. There has been a great increase in unpaid loans. Let me say further that the irresponsible statements have been made to the effect that the former minister of agriculture said "You grow wheat and we will sell it". There could be no more irresponsible statement than the one that came from the lips of the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) when he said, "We intend to sell one billion, three hundred million bushels in three years". Nothing of the sort came about. The Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce (Mr. Pepin) tried to explain to us why this goal could not be achieved now. He said this was a kind of goal, but this is not an election year.

The Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce attempted to chastise the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield) for having made only one suggestion in his speech, that is for only advocating cash advances for the purpose of injecting money into the western economy in a hurry. Let me say that the only thing with which the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Olson) dealt in his speech was cash advances. If anyone can find anything else in his speech, apart from a lot of words, then let him stand up and say so. I think it is somewhat unfair of the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce to accuse the Leader of the Opposition of having dealt with only one subject in his speech.

Many suggestions were made from this side. I realize that I have only a limited amount of time at my disposal and therefore I should like to organize my comments somewhat. First, I wish to list some of the ways in which the government could inject money into the western economy, money which even the Prime Minister himself admits is needed there. After about three days of indoctrination, and after having seen for himself what the situation was like, he was ready to admit there was a problem. If the meetings which we had in Saskatchewan with the members of the touring agricultural committee were not sufficient evidence, and if the representations to the government by various farming organizations were not sufficient proof for the Prime Minister, then I don't know what proof he needs. He was going to use the charm he possesses, Trudeaumania—mania it is, but not the type of mania he thought. He believed all he had to say was, "follow". They socked him right there, and he said, "whoa, there" instead of "follow".

The first thing I would suggest, regardless of what anybody else may say here is acreage payments. The Prime Minister asked, "why should we subsidize a rich farmer who possesses $100,000 worth of property?" It is all right provided there is a ceiling, and it is up to the government to select that ceiling. The point is to inject some money into the economy in the west. What the government does not realize is that it is not only the farmers who are broke; it is everybody down the line. The businessmen in the west have gone broke and so have the municipalities which have had to hold back plans for new roadways. The hospitals have had to hold back their projects. The people are sitting and wondering what kind of government we have. I regret to have to say this, Mr. Speaker, but—

An hon. Member: Be careful, now.

Mr. Korchinski: I am very careful. I say this because I heard it. People are saying that this government turns only one way. They spend $200 million on the city of Hull, and people are asking why the government does not spend $30 million in western Canada. I will make a suggestion as to how this could be done. The International Grains Arrangement price for wheat is $1.95½. In recent days this price has gone down by ten cents to $1.85. The Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce indicated that he sold only 305 million bushels. Is $30 million too much to spend on the three prairie provinces? Is this too much to ask of this government? Do we have to drive a tractor over the Prime Minister before he realizes that assistance is needed? What the government must realize is that these people do not want to act the way they did when the Prime Minister visited them. In the past they have not acted that way because there was no need for it.

I will speak about the Farm Credit Corporation now. In the last four or five years almost $1,100 million has been borrowed from the Farm Credit Corporation. I believe that at present the figure stands at $1,070 million. But the significant fact is that almost one third of that sum has been borrowed in Saskatchewan. The reason is that the people there are more desperate, as is obvious from the statistics. When the people of Saskatchewan did not give the Prime Minister the type of treatment he would have liked to have had, it was not because they are less kind than other Canadians but because they are more desperate. The Minister of Agriculture suggested that cash advances will help them. I say to him, let him come and make a few Liberal speeches in my constituency. I invite him to do so. Let him tell the farmers in my riding, who last year had dry crops and this year had frozen crops, how they can get a cash advance. What is he going to inject there? I know what he is going to inject.

We ask for the adoption of a two price system. It is too much to ask? What is all the talk about guaranteed income? Does it mean something or does it not? Is it or is it not part of the Liberal philosophy? Let the government adopt it if that is what they believe in. Let them go ahead and increase family allowances. It is the families with children that will eat the bread, so let us give them more. But do not deny assistance to those people who have been working hard. I do not think everyone realizes how much work farmers have to do. When you realize that they have borrowed to the hilt and worked their fingers to the bone, there is little enough reward. It was the Conservative government which increases the amount of available loans under the Farm Improvement Loans Act, but it was the Liberal government that increased the interest on the loans. There lies the difference. At one time the interest rate was 5 per cent. Now, when you go to a bank, you are told "I do not think I will renew your loan because you are a bad risk".

At one time the banker used to say to you, "you are a good risk. Any amount of loan you want is fine". This is not the case now. How can you sell your wheat? The credit is not there any longer. What should the government do? They should make arrangements with these banks, and this can be done, to make loans available at rates lower than they are at present. At one time the interest rate on a loan was 6 per cent, but later it went up to 12 per cent—even 15 per cent as my seatmate has suggested. That is why there is a shortage of money in the west. No one can tell me that farmers do not need the money, but the fact is that the banks have slowed down the granting of credit. These people will not add to the inflation any spiral. They are simply trying to regain credit facilities. They are trying to repay their notes at the bank so they may establish credit with which to carry on. As has been suggested, they will carry on because there is no more enterprising individual than the farmer.

• (9:30 p.m.)

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Korchinski: The government makes no effort to solve the problem, despite the banks' earnings being at the highest level on record. I put those figures on record about six months ago and shall not repeat them now because my time is limited. The fact is that the banks have made a great deal of money from the farmer, because he is a continuing borrower. The government must realize that when the farmer goes to the bank, this kind of arrangement is made. What is regional development all about, if it is not to help those areas which are in need? If this is the kind of development we need, the government must institute a program to implement it.

I do not know what I have to do or say to convince the government of the seriousness of the problem. If it is necessary to get down on my hands and knees to do so, I will do it. Does the government realize how many farmers are broke? They are not able to buy groceries. The grocer who allowed them an advance for a month or two is no longer extending this privilege. The situation is extremely serious.

The government says that in three or four months time it will give the farmer a cash advance. I will arrange for the Minister of Agriculture to visit my constituency and explain the government's stand to my people, because an explanation is vitally necessary. I have tried to explain these things to my constituents. I ask the minister to persuade the government to do something to solve this problem and upgrade its image in the west.

The Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Sharp) visited my area and knows the type of people I represent. They welcomed him. They spoke kindly of him and to him. Would he please appeal to the Prime Minister, on behalf of these people, to do something to solve the problem? We do not have surpluses. My area developed after the 1930's. There are in Canada depressed areas in provinces other than Quebec. My people cannot understand assistance being concentrated in one area. It has been said that $125 million was written off in respect of Expo. This was great for Canada, but it did nothing for me or my constituents. It does not enable a family to go to the grocer and obtain a pound of coffee without paying for it. The farmers in my area cannot get their tractors out of the repair shops. Their business suddenly collapses, and some people wonder why. The banker says to him: If you cannot pay up, sell your tractor.

The government has tried to establish economic units. We thought we had economic units. If a farmer is not able to sell his grain, he does not have an economic unit. The Prime Minister has said that if the farmer does not have an economic unit the government will buy his land. Does this offer apply to a man who is unable to sell his grain?

There are on the other side of the house good Liberal backbenchers to whom constituents have opened their books and exposed their income tax returns. This is not an easy thing for people to do because their business dealings are private, but it has been done. I appeal to the government: Let us not be wishy-washy. Let us not be silly about cash advances. There has to be an injection of money into areas of the country which are worse off than others.

I have never opposed anything I believed was good for the country. If a program has been necessary for the maritimes, I have suppported it. Let us not ignore the plight of the western farmer. Let us not delay taking action for political reasons, because later may be too late. If action is not taken now, Canada will lose its best farmers. This is a question of simple mathematics: if you have 1,000 acres under cultivation—this is a much greater acreage than the average farm—and a five-bushel quota, you produce 5,000 bushels, which if sold at $1.70 a bushel amounts to $8,500. One pays about $2 an acre in taxes, and at least $1,000 for fertilizers. The average farmer pays from $1,500 to $2,000 for fuel. If one obtained a loan of $15,000 under the Farm Improvement Loans Act, the interest at 5 per cent is $750, which for five years amounts to $3,750.

In addition, a farmer has to pay for repairs to machinery; he has to have enough money on which to live; he has to pay insurance premiums and many other things. The only way one can live on a farm at this time is to send your wife, if she is healthy enough, to work off the farm so she can make some money in order that the family may eat. This is the seriousness of the present situation with a five-bushel quota. A $290 million reduction in the final payment last year, compared with that of the previous year, and a reduction of $80 million in sales this year, amounts to $370 million. As I have said, the farmer's costs have increased.

I should now like to deal with the International Grains Arrangement. I believe I understand the situation in this regard. If under this arrangement we have not been able to produce a satisfactory deal for Canadian farmers, we had better scrap it. I asked the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce a question today about the International Grains Arrangement. According to the fine print of that arrangement, members of the European Economic Community are allowed to deduct from the price—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I regret very much that I have to interrupt the hon. member, but his time has expired.

Some hon. Members: Carry on.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member may continue with the unanimous consent of the house. However, I think at this point I should remind hon. members that the Chair has been given a long list of applicants for participation in this debate; therefore, hon. members may wish not to abuse the privilege of speaking beyond their allotted time.

Some hon. Members: Carry on.

Mr. Korchinski: Mr. Speaker, I thank the house for its indulgence. I shall finish my remarks very quickly. France is a member of the International Grains Arrangement. France is our big problem in this regard because she is a large producer and is a supporter of the price level. She has the right to subtract the cost of the freight from the gulf to the port of export and establish her price at that level. Then, France has to add the charge from Marseilles to, say, somewhere in Turkey. This is always lower than the price at the gulf. This is why France is in a preferred position, and her exports are 30 per cent higher this year. But Canada cannot benefit from the same kind of arrangement. I realize that the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce does not want to reveal the fine print, but the government had better face up to the fact that Canada has had the wool pulled over its eyes once again. In fact, Australia is now doing what France is doing.

• (9:40 p.m.)

Another reason why France does not care about exporting to the far east is that the transportation would be so costly it would raise that country's export price to the level of the Canadian and the United States export price.

I like the $1.95 level, I can assure the house. I want it as security for our farmers. But if it works only to the advantage of France and Australia, then we had better take a second look and see whether we cannot find something more advantageous.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): The hon. member for Saskatoon-Biggar.

Mr. Basford: We finally have an N.D.P. member in the house.

Mr. A. P. Gleave (Saskatoon-Biggar): I hear some comments from across the way, Mr. Speaker, and it is nice to know that government members do have something to say. Except for the tractors that were purring up and down the roads of Saskatchewan last week, the silence of the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) has been deafening.

Mr. Basford: The Prime Minister was listening.

Mr. Gleave: Mr. George Bain of the Globe and Mail said that he had made some remarks about kicking a small boy in his posterior, though I do not know whether that is correct or not.

If hon. members across the way will permit me, Mr. Speaker, I should like to make some remarks about the grain situation in Saskatchewan and particularly in my constituency. I listened to the bland remarks of the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Olson) as he talked of cash advances. Certainly, he must have been in a different part of western Canada from the region I visited last week. Surely, as he watched the television and saw, as I did 7,500 farmers gathering in Regina, another 8,000 or 10,000 gathering in Saskatoon and the thousands of tractors driving up and down the roads, it must have been brought home to him that something was amiss on the prairies.

Today I was informed that the price of wheat has again declined. The members have repeatedly asked over the last several months for a policy statement from the government with regard to meeting the existing situation. Neither the members nor the farmers have received an answer. In view of the situation in Saskatchewan, I would say that the farmers of that province treated the Prime Minister very well.

I asked the Acting Prime Minister last week whether it was the intention of the Prime Minister of Canada, when he visited Saskatchewan, to meet with the National Farmers Union officials. I was told that no such arrangement had been made. If the farmers union had not put those tractors on the road and made a protest, I submit the Prime Minister would have gone to Saskatchewan, entering on the one side and leaving on the other, without sitting down and talking with the representatives of thousands of farmers in the province.

I like to hear talk of participatory democracy but I am not interested in gobbledy-gook. If the term "participatory democracy" is to be used, let it be used in its real sense. In order to have real participatory democracy the government must be prepared to sit down with the individuals in whom the farmers have confidence, those they have elected to head their organizations, organizations to which the farmers pay a certain amount every year as members.

Eventually the Prime Minister did meet these officials, and we heard talk of farmers with assets of $100,000. This was supposed to be an indication that these farmers were well off, rich. This is the application of the new economics. I did not have the advantage of going to a school of economics to learn about such things, but I have talked to a good many economists and I never thought that one judged a person's income by the amount of capital he was able to invest. But it seems that you do judge the financial position of farmers in Saskatchewan, in Ontario, or for that matter in the maritimes, on the basis of how many tractors they have, the size of the tractors that are standing in the yard, and the acreage that they have.

In all sincerity, I would suggest to the Prime Minister that he use a different yardstick, because this one is going to lead him badly astray. The measure of a grain farmer's income is well known. It is measured by how much grain he sells and by the price at which he sells it. The same is true of a livestock farmer. One member on the other side of the house stated that the problem facing the farmers would still exist no matter which government was in power. I do not think the problem would be quite so bad as it is under this government. The difference would be that something would be done to solve the problem, and this would be quite an important difference.

I should like to tell the government why this is not the first time that the farmers of Saskatchewan and western Canada have found it necessary to demonstrate when a Liberal government was in power. The same thing occurred in 1946. The farmers picketed the grain elevators and dairies in western Canada, and I was one of those who took part. Circumstances at that time had become so intolerable that the farmers just could not make a living. A few years following the action that we took in 1946 the government was bounced out of power, a very prominent minister of the day having tapped a Manitoban on the tummy and told him that he looked very well fed. Perhaps the farmers look well fed, but I am sure the government knows that the credit unions are strapped for resources to make loans in Saskatchewan at this very moment. Surely, the government's sources of information are as good as mine. Surely, the government knows that banks are being selective in granting loans. They must have this information if they are trying to assess what is the present financial situation of the farmers.

• (9:50 p.m.)

I hope the government will take an honest look at the situation and consider just what is at stake at the present time. What is at stake is the economy of the province of Saskatchewan in particular, that province being the main wheat producer, and that of its two sister provinces of Manitoba and Alberta. Some business people have asked prairie provincial governments to clamp a moratorium on interest rates. This is a business economy and when certain people ask for a moratorium to be clamped on interest rates it is time that the powers that be took notice, because something adverse obviously has happened. The government's real failure is in coming to grips with the existing situation. The Prime Minister has told us we must grow less wheat. He could have saved himself the trip to Saskatchewan if that is all he wanted to tell us. The farmers of the country have reduced the acreage of wheat under cultivation from 29 million acres to 24 million acres in one year, which is a pretty hefty reduction. What are they to grow if they do not grow wheat? That question must be answered by the government and farm organizations. Why has the government not consulted with farm organizations and worked out these matters?

[Mr. Gleave.]

Why has it come to the point that the National Farmers Union and the Canadian Federation of Agriculture are saying their voices are being ignored? Are these organizations not worth talking to?

If you want answers about the automobile industries you talk to automobile manufacturers and labour union representatives in their plants. If you want answers about agriculture, should you not talk to people who have had long experience in agricultural organizations? Believe me, the prairie farmers in particular will not disregard ideas which are valid. They want some kind of direction from the government. They are like sinking men, ready to grasp any rope that is lowered to them. They are willing to try any good idea.

We need to be told frankly what is the situation with respect to the International Grains Arrangement. Reports vary from week to week. One day the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce (Mr. Pepin) tells us he has attended a nice meeting in Washington, that everything will calm down and that the national representatives are going back to their country to work out new arrangements. The next day we hear the United States has slashed grain prices by 12 cents a bushel. I do not know what the new, lower Canadian Wheat Board asking price is. Is the farmer not to be told the status of the International Grains Arrangement? If it is not working, why do we not ask representatives of responsible nations which signed the agreement to meet? After all, the agreement was part of the GATT negotiations. Responsible nations negotiated the agreement. Should we not ask them at a meeting, "Look, is this a piece of paper or is it an honourable arrangement reached by honourable representatives of honourable nations?" Why does the government not do that? Are we to wait forever before knowing whether the International Grains Arrangement can be made to work and what the new minimum price is to be? Does the government think for a minute that farmers will survive when prices have dropped from $1.95½ to $1.80, $1.75 and, after that, to $1.62½ per bushel on the international market, basis Fort William-Port Arthur. With prices like that does the government think for a minute our farmers will remain in business? Surely, the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Olson) should know that with these low prices our farmers can not survive. That farmers cannot operate their farms on a $1 per bushel cash advance for six bushels per cultivated acre. How can anyone operate a farm under these conditions? Some parts of the country are on a four bushel delivered quota right now; others are on three bushels; other areas have delivered five bushels. The price of wheat is nosediving on the international market and I plead with the government to heed the plight of farmers in western Canada. Let us forget all about the gimmicks and the bickering. Let us try to help the farmers of western Canada before it is too late.

Mr. Dinsdale: Hear, hear.

Mr. Gleave: We do not want handouts and charity; we want some plan that will enable our farmers to operate their farms. Many practical steps can be taken. For instance, it is amazing that the Canadian Wheat Board, which has been in operation for 20 years and has a pricing policy, should have no storage policy. We have never said that in this country "We will store this much grain and no more." In Saskatchewan we can now store an entire crop of grain on the farms. We have storage capacity in the elevators on the track and storage capacity at the terminal points. Why does the government not get down to cases and examine these facilities. Talk about a guaranteed income! The grain companies are the guaranteed income boys in western Canada.

An hon. Member: Richardson and Company.

Mr. Gleave: A storage policy should be worked out and we should determine how much grain we want to store and what that will cost. We could even pay farmers for the grain on the farm, and seal it up there. That grain will be available when needed, and will cost us less to store. Is it not ridiculous that in a country like Canada we have difficulty in moving the grade of grain we want to tidewater at the right time? Should we not examine our entire system of transportation with a view to making it more efficient? We want to move grain more efficiently. After all, we have a big investment in grain. Is the government not concerned about these matters?

The fellow who has been done to death in western Canada is the legitimate grain farmer. We relinquished our control over the feed mills and, now, the situation is completely out of control. Is it not ridiculous that farmers have to haul their wheat down the highways and sell it for a pittance to avoid having their tractors and trucks repossessed? That is what we are talking about, and that is what we ought to be concerned about. Only grain grown on a farmer's own land should be delivered on a quota system. No other grain ought to be included and any one abusing his quota privileges ought to be called to account. The Departments of Agriculture, and Industry, Trade and Commerce ought to be concerned about this matter. We ought to enforce our quota system and try to expand our export markets to the maximum.

• (10:00 p.m.)

I think I am right in saying that from the time the International Grains Arrangement was signed the government and the Wheat Board found themselves in a bind, to put it bluntly, for two reasons. One is that the very large productive capacity of the Soviet Union was left out when, under the auspices of GATT we negotiated the new International Grains Arrangement. The U.S.S.R. was in the old International Wheat Agreement, but when we negotiated the I.G.A. the U.S.S.R. was left out. I am satisfied, after reading the record of what happened subsequently with the common market countries, that the second problem is that the International Grains Arrangement never came to terms with the common market countries.

The common market countries have done just as they wanted ever since. We have been trying to live with the grains arrangement and hold an umbrella over prices, in the face of countries who did not care whether a price was maintained or not. When I asked the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce about the situation with respect to importers, he said they wanted cheap wheat.

How cynical these countries are. They signed that agreement. As importers, they are equally responsible with exporters. How do we ever hope to have peace in the world if countries cannot be depended on to keep an ordinary commercial agreement? They should be called to account, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: I have to interrupt the hon. member to remind him his time has expired.

Some hon. Members: Carry on.

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: There is not unanimous agreement.

Mr. A. B. Douglas (Assiniboia): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have this opportunity to speak in this debate on the situation in which prairie grain farmers find themselves, particularly in view of the recent cut in wheat prices by the United States which has been followed in part today by Canada. I spent last week in Saskatchewan because of the visit of our Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) to my province on Wednesday and Thursday last. If I may, Mr. Speaker, I would like to comment briefly on the Prime Minister's day in southern Saskatchewan last Wednesday, for all of which time I was with him.

In the forenoon we had a very cordial and frank meeting with the executive committee of the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool. They presented a brief which was a model of clarity and objectivity. It was a good source of information for the Prime Minister and a fine preparation for meetings with farmers on two farms later that day and in other parts of the province the next day. The wheat pool requests were moderate, well reasoned and thoughtfully expressed.

I wish to point out in passing that the government recently appointed Mr. Charles Gibbings to the Canadian Wheat Board. Mr. Gibbings had been President of the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool for over eight years. He is a practical wheat farmer in Saskatchewan, one of the best informed and respected farmers in the grain business. Farmers have been asking for such representation for many years and I believe the people of western Canada are very appreciative of the fact that this government has made this extremely significant appointment which I believe augurs well for the future operation of the Wheat Board.

We had a noon meal with Premier Thatcher and members of his government. The discussion again centred around the farm income problem, including box cars, quotas, prices and markets. I am sure the Prime Minister must have been impressed with the gravity of the farm income situation and its evident effects on the urban centres, the provincial economy and the dangers inherent for the national economy.

After abruptly concluding this luncheon meeting in order to keep on the planned schedule for the afternoon, we were met by a group of people outside the hotel, many of whom I am sure were not farmers. Our Prime Minister was asked to speak to the crowd, which he agreed to do. It turned out to be one of the worst displays of bad manners on the part of some individuals in the crowd that I have ever been unfortunate enough to witness.

The Prime Minister was interrupted constantly by catcalls, unfriendly remarks and some that were almost obscene. Many placards were displayed, some of which were to the point, but many others were rude, crude and vulgar. We were struck in the face by handsful of wheat thrown by someone in the crowd. The private cars which had been arranged for transporting the Prime Minister's party to the airport were damaged by sabotage. We were not able to use them and had to use R.C.M.P. cars instead.

An hon. Member: We read all this in the newspapers.

Mr. Douglas (Assiniboia): I do not quarrel with the right of people to put on demonstrations, but this was unreasonable. I wish to take this opportunity on behalf of the vast majority of the people in Saskatchewan who were shocked, embarrassed and saddened by this shabby display, to publicly apologize to the Prime Minister for the appallingly bad manners exhibited by some persons in that gathering.

I am happy to say the rest of the day was pleasant and informative. We went to two farms south of Regina, in one of the main wheat growing areas of the west, one of which was my own farm.

An hon. Member: That figures.

Mr. Douglas (Assiniboia): There, the Prime Minister discussed farm operations and intimate financial problems with ten selected farmers and their wives.

An hon. Member: Carefully selected.

Mr. Douglas (Assiniboia): These farmers were chosen because they were representative of different age groups, different sized farms and different stages of the development of their farm enterprises. The Prime Minister saw and operated some of the high-priced farm equipment which is required on grain farms. He saw bins full of grains that cannot be delivered. He saw the figures for last year and this year which show that even in good farming areas farmers cannot pay their expenses at present quotas and prices, much less meet capital payments where they, on advice from agricultural authorities and experts, have tried to expand to become economic units and to increase their efficiency.

I know from news reports that the other days in the prairie provinces were also very informative and, for the most part, cordial and candid. I am sure that the Prime Minister is much better informed, especially about grain farming and the current problems surrounding that industry, than he was before his trip. I trust that he and the government will give sympathetic and favourable consideration to at least some of the representations made by the responsible people with whom he had serious discussions last week.

I do not propose to go through the whole catalogue of those proposals, but I would like to dwell on some which I regard as basic minimum requirements. In my opinion, the federal government can do no less than support the price of wheat at $1.95½, the floor in the International Grains Arrangement, which runs for two more years. The support should be retroactive to include the past few months during which the Wheat Board has been selling below the minimum. This arrangement was drawn up by governments, signed and ratified by governments, and has now been broken by governments. It is nothing more than ordinary justice that the government should bear the cost of this price cutting, instead of the farmers who produced the wheat in good faith. Such a guarantee would obviate the necessity for reducing initial payments.

This was one of the unanimous recommendations of the Standing Committee on Agriculture. It has the support of the prairie provincial governments and of all rural and urban organizations in the west. The government set the precedent for such action by supporting the price of wheat at that level for the 11 months prior to the commencement of the I.G.A. on July 1, 1968. There is even more justification for doing so now because the arrangement is a legal fact as well as a moral obligation.

• (10:10 p.m.)

There is some question about the cost. It could be expensive. Perhaps prices could drop as much as 25 cents below the minimums, although I fervently hope not, on possible sales of up to 500 million bushels. This could amount to $125 million a year, which is about equal to the annual subsidy to dairy producers and only a drop in the bucket compared to the subsidies accruing to industry and industrial workers because of protective tariffs. I want to again suggest that the proposal for a two price system for wheat should not be discarded without a thorough investigation, as I still believe it is an eminently fair proposition. It is reported that the Prime Minister has turned down the idea. If this is so, I think we should be told how much investigation took place and all the reasons behind any decision that may have been made against it. Incidentally, the agricultural committee favoured the two price system too.

Other action that should be taken includes some further incentive to reduce wheat acreage; that is, in addition to the very severe quota restrictions which have already resulted in a 12 per cent reduction in wheat acreage this year. I suggest a cash payment of at least $10 per acre to farmers who have voluntarily reduced their acreage this year and to all farmers who will do likewise next year. This would help the cash shortage position immediately and assist farmers to adjust their farm operations to alternate production. Grants or low interest loans to assist farmers to convert to livestock production or feeding should also be provided. There should be an exhaustive inquiry into the grain delivery quota system with a view to making it more equitable and to eliminating abuses which have developed. It seems obvious to me, notwithstanding the assurances of the Wheat Board, that thousands of farmers will only have space to deliver three or four bushels per acre instead of the promised five bushels. Farmers know they must have low quotas when grain sales are down, and they are realistic enough to accept this fact. But they will justifiably and understandably resent inequitable distribution of those marketing opportunities there are. These inequities that I foresee will arbitrarily, unpredictably and sharply affect ther incomes and their very ability to survive.

Farmers and all western people would applaud some plan which would allow all farmers to share equitably in the grain market. The most common suggestion is to have the crop year extended past July 31 for a limited number of days or weeks until space is made available at delivery points where it is needed. I understand, however, that this plays havoc with the tremendous bookkeeping operation of the Wheat Board.

My number one proposal would be to have a continuous quota. That is, instead of cutting off at three, four or five bushels on July 31 then starting back at one some time after August 1, why not continue on to nine or ten or twelve bushels or more next year, to whatever level sales will permit and of course top priority should at all times be given to maximizing our sales. This would allow the railroads and elevator companies ample time to equalize quotas. It will be said that this will allow people who did not have much wheat last year to deliver up to two years quota out of the new crop. Perhaps there would be a few but what is wrong with farmers who had a crop failure or a poor crop last year being permitted to make up for lost income in the coming year? I think this is a very fair proposal which should be tried through 1969-70. If it proves successful I do not see why a continuous quota should not become a permanent system, as long as the grain surplus may continue.

Another possibility is the addition, with affidavits if necessary, of the number of bushels farmers may not have been able to deliver on the five bushel quota by July 31 because of the vagaries of boxcar distribution to their authorized deliveries in their 1969-70 quota books. There is also the suggestion that the Wheat Board inspect the grain on the farm, grade it, seal it and pay the initial payment on it with delivery to be made when space becomes available over and above the new crop year quotas. Solving this dilemma would cost the government very little, perhaps nothing at all, but it would go a long way toward demonstrating the good faith of the government and its understanding of farmers' needs and feelings. Lacking such a solution I fear that many farmers will have their gross incomes arbitrarily reduced by up to 50 per cent and as anyone remotely knowledgeable about grain farming will recognize even a five bushel quota is not sufficient to pay operating costs.

Again, I plead for the appointment of a transport controller to co-ordinate grain movement. An effective controller would have averted the various bottlenecks we experienced throughout the season and would have prevented the anxiety and difficulties that I know we are confronted with now and will be in the next ten days. Many of the suggestions I have just made would cost the taxpayers little or nothing; others could cost a considerable sum. The question has been raised as to how such expenditures can be justified. Let me offer these few suggestions.

First, the government has a responsibility with regard to the minimum prices under the I.G.A. which I referred to earlier. Second, for several years farmers have been encouraged by government and other food experts to expand production. They did so in good faith and are now left holding the bag. Third, our Liberal farm program in the 1968 election campaign included an undertaking to export 1.3 billion bushels of wheat in three years and we are far behind in progress toward that goal. Fourth, the same program included a proposal for farm income maintenance and now is an appropriate time to put the proposal into operation.

[Mr. Douglas (Assiniboia).]

Fifth, other sectors of the economy have been able to organize, with government encouragement, to raise their prices, their profits, their professional fees and their wages to keep their incomes in line with costs. Farmers have been unable to do this, at least partly because of inadequate marketing legislation. Sixth, other Canadians are receiving varying amounts of government assistance. Examples are dairy farmers, fishermen, people requiring low rental housing, the auto industry, mining industries, special assistance to the maritimes and so on. Seventh, wheat and Canada are almost synonymous and the wheat industry will continue to be of major importance to the national economy and deserves some temporary special assistance to keep it viable and from becoming bankrupt.

Time will not permit me mentioning other desirable programs but I urge immediate action on these suggestions, especially on the guarantee of the I.G.A. floor price and on some system of equalizing delivery opportunities.

Mr. Benjamin: Mr. Speaker, if the hon. member would permit a question, I should like to ask him whether he has submitted these proposals to the government. If so, could he tell the house whether any member on the government side listened to him and what hope he has that any of his suggestions will be adopted.

Mr. Douglas (Assiniboia): In answer to the question I should say I have submitted some of these ideas to the government at various times and I am in the process of submitting them again. I have not had favourable answers yet but I am still hoping.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. R. N. Thompson (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, I must congratulate the hon. member for Assiniboia (Mr. Douglas). I think he has made a far greater contribution to this debate than either the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce (Mr. Pepin) or the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Olson) or the two of them together. I can assure him that if the government would listen to his views we could go home for the evening instead of being here through the night in an effort to support some of the things he has said. I regret very much, however, that the hon. member had to apologize for the action and the manners of some of the people last week in front of the Prime Minister. I certainly have to agree with what the hon. member said in respect of such action, because certainly we cannot condone that type of manner among us, let alone to the man who holds the high office of Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau). Really, what we witnessed in Saskatchewan was an inept Prime Minister in confrontation with an infuriated people.

• (10:20 p.m.)

What bothers me is that the week before last when we were denied the right to have this debate before the Prime Minister left for the West, he called the debate on the fundamental rule changes a stupid filibuster. He called the question period, which is intended to prod the government and keep it on its toes, a waste of time. In view of this he should not expect anything but the kind of abuse he got when he goes out to meet a public which cannot find the answer to its problems. It is about time the Prime Minister understood this because he is goading Canadians facing these problems to action which might well be more serious than what we have witnessed. Unless there are solutions to their problems we may see something more drastic than we have seen in the past. There is an agricultural crisis in the country far greater than anyone has suggested from the other side of the house, except perhaps the last speaker, that hon. member for Assiniboia (Mr. Douglas).

An hon. Member: This is a crisis in the world.

Mr. Thompson: It may be a crisis in the world, but right now we are concerned with the Canadian farmer. The Canadian Federation of Agriculture stated this very well at its last meeting in Calgary a few days ago. Let me quote from a press release that came out of that meeting:

> —Their review of the deteriorating grains market situation and of the income situation in the country has served only to add strength and urgency to already overwhelming evidence that immediate and very substantial action must be taken by the federal government. The disastrous income losses being suffered by western farmers and the western economy demand cash assistance now and very early initiation of action plans for the longer run. The seriousness of this situation cannot be overemphasized.

I am shocked tonight that the Minister of Agriculture, (Mr. Olson) is not even here for this debate. He was here long enough to make his own speech, but he was not even here at all this afternoon. This crisis is worthy of far more action than his remarks tonight which were related strictly to the immediate cash crisis. It is also an interesting fact that the Minister of Agriculture when he talks about this problem today is talking in an altogether different language than the language he used when he sat with me in another section of this chamber. It would be very interesting to put the speeches he made then and the speeches he makes now alongside each other. He certainly speaks in support of policies which according to his earlier speeches were not acceptable then.

An hon. Member: You also sound different.

Mr. Thompson: What I am saying tonight is what I have always said about this farm crisis and I will have to continue to say it until some different agricultural policy comes forth from the government. Let me quote from an editorial which appeared in the Ottawa Citizen on July 18. This is not a newspaper which is known to criticize the government. The editorial reads:

> The wheat farmer today is not in the situation of the Indian, the Métis or the fisherman. For these latter groups, poverty and low income are entrenched in their way of life: The challenge to society is to change that way of life.
>
> The wheat farmer, on the other hand, is like a man hit by a tornado, a flash flood or other natural disaster. His fortunes have been spectacularly reversed overnight. He possesses a viable, highly developed business operation—and his problem is to keep it from going under in this crisis period.

Those are correct words, and that is why the right hon. Prime Minister is wrong when he tries to make a comparison for the benefit of those people down east who are facing trouble of an altogether different nature. The editorial continues by giving Dominion Bureau of Statistics figures in relation to the situation in respect of farms:

> (D.B.S. figures give some indication of the impact of the trade slump to date: In the first quarter of this year, wheat farmers received $94.3 million for delivery of their wheat, plus another $27.1 million in clean-up payments, compared to $154.2 and $77.2 million a year earlier, and a total of $392.2 million in 1967).
>
> No country can afford not to make a financial set-back of these proportions a top, emergency priority, however anxious its government is to balance the national accounts. The alternative which is no alternative at all, is to see an industry, or a goodly part of it, wiped out over night—and to create displacements that will endure long into the future.

I submit these comments and say to hon. members opposite who do not even have the politeness to listen to what is being said, that it is not only a short range problem that farmers are facing, it is a long range problem. Furthermore, the Bureau of Statistics farm cash receipts report of July 9, 1969 points out that the total market returns to the producers of wheat at the time of delivery was down $60 million.

Let me say to hon. members that the farming industry is the only industry in this country that is asked to operate on less than what it costs to operate. Unfortunately, the farmer does not have the ability to set the price for what he produces; he has to accept the market price given to him.

What happened as a result of this cash crisis is that farmers face cost of operation which has gone up in the last 20 years by more than double whereas the price he receives for what he produces has gone down. It has been said by the Minister of Agriculture that those farmers who have stock are not so badly off, but one must remember that the prices farmers get for cattle today, even though they are higher than they have been, are not more than double what they were 10 to 20 years ago. At the same time the farmer is being asked to take something like $\frac{2}{3}$ of the price for coarse grains and considerably less for wheat because he is often forced to sell his wheat to feed lots of 60 or 70 cents a bushel instead of 1.50 at the least. As a result he is caught in this price squeeze about which he can do nothing.

The farmer is not asking for charity, he is asking only for a fair price which will cover the cost of production and give him something to live on besides. To justify the action I have suggested let me point out that the farmers can provide evidence to the effect that no industry has improved its efficiency as much as the agricultural industry in the last 20 years. That is the only reason farmers have been able to survive.

In view of this deficit cash position the western farmers are in trouble. This situation does not only affect the western farmer but the farm implement dealers as well. We have been told they have dropped 50 per cent of their sales this year. The Saskatchewan Implement Dealers Association reports that the decrease in the sales of grain will result in 50 per cent of its 450 members being forced out of business due to an inability to finance inventory.

We do not have to consider only farm implement dealers. What is the situation in respect of the farm fuel dealers and the problems they have in collecting money for fuel necessary for the operations of the farm? It is all right to compare a farmer to a fisherman, but a fisherman does not operate without a boat, and a farmer today, as efficient as he is, cannot farm without equipment and a heavy overhead cost.

I agree with the Canadian Federation of Agriculture in its protest to the federal government and the statement which came out of a meeting of July 16 which reads:

> All agree there is a crisis in the prairie grain economy—a crisis of low income caused by falling prices and sales. Detailed proposals have been made by the federation to the federal government for short term assistance, for minimum price maintenance, for a more adequate domestic wheat price for human use, for a systematic longer-term policy approach. Yet no response to these proposals has been received by us one way or the other.

• (10:30 p.m.)

There is one exception. A week later there was a response by the Prime Minister when he said, "we are going to put in $250 million as a cash injection into the western economy". This was not something he decided last week. This was something this house approved several weeks ago. But again it has no relation whatsoever to the long range and basic problems that the farmer faces, and it is small wonder that the farmer reacted in the angry way he did. The Canadian Federation of Agriculture said specifically that the government has done nothing for the grain farmer except to increase his advance payment and help him go deeper into debt. This is what we have done three or four times through different pieces of legislation this past year. The federation says that the government has failed to take the action necessary to set up national marketing boards which have been requested by producers. A request for a Canadian egg commission was made more than a year ago, the federation stated, and there is still no answer in this regard.

The government has fobbed off producer requests for federal-provincial producer discussions once a year at which producer representations can be received. Then, there is the Agricultural and Rural Developmsnt Agency, known as ARDA, which has been lumped together with the new Regional Economic Expansion Department which no longer has any agricultural base at all. These are some of the other things about which the farmers are angry.

In the short time at my disposal here this evening let us come back to some of the suggestions that have been made today by the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce

(Mr. Pepin) and the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Olson). It was only a couple of months ago that the Minister of Agriculture reaffirmed his own belief in a two price system. I quote from a Canadian Press release dated May 1, 1969. It reads in part:

> Agriculture minister H. A. Olson reaffirmed Thursday his belief in the principle of a two price system for wheat, but gave no indication that it would become government policy.

Why did he not have something to say about that tonight? Why did he have to wait for a backbencher from his own party who knows about farm problems to talk about alternatives other than the short range advance payments and increased debt solution which the Minister of Agriculture suggest? The article goes on to say:

> As a Social Credit MP for Medicine Hat before joining the Liberals, Mr. Olson persistently called for a two price system.

We do not hear very much about that at present. When there is talk about a wheat crisis and when some members from across the aisle talk with not much evidence that they know very much about problems in agriculture, and when the farmers are told they should not grow so much grain, I wonder just how foolish the government can become in its reasoning. At least a third of the world's peoples, and that is more than a billion people, have gone to bed hungry tonight. Why cannot we do something drastic as far as the agricultural policy of this country is concerned. Why can we not back up what the Liberal party said in the last election, that is "Go ahead and sow your grain; we will sell it"? I remember it very well. Why can we not take what our farmers can produce in their efficiency and make it available to a hungry world?

We have heard some suggestions made here today. One which was made by a member to my left was ridiculed by the other side of the house. I do not think there was anything to ridicule about his suggestion. When there are people starving in the world and we have more grain than we know what to do with, there must be some way of making our surpluses available to those who do not have enough to satisfy their hunger. Why do the Minister of Agriculture and the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce not take the lead in convincing the government to say to the farmer, "We will buy your grain. We will help you provide storage for it; we will store it on your farm and we will see that this grain goes out to the people who need it all across the world." It may require the adjustment of the whole system of international settlements to different criteria. It does not necessarily mean a complete give away. It may require us to accept credits from countries in their own monetary exchange rather than demanding dollars for what we sell.

In the long range program we will not be able to continue using crutches and putting out palliatives of more debts and advance payments without solving the basic problems that our farmers face. Why do we not build more elevators to store grain? It has already been mentioned that one does not have to go farther than the scriptures to see why grain might be stored. Perhaps we should put the extra crop away for a few years until a time when we might not have grain or make it available to other parts of the world who do not have it. This is what we should hear the government talking about. Some of our newspapers are becoming aware of these problems and offer solutions which might be a little different from the status quo which is being advocated by the government. I am referring to the Toronto Telegram of July 16 where the following was stated:

> As long as there are people in many parts of the world who go to bed hungry each night, Canada, as one of the major food producing nations, should continue to raise cereal grains and other foods and distribute these free to the needy countries.
>
> The government should pay reasonable support prices to the farmers for wheat and the other food essentials produced.

No industry can survive when they are being forced to operate at less than the cost of their operations. I say to some members across the floor who are making a lot of noise at present, in the words of the article:

> Since the Trudeau government took office, it has been reassessing Canada's contribution to such military alliances as NATO, NORAD and to various police-keeping forces. The Prime Minister has indicated that cutbacks in these could result in the savings of millions which could be used to assist some of the developing nations.
>
> What a glorious opportunity he has now to help these countries in a tangible way. They could use the wheat and other food we have in great surplus and we should get it to them.

We could make arrangements and settlements other than those we now make. We could take the lead in convincing the rest of the wheat producing world that they have an obligation in this as well. The government hopes that the United States might listen to their cries as we beg for mercy from them and from their policies as they relate to the International Grains Arrangement. Why do we not take the lead and try to show them that we have a responsibility which goes beyond the immediate economic situation of the day? The article continues:

> Canada's fertile fields should not be permitted to lie fallow when the world needs their production.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. McBride: Would the hon. member permit a question?

Mr. Thompson: I only have a few minutes left. The hon. member can ask his question afterwards.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Thompson: I am merely following the pattern of the Minister of Agriculture and of other speakers who have preceded me on the other side of the house. What we need is a long term agricultural policy in addition to short range and urgent help which must be given now. What kind of pressure and what kind of demonstration will move the Trudeau government to this kind of action?

The crisis is here now. Unless we do something in this regard so far as Canadian agricultural industry is concerned we will be into an economic crisis before too many months have passed, one that we cannot even visualise now. The Canadian economy cannot afford the consequences of further delay. While it may help farmers for the few months during the harvest period to get an advance on the grain that they are not able to sell, unless we bring in some policies such as the ones that have been suggested here not only from this side of the house but, for example, such as the very sound ones that have been made by the hon. member for Assiniboia (Mr. Douglas) we are going to destroy the basic industry of this country which is still agriculture. This industry is the strength and backbone not only of our economy at home but also of our whole foreign policy in our relations with the countries less fortunate than ours.

Mr. McBride: Will the hon. member permit a question?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): The hon. member will need the unanimous consent of the house since the time allotted the hon. member for Red Deer (Mr. Thompson) has expired.

Mr. John Burton (Regina East): The need for this debate has arisen because of the lack of government action and policies to deal with the crisis that is facing western Canada at the present time.

Mr. Gibson: Nonsense.

Mr. Burton: You do not know anything about it. This afternoon and this evening we heard two ministers of the government take part in this debate. The Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce (Mr. Pepin) in his genial way took us around the world and dealt with the international grain picture. I think that most members are aware of some of the problems that exist. I cannot say that his review added to the knowledge of hon. members in this regard, but I have no objection to his pointing out some of the factors that exist in the international grain markets.

• (10:40 p.m.)

The minister went on to list a number of things he suggested had been done by the government and that the government was doing to deal with the present situation. He pointed, of course, to a number of policies which were in fact introduced prior to the coming to office of the Liberal administration. Then we had the speech of the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Olson). It seemed to me that when the Minister of Agriculture was preparing his notes for this debate he must have written a marginal note in which he said: Case weak. Shout like hell. I say this because I was very disappointed in the contribution of the minister. He first of all suggested that the major problem is cash flow. All hon. members will recognize that there is a cash flow problem. But surely if the Minister of Agriculture and other ministers of this administration have not as yet recognized that there is a more basic economic problem facing the agricultural industry in western Canada, they are not exhibiting a very high degree of competence.

The minister went on to reject one of the proposals put forward by hon. members, namely, acreage payments. I recognize that there are pros and cons with respect to the administration of acreage payments. However, I suggest it is one way of providing a cash injection into the western Canadian economy that would bolster the general economic picture. Other proposals have been made. My colleague the hon. member for Saskatoon-Biggar (Mr. Gleave) proposed a series of deficiency payments which could achieve the same end and possibly avoid some of the administrative problems referred to by the Minister of Agriculture. However, the minister did not deal with that proposal.

Unfortunately the Minister of Agriculture is no longer in his seat. He was here for only a short time this evening, as was pointed out by another hon. member. If the minister is not prepared to consider acreage payments and other proposals put forward, what proposals has he for alleviating the situation that exists in western Canada? If he rejects this form of payment, surely he should come up with some other means of providing a cash injection into the western Canadian economy.

The two major farm organizations, the Canadian Federation of Agriculture and the National Farmers' Union made clear in their presentations to the government this spring that while they might favour one particular means of cash payment over another, in fact they thought the major problem was to provide a direct infusion of cash into the western Canadian agricultural economy. The government has apparently failed to take this into account or give it any serious or adequate consideration.

The Minister of Agriculture went on to point out the advantages and benefits accruing from the cash advance program. Of course, the cash advance program was approved by all of us in the house. It has made a contribution to the welfare of the agricultural community and has in fact given farmers an advance on the production which they are unable to market immediately because of problems with which we are all familiar. This is why the cash advance program was advocated some 15 or 16 years ago; it is why it was introduced some ten or eleven years ago. It has played a very useful role in the western Canadian economy. But surely, Mr. Speaker, the government must by now have received the message that something more than this program is required. It must by now realize it is not enough.

The Minister of Agriculture also referred to two steps taken during the past year with respect to the cash advance program. I do not blame him for attempting to take the credit for these steps. However, when the minister and the government overplay this measure and say it is the solution, it will provide great benefits, and trumpet the $250 million figure about and say this is what the government is doing for the farmers of western Canada, I suggest it is the type of statement which produces the kind of reaction and frustration which in fact resulted in some irrational actions during the past week which the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) could tell us more about. This type of proposal simply will not deal with the problem that exists at the present time.

I am very glad that the Minister of Agriculture has again resumed his seat. I place this on the record because I commented on his absence just a few minutes ago. Other hon. members might have done the same when they were referring to certain absences earlier in the evening.

The final clincher of the Minister of Agriculture was when he said that as of May 1, 75 per cent of the farmers owing money to the Farm Credit Corporation made their regular payments, and only 25 per cent, I take it, were in arrears. Is the minister seriously suggesting that this is an indication that everything is all right, namely, because one quarter of the farmers owing money to the Farm Credit Corporation were in arrears as of May 1? I know farmers in western Canada who were able to scrape up some of their last pennies to make their payment on May 1, and they have no idea where the next payment will come from or how they will meet it.

The minister then referred to the remaining 25 per cent who were in arrears and suggested that one half of them were already in arrears. I would not attempt to suggest the motive of the minister in making that statement. However, the effect of his statement was to cast a slur on all western Canadian farmers. His statement that roughly 12½ per cent, or one-eighth, of the farmers were already in arrears left the impression that those farmers were in effect a bad credit risk and were not meeting payments they should be able to meet. I suggest to the Minister of Agriculture, who seems to be flitting in and out of the house at the present time—

An hon. Member: He is back again.

Mr. Burton: The minister is again in his seat. I suggest to the minister that the fact 12½ per cent, or whatever is the exact figure, of our farmers were in arrears prior to April 30 last, was due to the already serious financial trouble they were experiencing. The fact that one-eighth of our farmers were in arrears as of April 30 is, I suggest, one indicator of the seriousness of the situation that is developing. Farmers in western Canada can see that the picture is getting worse, and it will get even worse. I suggest this is one reason why they are not swallowing the statements of ministers who suggest that the cash advance program is such a great thing and will solve the present situation. The government knows very well that you cannot borrow your way out of debt, that in fact this is simply an advance loan on money already owed the farmer for the production sitting in storage on his farm. He will have to pay it back as soon as he is able to make deliveries. Thus, I suggest, the government should look further afield to some sort of effective solution to the present situation.

The hon. member for Assiniboia (Mr. Douglas), to his credit, put forward a number of proposals most of which were in line with those made by my colleagues and myself. But somehow he seemed to be a voice crying in the wilderness. He could not even work up any applause from the government benches while making his speech and placing his proposals before the government. To the credit of that hon. member, he was perfectly frank and honest when he answered a question from the hon. member for Regina-Lake Centre (Mr. Benjamin), and stated he had placed these proposals before the government but as yet had not received a favourable reply. What sort of response are these proposals receiving? This is an example of what is causing the frustration that people are now witnessing in western Canada.

• (10:50 p.m.)

A while ago the Prime Minister made reference to psychological alienation in western Canada. I suggest to him that some cold, hard cash in the hands of the western Canadian farmers at the present time in the form of income assistance would go a long way toward relieving the psychological alienation that he had noted over the last few months, and which I have no doubt he observed more closely last week.

One thing I noted about the speeches of both the Minister of Agriculture and the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce was that neither dealt with the substance of the motion introduced by my leader and seconded by myself. Neither dealt with the immediate situation that had brought about the motion, namely the reduction in wheat prices in the United States during the past few days. Neither minister indicated to the house what action the Canadian Wheat Board or the Canadian government is taking in this regard. Neither minister would even indicate what was the response of the Canadian Wheat Board. I should like to know whether they have lowered their prices today.

We on this side have heard reports through the media that wheat prices are being lowered, yet, as I say, the ministers would not make a statement about what the Canadian Wheat Board had done in response to the United States announcement. It seems to me that if these ministers wanted to make a positive contribution to the debate, this is one matter on which they should have reported to the house.

In addition, neither minister dealt with the basic income situation in western Canada which is the consequence of a whole series of things that have happened over the past year, the latest development being one further example. Neither minister chose to deal with the income situation or to voice their own views about it, let alone indicate the attitude of the government. I do not expect them to have any policy proposals to offer tonight. After all, this would be an indication that they were bowing to and giving in to the opposition's demands. I suppose they have to stage these things in order to get the best possible advantage. But the farmers of western Canada are not going to put up with any more staging in regard to this particular matter; they demand action, and they demand it now.

The hon. member for Saskatoon-Biggar (Mr. Gleave), in commenting on some of the incidents that took place during the Prime Minister's tour last week, quite rightly pointed out that the root cause of some of the demonstrations was the refusal of the Prime Minister prior to his visit to meet representatives of two major farm organizations the Saskatchewan Farmers Union and the National Farmers Union. When people who have the right to speak on behalf of the farmers of Saskatchewan and western Canada cannot get to talk to the Prime Minister, I suggest the reaction we witnessed in Regina, Saskatoon and other points last week has to result.

Let me, along with others, make it quite clear that I do not condone some of the events that took place last week. But if in fact we are going to have some sort of participatory democracy about which we have heard so much from the Prime Minister and members of the government during the past year and a half we will have to have both a change of attitude and a change of heart. We will have to take a different approach to problems such as these.

The background to the present situation extends over a number of years. I am not going to take the time of the house to deal with it in any detail. Mention has been made of a number of developments over the past three years, and since hon. members are familiar with the general pattern I will not elaborate on it. However, I should like to refer to a statement made by a former Minister of Trade and Commerce, the present Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Sharp), as well as to some statements made by Mr. Winters when he was Minister of Trade and Commerce. The general attitude at that time was to tell the farmers of western Canada: "You grow the wheat and we'll sell it".

This indicates to me that neither minister knew what he was talking about. Neither had any idea where he was going in terms of agricultural and trade policy. What they said was simply an item of political propaganda.

The farmers of western Canada are getting fed up with this sort of cavalier attitude on the part of the government and its ministers and they are demanding straightforward answers to straightforward questions. They want action taken by the government. During the past two or three years we have witnessed a series of developments which have steadily eroded the economic position and welfare of western Canadian farmers and placed many western Canadian farmers on the verge of bankruptcy.

The government has asked us what our proposals are and what we suggest the government should do. We have put forward all sorts of proposals. The Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Basford) tried to make a little political hay when he said that the hon. member for Assiniboia (Mr. Douglas) had placed more proposals forward tonight in regard to this particular matter than had been put forward at any previous time in this house. The minister knows that that is not the case. He is aware that both within and without the house spokesmen of the farmers of western Canada have advocated a comprehensive program involving both short-term and long-term measures to deal with their problems.

Just one example of this was given at the meeting between officials of the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool and the Prime Minister in Regina last week. At that time several short term, immediate proposals were put before the Prime Minister. The first was that there be an immediate payment to the grain producers based on 1968-69 cultivated acreage of $2 per acre up to a maximum of $2,000. Secondly, that there be a guaranteed floor price for export wheat of not less than the present International Grains Arrangement minimum of $1.95½ basis No. 1 Northern at the Lakehead. The third was that sales of all wheat for domestic human consumption by the Canadian Wheat Board be at a price of $2.95½ per bushel. A number of other long-term proposals were also placed before the Prime Minister.

I do not see how the government can get around providing a guaranteed wheat price based on the International Grains Arrangement minima. After all, this was an agreement that was entered into with other nations of the world, not by the farmers of western Canada or by the Canadian Wheat Board, but by the nation of Canada. It is the Canadian nation that has the responsibility of living up to the agreement in terms of its consequences for western Canadian farmers.

With regard to the two-price system, farm organizations, my own political party and even friends of hon. members opposite have made certain representations. I am sure that even the premier of Saskatchewan advocated a certain course of action. I am sure that members across the way are familiar with this hon. gentleman.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. I regret to interrupt the hon. gentleman but his time has expired, unless he has unanimous consent to continue.

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Burton: Typical Liberal arrogance!

• (11:00 p.m.)

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): The hon. member for Brandon-Souris.

Mr. Boulanger: On a point of order, sir, I had hoped you would recognize me. I have been on my feet a couple of times trying to catch your eye.

Mr. Paproski: What does the hon. member know about wheat?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): I have already recognized the hon. member for Brandon-Souris.

Mr. Boulanger: On a point of order, sir, while I would not question Your Honour's decision, I wish to point out that I have been here all day as an observer. I am not a farm expert, perhaps, but that does not prevent my noticing that only two socialists and one Creditiste member remain in the house. It was the socialists who insisted on this debate.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order, please.

[Translation]

Order, please. In my view, the hon. member's remarks have nothing to do with the Standing Orders.

[English]

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Does the hon. member feel better now?

Mr. Boulanger: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker. The hon. member should not say things like that.

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order, please. I suggest that the hon. member's remarks have nothing to do with the Standing Orders.

[English]

Hon. W. G. Dinsdale (Brandon-Souris): Mr. Speaker, I sympathize with the frustration of the hon. member who raised a point of order a moment ago in not being able to participate in the debate. Ordinarily I would gladly forego my opportunity to speak, if he could be given the floor. The hour is getting late and, as the hon. member who raised the point of order said, not as many attend here as attended earlier in the day.

Mr. Paproski: Liberal members are staying only because they have been told to.

Mr. Dinsdale: I am speaking at slightly after eleven o'clock this evening, Mr. Speaker, because this is the only opportunity we shall have to speak on the matter which is most important, not only for the prairie grain farmers but, for the entire economy of Canada.

Mr. Gibson: Hear, hear.

Mr. Dinsdale: I appreciate the applause coming from that agricultural expert, the hon. member for Hamilton-Wentworth (Mr. Gibson). He has been most vociferous in this debate and I hope he will make some formal comments before we finish.

I was in the west last week in response to a growing chorus of protest that has come to me from farmers in my constituency. Last week the Prime Minister was also in western Canada. I am sure that the strength of the protest greeting him made manifest to the Prime Minister—especially when representatives of prairie grain producers confronted him—that we are faced with a fundamental, critical, economic problem in Canada even though it is obvious, after listening to comments from the other side of the house, that hon. members over there are not yet convinced that the situation requires immediate and urgent action. I was amazed, as the Winnipeg Free Press so aptly put it last Saturday that in taking this pilgrimage to the west the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) was going on a voyage of exploration and discovery to find out what makes things tick in western Canada. It was shocking to realize that after having been in office for one year, the Prime Minister for the first time was going west to discover what western Canada is all about.

It seems I have been under the wrong impression. I had thought that the Prime Minister's lack of information and resultant lack of action in dealing with the situation had been due to the fact that the regional advisers had taken the place of the elected representatives in his own party from the western part of Canada. After listening to some hon. members from the other side of this house, particularly the hon. member for Calgary South (Mr. Mahoney) who comes from a western province, I have come to the conclusion that the fault is not with the representatives in the regional desks, but with the failure of some western M.P.'s sitting on the government side of the house to correctly interpret the situation to the government.

The hon. member in a carefully prepared and well read speech obviously was acting as an apologist, trying to explain away this critical economic problem. I heard other members, not in formal speeches, commenting that the situation arises from an uncontrollable world situation, world economic agriculture problems and world surplus. That seems to be the excuse for failure of the government to act on a matter that has been brought in dramatic terms repeatedly before the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau), the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce (Mr. Pepin), the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Olson) and the balance of the cabinet.

I have a stack of formal briefs on my desk, some of which date back to last April. I quote from a brief presented by the Manitoba Farm Bureau dated April 18, 1969, which concluded with these very strong words:

> At the risk of being repetitious, we feel we cannot overemphasize the seriousness of the immediate situation of some Manitoba farmers. We appeal to you for some means of short term assistance such as a transfer payment which will allow these people to literally survive until effective readjustment programs can be implemented.

The Prime Minister went west last week to discover this fact, although it had before him and members of the government for several months. To put it in specific terms, I think one of the best presentations that came across my desk, and I am sure the desks of other hon. members, was from the Canadian Federation of Agricultural. It is dated May 28. I wish to read to hon. members, who still apparently think what we are dealing with is related to an international agricultural crisis and not an emergency that has been described by several members in the debate as putting the grain producers of western Canada in a hopeless and impossible financial situation.

The situation was described last May 28 by the Canadian Federation of Agriculture as follows:

> The income position of many prairie grain farmers is clearly disastrous. Deliveries of wheat to prairie country elevators are running (April 23) 84 million bushels less than the previous year to the same time. The previous year's deliveries ('67-'68) were in turn down 158 million bushels from 1966-'67. It is clear that the two-year drop in annual deliveries ('66-'67 to '68-'69) will reach from 250-300 million bushels at least which at $1.60 per bushel represents from 400 to 500 million dollars. Farmers cannot live with this kind of decline in their returns.

• (11:10 p.m.)

Here is the situation, presented in the proverbial nutshell, so that the hon. member for Calgary South (Mr. Mahoney) and others who have spoken in an apologetic vein this evening on behalf of the government, must realize there is a real financial emergency in western Canada. The government has known about this for the past four or five months. As I say, I was shocked when the hon. member for Calgary South (Mr. Mahoney) tried to present the myth that there are wealthy farmers who take trips to the south and drive Cadillacs, and all the other nonsense we hear from hon. members in this house, in an effort to avoid facing the economic reality that was so clearly presented last May in the excellent brief of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture. This not only affects western Canada. Wheat is one of Canada's basic export commodities. If we are down $500 million in financial returns because of the disastrous decline in wheat exports, this will have a significant impact on the Canadian economy from one end of Canada to the other. It will have an effect on the manufacture of machinery, automobiles and all the other articles which largely one way or the other affect manufacturing industries in central Canada.

It was the present Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Sharp), when he was the minister of finance in 1964 when the boom was really under way in Canada, who made a statement to the effect that one of the main ingredients in the buoyancy of the Canadian economy was the strong position of prairie grain exports on the international market. If it was true that this was one of the reasons for the national buoyancy then, the converse is precisely true that the position of prairie grain exports now could have a disastrous effect on the total Canadian economy. We must get emergency cash into the hands of the farmers together with some long term program to deal with the disastrous effect of the lack of dollars. Farm income requires immediate emergency action on the part of the government of Canada. The western Canadian economy suffers from other disabilities in addition to the immediate crisis. The proposal of the hon. member for Winnipeg South (Mr. Richardson), the minister in charge of supplies, is to decentralize the Mint and establish it somewhere on the prairies. This is hardly adequate consideration.

Let me try to destroy the myth perpetuated by the hon. member for Calgary South as a spokesman for the west. His viewpoint is incomprehensible. Let us look at the figures in the green book brought down by the Minister of National Revenue (Mr. Côté) recently which covers the fiscal year 1966-67. This is from the records of the Department of National Revenue itself. Of the 89 cities listed in order of income tax paid, Winnipeg, the capital of the province of Manitoba, was 53 on the list. Brandon, my own city, was 79 on the list. Portage Laprairie, in the heart of the rich plains, the great grain producing part of Manitoba, was 89 on the list of the 89 cities so far as income and taxes paid were concerned. Here is a real measure of the actual state of the economy. It does not indicate there are too many prairie folk taking holidays in the south or driving gold plated Cadillacs. I could give the picture for the province of Saskatchewan. Saskatoon is 38, Regina is 46, Prince Albert is 49 and Moose Jaw is 65. Oakville and Oshawa are near the top, and they had the benefit of an $80 million injection into the automobile industry. The explanation was this was good for employment and good for the economy as a whole.

By the same token a cash injection into a sorely tried prairie economy at this particular moment would have the same beneficial effect. Toronto is 13. Montreal, which is supposed to be operating under financial straits and has had to resort to lotteries and such like as well as having had the cancellation of the $125 million Expo deficit, is 20 on the list. This is not too bad when you compare it with the general picture. The city of the hon. member for Calgary South, Calgary, was 16. That for the most part I think is due not to the wheat economy but the oil economy. Lethbridge is 56 and Red Deer is 60. I present these figures to indicate that in addition to the immediate crisis as outlined in the statement from the Federation of Agriculture, there has been a relative position of financial inequity because of the problem outlined by the minister of supply with regard to location of industry head offices and all the other disparities which affect the western economy in broad terms.

This is the immediate crisis. Obviously, the many supporters of the government do not appreciate it. The Minister of Agriculture does not realize the significance of it. According to press statements, the Prime Minister is now aware that there is a major crisis because certainly it was brought home to him in a very vociferous manner which indicated the degree of the farmers' frustration. We take the opportunity of this debate today and this evening to urge upon the government some action to relieve the hard pressed prairie farmers.

Before I conclude, perhaps I might be allowed to mention a more immediate and urgent problem. That is the assurance from the government as we come to the end of the current crop year that every delivery point in western Canada will be assured of at least a five-bushel delivery quota. One of the protests I heard last week, as well as the letters which come across my desk copies of which were sent to the Minister of Agriculture, the Prime Minister and so on, are to the effect that there is still a shortage of box cars. Many points are still on a three-bushel quota without any hope of any delivery of the three-bushel quota. We need immediate emergency action to at least assure this minimum delivery to all points across western Canada.

Finally, because my time is limited, let me say in respect of the Prime Minister sallying forth into the west last week on a voyage of discovery to see what the prairie problem was all about, that he was really motivated by political events in the province of Manitoba. I do not think there was a more direct indication of a political protest than that which exists on the prairies. This message came through very loud and clear to hon. gentlemen on the other side of the house. They are aware of the political facts of life, and some of them might be whistling in the graveyard, if we may judge from the speeches made today, but the events in Manitoba above all else should convey a message to the politician that these people demand action from the government at this time.

Mr. Steven E. Paproski (Edmonton Centre): Mr. Speaker, having come from a metropolis such as Edmonton, which is the Klondike city of western Canada and strongly in support of the underdog, I find the government treatment of the wheat situation a rank scandal. In his trip to western Canada, the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) revealed the mind of a bureaucrat, bound by regimentation, quoting regulations, and reiterating old policies as though these things were the answers. Wheat farmers cannot eat policies. He parroted the economists' argument that if wheat is not selling, if farmers are short of cash, it must be because they are running uneconomical farms. How is it that farms now described as uneconomical were making money a few years ago when this government first came into office?

• (11:20 p.m.)

The Prime Minister's argument is simply to put the blame on the Canadian wheat farmer for the government's failure to sell wheat. It is a straight case of buck passing, one of the most blatant ever seen in Canadian politics. The Prime Minister's brand of suave, philosophical soft-soap no longer washes with people desperately in need of a clear, effective policy from the government. By that I do not mean words. I mean action and cash guarantees.

As soon as the word "cash" is mentioned, the little coterie around the Prime Minister start yelling "subsidy". Subsidy is not necessarily a bad word. Ask the auto-makers. It is too bad that the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce (Mr. Pepin) is not here at present. I ask those in search of the solution to the wheat problem to read the Bible. My friend, the hon. member for Red Deer (Mr.

Thompson) mentioned it. He took the reference right out of my mouth. Read about the seven lean years and the seven fat years. That is the cycle in which we find ourselves. Joseph's solution was to store the wheat in the fat years and sell it in the lean years, just in case hon. gentlemen opposite do not know about it. Nothing has changed. The situation now is the same in its essentials as was the biblical situation 4,000 years ago. The only difference now is that the government is asking the farmer to bear the storage costs, the handling costs and all the other costs resulting from the government's stupidity and mismanagement.

Let us look at how this came about. When this government came into power wheat markets were flourishing and taxes were 30 per cent below what they are now. Our national income was up while prices were down. I am referring to 1963. The Liberals came to power on a phony issue which no one ever bothers to discuss now, namely the Bomarc issue. It is as dead as last year's wheat sales. They proceeded by mismanagement and neglect to destroy the huge wheat markets we had built up from 1961 on. Last summer they sat with their hands folded for months during the interim period after the International Wheat Agreement ran out. They trotted over to Europe and let the Canadian farmers be sold down the river, while prices dropped. They were afraid to stand up to the United States when that country, along with France, shot holes in the International Grains Arrangement which has now been totally repudiated by the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce, who has no more understanding of wheat than he has of trade or industry. I am sorry that the minister is not here because I hate to say things like this about the fine gentleman.

Mr. Dinsdale: This is the truth.

Mr. Paproski: The government refused to step in during the month-long grain handlers strike last year. They refused to step in while shipping piled up in Vancouver harbour because box cars were not available to transport wheat. They did nothing while our markets went down the drain. Now, the Prime Minister goes to western Canada and puts on a performance that can only be described in waltz time, perhaps "Voices of Spring", or "Tales from the Vienna Woods". Here we have the Prime Minister of a government which lost the Russian wheat contract and the Chinese wheat contract and sat helplessly while our customers went elsewhere because of uncertain delivery. Then, the Prime Minister has the gall to say to the most efficient producers in the world: You are not economical. Western Canada should rise in its wrath and give its answers to the government; I am confident it will do so. Make no mistake, Mr. Speaker, the wheat issue is not a local nor a regional issue, as the hon. member for Calgary South (Mr. Mahoney) knows; it is a national issue of first importance.

Mr. Boulanger: To you it is a political issue.

Mr. Paproski: This nation cannot afford to lose the massive injection of income we have received through wheat sales. The economy will suffer a heavy blow because of the loss of half a billion dollars in international wheat sales, or even half that amount, which is the expectation for the coming year.

The impact of the government's failure to sell our wheat will show up almost immediately in the economy of western and eastern Canada. Not only is the western farmer a major producer; he is also a major consumer. The effect will be seen in reduced sales of new automobiles manufactured in eastern Canada, reduced sales of farm machinery also manufactured in eastern Canada, reduced sales of appliances, clothing and a host of other consumer goods on which the economy of the country is balanced. An economy already on the razor's edge and suffering from overtaxation, overpricing, over inventories and unjustifiable interest rates cannot easily sustain the shock of a major blow at this time.

The tragedy is that in the face of a national calamity the Prime Minister has no solution beyond the negative, bureaucratic formula of overproduction and uneconomic operation. Surely, we have gone beyond the stage in our economic capabilities to react to a situation such as this by burning production or plowing it under. The Prime Minister's text books must be 35 years out of date.

It is up to the government to produce a solution that will get the farmer off the hook, move the wheat and restore confidence in the Canadian economy. If they cannot do that, they should resign and we will do it for them.

The farmers' union proposed the solution that the government take over our surplus wheat. What is wrong with that? The government's answer is to let the farmer take it over. Why should the farmer, the producer, who has fulfilled his part of the contract by producing the world's finest wheat at low cost, now be told he must hold the bag? The government should take over the surplus wheat and pay the farmer the price he would have received if the government's incompetence had not allowed the price to drop. The farmer should be paid, say, $1.65 a bushel and the wheat should be stored in government granaries. In a year, two years or three years, when wheat is once again in worldwide demand, the government could sell it and get its money back. The government is acting as though it is up to the farmer to sell his wheat. It is not, it is up to the government. The farmer has grown the wheat, now let the government do its part.

• (11:30 p.m.)

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, we are discussing one of the most crucial problems that confront the Canadian economy today. My remarks will be brief because the hon. member for Lanark and Renfrew (Mr. McBride) seems to indicate that he wishes to participate.

In discussing this subject we are talking about the livelihood, not of just a few hundred or a few thousand people, but literally tens of thousands of people in western Canada. The International Grains Arrangement breakdown is not going to help them but will increase the danger that each and every one of them is facing. Yesterday was one of the most important days in the history of mankind. Mankind finally realized a dream that has existed for centuries. Man perfected his technology and skill, reached out and landed on the moon. We hope that within the next couple of days a successful return to earth will be achieved. I think all of us would want to congratulate those involved in this mission, but I hope that this great achievement in technology, science, cybernation and so on can be translated into the commencement of a new chapter in moral and social improvement the world over.

I have often said, both in this chamber and outside, that it is something of a contradiction that we are able to land a man on the moon but yet we are unable to sell grain. It is even more ironic that although we cannot sell our grain, half the people in the world are either starving or suffering from malnutrition. The hon. member for Red Deer (Mr. Thompson) talked of this earlier this evening. This situation creates a certain unrest and alienation in the world today. When people are hungry they are not happy, and this leads to restlessness and rebellion. It opens the door to war, revolution and so on. We, in Canada possess one of the best means of promoting friendship—food, bushels of grain. Yet we are sitting here tonight when this country has a surplus of about one billion bushels of grain and yet people go hungry.

This is not the result of the inefficiency of the farmers. In a recent by-election campaign in Saskatchewan I talked to dozens of farmers, and one of them who lived outside the town of Foam Lake had a 1968 Pontiac parked in his driveway without any licence plates. When I asked him why the car was not licensed, he said that he did not have the money, though he had 17,000 bushels of unsold grain in his bins. This is one illustration of the situation of some of those who live in the west and gives those who have not visited the west some idea of conditions there.

The leader of my party mentioned the fact that a year or so ago the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) of this country told the farmers: "You grow the grain and we'll sell it". During his recent trip out west he said that the government could not sell any more grain so our farmers should not grow it. That statement came from the Prime Minister, who, not long before, had talked about hypocrisy. If that attitude is not one of sheer hypocrisy I do not know one that is. That suggestion, coming from the leader of the nation, the Prime Minister, was one of sheer hypocrisy. The Prime Minister is supposed to be an example to us all.

The farmers are efficient and are growing grain. May I read a few sentences from a statement made by a representative of the farmers' union to the government at Ottawa on May 5 of this year. The statement concerned grain policy and reads in part:

> Grain farmers on the prairies face a serious income crisis in 1969. Inadequate levels of efficiency and productivity cannot be described as a cause for the income problem which currently faces the wheat grower.
>
> In the five-year crop period 1958-59 to 1962-63, the average wheat production of prairie farmers was 1,965 bushels. In the five-year crop period 1963-64 to 1967-68, this average had increased to 3,322 bushels. This represents an increase of 69% in the average of the past five years over the average of the previous five years—

Those words indicate the sort of person who lives in western Canada today. Our farmers have fundamental problems. It is not their fault these problems have arisen. The problem of the farmer is felt by many other industries across Canada. I continue quoting:

> It is ironic that in a world where millions daily suffer the pangs of hunger and thousands daily die of malnutrition, the abundance of Canadian agriculture should prove to be an embarrassment to the nation and before the world.

That statement summarizes pretty well our present situation and narrows our focus to the point of the problem confronting us. Really, there is no farm problem, because markets could be found. There are hungry people all over the world and we should be trying to feed them. Therefore, what we are discussing is basically a national policy. We are considering this government's policy towards the international grain market, as well as towards agriculture in our country as a whole.

There are three basic questions we must ask ourselves. First, what is the situation in western Canada today? Second, is the government aware of the situation on the prairies? Third, what are the solutions? During the next few minutes I hope to mention a number of things which may help. I hope my suggestions will enlighten hon. members about the current situation in western Canada. The situation, and I mean this sincerely, is very, very grim. As a matter of fact, in many prairie areas today it is disastrous. Tens of thousands of prairie farmers are facing bankruptcy. Many have already gone bankrupt; many others are being forced to leave the land and go to the cities. One could go on talking about the many problems these people will face once they get to the cities. Many of these people have no skills and will become the new urban unemployed and the urban poor.

One can see readily that many farmers are broke. I met many such farmers when I was in Saskatchewan a few days ago, for the week end. When farmers go to banks for loans or loan extensions, they discover interest rates have gone up, and this situation has led to a vicious circle. Many farmers cannot afford machinery. Many are having their machinery repossessed. The hon. member for Saskatoon-Biggar (Mr. Gleave) was telling me about some farmers he met at a week-end picnic; many of them did not know where they would get money to meet their next payment on farm machinery. The effects of their plight radiate out in circles. Not only is the farmer of western Canada being affected by the situation, the small businessman also is suffering—although our teachers are not suffering quite so much. The suppliers of farm machinery and owners of small businesses in small towns such as Yorkton, Melville, Kamsack and Kenora are suffering. They are suffering because there is not any money around. We need more money in the western economy, otherwise there is going to be a national disaster in the very near future. On June 10 of this year, 55 per cent of the delivery points in Saskatchewan were on a three-bushel quota or less. A year ago, in 1968, not one was on a three-bushel quota or less. Also, in comparison, on June 10 of this year there were no points in the west that were on the six-bushel quota. A year ago some 35 per cent of the delivery points were on the six-bushel quota. I think this is another illustration of the situation as it exists.

• (11:40 p.m.)

In addition to this, the farmer is caught in the cost-price squeeze. The cost to produce a bushel of wheat has gone up and the farmer's income has gone down, in many cases drastically. We are appealing to the government to save an industry. Many members have talked about subsidies today. Western farmers get angry when members talk about subsidies. They say, why does the federal government subsidize General Motors and the Ford Motor Company to the tune of $80 million a year? Why are Time Magazine and Reader's Digest receiving subsidies? Why are gold mines receiving subsidies when farmers are not even getting an even break in our society? Farmers are not going to put up with this kind of nonsense any longer.

We saw what happened out west last week. I say this is only the beginning unless the government institutions make some radical changes at this time. Farmers are organizing in order to protect themselves. Almost every other sector of our economy is organized today, whether it is labour or business.

I wish to quote from page 2 of the farm union brief I was quoting a few moments ago:

> It is the goal of the National Farmers Union to organize farmers from sea to sea in Canada into an organization of farmers and for farmers. We believe we must face the realities of the times, that farm problems are primarily national and international in nature, and that the problems which farmers face across Canada must be rationalized by farmers at the national level in an organization that can, in fact, be an important forum in participatory democracy.

I endorse the actions of the western farmers and I encourage them to get together and organize. It is very sad that all too often governments only react to what is happening in the community. A government will only go as far as it is forced. If the government does not do something soon, more and more farmers are going to become more and more militant.

I now come to the second question. Is the government aware of the type of situation that exists in the west today? Many farmers feel they are not aware of this. I will quote from a press release issued on July 1 by the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool:

> More and more western farmers are saying that the federal government does not understand the seriousness of the agricultural income situation, says E. K. Turner, president, Saskatchewan Wheat Pool.
>
> Individual farmers and their organizations, from the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool through to the Canadian Federal of Agriculture, have documented their case accurately, have made reasonable requests, but so far, Ottawa has not taken positive action.

This type of reaction is found in almost every part of Saskatchewan and Manitoba. I maintain that the government is aware of the situation which exists in the west at this time. If they are not aware, they should be.

I wish to go over some of the representations which have been made. Nearly every day in this house the opposition has questioned the government in an endeavour to get them to do something and to inform them of what is happening in western Canada. The government of Saskatchewan had made a request that the federal government implement the two-price system for wheat. Other provincial governments have submitted briefs, have met with the minister and have met with the Prime Minister. Farm organizations have come to Ottawa time and time again. The National Farmers Union has submitted a brief, and the Federation of Agriculture has submitted a brief. Still, very little is done. Even more important, a committee of this house comprised of members of all political parties, including the hon. member for Lanark and Renfrew (Mr. McBride), made a tour of the west. They spoke to the farmers, attended meetings, and then came back and made a report. During their tour of the west they met with some 18,000 farmers on two different days. In summation, the committee concludes that the situation out there needs some drastic remedy if many farmers are to be saved.

Finally, there is another point I should like to make. Two or three cabinet ministers are from the west. One is from Saskatoon and I do not think he could help but be aware of this situation. There is another from Winnipeg. But apparently the Prime Minister did not believe any of these sources, so he went west himself to find out. He was presented with briefs. He met with some of the premiers, the Union farm leaders and the farmers themselves. I should like to read part of an article which appeared in the Regina Leader Post of July 16. It reads as follows:

> The farmers were obviously intent on getting some action. One farmer, who was in charge of a group of tractors, said the demonstration will continue and, if necessary, farmers will take more drastic action.
>
> "We can't afford to see some of the best farmers in Saskatchewan going bankrupt," he said.
>
> If the farmers were not "badly off" they could not be here, he said.
>
> He knew of one farmer who has 70,000 bushels of grain on his farm and had to borrow money to carry on his operation.
>
> But he said the sale of grain is not enough.
>
> What is needed is a graduated minimum price as well as grain sales, he said.
>
> A farmer from Tantallon said farmers have a choice of either protesting in hopes of accomplishing their goals or going bankrupt.
>
> He said he knows of farmers who have 40,000 to 50,000 bushels of grain in storage and "yet will likely have to fold up."
>
> At least 96 per cent of the farmers in Saskatchewan are facing serious financial difficulties, he said.
>
> Tractors converged on Regina from No. 1 highway, No. 11 highway and No. 6 highway—from all directions.
>
> Most of them carried signs with slogans such as "Trudeau is a bum steer," "My grain headache is killing me"—

• (11:50 p.m.)

I think these are just some examples of how serious things are getting in western Canada. I think these demonstrations are a warning signal for the government that if something is not done immediately things are going to be much more serious. Many farmers will seek more drastic alternatives in an attempt to make their rights known to this government. After all, it is their very livelihood and the future not only of themselves but their children that is involved. These people will naturally become very insistent in search of alternatives to make their situation known.

Let me finally come to what must be done. First and foremost, all of us realize that the farmer alone must not bear the cost of an international price war. If something happens which causes the price of grain to fall drastically, the farmer alone must not bear the full brunt. The Canadian public as a whole should share in any loss which occurs, if there is to be one.

There are many long and short term solutions which have to be investigated. Many people on this side of the house, particularly those who belong to this party, have offered solutions today. Let me be as brief as possible. On the short term basis, we need an immediate influx of cash into the western economy, something in the nature of $100 million or $200 million. We had a budget brought down in the house not long ago with a projected surplus of $250 million. At that time I, and many of my colleagues, asked the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Olson) and the Minister of Finance (Mr. Benson) whether they might consider diverting some of this projected surplus into an emergency plan for western agriculture. We did not get an answer. They just said the government had done enough. We must inject some cash into the western economy immediately, otherwise we will be confronted with many more serious economic problems in the very near future.

Members of our party have suggested many ways of solving this problem. One possibility is the adoption of a deficiency payment of 20 cents per bushel up to about 5,000 bushels, or a payment of some sort bringing the price up to $2 per bushel to the extent of 500, 600 or 700 acres, or perhaps a combination of these on a short-range plan to help the western economy. We must realize that we need many long-range programs. We cannot solve this situation with only short-range planning. We have to sell grain and get it to the people who need it. We must start working toward long-range credit plans and a more comprehensive trade system. We must give the farmer a better guaranteed price for grain. We should have a two-price system in respect of wheat. This has been suggested by many organizations.

Farm income has dropped by some $430 million in 1968-69. This is why something has to be done now. As a final suggestion, I should like to recommend something which I think is unanimous in the minds of almost every western farmer. The Minister of Industry Trade and Commerce (Mr. Pepin) should resign immediately from his post as minister in charge of the Wheat Board. I respect the intelligence and the integrity of this minister, but his record thus far, and from all indications he has given to us for the future, point to the fact that he is not the man for this type of job. His resignation immediately as the man in charge of the Wheat Board represents the very least the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) could do for the western economy. Many other things must be done, but it is time the government got its head out of orbit and came down to earth.

Wheat Export Prices

Mr. Don Mazankowski (Vegreville): Mr. Speaker, despite the lateness of the hour I welcome the opportunity to participate in this debate. I shall not attempt to unduly aggravate the good spirit and mood of this house by being too lengthy in my contribution. It is because we are dealing with a matter of utmost urgency, which has progressively become a crisis, that I have been prompted to enter this debate.

After all, one might have expected that following numerous reviews, task force reviews, submissions made by numerous people, the thorough study and investigation of the Standing Committee on Agriculture when it travelled out west, and the importuning of the many western members of parliament, along with the great trip of the Prime Minister, (Mr. Trudeau) even at this late date we would have some firm policy statement by this government aimed at relieving the crisis caused by a critical shortage of cash and deteriorating prices in our farm economy.

The government should have acted long before now and made such emergency consideration of this long standing problem unnecessary. We have been in session for something like ten months, but we have had no positive or realistic approach brought forward to alleviate this urgent matter, despite the fact that we have had a continual dialogue with members involved in the farm community. Leaders of the opposition parties have been helpful in offering suggestions and solutions, nevertheless the government has failed to act. After all, the wheat problem we now face is not new. It has been with us since the bungling and the grossly inept actions of a previous Liberal government, which left the Canadian wheat producer defenseless in the world market place, when they agreed to go along with the general cereals arrangement instead of the old International Wheat Agreement, thus opening the door to almost one full year of a free world grain market.

This latest crisis, grave as it is, is only one more chapter in a long and dismal story. We all know that despite the pious submissions uttered by the amiable Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce (Mr. Pepin) on his return from Washington, Americans are realists and will trim their prices to meet market conditions. Where does the recent U.S. cut of 12 cents per bushel leave us? Sitting self-righteously on our mountains of unsold wheat. Where does this leave the producer in this climate of economic uncertainty, of rampant inflation, of high interest charges, of increased taxes? The farmer is being faced every day with cuts in revenues and, correspondingly, with an increase in production costs, living costs and taxes as well as an increase in the cost of doing his business.

Certainly, there can be no other path but to meet competition. If we are to stay in business in a competitive market, there is no other way. However, the corollary to this is, of course, that the producer cannot be permitted to suffer because of conditions over which he has no control and because he has voluntarily given up his selling initiative to the exclusive jurisdiction of the federal government. I say that the government has to go out and sell the wheat at the best price it can get in the world markets, but at the same time let the government pay a support price to the farmer which will ensure that he benefits from the full $1.95½ a bushel that still stands as the agreed world minimum price. The Canadian wheat producer did exactly what the government urged him to do. He planted all the wheat he could. He was asked to become more efficient, to expand and to produce enough wheat to feed a starving and hungry world. He trusted the government promises to sell what he produced.

Now that the government has difficulty in selling wheat, something that it has by law a monopoly to do, it seeks to throw the whole burden into the laps of the producers. The recent U.S. action has precipitated an immediate problem, but it is just another problem within a much larger context.

We, in Canada, must get into step with the rest of the world. We have been left behind by our competitors. So far as I am concerned I believe that one cannot merchandise goods, whether it is grain, soap or vacuum cleaners, if one develops a negative attitude, and that is exactly what is happening here. While grain deals were being made, the government stood idly by losing sale after sale. The Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce, a very amiable fellow, stayed in his place this afternoon seeking the advice of the Almighty. One could almost feel sorry for him, but may I say, with all due respect, that I am now convinced more than ever that the job of marketing our grain is beyond this man's capacity. I think he would do much better as a minister of culture, or perhaps as a goodwill ambassador for the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) in some of the hostile areas, such as the ones which the Prime Minister visited in western Canada. All that we heard from the minister today was a bandying of words to defend his government for its positive inaction rather than laying down a formula for positive action. What we want is positive action to alleviate the immediate crisis and some long-term solutions for the future. One almost gets the impression that the government dislikes the fact that this debate is taking place. They attempt constantly to try to justify their position, blaming the opposition for misrepresentation and accusing us of being publicity seekers, even making suggestions about a stupid filibuster. When the Standing Committee on Agriculture went out west, it made a comprehensive study and proposed some solutions. When the Prime Minister went out west, the feelings of the western farmers were appropriately expressed. What more do they want?

Numerous recommendations have been submitted to this government. Solutions were offered by the government's own members, such as by the hon. member for Assiniboia (Mr. Douglas) and by other members of the Standing Committee on Agriculture. Why were these solutions rejected? There have been many others and many briefs from the farm organizations throughout the country and from the Federation of Agriculture, as well as suggestions from members on both sides of the house. The answer we continually receive is that the policy is under review. This house, the people of the country in general and farmers in particular are entitled to know what the government intends to do to solve the problems of our once great agricultural industry.

• (12 midnight)

Our immediate problem, and the reason for this debate, is that we must sell our wheat and the return to the producer must be fair and equitable. If in order to do this we must modernize our whole system of marketing and distribution, let us start now. What has happened to the activities of the Grains Council? This was to be the great revolutionary mechanism for streamlining all our grain handling operations, producing, distributing and selling.

I suggest that as a start the nation's wheat selling apparatus should be thoroughly overhauled. The government has the obligation to undertake this task. I believe that in this day and age—the lunar age—the Wheat Board should be rejuvenated and its aims and objectives reviewed and upgraded. While it has the exclusive right to sell grain, it has sublet this right and responsibility to officially designated agents. It must be remembered that these agents are not primarily moved by patriotism or a feeling of sympathy for the Canadian wheat producer. They make deals for profit, not patriotism.

The Wheat Board is not empowered to approach governments, yet more than half our potential customers are represented by government purchasing agencies. We need a modernized board that can go anywhere, approach anyone and make deals without the endless business of consultation and waiting for government policy to be determined. We need more modernized and flexible regulations in order to meet the demands of potential customers. There is no future in Canada sitting on mounds of top grade wheat if customers want lower or mixed grades. There is no future in setting up bodies, such as the Grains Council, if we hear nothing from them from their inception. What has happened to the Grains Council? Industry needs action, not advice. We need one simple, dynamic body that can get things going. We have spent too long in consultation, study and advice. We now need swift, positive action.

I would not be surprised if the government announced shortly the formation of another task force to study the situation. Canadians have been task forced into a stupor. Let us have a "do it" force and get our wheat moving. Let us inject cash into the agricultural community so we may once again enjoy a balanced economy in western Canada. I do not wish to belabour the gravity of this development, because it must be apparent to everyone. I simply repeat what I said at the outset: we must sell our wheat to whoever we can, at the best price we can obtain, and make up from federal resources difference between that and the guaranteed minimum. This is in no sense a handout; it is simply sensible, economic assistance to a very important segment of our national economy.

The sluggish wheat market is already showing signs of affecting eastern industry and businessmen, taxpayers and consumers all across the country. It is only common sense that the federal government should step in and do something now. Despite what the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Olson) says, there is no way in which he can convince me that all is well on the prairies. The business community and the farm community are suffering. Repossessions and foreclosures are numerous. The minister today dealt with payments to the Farm Credit Corporation. I suggest to him that the arrears of the corporation are no greater than they have been at any time in the past. The minister knows that payments to the Farm Credit Corporation have priority as far as the farmer is concerned. Accounts receivable by merchants, that is, fuel, fertilizer accounts and so on, are the ones not being paid.

This is a typical example of the many letters that I have received, written by a farmer from Lloydminster, Alberta. He writes:

> As a farmer living in your voting area I thought you might be interested in the following bit of information.
>
> I just hauled out my fifth bushel of quota today. I now have a cultivated acreage of 465 acres. 465 × 1.17=$543.05.
>
> My municipal taxes (now due) amount to $662.93 which leaves me a quota of approximately 3⅘ bushels on which to live and operate my farm. How long are we going to last?

The Edmonton Journal, a proponent of Liberal philosophy, in an editorial dated Saturday, July 19, headed "Crisis in wheat demands action" states in part:

> Many suggestions have been made for meeting this "truly desperate situation" which must be met quickly or the West as a whole, not only the farmers, will suffer. Perhaps the best and simplest short-term solution would be a form of acreage payments, with a reasonable maximum. And so-called "rich" farmers are entitled to participate as well as poorer ones.
>
> With such a plan in operation, the government and its agencies, farmers' organizations and others, including individual farmers, should lose no time in putting Canadian agriculture on a much sounder, long-term basis than it is at present.

I could cite many more examples but I do not intend to take up any more time of the house. May I close by saying that action must be taken to meet immediate problems. After we solve some of our short term problems, we must modernize the agricultural industry and streamline our grain marketing machinery. Only by radical and swift action will we be able to salvage a once great industry that in the past has accounted to one in every eight of our export dollars and one in every ten of our tax dollars.

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister without Portfolio): Mr. Speaker, I do not propose to take very long because I realize that many people here, particularly the staff, have had a long day.

I think it is a change for an opposition motion to deal with a real problem. The motion recites the difficulties arising from wheat prices in the world today. The maintenance of world prices and of the prices set under the International Grains Arrangement is of fundamental importance to the wheat producers and farmers of the world. The government has made extraordinary efforts in an attempt to keep in full operation the terms of the International Grains Arrangement. However, the fact that prices are not in line with the arrangement has tragic consequences for the farmers and wheat producers of the world, not only for those in Canada. It will remain the intention or the government to work as hard as possible to restore the I.G.A. to full operation

• (12:10 a.m.)

The problem facing the prairie wheat producers and farmers is a serious one indeed. It is a problem which this government recognized and which the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) on his recent visit to the prairies saw at first hand. The Prime Minister's trip to the prairie provinces was particularly arranged so that he could meet face to face small groups of farmers, chosen in fairly random fashion across the provinces, and talk to them for a few hours in a small room in detail about the problem. This, after all, is a true way of communicating and is far superior to the one followed by politicians in the past, who have seen only crowds and communicated only by making speeches to the people, without hearing what the people have to say. The Prime Minister of Canada is not a politician of that sort. He went to hear the views of the people, to learn of their problems and to reason with them about those problems. He did that in a remarkable fashion on his recent trip.

An hon. Member: The minister may be the only one to think that.

Mr. Lang: Hon. members opposite have recited the difficulty. Being new to this place, I am given to understand that they consider their conduct politically proper. They refuse to recognize that hard action may be necessary to tackle this problem or to give credit for action the government has taken with regard to the grains arrangement. I know my colleagues, and other hon. members on this side, have spoken at length about the tremendous advantages accuring to farmers as a result of our cash advance program. Hon. members opposite tend to downgrade this program, as though interest free advances at a time when interest rates are high are insignificant and as though potential advances of several hundreds of millions of dollars at this time, too, are insignificant. Hon. members opposite also have heard described government programs which will enable the Wheat Board to sell Canadian wheat. It can be said that thanks in large part to the leadership of the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce (Mr. Pepin) no restrictions whatever have been placed on the flexibility the Canadian Wheat Board enjoys in seeking sales for credit. The facility which has been made available is indeed remarkable.

Hon. members opposite have asked for solutions.

Mr. Gundlock: Would the minister permit a question?

Mr. Lang: Later, if the hon. member does not mind. Hon. members seem to have forgotten that Canada's share of the world wheat market has actually gone up this year as compared with last year and that it is the reduction in total commercial demand in the world market which has had a drastic affect upon sales. They failed to put two and two together to realize that the large cash advances mean that the government has undertaken a program of buying wheat on the farmer's farm.

It ought to be obvious to hon. gentlemen opposite that it is not lack of sales alone, by any means, that is the problem. Prices in relation to costs of production must also be considered. Hon. members opposite from time to time have said that farm costs have gone up, largely as a result of the protection afforded to many people in our society. That protection has caused the farmers financial difficulty. Although they have referred to this fact, some hon. members have not referred to other steps in the right direction the government has taken towards long term sales and reducing farm production costs. For instance, we have such programs as the accelerated introduction of the Kennedy Round reduction of tariffs.

Here, I might also refer to plans to balance the budget and specialized depreciation items which were introduced to take some of the inflationary heat out of the economy. I also refer hon. members to the prices and incomes commission, which is designed to be one step along that road we must travel in bringing some control over those who abuse t heir power to set prices and incomes at levels which are not fair having regard to the position of the economy and true economic indicators.

Mr. Gundlock: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member is rising on a point of order.

Mr. Gundlock: On a point of order or personal privilege, I do not know which is correct. Your Honour can correct me. The hon. member is putting words in the mouth of someone.

An hon. Member: What about making up your mind if it is order or privilege?

Mr. Gundlock: I asked the Speaker about that. It is up to Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Perhaps we might allow the hon. member to make his point. I would appreciate the co-operation of hon. members. I realize it is getting late but it will not help the situation if hon. members do not allow the hon. member to state his point, after which I will determine if there is a point of order.

Mr. Gundlock: I want to say to the hon. minister that I hope he is sincere. However, when he talks as he has been about interest rates today, and what they mean to the wheat farmers, he certainly cannot be sincere.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Having heard the hon. member, I am now in a position to make a ruling. I think that is not a point of order.

While I have the floor I would like to suggest to hon. members that although it is late and the debate may continue for a while yet, the general rules of decorum continue to be in existence. We have never permitted hon. members to bring drinking cups into the House of Commons. I do not think we should begin this procedure, even if it is late. I invite hon. members not to bring in coffee cups. I am not sure whether these cups contain coffee or what they may contain, but I think it is not appropriate to have them in the house.

Mr. Lang: Just a final few words, Mr. Speaker. I wanted to refer, in addition to those measures which are being taken in this area, to several others which have long-term importance. I refer to the creation this year of the Canada Grains Council which is designed to be a body which will help in great measure, both in research and markets. It will supply information to farmers about markets, and the difficult choices they will have to make willingly with regard to the products they ought to grow at any given time.

I want to refer to the importance of the market system which the Wheat Board is introducing, that is the block system, through which they expect great improvements in the moving of grain from the farm to the market. Early experiments with the block system have been very successful. It is being expanded into many other places in the prairies. The consultants' estimates had indicated initially that by a simple rearrangement of the manner of putting shipping orders and the request for cars into the proper places, the same equipment at home, en route and at the elevators could handle up to 50 per cent more grain with no additional change whatever.

• (12:20 a.m.)

These are the important things which are being done that in no way take away from the seriousness of the current situation which the Prime Minister so well recognized and described when on the prairies. I think hon. members opposite might once in a while notice these accomplishments while they proceed with their harangues.

Mr. Gundlock: Mr. Speaker, might I direct a question to the hon. member?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Lethbridge rises for the purpose of asking a question of the minister if the minister will allow it.

Mr. Lang: Yes.

Mr. Gundlock: Has the government considered shipment through the port of Churchill and all the ramifications of that decision?

Mr. Lang: I am very happy to be able to tell the hon. member that the Canadian Wheat Board arranged for sales of wheat through Churchill. Approximately 22 million bushels, at present reckoning, will go through that port at this time. I might say this reflects great credit on the management of the Wheat Board, because the placing of sales of wheat through that port came at a time when, because of marketing conditions, Canada was making no sales. That was before the lowering of prices in March. Despite that fact, the Wheat Board has managed to place this large quantity through Churchill.

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, would the minister permit another question? He stated that Canadian penetration of world markets had increased significantly this year. Would the minister give the house some figures in respect of that increase.

Mr. Lang: I said that Canada's share of the world wheat market went up this year. I do not have the exact figures in front of me. My recollection is that last year the share was 17 per cent and this year it is 19 per cent.

Mr. Burton: Could the minister indicate what income support measures the government has under consideration at the present time.

Mr. Lang: I think it is well known to hon. members that the government is looking at this question from all angles. There is no proposal that has not been before the government. Before any announcement is made in this regard, a decision by the government will be made in the ordinary way.

Mr. Gundlock: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if I might ask a question which is supplementary to my first question. I should like to ask the minister whether he considers that the 22 million bushels through Churchill is an increase.

Mr. Lang: It is a dramatic increase over the zero which had been booked during the regular time for booking this year.

Mr. Gundlock: No, no. On a point of order—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Hon. members will realize we are not on the question period and we are not in committee of the whole. I wonder whether hon. members want to pursue the question period at the present time. However, if hon. members have further questions and the minister wishes to reply his time has not yet expired.

Mr. Gundlock: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order and with due deference to you, it certainly is not from zero to 22 million.

Mr. Nystrom: Mr. Speaker, may I ask the minister whether the government is still considering a two-price system for wheat or whether at this time it has completely rejected the idea. I would ask the minister to be specific in his answer.

Mr. Lang: My answer will be very specific. My previous answer applies completely.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Having heard the minister and the subsequent questions and answers, I am satisfied that the debate has been concluded. Pursuant to section 13 of Standing Order 26, I declare the motion carried.

The house stands adjourned until 2 p.m. later today.

At 12.25 a.m. the house adjourned, without question put, pursuant to special order.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Tuesday, July 22, 1969

The house met at 2 p.m.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

PROCEDURE AND ORGANIZATION

THIRD REPORT OF COMMITTEE—SUSPENSION OF SITTING FOR FURTHER DISCUSSIONS

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, as both Your Honour and the house know, there have been certain discussions regarding possible avenues of approach to the debate on the rules amendments. In order to enable discussions to continue and perhaps arrive at a solution, I rise to suggest that the house might now make an order that upon completion of the oral question period today the sitting be suspended until 5 p.m. later this day.

Mr. Speaker: Is it agreed and so ordered?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

LABOUR CONDITIONS

SUMMER EMPLOYMENT FOR STUDENTS—REPORT BY MINISTER OF MANPOWER AND IMMIGRATION

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, in response to queries from members I am pleased to report on our continuing campaign to help students find summer jobs.

From previous statements I have made, members will be aware of our efforts and special programs in this area. These include the setting up last fall of a special departmental task force, a $259,000 publicity campaign at local, regional and national levels, the hiring of some 450 special student counsellors at manpower headquarters and centres across Canada, and a program to increase by 10 per cent the number of students employed this summer by the federal government.

My department has also been very active in enlisting the co-operation of other governments and agencies with interests in the student employment problem. We have had meetings with representatives of the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada, University Career Planning Association, various university summer employment committees and other federal departments. We have also maintained a close relationship with various provincial governments in order to achieve maximum results and to prevent duplication of effort and expenditure.

We have reason to believe our efforts are paying off. For example, between May and June of this year some 155,000 persons were added to the Canadian labour force. This net figure resulted from additions of 155,000 in the 14-19 age group and of 38,000 in the 19-25 age group. There were offsetting declines totalling 38,000 in other age groups. Meanwhile, employment growth between May and June in the under 25 age group was 154,000. While no one can claim all of these 154,000 persons are students entering the labour force temporarily during the summer months, it can be safely assumed that the vast majority are students.

In this connection it is interesting to note that last year between March and July some 600,000 persons under 25 joined the labour force; by September almost 500,000 in the same group had left the labour force, presumably to return to school or university.

At our manpower centres some 90,000 post-secondary students had registered by the end of May; this number could be a bit exaggerated as some students may have registered both at on-campus manpower centres and at local centres.

• (2:10 p.m.)

Precise statistics on confirmed employment are not available at this time—students frequently do not report back to their C.M.C. counsellors when they have obtained jobs—but there are some encouraging trends. For example, a random sample survey carried out by my department in mid-June among students at Ottawa's Canada Manpower Student Employment Centre indicates that 86 per cent of those canvassed had already obtained jobs at that point; another 4 per cent were no longer interested in finding work, leaving a total of 10 per cent still looking for employment. We plan to carry out the same type of survey later this month in three Canada Manpower Centres in each of our five regions,

Atlantic, Quebec, Ontario, the Prairies and British Columbia; the surveys will be based on a sampling of 250 students in each region.

Members will also be interested in another survey—a much more extensive one—which we plan for this fall. We are currently arranging to have some 18,000 students from 38 universities and community colleges questioned on their summer employment and job-hunting experiences. The sampling will represent approximately 5 per cent of Canada's post-secondary student population, and I am confident the results of this survey will be most helpful in developing future programs to find summer jobs for students.

As far as high school students are concerned, 102,768 have so far registered at Canada Manpower Centres; as these students have only just become available for employment I cannot at this point give any reliable statistics on placements.

Another aspect of our student summer employment program has been to intensify efforts to encourage farmers to hire students for available agricultural jobs and to alert students to these job opportunities. Many farmers have responded positively to our canvassing but I must note that some students are still reluctant to take this type of work.

By the end of June, some 6,937 students had been placed in farm jobs, the majority being pre or secondary level students; at the same time there were 2,653 active or deferred vacancies for farm jobs recorded in our C.M.C. files. Up to June 30, approximately 3,000 students had refused summer jobs in agriculture.

I am hopeful, though, particularly this month and in August, that students who have not found jobs will accept summer employment in agriculture. In this connection members will recall that this year I have reduced by 50 per cent the number of foreign students coming to Canada to work on farms; this was done so that more of the jobs could be filled by Canadian students.

I assure hon. members of my concern about the student summer employment situation in Canada, always bearing in mind two important considerations. One is that any federal program of this kind must be studied in relation to resources and that services for one group of individuals—in this case, students—must not be disproportionate to services expected by other Canadian citizens who have employment difficulties.

[Mr. MacEachen.]

The second is the fact that the government of Canada cannot accept sole responsibility for the employment of students during the summer months. Other levels of government and interested groups such as education authorities, unions, industries, and students themselves must share this responsibility and be involved in initiatives and activities which help provide financially and socially meaningful summer jobs for this particular segment of our population.

The problem cannot be solved this summer or in the years to come, by governments alone, but only through the joint efforts of everyone concerned—employers, voluntary agencies, educational bodies and the students themselves. As I indicated earlier, my department will be evaluating this year's program and experiences throughout the summer, and I will be in a better position in the late fall to give a more complete and detailed report on the success of the program and the extent of the problem this summer.

Mr. R. N. Thompson (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, we are grateful to the Minister of Manpower and Immigration (Mr. MacEachen) for making a statement about student summer employment. To be fair, we must commend the minister and the department for their efforts not only in finding more jobs for students in agencies of government but in taking the lead in encouraging private industry to take a greater interest in our young people and to display a greater sense of responsibility toward them. I know the minister thinks, as I do, that we have a responsibility to our young people who, at this most important time of their lives, are endeavouring to further their education. Many students depend on the money they earn from summer jobs to pay for the following year's education. We owe it to our young people to encourage private industry and departments of government to make as many summer jobs available as possible.

The statistics the minister brought to our attention this afternoon are deserving of a few comments. They point out, it seems to me, that we need a better system to show statistically what is actually happening. I say this because, in spite of what the minister said according to the figures I have from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics relating to employment and unemployment, there are still 144,000 teenagers out of work. These statistics are as at the end of June; therefore they do not really include all those who might be involved if high school students were also taken into consideration.

Employment of young people between 20 and 24 years of age increased by 53,000 during the months of May and June. This is very good. But when we set alongside that figure the fact that there are 252,000 university students in Canada, the majority of whom are looking for employment, it is evident we are still just scratching the surface of the tremendous need, whether it be government or industry that should assume the responsibility of providing summer employment to our student population.

I bring these points to the attention of the minister because I believe there is an even greater need than we realize from this report to continue in an accelerated way to do even more to provide summer employment for our young people, particularly those who are involved in their educational process and need summer employment to help them to remain in school. I want again to express appreciation to the minister for all that he and the department are doing. I trust they will continue their effort not only through the reports to which he referred in preparation for next year but also by a greater concentration of effort this year, along with a greater degree of participation by the private sector as well.

Mr. David Lewis (York South): Mr. Speaker, I want to keep in mind your directive that we should not be too long at this stage.

I am sorry I cannot join the hon. member for Red Deer (Mr. Thompson) in congratulating the minister on anything he has stated to the house in his report. The statistics he gave are, in my view, extremely misleading. To make a sample study of Ottawa students is about as irrelevant to the situation across Canada as can be imagined. With the government and its various agencies in Ottawa, obviously students looking for work in this city are in the preferred place in Canada. This is an example of the kind of ill thought-out way in which this problem has been pursued by the minister and his department. They think they can satisfy parliament and the people by taking a sample of student employment in the one place where student employment is necessarily much easier to obtain. This is clearly misleading as to the true picture across Canada.

While some of the things undertaken by the department are obviously useful, as I have said on other occasions I am at a loss to know why these things take so long to implement. It did not take a genius to know last winter that the problem of summer employment would be very serious this summer. It did not require a genius to know, in light of the policies pursued in a deliberate attempt to slow down the economy, there would be a general increase in unemployment and therefore more difficulties for students in the summer. Yet it was months before the minister could be persuaded to institute the inadequate program he has outlined today.

• (2:20 p.m.)

Therefore I cannot congratulate him or his department, although I am sure the officials are doing their best.

I also want to say I am getting thoroughly fed up with the attitude of ministers whenever any problem arises of emphasizing the fact that it is not their sole responsibility. We know that. No one in this house is unaware of the fact that there are things that have to be done by all parts of our society, both governmental and non-governmental. But the fact is that the Department of Manpower and Immigration is the only department of the federal government and the only over-all department of any government in Canada with the machinery to tackle the kind of problem that unemployment presents. It is nonsense to say, "It is not our sole responsibility". I wish ministers would stop singing this song as if it were a broken record. We know this government cannot do everything, but we also know that the responsibilities which are responsibilities of this government must be lived up to. The government cannot excuse itself by pointing out that other people have to do something as well.

I can only express the hope that the minister and the department will make a genuine, effective and nation-wide study of this problem so that if the government continues its policy of increasing unemployment generally the students will not be hurt even more than others. Even though students ought not to get any special consideration, surely we are dealing with a generation in this country which obviously represents our future technological and scientific progress and future leadership. Therefore the students at university and high school levels obviously need our attention, and in my opinion the government has failed to give them the kind of attention they deserve. I only hope that as a result of the department's studies somebody will wake up in the future a little earlier than the eleventh hour.

[Translation]

Mr. Bernard Dumont (Frontenac): First of all, I want to thank the minister for having sent us the French version of his statement.

I also want to congratulate the government and the minister for what they are doing to secure summer employment for students, at the urging of hon. members.

I also want to take this opportunity to praise several manpower centers that are doing commendable work to cope with the endemic state of unemployment, particularly in Quebec. Let us hope that those efforts will one day serve to render financially feasible what is physically possible.

I was sorry to hear that some students had refused employment on farms. Young university students like them could learn a whole lot of practical things, because even in university it is necessary to know that cows are milked twice a day. It is not necessary to wait until one becomes prime minister to learn that.

Every week, I draw the attention of the house to the problem of unemployment. As many other members, I receive a number of requests for employment from people between 35 and 50 years of age, who are unable to get any kind of work and are sometimes replaced by students. This problem should be considered seriously.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, let us hope that with all the people of good will, we will work together in order to find a solution to the unemployment problem. Otherwise, socialism will take hold in Canada and I would fear that this would inevitably lead us to communism.

[English]

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

INDIAN AFFAIRS

FUNDS TO PERMIT STUDIES BY NATIVE PEOPLE—REQUEST BY NATIONAL INDIAN BROTHERHOOD

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development a question arising out of the renewed request of the National Indian Brotherhood for funds to allow an independent investigation by Indians of treaty and aboriginal rights following the announcement of the position taken by the minister. Bearing this in mind, is the minister prepared to review his position and consider the renewed request of the Indian people through the Brotherhood as opposed to leaving the matter to the unappointed commissioner and the department as the minister had in mind?

[Translation]

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Mr. Speaker, I have repeatedly stated that the government intended to supply funds to the National Indian Brotherhood to help them establish this research committee on Indian rights and treaties.

We shall carry out that intention. We have said that the funds will be provided through the commissioner who is to be appointed. At any rate, whether the funds come directly from the government or through the commissioner, the Indians will be free to carry out the investigations required to throw light on the situation.

[English]

Mr. Stanfield: Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact the minister does not seem to think it makes very much difference whether the funds go directly to the Indian people or through the commissioner, is he not prepared to meet the wishes of the Indian people in order to provide funds directly so they will feel they are in a position to cope with the kind of negotiations and arrangements the minister has in mind?

[Translation]

Mr. Chrétien: Mr. Speaker, I believe that the commissioner, once appointed, will be able to work in co-operation with the Indian people and also that the system we have suggested is adequate. Any way, Thursday morning, I believe, I am supposed to meet, with the president of the National Indian Brotherhood, Mr. Deiter, and I shall discuss the matter with him.

[English]

Mr. Stanfield: Mr. Speaker, will the minister please bear in mind the importance of what he has launched getting off to a good start and consequently consider very urgently the direct provision of these funds as requested by the Indian people rather than leaving them in a state of uncertainty for some time until the commissioner is appointed?

[Translation]

Mr. Chrétien: Mr. Speaker, I hope I can discuss all those problems with the president of the National Indian Brotherhood on Thursday. The necessary announcements will be made in due course.

[English]

Mr. Frank Howard (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, would it be reasonable to conclude from the minister's remarks that this rejection of the proposition put forward by the National Indian Brotherhood is simply another way of saying that the government is going to impose its policy regardless of the feelings of these people?

[Translation]

Mr. Chrétien: Mr. Speaker, I think that the hon. member—

Mr. Speaker: Order. I suggest to the hon. member—

[English]

That the question as asked is argumentative.

Mr. Chrétien: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, I think it is quite important to let the people know we are not imposing anything of that kind. I will not let go insinuations like the hon. member put forward, after he tried last month to get the paternity of the policy—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Howard (Skeena): Perhaps I could comment in respect of the point of order raised.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I do not think that would be in order. The hon. member might perhaps have risen on a question of privilege, but I would have to rule that there is neither a question of privilege nor a point of order. I do not think it would be in order to comment. The hon. member may have a supplementary question later but for the moment I will recognize the hon. member for Churchill who has a question.

Mr. Howard (Skeena): I have a point of order, Mr. Speaker, and that is what I was trying to draw your attention to. It is obvious from the apoplectic reply of the minister that we have drawn blood.

Mr. Robert Simpson (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, can the minister assure the house that in appointing the commissioner consideration will be given to appointing a person of Indian ancestry?

[Translation]

Mr. Chrétien: Mr. Speaker, we will certainly appoint the most competent man we can find, and if he is an Indian, we will be most happy.

[English]

FISHERIES

COHOE SALMON—BANNING OF OPERATION IN STRAIT OF GEORGIA

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Fisheries and Forestry with respect to the restrictions placed upon commercial salmon fishing in British Columbia. The notice sent to the fishermen by the minister's department, dated July 9, reads in part as follows:

> The foregoing action is being taken in order to provide for a more equitable distribution between the sport and commercial fisheries of stocks of salmon available for capture in the Strait of Georgia area.

Is that the reason for the restriction being placed upon commercial fishermen, rather than the reason the minister previously gave the house, namely, that there is a shortage of available salmon stocks?

Hon. Jack Davis (Minister of Fisheries and Forestry): There is a shortage, Mr. Speaker. The run of cohoe, salmon, our best sports fish, is the lowest in years; therefore, there is concern about supply. There are on the waters of the west coast at any one time, roughly 3,000 anglers and 200 commercial fishermen. The commercial fishermen's take however has amounted to 90 per cent of the total and therefore a more equitable distribution of the catch appears to me to be in order.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Are sports fishermen being required to secure licences, as are commercial fishermen, and is the minister's department imposing a daily limit on the number of fish a sports fisherman may catch?

Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, as the hon. member well knows, no licence is required by sports fishermen on the west coast. Sports fishing is one of the few things that are free in our part of the world at the present time. On the other hand, commercial fishermen are required to have licences, as they sell their fish to earn a living.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): A further supplementary question,

Mr. Speaker. The minister did not get around to answering the second part of my question. Does the minister intend to impose a daily limit on sports fishermen with respect to the number of fish that may be caught?

Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, there is a limit on the number of fish any particular angler may take in any one day. That is the only limit imposed on them and the only limit we intend to impose on them this year.

Mr. Thomas S. Barnett (Comox-Alberni): I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. The minister may have partially answered it. In view of the situation the minister has described with regard to the cohoe salmon run, is he considering a reduction in the daily allowable catch for sports fishermen?

Mr. Davis: Not at the moment, Mr. Speaker.

OFFSHORE BANKS—CONSERVATION CONTROLS —INQUIRY AS TO INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE

Mr. Lloyd R. Crouse (South Shore): Mr. Speaker, I also wish to direct a question to the Minister of Fisheries and Forestry. In view of the statement made by Mr. Roy Jackson to the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization meeting in Halifax that there is a pressing need for global studies as a prelude to some form of international management of deep sea fishing, can the minister indicate whether any progress has been made toward establishing an international conference at which the question of conservation controls on our offshore banks can be discussed?

Hon. Jack Davis (Minister of Fisheries and Forestry): Mr. Speaker, considerable progress has been made recently through the International North Atlantic Fisheries Commission toward the establishment of over-all quotas for fishing of the various stocks in the north Atlantic. We are hopeful that these can be applied in the next few years.

SEALS—DISCUSSIONS REGARDING CONSERVATION

Mr. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Mr. Speaker, is the minister prepared to report to the house the results of the discussions at ICNAF with regard to the conservation of the seal herd off the front of Labrador?

[Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands).]

Hon. Jack Davis (Minister of Fisheries and Forestry): Mr. Speaker, we have been holding discussions in this respect. I think the major developments for 1970 will be within our own control and as a result of our discussions with the Norwegians.

FINANCE

BANK LOANS—AVAILABILITY TO SMALL BUSINESSES—BUILDERS' FINANCING

Hon. Hugh John Flemming (Carleton-Charlotte): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Finance. The minister said recently that priority would be given to areas of lesser development and to small businesses in respect of the lending of funds. Can the minister advise the house what agreement or arrangements have been made to ensure that small businesses have adequate and immediate access to credit? Also, can he say how successful these arrangements have been?

Hon. E. J. Benson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I made this submission to the banks as did the Governor of the Bank of Canada, and I understand this is the policy being followed by the banks.

Mr. G. W. Baldwin (Peace River): I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Would the minister examine a question which has been raised in some areas outside our large cities, namely, that the house building industry is suffering because of the failure of the banks to provide interim financing?

Mr. Benson: Mr. Speaker, this is an interesting question that has not been brought to my attention. I will, of course, look into the matter. It is true that the restrictions being placed upon the monetary system in Canada for the purpose of fighting inflation will prevent some people getting all the money they want.

Mr. David MacDonald (Egmont): Mr. Speaker, I have a question arising out of the minister's answer to the question posed by the hon. member for Carleton-Charlotte. Apart from his general impressions, would the minister be prepared to make a statement to the house on motions, if we are still in session, or table a report on this matter so we may know to what extent the banks have participated in the program?

Mr. Benson: Mr. Speaker, I will be pleased to take up this matter with the Governor of the Bank of Canada.

Mr. Eldon M. Woolliams (Calgary North): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Will the Minister of Finance look at the situation and discuss with the chartered banks whether money is still being advanced to big industry in order to assist it while small business is being cut off because of the tight money supply in Canada?

Mr. Benson: Mr. Speaker, I am not sure that the allegation made by the hon. member is correct. However, I should point out in fairness to the banking system that lines of credit are granted in advance for a period of time and it is very difficult for the banking system to contract these lines of credit unilaterally and immediately. Therefore it takes some time for the tightness in the money supply to work through the system and to apply exactly to those people to whom one wants it to apply.

SWAP DEPOSITS—EFFECT OF REQUEST OF GOVERNOR OF BANK OF CANADA

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, is the Minister of Finance in a position to say whether his hopes and those of the Governor of the Bank of Canada have been realized in regard to the restriction placed upon the banks in respect of swap arrangements? Has it had the effect of adequately controlling the outflow of capital from Canada?

Hon. E. J. Benson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I shall not know the results of the request of the Governor of the Bank of Canada until the end of the week when statistics are available. But I am sure the banks and the Governor of the Bank of Canada are anxious to co-operate with the government and indeed all members of the house in doing the best they can to fight inflation in this country and guard our exchange reserves.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

REDUCTION OF FORCES IN EUROPE—INQUIRY AS TO CONCLUSION OF CONSULTATIONS

Mr. Andrew Brewin (Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, my question may be directed to either the Prime Minister or the Minister of National Defence. On April 3 the Prime Minister spoke of a planned and phased reduction of the size of Canadian forces in Europe in consultation with our allies. Have the consultations been concluded and can the house expect to receive a detailed statement of what these reductions are to be?

Hon. Léo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, there have been a few lengthy exchanges of notes between SACEUR and the Department of National Defence. One must remember that a new SACEUR was appointed to take over as of July 1 and therefore there has been some impediment to the conclusion of our negotiations. But it can be expected that these negotiations will be accelerated in the near future.

GAGETOWN, N.B.—EXERCISE ALLEGEDLY REFLECTING ON LABOUR

Mr. J. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa-Whitby): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of National Defence. In view of the fact that the Canadian forces base at Gagetown, New Brunswick, is reported to have had recently an exercise in which a supposed labour leader led a supposed insurrection in Canada, and in view of the fact that Donald MacDonald, president of the Canadian Labour Congress, has rightly protested to the minister about this insult to two million Canadian trade unionists, would the minister investigate this matter and report to the house at the earliest possible date?

Hon. Léo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I have already investigated this problem. In order to do justice to the question I have a rather lengthy answer. Perhaps it could be printed in Hansard; otherwise, I could not read it.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The difficulty is that the statement cannot be made at this time unless we revert to motions.

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: In fact, there are many members who are anxious to ask questions. Does the minister have leave to revert to motions for the purpose of making a statement?

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: There is not unanimous agreement. Perhaps the minister might communicate with the hon. member later.

Mr. Broadbent: In light of the serious nature of the question and the insult felt by many Canadians, can the minister make a very brief statement at this time?

Mr. Cadieux (Labelle): I could speak generally on the report I had. First of all, I should indicate that the Department of National Defence has always maintained the friendliest possible relations with the unions, and we intend to continue this. In his question the hon. member referred to a Canadian union. We are faced here with an over-all exercise in command and control and in urban control, as well as all sorts of other things in which Canadian Forces have to participate elsewhere. There was a scenario in which a mythical union in a mythical place, not in Canada, acted out a part. There was an exercise in which a political problem was involved in which a union formed a political party, and that is again a mythical situation.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Cadieux (Labelle): This is the type of exercise that went on, and it was explained repeatedly by the P.R.O. in the region to the local newspapers. First of all, there was no intention to be injurious to the labour unions. If that were the case, I would have to conclude that the Canadian Forces are probably better at peacekeeping than at acting.

Mr. Muir (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): You are getting better than Paul Martin.

Mr. Broadbent: I find the minister's answer totally unacceptable, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

[Later:]

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Minister of National Defence which arises from an earlier answer he gave. Is the house correct in assuming that since the Canadian Armed Forces are now being trained in counter-insurgency activities, the insurgency is expected to come from our civilian population?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. That question is not in order.

TRADE

WHEAT—POSSIBILITY OF SALES TO NATIONALIST CHINA

Mr. Paul Yewchuk (Athabasca): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce. In light of the statement attributed to the minister of economic affairs of Nationalist China that that country wants Canadian wheat but Canadian officials have not tried to sell wheat to Formosa, will the minister undertake to have a mission sent immediately to Nationalist China, and will he explain why Canada has not tried to open markets in Formosa?

[Mr. Cadieux (Labelle).]

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): I will inquire, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Yewchuk: In light of reports quoting the same gentleman as saying that Canada has also failed to seek Formosan markets for Canadian lumber—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member should ask the question directly, not quote from the statements to which he is now referring.

Mr. Yewchuk: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, I will rephrase my question. Will the minister undertake to investigate also the possibilities for sales of Canadian lumber, machinery and heavy water nuclear reactors to Formosa?

WHEAT—SALES REPRESENTATION IN TAIPEI

Mr. R. N. Thompson (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce. In view of the fact that the United States has a permanent wheat selling office and representatives in Taipei and that Canada has no direct sales representative there, either through the government or through the Wheat Board, will the minister take steps toward establishing some type of sales contact for the potential sales that are awaiting Canadian wheat there?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): As a general policy the Canadian government allows Canadians to make sales to Taiwan. There is no problem about that.

Mr. Thompson: Through whom?

Mr. Pepin: In the usual way.

Mr. Thompson: There are no representatives there.

Mr. Pepin: I said I would look into that aspect. There is probably a question of price competition.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Perhaps the minister might be allowed to make a reply to the hon. member.

TRANSPORT AND COMMUNICATIONS

REQUEST FOR MEETING OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Mr. W. B. Nesbitt (Oxford): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the hon. member for Lasalle in his capacity as Chairman of the Standing Committee on Transport and Communications. In view of the fact that the length of the present session is somewhat uncertain, would he give an assurance to the house that a meeting of that committee will be held before the house adjourns to deal with the matter involving the Great Slave Lake Railway?

Mr. H.-Pit Lessard (LaSalle): If it is the wish of the committee, I am willing to call a meeting.

GRAIN

WHEAT—ADEQUATE SUPPLY OF BOX CARS—ABILITY OF PRODUCERS TO DELIVER

Mr. S. J. Korchinski (Mackenzie): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. Earlier I asked the minister whether there would be an assurance from the railways that adequate box cars would be supplied to all country delivery points so that at least a minimum five-bushel quota could be delivered. Can the minister bring us up to date on what are the hopes for the supply of box cars by the railways inasmuch as there are only a few days left before the end of the crop year?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): Mr. Speaker, I was in touch with the Chief Commissioner of the Wheat Board just a few minutes ago. He assured me that maximum efforts are being made by the railways in order to reach the objective which is the five-bushel quota level. I may say in passing that 940 stations are now on a five-bushel quota, 709 are now on a four-bushel quota and 167 on three bushels. So there is progress every-day. It is still considered physically possible to reach the objective, but I must add immediately that difficulties have arisen in recent days because of unusually large offerings by producers as a result of circumstances with which the hon. member is familiar.

Mr. Korchinski: In view of the fact that there are only a few more days left, would the Wheat Board immediately open up the remaining delivery points to the five-bushel quota and concentrate on the delivery of a sufficient number of box cars?

Mr. Pepin: I hope I understand the hon. member well. If he has in mind the opening up of all delivery points and telling everybody that they should be on the five-bushel quota, this would not do much in reality to bring about the objective which we have in mind.

Mr. A. P. Gleave (Saskatoon-Biggar): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce. Inasmuch as there are only eight days left in the crop year and in view of the figure he gave as to the number of points on a four-bushel quota, did I understand him correctly that he is seriously informing the house he expects the producers to be able to deliver a five-bushel quota in the current crop year?

Mr. Speaker: The question as asked is clearly argumentative. Perhaps it might be asked in other terms.

Mr. Gleave: May I rephrase it? Is the minister informing the house that producers will be able to deliver a five-bushel quota in the current crop year?

Mr. Pepin: I was very careful in the choice of my words. I said that this was still the objective but I also said that the realization of the objective was made more difficult every day because of the number of requests for delivery that are made. Many people who did not have wheat to deliver a few days ago seem to have found some to deliver now.

Mr. Stan Schumacher (Palliser): May I ask the minister whether he would give consideration to recommending changes in Wheat Board regulations to allow deliveries to elevators with space that now have a five-bushel quota by those people who cannot deliver to points that have no space and are only on a four-bushel quota, so that at the end of the crop year all the available elevator space will be utilized?

Hon. W. G. Dinsdale (Brandon Souris): I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Will the block system of grain movement recently introduced by the Canadian Wheat Board and referred to by the Minister without Portfolio last evening as one of the government's solutions to this problem assist in a major way in ensuring the delivery of the five-bushel quota at all delivery points? If not, what other emergency plan has the government in mind to deal with this problem?

Mr. Pepin: I was informed the other day that this system was of assistance in the limited number of districts where it was operative. I was also informed that the block system would be implemented everywhere by the end of this year. Consequently it will help even more next year.

Inquiries of the Ministry

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina-Lake Centre): I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. In view of the numerous suggestions made in the debate yesterday and that have been made by organizations outside the house for the solution of this problem and in view of the fact that almost half of the shipping points are not yet on the five-bushel quota, can the minister advise us whether the Canadian Wheat Board or the minister is prepared either to recommend the extension of the crop year or to allow the country elevators to store grain wherever they wish, including outside, in order to complete the delivery of the five-bushel quota by July 31?

Mr. Pepin: I understand that storing outside is not a cautious measure to take, but I took notice last night of the several suggestions made by the hon. member during the debate yesterday. I had them passed along to the Wheat Board this morning. I was able to confirm that I had answered correctly two or three of the questions regarding the use of gondola cars, the renting of extra cars from the Canadian Railways and of cars from the United States. These are some measures that have already been taken by the Wheat Board to cope with the present difficulties.

Mr. Korchinski: Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question that I should like to direct to the Minister of Transport. Has the minister had a statement from the railway companies indicating that they will not be able to provide sufficient box cars in order to take away the five-bushel quota at country elevator points?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): No, Mr. Speaker, I have had no such statement from the railways.

[Later:]

Mr. Benjamin: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. May I ask the minister whether or not authority to suspend the allocation of cars to shipping points where the five-bushel quota has been achieved lies with the Canadian Wheat Board or with the railways? If it lies with the railways, will the minister investigate allegations that cars are being withdrawn from shipping points before the five bushel quota has been reached

Mr. Pepin: Mr. Speaker, I have received many representations on this general subject. Some farmers feel that they are not being as well treated as others. I regularly take these observations to the Wheat Board officials and they try to solve any problems in co-operation with the railways. Again, the Wheat Board commissioner told me this morning that he was receiving maximum support from the railways in these difficult times.

TRADE

WHEAT—STABILIZATION OF MINIMUM PRICES UNDER INTERNATIONAL GRAINS ARRANGEMENT

Mr. A. P. Gleave (Saskatoon-Biggar): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct this question to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce. In view of the announced wheat price cuts established by the Canadian Wheat Board at the opening of trading on Monday of some two to seven cents a bushel on most grades, has the minister any reliable information that I.G.A. minimum prices will now stabilize within that range?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): Mr. Speaker, I did say yesterday in the debate that I could give no such assurance. It will all depend upon the reaction of other countries, like Australia and the European Economic Community members, to the United States move. I also said yesterday in the debate that I was very much hoping that prices would level off at a new plateau as a result of the United States and Canadian adjustments.

Mr. Gleave: A further supplementary question.

Mr. Speaker: Order. I suggest to hon. members that to some extent we are now reviving the debate that took place all day yesterday and last night. I appreciate that the questions hon. members are asking are important, but in view of the fact that the question period is running short of time we might pass on to another subject. However, I believe there are two members with supplementaries who might be recognized.

Mr. Gleave: In view of the minister's answer to my last question, are further meetings of the nature of the Washington meeting contemplated? In other words, are the exporting countries prepared to meet continuously until they arrive at some stabilization of the minimum prices?

Mr. Pepin: Mr. Speaker, a meeting of the working group to which I referred when I came back from Washington is planned for next week.

WATER RESOURCES

INQUIRY AS TO INTRODUCTION OF WATER ACT

Mr. G. H. Aiken (Parry Sound-Muskoka): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister without Portfolio in charge of resources. My question relates to the long awaited water act which he expected to introduce in mid-July. May I ask the minister whether there is any possibility that this act will surface this summer?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister without Portfolio): Mr. Speaker, mid-July was the hon. member's expression. The end of July was my expression, and it remains my expression.

Mr. Aiken: A supplementary question. May I take it from the series of answers that have been given that the government is waiting for the house to adjourn before introducing this legislation?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Victoria-Haliburton.

Mr. Aiken: A further supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Order. I heard the hon. member's question but as asked I do not think it is in order.

FINANCE

INFLATIONARY EFFECTS OF POSSIBLE BELL CANADA RATE INCREASE

Mr. W. C. Scott (Victoria-Haliburton): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Finance. Has the Department of Finance considered the possible inflationary effects of a rate increase being granted to Bell Canada of the extent that is now being sought? If so, what conclusions have been drawn by the department?

Hon. E. J. Benson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I believe this is a hypothetical question; the hearings are not finished.

TOURISM

INQUIRY AS TO REVIEW OF ADVERTISING PROGRAMS

Mr. A. D. Alkenbrack (Frontenac-Lennox and Addington): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce and it relates to tourism. Will the minister advise whether Canada's trade and tourist advertising programs are now under specific review?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): No, Mr. Speaker. The decisions that need to be made are made with respect to the publicity program of the Canadian Travel Bureau.

CAPE BRETON DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION

INQUIRY AS TO APPOINTMENT OF CHAIRMAN

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Prime Minister whether he has been able to make any progress in selecting a new chairman for the Cape Breton Development Corporation. Can he also inform the house when he expects to be in a position to announce the appointment of a chairman?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, we have made some progress but I am not in a position to make any announcement.

Mr. Stanfield: Will the Prime Minister give the house the assurance that he will give this task very high priority? I am sure the Prime Minister will agree that any substantial delay in filling that office might very well prejudice the work of the corporation as it affects the communities concerned.

Mr. Trudeau: I do agree with the hon. gentleman. Mr. Speaker, and we are giving the matter high priority.

LABOUR CONDITIONS

LONDON, ONT.—CLOSING OF KELVINATOR PLANT—PROVISION OF WORK FOR JOBLESS

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, may I direct my question to the Minister of Manpower and Immigration. In view of the fact that the Kelvinator Company of Canada plant in London has now been closed, putting about 300 employees out of work, and also in view of the fact that on February 10 the Minister of Labour assured the house on behalf of the Minister of Manpower and Immigration that this minister's department would seek to prevent these lay-offs or, alternatively, help these men find other employment, what is now being done for the 90 per cent of the men who are without jobs?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, the full facilities of the department are at the disposal of the employer and the employees.

They have been at their disposal for some considerable time and they will continue to be at their disposal.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. With what result?

THE CANADIAN ECONOMY

EFFECT OF INJECTION OF $250 MILLION INTO THE PRAIRIES

Mr. S. J. Korchinski (Mackenzie): Mr. Speaker, I should like to address my question to the Prime Minister. In view of the right hon. gentleman's statement that there will be an injection of $250 million into the western economy and in view of the government's professed intention to fight inflation, does the Prime Minister consider that this injection will be inflationary in itself?

Mr. Speaker: Order. The question as asked is not in order.

FINANCE

DEMAND LOANS—APPLICATION OF INTEREST RATE INCREASES BY BANKS

Mr. John Burton (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Finance. In view of the policy of the chartered banks of applying interest rate increases to outstanding demand loans as well as to new loans, would the minister consider approaching the chartered banks and urging them to desist from this practice?

Hon. E. J. Benson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, as explained by the governor of the Bank of Canada, the banks themselves have to determine their own interest rates chargeable on loans. I did make that quite clear. I would also point out to hon. members opposite that my so-called pious wish of last week still stands, and I am still hopeful that the banks which have not increased their prime rate will refrain from doing so.

Mr. Burton: Mr. Speaker, the chartered banks are applying these interest rate increases to outstanding demand loans even though a set time period for repayment has been set down on paper. I have here three letters I received recently stating that this is the case.

Mr. Benson: If there is a set time period for repayment, then it cannot be a demand loan.

[Mr. MacEachen.]

TRANSPORT

QUEBEC NORTH SHORE AND LABRADOR RAILWAY—EXTENSION OF COMMISSION ORDER

Mr. Ambrose Hubert Peddle (Grand Falls-White Bay-Labrador): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Minister of Transport. Since a substantial lay-off of men at the Churchill Falls project is pending because the Quebec North Shore and Labrador Railway is not transporting fuel supplies, etc., and since severe inconvenience is being suffered by residents of Labrador City and Wabush because of the embargo on the transportation of automobiles, will the minister consult the Canadian Transport Commission with a view to having its recent order extended to include the transport of supplies to Churchill Falls and the transport of private automobiles to and from Wabush and Labrador City?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Transport not only will; he has.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Peddle: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Will the minister tell us when this action took place and what the result of his consultations is?

Mr. Jamieson: Mr. Speaker, I have been in fairly constant consultation with the C.T.C. ever since this strike started and fuel supplies into Labrador Ctiy were delivered, I think, earlier this week. Now we are casting about to find ways of taking care of the matters to which the hon. member has referred. Of course, the simplest way to get the matter resolved is to get the strike settled, and I hope the parties will do that as quickly as possible.

Mr. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. What is the minister doing to bring the two parties together in order that they may settle the strike?

Mr. Jamieson: Mr. Speaker, all I can do is put them on the train.

Mr. Baldwin: I wish the minister would think more about box cars for wheat.

EXTERNAL AID

BIAFRA—REPLY TO CANADIAN OFFER TO PROVIDE NEUTRAL RELIEF FLIGHT OBSERVERS

Mr. David MacDonald (Egmont): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Prime Minister. Can he say whether he or the Secretary of State for External Affairs have yet received an answer to representations made to Nigeria and Biafra with respect to mounting an effective daylight relief operation and utilizing the services of people from our country to act as inspectors in this relief operation?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I checked quite recently and we have had no such acceptance. Possibly there is some later news. If there is, the Secretary of State for External Affairs will be able to inform the house about it when he is here.

THE CANADIAN ECONOMY

WESTERN CANADA—REQUEST FOR REPORT ON TOUR BY PRIME MINISTER

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Prime Minister. Is it his intention to give a report to the house on his recent tour of western Canada. Also, does he intend to report about any policy he may have arrived at as a result of his tour?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, that depends on how long we sit around.

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. How long do we have to sit around before the Prime Minister can make up his mind?

Mr. Trudeau: Not very long, Mr. Speaker.

[Later:]

Mr. Nystrom: Mr. Speaker, may I ask a question that is supplementary to the one I asked a few minutes ago. Could the Prime Minister possibly undertake to make a statement to the house tomorrow with respect to his trip to western Canada?

STUDENT LOANS

INQUIRY RESPECTING INCREASE

Mr. W. B. Nesbitt (Oxford): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Minister of Finance. Yesterday I asked the Minister of Manpower and Immigration whether, in view of the great unemployment among students, he has any plans to increase the size of student loans. The minister implied that the question ought to be directed to the attention of the Minister of Finance today. Has he any plans to increase student loans in view of the difficulties many students will have in paying for their next session's tuition?

Hon. E. J. Benson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, this is a matter involving a change in the statute. There is no intention to change the statute during the present session.

NORTHERN AFFAIRS

NORTHWEST TERRITORIES—INQUIRY AS TO DECISION ON SELF-GOVERNMENT

Mr. Frank Howard (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development. Is he now in a position to announce government policy with respect to self-government for the Northwest Territories?

[Translation]

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): No, Mr. Speaker, we are not ready at this time, but I hope that we will be in a position to do so before the end of the summer.

[English]

Mr. Howard (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege which is related to the misleading way the minister has answered our questions.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Howard (Skeena): My question of privilege relates to the manner he has answered questions of this nature both recently and in the past. For example, on January 21, 1969, the minister said, as reported on page 4551 of Hansard:

> —I have taken a decision on this matter and submitted a proposal to the cabinet. I hope it will receive approval within the next weeks and I expect to be in the Northwest Territories, to announce the new policy, in early February.

When asked similar questions on other occasions his answer has been "soon", "fairly quickly", and so on. I submit that the minister has been misleading the house by making answers of that kind with respect to self-government for the Northwest Territories.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I think I can rule fairly briefly on the question of privilege. I do not think the hon. member can bring this matter foward as a question of privilege. He may have a grievance and feel that the answers received were not those he would have liked to receive. Merely because the hon. member is not satisfied with the answers given by the minister does not mean that there is a question of privilege, and the matter cannot be raised in this way as a question of privilege.

I suggest there is no point in allowing the minister to reply to the point raised by the hon. member. That would merely bring on debate.

Since there is an order of the house that we should now rise until the call of the bells at five o'clock, we might continue discussing the question of privilege when we return. The hon. member may do that if he still feels it is worth pursuing the matter further. However I think it is the desire of hon. members that we rise at this time.

[Translation]

Pursuant to an order of the house, the sitting is suspended until five o'clock.

[English]

SITTING SUSPENDED

At 3.10 p.m. the sitting of the house was suspended pursuant to special order.

SITTING RESUMED

The sitting resumed at 5 p.m.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

Mr. Speaker: It is my duty, pursuant to Standing Order 40, to inform the house that the questions to be raised at the time of adjournment tonight are as follows: The hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mrs. MacInnis)—Combines—Drugs—Price fixing by B.C. pharmacists; the hon. member for Bellechasse (Mr. Lambert)—Agriculture—Eggs—Request for steps to protect Canadian producers against imports; the hon. member for Renfrew North (Mr. Hopkins)—Sports—Trotting Races—Refusal to licence lady drivers.

[Mr. Speaker.]

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

PROCEDURE AND ORGANIZATION

THIRD REPORT OF COMMITTEE—NOTICE OF IMPOSITION OF CLOSURE ON DEBATE

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I wonder if we could have general consent to revert to motions to make a statement about the discussions on the third report of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization and also about the business of the house?

Mr. Speaker: Is this agreed?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The house having reverted to the order for motions:

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): As Your Honour and hon. members know, negotiations have been going on since Thursday last in the hope of arriving at a compromise which would enable the government to discharge its responsibilities for programming the business of the house, but also taking into account some of the points made in this debate by opposition members.

Specifically we proposed to the opposition parties a number of amendments in addition to those proposed in government order No. 99, which together seemed to us to offer hope of a reasonable compromise. Briefly, these are as follows:

1. To remove the standing or special committee stage of public bills from operation of proposed standing order 75C;

2. To provide that at second reading and report stage one full-day's debate must take place before application may be made for an order, that is in addition to the minimum of a full-day's debate which must be provided in the order;

3. To permit the Speaker to extend the time for debate on allocated days for an additional two hours, and on report stage to extend it up to a maximum of two additional days;

4. Where there is an order in effect, to reduce the time limit on speeches to twenty minutes.

After consultations I am advised that those amendments would not enable hon. members opposite to withdraw their opposition to the proposed standing orders. We must, therefore, consider what arrangements should be made for completing the business before the house.

There seems to be some measure of agreement that the continuation of the debate would not be a useful exercise. In addition it is the view of the government that it would be in the best interest both of arrangements for planning the business of the next session, and of members themselves, and indeed in the interest of the house staff that the house should adjourn for this part of the session. But the government also feels some progress in achieving a procedure for programming house business should be the result of the past two weeks' debate even if it is not possible at this point to incorporate in the rules the changes which I have proposed and which have not been accepted.

In our view, if it is desirable to make amendments to the proposed standing orders in the future, these could be brought forward at a later date. In the meantime we feel that the house should move ahead and take a decision on the third report of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization.

It is for this purpose, Mr. Speaker, I wish to give notice, pursuant to Standing Order 33, that at the next sitting of the house—

Some hon. Members: Shame, shame!

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): —immediately before the order of the day is called for resuming the debate on the motion, "That the third report of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization be concurred in", and on any amendment or amendment in amendment proposed thereto, I will move that the said debate shall not be further adjourned.

Some hon. Members: Shame!

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): We hope in this way, Mr. Speaker, to be able to bring the debate to an end and to have some opportunity to reflect on the Standing Orders. As I have said, if it be considered desirable at a later time to amend the Standing Orders, we would then have an opportunity to do so.

Mr. G. W. Baldwin (Peace River): It is obvious, Mr. Speaker, the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald), realizing that the very reasonable alternative proposals advanced on this side of the house were going to be rejected, prepared what he was going to say today, as was his right.

Some hon. Members: Shame!

Mr. Baldwin: It is a great pity, Mr. Speaker, that these negotiations were not brought into the forum where they should have been conducted at an earlier stage in this session, the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization, so that there would have been an opportunity for the flow back and forth of arguments of reasonable men to have reached a culmination, to be brought into the house by the committee as the accepted co-operative effort of all parties, and not in the bulldozing works of a government that wants to ride rampant over members of parliament.

Having listened to the proposals advanced by the President of the Privy Council we advanced our alternative suggestions, which were consistent with the position that this party has taken from the very inception of this debate, which can trace its beginning back to last December and proposed standing order 16A. We have said this is neither proper nor advisable in a legislative body. Predetermined periods for debate should not be set for important issues concerning the country. This has been our position throughout.

We in the Official Opposition have said to the government, and the leader of our party made this abundantly clear in this debate, inside and outside of this house, that proposed standing orders 75A and 75B, and a revision of the present Standing Order 33 dealing with closure, could be adapted to meet the changed circumstances of the report stage which was introduced during the course of the debate on rules last year. That was a very sensible and reasonable idea. As I say it was advanced inside and outside this house. The government rejected it then, and are still rejecting it.

• (5:10 p.m.)

We were prepared to go further and make additional concessions. In the first instance we said there must be a limitation as to the minimum amount of time for the over-all period which is available for discussion in calendar days from the inception of a debate, from second reading until the question is put on third reading. This is of the essence. It is the pith and substance of a determined opposition which has the right to see that the country is advised of measures which, in our view, are not acceptable, so that public opinion can be gathered together throughout the land, which in turn can bring pressure on the government. So, we have set a minimum of 30 days.

Mr. Pepin: —reaching for the moon.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Woolliams: You will be in orbit soon enough.

Mr. Baldwin: Some of the proposals of the government obviously have been brought back from the moon. We made it plain that 30 days, in a country as widespread geographically as Canada is, with a diversity of problems, should be acceptable so that there would be 30 calendar days from the start of a debate until all questions were put on third reading. We proposed this to the government. It was rejected.

We also say to the government that if it is possible to arrive at some form of arrangement, then so far as the adoption of 75c is concerned it must be on a temporary basis, or on a provisional basis. We are prepared to discuss the period of time which would be established for the working of this proviso. During the course of the last session of parliament the government, in particular during the debate in December, was given more power and more authority than any opposition has given any previous government.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Baldwin: They are now in a position to know beyond any doubt that supply will be granted to them by a certain date. They know beyond any doubt that the estimates of government departments will be discussed, not in committee of supply but in the standing committees. During the course of the session members of this party, and of all opposition parties for that matter, have engaged in very, very reasonable co-operation.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Baldwin: In fact, Mr. Speaker—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

An hon. Member: Pipeline debate again.

Mr. Baldwin: Mr. Speaker, I cannot—

Mr. Speaker: May we have order, please?

Mr. Baldwin: I call upon the record to substantiate my statement. Not only have we co-operated, but in many instances members of the parties in opposition have initiated steps to bring to a conclusion debate on measures which the government indicated it considered to be essential for the proper governing of this country. No government has ever had greater co-operation from an opposition than have hon. gentlemen opposite—

An hon. Member: Honourable?

Mr. Baldwin: I am compelled by the usage of the house to say "honourable", Mr. Speaker. Another conditions we propose in respect of the government's 75c, with its changes, are that there must be before each stage of a debate, subject to the allocation of the time rule, one day's debate, and that there should be no right to initiate proceedings under the allocation of time rule until there has been one day's debate. We would then be in what in effect would be closure proceedings. This would be the proper way for the government to meet its responsibilities.

This would apply to the second reading stage, the report stage and third reading stage. If the government then should be of the opinion that the circumstances warranted their moving to what in effect would be closure, they would have the right to move the motion at the conclusion of that day's debate. We say there must also be an over-all limitation of 30 days so that the country can be apprised of the issues and the circumstances so that if necessary that great weapon, public opinion, might be brought to bear on the government.

Finally we said that it must be tried on a temporary basis. We said that if it can be demonstrated that it is essential that it work, there will be every co-operation by this party to make sure that the rule, or an adaptation of it, will become practicable. Instead of this the government have rejected our offer and pursued the path of a bulldozer rather than the path of reason. Mr. Speaker, we will meet them on their battleground.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I suppose the first thing to say is that the government today has achieved a genuine first. Without taking the trouble to read all the pages of Hansard I can be sure that this is the first time in the history of the House of Commons closure has been invoked to impose further closure.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): That is what has been imposed today. Instead of acting on the basis of consultation and consensus, we are now—

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): My hon. friends can laugh, but it is a fact. I have been here as long as most people in this house—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

An hon. Member: Be quiet over there.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): During the past six months we have had more dealing with parliamentary business by consensus and consultation than in all the years I have been here.

An hon. Member: Right.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, that way of doing things is being destroyed by the action the government is now taking.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): I would point out, as the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald) has said, that during the past several days we have had a number of meetings, five or six I believe. During the course of those meetings we have laid our various propositions on the table. Sometimes the discussion has been a bit tight, but most of the time it has been quite civilized. We agreed to a number of things. For example there was agreement among all of us that it does not make sense to apply 75c to the standing or special committee stage of a bill. Now we are being told that 75A, 75B and 75c are to be put through in their present form, and that 75c will apply to the standing or special committee stage of a bill.

Under this provision it will be possible to send a major or most important bill to a standing committee and give that committee one day in which to deal with it. This is being proposed by a government that has traded on the phrase "participatory democracy".

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

An hon. Member: Disgraceful.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): The whole theme of this parliament has been the upgrading of the work of our committees so that they can do a better job, and give all members of all parties a chance to participate in the legislative process by the upgrading of the work of the committees. Now we are being asked to put through, under the old 1913 closure rule, another closure rule which can be invoked to limit the debate in committees to one day. They talk of participatory democracy—this is not democracy at all.

• (5:20 p.m.)

I say to you, Sir, and to other members of the house, that there were a number of other things agreed upon in our discussions since four o'clock last Thursday afternoon. We agreed that perhaps one day's debate on second reading was not enough, and that perhaps one day on the report stage was not enough. This is what is possible under 75c, but we did reach an agreement to modify this position. Some of us wanted more than the government was willing to give, but the government was willing to move a bit. Now that is all down the drain. Negotiations are over. Negotiations have been broken off by a government decision announced to us about 40 minutes ago, with the government coming in here and indicating that what is before us has to be put through under the old 1913 rule of closure.

They tell us over there to get up to date, get with it and live in the 1960's and 1970's. Yet they are going to employ a rule that was brought in in 1913 in the midst of a debate that the Liberals were filibustering. They complained at the time that the thing that was wrong with the rule was that it was brought in in the middle of a debate and then used to put a stop to a debate which had started under a different set of rules.

That is what is going to happen now. We started this debate, on a motion to adopt the third report of the committee, under certain rules of debate. We are now being told there is no more of that, and no more participatory democracy and no more freedom of speech. By one a.m. tomorrow night, or in other words in the early hours of Thursday, July 24, the will of the government will be voted on in this House of Commons.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): I hope Hansard will note that the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) and his cabinet, most of whom are here for this occasion, are applauding the fact that at one a.m. on Thursday, July 24, the government, with the support of its backbenchers, will get its will, which is the use of closure to invoke a further rule of closure.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Baldwin: Something new; rape by closure.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I want to say again that for the past six months, at least up until June 20, we have had a régime regarding house procedure that has been a pleasure. We have been able to reach all kinds of agreements. We have had only two instances during this six months period when we could not reach agreement. I submit it does not do parliament any harm to have two debates in the course of six months during which the feelings people have are fully and freely expressed. It was good for parliament to have these two lively and contentious debates. This was good for the country and good for democracy. Having had those, during the rest of the time we got along on the basis of consent and consultation.

I thought that after my motion of last Thursday for the adjournment of the house, which led to the meetings we have been having, we were getting back to the proposition that negotiation is better than standing off at arm's length, and that consultation is better than confrontation. Apparently this whole attempt to negotiate in the last four or five days has been an exercise which has now been proven futile. I must not impute motives. I am the last person in the house to do that, but I am wondering what kind of negotiations we have been having that we have reached the point at which we now find ourselves.

The result of this decision, if it is carried through, is as clear as can be. Proceedings during the next session of parliament will not be of the kind that they have been during this session. There will be confrontation and frustration. There will be work to rule, no more participating democracy. I appeal to the government even at this late hour to reconsider its position if it wants to retain the respect of the Canadian people who, as I say, believe in democracy.

The President of the Privy Council made reference to the proposals that the government placed before us during the course of our negotiations. The hon. member for Peace River (Mr. Baldwin) indicated the proposals made by his party during the same negotiations. There was agreement among us on some of these points. The particular position I put forward on behalf of this party was a very clear and direct one. My hon. friends opposite, at least through their house leader, were not prepared to accept it.

[Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre).]

I think I have the right to state that we in this parliament did a good job last December. The job was not all done then, but it was an accumulation of four or five years' work. When we organized our legislative process the particular things we did were to downgrade slightly the importance of second reading and upgrade the importance of third reading, and to take the committee stage off the floor of the house and put it into standing committees. I think this was good and I think it has worked well. One of the reasons it has worked well is that we brought in something new, namely, the report stage at which it is possible to zero in on the points at issue and the points of contention.

I assert that one of the things which made the effect of new rules regarding the legislative process work was that the report stage included the right of all members to put down amendments to clauses of a bill that had been considered by a standing committee, or a committee of the whole. I think the experience we have had during the past six months demonstrates that this was a good rule.

The proposal now is that what we have achieved by our own common consent is to be frustrated and truncated and taken away by a rule that says no matter how many amendments there are it is within the power of the government to limit the debate on the entire report stage to two minutes and one day. I shall indicate in a moment or two what I intend to say about this through another point.

Let me make the point here that in our view one has to look at this legislative process in its broad perspective. One has to realize that second and third readings are important but not as important as they used to be, and that the report stage is supremely important. Therefore we proposed, and I did this at the meeting of the house leaders this morning with the full endorsation of the N.D.P. members of this house, that we would be willing to accept a time limitation even under some kind of a 75c on second and third readings. We suggested that the time limitation should not be less than three days at each of these stages. I think this is a pretty real offer for an opposition party to make.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): I hear my hon. friends laugh over there. They do not know what this is all about.

Relating this to the philosophy of our legislative process we said, having been willing to agree to a time limitation on second and third readings, the important report stage or the committee of the whole stage, in the case of a bill that does not get debated at the report stage but only at the committee of the whole stage, should not be subject to any time limitation imposed unilaterally by the government.

I want to make it clear that this morning when we met I indicated that in spite of the strong stand we had taken across the board against 75c, and in spite of all the things we have said against time limitation under 75c at any stage, in the interest of expediting the work of parliament and of gearing our rules to the realities of the present debating process, we were prepared to accept limitation on second and third readings, but we asked that there be no unilateral limitation on the debate at the committee of the whole stage or at the report stage.

• (5:30 p.m.)

It is that proposition, which I submit stands up and is in keeping with a realistic philosophy of our legislative process, that the President of the Privy Council, the government house leader, has rejected. We submit that this rejection should not have taken place. The President of the Privy Council, said in his remarks a few minutes ago that in his view there was no value to the continuation of this debate. I think he said: The continuation of this debate would not be a useful exercise.

I admit that there are times when debate gets out of hand and takes too long; but when a government simply says that a debate on a matter as important as the rules of parliament is not a useful exercise, it is admitting that it does not know what parliament is all about.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Parliament is not just a place where we make speeches, where enough time is allowed for us to speak and get on the record. If we were doing this, we would follow the advice of the hon. member for Prince Edward-Hastings (Mr. Hees) and just put our speeches on the record in printed form. The whole theory of parliament is that the debate be carried on, and out of debate something is achieved; that the cut and thrust of debate is real and purposeful. We have had instances of that in this session. I submit that because of debate the official languages bill is a better bill than it otherwise would have been. I submit that because of debate the omnibus Criminal Code bill is a better bill than it otherwise would have been.

I could name instances by the dozen where in the past legislation has been improved because of debate. But this government says: Debate is not necessary. We will let these boys, elected to parliament at a cost of $18,000 a year, sit here and make speeches now and then, but we do not intend that the debating process shall be one that results in the making of decisions. I submit, Mr. Speaker, that this attitude illustrates a complete failure to recognize the purpose of parliament and the importance of parliamentary debate. There will be other occasions on which to raise points with regard to what debate is all about and what our rules are. I shall indicate in a moment the heading under which I may do it.

I regret that the government house leader has stood in his place and said that the continuation of debate on the rules of parliament is not a useful exercise. There is nothing more important to us, and nothing that is a more useful exercise. The government house leader says he will use the old 1913 closure rule and bring the debate to a conclusion at one o'clock Thursday morning, even though in the process some of the changes he has put forward are not accepted and some of the things we have agreed upon are sent down the drain.

I submit that this is a shameful way of proceeding. It is not a good day for parliament. The very real tragedy is that it need not have happened at all, because we have demonstrated in six months of parliamentary practice that we can make the House of Commons an effective chamber for the practising of participatory democracy. However, Mr. Speaker, this government does not want that. The government wants to be the master of the house. It has no awareness of the fact that we all come here as equals, with equal right to freedom of speech, that we have the right to freedom of speech unless we voluntarily give it up. I repeat, Mr. Speaker, this is a sad day for parliament.

The only other thing I want to say is that in my view the effort to put through the third report of the standing committee, which as everyone knows did not have the support of any member of the opposition, is contrary to the rules, traditions and practices of this House of Commons. There is a Standing Order that has something to say about this matter. I should like to give notice now that at the appropriate moment I shall raise a point of order against the motion, under Standing Order 51.

• (5:40 p.m.)

[Translation]

Mr. André Fortin (Lotbinière): Mr. Speaker, this is one of the first times that we see the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) in his seat to participate in a debate, and he takes advantage of it to impose the closure rule. Having concluded his—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, I would like your co-operation to call the clowns opposite to order.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Fortin: I notice with dismay, Mr. Speaker, that the first presence of the Prime Minister to participate in a debate of utmost importance, in relation to the very existence and good operation of parliament—the first institution of this country—is only to impose closure under another closure rule. In my opinion this is shameful. The members opposite who have been smiling and laughing since the unfortunate announcement of the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald) should have sat instead of the representatives of the several parties of the opposition at the meetings held since Thursday last, with a view to arriving at a compromise.

First, the government claims that the opposition is not really seeking a compromise. I shall point out that the proposal to find a compromise as a token of our good will, was put forward by the hon. member for Winnipeg North Center (Mr. Knowles), who is a member of the opposition and not a government member.

This is the proof, Mr. Speaker, that all the members of the opposition agreed, not to fight stupidly against the government but remain as co-operative as they have been since the beginning of this session, in order to conclude this debate as a result of a parliamentary agreement.

Now the government, following friendly consultations and the almost superhuman attempt by the representatives of the various parties of the opposition which extended their co-operation, and submitted some proposals has shown the extent of its intelligence by sweetly stating that closure had to be put through, but I repeat that it is dictatorial and absolutely unacceptable.

[Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre).]

The strangest thing I find, Mr. Speaker, is that among the government members there are veterans of the two World Wars who have fought dictatorship they are now party to.

Mr. Speaker, we, of the Ralliement créditiste, say "yes" to co-operation, "yes" to consultation, "yes" to agreement "yes" to understanding. We are prepared to listen to government proposals and to co-operate at any time. However, we are not prepared to sell ourselves or to be muzzled.

Mr. Speaker, I should like to point out that the famous Standing Order 75c was first imposed upon the Committee on Procedure and Organization. From there, it was imposed upon the special committee, which has just met. Negotiations have broken off because the government, at this meeting, has once again forcibly imposed upon us this Standing Order 75c. A third time, the government imposes it on the house. In my view, the government had decided a long time ago that it would use its dictatorial power, its majority, to impose its view upon parliament.

Mr. Speaker, with respect, may I point out that Parliament is not at the service of one cabinet or of one man, but of all the people of Canada. All hon. members are equal here; all have the right to speak and to propose amendments for the purpose of improving our laws. laws.

What is most odious, in my view, with regard to clause 75c is that, normally, members of Parliament are elected to examine legislative proposals, to read them, study them and to attempt to improve them.

But, under rule 75c, which the government has imposed, a time limit is fixed without any regard as to whether the opposition members have any amendments to submit or any points to bring forward. In consequence, Mr. Speaker, the hon. members do not have the freedom nor the instruments needed to improve legislation and do their job to the best of their ability because the government is able to control the primary factor, the conerstone of Parliament, that is the time factor.

The government, Mr. Speaker, has become the master of its own members, by muzzling and gagging them. The government now wants to become master of the third parties in the opposition, and in that it shall not succeed.

It has been recognized for a long time, Mr. Speaker, by all observers that government members do not have the chance, the opportunity of carrying out their duty according to the wishes of their electors. Why? Because they are simply gagged by the government. And many things bear witness to the fact that it is exactly the same within committees.

Government members have been muzzled and with the imposition of Standing Order 75c, opposition members will also be muzzled. Why, Mr. Speaker? Because the government party is afraid of the opposition, especially of the smaller parties, because we are not afraid to speak our own mind, because we are free, because we are not tied up to any special election funds, and because our leader leaves us free to speak, to do our duty, something you do not find on the government side.

Parliament, Mr. Speaker, must not be a test tube to be used for experiments by each minister and each government member. It should not be used either as a spring board for one's own publicity and I hope the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) is listening. It should be used either as a place to play hide and seek in order to deny information to members of the opposition.

Mr. Speaker, the three points which I have just mentioned, namely that parliament is a test tube, a spring board and a hiding place, agree exactly with the conception held by the Prime Minister and his party since the beginning of this session.

As for us, we believe that parliament—and this is our earnest conviction—is a melting pot where positive business has to be carried out for the good of the people, where there can be some sober-second thoughts and where legislation is developed. To that end, we nust have available the tools necessary to study it seriously and it is not with this rule of closure that we achieve this.

Government members might think that the Créditistes want to impose their views on parliament or the government. This is not our intention. Hon. members might also think that we have refused to co-operate but I will point out to them that they are mistaken, and the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald) as well as the members of the committee on which I had the privilege to sit, can testify to that.

On behalf of the Ralliement Créditiste, I have suggested that Standing Orders 75a, 75b and 75c be put in effect for a period of one year even though they might have to be revised following a study of the consequences, either good or bad, of their implementation. I felt that request was reasonable in the sense that before adopting a permanent rule, it is better to test it in order to determine whether it is actually in the best interests of parliament.

Now, the President of the Privy Council, on behalf of the Liberal party, turned down that proposal and imposed the closure rule because it serves the interests of his party rather than those of parliament and of the Canadian people.

We are willing to co-operate and to that effect, we have made numerous proposals. The hon. member representing the Conservative party, the member for Peace River (Mr. Baldwin)—whom I want to congratulate in particular—as well as the member for Winnipeg North Centre did a tremendous job, and nobody can say that they lack parliamentary experience. Indeed, they could even teach a thing or two to several members on the other side of the house.

As for me, I had the opportunity of getting better acquainted with the rules and to realize the important part a member can play in the house, in parliament. I had the honour of representing my party on this Committee.

The final result is a feeling of deep frustration. We were wrong to suggest negotiations, because we should have known that the government had already decided to impose closure. This has been obvious ever since this debate started.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

• (5:50 p.m.)

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, I should like to bring my remarks to close on that period. Indeed, I should like to tell the Prime Minister, as well as his government, that they will surely regret their decision to impose closure.

The government wants to give itself more authority to control its legislative program even more to schedule it more efficiently. They want to control parliament even more. We agree, Mr. Speaker, with making parliament, that supreme institution, more efficient, and to that end we offer once again—perhaps for the hundredth time—our co-operation to the government. But if they absolutely want to have more rope the better to hang themselves, we are willing to give it to them; the sooner they hang themselves the better, Mr. Speaker.

I should like to remind hon. members that this is my first mandate. This is my first session in this 28th Parliament. Roughly 50 per cent of hon. members, on both sides of this house, are in exactly the same position.

This year, Mr. Speaker, is a memorable, outstanding year for me—not only for me but for all the new members, and especially those of the Ralliement créditiste. This institution was, to our mind, the most respectable and respected body in Canada. To us parliament was the supreme institution where democratic rights could be fought for, where our points of view could be freely expressed, where we could attempt, through our own limited means, to improve the laws and represent the Canadian people with dignity; we were happy with our first experience.

Mr. Speaker, I conclude on a very sad and melancholy note, because on the eve of the adjournment of the session, the very few rights we had left are snatched away from us. We shall not be able to call it a holiday because the government has decided this to give a rest to its own members who have been twiddling their thumbs since the beginning of the session.

Mr. Speaker, this year in the house has been a most enlightening experience which unfortunately is ending in a most inauspicious way. I would like to tell the government that new members are sorry that it decided to apply the rule of closure and to do so with a smile.

The government sank in the estimation of the Ralliement Créditiste, and the only thing to do is to disregard the Standing Orders entirely, since from now on governments will most probably assume rights they do not possess.

Not only does the government wish to force its views upon us, but it also want to control the business of the house and of the hon. members. But they would never be able to have under their thumb and to control the hon. members of the Ralliement Créditiste, because we are free agents. We shall stand up and be counted, in spite of the liberal dictatorship!

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Orders of the day.

Mr. MacDonald (Egmont): Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order. Is the hon. member for Egmont rising on a point of order?

Mr. MacDonald (Egmont): No, Mr. Speaker; I am rising to speak in the debate.

Mr. Speaker: We are on motions and I have to call orders of the day. When we return to the debate, the hon. member for Egmont will be recognized.

[Mr. Fortin.]

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

PROCEDURE AND ORGANIZATION

MOTION FOR CONCURRENCE IN THIRD REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

The house resumed, from Friday, July 18, consideration of the motion of Mr. Blair that the third report of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization presented to the house on Friday, June 20, 1969, be concurred in, and the amendment thereto of Mr. Baldwin (p. 10963).

Mr. David MacDonald (Egmont): Mr. Speaker, it does not give me any particular pleasure to speak in this house this afternoon, but perhaps it is typical that as I rise to speak on this issue, the most important issue to be raised in this house, the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) sees fit to absent himself. What is involved here is an issue so basic to the future of this parliament that one wonders whether it is possible for us to discuss this vital matter with passions fanned to the boiling point.

It is unfortunate that one of the high points of this era, the week than man descended upon the moon, will also be identified by Canadians as the week that the government chose to descend to dictatorship. As others have indicated this afternoon we have seen a parliament, in which rested the promise of great things, suddenly soured and now brought almost to the point of impotence as a result of the action of an insensitive and, one must conclude, unaware government. If I were a man of stronger language I would not merely talk of the souring of parliament, but of its contemplated rape. For what we have witnessed here during the last few minutes is, to my mind, the death knell of the just society.

From a phrase, "Come work with me", introduced little more than a year ago, we have reverted this afternoon to "Don't bother me". We have learned that a government, unable to sort out its priorities, now considers that the best way off the hook is frankly and blatantly to tell us that parliament is a supreme nuisance. Those with any knowledge of history know that democracy, at any period in time, can survive for only a generation or two without the support of the people. Those who sit on the government benches this afternoon, those who conclude that the majority has rights, have also now declared that minorities must have no rights. We who have been led to believe that a government in this country must govern with parliament and within parliament are now told that, to all intents and purposes, we will be governed without parliament. We in this party, Mr. Speaker, and members in all parties on this side of the house, refuse to accept and will refuse to accept this proposition for as long as we are here.

Those on the government benches who talked freely and fully not too many months ago of government by dialogue have now opted for government by monologue. I will take this opportunity, Mr. Speaker, to call it six o'clock.

Mr. Speaker: It being six o'clock I do now leave the chair.

At six o'clock the house took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The house resumed at 8 p.m.

Mr. MacDonald (Egmont): Mr. Speaker, before the supper adjournment I was indicating in a general way how shocked I and many others in this house were this afternoon to hear the announcement the government house leader made. What we are witnessing, quite likely, is part and parcel of the passing of a free parliament. The Prime Minister's (Mr. Trudeau) role is that of an undertaker, and that of his cabinet colleagues of pall bearers. Tomorrow we shall see the last act played out, and we shall all be witnesses at the wake.

Many in the country have wondered what we have been doing for the past month. The attention of our people to a large measure, understandably, has been directed to the fantastic space achievement of the last few days. They noticed parliament and took note of this debate only a few days ago after the Prime Minister made the inadvertent suggestion that he had better things to do than listen to a stupid filibuster. Some hon. members at that point became disturbed at the idea that, in referring to this debate as a stupid filibuster, he was attributing a motive to some hon. members of the house. Although it may not be unparliamentary for the Prime Minister to call a filibuster stupid, I think we have discovered that his words were not really meant to refer to a filibuster as much as to parliament itself. We have seen very real evidence in this debate that this government has become tired of dealing with parliament and wishes to be done with it.

The government has talked about negotiation. After the government house leader received permission to revert to motions this afternoon, he spoke about the advances the government had made in working out some kind of solution. He seemed to think it strange that by today we had not come to some sort of agreement. Is that his understanding of reasonable negotiations? They were not initiated by him last Thursday but by other hon. members. If one can judge from the relatively small amount of time the government has been willing to spend on negotiations, it is not difficult to arrive at the conclusion that the government has been preparing for some time to carry out the action it announced today it will carry out.

Mr. Bell: Hear, hear.

Mr. MacDonald (Egmont): The slogan we heard not too many months ago was "participatory democracy". All the available evidence shows that either the Prime Minister does not understand what participatory democracy is, or that he cannot be bothered with it. Time and again when important questions or important issues have been directed to him, he has resorted to the technique of posing other questions rather than giving answers. That may be an excellent classroom technique but does nothing to promote those useful exchanges that must take place between a leader and the people. Part of his classroom technique, and here the Prime Minister has demonstrated his debating skill, has been to reduce the matter before him to the point of reductio ad absurdum. He has set up straw men to be knocked down. This time he cannot be bothered going through these exercises. This time he wants to muzzle parliament.

Before the government house leader introduced the closure motion I had thought that he and the Prime Minister did not really understand what they meant when they talked about participatory democracy. Now, I save come to the sad conclusion that, instead of not understanding that term, they did not really mean it.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. MacDonald (Egmont): One of the hallmarks of an effective parliament down through the years has been the mutual respect with which hon. members on either side of the house have regarded each other. Surely, any reasonable leader realizes that men in this forum will act reasonably. Tonight the government is trying to say that reasonable men must accept unreasonable measures. And this is one measure our party will refuse to accept with all the strength in its power. Never before, in the few years I have been an hon. member of this chamber, have I witnessed anything approaching the travesty that the President of the Privy Council indicates he is about to perform.

In the 700 year history of parliaments, the free and honourable parliaments were those in which the government at all times was responsible to parliament. Today, the teachings of 700 years of history are to be reversed. No longer will the government be responsible to parliament; it seems that parliament now will be responsible to the government. This is something no free people can accept.

Mr. Basford: Let us be responsible to the people.

Mr. Stanfield: Right. The minister has said the right thing.

Mr. MacDonald (Egmont): Exactly. The Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Basford) says we must be responsible to the people. He is absolutely right, and I hope he contributes to this debate.

Mr. Bell: Let the minister stand up. Let us hear from him.

Mr. Stanfield: And it has taken the government six months to appoint a commission.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. MacDonald (Egmont): Mr. Speaker, the minister made his contribution from a sitting position, which he no doubt thought was appropriate. His suggestion is that parliament must be effective, and that is quite true. But what the minister, the Prime Minister and his cabinet colleagues are asking for is not an effective parliament; they want an emasculated parliament. Although this issue has not been in the nation's headlines in the last few weeks, it is nevertheless vitally important and is not a matter of housekeeping, as some would have our people believe. Basically the issue is, will our people continue to enjoy responsible government. That is possible only when you have a free and responsible parliament.

• (8:10 p.m.)

One could spend a great deal of time thinking of the utter inconsistency of the government's position. We have made many worthwhile changes in the last year to make this parliament relevant to this country and to this age. One worth-while change was the establishment of Your Honour's position as Speaker with the most complete kind of independence a Speaker has ever enjoyed in a Canadian parliament. I think it was a mark of great advance that all parties, and all party leaders agreed some months ago, in order that parliament would be free and all members could be responsible, that Your Honour's position would be given an even greater place of freedom from any kind of political pressure or control.

It was agreed by all parties, including the Liberal Party, that Your Honour should occupy that special role. We were told this would make parliament more effective and responsible because Your Honour's office and the rules Your Honour administers are the prerogatives, not of any one party or group, but of all members of this house. Suddenly, the government, by its action today, has indicated that they believe the rules are their prerogative to do with as they please.

Some hon. Members: Shame!

Mr. MacDonald (Egmont): This is something no member should be asked to accept. It has been said by the government house leader and others on that side that we must protect the rights of the majority. I have always had occasion to smile when people have suggested to me that we must be concerned about the rights of the majority. I have heard this phrase not only during this debate on rules, but also in connection with the debate on the official languages bill.

Some people have suggested the provisions contained in that legislation were going to endanger the position of the English speaking people of this country and the rights of the majority would somehow be downgraded. It was quite noticeable in that instance that no government member ever expressed that concern, and rightly so. I am still looking for an example which would indicate how the rights of the majority have been endangered. If we want to talk about an effective legislature in a free country where democracy is still operative, we do not look in the first instance to see how effectively the rights of the majority are being protected but we look at the rights of the minority.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. MacDonald (Egmont): What we have seen today in this house has been a flagrant disregard for these rights. It is not a question, as some would have us believe, that we must somehow on occasion tolerate these minorities. We know what the results have been in countries where that has been attempted. If that is the attitude in this house, we shudder with fear at the results which could occur.

Minorities have been dreadfully important in many different cases in numerous countries for the effective survival of basic human rights. Minorities have a right to exist on their own terms. Surely, in parliament minorities are important. They offer a type of safeguard, independence and special vantage point that is never available to the majority, regardless of who forms that majority.

We have seen a callous disregard for those rights and the adoption by this government of a motto that "Might makes right". Why have they adopted this point of view? One is tempted to believe that perhaps the members opposite or those who are in control have been too long used to power. Their vision has become blurred as to what is really at stake, namely, the protection of the vital rights and privileges of this parliament. Perhaps they have even become a bit self-centred.

In the past the Prime Minister has expressed a fondness for authoritarian régimes, some perhaps idealistic, but authoritarian none the less. We are tempted to believe that he is trying to introduce some of that same philosophy into the workings of what up until now has been a relatively free parliament. In years to come, people will not look favourably on the backward step that has been proposed in this house today.

What is really at stake in dealing with this issue? Surely, one of the basic issues in this debate has been the continual erosion of legislative power and responsibility, with a build-up of responsibility to the point of irresponsibility in the executive branch. It makes one wonder what is really happening to the ultimate responsibility of parliament. We have accepted too easily the erosion of legislative responsibility.

The rule changes accepted last December were mentioned earlier today. One of the fundamental changes was the removal of something that had been with free parliaments since earliest day, 'the power of the purse'. This power was removed almost without a murmur. That is not the only thing that has happened to the attrition of the rights of parliament. Anyone who has sat in this house day after day knows that the government unilaterally decided it was sufficient for their purposes to have only part of the cabinet present in the house each day during the question period. The government decided these few ministers could tell parliament all parliament needed to know about what the executive was doing. This downgrading of the question period was more evidence of the nuisance factor the government obviously considered parliament to be.

We have seen an increasingly rigid parliamentary discipline being imposed on government members, not only on questions of an economic or legal nature, but on issues that are highly personal, social and moral, on which the government has taken an absolutely rigid stand. In many ways we have seen the further erosion of legislative responsibility. This new evidence today surely will not surprise hon. members very much.

The Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Basford) referred earlier to the fact that it is the people who really count. I could not agree more. The people of Canada will realize what is being proposed here. It is not just a question of the limitation of the number of speeches that will be made on a certain bill, it is the limitation of the full and free representation that people expect when they elect a person to serve them in the parliament of this country.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. MacDonald (Egmont): I find it difficult to believe that members opposite accepted with equanimity the proposition of the government house leader this afternoon. There are too many members in that party for whom I have respect; people who have served this country in other roles, such as deans of law and who have given leadership in other forums. If they examine closely the proposal before us, they will use every ounce of persuasion they have, both publicly and privately, to make sure we do not commit ourselves to what can only be a travesty on the dignity and validity of this house. I say, for the sake of the future functioning and effectiveness of this place, not only for its own sake but for the sake of the people of this country, in God's name let us not take this step.

• (8:20 p.m.)

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. MacDonald (Egmont): I am encouraged to think that the proposals of the government house leader this afternoon perhaps are more peevish, and maybe even a bit childish, than a serious examination of the steps he proposes to take. I would find it difficult to believe 150 members of this house could accept as a good thing the fact that parliament must now be responsible to government rather than the reverse. Further, the government house leader surely has himself in a most inconsistent position. He has already told us he does not like certain elements of these rule changes as reported by the committee. In fact, on his own initiative he attempted to make changes in order to clarify the situation. Now, he tells us he really does not care that much, but if we can somehow bring this debate to a conclusion the government will accept the rule changes as recommended and perhaps at some later date they can do what they wanted to do in the first place. He is asking us to accept something which is unacceptable to members on all sides of the house.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. MacDonald (Egmont): How can he consider that we or anyone will believe he is acting in a rational or responsible manner when he tells us today he is now ready to accept something he was not prepared to accept a week ago.

Mr. Stanfield: Drunk with power.

Mr. MacDonald (Egmont): One of the issues at stake seems to be that we want to make more meaningful what we do in this chamber. That, of course, means making our debates more meaningful. Yet under this proposal we will be forced to accept, in a little more than a day's time, a rule which will provide for a forum which will be not more meaningful but less meaningful because we will in effect be saying that debate no longer makes any difference. The important thing probably will be programming, so that everything will fall within a certain period of time.

Mr. Stanfield: So we can sell more wheat.

Mr. MacDonald (Egmont): The problem, for the government at least, seems to be that we have not been able to allocate and nail down in advance all the necessary time periods required to put through a certain series of legislation. How, if one really believes debate in this chamber is to be meaningful, can one come to that conclusion? That is not an invitation to dialogue but rather to monologue. When the government chooses to unilaterally determine cut-off time for debate and there is no agreement, then debate in that situation cannot be considered to be meaningfull.

[Mr. MacDonald (Egmont).]

The Prime Minister referred to this debate as being a stupid filibuster. Under the government's proposal, a debate on that basis will become a filibuster. That to my mind will do little to ennoble this place or make it function effectively as suggested by the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Basford).

Mr. Stanfield: Where is he?

An hon. Member: He is not here.

Mr. MacDonald (Egmont): The government suggests that what is needed here is efficiency. They believe parliament has not been efficient.

An hon. Member: Hear, hear.

Another hon. Member: We know you just want your vacation.

Mr. Bell: Go to Florida.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. MacDonald (Egmont): I am really amazed to discover that apparently many people on the government side believe efficiency is the basic criterion for the proper functioning and effectiveness of this place. I suppose they make the equation that the number of bills passed directly equals how good the government is. I think that kind of reasoning is sophistic to say the least, and is highly fallacious.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. MacDonald (Egmont): Naturally, this might be desirable in a totalitarian régime, but surely that is not what we want in this place.

An hon. Member: One of the troika is over there.

Another hon. Member: The one with the big grin.

Mr. MacDonald (Egmont): One must conclude for one reason or another that the government really does not understand what parliament is. Not only that, although that is bad enough, but what makes it even worse—and I again refer to the suggestion of the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs—is that one must assume they do not even understand what democracy is all about.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. MacDonald (Egmont): It is not really rules which make parliament work. If the government concludes it is rules which make parliament work, we will soon work to rule and show them that attitude does not make sense.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. MacDonald (Egmont): I have not been here for many years but I have learned one thing. I have learned that it is the attitude and willingness to work on all sides of the house which makes this parliament function. No amount of rule changes or additions to the rule book will provide a parliament of which we can be proud. If the government thinks it has contributed something worthwhile to this parliament this day, then they have been very sadly misled.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. MacDonald (Egmont): I think we must admit very sadly that the actions indicated by the government house leader today are a very real travesty of the potential purpose of this place. Members of the government have talked about the need for parliamentary reform. With that I wholeheartedly concur. Reform, however, does not start by bludgeoning minorities in this place. Reforms will not be achieved by suddenly reversing 700 years of parliamentary history.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. MacDonald (Egmont): Reforms will not be achieved by souring the will of individual members of this house. What the government has arrived at quite frankly is a confused set of priorities which show very little understanding of this place. I should like to indicate briefly some of the priorities which need to be dealt with which have not yet been seriously looked at by this government. Surely, the basic question is how can we make this house more responsive to public thought and participation. Participatory democracy may be a slogan with little meaning for some people but behind that slogan there is the urgent need that parliament become more responsive or more sensitive to public opinion in this country. What is needed for this place is not less responsibility, as proposed by the government, but more.

In parliamentary reform there is a need for greater legislative initiative and responsibility but there has been little leadership from the government in this regard. One might speak of the need for more and better assistance for individual members and the need of a more creative role for them to play. One could also talk about the need for more effective machinery by which to review the work done by departments and the whole administration. One could spend a good deal of time talking about the kind of committee system which would really work and be responsible. All these things are priorities, but not in the thinking of this government. Rather this government regards parliament as a nuisance and therefore would rather introduce government by dictatorship.

• (8:30 p.m.)

Behind all this I sense a tremendous danger for ourselves and for this country. One does not need to remind anyone in this chamber perhaps that there is still a very large amount of cynicism about, and alienation in respect of, the processes of government not only in our country but in many other countries. We know only too well the degree to which young people, particularly university students, have become disaffected with our system of self-government. What we have seen evidence of today is a widening of this gulf between the government and the people. We are not closing the gap if all of us, as members of this place, are not prepared to deal realistically with the situation, and if the name of the game is only a greater concentration of power in fewer and fewer hands. That being the case, the answer will be altogether too obvious because there will be people in the streets, there will be a revolution and there will be a rejection not only of those institutions which have served us well in the past but of many of the individual rights and freedoms that each of us cherish.

I close by asking all members to think seriously about the step which has been proposed by this government. When Neil Armstrong landed on the moon he talked about a great leap for mankind. We see here the potential initiation of a leap for this country which quite tragically will not be forward, but backward. This is something which all members must refuse to accept.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Frank Howard (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I should like initially to express the feeling of regret and shame which has been developing over the last few months and which thousands of people in Canada have today. There is a feeling of regret and shame within people as a result of what took place a year ago in June. During the election campaign, as everyone knows, there was great admiration developed for the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau).

There was great affection shown for him by thousands of people all across the nation, and there was a tremendous amount of almost love and certainly support. When the people went to the polls on election day, they expressed that hope and affection by electing the Prime Minister and his followers, and I cannot think of a more polite word to use than "followers" for most of them.

The internal shame that has developed results from the fact that many people in Canada feel they were taken in last June. They feel they have been seduced or sucked in by Liberal programs of propaganda. That is why they have regret and feel disaffected. They are sad that they were taken in and that the "Trudeaumania" has now turned into "Trudeauphobia". The hope the people had of electing a Saviour as Prime Minister has turned out to be a hope in vain because, as they have seen today, they elected a scalliwag instead. The people generally have expressed this feeling not only because of what has happened this afternoon but because of what has been developing. They see in the Prime Minister now a person who, is not truly honest.

Thousands of people see in this Prime Minister someone who has no time for parliament or democracy. They see someone who has no time for parliamentary debates and no tendency to listen to opinions. He is like someone with a head of concrete, well mixed and well set, with no time for the views of anybody else. In fact I think the people in Canada see, as they might have seen this afternoon, a Prime Minister with actual disdain and dislike for parliament and its processes. At the very moment the declaration was made on motions, following an indication by the house leader that he was going to impose closure, the Prime Minister got up and walked out.

What is significant is, I think probably for the first time in Canadian history, the Prime Minister was booed as he left the chamber. That is a regrettable thing to have happened. I do not think members were booing him because he chose to leave the chamber, as he has done that many times. That is his prerogative, as it is the prerogative of other members. It was the manner he exhibited as he did leave which was booed. He appeared as a master leaving his servants; as someone flippant, sarcastic and arrogant leaving a place for which he has no use and in which he sees no purpose.

[Mr. Howard (Skeena).]

Not only was he booed, but he was cheered by those on the other side. This is to be expected from those who have no brains to understand what is happening. One of the things I do not like to do is make reference to individuals, especially when they are not in the chamber. That is not my decision, that is the decision of the Prime Minister. I will be happy to repeat in his presence anything I say about him. One of the other indications of his disdain and dislike for parliament and democracy has been shown every time someone made reference to the imposition of closure. He applauded this with his usual simpering smirk, which is a type of smile or smirk almost offensive and embarrassing.

The Prime Minister left the chamber, went outside into the foyer and spoke with newsmen there. On a number of occasions he said he wanted to program the work of parliament. This phrase was used by the hon. member for Egmont (Mr. Macdonald) so eloquently a moment ago. The concept of programming is a concept that should not apply to a parliament, but rather to a computer. My colleague behind me has referred to a robot and I am sure he was looking at some of the backbenchers when that thought came to mind.

This reference to programming means that the Prime Minister wants to be in the position following the imposition of these rules to put a bill into parliament, punch the necessary buttons, have his lackeys and bootlickers stand up and vote without any independence or feeling, following the dictates of the Prime Minister. The measure, would then come out the other end of the computer the very same as he put it in. That is programming.

This concept indicates a disregard for the views of anybody else and a disregard for debate. This reminds us of a slogan used some years ago, "No debate, just obedience." This slogan was developed by a Fascist party. I have no hesitation in referring to the fact that I fully believe the Prime Minister has great Fascist tendencies because of the manner in which he has indicated he wants to run the nation.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

• (8:40 p.m.)

Mr. Gibson: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member is rising on a point of order.

Mr. Gibson: Mr. Speaker, I submit that the day the Prime Minister of this country is accused of facism is a sorry day for the country. This is a fruitless tactic on the part of the opposition.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I wonder whether hon. members might control the volume of their voices. The hon. member for Skeena (Mr. Howard) has the floor.

Mr. Howard (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, the best thing I can do with the point of order raised, whoever raised it, is to ignore it because he, of all people—we know there are others like him—should know how governments with a majority operate. People like the hon. member know the extent of the control that exists within the Liberal party. They know it is impossible for a Liberal backbencher to speak when he has not been given permission to do so. This is even more the case now than it was in the past. Liberal backbenchers know they are not consulted about the legislation that will be brought forward by the government. They know, more than anyone else, the degree to which they are programmed. Today I read in the Globe and Mail that one Liberal backbencher was complaining of the fact his role here was valueless, except as a voting machine. They have to do what they are told. They vote yes or no when they are told to do so. Where is the element of individuality in members of the government party? I have talked to members of the Liberal party. This is a confidential matter and I shall not mention their names, but there are members sitting on the other side of the house who do no agree with the imposition of closure. They reject it because it is objectionable to their sense of parliamentary democracy. They object privately, but I am sure that when the vote comes tomorrow night not one of them will have the courage to stand up and vote as his conscience dictates.

They will not follow the dictates of their conscience because they are programmed by the Prime Minister to come up with a certain answer and vote as he tells them. Where is the individuality in the Liberal party? Where is the self-respect of those hon. members who have spoken with me and said they do not like closure? We will see where their self-respect is when the vote is taken tomorrow night.

An hon. Member: Name them.

Mr. Howard (Skeena): My hon. friend says, "Name them". I tell him that I do not consider myself to be a squealer or a tattler of private conversations. My friends in the Liberal party may be used to that sort of activity, but I am not. If they have not the courage to vote as their conscience dictates tomorrow night, it will prove to the people watching us that the faces may change, the names may change, but those faces are just masks to cover the finks who are underneath. The same old gang is over there, the same old crowd. They have two policies, two faces and two things to say on every issue. They speak one way and vote another.

It is not necessary for me to disclose who these individuals are, because within their hearts they know whether what I have said applies to them. They whimper and moan privately that they did not really support the idea, but they have to support the government. We know that this sort of quiet moaning will go on, and we do not worry about it. It will continue within the government caucus with respect to the manner of operating parliament. This situation is more prevalent since the present Prime Minister assumed office. The method of operation of the government does not allow backbenchers' opinions to be expressed in debate. We do not know what happens behind the closed doors of the Liberal caucus.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Howard (Skeena): I was sitting here the other day listening to some of the catcalls coming from the other side of the chamber, and it reminded me of a piece of doggerel that I believe applies right now. It is this:

> Hark—what is that we hear?
> If 'tis a voice, 'tis not too clear.
> But if 'tis a Liberal saying,
> Then only 'tis an ass that's braying.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member for Skeena has the floor and should be allowed to continue his speech. He may have more poetry for the house.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Howard (Skeena): I thank you, Mr. Speaker, for elevating that work to the realm of poetry. I would not have put it in that class. What is important in terms of considering proposed rule 75c and the matter of closure is how the government and its caucus operates. We do not know to what pressures members on the other side are subjected in caucus in order to get them to toe the line. This has happened in the past—

An hon. Member: Here comes Macdonald.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Howard (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I have just been apprised of the fact that the gauleiter has entered the chamber. Perhaps he heard me talking about what goes on in the Liberal caucus room and what pressures are brought to bear on Liberal backbenchers to make them toe the line.

Perhaps he is the guy who threatens to cut off the compaign funds if they do not vote as they are supposed to vote. Perhaps he is the fellow who tells the Liberal backbenchers that if they do not toe the line the Liberal party will run another candidate against them and kick them out at the next nominating convention, just as they did with Ralph Cowan.

An hon. Member: Where is Ralph Cowan now?

Mr. Howard (Skeena): Where is the element of democracy and governmental responsibility in the Liberal party? They could not stomach Ralph Cowan's criticism, so they got rid of him. He would not toe the line; he was not subservient to the dictates of the party as are the rest of them over there. I know that every member of the Liberal party does not fall into that category. In fact, the hon. member for Grenville-Carleton (Mr. Blair), whom I saw earlier but who is not there now, is probably extremely happy about the events today because he was chosen, as the chairman of the committee, to act as a pawn. He will soon see his work come to fruition with the assistance of the closure motion introduced by the government house leader.

• (8:50 p.m.)

I regret also that the honourable and empty barrell from Burnaby-Seymour (Mr. Perrault) is not here because at one time, and this intrigues me—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I think that even if hon. members take part in this debate with feeling and passion some respect for certain values should still be maintained. I am not sure that anything in particular the hon. member said is out of order, but much of it according to my humble standards—and my standards may be different from those of other hon. members—is not in accordance with my views as to how a debate should be conducted in this chamber. But again I say, that I cannot put my finger on anything that is particularly or especially out of order or that is not parliamentary. But in what the hon. member said, if this is the kind of debate we are going to have today, tomorrow, on Thursday or on other days, I wonder how long the House of Commons will survive.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Howard (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I could not agree more with you. I wish you had some influence in the cabinet. I wish those who have brought all this about would heed your words, and would think on them overnight. I wish that last December the government house leader, who today proved that he was not very honest with parliament last December, had listened to your words then and would listen to them now. What the government house leader has done—and I say this with all respect to you and am not trying to be unparliamentary or offensive—has been to indicate how insincere he was last December with respect to rule 16A.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Howard (Skeena): He showed us today what is meant by programming because here was a seven months program to introduce an offensive rule change that would stifle debate and that would trample on the rights of the members of the opposition as well a government backbenchers, even though they may not care much about them. Everything leads up to the imposition of closure today and tomorrow in order to get another form of closure written into the rule book. The President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald) proved to us today that these so-called negotiations to which he was referring were a sham, that he would accept nothing in the way of a compromise, and that he was talking out of both sides of his mouth.

Mr. McIlraith: You were the ones who would accept nothing.

Mr. Howard (Skeena): I am glad to see that the Solicitor General (Mr. McIlraith) has finally awakened and has injected himself into this debate after having been dealt with rather unkindly by the Prime Minister at some point, in my opinion. I would think that, of all the people in the cabinet, the Solicitor General would exhibit independence. I hope he will stand up tomorrow night and vote against closure. Will you do that, George? Where is your courage now?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member should address the Chair.

Mr. Howard (Skeena): I apologize, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. McIlraith: Since the hon. member spoke about me, I would like—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member for Skeena (Mr. Howard) has the floor.

Mr. McIlraith: Mr. Speaker, I should like to rise to a point of order since the hon. member referred to me. I ask him respectfully, through you Mr. Speaker, to observe some of the rules of debate in this house.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Howard (Skeena): We all remember that the Solicitor General used to be house leader, but he exhibited such a lack of knowledge of the rules he was demoted from that position.

One thing that has been proven today, apart from the indication of insincerity on the part of the government and fascist tendencies on the part of the Prime Minister, apart from the indication that the Prime Minister and the government have somewhat less respect now for parliament than they had even a year ago, is that it is not possible any longer to trust the President of the Privy Council.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Howard (Skeena): It has been proven that it is also not possible to trust the Prime Minister.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Howard (Skeena): It has been proven that it is not possible to trust members of the cabinet who are elastic enough in their principles to support a closure motion to stifle debate. Events today prove that the government reeks of political turpitude and would sacrifice any idea to impose its will upon parliament. It proved that the government is not content simply and only to control its servile backbenchers, that the Prime Minister is not happy enough simply to have a fawning and toadying group of followers. He now wants to take away any independence the opposition members may have and restrict the tenor of debate. He knows that he can call upon his minions to vote in any way in which he tells them. He asks himself: What do we need debate for if we have the assuredness of a vote? With the Prime Minister's queer approach to politics, it seems to me that a long time will elapse before we can develop again the spirit of friendliness and co-operation that is so necessary in a democracy.

By being arrogant and unfeeling, the Prime Minister has done more today to harm parliamentary democracy than even Louis St. Laurent did. By applying closure during the pipe line debate the Liberals were simply selling out part of our economy; today, they are selling our parliamentary freedom.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Howard (Skeena): Let me say in closing that if the Liberals want to operate parliament by the rules of the jungle, then the only course open to us is to try to accommodate them.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

[Translation]

Mr. Adrien Lambert (Bellechasse): Mr. Speaker, I am dismayed by the events which have taken place today.

I can remember that, some years ago, while I was listening quietly to the radio and reading the papers—

Mr. Speaker: Order.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Some hon. members are preventing the hon. member for Bellechasse (Mr. Lambert) from being heard. He is speaking from the other end of the chamber. I think his speech is as important as the others, and the Chair should be given an opportunity to hear it.

• (9:00 p.m.)

[Translation]

Mr. Lambert (Bellechasse): Mr. Speaker, as I was saying, a few years ago, while quietly listening to the radio to hear about the proceedings of the parliament of my country, or quietly reading the newspapers to find out what was happening in the House of Commons, I learned that after a few days discussion, a motion for closure had been passed. At that time, I did not expect that in 1969, I would be here as a member to witness such an event repeat itself.

I had thought, during the last week, after listening to the very serious speeches that have been made, that we would have come to an agreement of some kind, especially after listening religiously to the speech made by the hon. member for Hillsborough (Mr. Macquarrie) who expressed really peaceful and logical opinions. I had such high hopes that I told myself that, during this week, the house could adjourn, after having come to an agreement.

I did not intend to take part in the debate, letting the hon. members who are more familiar than I am with the rules discuss, on its merits, the motion of the chairman of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization, presented to the house on June 20 last. But, as the report recommends that the rules be amended in order to insert, immediately after Standing Order 75, the new clauses 75A, 75B and 75C, I cannot accept that and I wish to humbly express my views.

Following the motion moved by the chairman of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization, the hon. member for Peace River (Mr. Baldwin) proposed the following amendment:

> That the third report of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization be referred back to the committee, with instructions to amend it by deleting therefrom proposed Standing Order 75c.

On the other hand, the government says that it needs rule 75c in order to get the legislation it introduces in parliament, adopted without delay, but that it will very seldom use it. I heartily wish it will be so.

Standing order 33 is still effective and at one time, I had thought it would have been adequate without having to resort to rule 75c.

The government seems determined to get rule 75c through so that it will be an integral part of the standing orders to use against what it calls the "small opposition parties".

Mr. Speaker, we have first been elected as members of parliament and I remember that during the first sittings of the house, several members who have been in the house for twenty years and yourself have stated on several occasions that all the members in this house have equal rights and similar privileges, no matter whether we are seated on a back or a front bench. I cannot understand therefore why a certain number of hon. members should be muzzled, only because according to the government the debates are unduly delayed.

Mr. Speaker, where are the government bills whose passage was delayed, on account of the bad faith of the opposition? I wonder. Some have suggested that such was the case at the report stage of Bill C-150, better known as the omnibus bill. Of course, consideration of this bill took more time than some small bill, and this is understandable. There were in fact several amendments to the Criminal Code in a single bill, and it was the duty of hon. members to make a thorough study of it and to suggest amendments in line with the representations made by recognized organizations and public opinion. I think it was only normal that the opposition members repeat in this house all the representations of those who were against some parts of the omnibus bill. In my opinion that is the role of any hon. member in a democratic parliament.

The opposition should not be held responsible if the work of the house is not progressing according to the wishes of the government. The responsibility lies mainly with the standing committees, which do not always operate very quickly. As long as a bill is before a committee and has not returned to the house, how can the house finally pass it?

For instance, the language bill was given first reading on October 17, 1968, but was only passed by parliament late in June. Is such a slow pace due to the opposition parties?

In my opinion, committee work could be speeded up in order that the bills referred to committees be studied without delay, and the reports brought back before the house earlier. This would surely make for a better allotment of time as far as parliament is concerned.

Mr. Speaker, I think that all members readily realized that with the number of hours spent considering various pieces of legislation, we could, I believe, with a little goodwill, expedite our business and report to the house a little more quickly, and this, in short, would enable every member who does not sit on committees to examine bills more thoroughly and to make a few suggestions if they see fit.

Mr. Speaker, how can it be explained that on the one hand, government members are boasting that a great many legislative measures have been passed during this session while on the other, it is intended to muzzle the opposition under the pretext that it delays the adoption of bills?

Mr. Speaker, we are here as members of parliament, not to destroy but to work at the development of Canada in every field, according to what we consider best for the people. I am aware that we have made an earnest contribution to the business of the house and that there is no reason for the goverment to complain to the extent of wanting to suppress freedom of speech in the house.

We know that in the course of two world wars, Canadians were called upon to sacrifice their lives and to contribute financially in the name of freedom. Many of our relatives laid down their lives during both of these wars. Had they lived, they would certainly feel unhappy to see that freedom is now jeopardized instead of being encouraged.

Mr. Speaker, if the session is protracted, it is certainly not because we used the time of the house to discuss the farming problems in eastern Canada. It is not either because we took too much time discussing the problems of the dairy industry and the government's dairy policy for 1969-70, since that item was not even put on the orders of the day by the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Olson), and yet, the situation is extremely serious. On the other hand, many problems have not been debated, although they would have interested the people of Canada. Those are certainly not the topics on which we dwelt most.

If my memory serves me well, Mr. Speaker, it was on May 24, 1967, that the farmers of the provinces of Quebec and Ontario organized a march on parliament hill. On that occasion, the farmers, respectful of law and order, came to express their grievances and ask for a little justice.

I recall that in front of the parliament buildings, TV cameras were focused on the crowd of marchers in order to broadcast the event all across Canada. The same evening, both the press and TV were reporting that the marchers had behaved extremely well because of their respect for order, and because their claims were justified and were expressed in a spirit not of destruction, but of co-operation.

• (9:10 p.m.)

Even if a few windows gave way under the pressure of the crowd and were shattered, it was not intentional. Indeed, I was there and I remember that at the door of the parliament buildings the few windows which gave way were not broken out of malice by the marchers, but gave way under the pressure of the crowd who wanted to meet the ministers and talk to them. We did not want to deprive them of their right to speak, but we wanted to give them the right to speak to us.

Mr. Speaker, the government has no call to complain about the opposition, because during this session, the days allotted to the opposition under a standing order of the house were not all used up to criticize the government, as is the opposition's right, in order to give the government more time to have the legislation it wanted to introduce in the house passed. That is co-operation, Mr. Speaker.

In my opinion, it would be advisable to try to improve the standing orders and I am sure it is in that spirit that all members wish to work, so as to adjust the standing orders to our present needs. Those rules which need to be amended, should be geared to our century of speed, but without giving up everything, especially our freedom of speech which would be taken away by a mere decision of a minister, under overly drastic standing orders.

I feel that we have made good progress by adding to rule order 75, rules 75A and 75B. Even if at the beginning, there seemed to be some disagreement about those new provisions, I think that after a thorough consideration of the merits of standing orders 75A and 75B, on the whole, all members accept them. In my opinion, we should have given rules 75A and 75B a fair trial in the next session, and if serious problems had cropped up during the trial period, the government could have applied standing order 33.

Because of the little experience I have acquired in thirty years of participation in various organizations, I can safely say that an agreement is always possible among people of good will.

Mr. Jean-Charles Bonenfant, librarian of the Quebec legislature said this:

> Any reform of parliamentary work should aim at making it more efficient and at ensuring the freedom of participants. Nothing else must remain. What is useless, or cannot really contribute to expedite our proceedings must go.

If we gave a look at that, we could find out there are traditions and practices that it would be well for us to abandon. We would thus save time, which would be to the benefit of the House of Commons.

We must all be serious-minded enough, I think, to be able to understand each other and give our country the example of a parliament working to promote the best interests of all, while always taking into account the fact that it is the public that pays the opposition, the government and the government members. I am not more eager than anybody else to spend twelve months in session, while we could do the same work, and very well, in eight months. My constituency is a very large one and during the adjournment period, it would be very useful for me, as for all other members, to be able to meet the people. That is necessary to keep in touch with the people I represent in parliament, so as to always reflect their way of thinking and inform the government of the real problems existing in my area.

I endorse the views expressed by the leader of the N.D.P. (Mr. Douglas) as to the motion before us; he gave us a very good picture of the situation. It would be in the interest of the government to give greater consideration to the serious arguments in favour of the reference of the report to the committee, with instructions to remove section 75c, which is bound to lead us to dictatorship. Even if we do not like the word "dictatorship", we have to mention it and it could be that through our mentioning it, we shall call the attention of responsible people and of the public, in order to take a step backward if need be, precisely to avoid bringing about, without realizing it, a system that was not appreciated elsewhere and that should not be more appreciated in this country.

I shall conclude my remarks by quoting the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald), who concluded his speech on July 8 with those very words:

I should like to make clear to the hon. member for Lotbinière (Mr. Fortin)—

Who was at that time the spokesman for the Ralliement Créditiste—

—that I do not think his party should be criticized for having felt on a matter of principle that they had to take a long time in debating the omnibus Criminal Code bill.

I want to thank the President of the Privy Council for having on July 8, paid such compliment to the members of the Ralliement créditiste for he actually acknowledged that this debate had been useful and had been conducted in a fair spirit. I go on quoting his words:

—What the house has to do is to make a provision that while hon. members may feel they have to take that time they can at least be relieved of that obligation by some kind of fair allocation of time order which will enable other matters to be dealt with.

I really do not expect hon. members to support this. On the other hand, I am sure they do not expect me to favour the system whereby a minority in this house controls the business of the house.

Now, these words I find rather objectionable, for there can be no question here of small or big groups. The people concerned are always members, representing the people, here in the house. Groups may well exist outside the house, but when it comes to debating on the business of the house, members should always be considered as individuals and not as belonging to a group.

[Mr. Lambert (Bellechasse).]

He went on saying:

However, I trust we will have a meaningful debate in this regard, and I hope that perhaps even at this late date we may reach a genuine agreement in the house as to some effective means of programming the business—

I have been expecting this eleventh hour for the past week, and even today, and even until the last minute, I believed in the efficiency of the eleventh hour, which would have made it possible to find an alternative other than that which has been announced to us and which will take place at 1 a.m. on Thursday.

The President of the Privy Council said further, and I quote:

—bearing in mind that section 49 of the BNA Act says that ultimately the decisions of the house have to be made by a majority of voices.

At the time, he explained to us what could be the result of the eleventh hour. Today, we can better understand the meaning of the warning he was giving us when referring to section 49 of the BNA Act.

I wish, as he does, that even at this late hour, we can come to a democratic agreement as a result of a useful debate and I hope that the government will not use its majority to impose a rule which would not do honour to parliament.

If our society has to be put in a straightjacket as it develops, I do not believe that it could be described as progress. If, in order to expedite business, the members should be deprived of freedom of expression, I wonder where we are going.

It is most unfortunate that following the adoption of the official languages bill, the government should now impose upon this same parliament the extreme restriction on the use of language, which is the vehicle of the official languages.

[English]

Mr. R. N. Thompson (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, two days ago, on July 20, man reached the moon and the spirit of mankind spontaneously soared to new heights of hope and brotherhood. Today, on July 22, the Prime Minister, aided by the government house leader, moved to throttle free speech by invoking closure. The spirits of men accustomed to free speech in a parliamentary democracy, and after all parliament is the very hub of this democracy, sank in despair. The throb and vitality of democracy, in a world where democracy is often threatened, was never stronger than it was last Sunday. To this end, the astronauts performed a great service to the free world. Tonight in Canada the strength of democracy has dropped to its lowest ebb in history. This is a black day for this country.

• (9:20 p.m.)

I feel sorry for you this evening, Mr. Speaker. We have had some excellent Speakers in this house, but I doubt if there has been a Speaker who has had the support and unanimous goodwill that Your Honour has had. I respect Your Honour's judgment and fairness. We do not always agree with Your Honour, but there is not a member on either side who does not have affectionate regard for the manner in which Your Honour maintains decorum in this house.

It is going to be a difficult job for Your Honour in the years ahead. The goodwill, frankness and willingness to get along that has characterized this session is not going to continue. I must confess that I am emotionally disturbed tonight. This is not usual for me. I have watched the antics and listened to the remarks of some hon. members opposite. I am very concerned about the closure that has been introduced to-day. I am afraid that what has been the characteristic feature of this session is not going to be here when we return in the fall. It is going to be a drag-out struggle and I can understand why. The majority in a democracy is never stronger than when the rights of the minority are also strong. Today, the rights of the minority in this house are being jeopardized.

I can understand that in the future there will not be the same willingness and desire to get along. It will be difficult for Your Honour. This is unfortunate because at this time, when turmoil and violence seem to be the order of the day and when there is so little respect for law and order in many parts of the world, we need every bit of respect and decorum that we can get in order to hold the good ship stable. I know Your Honour understands what I am trying to say at this time.

As I watch the members on the other side of the house, I cannot help but be confused. Many of those on the other side are good friends of mine. This house produces friendships that go deeper than the general public understand. Even though we may be on opposite sides on vital and important issues, there is a bond of friendship that develops between many of us that is just as deep and real as any friendships we have in our lives.

As I look across the floor I see the Minister of Labour (Mr. Mackasey) and the Minister of Manpower and Immigration (Mr. MacEachen). I also see the government whip, a man whose performance in this house and reputation of loyalty to this country and what it represents are beyond question. I cannot help but wonder what is going on in the minds of these men tonight. We probably will never know. There are others who were here earlier tonight. I think of the Minister of Public Works (Mr. Laing), the Solicitor General (Mr. McIlraith) and the Minister of National Defence (Mr. Cadieux). Some of these men have served long years in this house and I know the respect in which they hold it. I know of their own dedication to democracy.

A great deal has been said about the minority governments that existed between the years of 1963 and 1968. There were many difficult hours and days in those parliaments. Even though those of us on the opposition side sometimes disagreed bitterly with the issues before us, we always felt the former Prime Minister, Mr. Pearson, had respect for this house. When you can trust a man's motives, even though you may disagree with him, there will still be bonds of friendship and confidence. There will be the stability which democracy and this house need.

I am afraid when I watch the pattern of progress of this government. I think the government house leader and I entered Parliament at the same time. When I watch the action and reaction develop in some of the members who came to this house just a year ago, having had a pattern set by some of their own leaders such as the government house leader for this type of problem we are now facing, I fear for the parliament of Canada. The expression on the face of the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) this afternoon indicated his attitude. There was fear in my heart and soul because I could not see in him the respect and sense of value this institution, of which we are a part, deserves.

The other day I asked a simple question about whether the Prime Minister was going to stay in this house to take care of the ship during what I regarded as an important debate, this debate, or whether he was going to keep an announced appointment with the people in the west. He said the people in the west were more important than this "stupid filibuster". There is no better way of describing the Prime Minister's attitude toward this institution of parliament than by that expression, "stupid filibuster".

A few minutes later, the Prime Minister imputed the motives to the opposition by describing the question period as hypocritical. This is further confirmation of the disdain and disregard in which the Prime Minister of this country holds this institution. I am concerned about this. This is why I said earlier that I regard this as a black day for Canada.

Great patriots of the governments of the past, not just common members of parliament like the majority of us, have said that the opposition in a democratic parliament is just as important and vital to the function of a parliamentary democracy as the government. There have been great prime ministers in the past such as Laurier, Mackenzie King, St. Laurent, Borden and Diefenbaker. These men have unanimously, over and again, proved in their lives of service to this house and the democracy of Canada that they regarded this institution as being something well nigh sacred.

• (9:30 p.m.)

The question which keeps coming back to my mind at this time is why the Prime Minister of this country, with his very short years of experience in this house, now seeks to bring about a basic reform of the rules and procedures of this house for which none of his predecessors ever thought of asking.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Thompson: There are many statements by the Prime Minister which I could use tonight. Some of them were made during the debate which centred around rule 16A, which we discussed earlier in this session. They reveal the basic, inner attitude of the Prime Minister.

I have a few questions I should like to ask members on the other side of the house. I ask them with sincerity. I do not expect an answer directly, but I would ask them to answer these few simple questions to themselves. Why is it at this time that every single member on the opposition side is united unequivocably against this closure rule which is now being forced on us by the use of closure? In my years in this house I have never before seen the opposition in complete unanimity. Can we all be wrong?

Mr. Forrestall: They say we are.

[Mr. Thompson.]

Mr. Thompson: They say they have a mandate to govern. They insist on the right to force through future legislation which might be controversial. I want to say to the government that this minority on this side of the house, unanimously united in our own free will, represents 55 per cent of the people of Canada.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Thompson: There is no political pressure on any member on this side of the house to vote or take a stand on this issue. This means we are united not only in action but in spirit. If some of those on the other side who are my personal friends are telling me the truth, and I believe they are, I do not think the same situation exists over there. There was the direction which went out to the caucus and to the backbenchers a few months ago, as one of the members on the other side of the house informed his own constituents, ordering them to support government policy in committees. Tonight a telegram has gone out under the name of the Prime Minister ordering every Liberal member of parliament to come back to vote as he directs.

I want to say to the members of the government that over on this side of the house there is a strong unanimity, a firm conviction, that the issue which we are discussing at the present time is the most vital issue we have ever faced in this House of Commons.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Thompson: I should also like to ask hon. members on the other side why this rule is necessary at this time. The press and Hansard all tell us that the record of this parliament in this session has been a good one. Yes, we were hung up for a while on the Criminal Code amendments, and I shall have a few remarks to make about that. As a whole, however, this session has been a profitable one. Furthermore, and more so than in any session in my experience in this house, there has been a remarkable degree of good will and willingness to co-operate.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Thompson: I do not think that same willingness will be there in the future.

Mr. Woolliams: There is no way.

Mr. Thompson: This has been substantiated by the fact that an all party committee of the house, which took at least five years to draft the new rules, produced a certain oneness in spirit so far as the need to reform the rules of the house was concerned. For the first time this session we operated according to those rules. Most of the things which hindered and blocked progress in the immediate past are no longer possible because the new rules have eliminated those roadblocks and hindrances. If that is so, and I am convinced it is, then why is this closure rule necessary now? I could understand it if there had been a major filibuster such as we had in respect of the pipe line debate in 1956. If this had been the case there might have been some justification for strengthening the closure authority so far as the operation of the rules of the house are concerned. But there is no such circumstance at this time.

All this closure rule, 75c, will do is force on this house a rule which, so far as the practical application and functioning of this house is concerned, is absolutely unnecessary. Perhaps there is an intention in the mind of the Prime Minister or in the will of the government to bring in seriously controversial legislation which they will be able to force through without having to answer to the public, as would be required normally under rule 33 for the application of closure. If that is the case, then we are moving from a parliamentary democracy toward a dictatorship. I do not like to use that word; it bothers me. I do not like some of the remarks which have been tossed back and forth here tonight because I do not think they are really becoming of men and women in our position. I want to say, however, that there is a genuine fear and alarm among the members of the opposition which justifies what is taking place. I did not condone, and publicly said that I did not condone, some of the things which happened and which were said to the Prime Minister when he was out west. However, by his very action and by the very flippant remarks he so often flings out, he invites that kind of action.

That is the reason what I say tonight is correct. I am not a prophet of doom, but this kind of thing is inevitable. The house leader, by his very attitude and by his very irritating offhand remarks, invites the reaction that has been evidenced here tonight. This is not just another debate. This is not a stupid filibuster. This is not hypocrisy. So far as we on this side of the house are concerned, this is a struggle toward the preservation of freedom of speech of the representatives of the people. It applies to members on the other side of the house as well because they will not always form the government.

I should like to give a bit of advice to the hon. member for Hamilton-Wentworth (Mr. Gibson) who is now making so much noise. He would be well advised to keep his mouth shut and listen a little more—

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Thompson: —because his depth of experience in the house does not, in my opinion, give him the ability to understand and assess what is actually taking place.

I have another very important question which I should like to ask. Why, just two days before this house was to recess for the summer on completion of its second semester, which is the terminology which has been adopted in defining the sections of our different sessions, was it necessary for the house leader to re-introduce into this house the closure rule, 75A, 75B and 75C? Rule 75C is the equivalent of rule 16A which was so ignominously tucked in the drawer some months ago. I now understand the Prime Minister, in explaining the withdrawal of 16A to the public of Canada on a national network, said this was just a trap in order to force through some of the less agreeable rules he had in mind.

• (9:40 p.m.)

Why was it necessary to bring in closure? We were all getting along well. Was there any hold-up in respect of any piece of legislation? Was there any major piece of legislation on the order paper that had not been dealt with in so far as the obvious intent of the government was discernible? There has been none in so far as I am aware. Again, I would say that the new rules have worked well. They represent many basic improvements, although they are not yet adequately proven in practice. At this time they represent a tremendous change for the good.

May I also remind the new members of the house, particularly those on the government side, that these rules did not result from any partisan decision or politics, but were the result of years, months and hours of working together in an all party committee. A great deal of study and careful consideration was given, and finally an all party agreement was reached in respect of these rules. It is because of these rules we have been able to make good progress.

What is it that is motivating the Prime Minister, the house leader and those who are working closely with them in forcing this issue upon us at this time? I do not know the answer but I have my own suspicions. I am sure there are members on the other side of the house who also have their own thoughts regarding this question. I am concerned about this situation.

I have another simple question. Why have none of the great Prime Ministers in the past resorted to this type of action? Why is it that in times of difficulty, and they had their problems, filibusters and disagreements—the records of this institution are full of them since its beginning in 1867—they would sooner take a longer time than they thought necessary? Why is it that they respected the opposition, whatever party was in power? I am convinced that it was because they had an appreciation of the value of parliament in a free, democratic society.

There are those who say the debate on the Criminal Code was a useless filibuster and a waste of time. I do not believe it was.

Mr. Woolliams: The Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) does not think so.

Mr. Thompson: No, the Minister of Justice does not think so either, but there are those who point their fingers over here to my left at the Créditistes and accuse them of a filibuster.

Some hon. Members: Shame.

Mr. Thompson: I was one of those who agreed with them. I did not support the Criminal Code amendments. However, I did not agree with the length of time we were required to take to come to a final vote. To many of them I said that the opposition had gone far enough. But let me say specifically to hon. members on the other side of the house that their protest was not a filibuster. It was rather a substantial protest on behalf of those people they represent. That party had made this issue an election issue and it stood true to its commitment during the election. They carried out their responsibilities well.

To those members of the government who regard that lengthy debate as futile, I can only say it served a very useful purpose in providing a safety valve for the views of a rather large minority of people in Quebec and elsewhere. Certainly, 75c and the implementation of closure at this time is not justified in light of that debate, not by any measure. If it is, then there is 75B. The Créditistes have given their support to 75B. What then is the use, purpose, motivation or reasoning behind those who would force 75c on us at the present time? I believe that a wise government would gladly endure an occasional filibuster in a representative democracy such as we have, because such as government knows that the throttling of strongly held views leaves a residue of bitterness that can be dangerous.

It is for this reason I sympathize with you, Mr. Speaker, in the responsibilities that will be yours during the rest of this parliament. This is not going to be as pleasant a job as in the past, in spite of those occasional problems you have had with some of us. It is not only the opposition which feels this way. It seems to me that the government ought to be a little sensitive to public opinion. A majority of newspapers across this country have expressed opinions in relation to the views I have expressed. Let me read a short quotation from a recent article in the Ottawa Citizen. I do not always quote the Ottawa Citizen because it is not often regarded as a Conservative newspaper. I quoted it last night because it had something profound and relevant to say about another issue. I quote it again tonight for that same reason.

On July 4, this editorial appeared which reads:

> It is no accident that the government decided to wait until the dying hours of the present session to introduce its new closure rule—and that is what rule 75c is.

The editorial then continues:

> No parliamentarians can become as intractable, as unwilling to compromise, as those who are tired, who want to go home, but can't because they feel put upon and must stay to do battle. Much of the good work accomplished in gaining opposition co-operation to speed the work of parliament may be undone if the government keeps to its course.

I have thought that the Prime Minister and the Liberal party have tried to be sensitive to the views of students. They have watched and listened to the youth of this country, yet on July 18 I noticed a news report which stated:

> The University of Ottawa Students' Union has challenged Prime Minister Trudeau and any one of his cabinet ministers to a public debate on controversial Rule 75, which would limit debate in the House of Commons.
>
> In a letter delivered to the Prime Minister's office Thursday students council president Allan Rock decries the "apathy" of the public over the debate-limiting measure.
>
> Resolution of the debate, if the Prime Minister accepts, would be "resolved that no government has the right to arbitrarily limit debate in our nation's parliament."
>
> The students council has also mounted a country-wide campaign to collect signatures on a petition protesting the proposed rule change.

Petition forms have been sent to all Canadian university campuses and signatures can be mailed to the University of Ottawa Students Council,—

An hon. Member: They are outside right now.

Mr. Forrestall: And these are the students we were accused of bribing to do this.

• (9:50 p.m.)

Mr. Thompson: Mr. Speaker, I should like to give a bit of advice to hon. members on the other side of the chamber. I know they cannot always be in the house to listen to debate, and probably do not have time to read all of Hansard. However, they would be well advised to read Hansard of July 18 and the remarks of the hon. member for Hillsborough (Mr. Macquarrie). The hon. member for Hillsborough is not considered to be a partisan member of parliament; in fact, he is one of the more amiable, easy to get along with members of the house. His contribution to the debate that day was profound. In order to give hon. members an idea of the kind of logic he was using I shall quote two paragraphs from the hon. member's speech. He said:

This debate is more than a discussion of the rules. It is not just a narrow discussion of a law, a regulation or a rule, but of the spirit behind it. This is what we are reflecting upon in this debate. There is more involved than the mere words of rule 75A, 75B and 75C. I think it is the essence of representative government that we are evaluating and appreciating at this time.

How very true! The hon. member went on to say:

What we, the people's representatives, are dealing with today could mark a great watershed between a parliament which, with all its imperfections, was and is a meaningful instrument of democratic action and something that is much less valuable, much less significant and much less expressive of the popular will. As I say, we are dealing today not with the routine, but rather with the essence of parliament.

What is the fundamental difference between a democracy and a dictatorship? It is the position parliament holds in the governmental process of a democratic country that keeps a country free. Democracy has preserved our way of life and made this country strong. The basic fact behind democracy is that parliament is supreme and that the executive arm, the government, must always be subservient to parliament. That is a fundamental concept of democracy. It is what Magna Carta was all about. I ask the Secretary of State (Mr. Pelletier) to take note of this.

An hon. Member: He does not understand.

Mr. Thompson: In a dictatorship the government superimposes itself on parliament and makes parliament subservient to it. This is the danger we face at the present time.

I was interested the other day to read a community, weekly newspaper published in the capital area. An article in the newspaper was written by the member of parliament who is chairman of the Special Committee on Procedure and Organization. The article reads in part as follows:

Basic Problem.

"Too little time and too much talk" are the basic problems of parliament. The scandal of parliament today is that it has not been able to tackle all the important problems it should.

So said the chairman of the Special Committee on Procedure and Organization.

An hon. Member: He is right.

Mr. Thompson: That is not true, because every piece of legislation the government wanted to pass has been passed. The Prime Minister himself has admitted this.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I apologize to the hon. member for Red Deer (Mr. Thompson) for interrupting him, but I wanted to invite a little more silence on the part of hon. members. However, when I rose, silence reigned. Therefore, I apologize to the hon. member for interrupting and I shall give him an extra minute after ten o'clock.

Mr. Thompson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The very roots of the word "parliament" is that we, as representatives of the people, have a basic responsibility to express what we believe to be the thinking of our constituents and to give leadership through our comments here to individual, component constituencies as far as the nation is concerned. Anyone who talks the way the hon. member for Grenville-Carleton (Mr. Blair) did in his article does not understand the basic purpose and value of this institution.

I am discouraged tonight because I am convinced that the action the government has taken makes this one of the dark days of our nation.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Thompson: I plead with backbenchers on the other side of the house who laugh—

Mr. Forrestall: With their six months' experience!

Mr. Thompson: —to reconsider their position in this respect. They would be well advised to go a little slow in their frivolous approach to this problem, because their party will not always be in government. One day they will be on this side of the house but perhaps even before that they will understand what we are talking about.

Mr. Basford: Even then we will be a more effective opposition than your party.

Mr. Thompson: I regard this debate as fundamental. It has been a privilege to take part in it. I trust that the conscience of members of parliament will begin to work as we approach the final vote which has been forced upon us by the closure action of today, and that hon. members will be very careful to make sure their convictions guide their actions when they vote. Mr. Speaker, may I call it ten o'clock.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

A motion to adjourn the house under Standing Order 40 deemed to have been moved.

COMBINES—DRUGS—PRICE FIXING BY B.C. PHARMACISTS

Mrs. Grace MacInnis (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, on June 18 I asked the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Basford) whether he could say when a report was expected from the Combines Investigation branch on a matter recently referred to it by the Minister of Welfare of the Province of British Columbia, namely, the legality of the $1 fee being charged welfare patients for their drug prescriptions by the British Columbia Pharmacists Society.

You suggested, Mr. Speaker, that the question might be placed on the order paper and discussed at the time of adjournment. That was over a month ago and this is my first opportunity to raise the question again. Tonight I ask whether the minister has received a report from the combines branch on the matter and, if so, what does the report say as to the legality of the $1 fee being charged welfare patients by the pharmacists society for prescriptions?

It is important and urgent to get this matter cleared up. There appears to be a cold war between the government of British Columbia and the pharmacists society, with the welfare patients in the role of helpless victims. On its side, the pharmacists society claims that the profession has the right to fix the price of its services and that the British Columbia government is not paying enough to meet those charges in respect of patients on welfare.

• (10:00 p.m.)

The society put its case succinctly in an advertisement appearing in the press in early June. The notice, under the caption "Notice to Welfare Recipients", reads:

> On April 15th, B.C. pharmacists reluctantly began charging $1 fee to partially offset their average $1.14 loss on each welfare prescription dispensed.
>
> Since that time, the B.C. government's social welfare department has done nothing toward a mutually acceptable contract agreement with pharmacists which would cause the removal of this surcharge.
>
> Welfare minister Campbell's referral of this matter to the Combines Investigation Branch has only "side stepped" the issue with no result as yet.
>
> The government has refused to meet with the pharmacists to negotiate an agreement to replace the outdated 1954 payment schedule.
>
> Pharmacists must continue unfortunately to charge the $1 fee until such time as the government will assume its proper responsibilities and reach an agreement with the pharmacists so that welfare recipients may again conveniently receive necessary medication from the pharmacy of their choice without charge.
>
> The British Columbia Professional Pharmacists Society.

Evidently this method of trying to get the government of British Columbia to the bargaining table failed to work. On June 26 we find a leading pharmacist quoted in the Vancouver Sun as follows:

> Pressure which B.C. pharmacists hoped to bring on the provincial government by charging $1 on prescriptions for social welfare recipients has failed to materialise.
>
> At the annual meeting of Cunningham Drug Stores Wednesday, Ralph Cunningham, chairman of the board, said that when the government had refused to do anything toward meeting the increased costs of the prescriptions, the costs had been passed on to the consumer.
>
> "We had hoped that this would result in an outcry and would force the government to do something" Cunningham said. "But people have been paying the $1 charge quite happily and there has been little discontent. What's more, there has been at least a 20 per cent drop in usage".
>
> Cunningham said the government has escaped both ways—there has been no pressure and there is less expense.

The wording of this statement is quite significant. In simple English it means that the situation will now develop into a permanent $1 charge on welfare recipients. May I point out also that the 20 per cent drop in usage simply means in plain English that patients cannot afford now to pay that $1 charge so that the use of the drugs they need is dropping.

On its side, the provincial government appears to be quite happy to sit back and do nothing except advertise to social assistance people that the drugs listed in the drug benefit list, that is drugs available to welfare recipients at commercial drug stores, are also available at the provincial pharmacy without charge to such patients. That this does not solve the whole problem is evident. There is only one such provincial pharmacy to serve the whole province, and it is in East Vancouver. To visit it, many Vancouver residents would have to spend several hours going and coming and use two bus fares. These are simple drawbacks unless one is elderly, sick and poor, which so many of these people are. People outside Vancouver must rely on the mails. In many cases they would possibly be dead of old age before the medicine arrived, so they have to give in and pay the $1 fee to get their prescriptions filled locally.

In this age of moon landings it just is not good enough for the pharmacists' society or the provincial government or the federal Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, which is supposed to protect consumers, to wash their hands and say: Well, the welfare recipients are now paying the shot, or going without, so why should we norry? Action is needed now. Again I ask the minister: Has he now received a report on this matter from the combines branch, and if so, has the pharmacists' society the legal right to fix this $1 charge on the prescriptions paid by welfare recipients throughout British Columbia?

Mr. Stanley Haidasz (Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): I recall that the hon. member, during the adjournment debate on April 28, raised the same question of the $1 surcharge by the members of the B.C. Professional Pharmacists Society to welfare recipients for prescription drugs. At that time I assured the hon. member that I shared her concern with respect to the high cost of drugs and also proper medical care for people who need it most. I went on to remind the house of the government's five point program designed to reduce the cost of drugs to Canadians, an important feature of which was Bill C-102 which received Royal Assent on June 27.

With respect to the $1 surcharge, I also confirmed on April 28 that the minister received a letter from the Honourable Dan Campbell, Minister of Social Welfare in British Columbia, asking for a combines investigation. I also stated that the matter had been referred to the combines branch. I explained that the director then had the matter under review to ascertain whether there was reason to believe the Combines Investigation Act had been violated.

As the house is aware, it is not the practice to disclose whether formal inquiry under the act into a particular firm or industry has been undertaken. However, since that time it has become public knowledge, through sources outside our department, that a senior officer of the director's staff attended at the department of social welfare in Victoria and Vancouver early in May. In accordance with the usual practice, however, no information is given about inquiries in progress, unless and until a report is published or some other public proceeding has been taken pursuant to the act. It can be safely stated now, Mr. Speaker, that this matter is properly in hand in accordance with the provisions of the statute.

[Translation]

AGRICULTURE—EGGS—GOVERNMENT ACTION TO PROTECT CANADIAN PRODUCER FROM IMPORTS

Mr. Adrien Lambert (Bellechasse): Mr. Speaker, on July 7th last, I put a question to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce (Mr. Pepin) concerning a specific problem which Canadian egg producers are now facing.

That industry has become most important and provides employment to a large number of people. It is now going through an increasingly difficult period. The cost of production is going up while the cost of eggs has gone down considerably since January 1st, 1969.

According to the official figures that have been published, grade A large eggs retailed at 67.3 cents in January 1969; today their retail price is 55.7 cents. The price has gone down constantly since the beginning of the year.

Eggs are being imported in increasing quantities. For instance, almost a million dozen eggs were imported from the United States during the weeks of May 11 and May 18 alone. In the first few months in 1969, or rather during the month of December 1968, 268,400 dozens were imported. During the month of April, 1,222,609 dozens were imported. In fact, during the first four months of 1969, 2,744,139 dozen eggs were imported.

On the other hand, we exported 140,204 dozens, which leaves a deficit of 2,603,908 dozens. The weighted average price obtained by the Canadian producer, which was 44 cents per dozen at the beginning of January 1969 has kept decreasing steadily and according to the federal statistics, it was less than 34 cents in May. The real situation is still more serious than is indicated by statistics.

Mr. Speaker, several producers have built quite modern henroosts with adequate equipment. They have invested rather large amounts and yet they see, month after month, their profits decreasing and the producer's profit margin is dwindling constantly.

I have here a comparative table on grade A eggs. In 1949, for instance, marketing costs amounted to 18.5 per cent and the producer's share to 81.5 per cent, while in 1966, marketing costs reached 30 per cent, and the producer's share was 70 per cent. It is estimated that in 1969, the situation is even worse.

A study was made to determine as exactly as possible the production cost of eggs on the farm, and this study—Cornwell—has shown that the average cost of one dozen eggs for the farmer was 35.7 cents.

So, Mr. Speaker, it may be inferred from the study I just mentioned, that the hourly salary of the main producer has been established at 67 cents for an adult, and at 57 cents for the others.

• (10:10 p.m.)

During our visit in the Maritime provinces, various briefs submitted to the committee on agriculture deal with this disastrous situation. I think it is our duty to say that in the circumstances, but for reasons I am unaware of, the committee was unable to present a report to the house.

The producers' grievances are very serious, and they are right to complain because in the province of Quebec, for example, egg producers set up cooperatives to market their product. But regardless of the efforts of the directors, Mr. Speaker, successful production planning is impossible for them if the government does not protect them from massive imports.

I explained a minute ago the nature of those imports. The profits of certain categories of businesses increase continually, while the profits in agriculture decrease steadily, whether in the field of farming, poultry farming, truck gardening or dairy production.

[Mr. Lambert (Bellechasse).]

For instance, I have here a statement published on May 12, 1969, to substantiate that there are increases in profits in areas other than agriculture.

Gulf Canada: 7 per cent increase in net profits in 1968.

For example, insofar as Bell Canada is concerned:

Operating profits have increased by 10 per cent at Bell Canada.

Mr. Speaker, if operating profits could increase at the same rate in the field of agriculture, I think that Canada would only feel better and we would be able to see that unemployment is less acute, because agriculture creates employment in related industries, for the benefit of the people.

I should like to ask the government, on behalf of those producers who rightly urge the government to take whatever steps are necessary to exert a more effective control over egg imports into Canada, to protect those businesses which really deserve its full attention, so that we may preserve a most essential industry.

The federal government has exclusive jurisdiction on imports. In his letter dated June 25, the Quebec Minister of Agriculture and Colonization informed the president of the C.F.U. that he had spoken to the federal Minister of Agriculture about the problem of egg imports into Canada during the last federal provincial conference of the Agriculture ministers held in Ottawa. The provincial Minister of Agriculture was answering the telegram of June 20 from the C.F.U., which was asking for the provincial government to make representations to the federal government, and stating he had discussed this problem with other provincial ministers.

As we said, Mr. Speaker—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order. The Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Agriculture.

Mr. Florian Côté (Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, in answer to the question of the hon. member for Bellechasse, may I tell him that I also am deeply concerned with the problem of egg production and imports in Canada.

When the question was brought up, I got together with a few members of the committee on agriculture in order to look into the matter more fully. It must be pointed out that imports are not the only reason why the prices of eggs fluctuate. As a matter of fact, every year similar fluctuations occur depending on the time when the chickens that will become laying-hens get to the farmers.

This year, imports were equal to only 1 per cent of Canada's total egg production. On the other hand, 65 per cent of that 1 per cent was used for dehydration, for the freezing of eggs employed in food by-products which, if they were not manufactured here in Canada, would have to be imported.

For the information of the hon. member for Bellechasse, I should say that imports are slowly tapering off. In fact, during the month of June imports were as follows: first week, 9800 crates; second week: 4600 crates; third week, 3750 crates; last week, 1500 crates only. Moreover, in July, not a single dozen eggs was imported into Canada.

The department does not foresee other imports at the present time.

Besides, when prices climb a little too high, the manufacturers themselves buy in foreign countries. Production, in the province of Quebec, represents only from 65 to 70 per cent of consumption. Therefore if production is not large enough to meet the needs of consumption, we have to go elsewhere.

Since the farmers organization has now divided the province of Quebec in 16 areas, that indicates a tendency towards planning on the part of farmers—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order, please. The hon. member for Renfrew North.

[English]

SPORTS—TROTTING RACES—REFUSAL TO LICENCE LADY DRIVERS

Mr. Leonard Hopkins (Renfrew North): Mr. Speaker, this evening I am pleased to continue expanding the question which I asked on July 10 concerning the Canadian Trotting Association and the particular regulation which they have laid down in their by-laws.

The Canadian Trotting Association holds a federal charter and they report to the federal Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Olson). I wish to repeat the question I asked at that time. It is as follows:

Would he ask the minister to investigate whether or not Rule 17, section 1, of the Canadian Trotting Association rules and regulations, 1969, is contrary to the Bill of Rights, in that it declares the association's refusal to licence lady drivers for extended meets, who have not previously held such a licence—

I had a particular person in mind, Mr. Speaker. She is Miss Sandra Clouthier of R. R. 6, Pembroke, in my constituency. This young lady, who is 18 years of age, is reported to be able to handle horses as well as any man. She comes from a large family. Her father owns between 90 and 100 race horses and she participates in the training of many of those horses.

As hon. members know, many of our young people are becoming more and more interested in all kinds of sports in this country. I think it is rather obnoxious that a by-law should be laid down to prevent them from participating in racing. Nevertheless, Miss Sandra Clouthier has been refused the privilege of racing on race tracks in Canada.

I wish to read Rule 17, section 1 found on page 69 of the by-laws of the Canadian Trotting Association. The preamble reads as follows:

No driver's licence valid for extended meetings will be granted to women drivers who have not held previously such a licence valid for extended meetings.

• (10:20 p.m.)

There is no reference to fall fairs because fall fairs are not considered to be extended meetings. The fact remains that previously lady drivers were allowed to race in Canada, but recently it was decided that those ladies who held licences can renew their licences while those who have come into the field lately cannot. I feel this is a great disadvantage to young people in Canada such as Miss Clouthier. I should like to have the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Olson) make a deep survey into this situation to find out exactly on what legal basis, and on the basis of the Bill of Rights, an association can bring in such a discriminatory bylaw.

Another item connected with this question deals with the one half per cent tax placed on parimutuel betting at our race tracks which now has been raised to one per cent. I understand that originally this tax was supposed to go to the Standard Bred Breeders Associations throughout this country to help the various breeders improve their stock. I also understand that in New York State the tax is two per cent on parimutuel betting and that it goes to the racing stables by way of subsidy to assist the owners to improve their racing stock.

The people from New York state can bring their horses over here to Ontario tracks or to Montreal tracks. They can race here and take home Canadian purses, but I am told that Canadians must have special permission before they can take their horses into New York state to race. Of course, the additional assistance United States owners receive from the government of New York state for the purpose of improving their stock means that we stand small chance of competing with them favourably at the race tracks in that state.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I would ask the Minister of Agriculture to look upon this one per cent tax that is being charged on parimutuel betting in Canada as a subsidy to be allotted to an all-Canadian standard Bred Breeders Association to enable the owners in our Canadian racing stables to improve their stock. It is interesting to note that there are as many horses or stables, I am not sure which, at the moment in New York state alone as there are in the entire Dominion of Canada.

I have spoken to many standard bred breeders who are interested in this problem. They have a great deal invested in what is becoming a very popular Canadian sport. These people are interested in having an all-Canadian standard bred breeders association instead of having a Standard Bred Breeders Association along provincial lines. It is only in this way that they can become a large enough organization to compete with the stables in the United States.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Béchard): Order, please. The parliamentary secretary to the Minister of Agriculture.

[Translation]

Mr. Florian Côté (Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, when the hon. member for Renfrew North (Mr. Hopkins) and the hon. member for Pontiac (Mr. Lefebvre) called the attention of the minister to some discrimination that appeared to exist within the Canadian Trotting Association—we must not forget that this is a strictly private and independent association—the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Olson) got in touch with the officials of that association in order to know if discrimination really existed. The minister asked that measures be taken in order to stop this as soon as possible and that an elaborate inquiry be made.

I think that the minister will receive before long an answer to his request. He will then be pleased, as well as I, to communicate to the hon. member for Renfrew North any decision that might be reached.

Motion agreed to and the house adjourned at 10.27 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Wednesday, July 23, 1969

The house met at 2 p.m.

[Translation]

PRIVILEGE

MR. FORTIN—PROTEST AGAINST STATEMENT BY PRIME MINISTER ON C.B.C. FRENCH NETWORK

Mr. André Fortin (Lotbinière): Pursuant to Standing Order 17 (2), I have given notice to the Chair of a question of privilege I intended to raise at the beginning of the sitting, following the extremely serious statements made by the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) last night on the C.B.C.'s French radio and television network, that is that members of the House of Commons are rather old fogies.

He stated moreover that parliament is an antiquated institution and on the whole, his statement suggested that he feels nothing good is done by parliament and that it is only a waste of time for which the members of the opposition are responsible.

To make it worse, the injustice results from the fact that the C.B.C.'s French network was not fair enough to ask for an account from a member of the opposition to counteract the Prime Minister's gratuitous and extremely serious statements.

In my opinion it is sheer dishonesty, a breach of the members' privileges and of the right to information of the Canadian people.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, that is the essence of my question of privilege.

In view of the implications of the application of closure in accordance with standing order 33, considering that closure is seldom resorted to and that most often its application is odious, considering that those who resort to it must, from a parliamentary standpoint, be held responsible for the consequences, and considering that the people of Canada have a right to get accurate information, I say, Mr. Speaker, that the whole matter affects the right of the people of Canada to such accurate and fair information.

Indeed, Canadians must be informed of the fact that the opposition members are doing an honest job, not as dotards or simpletons but as responsible men. I suggest that the privileges of the people are being dangerously affected. It is the responsibility of every member of Her Majesty's loyal opposition to cast some light on this subject in order to bring the Right Hon. Prime Minister to express his opinions more specifically in respect of the disparagement campaign he has undertaken against the supreme, democratic institution which is parliament.

Mr. Speaker, as long as the rights and privileges of the representatives of Canadians in the House of Commons are not properly respected by the Right Hon. Prime Minister, we will have to conclude that this is a pure and simple belittling of parliament, made deliberately and with full awareness by the government, and I suggest this situation should not be tolerated by any parliamentarian worthy of the name.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Lotbinière will appreciate that, even if the question of privilege were well taken—which I doubt—I must take into account the fact that no motion has been introduced in the house. The question is not debatable and I cannot rule in the circumstances on whether or not the question of privilege was in order.

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege.

I willingly abide by your ruling which I think is sensible. But my purpose was to call the attention of the house to some unfortunate statements.

I should like however to point out to you, Mr. Speaker, with all due respect, that every time a member of the Ralliement Créditiste rises to speak, the members on the other side, and particularly those immediately opposite, keep making a lot of noise, thus proving the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) is right—

Mr. Speaker: Order. If this is any comfort to the hon. member, I can assure him that I am actually listening to him rather than to the interruption he just mentioned.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

Mr. Speaker: Presenting Reports from standing and special committees. The hon. member for Calgary North.

Mr. Woolliams: Have you called motions yet, sir?

Mr. Speaker: No. We are on the first item. The hon. member indicated he wished to rise and I thought he might want to rise on a question of privilege at this time.

Mr. Woolliams: No.

Mr. Speaker: We will get there some time perhaps, some day. Presenting reports from standing and special committees. Motions.

PROCEDURE AND ORGANIZATION

MOTION TO HEAR MEMBER FOR CALGARY NORTH

Mr. Woolliams: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): Mr. Speaker—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

• (2:10 p.m.)

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Hon. members will of course see the difficulty with which the Chair is faced and which, I might say, the Chair fully expected. The President of the Privy Council yesterday gave notice of his intention to move a motion today. The hon. member for Calgary North also rises for the purpose of moving a motion.

The Chair sees two members wanting to rise at the same time. If I recognize one, I think it would be at the discretion of hon. members to make the usual motion that another hon. member be heard. In view of the fact I have received notice of a motion to be moved by the President of the Privy Council, I do not see how I could in conscience not recognize him, at the same time recognizing the right of hon. members to make a motion that another hon. member be heard rather than the President of the Privy Council.

I find it difficult to see how I can rule otherwise. It may be that hon. members might want to state their views. At this point I would recognize the President of the Privy Council.

[Mr. Speaker.]

Mr. Baldwin: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): Mr. Speaker, I gave notice yesterday—

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Baldwin: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker—

Some hon. Members: Order, order.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Three hon. members have risen on points of order. I recognize the hon. member for Peace River.

Mr. Baldwin: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, I move that the hon. member for Calgary North be now heard.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Before I put this motion, I understand that the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre also has a point of order. I assume that the President of the Privy Council is also rising on a point of order.

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): My point of order, Mr. Speaker, is with reference to Your Honour's statement that Your Honour had received notice yesterday from the President of the Privy Council and therefore felt obligated to give him precedence over the hon. member for Calgary North.

An hon. Member: It's too late now!

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Someone said, "It's too late now". There is lots of time.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, my point of order is this. If the President of the Privy Council is seeking to move on motions a motion for which notice was not required, then that notice has no effect and the two members come into the house at this point equally. That was why I had intended, if necessary, to move the same motion that was moved by the hon. member for Peace River. If, on the other hand, the minister is trying to move the motion of which he gave oral notice at five o'clock yesterday, I suggest it is out of order at this point and cannot be moved until immediately before the particular order has been called.

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I wonder whether the Chair might be allowed to hear the hon. member for Lotbinière.

[Translation]

Mr. André Fortin (Lotbinière): Mr. Speaker, I would like to deal with the point of order.

If, according to the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles), the motion of the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald) has been presented without previous notice, then as the hon. member said, both of them are on the same footing and are equally entitled to preference.

But, Mr. Speaker, on this side of the house, we have noticed that the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) was the first to ask to be recognized. Therefore—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Whether I was right or not, the ruling has been made at any rate. Of course, it is the responsibility of the Chair to recognize an hon. member rather than another, and such a decision is never that easy, because in theory, in practice and according to our standing orders, all are equal. The Chair has exercised its discretion in recognizing the President of the Privy Council.

As I said a few moments ago, any hon. member has the right to suggest that one of his colleagues be heard, and that is exactly the purpose of the motion of the hon. member for Peace River (Mr. Baldwin) which has been put to the house.

[English]

The motion is before the house. Mr. Baldwin, seconded by Mr. MacLean, moves that the hon. member for Calgary North be now heard. Is it the pleasure of the house to adopt the motion?

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): Mr. Speaker—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Baldwin: It is not debatable. The question has been put.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I apologize to the President of the Privy Council. I cut him off a moment ago because the hon. member for Lotbinière wanted to rise on the point of order or perhaps to raise a new one. It was my intention to allow the President of the Privy Council to speak on that point of order. If he thinks it is necessary to do so I would hear him.

Division

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): Yes, Mr. Speaker. I should like to make the point that the hon. member for Peace River could not make the motion he wanted to make on a point of order. In view of the fact that I have been recognized I wonder whether I could now be heard.

Mr. Speaker: I have given this point much thought. It is perhaps debatable when and at what point that kind of a motion can be made. I would agree with the minister that it cannot be made on a point of order, but the rule is that such a motion can be made at any time. The hon. member has made a motion and it would be very difficult, I think, to say that "any time" did not include the time at which the motion was made by the hon. member for Peace River. The minister will recognize that whether the motion is made now or later I assumed all along that perhaps it would be made at one point or another. It has been made and I am now putting the motion to the house. Mr. Baldwin, seconded by Mr. MacLean, moves that the hon. member for Calgary North be now heard. Is it the pleasure of the house to adopt the said motion?

Some hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those against please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five members having risen:

Mr. Speaker: Call in the members.

The house divided on the motion (Mr. Baldwin) which was negatived on the following division:

YEAS

Messrs:

Aiken
Alexander
Alkenbrack
Asselin
Baldwin
Barnett
Beaudoin
Bell
Bigg
Brewin
Broadbent
Burton
Cadieu (Meadow Lake)
Caouette
Coates
Code
Comeau
Crouse
Danforth
Dinsdale
Dionne
Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands)

Division

Downey
Fairweather
Flemming
Forrestall
Fortin
Gilbert
Godin
Grills
Gundlock
Harding
Harkness
Hees
Howard (Skeena)
Howe
Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre)
Korchinski
Lambert (Bellechasse)
Laprise
Lewis
MacEwan
MacInnis
MacInnis (Mrs.)
MacLean
McCleave
McCutcheon
McGrath
McKinley
Mather
Matte
Mazankowski
Monteith
Moore
Moores
Muir (Cape Breton-The Sydneys)
Nesbitt
Noble
Nowlan
Nystrom
Paproski
Peddle
Peters
Ricard
Ritchie
Rodrigue
Rynard
Saltsman
Schumacher
Scott
Simpson
Stanfield
Stewart (Marquette)
Tétrault
Thomas (Moncton)
Thompson
Winch
Woolliams
Yewchuk—79.

NAYS

Messrs:

Allmand
Anderson
Andras
Barrett
Basford
Béchard
Beer
Benson
Blair
Blouin
Borrie
Breau
Brown
Buchanan
Cadieux (Labelle)
Cafik
Clermont
Cobbe
Corbin
Côté (Richelieu)
Côté (Longueuil)
Cullen
Cyr
Danson
Davis
Deachman
Deakon
De Bané
Douglas (Assiniboia)
Drury
Dubé
Éthier
Forest
Forget
Foster
Francis
Gendron
Gibson
Givens
Goode
Goyer
Gray
Groos
Guay (St. Boniface)
Guay (Lévis)
Guilbault
Haidasz
Hogarth
Honey
Hopkins
Howard (Okanagan Boundary)
Hymmen
Isabelle
Jamieson
Jerome
Kaplan
Kierans
Lachance
Laflamme
Laing
Lang
Langlois
Laniel
Leblanc (Laurier)
Lefebvre
Legault
Lessard (LaSalle)
Lind
Loiselle
Macdonald (Rosedale)
MacEachen
MacGuigan
Mackasey
McBride
McIlraith
McNulty
Mahoney
Major
Marceau
Marchand (Langelier)
Marchand (Kamloops-Cariboo)
Munro
Murphy
Noël
O'Connell
Orange
Osler
Otto
Ouellet
Pelletier
Penner
Pepin
Perrault
Pilon
Portelance
Pringle
Prud'homme
Reid
Richardson
Roberts
Rochon
Roy (Laval)
Serré
Sharp
Smith (Northumberland-Miramichi)
Smith (Saint-Jean)
Stafford
Stanbury
Stewart (Cochrane)
Stewart (Okanagan-Kootenay)
St. Pierre
Sullivan
Thomas (Maisonneuve)
Tolmie
Trudeau
Trudel
Turner (London East)
Turner (Ottawa-Carleton)
Wahn
Walker
Watson
Weatherhead
Whelan
Whiting
Yanakis—125.

[Mr. Speaker.]

• (3:00 p.m.)

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion lost.

FURTHER NOTICE OF IMPOSITION OF CLOSURE ON DEBATE

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, in the event that the motion of which I gave notice yesterday under the provisions of Standing Order 33 is not disposed of in this sitting, I hereby give notice that at the next sitting of the house, immediately before the order of the day is called for resuming the debate on the motion, "That the third report of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization be concurred in", and on any amendment or amendment in amendment proposed thereto, I will move that the said debate shall not be further adjourned.

I hope it will not be necessary to prolong the proceedings that long, but I give this notice out of an abundance of caution.

An hon. Member: You're learning.

MOTION UNDER STANDING ORDER 42 (1) TO ADJOURN AT 4 P.M.

Mr. Eldon M. Woolliams (Calgary North): Mr. Speaker, I may be recording some history. I think this is the first time in parliament an hon. member was voted not to be heard, and with Your Honour's graciousness I would recognize that.

I rise for the purpose of making a motion under Standing Order 42(1). Your Honour dealt with such a motion on Thursday, July 17 last. This motion will be similar in nature, although different in kind. At that time the motion was moved by the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles), and its purpose was set out by the hon. member as recorded at page 11316 of Hansard. The motion, accepted by the Chair on that occasion for debate, read as follows:

That the house adjourn this day at four o'clock p.m.

That was the motion moved at that time. I will be moving a motion similar in kind. The precedents and reason for moving my motion were set out very clearly by the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre on that occasion. I will not take the time of the house to requote those precedents.

However I wish to quote again Standing Order 42(1) so there will be no misunderstanding as to the motion I am about to move, and I will set out the reasons why this motion should be entertained and put to the house to be debated. I quote:

Forty-eight hours' notice shall be given of a motion for leave to present a bill, resolution or address, for the appointment of any committee, or for placing a question on the Order Paper; but this rule shall not apply to bills after their introduction, or to private bills, or to the times of meeting or adjournment of the House.

Those are the important words, "adjournment of the house". I continue:

Such notice shall be laid on the Table before six o'clock p.m. or before five o'clock p.m. on a Friday, and be printed in the Votes and Proceedings of that day.

I would now like to quote from Beauchesne's fourth edition, Parliamentary Rules and Forms, page 40, citation 51:

No notice is required for a motion relating to "the times of meeting or adjournment of the House." (S.O. 45). The word "times" is translated by "heures" in the French version of S.O. 41. It seems therefore that if a motion does not relate to the hour but to the day on which the House is to sit, a notice must be given. See decision given by Speaker Rhodes on May 21st, 1920.

• (3:10 p.m.)

When the House intends to sit later than 6 o'clock on Wednesday or Friday, or later than 10 o'clock on other days, a motion may be made during the sitting, and without notice having been previously given, "that the House do not adjourn at 6 (or 10) o'clock today." The reason why no notice is required is that Standing Order 41 which provides—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Perhaps the hon. member will allow me to interrupt him. He is discussing the point of order prior to the motion which he proposes to make is before the house. I would think it is difficult for a member to discuss whether or not a motion is in order when the Chair does not even know what the motion is going to be. I suggest to the hon. member he should put his motion and if opposition is taken to it from a procedural standpoint then he can argue that point; but he does not even know whether or not objection will be raised to it. It may be that hon. members with enthusiasm will accept his motion. I think he should put his motion and then, if necessary, we will consider the arguments he is now expressing for the guidance of the Chair.

Mr. Woolliams: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Maybe my anticipation was greater than it should have been.

I move:

That the house adjourn this day at 4 o'clock p.m.

I now submit copies of the motion in English and in French.

Mr. Speaker: The motion proposed by the hon. member is that this house adjourn at four o'clock. As hon. members know, when a similar motion was proposed some days ago by the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) I indicated that I had some reservations about it. I do not feel that I am bound by the fact that it was put at that time. The matter is one of interest to all hon. members.

If there is no objection to the motion then the Chair could put it with the same reservations as expressed at the previous sitting. However, I see that the hon. President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald) seems to want to rise on a point of order. Perhaps he might be allowed to do so and then we could consider the point of order of the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles).

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): Mr. Speaker, I should like to state my objection. I do not know whether you want me to argue the point of order or whether you want to hear the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) first.

Mr. Speaker: I am not sure whether the President of the Privy Council wants to argue in favour or against the motion. Perhaps he might be allowed to state his point of order and if it is in opposition to the motion proposed by the hon. member for Calgary North we might hear arguments on the point of order thereafter.

Mr. Baldwin: Maybe he wants to amend it to 3.30.

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): Mr. Speaker, I should like to make it perfectly clear that I do rise to object to the motion made by the hon. member on the procedural ground that generally speaking motions referring to business of the house are the responsibility of the leader of the house.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

An hon. Member: You are the master.

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): I wonder if perhaps I might be heard, Mr. Speaker. There was a reference in Beauchesne's which was cited by the hon. member, but I would draw your attention, Mr. Speaker, to the fact that rulings of a former parliament do not necessarily bind this parliament. There is also citation 88(2) of Beauchesne's which I should like to read in this regard. It is very brief:

All motions referring to the business of the House should be introduced by the Leader of the House.

There is a reference there to the Canadian House of Commons Journals, Volume 45, page 476. I therefore take the position that the particular motion of the hon. gentleman is in respect of the business of the house, and therefore is related to the responsibilities of the leader of the house, and that as such it should be the prerogative of this side of the house rather than of that side of the house to move it, and for that reason 48 hours' notice should be given of this particular motion.

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, first of all may I make it clear that I support the admissibility of this motion. It is of course a motion similar to the one I made last Thursday, and of course if it is allowed I will support its substance as well.

The first point made just now by the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald) is, I suppose, the kind of point to which we should become accustomed in this parliament. He said it is the business of the government house leader to move all motions having to do with the business of the house. May I point out to him that there is no such standing order; there is no such ruling. I have not had a chance to look up the citation in Beauchesne to which he just referred, but if it is in Commons Journals Volume 45 that would take it back to about 1912 or 1913, which would mean that it is a pretty old citation, bearing in mind also the difficulties we sometimes have with respect to citations in Beauchesne.

I should also point out that there have been a number of motions having to do with times of sitting and business of the house which have been made from the opposition side of the house. In this connection I would draw the attention of the house to the fact that I had the privilege of moving such a motion on December 20, 1951. I shall refer to that in another connection a little later on.

I should also like to draw to the attention of the house that prior to that—I do not have the reference on my desk—there was a report of a special committee on procedure which recommended certain changes in the hours of sitting. This was back in the late 1940's. There was some delay on the part of the government in moving that report. There was a general desire in the House of Commons to try out these new hours which the special committee on procedure had proposed. Therefore back in the late 1940's I moved, under routine proceedings, that the house experiment with these new evening hours—I think they were from 7.30 to 10.30—for the balance of that session. As a private member on the opposition side of the house I moved it under routine proceedings. It was allowed, carried, and came into effect for the balance of that session.

I am sure other examples could be given, perhaps not of many motions from the opposition side of the house being carried but of many motions being moved from this side of the house having to do with the business of the house. Although it is not quite the same thing, earlier this session there was a motion moved by the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield) referring a subject matter to the Standing Committee on External Affairs and National Defence. Therefore I submit someone other than the government house leader, and it could be a member of the opposition, has the right to move a motion of this kind. There is no prohibition in the rules against it and there are precedents in its favour.

The second thing I have to say is that although I concede your right, Mr. Speaker, not to be bound by a ruling you made last Thursday when no point of opposition was raised, I do find it strange that the government house leader should ask Your Honour to rule differently today from the way you ruled last Thursday. I suppose this type of suggestion is something we must get used to from these people who feel they are masters of the house.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Speaker: The President of the Privy Council wishes to rise on a question of privilege.

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): Mr. Speaker, the hon. member should not misrepresent my position. The motion the other day was moved by him but with the consent of this side of the house. I hope he would not attempt to misrepresent our actions.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, let the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald) not try to misrepresent what happened in parliament and is on the record. The government supported the motion we made, and that is why it was carried, but it was not moved by the consent of the President of the Privy Council.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

• (3:20 p.m.)

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): It was moved on the authority of rule 42(1), and thank heavens we are not yet in a position that we can do only those things which are consented to by the President of the Privy Council.

I submit that it is at least a surprise to me and others that the President of The Privy Council would ask the Speaker of this house to make a ruling, on this difficult day, which differs from the ruling he made last Thursday. The statement he made on that occasion would indicate that the government did not mind the motion made at that time whereas they are actually opposed to it today. This casts a doubt on their position at this time.

I submit that the right to make a motion of this kind has been clearly established, and perhaps the best ruling on it in recent years, if you will consider 1951 as relatively recent, is the ruling given on December 20 of that year by Hon. Ross Macdonald, who was then our Speaker and is now the Lieutenant Governor of Ontario. On that occasion I had moved a rather odd motion, I admit, but this is what I moved:

> That this day's sitting of the house continue without the usual intermission at one o'clock p.m. and at 6.15 o'clock p.m., and that the house shall not be adjourned at ten o'clock p.m. this day.

This was a motion which our friends in the opposition did not like on that particular day. They raised points of order against it. The ruling given by Mr. Speaker Macdonald, was not made immediately. In other words, he had his assistants at the table do some research so he could make a ruling which would have some substance. He did make a ruling, as recorded at page 2257 of Hansard for December 20, 1951, and this is what he said:

> Mr. Speaker: On the question of order, may I say that I have listened to what has been said. As has been pointed out, other motions have been made in this house respecting the hours or time of sitting without previous notice having been given.

This is the position taken by the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams). The quotation continues:

> In Beauchesne's second edition in citation 34, I observed the following:
>
> "No notice is required for a motion relating to 'the times of meeting or adjournment of the house', (S.O. 45)".

That is what was said, and this had to do with the motion as to the time of the adjournment of the house. This is as clear as it could be. Mr. Speaker, Ross Macdonald went on to say:

> Standing Order 45 has been referred to by a number of members. The citation goes on to say:
>
> "The word 'times' is translated by 'heures' in the French version of S.O. 45. It seems therefore that if a motion does not relate to the hour but to the day at which the house is to sit or adjourn, a notice must be given."
>
> The motion before the house does not refer to a day. It relates to the hour.

Mr. Speaker Ross Macdonald was referring to my motion of December 20, 1951, but the same comment applies to the motion now before the house from the hon. member for Calgary North. It applies equally to the motion I made last Thursday afternoon. Let me continue the quotation which states:

> Mr. Drew: Mr. Speaker, without interrupting you, may I make a comment on that point which you have raised?
>
> Some hon. Members: No.

I wonder who they were? The quotation continues as follows:

> Mr. Drew: I would point out, Mr. Speaker, that you have touched on the very point that is in issue on this motion. It is quite clear that if this motion goes through the house will not adjourn. For that reason I submit, on the very point you made, Mr. Speaker, this motion is not tenable under the reference which has been given.
>
> Mr. Speaker: If the motion referred to days, I would agree with the leader of the opposition that it would not be in order. May I read the motion.
>
> "That this day's sitting of the house continue without the usual intermission at one o'clock p.m. and at 6.15 o'clock p.m., and that the house shall not be adjourned at ten o'clock p.m. this day."
>
> It distinctly says that this motion refers to this day only. I am satisfied that this motion refers to time and not to days. Citation 34 in Beauchesne's second edition goes on to say:
>
> "See decision given by Speaker Rhodes on May 21, 1920".

Mr. Speaker Ross Macdonald goes on with the quotation in respect of this proposal regarding the proceedings of the house after saying:

I have sent for Hansard of that day and it has just arrived. The reference reads as follows:

"Rt. Hon. Sir Robert Borden (Prime Minister):—

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, my hon. friends are applauding, but he got ticked off that day by the Speaker. He said:

"I beg to move the motion of which I gave notice yesterday:

'That when this house adjourns on Friday, the 21st instant, it do stand adjourned until Tuesday, the 25th instant'.

Mr. Speaker: I must point out, as I did yesterday, that this motion requires two days' notice and only one day's notice has been given. It can therefore only be entertained by unanimous consent.

Sir Robert Borden: I do not know whether it is applicable or not, but my attention has been directed to the language of rule 40 which says that the rule requiring notice shall not apply to the times of meeting or adjournment of the house.

"Mr. Speaker: I think the interpretation which has been given to the section under that rule is that it refers to the hour for meeting because in the French edition 'heure' is used. That being so, as at present advised, I am still of the opinion that two days' notice would be required to be given."

That was the Speaker's judgment in respect of Sir Robert Borden's motion in 1920, and Mr. Speaker Ross Macdonald cited this decision in making a ruling in respect of the kind of a motion that could or could not be made under this rule. Mr. Speaker Ross Macdonald went on to conclude by saying:

I would agree with the decision given by Mr. Speaker Rose, and that if this motion referred to days it would not be in order. But as it refers to time, I would rule that the motion is in order.

That was said by Mr. Speaker Macdonald in a ruling on December 20, 1951, in reference only to the times of sitting on that day. Mr. Speaker Macdonald, having considered a serious point of order raised, and having cited various precedents, said it was in order. He repeated himself two or three times and I do not think there is any harm in my doing so as well in order to make it clear that the reference was to the times of sittings. Because this motion referred only to the hours of sitting it was in order.

That was the basis on which I made the motion last Thursday, which was similar to this one. It dealt with only a question of hours on a particular day. That is what we have before us now, a motion that does not deal with days that parliament is sitting, but only with the hours of sitting, and for this day only. At the moment we are dealing with the motion before us which deals only with the hours of this day, and I submit therefore it is in order under the terms of Standing Order 42(1), which states:

Forty-eight hours' notice shall be given for leave to present a bill, resolution or address, for the appointment of any committee, or for placing a question on the order paper; but this rule shall not apply to bills after their introduction, or to private bills, or to the times of meeting or adjournment of the house.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, it is clear that the requirement to give 48 hours' notice does not apply when a motion relates only to the times of meeting or the times of adjournment. I think I am entitled to separate that and use the singular and say that when it relates only to the time of meeting or the time of adjournment of the house such a motion is in order under rule 42(1).

• (3:30 p.m.)

That is what this motion deals with; therefore, I submit it is in order. I would like to make the point again that this whole question is very narrow, very specific and deals with just one point; and it is a point that is clearly covered. After the motion had been put and accepted by the house last Thursday there was discussion about it. It is the kind of thing one does discuss with various people. I was involved in such discussions. Some friends of mine wondered about the motion and asked what would have happened if the house had wanted to adjourn earlier. That is no problem. The Standing Order for today is for us to adjourn at six o'clock. If we want to adjourn earlier, it can be done. We can adjourn at any time.

Under the motion we are discussing the house is being asked to adjourn at four o'clock. If we wanted to do so, we could adjourn before that. It is a little difficult now because it is 27 minutes to four, but a motion to adjourn before four o'clock would be perfectly in order. That point could be met by extra wording in the motion, but why quibble about words when we have the authority under Standing Order 42(1) that any private member may make a motion having to do with the time of adjournment?

Before resuming my seat I should like to return to one of the points the President of the Privy Council sought to make when he read citation 88(2) of Beauchesne's fourth edition. I pointed out earlier that one should not rely too much upon that citation until one had an opportunity to read what happened in 1912, the 46th year of confederation. But the words of citation 88(2) which the President of the Privy Council read were:

> All motions referring to the business of the house should be introduced by the leader of the house.

The hon. member for Calgary North is not trying to introduce a motion regarding the business of the house. We have tried on occasion to move motions that would mean our proceeding from the order we were on to some other business. That was done during the flag debate and on other occasions. Such motions have been ruled out of order on the basis of this citation which provides that only the government can say what will be dealt with in government time.

The hon. member for Calgary North is not trying to tell the government what should be taken up in government time. He is not moving a motion that has to do with the business of the house. He is not usurping that function of the government house leader. The hon. member is moving a motion that deals only with the question of the time of adjournment, and I submit that is fully provided for under Standing Order 42(1).

Under Standing Order 32 a motion of this kind is debatable. Standing Order 32(1)(p) sets out the last of a long list of motions which are debatable and contains these words:

> Such other motion, made upon routine proceedings, as may be required for the observance of the proprieties of the house, the maintenance of its authority, the appointment or conduct of its officers, the management of its business, the arrangement of its proceedings, the correctness of its records, the fixing of its sitting days or the times of its meeting or adjournment.

I read Standing Order 32(1)(p) not only to make the point that this kind of motion is debatable but to show that provision is made for motions made upon routine proceedings having to do with the fixing of the time of adjournment of the house. All told, Mr. Speaker, it seems to me it would take far more compelling arguments than those advanced by the President of the Privy Council to persuade Your Honour that you should rule differently today from the way you ruled last Thursday.

Last Thursday Your Honour admitted you had doubt about the motion and to-day you have claimed the right not to be bound by your decision. On that occasion the government, to our surprise, agreed to the motion and it passed, but the motion was made not by consent but on the basis of rule 42(1). I submit that the motion made today should be allowed by Your Honour on the basis of Standing Order 42(1) and the ruling given by Mr. Speaker Ross Macdonald on December 20, 1951.

I submit, therefore, that the motion should be allowed and that the house should be given an opportunity to speak to the motion, if it wishes, and to take a decision on it.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Chair is quite willing to hear hon. members, but they will realize that if the motion is not put before four o'clock it becomes a nullity and we cannot proceed further with it. We cannot be discussing at five o'clock or 4.30 a motion that the house adjourn at four o'clock. I am sure hon. members realize this. That is why the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) glanced at the clock during the presentation of his argument. I thought I should bring this point to the attention of hon. members. I feel I would have to exercise my discretion and rule that the motion is a nullity if the question is not put before four o'clock.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): It could be amended.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Woolliams: I shall be brief, Mr. Speaker. Two points were made by the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald). The first was that the motion could be made only by the house leader. The second was that a similar motion moved last July 17 was allowed because the government consented to it. I point out that it was not a case of consent; the government merely consented to the substance of the motion. I shall put on record what took place that day. After the motion was moved Your Honour said:

> Order, please. Is the hon. member rising on a point of order in connection with the proposed motion?
>
> Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): No, Mr. Speaker.
>
> Mr. Speaker: The motion has not yet been put to the house.

I believe I should place this passage on record because it seems to be the latest precedent in this regard. Your Honour continued:

> Although I may have some doubt concerning the motion, in view of the fact that it has not been questioned procedurally I will put it to the house at this time. The motion, moved by Mr.

Knowles, Winnipeg North Centre, and seconded by Mr. Winch, is that this house adjourn this day at four o'clock p.m.

The hon. member for Edmonton West (Mr. Lambert) then said:

Mr. Speaker, I was rising originally to support the admissibility of the motion.

Your Honour then said:

Perhaps the hon. member might now like to speak to the motion itself.

Surely, Mr. Speaker, with those words of July 17 you ruled that it was an admissible motion and it could be moved by any member of the House of Commons, not necessarily by the government house leader. Your Honour ruled that the motion was procedurally correct and was on all fours with our Standing Orders. I submit that in view of that ruling, and the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) having thoroughly dealt with the precedents in this respect, this is a proper motion, it is admissible and should be put.

With regard to the argument that a motion such as this can be put only by the government house leader, I repeat that the motion does not concern the question of business. It is a motion dealing with the time of adjournment of the house. Last night we witnessed an angry parliament. If the house leaders have the opportunity to sit down and negotiate, and observe the dignity and decorum of this place, it will be worth while because Canada is watching parliament and needs parliament. Parliament will determine whether it shall live or die. The motivation behind my motion is to give the house leaders an opportunity to sit around the table and negotiate with the hope of reaching a compromise.

Had I any other motivation or reason behind the motion I would not have stood in my place and moved it. I submit that the motion is procedurally correct and is put forward on a sound basis. It is the kind of motion we can expect to raise this place to the kind of dignity Canadians expect of us, rather than having the guillotine methods which the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) and the President of the Privy Council wish to use.

• (3:40 p.m.)

Mr. Speaker: I suggest to hon. members that discussion on this point should be limited to the point of order, which is on whether the proposed motion is admissible.

[Mr. Woolliams.]

If there are no further comments I should like to express a few brief thoughts in connection with the proposed motion. I should like to state first, despite what has been suggested by the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles), and by the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams), that no ruling whatsoever was made by the Chair when this matter first came up when the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre first proposed his motion. As he knows, this is a very new type of motion; it was new to the extent of having been difficult for the Chair alone, or with the assistance of the Table officials, to accept or refuse the motion, but in view of the fact that no objection had been made to it the motion was put to the house. So I do not feel bound by anything because actually there was no ruling. A question was simply put to the house, and this is my view, one which I hold very strongly.

At the same time I still have the reservations which I had previously. I cannot agree with the argument put forth by the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald) because, as has been pointed out by other hon. members who took part in the debate, the precedent to which the President of the Privy Council referred did not deal precisely with the point but rather with the arrangement of the business of the house, and to that extent would not be covered by Standing Order 42(1). I think that Standing Order 42(1) is beyond the scope of the precedent which he quoted.

At the same time the very interesting precedent, quoted by the hon. members representing the opposition parties who took part in this debate, is also to some extent not quite relevant because that precedent of 1961 basically dealt with the extension of sittings and, as hon. members know, our new Standing Orders, particularly rule 6(5) (a), cover a situation which has been dealt with by the precedent. So I am not convinced either by the precedent against or by the precedent in favour.

If anything will tip the scale in favour of the motion, it is the Standing Order itself. I have great reservations about the Standing Order, whether it really means what it is purported to mean. Hon. members know that they have to refer to the French translation to interpret it the way they want. In my view it is just as legitimate to interpret the French version of our rules as the English, but it produces a new concept that hon. members have to refer to one side of the page of the Standing Order to interpret the rule one way or another. However, I do not quarrel with this approach. There is nothing wrong with it at all, and if we go to the French text of Standing Order 42 (1) it seems clear to me that—

[Translation]

If a motion concerns the sitting times of the house, it can be made without previous notice and, in this sense, the motion of the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) should be accepted by the Chair.

Here again, from a strictly logical point of view, I find it difficult to accept this motion, because under our parliamentary tradition and long established practice in the house, the only motion which is always in order and which is not subject to debate, is the motion demanding that the house do now adjourn. It seems that we are about to accept another kind of motion which proposes not only that the house do now adjourn, but at a fixed hour. The danger of course, is that such an application of the rules of the house may lend itself to abuses, but I am not here to make a decision on that point. I can only come to the conclusion that the only possible interpretation of the provisions of Standing Order 42 (1) is that the motion of the hon. member should be put to the house.

[English]

The hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) seconded by the hon. member for Peace River (Mr. Baldwin) moves that the house adjourn at four o'clock this afternoon.

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I wish to say a few words on the motion, and I have an amendment to it which I should like to move as well. First may I impress as strongly as I can, in spite of the tension and in spite of the feeling in the house at this time, that the reason for asking that this motion be agreed to, the stated desire of the hon. member for Calgary North, and I state it as well, is that at this point we should not close off discussion on the question of our rules and submit it to the kind of confrontation that has been proposed.

Last Thursday when I suggested that the house adjourn so that the house leaders might meet, it looked hopeless. We were in positions that were irreconcilable, but we did make some progress at those meetings. I submit that the fact that we made some progress is now in black and white on the records of this house, in what was said yesterday. It was made clear yesterday by the four of us who had participated in these discussions that we all moved to some extent. We did not move sufficiently to reach agreement, but I submit that there was a sufficient narrowing of the difference among us that it would be worth while to have further meetings of the house leaders to see if we cannot come to some agreement.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I realize how important it is to allow hon. members all possible freedom in the discussion which we are having this afternoon, but at the same time the hon. member knows that there is a very specific motion before the house that the house adjourn at four o'clock. I wonder whether the hon. member would not agree that he should limit his contribution to the motion itself. If the motion is used simply for the purpose of re-opening the whole debate, I think that this would not be correct procedurally. I am sure that the hon. member will limit his remarks to the very narrow confines of the motion now before the house.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Of course I accept your ruling, Mr. Speaker. But I felt that it was my right to state as briefly as I can my reasons for supporting the proposition that the house should adjourn this afternoon. I quite agree that if we get only the two hours that would come from adjourning at four o'clock, or if we get only the smaller amount of time that would come from the amendment which I propose to move, we cannot necessarily do the job of reconciling our differences in that period of time, but it is a gesture. If we do adjourn rather than proceeding with the debate on the closure motion until one o'clock tonight, at least it is a gesture which says to all members of parliament, and to the country, that we are still trying to get somewhere. Talking and discussing is better than ending it at this point on the basis of confrontation. That is my reason for supporting this motion.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): I think this motion is just as valid as was my motion last Thursday, perhaps even more valid. Last Thursday we were at loggerheads. We had not been speaking to each other on this issue for a number of weeks. However, we got together and held meetings. I submit that if the house accepts this motion, we could again meet together and we might move sufficiently on both sides to reach an agreement instead of settling on the basis of the majority deciding against the minority. Therefore, so as not to have this motion become a nullity, so we can reach a decision on it, I move seconded by the hon. member for Comox-Alberni (Mr. Barnett):

That the motion be amended by deleting therefrom the words "four o'clock p.m." and by substituting therefor the words "five thirty o'clock p.m.".

In presenting that amendment may I repeat what I said a moment ago. I admit that it is only a half hour this side of the normal time of adjournment, but it is a gesture that calls for that half hour and further time this evening to be spent in discussing this issue rather than meeting in a head-on collision. I hope the house will accept my amendment, and then accept the motion as amended.

• (3:50 p.m.)

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles), seconded by the hon. member for Comox-Alberni (Mr. Barnett), has moved:

That the motion be amended by deleting therefrom the words "4 o'clock p.m." and by substituting therefor the words "5.30 o'clock p.m.".

Again I am not expressing an opinion as to whether the motion is in order, but I think hon. members would want me to put the amendment at this time. Therefore I will now proceed to put the amendment. The house has heard the amendment. All those in favour of the amendment to the motion—

Mr. Woolliams: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Is the hon. member rising to speak to the amendment?

Mr. Woolliams: Mr. Speaker, I do not know whether I heard correctly but I presume you have agreed that the amendment to the motion is in order?

Mr. McIlraith: No; His Honour specifically said he had not.

Mr. Speaker: I am prepared to put the amendment now, with the reservation that I am not too sure whether I could put the amendment to the motion if the debate on the amendment goes beyond four o'clock. We would then be getting into the realm of procedural "never-ever", and I am not sure what would happen at that point. We are close to four o'clock, and if the hon. member did not want to speak to the amendment we might escape this position if I put the question now. All those in favour of the amendment will please say yea.

[Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre).]

Some hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five members having risen:

Mr. Speaker: Call in the members.

The house divided on the amendment (Mr. Knowles, Winnipeg North Centre), which was negatived on the following division:

• (4:00 p.m.)

YEAS

Messrs:

Aiken	Lambert (Bellechasse)
Alexander	Laprise
Alkenbrack	La Salle
Asselin	Lewis
Baldwin	MacEwan
Barnett	MacInnis
Beaudoin	MacInnis (Mrs.)
Bell	MacLean
Bigg	Macquarrie
Brewin	McCleave
Broadbent	McCutcheon
Burton	McGrath
Cadieu (Meadow Lake)	Mather
Caouette	Mazankowski
Coates	Monteith
Code	Moore
Comeau	Moores
Crouse	Muir (Cape Breton-The Sydneys)
Danforth	Nesbitt
Dinsdale	Noble
Dionne	Nowlan
Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands)	Nystrom
Downey	Paproski
Fairweather	Peddle
Flemming	Peters
Forrestall	Ricard
Fortin	Ritchie
Gauthier	Rodrigue
Gilbert	Rynard
Gleave	Saltsman
Godin	Schumacher
Grills	Scott
Gundlock	Simpson
Harding	Skoberg
Harkness	Stanfield
Hees	Stewart (Marquette)
Horner	Tétrault
Howard (Skeena)	Thomas (Moncton)
Howe	Thompson
Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre)	Winch
Korchinski	Woolliams
	Yewchuk—83.

NAYS

Messrs:

Allmand	Barrett
Anderson	Basford
Andras	Béchard

Beer	Loiselle
Benson	Macdonald (Rosedale)
Blair	MacEachen
Blouin	MacGuigan
Borrie	Mackasey
Breau	McBride
Brown	McIlraith
Buchanan	McNulty
Cadieux (Labelle)	Mahoney
Cafik	Major
Clermont	Marceau
Cobbe	Marchand (Langelier)
Corbin	Marchand (Kamloops-Cariboo)
Côté (Richelieu)	Morison
Côté (Longueuil)	Munro
Cullen	Murphy
Cyr	Noël
Danson	O'Connell
Davis	Orange
Deachman	Osler
Deakon	Otto
De Bané	Ouellet
Douglas (Assiniboia)	Pelletier
Drury	Penner
Dubé	Pepin
Éthier	Perrault
Forest	Pilon
Forget	Portelance
Foster	Pringle
Francis	Prud'homme
Gendron	Reid
Gibson	Richardson
Givens	Roberts
Goode	Rochon
Goyer	Rock
Gray	Roy (Timmins)
Groos	Roy (Laval)
Guay (St. Boniface)	Serré
Guay (Lévis)	Sharp
Guilbault	Smith (Northumberland-Miramichi)
Haidasz	Smith (Saint-Jean)
Hogarth	Stafford
Honey	Stanbury
Hopkins	Stewart (Cochrane)
Howard (Okanagan Boundary)	Stewart (Okanagan-Kootenay)
Hymmen	St. Pierre
Isabelle	Sullivan
Jamieson	Thomas (Maisonneuve)
Jerome	Tolmie
Kaplan	Trudeau
Kierans	Trudel
Lachance	Turner (London East)
Laflamme	Turner (Ottawa-Carleton)
Laing	Wahn
Lang	Walker
Langlois	Watson
Laniel	Weatherhead
Leblanc (Laurier)	Whelan
Lefebvre	Whiting
Legault	Yanakis—128.
Lessard (LaSalle)
Lind

• (4:50 p.m.)

Mr. Speaker: I declare the amendment lost.

As I indicated to hon. members earlier, it would not be in order to put the main motion to the house since it has now, by the lapse of time, become a nullity.

Mr. Woolliams: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. There is one point I would ask you to consider. If a motion is a nullity, how can there be an amendment to a motion that is a nullity?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Perhaps I should not have put the motion. However, the division on the amendment was called before four o'clock. That was my purpose in suggesting to hon. members that if they wanted to vote on the amendment to the motion the question should be put before four o'clock.

MOTION TO ADJOURN HOUSE

Mr. André Fortin (Lotbinière): Mr. Speaker, I move, seconded by the hon. member for Abitibi (Mr. Laprise), that the house do now adjourn.

Mr. Speaker: Before putting the motion I wish to bring to the attention of hon. members Standing Order 25. I have extremely serious doubts about the motion being put at this time. If hon. members feel that the motion can be put, I would like to hear their arguments, but to my mind it is clear that Standing Order 25, and particularly if we read in this instance the English text, makes this motion inadmissible. The Standing Order reads as follows:

> A motion to adjourn, unless otherwise prohibited in these standing orders, shall always be in order, but no second motion to the same effect shall be made until some intermediate proceeding has taken place.

In view of this I have some doubts as to whether the motion can be moved. Because of these reservations I would be pleased to hear hon. members on the point, but I think that it is only if there were an intermediate proceeding that the motion could be put.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, as Your Honour pointed out, this motion is made under the provisions of Standing Order 25, which reads as follows:

> A motion to adjourn, unless otherwise prohibited in these standing orders, shall always be in order, but no second motion to the same effect shall be made until some intermediate proceeding has taken place.

I submit that the effect of the motion now put by the hon. member for Lotbinière (Mr. Fortin) is not the same as the effect of either of the propositions put before the house earlier. The first proposition was that the house adjourn at four o'clock, the second proposition was that the house adjourn at 5.30 p.m. It is now 5.02 p.m., which is a different time.

Since this motion is not debatable its disposition will not be long delayed and we would adjourn very soon.

• (5:00 p.m.)

May I draw Your Honour's attention to citation 99 of Beauchesne's fourth edition, to be found at pages 88 and 89.

Some hon. Members: Dispense.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): I do not know why hon. members opposite cry "dispense" so often. I realize they want to dispense with debate, but let us not dispense with the rules. Citation 99 (2) provides:

> The term "intermediate proceeding" used in Standing Order 25—

That is the one that has just been read, which provides that a motion to adjourn cannot be to the same effect as a previous motion unless there be some intermediate proceeding.

> —means a proceeding that can properly be entered on the Journals. The true test is that if any parliamentary proceeding takes place, the second motion is regular, and the clerk ought to enter the proceedings to show that the motion in question is regular. It is usual to alternate motions for adjournment of House and debate when a question is under consideration.

That citation clearly provides that although you cannot move the same motion immediately afterwards, motions that are different in effect can be moved; they can be alternated. I do not want to say it, but the process could go on all day, though it could not take place at this point because there is no debate to adjourn. If we were in the course of a debate then it would be in order, according to this citation, for someone to get the floor and move the adjournment of the debate. Then following that another member could move the adjournment of the house, and then another the adjournment of the debate, and so on.

Hon. members on the other side of the house found it amusing when I indicated that the time was 5.02. It is now 5.05, not four o'clock or 5.30. However, my point is that there is a difference in character and in nature between the two motions. The motion now before the house is the standard motion to adjourn, which by our rules is always in order. The other motion was a substantive motion fixing the time of debate at some time other than the point at which the motion was being debated. That motion is provided for under the terms of Standing Order 32(1) (p); it is debatable and it was debated.

[Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre).]

The present motion is moved under Standing Order 32(2) which provides:

> All other motions, unless otherwise provided in these standing orders, shall be decided without debate or amendment.

On that ground too this motion is a different kettle of fish. Both motions include the word "adjourn" in their terms, but the other motion is a substantive one that seeks to fix a point in time for a debate. The present motion is not debatable and calls for the adjournment of the house at this very moment.

In the same way, Mr. Speaker, we sometimes move motions to amend our rules, to change our hours of sitting, motions that are debatable but are different from motions to adjourn. Motions are sometimes moved—there is one on Votes and Proceedings now that we will come to in a few days—in connection with adjourning for the summer recess. There have frequently been occasions when this kind of motion has been moved, namely, that when the house adjourns this day it shall stand adjourned until a certain specified time. That is a substantive motion that is debatable, yet immediately after it is put and debated there is a motion moved that the house do now adjourn. As I say, both motions include the word "adjourn", but they are allowed to be moved one after the other because they are different.

I submit that the motion now being made falls within Standing Order 25. It is the ordinary motion to adjourn that is in order at any time. The motion presented by the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) was a motion moved pursuant to Standing Order 42(1) and can be moved without notice. It is debatable under Standing Order 32(1)(p) and is a substantive motion. If the motion had carried as I sought to amend it, then the house would not adjourn now but would continue in session until 5.30.

I submit that this present motion is a different proposition. It is a basic, fundamental rule in every deliberative assembly that a motion to adjourn can be moved at any time. A motion to adjourn the house has not yet been moved during the course of today's sitting, and therefore I submit that the right of the hon. member for Lotbinière (Mr. Fortin) to move the motion at this time is unchallengeable and that the motion should be put to the house.

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I take it that the hon. member does not contend that there has been an intermediate proceeding here as referred to in citation 99 (2), and therefore I will not argue that point. I should emphasize that the important words of Standing Order 25 are the words "to the same effect". The hon. member used several different turns of phrase; he said that this was not the same motion, that there was no question of its being of the same nature or character. If any of those words had appeared in the Standing Order, then obviously they would apply to the motion.

I submit the Standing Order is clear in this regard. It refers to a motion that shall have the same result as a former motion, regardless of the words used to frame the former. For this reason I suggest that what we have here are two motions which, in effect, are identical, are back to back, and therefore in accordance with the terms of Standing Order 25 the second motion cannot be received.

May I just deal with the hon. member's reference to the last sentence of citation 99(2). He appears to be saying that there is no difference in effect between a motion to adjourn the house and a motion to adjourn the debate I think Your Honour will recognize that there is a very great difference between the two. If the house adjourns no further business can be conducted. If the debate adjourns then there can be further business on that day, though not on the same question. For these reasons I suggest the motion is out of order.

Mr. G. H. Aiken (Parry Sound-Muskoka): Mr. Speaker, may I first of all reply to the argument of the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald) that the wording of the rule is that no second motion to the same effect shall be made until some intermediate proceeding has taken place. I admit that if this motion is put and carried, then at 5.30 it might have the same result in that the house will adjourn. But I submit the motion is not to the same effect.

It has been clearly pointed out that the previous motion moved by the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) was a motion to adjourn under Standing Order 42 (1) for a specific purpose, a purpose he explained, namely to try to negotiate further on the question of the closure rule. A time was set at which the house would adjourn so that the house leaders could get together.

The motion now before the house falls under Standing Order 25, which provides that a motion to adjourn may be made at any time. The one big difference, Mr. Speaker, is this. Your Honour was obliged to rule the main motion out of order because we had passed the hour of four o'clock. That ruling has been accepted and no second motion was put. But, Mr. Speaker, that same argument cannot apply to this particular motion because it may be put at any time at all. I think this shows the essential difference between the two motions. It is close to 5.30 p.m. and the house would adjourn if either motion were carried. I submit, nevertheless, that it cannot be said that this motion is "to the same effect", and I therefore think that it should be allowed.

• (5:10 p.m.)

Mr. Andrew Brewin (Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, you have heard submissions by those who are professed experts on the rules. I do not profess to be an expert on the rules but I suggest to Your Honour that rule 25 which we are considering here is very clear in its meaning. The question that faces you is one of extreme simplicity, namely, the simple English meaning of the words, "to the same effect".

I submit it is quite impossible to say that the amendment introduced by the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles)—or indeed, if it comes to that, the motion introduced by the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) which Your Honour ruled out of order—and the motion we are presently considering can be said to be "to the same effect". If anyone were to say they are to the same effect I submit he would be torturing the English language. How can a motion calling on the house to adjourn at five o'clock, or 5.30, be to the same effect as a motion calling on the house to adjourn forthwith, or immediately upon the taking of the vote?

I do not think I need to elaborate my argument by saying that we are not dealing with the same corpus. The two motions are not to the same effect and I do not see why we should have this great difficulty on this particular point. The wording of the rule is crystal clear.

Mr. Robert McCleave (Halifax-East Hants): Mr. Speaker, I wish to make one point in addition to those which have been made by my colleagues on this side of the house. I am sorry that the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) and the government house leader seem to have been driven from the chamber by my rising to speak.

An hon. Member: King Canute is not here.

Mr. McCleave: I submit that we should not really be saying that we are substituting one motion for another, that we are substituting a motion which asks the house to adjourn at an unspecified time for a previous motion saying that the house shall adjourn at a specified time. The argument that no second motion "to the same effect" shall be put is really irrelevant because there never was a motion in the first place which was decided by this chamber. I think this is an important distinction we ought to consider.

Mr. G. W. Baldwin (Peace River): Mr. Speaker, I rise with great trepidation, having hoped that the irrefutable logic of the sweetly reasoned arguments of hon. gentlemen who preceded me would be accepted. In any event, one might argue that there ought to be unanimous willingness on the part of all concerned to accept the motion on the basis that the mood of the house at this time is not conducive to the transacting of further business. However, since I do not see the dawning light of acceptance in the eyes of hon. members opposite I hope to make my argument to Your Honour in support of the point of order raised by the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles). I do so in the hope that this on-the-job training for the government which is now taking place may be of benefit.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Baldwin: My authorities for making this argument are the two standing orders in question. The hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) moved a motion and the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre moved an amendment to it under Standing Order 42(1). But the motion the house is now considering is the one that has been moved under Standing Order 25. That in itself is significant. If the original motion of the hon. and learned member for Calgary North which the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre sought to amend had been accepted, it would have meant that debate would have continued until a specified time. That was the intent of the motion.

The hon. member's reason for moving the motion is plain. It frequently happens that if there is debate up to a specified time the house may arrive at a conclusion with respect to the matter then before it. Bearing that in mind the hon. member moved that the house do adjourn at a certain time. If the motion had been accepted right away it would have meant that we could have further debated the issues before the house for approximately another hour and a half.

The motion proposed by the hon. member for Lotbinière (Mr. Fortin) is the type that comes before the house most frequently, and I think Your Honour is entitled to take judicial notice of the way motions are moved under Standing Order 25. For instance, when the house is discussing clauses of a bill and a motion has been put to adjourn debate on one clause, another similar motion following that one cannot be properly put until there has been an intermediate stage. Normally that means that we must move from one clause to the discussion of another clause. With great deference I suggest that a neat distinction must be drawn between the two motions which have come before the house. Consequently, the motion offered by the hon. member for Lotbinière should be put. In any event I point out to Your Honour that we have had an intermediary stage and it might well meet the convenience of the house if the motion were put at this time.

Mr. Speaker: I wonder whether there is much point in having hon. members pursue the matter further. Of course, I have indicated to hon. members that I do not wish to restrict their rights to speak on this important point of order. Is the hon. member for Skeena (Mr. Howard) rising on the point of order?

Mr. Frank Howard (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I simply wanted to draw to your attention, and this is quite apart from any reference to intermediate proceedings and entries in the Journals, that a distinction must be drawn between any motion which asks the house to adjourn at a specified time, say at 5.30, and the motion proposed by the hon. member for Lotbinière (Mr. Fortin). Since Standing Order 42(1) says that a motion under the Standing Order to adjourn the house may be put, it is necessary to establish a time for adjournment when one moves a motion under that Standing Order because there are references in it to times of meeting and adjournment of the house. With respect, Standing Order 25 makes no reference to the time of adjournment. It merely speaks of a motion to adjourn.

I submit that because there is this distinction, Standing Order 42(1) in effect saying that there must be a specified time for adjournment and Standing Order 25 saying that you do not need a specified time, Your Honour can make the determination that the two motions the house is considering are different and not "to the same effect", and that it is permissible for us to proceed to deal with the matter.

• (5:20 p.m.)

[Translation]

Mr. André Fortin (Lotbinière): Mr. Speaker, I want to thank first of all all the hon. members who expressed their views on the acceptability of this motion.

Mr. Speaker, all I want to say is this: My purpose in proposing this motion was very specific and very different from the previous motions. That is why—

Mr. Speaker: Order. Order. I remind the hon. member that even if the motions for adjournment of the house submitted earlier this afternoon were subject to debate, this one is not. Accordingly, the hon. member is not allowed to state an argument similar to those put forward when the previous amendments were put before the house.

What we have to consider at the present time is solely and exclusively a question of procedure, that is, whether the motion is acceptable or not. I am ready to listen to the hon. member in the hope that the arguments he may submit in support of his motion, of the acceptability of the motion, will add something new to the arguments submitted so far.

Mr. Fortin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My object in rising after having submitted this motion was first of all to thank the hon. members for their kindness in supporting this motion and—

Mr. Speaker: Order. I am ready to co-operate with the hon. members in so far as they are ready to co-operate with me. I took the liberty of calling the hon. member to order and he absolutely cannot disregard the Chair's warning and repeat what he had started to say a moment ago. He must, and I made this suggestion with all due respect and in a spirit of friendship restrict his remarks to the debate on procedure.

Mr. Fortin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, I am quite ready to accept your ruling with the utmost humility. I was just coming to the point.

When I moved this motion, I did it according to the Beauchesne's citation, as pointed out previously and I would like to make it clear that it was my firm intention to move a motion totally different from the preceding motions, according to sub-clause (20) of Beauchesne's citation.

Such was the aim of my comments.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: I do not want to be unfair to the hon. member for Pembina (Mr. Bigg). I hope if he has an argument to submit it will be different from those which have already been presented for the guidance of the Chair because at the moment some of them are not very helpful.

Mr. F. J. Bigg (Pembina): I accede to the wish of the Chair, Your Honour.

Mr. Speaker: I thank the hon. member for his generous co-operation.

I have listened to hon. members who have taken part in this procedural debate. As I indicated when the motion was moved some few minutes ago by the hon. member for Lotbinière (Mr. Fortin), I had serious doubts about the motion. Hon. members have argued this motion should be receivable under the provisions of Standing Order 25 without the necessity of an intermediate proceeding because it is not the same motion. Certainly I recognize the motion to adjourn at 5.30 p.m. is not the same as a simple motion to adjourn the house, but I pointed out in the first instance that this is not what the Standing Order states.

The Standing Order is to the effect that:

> —no second motion to the same effect shall be made until some intermediate proceeding has taken place.

I doubt that it is the intention of the Standing Order to allow a second motion of adjournment after one has already been considered without an intermediate proceeding, even though the first motion had a condition attached to it.

I realize that this is perhaps new law. I was tempted to ask the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles), and other members who took part in the procedural debate, whether they had a precedent to support their views. I am sure they did not because I do not think we have ever had this type of motion following a motion of the kind moved by the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre and the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams).

All this having been said, I would say that the real test we now have to apply is: had the first motion carried, would this motion be in order? The answer is obvious. To my mind the only conclusion I can reach is that the second motion is to the same effect as the first. It can be in order later on in our proceedings provided there is an intermediate proceeding as required by the provisions of Standing Order 25.

[Translation]

As I interpret standing order 25, I must come to the conclusion that this motion to adjourn cannot be put to the house at this time until some intermediate proceeding has taken place.

I must therefore regretfully refuse to put to the house the motion made by the hon. member for Lotbinière.

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

APPOINTMENTS, PORTFOLIOS AND REMUNERATION OF CERTAIN MINISTERS

Question No. 2,247—Mr. Burton:

1. On what date or dates were the Honourable Robert K. Andras, the Honourable Otto E. Lang and the Honourable James A. Richardson appointed to the Cabinet?

2. What ministerial appointments has each held since entering the Cabinet and on what date was each such appointment made?

3. What has been the annual rate of remuneration for salary and motor car allowance for each since first appointed, together with effective dates?

4. What is the annual rate of remuneration for salary and motor car allowance for other Cabinet Ministers except the Prime Minister?

Mr. J. E. Walker (Parliamentary Secretary to the Prime Minister): 1. July 6, 1968.

2. On July 6, 1968, all three were appointed Ministers Without Portfolio. Subsequently, on May 5, 1969, the Hon. James A. Richardson was appointed Minister of Supply and Services.

3 and 4. In addition to their sessional indemnity and expense allowance as a member of parliament, or of the Senate, cabinet ministers with Portfolio receive $15,000 plus $2,000 motor car allowance; ministers without portfolio receive $7,500 plus $2,000 motor car allowance.

STUDENT ATTITUDES TO INDIAN PROBLEMS

Question No. 2,466—Mr. Howard (Skeena):

1. Has the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development received a report on student attitudes to Indian problems pursuant to a service contract dated August 9, 1968?

2. What monies were paid, and to whom, with respect to work done in the preparation of the said report whether or not it is completed?

3. By what name is the said report known?

4. To whom has the report been distributed?

5. Is the government prepared to make the said report available to (a) all Indian Bands and (b) Parliament and, if not, for what reason?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): A search of the records has been made and no contract dated August 9, 1968 for the purpose of studying student attitudes to Indian problems was found.

REDUCTION OF TOLLS, EASTERN TOWNSHIPS FREEWAY, CHAMPLAIN BRIDGE

Question No. 2,506—Mr. Fortin:

1. To the federal government's knowledge, does the Government of Quebec intend to reduce the tolls on the eastern townships freeway starting July 1, 1969?

2. Does the federal government intend to reduce the tolls on the Champlain Bridge and, if not, for what reason?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): 1. This is a matter which concerns the Government of the Province of Quebec and the Department of Transport has no knowledge of any such intention.

2. The federal government does not feel that a change in the present policy is warranted at this time.

PUBLIC RELATIONS, NATIONAL DEFENCE

Question No. 2,531—Mr. Robinson:

1. Does the Department of National Defence have a public relations staff and, if so, how many?

2. What was the total cost of public relations for the Department for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive?

Mr. D. W. Groos (Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of National Defence): 1. The Department of National Defence does not have a public relations staff but a Directorate of Information Services provides information on the activities of the Department, the Canadian Armed Forces, Defence Research Board and Canada Emergency Measures Organization. Thirty eight military officers with a support staff of nine military non-commissioned officers and 25 civilians serve the Directorate of Information Services at ten locations in Canada, No. 1 Air Division and 4th Mechanized Brigade Group in Germany, the U.N. Contingent in Cyprus, and with the integrated Canada-United States NORAD information offices at North Bay and Colorado Springs.

2. Costs prior to 1965-66 were not maintained in a manner which would permit this data to be readily identified. Since 1965 the total cost of information services is as follows: 1965-66, $462,519.68; 1966-67, $674,707.31; 1967-68, $821,316.17; 1968-69, $872,176.00.

C.B.C. PROGRAMS FEATURING JOHN LENNON, YOKO ONO

Question No. 2,570—Mr. Schumacher:

1. During the period May 20 to June 10, 1969 what radio programs of the CBC featured John Lennon and/or Yoko Ono?

2. During the same period what television programs of the CBC featured John Lennon and/or Yoko Ono?

3. In respect of part 1, which programs were local and which were network?

4. In respect of part 2, which programs were local and which were network?

5. How much money was paid to (a) John Lennon (b) Yoko Ono in respect of the programs mentioned in parts 1 and 2?

6. What were the total production costs of the programs mentioned in parts 1 and 2?

7. Did the CBC contribute in any financial way by the payment of performance fees or otherwise to the trip by John Lennon and Yoko Ono from Montreal to Ottawa during the period mentioned?

8. What was the immigration status in Canada of John Lennon and Yoko Ono during the period in question?

Mr. Yves Forest (Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and the Department of Manpower and Immigration as follows: 1. "As It Happens", May 26 (network); "Radio Free Friday", May 30 (network); "Sunday Supplement", June 1 (network); "Action Set", May 31; June 7 (network).

2. "The Way It Is", June 1 & 8 (network); "The Day It Is", May 27 (local).

3. See part 1.

4. See part 2.

5. None.

6. All production costs fell within the normal budgets for these programs. No accurate breakdown is available.

7. No.

8. John Lennon and his wife, Yoko Ono, were in Canada as applicants for admission. As Mr. Lennon's ability to meet admission requirements was in doubt, a special inquiry under the Immigration Act was ordered to determine whether he should be admitted. Pending the hearing of this inquiry, the original date of which was adjourned at Mr. Lennon's request so that he could obtain legal counsel, Mr. Lennon was conditionally released from immigration custody. Before the rescheduled inquiry was held, Mr. Lennon withdrew his application and left Canada voluntarily.

UNION OF ONTARIO INDIANS—DENIAL OF STATUS AS CHARITABLE ORGANIZATION

Question No. 2,589—Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West):

1. Was the Union of Ontario Indians denied status as a charitable organization for income tax purposes on the grounds that its objects include activities "promoting a closer relationship and better understanding" which has been held not to be a charitable purpose?

2. Have other organizations been denied status as charitable organizations for income tax purposes for the same or similar reasons and, if so, which organizations?

3. Was the Union of Ontario Indians denied status as a charitable organization for income tax purposes on the grounds that it included among its purposes "obtaining a political object by agitating for legislation", which has been held not to be a charitable purpose?

4. Have other organizations been denied status as charitable organizations for income tax purposes for the same or similar reasons and, if so, which organizations?

5. Is the Minister considering changes in the standards for determining status as a charitable organization for income tax purposes, to accommodate organizations like the Union of Ontario Indians?

Hon. Jean-Pierre Côté (Minister of National Revenue): 1. Yes.

2. This information is not available.

3. Yes.

4. This information is not available.

5. No. This would require an amendment to the law and would be a matter of government policy.

AIRPORTS—LOCATION OF INSTRUMENT LANDING SYSTEMS

Question No. 2,598—Mr. McCleave:

What are the locations of the 29 airports to receive the instrument landing systems announced by the Minister of Transport June 30?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): It is currently planned to install the new instrument landing system equipment during the next five years at the following locations: Vancouver International (4 systems); Calgary International (2 systems); Winnipeg International; Toronto International (3 systems); Montreal International (2 systems); Halifax International; Torbay; Edmonton International; Charlottetown; North Bay; Quebec; New Montreal Airport (2 systems); Deer Lake or Stephenville; Peace River; Fort Chimo; Resolute; Mont Joli; Ottawa International; Waterloo-Wellington; Kelowna; Kamloops.

CANADIAN FORCES—FLIGHT PAY WITHOUT FLIGHT DUTY

Question No. 2,600—Mr. Robinson:

Are any of the 689 officers, formerly RCAF Aircrew, without university degrees and serving in the Canadian Forces, not on flying duty per se, receiving flying pay and, if so, how many and how much do they each receive according to rank?

Mr. D. W. Groos (Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of National Defence): Without conducting a survey of the personnel records of all serving aircrew officers, sorting out the files of the 689 officers concerned, and examining their pay records, it is not possible to provide an accurate answer to this question, and the necessary expert staff are not available to undertake the large amount of work which would be required to gather this information.

However, the following table reflects the standard rates of pay for officers of the Canadian Armed Forces, as well as the rates for pilots and navigators.

Monthly Rates (in dollars)

Rank	Basic	Incentive Pay Category
		1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11
LGEN	2307
MGEN	2110
BGEN	1787	1837	1887
COL	1501	1546	1591
COL (PILOT)	1579	1624	1669
COL (NAVIGATOR)	1579	1624	1669
LCOL	1199	1239	1279	1319	1359
LCOL (PILOT)	1355	1395	1435	1475	1515
LCOL (NAVIGATOR)	1277	1317	1357	1397	1437
MAJ	996	1028	1060	1092	1124	1156
MAJ (PILOT)	1182	1214	1246	1278	1310	1342
MAJ (NAVIGATOR)	1074	1106	1138	1170	1202	1234
CAPT	779	804	829	854	879	904	929
CAPT (PILOT)	944	974	1014	1054	1094	1134	1174	1194	1214
CAPT (NAVIGATOR)	855	915	955	995	1035	1075	1115	1135	1155
LT (CFR)	720	740	760	780	800
LT (CFR) (PILOT)	890	915	950	985	1020
LT (CFR) (NAVIGATOR)	827	852	887	922	957
LT	593	608	623	638	653	668	683	698	713	728	743	758
LT (PILOT)	746	761	776	816	831	846	861	876	891	906	921
LT (NAVIGATOR)	724	739	754	794	809	824	839	854	869

Your attention is directed to the reply to part 2 of your question 1554, page 6388 of Hansard, dated March 10, 1969.

NATIONAL FILM BOARD—DOCUMENTARY ON POSTAL SERVICES

Question No. 2,601—Mr. McCleave:

1. Has the National Film Board recently made a documentary about Canada's postal services?

[Mr. Jamieson.]

2. If so, at what cost?

3. Under what circumstances will the film be shown?

4. Did the Post Office Department or the Department of Communications pay part or all of the costs and, if so, how much?

Hon. Gérard Pelletier (Secretary of State): I am informed by the National Film Board as follows: 1. Yes—a documentary "A Tale of Mail", a history of the postal services in Canada, was produced in 1967 by the National Film Board.

2. $53,872.

3. Distribution in Canada: theatrically by Columbia Pictures of Canada Ltd.; non-theatrically by the National Film Board. Distribution Abroad: efforts are being made to distribute theatrically and on television; non-theatrical distribution is being conducted by Canadian Embassies and posts abroad.

4. The Post Office Department paid $45,413. The National Film Board paid $8,459.

PORTUGUESE USE OF MILITARY SUPPLIES OBTAINED FROM NATO COUNTRIES

Question No. 2,603—Mr. Nystrom:

1. Is the Government of Canada aware of reports that military supplies obtained through NATO agreements are being used by the Portugese in Mozambique and Angola?

2. If so, have steps been taken to confirm or deny these reports?

3. If the truth of these reports has been established, has the Government of Canada made representations to Portugal or the other NATO allies that are supplying the Portugese with arms?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): 1. The Canadian Government is not aware that military supplies obtained through NATO agreements are being used by the Portuguese authorities in Mozambique and Angola.

2. Not applicable.

3. Not applicable.

EFFECT OF POSTAL RATE INCREASE ON "CANADIAN BOY"

Question No. 2,605—Mr. Macquarrie:

1. Has the Post Office Department been advised that as a result of the recent increase in postal rates the magazine Canadian Boy has had to reduce the weight of its publication to two ounces in order to qualify for a postal rate somewhat higher than that prevailing heretofore?

2. Have protests or representations been received concerning the consequent reduction in the size of this magazine?

3. From what individuals or organizations were such protests or representations received?

4. What was the nature of the reply given to such representations?

Hon. Eric W. Kierans (Postmaster General and Minister of Communications): In so far as the Post Office Department is concerned: 1. No.

2. No.

3. Not applicable.

4. Not applicable.

AVERAGE INCREASE IN SALARY, DEPARTMENT HEADS AND DEPUTIES

Question No. 2,609—Mr. Robinson:

What was the average increase in salaries given to department heads and deputies in the civil service in each of the years 1960-69 inclusive?

Mr. J. E. Walker (Parliamentary Secretary to the Prime Minister): The average increase in salaries of deputy ministers in the federal public service in each of the years 1960-69 inclusive was as follows: 1960, Nil; 1961, 5 per cent; 1962, Nil; 1963, 13 per cent; 1964, Nil; 1965, 8 per cent; 1966, Nil; 1967, 6.5 per cent; 1968, Nil; 1969, Nil (as of 18 July, 1969).

BANKING—PREFERENCE TO SMALL BORROWERS

Question No. 2,610—Mr. Robinson:

Is the federal government considering a policy to regulate banking so that small borrowers receive preference over large borrowers when credit is limited?

Hon. E. J. Benson (Minister of Finance): No. The federal government does not have statutory power to regulate banking so that small borrowers would receive preference over large borrowers. Moreover I consider any such legal regulation would be impractical. However, in his appearance before the House of Commons Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs, the Governor of the Bank of Canada indicated that he has expressed the view to the executives of the banks that they should have special regard for borrowers in less prosperous areas of the country and for small businesses that do not have alternative sources of credit.

CANADA COUNCIL GRANTS TO PUBLISHERS

Question No. 2,614—Mr. Robinson:

1. Is it the policy of the federal government to ensure that grants given by the Canada Council to publishers are used for the purpose of producing specific publications?

2. What are the terms of reference for awarding Canada Council grants for the production of periodicals?

Questions

Hon. Gérard Pelletier (Secretary of State): 1. The Canada Council is constituted by the federal government as an independent organization responsible for setting its own policies within the terms of the Canada Council Act. I am informed by the Canada Council that the Council ensures that its grants to publishers are used for the purpose of producing specific publications.

2. Answered in reply to Question No. 2,526 —Mr. Yewchuk—June 13.

SUPERSONIC PLANES—PLACING OF ORDER BY AIR CANADA

Question No. 2,616—Mr. Skoberg:

Was Air Canada allowed to place an order for six Boeing Supersonic planes in view of the answer given by the Minister of Transport to Question No. 2,289, to the effect that no approval has been given to the flying or landing of Supersonic planes in Canada by the Department of Transport or the Canadian Transport Commissioners and, if so, for what reason?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): The Management of Air Canada advises as follows: No airline, including Air Canada, has placed an order for Boeing Supersonic aircraft. As in the case of approximately 25 airlines of the world, for competitive reasons, Air Canada has reserved Line Positions for the Boeing Supersonic transport.

GRANT TO SEMINAR ON ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

Question No. 2,617—Mr. Marshall:

1. How much money was given by the Department of Regional Economic Expansion to the organizers of the Seminar on Economic Development held at Chicoutimi, Quebec on March 21, 1969?

2. Is it the policy of the federal government to offer similar assistance to other groups wishing to hold regional development seminars?

3. If so, what are the conditions under which such assistance will be offered?

4. To what person must applications for such assistance be made?

Mr. Russell C. Honey (Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): 1. A grant of $3,400 (50 per cent of cost of organization and presentation of Seminar) was made to the Université de Québec, Chicoutimi.

2. Yes.

3. Such assistance will be offered under the following conditions: (a) The subject matter must be related to regional economic development; (b) The cost of the project must be shared equally between the sponsoring organization and the federal government; (c) Grants are given, in most cases, in designated areas, where there is a specific need to review and study the problems of regional economic development.

4. ADM Incentives, Department of Regional Economic Expansion.

CALGARY AIRPORT—TENDERS FOR OPERATION OF PARKING FACILITIES

Question No. 2,626—Mr. Schumacher:

1. In what publications and on what dates were tenders called for the operation of parking facilities at the Calgary International Airport?

2. What are the full names and addresses of the Directors and principal shareholders of the company chosen for the operation of parking facilities at the Calgary International Airport?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): 1. (a) October 8 and 9, 1968, in The Albertan, Calgary; The Calgary Herald, Calgary; Edmonton Journal, Edmonton; Daily Commercial News and Building Records, Toronto; (b) On October 8 only in the Journal of Commerce, Vancouver, B.C.

2. Walter Crinchic, President, 55 Isabella St., Toronto 5, Ont. John G. Crinchic, Vice-President, 59 Laurelwood Crescent, Toronto, Ont. Mrs. Dorothy Crinchic, Secretary, 55 Isabella St., Toronto 5, Ont.

SCIENTIFIC REPORTS, DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY, MINES AND RESOURCES

Question No. 2,639—Mr. Robinson:

Does the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources provide scientific and semi-technical reports for the public at nominal cost and, if not, for what reason and is the information contained in these scientific and semi-technical reports available to the public generally and, if so, in what manner is it made available?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister without Portfolio): Yes. Scientific, technical and semi-technical reports of the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources are available to the public at nominal cost through the Queen's Printer and the Queen's Printer Book Shops across Canada.

REFERENCE OF INDIAN RIGHTS TO TRIBUNAL

Question No. 2,643—Mr. Dinsdale:

1. Will the aboriginal and treaty rights of Canadian Indians be referred to an impartial tribunal following the study and recommendations of the government appointed Commissioner and, if so, what will be the nature of the tribunal?

2. Will the Indians be given legal assistance in presenting their case and, if so, what will be the nature of this legal assistance?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): 1. The course of action to be followed in this matter will not be decided upon until after the report of the Commissioner has been received.

2. In view of the reply to Part 1, it follows that the question as to legal assistance cannot be answered at this time. It will be noted, however, that it is expected the Commissioner will be authorized to recommend appropriate support to the National Indian Committee on Indian Rights and Treaties, so that it may conduct research on the Indians' behalf concurrently with the Commissioner's inquiry, as indicated in the recent statement on Indian Policy.

FARM CREDIT ACT—LOANS TO INDIANS

Question No. 2,646—Mr. Dinsdale:

1. Since the Farm Credit Act was amended to provide loans to Indian people on Reserve lands (a) how many loans have been made and in what amounts (b) what Reservations have received the loans and in what amounts?

2. How many applications for loans are pending and from what Reservations?

3. How many applications for loans have been refused and from what Reservations?

Hon. H. A. Olson (Minister of Agriculture): The Farm Credit Corporation advises as follows: 1. (a) As at July 15, 1969, nineteen loans amounting to $385,000 had been approved for Indians farming on Reserves; (b) The Indians for whom these loans had been approved resided on the following Reserves: Neskainlith, Sahhaltkum, Okanagan, Cookes Ferry, Cowness, Pepeekesis, Muskeg, Mistawasis, Assiniboine, Chitek Lake, Rousseau River, Valley River, Long Plain, Peguis, Lake St. Martin, Tyendinaga. The amount of the loans approved on each Reserve has not been shown because on some Reserves only one farmer applied for the loan. To list the amount of loan to a Reserve in such instances would disclose the amount borrowed by the individual farmer and such information, whether on or off Reserves, is treated as confidential by the Corporation.

2. As at July 15, 1969, a total of six applications were pending from Indians farming on the following Reserves: Ashnole, Cumberland, Piapot, Peguis, Lake St. Martin, Fairford.

3. One application had been declined during the same period.

*HIGHWAYS THROUGH NATIONAL PARKS

Question No. 2,647—Mr. Dinsdale:

1. Is the government continuing the program of reconstruction and upgrading of major highways through Canada's National Parks?

2. Since 1958, what highway projects have been carried out under the program (a) at what cost (b) and, in what parks?

3. When will reconstruction of No. 10 Highway through Riding Mountain National Park be carried out under this program?

Mr. Yves Forest (Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the reply to that question is rather long and I wonder whether the house would agree to having it printed in Hansard and taken as read.

Mr. Speaker: Is the house agreed?

Some hon. Members: No.

Some hon. Members: Yes.

Mr. Forest: 1. Yes.

2. Projects	Park
Banff Windermere	Banff National Park
Banff Jasper	Banff and Jasper National Parks
Jasper Edmonton	Jasper National Park
Jasper Yellowhead	Jasper National Park
Maligne Lake	Jasper National Park
Chief Mountain	Waterton Lakes National Park
Waskesiu	Prince Albert National Park
Cabot Trail	Cape Breton Highlands National Park
Gulf Shore	P.E.I. National Park
Elk Island	Elk Island National Park
Eastport Road	Terra Nova National Park
David Thompson	Banff National Park

(a) Total cost since 1958—$60,890,000.

(b) Answered in preceding project listing.

3. Detailed planning for replacement of the Highway will commence in 1970. Construction could start within 3 years.

Questions

EMPLOYMENT, BONNE BAY PARK AREA

Question No. 2,656—Mr. Marshall:

1. How many are employed by the federal government in the proposed Bonne Bay Park area in Western Newfoundland?

2. What type of work is being carried out?

3. Are the boundaries for the proposed area defined and is there agreement on these boundaries between the federal and provincial governments?

4. When is it expected that the land for the proposed park will be handed over to the federal government?

5. Has an agreement been signed between the federal and provincial governments for the establishment of the proposed Bonne Bay Park?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): 1 and 2. The Department of Public Works now has one man on the site preparing for camps and facilities. On July 28, D.P.W. will have eleven more men doing road location work.

Consultants have been retained by the National and Historic Parks Branch, Planning Division, to work on the preparation of the Park Master Plan.

3. A boundary proposal has been made to the Province of Newfoundland and is under consideration by them.

4. A start in handing over the land should be made within one year of an agreement, and all land should be in federal hands within 2 to 3 years of the agreement.

5. No.

DEVELOPMENT PLANS, DEPARTMENT OF REGIONAL ECONOMIC EXPANSION

Question No. 2,666—Mr. Marshall:

1. Is the Department of Regional Economic Expansion presently negotiating co-operative development plans with any provinces similar to that recently concluded with Prince Edward Island?

2. If so, which provinces?

Mr. Russell C. Honey (Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): 1 and 2. No. Discussions are underway with Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Manitoba for the purpose of formulating economic development plans for each province on the basis of the new programs of the Department of Regional Economic Expansion. It is expected that similar discussions will commence shortly with other provinces.

[Mr. Forest.]

OTTO BORG—COMMUTATION OF DEATH SENTENCE

Question No. 2,673—Mr. Latulippe:

Did the government take into account federal legislation on capital punishment when a police officer or prison guard has been murdered in arriving at its decision of commutation in the Borg case?

Hon. G. J. McIlraith (Solicitor General): The government acted under federal legislation in arriving at its decision of commutation in the Borg case.

AGRICULTURAL STABILIZATION ACT—ADDITION OF CORN AND POTATOES

Question No. 2,686—Mr. Robinson:

Will the federal government consider adding (a) corn (b) potatoes, as mandatory commodities under the Agricultural Stabilization Act?

Hon. H. A. Olson (Minister of Agriculture): No revision is presently contemplated for the Agricultural Stabilization Act.

Under Section 2 (1) (a) (ii) of the Act as it exists, Corn and Potatoes can quite adequately be looked after as designated commodities.

QUESTION PASSED AS ORDER FOR RETURN

EASING OF REGIONAL TARIFF STRUCTURES

Question No. 2,416—Mr. MacDonald (Egmont):

1. Have representations been received on the easing of regional tariff structures between the Atlantic Provinces and the Eastern Seaboard of the United States as well as the United Kingdom with regard to the improvement of markets and the development of trade between those areas?

2. What has been the response of the government in this regard?

3. Is serious consideration being given to the implementation of that program or what steps are being taken to increase trade between these areas?

Return tabled.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, since we are likely to be here for a few days, I wonder whether the President of the Privy Council would try to do something about question No. 1,917 which has been on the order paper for three and a half months and question No. 2,171 which has been on the order paper for two and a half months? Will the minister look into this?

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): Mr. Speaker, if possible I will be glad to report to the hon. member about these matters on Monday.

Mr. Dinsdale: I rise in regard to the same matter. I refer to starred question No. 2,108 which has been on the order paper since April 25. As Your Honour knows, starred questions are supposed to be promptly answered.

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): I will add that to the list, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Burton: On Monday last, Mr. Speaker, I inquired regarding question 2,349 which was asked on May 23. I think it is quite important that this information be made available at the earliest possible date. I wonder whether the President of the Privy Council would make further inquiries regarding this question.

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): Yes, Mr. Speaker. We answered one of the two questions the hon. member inquired about and we hope to have the answer to the other available shortly.

Mr. Coates: I have a simple matter, Mr. Speaker. Question No. 2,153 asks for the name and salary of the Chairman of the Public Service Staff Relations Board. I do not think we should have to wait almost three months for a reply to that question.

MOTIONS FOR PAPERS

[Translation]

Mr. Yves Forest (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, notices of motions Nos. 223, 265 and 267 are acceptable to the government.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the house that notices of motion No. 223, 265 and 267 be deemed to have been adopted?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

PORT ALBERNI, B.C.—CONSTRUCTION OF WHARF

Motion No. 223—Mr. Barnett:

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of all correspondence received by the Minister of Transport and/or the Department, since August 22, 1967, and of replies thereto on the subject-matter of the construction of additional deep-sea wharf and berthing facilities in Port Alberni Harbour.

Motion agreed to.

EXCEEDING OF MAXIMUM HOURS OF WORK

Motion No. 265—Mr. Orlikow:

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of the Order-in-Council passed during June 1969, amending the Fair Wages and Hours of Labour Regulations to allow the maximum hours of work to be exceeded in emergency situations which would otherwise constitute a violation of the Act.

Motion agreed to.

ARMED FORCES PENSION STRUCTURE

Motion No. 267—Mr. Marshall:

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of all correspondence and reports between the Minister of National Defence and the Naval Officer's Association of Canada in relation to updating the Armed Forces pension structure.

Motion agreed to.

[Translation]

Mr. Forest: Mr. Speaker, notices of motions Nos. 209 and 210 are acceptable to the government, subject to the usual reservations concerning privileged papers and authorization of the governmental authorities concerned.

I ask, Mr. Speaker, that the remaining notices of motions be allowed to stand.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Subject to the reservations and conditions expressed by the parliamentary secretary, is it the pleasure of the house that notices of motion Nos. 209 and 210 be deemed to have been adopted?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

CORRESPONDENCE WITH B.C. HYDRO RESPECTING INDIAN PROPERTY

Motion No. 209—Mr. Rose:

That an Order of the House do issue for copies of all correspondence, agreements or arrangements between the Government of Canada and the British Columbia Hydro & Power Authority regarding the acquisition of certain property and/or rights from the Tsawwassen Indian Band of British Columbia.

Motion agreed to.

CORRESPONDENCE WITH TSAWWASSEN INDIANS RESPECTING PROPERTY ACQUISITION

Motion No. 210—Mr. Rose:

That an Order of the House do issue for copies of all correspondence, agreements or arrangements between the Government of Canada and the Tsawwassen Indian Band of British Columbia regarding the acquisition of its property and/or rights to the British Columbia Hydro & Power Authority.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Nystrom: I rise on a question of privilege, Mr. Speaker. I should like to inquire of the President of the Privy Council when I may expect an answer to notice of motion 255 which I presented on July 16. The reason I ask is that this is an important document which I think would be of interest to all hon. members who are concerned about the situation in Nigeria and Biafra at this time. When may we expect the production of these papers?

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): I will have to make inquiries, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, may I ask either the President of the Privy Council or the President of the Treasury Board whether something might be done to expedite the handling of my notice of motion for production of papers No. 189, having to do with a study of the pensions of retired public servants?

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): I would be glad to have a presidential conference about this. If I might, I should like to point out to the hon. member for Yorkton-Melville that his motion was called last week and transferred for debate.

An hon. Member: He was absent.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Harding: Mr. Speaker, earlier today I was notified by the parliamentary secretary to the Minister of Fisheries that notices of motions numbered 197 and 200 would be called. I wonder when they intend to bring these forward.

Mr. Whelan: Next sitting of the house, Mr. Speaker.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

EXTERNAL AID

BIAFRA—REPLY TO CANADIAN OFFER TO PROVIDE NEUTRAL RELIEF FLIGHT OBSERVERS

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Has he as yet received any word from the government of Nigeria with regard to the proposal made by the Secretary of State for External Affairs on behalf of the government of Canada?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I have had no direct response from the Nigerian government but our proposal, among others, is being considered by the various bodies which are supplying relief and is being discussed. It seems to be a useful contribution to the discussions going on, but unfortunately this has not resulted in the kind of action we want.

Mr. Stanfield: Does the Secretary of State for External Affairs have in mind any further initiative on the part of Canada to bring matters to a successful conclusion in view of the reported imminence of the continuation of mass starvation? I asked the Secretary of State for External Affairs the other day whether he had any further measures in mind and his short answer was yes. Would he elaborate on what measures he proposes to take?

Mr. Sharp: We are engaged in discussion with all bodies concerned such as the United States government, the British government, the Nigerian government, the Red Cross and the other various agencies in a search for some means to break the deadlock.

Mr. Stanfield: Has the Secretary of State for External Affairs considered asking the government of Great Britain directly whether it would consider imposing an arms embargo unless some satisfactory solution is worked out promptly to bring relief in both Nigeria and Biafra?

Mr. Sharp: Mr. Speaker, I am sure the hon. gentleman would agree that the cessation of arms shipments by all sides is what is most desirable.

Mr. Andrew Brewin (Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Secretary of State for External Affairs whether any further consideration has been given to the suggestion that Canada use its good offices and initiative in getting the parties together, along with the representatives of the International Red Cross and the church organizations, in order to discuss this matter in view of the tremendous emergency?

Mr. Sharp: Yes, Mr. Speaker. Very careful and continuus discussion is going on in respect of this matter but as yet we have not been able to get agreement among the parties most concerned as to the most useful way to pursue this initiative.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

A.B.M. SYSTEM—INQUIRY AS TO DECISION ON CANADIAN POLICY

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, might I direct this question to the Prime Minister. It is based on his statement in the house on March 19 as recorded at page 6853 of Hansard. With reference to the A.B.M. system he said:

> If, Mr. Speaker, after receiving all the information, we are led to the view that the A.B.M. system constitutes escalation and is conducive to greater peril for mankind, then we shall condemn it. We shall tell the United States that we disapprove. If, on the other hand, we are convinced that the A.B.M. system is necessary—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Would the hon. member resume his seat. May I point out to the hon. member that I do not think it is in order for him to read at length from a previous answer.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, I think I have read sufficient of the statement to indicate that the Prime Minister said to the house on March 19 that when the government had studied the whole question of the A.B.M. system he would be prepared to make a statement either condemning the construction of the Safeguard System or indicating that he would co-operate in its construction. In view of the fact that the majority leader in the United States Senate has now stated—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I realize how important the matter is about which the hon. member is asking a question, but the length of the question should not be based on its importance. I would hope that the hon. member might ask the question.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): I shall certainly obey your ruling, Mr. Speaker. In view of the fact that the majority leader of the United States Senate has said that a decision will probably be made in the next few days in favour of the construction of the Safeguard System, has the Prime Minister made any decision concerning whether or not the Canadian government is going to condemn its construction, and what will the policy of the Canadian government be in respect of this matter which affects all mankind?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): No, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, I wonder whether the Prime Minister can give the house and the country any idea when the government will reach a decision? This matter has been hanging fire since March. It is one of the many matters which have been hanging fire. When does the government intend to make a decision or does it intend to make a decision at all?

Mr. Trudeau: The government is anxious to get back on the job and consider this and other items which are before it. As soon as we get back to the roster system we may have a bit more time to do so.

Mr. Donald MacInnis (Cape Breton-East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that the Prime Minister is anxious to get back to the job, will he explain to the house why he is waiting until October 22 to resume the session, particularly if there is so much work to be done?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I doubt whether the question as asked by the hon. member is in order. In any event I suggest the question is argumentative.

GRAIN

WHEAT—ADEQUATE SUPPLY OF BOX CARS

Mr. S. J. Korchinski (Mackenzie): Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact there are only a few more days remaining in the present crop year and many elevator points are holding orders for box cars which are not available, will the Minister of Transport take it upon himself to call the management of the C.N.R. and the C.P.R. to see whether or not within the remaining few days it may be possible to direct extra box cars to these points in order to pick up the bulk of the five-bushel quota that is in effect? I have in mind the reluctance of the Canadian Wheat Board in this regard.

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I have been in touch with officials of both railway companies. They are aware of this situation. I will make sure that they know the situation as reflected by the hon. member's question. I will also consult with the Ministers of Industry, Trade and Commerce and Agriculture with the hope of making these extra facilities available.

Inquiries of the Ministry

LABOUR RELATIONS

B.C. TELEPHONE STRIKE—REQUEST FOR REPORT

Mr. Ray Perrault (Burnaby-Seymour): Mr. Speaker, I should like to refer to a question asked of the Minister of Labour last Monday suggesting the possibility that he might have something to relate to the house today in respect of the British Columbia telephone dispute. Is he in fact able to report any change in the situation as of today?

Hon. Bryce S. Mackasey (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, instructions went out today to the mediator in British Columbia to take the necessary steps to resume talks between the B.C. Telephone Company and its employees. I hope I will be in a position to make a report on Friday, or certainly next week.

HEALTH AND WELFARE

REQUEST FOR INCREASED GRANTS FOR FACILITIES TO TRAIN DOCTORS

Mr. P. B. Rynard (Simcoe North): Mr. Speaker, in view of the need for construction plans to be initiated before parliament reconvenes in the fall, I should like to ask the Minister of National Health and Welfare whether there will be an increase next year in the funds so urgently needed which are available to the provinces? Will funds be made available in order that they may construct additional training facilities to provide the doctors that are sorely needed as a result of medicare?

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I would expect that the amount which is available during this current year will be available during the next current year.

Mr. Rynard: Mr. Speaker I should like to ask the minister whether the government is going to keep on putting the cart before the horse?

CRIMINAL CODE

BINGO AND RAFFLE PROVISIONS—NEGOTIATIONS WITH PROVINCES

Mr. Harold E. Winch (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Minister of Justice. In view of the concern of veterans, religious and fraternal organizations regarding the bingo and raffle provisions of the amended Criminal Code, will he tell the house about his negotiations with the provinces and any progress or results which have been achieved regarding this and ancillary legislation?

[Mr. Jamieson.]

Mr. Speaker: I have some doubts about the urgency of the matter but perhaps—

Mr. Winch: I assure you, Mr. Speaker, that this question is urgent to the veterans, religious and fraternal organizations.

Mr. Speaker: On the assurance of the hon. member that the question is of urgency, perhaps I should invite the minister to answer.

Hon. John N. Turner (Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, officials of my department have been conducting negotiations with the Deputy Attorneys General of the provinces. As hon. members know, the provinces will have the responsibility for licensing and certain other provisions under the new Criminal Code. I expect to make an announcement soon regarding the duties involved in respect of which the proclamation of the new amendments will be made. The basis of the new provisions will be proclaimed soon, but I expect that in some cases there may be a delay in regard to provisions involving provincial administration.

INFORMATION

REQUEST FOR TABLING OF REPORT

Mr. A. D. Alkenbrack (Frontenac-Lennox and Addington): Mr. Speaker, will the Prime Minister table today the secret report on the proposed new information services?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): There is no secret report, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Alkenbrack: Mr. Speaker, are we to assume that the Prime Minister has decided it is not in the interests of parliament to make the report available?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I should think that question is argumentative.

POLLUTION

PRINCE RUPERT—COLUMBIA CELLULOSE PULP MILL

Mr. Robert Borrie (Prince George-Peace River): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Fisheries and Forestry of which I have given notice. On two previous occasions breaks in the hot liquor discharge from the Columbia Cellulose pulp mill at Prince Rupert have caused considerable damage to fish stocks in the strait. With these incidents in mind, will the minister provide members of the house with information as to what the government is doing about the destructive and urgent pollution problem caused by a new break in that vicinity?

Mr. Speaker: Again I have some doubts about the hon. member's question, but in view of the fact I have been generous this afternoon perhaps I should allow the minister to reply.

Hon. Jack Davis (Minister of Fisheries and Forestry): Mr. Speaker, we have officers in that area studying the various and serious pollution problems which exist there. The company is doing its utmost to correct the problem. However, if fish are killed we will have to take action under our present legislation.

Mr. Borrie: Mr. Speaker, will the minister also advise what steps will be taken by the government to prevent a recurrence of such a break?

Mr. Davis: I cannot say more on that point, Mr. Speaker. Until the problem is resolved or another incident occurs, which is unlikely, I hesitate to answer in further detail.

Mr. Frank Howard (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, would the minister also relate to the house what steps his government is taking to implement pollution control measures at Prince George?

Mr. Davis: Mr. Speaker, we are keeping the situation there under close surveillance.

CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION

REASON FOR REDUCED ADVERTISING RATES

Hon. W. G. Dinsdale (Brandon-Souris): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Secretary of State whether he will inform the house during this part of the session why advertising rates charged by the C.B.C. have fallen in spite of rising production costs, and will he tell us particularly whether the government is in effect subsidizing companies who advertise with the C.B.C.?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I suspect that this question might be placed on the order paper.

Mr. Dinsdale: Mr. Speaker, perhaps I might rephrase the question by putting it on a policy basis, thus making it acceptable. Is it the policy of the C.B.C. to offer advertising rates below cost as a means of undercutting private broadcasters who cannot depend on subsidies?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Even with the change I believe that the latter question should be placed on the order paper. If there is some urgency the hon. member can give notice of his intention to debate the matter at the adjournment hour.

Mr. Dinsdale: I assure you it is of interest to the private broadcasting industry.

NATIONAL REVENUE

SYSTEM OF COLLECTING DUTIES FROM CAR MANUFACTURERS

Mr. A. D. Hales (Wellington): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Minister of National Revenue whether he can assure the house, in view of the heavy taxes that Canadians have to pay, that the Department of National Revenue has improved its system of collecting duties from car manufacturers who import from the United States under the United States-Canada car pact—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I do not want to appear to be too restrictive in respect of questions, but it appears to me this is a question of a very general nature. If there is urgency, and the hon. member seems to be anxious to tell me that there is, perhaps it would be easier to allow the minister to reply.

Mr. Hales: I would like to ask whether any changes have been made in the system of collecting these duties.

Hon. Jean-Pierre Côté (Minister of National Revenue): Not that I know of, Mr. Speaker, but I will verify this.

TRADE

WHEAT—DIFFERENCE IN PRICES TO JAPAN

Mr. A. P. Gleave (Saskatoon-Biggar): Mr. Speaker, because of the absence of the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce I wonder whether the Prime Minister or the Minister without Portfolio from Saskatoon-Humboldt would endeavour to answer this question. In view of the fact that the Japanese food agency is reported to have stated that the United States and Canada have maintained a different scale of prices for wheat for Japan than for European countries, could we be informed whether the Canadian Wheat Board is no longer following the practice of establishing a uniform offering price to all markets?

Inquiries of the Ministry

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the minister of that department hopes to be in the house tomorrow to answer questions. Perhaps the hon. member would ask his question then.

PRICES AND INCOMES COMMISSION

DISCUSSIONS WITH AUTOMOBILE INDUSTRY REGARDING 1970 PRICES

Mr. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. Has the prices and incomes commission had discussion and negotiation with the automobile industry regarding the retail price of 1970 models which are soon to be on the market?

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I am not aware that they have had any discussion on that matter. They do not keep me informed on a daily basis. It might be premature for them to do so until the 1970 models are on the market. The concern of the hon. member's question supports a great number of letters my department has received protesting the high price of cars. I am sure the house would like the car manufacturers to take these protests into account in arriving at prices for the 1970 models.

TAXATION

CAPITAL GAINS—INCLUSION IN WHITE PAPER

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask our happy-looking Minister of Finance a question arising out of his recent statement about the scope of the white paper on taxation. He said the white paper would be devoted to the question of personal and corporate income taxes. Does this mean the question of a capital gains tax is not to be considered in the white paper?

Hon. E. J. Benson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I am afraid my hon. friend will have to wait and see.

Mr. Stanfield: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Can we rely upon the minister's statement being complete when he said the white paper would be concerned only with corporate and personal income taxes? Is that an accurate statement of what the minister has in mind?

Mr. Benson: I think it is fairly close, Mr. Speaker.

[Mr. Gleave.]

HOUSE OF COMMONS

REQUEST FOR STATEMENT WHY HOUSE NOT RESUMING UNTIL OCTOBER

Mr. J. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa-Whitby): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister. In view of the pressing need for legislation on taxation and other matters, will the Prime Minister consider making a statement on motions tomorrow as to why the government intends the house to reconvene in October rather than September as most of us thought was to be the case?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I do not suppose the hon. member's party will ever be in a position to know this, but part of the business of government is prepared and transacted outside parliament.

LABOUR RELATIONS

VANCOUVER, B.C.—POSSIBILITY OF LONGSHOREMEN'S STRIKE

Mr. J. H. Horner (Crowfoot): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Labour.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

An hon. Member: Glad to see you back, Jack.

Mr. Horner: Can the minister inform the house what steps are being taken to avert a strike of Pacific coast longshoremen? The threat of a strike is severely hampering the sale of wheat because it may not be possible to deliver wheat in August. The longshoremen's contract will expire July 31.

Hon. Bryce S. Mackasey (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, the latest information, which I received at noon today, is that talks between the unions and management will be resuming this Friday, since they have had an opportunity for a week to review the report of the conciliation board which was handed down the other day. My information does not indicate that there has been any loss of wheat sales because of the threat of a strike. If the hon. member has anything more tangible to offer in this respect, I will be glad to turn it over to the appropriate minister for investigation.

Mr. Eldon M. Woolliams (Calgary North): Mr. Speaker, in light of the minister's answer, would he discuss this matter with the chairman of the Wheat Board and with the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce, who stated there had been a loss of sales of wheat to Japan? Is the minister doing anything to assist the negotiations which are taking place and to make sure there will be no disruption of shipping in Vancouver harbour, with the consequent loss of further wheat sales?

Mr. Mackasey: Mr. Speaker, I have on several occasions been in communication with the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce about the possibility of the port of Vancouver closing down during the month of August. This is always a possibility, as I have said on many occasions, in the type of democratic country that we have. Under our democratic system strikes are legal. Despite our best efforts there is a possibility that management may not feel it appropriate to pay the unions the sum of money for which they are asking and, conversely, the unions may not be prepared to accept the offer of management. In a democratic country, such as Canada, there is no legislation that prevents anybody exercising their legal right to go on strike or to lock out when and if they have complied with the law as it now exists. In the meantime we are doing everything possible to afford the maximum degree of mediation between both parties to avert such a catastrophe.

Mr. G. H. Aiken (Parry Sound-Muskoka): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Will the Minister of Labour use his good offices to persuade the President of the Privy Council, to continue his negotiations with the opposition?

Mr. Mackasey: Mr. Speaker, I have found in the few cases in which I have been involved that it requires good will on both sides to bring about a settlement.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Mackasey: The only evidence of good will that I have seen has been on this side of the house and not the other. The problem of the President of the Privy Council is to find good will on the part of all parties in attempting to negotiate.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Inquiries of the Ministry

DRUGS

ALLEGED INEFFECTIVENESS OF PRESCRIPTION PRODUCT

Mrs. Grace MacInnis (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. On July 10 the hon. member for Winnipeg North asked the minister whether he would make a statement on motions regarding the study released on July 9, prepared for the United States Food and Drug Directorate, which showed that large numbers of prescription drugs are ineffective. The minister replied that he would be glad to consider making a statement. Is he now prepared to make such a statement and, if not, can he indicate on which day it will be made?

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of National Health and Welfare): I still have that matter under consideration, Mr. Speaker.

NATIONAL REVENUE

INGERSOLL, ONT.—STEPS TO RESTORE CUSTOMS SERVICES

Mr. W. B. Nesbitt (Oxford): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of National Revenue. About two weeks ago I asked the minister a question concerning the closing of the customs port of Ingersoll, Ontario, and the matter was discussed during an adjournment debate. At that time the minister indicated he would be able to reply a little later. Is he now in a position to do so?

Hon. Jean-Pierre Côté (Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, I gave a reply in the adjournment debate. I said I was waiting for more information from the hon. member, which I have received. However, I am not in a position to give a final answer now.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I regret to advise hon. members that it is six o'clock. I apologize to hon. members who have important questions to ask. We may have a longer question period tomorrow. For the moment I have to inform the house that it being six o'clock I do now leave the chair. This house stands adjourned until two o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

At six o'clock the house adjourned, without question put, pursuant to Standing Order.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Thursday, July 24, 1969

The house met at 2 p.m.

PRIVILEGE

MR. HOWARD (SKEENA)—CONFLICT IN ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS

Mr. Frank Howard (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege of which I have given Your Honour notice. The question of privilege relates to answers given to two questions, one of which was provided yesterday, and a return made pursuant to an order passed by the house in February relating to certain correspondence between the government and a public relations firm.

I should like first to refer to the order for return for correspondence between the public relations firm of Berger, Tisdall, Clark and Lesley Limited and the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development. There is within that return, under the heading of "Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development, Indian Affairs Branch", a payment voucher which says in part:

> Pay to: Glendon College Forum
> Cheque to be sent to:
> J. Shelton, Room 790 by August 28, 1968.

The payment voucher also contains the following information:

> Date: 22/8/68
> Interim payment to prepare a report on student attitudes to Indian problems as per attached service contract dated 9/8/68.
> Amount: $500.

One of the questions I asked was whether the report referred to had been completed. I was not sure whether the date "9/8/68" referred to September 8, 1968 or August 9, 1968, so in the earlier instance I inquired with respect to September 8, 1968. The answer I received was:

> This department has no knowledge of any service contract dated September 8, 1968 or any subsequent report on student attitudes to Indian problems pursuant to that service contract.

Thinking I had the wrong date, I rephrased the question and asked again for the information relating to the report on student attitudes to Indian problems pursuant to a service contract dated August 9, 1968. This appeared to be the correct date of the payment voucher. The answer I received was:

> A search of the records has been made and no contract dated August 9, 1968 for the purpose of studying student attitudes to Indian problems was found.

In consequence of the two answers provided, each of which said there was no contract or none could be found, and the information provided in the order for return in the form of a photostatic copy of a payment voucher in the amount of $500 to prepare a report on student attitudes to Indian problems as per attached service contract dated that day, I submit that the privileges of the house have been offended and incorrect information has been provided to the house in the answers to the questions or the answer provided in the order for return. Therefore I believe there is a question of privilege. I wish to make a motion. It is perhaps not written as legibly as Your Honour would like it to be but I move, seconded by the hon. member for Timiskaming (Mr. Peters):

> That the answers to question Nos. 2,096 and 2,466, and a return provided pursuant to the motion for production of papers No. 77, and the apparent conflict between these documents be referred to the Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections.

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Skeena gave the Chair notice of the question of privilege he proposes to bring to the attention of the house at this time. I have given the matter consideration and I have listened with interest to the submissions of the hon. member.

On past occasions we have had the suggestion made to the house that this type of complaint against answers given by ministers legitimately gives rise to a question of privilege. I have very serious doubts about this. Hon. members know there are many precedents to indicate that the failure of a minister or a department to give a reply, or the fact that a member may not be satisfied with an answer given by a minister, or that a member may think that two answers are contradictory, or that the answer given is contrary to the facts, does not do so. All this in my estimation is debatable, and in any event, according to our precedents, has never been a legitimate foundation for questions of privilege and, as far as I can judge such cases have never been the subject of referrals to the Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections. I hesitate to suggest that to the hon. member. I think perhaps his remedy at this time might be to ask the question a third time or seek to have the matter debated. Perhaps there might be some way to clarify the difficulty. But I do not think it would be in order to send this kind of question to the Committee on Privileges and Elections. It seems to me there should be a more effective way to clear up the very legitimate and evident difficulties which the hon. member has met. Perhaps we could have a conversation about it within the next few days and we might be able to find some way in which the matter might be cleared up other than by having this grievance referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

• (2:10 p.m.)

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

PROCEDURE AND ORGANIZATION

FURTHER NOTICE OF IMPOSITION OF CLOSURE ON DEBATE

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, once again, out of an abundance of caution and in the event the motion of which I gave notice yesterday under the provisions of Standing Order 33 is not disposed of in this sitting, I hereby give notice that at the next sitting of the house, immediately before the order of the day is called for resuming the debate on the motion "that the third report of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization be concurred in", and on any amendment or amendment in amendment proposed thereto, I will move that the said debate not be further adjourned.

Mr. Baldwin: Why do you not put it on a perpetual basis?

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

WATER RESOURCES

CANADA-ONTARIO JOINT COMMITTEE—EXTENSION TO OTHER PROVINCES

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Minister without Portfolio responsible for water and energy. Arising from the press release issued by the minister today stating that the governments of Canada and Ontario have agreed to establish a joint committee of senior officials to advise on water management policies and operations including pollution, will the minister advise whether similar arrangements are being made with other provinces and, if not, why not?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister without Portfolio): Yes, Mr. Speaker. It will be our hope to work out similar arrangements with other provinces. I met with the minister from Ontario yesterday and we agreed that this kind of committee should allow for a maximum amount of information and consultation, to ensure that efficient use is made of all our resources in such fields as pollution.

Mr. Stanfield: Mr. Speaker, has the minister entered into any definite discussions with other provinces or has he any firm intentions of entering into such discussions across the country on any regular basis?

Mr. Lang: Mr. Speaker, it would be my intention to enter into such discussions as soon as reasonably possible in this connection and expressly in connection with the proposed new Canada Water Act.

Mr. Stanfield: Will the minister say whether this joint committee is supposed to consider a proposal for diversion of waters in the James Bay area into the Great Lakes?

Mr. Lang: It certainly is not, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. B. Keith Penner (Thunder Bay): I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Can the minister say at this time whether the study of water diversion from north-western Ontario into Lake Superior and the six progress reports which have followed from that study will be tabled in the house before we recess?

Mr. Lang: I cannot give a definite answer to that question. We are looking into the possibility of the publication of these documents but a firm decision has not yet been reached.

POLLUTION

WATER—SIGNING OF AGREEMENT WITH BRITISH COLUMBIA

Mr. Bruce Howard (Okanagan Boundary): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Minister without Portfolio whether he can announce a date in respect of the signing of an agreement between the federal government and the province of British Columbia on a water pollution policy?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister without Portfolio): Mr. Speaker, I cannot announce the date, but I can inform the house that satisfactory progress is being made.

TRADE

WHEAT—DIFFERENCE IN PRICES TO JAPAN

Mr. A. P. Gleave (Saskatoon-Biggar): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask a question of the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce related to one I asked yesterday. In view of reports that the Japanese are refusing to buy Canadian wheat because they claim there is an adverse price differential between the prices quoted to Japan and those quoted to European markets, will the minister say whether wheat is being offered at different price levels in the European and Japanese markets?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): Mr. Speaker, debate on this subject is normal. It is customary for buyers to believe that the price is too high. It is very seldom that sellers believe that the price is too high. Consultation is taking place between the Canadian Wheat Board and the Japanese buyers in respect of this matter. If the hon. member wants a copy of the price schedule of the Wheat Board I will be glad to give him one.

Mr. Gleave: Is the Wheat Board departing from its standard practice of quoting each day the same prices to customers?

Mr. Pepin: No, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. George Muir (Lisgar): Is it true that one of the reasons Japan is not placing orders for Canadian wheat is the expected labour trouble in the Vancouver area next month?

Mr. Pepin: There is no strike yet but businesses are usually affected by even the threat of a strike like this one.

COMPETITIVE POSITION OF REDUCED WHEAT BOARD PRICES

Hon. D. S. Harkness (Calgary Centre): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce whether the recent decrease in the quoted prices of our wheat has put Canada in competition with the United States, particularly in view of the large decrease of 12 cents a bushel they put into effect?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): That is debatable, Mr. Speaker.

Inquiries of the Ministry

Mr. John Burton (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, in view of the drop in wheat prices during the last week, and in view of the fact that the International Grains Arrangement is regarded by the government as representing a commitment on the part of Canada, is the government now considering implementing a price guarantee to farmers based on the International Grains Arrangement minimum price?

Mr. Pepin: The answer is the same as on previous occasions, Mr. Speaker.

[Translation]

NATIONAL PARKS

QUEBEC—INQUIRY AS TO SECOND PARK

Mr. Gérard Laprise (Abitibi): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development.

Could he tell us whether negotiations have begun with the Quebec government with regard to the establishment of a second national park in the Eastern Townships, more exactly in the Mauricie?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Mr. Speaker, as a matter of fact, I met with Mr. Loubier yesterday and we discussed the matter of national parks in the province of Quebec in general.

[English]

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

DIPLOMATIC EXCHANGE WITH THE VATICAN

Hon. George Hees (Prince Edward-Hastings): Mr. Speaker, the right hon. Prime Minister said a few months ago that he was particularly enthusiastic about the idea of establishing diplomatic relations with the Vatican. We have heard no news about this matter during the intervening months. Is it his intention to proceed with this plan, or has it been abandoned.

An hon. Member: Do you want to go, George?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I am not sure this is an urgent matter, but perhaps the right hon. Prime Minister might want to reply.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): No final decision has been taken as yet in this regard, Mr. Speaker.

Inquiries of the Ministry

Mr. Hees: Is the reason for the delay that the Vatican is showing the same kind of enthusiasm to being recognized by Canada as Red China is at the present time?

COMBINES

RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN C.N.-C.P. TELECOMMUNICATIONS AND COMPUTER SCIENCES CANADA LIMITED

Mr. Gordon Ritchie (Dauphin): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs whether he and his department are considering an investigation in respect of the relationship between C.N.-C.P. Telecommunications and Computer Sciences Canada Limited to ascertain whether it is in the nature of a monopoly and whether continued development may not be in the best interests of the Canadian public?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I suggest that the hon. member is inviting a very general statement which normally should be made on motions. I will not suggest to the hon. member that his question be placed on the order paper because this would show a lack of confidence in respect of what may happen in the next few days. But I do not think the question can be asked at this time.

FINANCE

INCREASE IN FINANCE COMPANY INTEREST RATES—EXTENSION OF FEDERAL JURISDICTION

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Minister of Finance. Yesterday the minister said he was pleased that the banks had so far resisted any temptation to raise interest rates. Three of the major finance companies yesterday raised their interest rates, which may have an effect upon the decision of the banks. Has the minister had conversation with the near-banks with respect to holding interest rates at their present level, as he has with the chartered banks?

Hon. E. J. Benson (Minister of Finance): No, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Does the minister intend to hold conversations with the major finance companies in view of the fact that if they continue to raise interest rates it will create problems for the minister in holding the level of interest rates generally?

[Mr. Trudeau.]

Mr. Benson: Mr. Speaker, I hope that lenders will contain their interest rates as much as possible. My hon. friend knows there is a difference in the relationship between the government of Canada and the banks, and the government of Canada and finance companies which may be incorporated provincially or federally.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, may I ask a final supplementary question? I am, of course, aware of the situation the minister has outlined. In view of the fact that the government refused to implement the recommendation of the Porter Commission to bring near-banks under the control of the Bank Act, is the minister prepared to announce to the finance companies that he will, if necessary, implement the recommendation of the Porter Commission which would bring near-banks under federal jurisdiction?

Mr. Benson: Mr. Speaker, this would of course be a major policy decision which would be made only after consultation with my colleagues and announced in the normal fashion.

CHARTERED BANKS—ASSURANCE RESPECTING INTEREST RATES

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I ask the Minister of Finance whether, in view of his communications with the banks through the Governor of the Bank of Canada, he has received any assurance from the banks that they will avoid further increasing their interest rates?

Hon. E. J. Benson (Minister of Finance): Not really, Mr. Speaker. All I see are the actions that have been taken. As my hon. friend knows, I am not in continuous contact with the banks; my contact with them is generally through the Governor of the Bank of Canada.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

SUMMERSIDE, P.E.I.—REPRESENTATIONS RESPECTING POSSIBLE CLOSING OF BASE—ASSISTANCE TO DISPLACED

Hon. J. A. MacLean (Malpeque): Mr. Speaker, I should like to address a question to the Minister of National Defence. Can he assure the house that no irrevocable decision will be taken regarding the future of the Canadian forces base at Summerside until the submissions of a delegation from Prince Edward Island, led by the premier of that province, are received on Monday, I believe it is, and given full weight in the making of any decision?

Hon. Léo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I can make the commitment that I will very gladly receive the premier of the province and discuss this problem with him whenever it is feasible for both of us to do so.

Mr. MacLean: Mr. Speaker, I thank the minister for that assurance. Will similar arrangements be made in respect of other provincial governments that wish to take similar action?

Mr. Cadieux (Labelle): Mr. Speaker, the case of each base is different and I do not think calls for the same kind of treatment.

Mr. MacLean: Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask one more supplementary question on this very important matter. I address it to the Prime Minister. Will the Right Honourable Prime Minister assure the house that before any closure takes place the government will implement measures to compensate as far as humanly possible for any economic hardship that may be caused to the people and communities concerned?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I would not give that undertaking in respect of any closure, because it is conceivable that in some areas closure would not have the significant consequences about which the hon. member is concerned. But in cases where there would be significant hardship, as the hon. member says, I can give an undertaking that the government would not proceed with the closure without having considered alternative ways of alleviating that hardship.

Mr. MacLean: I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I want to thank the Prime Minister for his assurance and say, by way of clarification, that I had in mind areas that are heavily dependent economically on the existence of defence bases.

Mr. Trudeau: If that is the case, we would give the type of consideration which the hon. member is suggesting before making any announcement of such closures. We do realize that some bases are not economic units and if any such bases were closed in less developed parts of Canada we hope that they would be linked to some other action by the government to ensure that growth centres spring up in the areas where closure is contemplated.

Hon. George Hees (Prince Edward-Hastings): I have a supplementary question for the Prime Minister. In view of the fact he stated that in cases where bases are closed down the government will do everything it possibly can to ease the situation imposed on those who are affected, would he initiate this policy with regard to Camp Picton which is practically closed down now and where nothing whatsoever has been done to ease the situation of the 1500 people who are affected?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Hon. members will recognize that we are now getting involved in the field of individual stations. I wonder whether this is what hon. members want to do. Now that the hon. member has made his representation I think we should go on to another subject.

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Dartmouth-Halifax East): My supplementary question is directed to the Minister of National Defence. Can he tell us whether or not he is still able to adhere to the August 1 deadline for the announcement of the reported 15 or up to 15 bases that are going to be closed? While he is on his feet, could he also give some indication as to the progress achieved by him and his colleagues in the formulation of an interim program of financial assistance where the economic impact will be quite severe?

Mr. Speaker: The minister should be allowed to answer the first part of the question. However, it seems to me that the second part is too wide in scope and would require a statement on motions.

Mr. Cadieux (Labelle): Mr. Speaker, may I say with your permission, first that we have never contemplated closing 15 bases. This is an exaggeration. I should like to say in reply to the first part of the question that there is not much hope that I can meet the August 1 deadline. There is a possibility, but it is rather remote. However, this is not a bad indication.

Mr. Forrestall: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. The purport of the second part of my question was not to ask for an explanation but rather for a yes or no reply on whether or not the minister and his colleagues have arrived at a workable formula, and not necessarily to explain the formula.

Mr. Cadieux (Labelle): I could say that we are pretty close to it, Mr. Speaker.

Inquiries of the Ministry

INFORMATION

REQUEST FOR TABLING OF REPORT

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, may I refer to a question asked me yesterday by the hon. member for Frontenac-Lennox and Addington in which he referred to a secret report of the task force on information. I answered that I knew of no such secret report. I do want to make it clear to the house that I told the house a couple of weeks ago there was a task force on information which had reported to me, and of course I am not denying the existence of that particular report. However, if the hon. member had something else in mind in terms of a secret report, I do not know of it.

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question to the Prime Minister arising out of his answer with respect to the task force on information. Is it the government's intention to make that report public in view of the importance of the subject matter?

Mr. Trudeau: We do intend to have parliament discuss this subject. Whether it will be by discussing the task force report or some other government decision has not yet been decided by the government.

THE CANADIAN ECONOMY

EFFORTS TO COMBAT RISING COST OF LIVING

Mr. Barry Mather (Surrey): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. Having in mind the most recently announced increase in the cost of living index, is consideration being given to increasing the efforts of his department to combat this situation?

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): We are always considering ways of making my effective department more effective.

Mr. Hees: Don't strain your wrist patting yourself on the back.

Mr. Basford: The government recently appointed the Prices and Incomes Commission which is now at work in Ottawa. I shall be meeting with them this afternoon, for example, to consider how their work can be carried out most effectively.

Mr. A. D. Hales (Wellington): Now that the hon. gentleman's colleague, the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce, has accepted a lower price for wheat on behalf of the western farmer, will the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs see that this lower price is passed to the consumer by having the price of bread reduced?

Mr. Speaker: Order.

DRUGS

SALES TAX REMOVAL—PASSING ON OF BENEFIT TO CONSUMERS

Mr. Max Saltsman (Waterloo): Mr. Speaker, this question is addressed to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs and it relates to the rise in the cost of living. In the light of the minister's reply to my question the other day, when he told the house that pharmaceutical prices fell only 5¼ per cent after the 12 per cent sales tax was dropped, does he intend to institute an investigation to discover why the full sales tax reduction was not passed on to the consumer?

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): The progressive action taken by the government involved the removal of the sales tax at the manufacturers' level, and 11 per cent at the manufacturers' level is not 11 per cent at the retail level.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): In view of the seriousness of this question, would the minister consider bringing forward government order 91 which would at least have the effect of setting up the joint committee of this house and the other place on price stability, incomes and employment so that the committee could commence its work early in September?

Mr. Basford: I believe the President of the Privy Council dealt with that question the other day.

Mr. Hees: A supplementary to the question—

Mr. Speaker: Order. I take the liberty of reminding hon. members that we shall soon be running out of time. Many members did not have a chance to ask questions yesterday and perhaps we should try to give them an opportunity today.

Mr. Hees: Mr. Speaker, a supplementary question to the question asked—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. We might return to this question after we have allowed other members an opportunity to take part.

TRADE

VENEZUELA—REFUSAL TO GRANT IMPORT LICENCE FOR PETROLEUM TANK WAGONS

Mr. John L. Skoberg (Moose Jaw): I have a question for the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce, Mr. Speaker. In view of the Venezuelan government's decision not to grant an import licence for the delivery of petroleum tank wagons manufactured at a Regina, Saskatchewan plant, and inasmuch Canadian imports from that country are some $255 million higher than our exports to it, can the minister say whether any representations have been made to the government of Venezuela in connection with this incident?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): We are trying not to look at trade in bilateral terms; we are defenders of a mutilateral trade system. However in view of the wide imbalance in trade between the two countries, Venezuela has been made aware on a number of occasions that we are looking toward a strengthening of imports by Venezuela from Canada.

Mr. Skoberg: Has any assurance been received from that government that further consideration will be given to Canadian imports?

Mr. Pepin: The Venezuelan minister for mines and hydrocarbons was here three or four weeks ago. The minister without portfolio from Saskatchewan and I met with him; I had a list of items which we believed could be exported from Canada to Venezuela, profitably for both countries, and I can give the hon. member a copy of that list if he is interested.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

TAIWAN—INQUIRY AS TO PERMANENT TRADE COMMISSIONER

Mr. Paul Yewchuk (Athabasca): My question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs, Mr. Speaker. I want to know whether Canada has a permanent trade commissioner in Taiwan.

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): No, Mr. Speaker. There is no Canadian representative in Taiwan.

Mr. Yewchuk: In view of the fact that the Taiwan minister of economic affairs has indicated that Taiwan is interested in buying Canadian wheat, would the minister consider sending a permanent trade commissioner there?

Inquiries of the Ministry

Mr. Sharp: The Canadian Wheat Board is very successful in selling wheat to countries in which we do not have trade commissioners and I am sure it will be equally successful this time, if business can be done.

[Translation]

DOMINION-PROVINCIAL RELATIONS

REPRESENTATION OF FEDERAL GOVERNMENT AT PROVINCIAL PREMIERS' CONFERENCE

Hon. Martial Asselin (Charlevoix): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Prime Minister.

I would like to know if the provincial premiers have forwarded an invitation to the federal government in order that it may be represented by observers at the next provincial conference which will be held in Quebec soon? If so, will the government send observers and does the Prime Minister know what the agenda will be?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, when provincial premiers meet they do it, of course, without any official representation from the federal government. However, they have the courtesy and the good sense to ask us to send observers. Actually, we have selected some observers who will attend the conference to be held in Quebec.

[English]

ELECTIONS

REQUEST FOR EQUAL VOTING PRIVILEGES FOR IMMIGRANTS

Mr. Jack Cullen (Sarnia): I have a question for the Secretary of State. In view of the fact that all immigrants contribute equally to Canadian welfare, would the government consider bringing in legislation to give equal voting privileges to all Canadian immigrants?

Mr. Speaker: Order. I realize that the hon. member is referring to an important matter, but I wonder if it is urgent. I do not suppose he is referring to new legislation during the present term of the current session. I hope not.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

DISARMAMENT CONFERENCE—CANADIAN POSITION RESPECTING BIOLOGICAL AND CHEMICAL WARFARE

Mr. David Lewis (York South): I should like to direct a question to the Secretary of State for External Affairs, Mr. Speaker. Last Monday, I think it was, I asked the hon. gentleman a question with regard to the position of the Canadian representative at the disarmament conference with regard to biological and chemical warfare weaponry. The minister said the matter was of such importance that he would like to be able to give a precise answer. Accordingly, he took the question as notice. Can he be precise, or general, but informative today?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): I thank the hon. gentleman for asking this question. I was about to rise and endeavour to catch your eye, Mr. Speaker, so that I might answer it. The Canadian position will be outlined in more detail at the conference which is now proceeding in Geneva, but I can assure the hon. member that we welcome the British initiative in the search for supplementary measures which will strengthen existing agreements and preclude the use of chemical and biological agents in warfare.

Mr. Lewis: In view of reports, which had not reached my notice when I first asked this question, that the British proposal relates only to biological warfare and does not concern chemical warfare weaponry, will the minister instruct our representative in Geneva to insist that chemical warfare be included as part of the agenda for discussion and in the eventual protocol?

Mr. Sharp: One of the reasons I did not go further in supporting the British initiative is that in our opinion it does not go far enough. It would be our intention to press for even stronger measures in both the chemical and biological fields.

Mr. Lewis: Can the minister make certain that members of this house obtain as quickly as possible a copy of the statement to be made by Mr. Ignatieff, I imagine, at the conference on this subject?

Mr. Sharp: To the extent that it is not a confidential document, I shall endeavour to do so.

FINANCE

REQUEST FOR WRITE-OFF OF PAN-AMERICAN GAMES DEFICIT

Mr. Robert Simpson (Churchill): I have a question for the Prime Minister, Mr. Speaker. In view of the fact that during the past five months the federal government has approved capital expenditures in Quebec totalling some $1¼ billion, including a $125 million write-off in connection with Expo, would the right hon. gentleman seriously consider writing off the deficit on the Pan-American Games in Winnipeg amounting to some $600,000?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The question as asked seems to be argumentative in intent and I do not think it can be accepted. The hon. member for Hillsborough.

Mr. Simpson: Mr. Speaker, may I rephrase the question?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Hillsborough.

INDUSTRY

IRISH MOSS—ASSISTANCE IN ESTABLISHING EXTRACTING PLANT

Mr. Heath Macquarrie (Hillsborough): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion. I apologize to him for my late notice and for sending that notice in long hand. That may be a grievous error. The question is about the Irish moss industry and arises from an encouraging answer to a question on the order paper the other day. Can he advise whether he and his department are co-operating with the Prince Edward Island government in efforts toward encouraging the establishment of an extracting plant in Prince Edward Island?

Hon. Jean Marchand (Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I am vaguely aware of this but I think I should ask for a more precise report. The hon. member may be sure that we will co-operate to the fullest extent if this man is serious.

GRAIN

WHEAT—CLOSING OF CROP YEAR, PRODUCER DELIVERIES

Mr. S. J. Korchinski (Mackenzie): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce. Is it still the intention of the Wheat Board to close the present crop year at the end of the month? At that time will the new prices for the fall be available? Also, may I ask whether any plan has been worked out with the Wheat Board so that the full five-bushel quota may be delivered by producers?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): Mr. Speaker, no statement has been made with respect to the extension of the crop year by the Wheat Board or the government.

Mr. Korchinski: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Will the minister please answer the second part of my question as to the initial prices that will be available for next year, because I do not think any price has been announced for next year?

Mr. Pepin: Mr. Speaker, as far back as 1962, if my memory serves me correctly, initial payments were not announced until about August 6. I hope to be able to do as well this year.

Mr. John Burton (Regina East): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Has the Canadian Wheat Board received representations from the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool to allow farmers to receive the cash equivalent of a five-bushel delivery quota, whether or not it is delivered by July 31? If so, does the government or the Wheat Board intend to adopt this proposal?

Mr. Pepin: Mr. Speaker, if that suggestion has been made to me by the pool the hon. member mentioned or another organization I do not remember. In any event, no decision has yet been made upon that subject.

Mr. A. B. Douglas (Assiniboia): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Have the government or the Wheat Board any plans to take care of those many farmers who will definitely not be able to deliver the promised five-bushel quota by the end of August?

Mr. Pepin: Mr. Speaker, suggestions are being studied. The hon. member has made five at least, and the Wheat Board has been considering every one of them. I have a study outlining the advantages and disadvantages of many of these suggestions. The Wheat Board will make an announcement in due course.

Mr. Paul Yewchuk (Athabasca): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Could the minister tell us what steps Canada has taken within the past two or three months to sell wheat to Nationalist China?

Mr. Pepin: Mr. Speaker, I was waiting for that question.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Inquiries of the Ministry

POLLUTION

REQUEST FOR TASK FORCE TO STUDY PROBLEM

Mr. Randolph Harding (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Prime Minister. In view of the increasingly grave problems facing many sections of Canada because of the widespread pollution of our environment, will he consider setting up a task force to examine every aspect of the problem so that it may report to the house its findings and make recommendations for action?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): The government is not convinced, Mr. Speaker, that the setting up of another task force will be the answer to this problem. Too often the setting up of a task force is criticized by the opposition.

Mr. Lewis: Why stop now?

Mr. Trudeau: Because we are looking at the alternatives at our disposal to solve this problem. It is our intention, during the life of the present parliament, to grapple with this problem in a thorough way.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

LABOUR CONDITIONS

SUMMER EMPLOYMENT FOR STUDENTS—POSITION IN WESTERN CANADA

Mr. Eldon M. Woolliams (Calgary North): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Minister of Manpower and Immigration. Some days ago I asked him to report about the matter of students from outside western Canada seeking summer employment in the west, thus displacing western students from potential jobs. Twenty per cent of the students attending the University of Saskatchewan have not been able to find summer work this year. That is a high percentage for that university and the same thing is true of other western universities. Has the minister a statement to make about students from other parts of Canada coming to the west and taking jobs which might be filled by western students?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The answer to that question ought to be given by way of a statement on motions. Perhaps the question might be asked in that way, with that in mind.

Mr. Woolliams: Mr. Speaker, I do not want to get into an argument with anyone but the minister said he would look into the matter and answer. Perhaps he might be allowed to do so.

Inquiries of the Ministry

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, my hon. friend asked a question the other day about the movement of large numbers of students from other parts of Canada to the west. I have checked and I do not find that there has been any government sponsored movement of students from other parts into the west. I know that students from the Atlantic provinces have been placed on farms in the west, but relatively small numbers are involved. As my hon. friend no doubt realizes, we have freedom of movement in this country and students may go from one part of the country to another. For example, there are certain hotel resorts in the west to which many students from all parts of Canada have customarily gone for summer jobs, and that seems to me a highly desirable state of affairs. We should like to take more westerners on in the Atlantic provinces.

Mr. A. D. Alkenbrack (Frontenac-Lennox and Addington): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Since in many cases persons under 18 years of age are not covered by workmen's compensation, has the minister made sure that these students working in various provinces are covered by workmen's compensation?

Mr. MacEachen: No, Mr. Speaker. The question of workmen's compensation is not a responsibility of my department.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

ALLEGED HARASSMENT OF CANADIANS OF GREEK ORIGIN

Mr. R. Gordon L. Fairweather (Fundy-Royal): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. What are the results of the investigation into allegations that Canadians of Greek origin are being harassed by agents of the military government of Greece?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, we have been investigating this matter for some time. The information we have on the subject is certainly not very conclusive. It does not support the charges which have been made. We are inclined to the view that the information we have is inadequate and therefore I would hesitate to give more of an answer on this occasion.

TORTURING OF GREEK POLITICAL PRISONERS

Mr. Andrew Brewin (Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, the Secretary of State for External Affairs said he would look into allegations, contained in the report of the Salzburg committee on human rights, that 15 Greek women political prisoners have been tortured. Has he done so? If so, could he give us an explanation of this matter?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I understand that the European Commission on Human Rights is currently seized of these and other similar charges brought before its investigating committee, which will no doubt make a judgment on the allegations of torture of the 15 women prisoners. In the meantime the Canadian government is not in a position to make any useful comment. Indeed, the matter is in a sense sub judice. It will wish to consider its own attitude in the light of the report of the commission, which is expected to be made public this fall.

CRIMINAL CODE

RECORD OF ABORTIONS PERFORMED

Mr. P. B. Rynard (Simcoe North): Mr. Speaker, may I address a question to the Minister of Justice. As he will be making his announcement about the omnibus Criminal Code bill after the house has recessed, will he assure the house that the Department of National Health and Welfare will have available a record of all abortions performed pursuant to the provisions of Bill C-150?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I do not think a question of that sort should be put. It might be interpreted as being argumentative. The hon. member for Nickel Belt.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Is the hon. member for Simcoe North rising on a supplementary question?

Mr. Rynard: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. May I ask the Minister of Justice if records will be kept?

Hon. John N. Turner (Minister of Justice): They will be, Mr. Speaker, in so far as we can keep them.

[Translation]

REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT

NORTHERN ONTARIO—REQUEST FOR ANNOUNCEMENT OF DESIGNATED REGIONS

Mr. Gaétan-J. Serré (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask a question to the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion, concerning his new program of industrial incentives.

Since anxiety prevails in northern Ontario, where people have been awaiting for a long time some assistance that would encourage secondary industries to settle in the area, is the minister in a position to tell the house what regions will be designated, particularly in northern Ontario?

Hon. Jean Marchand (Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): Unfortunately, Mr. Speaker, I am not yet in a position to make an announcement, but I hope I can do it very shortly.

[English]

INQUIRY OF THE MINISTRY

Mr. Donald MacInnis (Cape Breton-East Richmond): I have a question for the Secretary of State, Mr. Speaker. Because of resignations at the National Arts Centre, I ask the Secretary of State whether Mademoiselle Madeleine Gobeil is still a director of the National Arts Centre and have other personal friends of the Prime Minister been appointed?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Broadview.

Mr. MacInnis: Possibly I could put a supplementary to the Prime Minister.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

CRIMINAL LAW REFORM

REPORT OF OUIMET COMMISSION

Mr. John Gilbert (Broadview): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Justice. Has the minister received a copy of the report of the Ouimet Commission on criminal law reform? If so, is it his intention to table same?

Hon. John N. Turner (Minister of Justice): I think under its particular terms of reference that report would be directed to the Solicitor General in the first instance.

Mr. Gilbert: May I direct the same question to the Solicitor General, Mr. Speaker? Has the minister received a copy of the Ouimet Commission report on criminal law reform and will he table the same?

Hon. G. J. McIlraith (Solicitor General): Yes, Mr. Speaker. I received copies of the report in English. When it is translated and available, the question of tabling will be decided. I anticipate it will not be tabled in this part of the session.

HUMAN RIGHTS

CO-OPERATION BETWEEN DEPARTMENT OF LABOUR AND ONTARIO COMMISSION

Mr. Lincoln M. Alexander (Hamilton West): My question is for the Minister of Labour. Is his department co-operating with and/or having discussions with the Ontario Human Rights Commission in the province of Ontario which is at present investigating charges of discrimination in the national capital area? If so, to what extent? I ask this question notwithstanding the fact there may be some constitutional grounds on which this government feels it should not be involved.

Hon. Bryce S. Mackasey (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, the hon. member has quite aptly pointed out the constitutional problem. I am sure he will be pleased to know there is the maximum degree of communication between my department and the various agencies charged with this responsibility in the provincial field. There is the maximum degree of co-operation and communication despite constitutional barriers.

Mr. Alexander: A supplementary—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. We have just about reached the end of the question period. I hoped the Chair might have the opportunity of recognizing two or three other members quickly.

Mr. Alexander: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, because I have been so quiet for the past three or four days I thought I would have the opportunity to ask a supplementary. Am I to take it from the minister's answer that at the present time during these investigations his department is in dialogue and having consultations with representatives of the Ontario Human Rights Commission?

Mr. Mackasey: I am sure the hon. member will agree with me that no responsible department, federal or provincial, would want to hide behind the constitution in an area as important as discrimination. We are not trying to evade our responsibility. We feel we have a moral obligation to communicate and co-operate with all provinces in this sensitive area.

Mr. Speaker: Orders of the day.

Business of the House

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Baldwin: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker, and it is a perfectly innocent one. It is the usual Thursday afternoon question. I wanted to ask the President of the Privy Council, who I congratulate for feeling free to wear the white flower of innocence, what the nature of the business will be for the rest of this week and next week. I understand some government members are having problems with their travel plans.

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): I am very hopeful we might in fact be able to dispose of all the remaining business for this part of the session, if not at the close of this sitting day—

Mr. Baldwin: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Will the hon. gentleman give some indication possibly later today or tomorrow of the means he will use to acquaint hon. members with the nature of the business to be discussed when we come back—on the assumption there will be an adjournment rather than prorogation, so that members will be fully prepared for the business which will face them when the session resumes next fall?

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): I can assure the house there will be an adjournment. It is proposed that the final day of this session will be used for the purpose of completing committee reports and other business and we will then go right into adjournment. The contemplated day of resumption, subject to any contingencies that might arise, would be October 22 as indicated in the motion for adjournment.

PROCEDURE AND ORGANIZATION

MOTION THAT DEBATE BE NOT FURTHER ADJOURNED

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the provisions of Standing Order 33 I move, seconded by Mr. McIlraith:

That the debate on the motion that the third report of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization presented to the house—

Some hon. Members: Order, order.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. G. H. Aiken (Parry Sound-Muskoka): On a point of order, Mr. Speaker—I was waiting for Your Honour to call orders of the day—

[Mr. Speaker.]

An hon. Member: He did it.

Mr. Aiken: With all due respect they have been called for the last 40 minutes.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I had called orders of the day because the question period had expired two and a half minutes before that time. I had allowed the hon. member for Hamilton West (Mr. Alexander) to ask a supplementary question. In any event I will certainly recognize the hon. member on a point of order.

Mr. Aiken: I have a point of order to raise, Mr. Speaker, of which I have given Your Honour notice. It is in connection with the notice given by the President of the Privy Council as it appears in Votes and Proceedings for July 22, that is, the notice that he will move under Standing Order 33.

Very briefly, Mr. Speaker, my argument is that the minister cannot give notice of two motions at the same time under the Standing Order. I contend that he has given notice of closure of the debate that we are now engaged in, that is on the amendment moved by the hon. member for Peace River (Mr. Baldwin), and also on the main motion which is the committee report.

The reason I raise this at this time is twofold. First, I contend the notice given by the minister was invalid because it attempted to do something he could not legally do. Second, even if it is not considered invalid by Your Honour, it can apply only to the amendment which is being considered and upon which the debate is being resumed, and cannot apply to the main motion. I wish to point out that closure is a procedure by which the basic and fundamental right of free speech is restricted. It must therefore be interpreted very strictly. If there is any doubt, it should not be applied against freedom of speech.

I present the proposition that there is considerable doubt in our rules about whether this motion can be moved to cover both the amendment and the main motion. I wish to read Rule 33 as it relates to a debate being held while the house is sitting with the Speaker in the Chair. It reads as follows:

Immediately before the order of the day for resuming an adjourned debate is called, or if the house be in committee of the whole, any Minister of the Crown who, standing in his place, shall have given notice at a previous sitting of his intention so to do may move that the debate shall not be further adjourned,—

That is the part of the rule which relates to the sitting while the Speaker is in the Chair. There is a second part to Rule 33 which relates to closure while the house is in committee of the whole, which does not apply in this case. I point this out because the rule goes on to refer to:

—further consideration of any resolution or resolutions, clause or clauses, section or sections, preamble or preambles, title or titles,—

• (3:00 p.m.)

This applies only when the house is in committee. Therefore, in the first place, Standing Order 33 applies only, as I read it, to the debate when the Speaker is in the Chair. The adjourned debate which we are considering at this time is a debate on the amendment and not on the main motion. I am contending that is all that can be affected at this time by closure.

I should like to make a reference to the British practice because our rule 33 does not cover the situation where two motions are being considered. In cases where our rule does not cover a situation we are entitled to look at the British practice, which is set out in Standing Order No. 1. The British practice is that on a closure motion only the amendment can be moved for closure under one motion. I am referring to May's sixteenth edition. I refer to that because all the seventeenth editions are out, but the reference is the same in both editions. It is referred to at page 479.

In the British practice there is a special provision, subsection (2) of the closure rule, which is called closure of contingent questions. The British practice assumed there could only be closure on the amendment, but a subclause of that rule states that under certain circumstances the Speaker could permit a second closure to be moved upon the main motion. I am pointing out that there had to be a special rule to that effect under the British practice. Therefore the rule as it stands in the British practice, and as we have adopted it in this house, is that closure can apply only to the one amendment on which debate is being considered, and if further closure is required it would have to be under a second notice and second motion. I am mentioning this only because our own rule does not cover the situation. It merely says "an adjourned debate". This is what we are considering now. The adjourned debate is the debate on the amendment.

Finally I should like to refer to the flag debate because I am anticipating someone may say that the practice adopted there covers our present situation. In the flag debate we were considering a committee report and we were considering an amendment. Closure was moved on both the amendment and the main motion, and it was so put.

I want to point out two distinctions between the flag debate and this debate. The first is there was no ruling whatever made by Mr. Speaker in that instance, or requested by anyone when the procedure was followed. In other words the matter was not raised. It proceeded at that time by acquiescence of the house to a vote.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I may have been a little doubtful about my ground yesterday but Your Honour's decision in connection with the motion moved by the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) has strengthened my case very much. I should like to read Your Honour's ruling of yesterday in connection with the hon. member's motion under another rule. The hon. member for Calgary North referred to an adjournment which was made on a previous occasion on which no ruling had been made by the Chair. At page 11510 of Hansard in the second column, Your Honour, in referring to this debate, said:

—no ruling whatsoever was made by the Chair when this matter first came up when the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre first proposed his motion. As he knows, this is a very new type of motion; it was new to the extent of having been difficult for the Chair alone, or with the assistance of the Table officials, to accept or refuse the motion, but in view of the fact that no objection had been made to it the motion was put to the house. So I do not feel bound by anything because actually there was no ruling. A question was simply put to the house, and this is my view, one which I hold very strongly.

So I suggest that the flag debate could not be considered a precedent in this particular instance because a question was not raised at that time. It was a procedure which was followed apparently by acquiescence.

The second distinction is that Standing Order 33 has been amended since the flag debate was ended by closure. The amendments are not extensive but they do, I suggest, clarify the situation.

At the time of the flag debate Standing Order 33 included closure in committee of the whole as it related to supply and ways and means. There was a very long and complicated section. When these rules were revised last December rule 33 was altered in such a way as to make it very clear there are two procedures to be followed, one when the Speaker is in the chair and the other when the house is in committee of the whole. The clause which might have been difficult to interpret at the time of the flag debate is much more clear now. It is clear to the point where it includes only the debate on the matter which we are now considering. So, therefore, I would say if there was any sort of a precedent established at the time of the flag debate that precedent does not necessarily apply at all now.

That is the burden of my point of order. I think it is an extremely important one because if the government can now move closure on amendments without any limit—and that is the effect of the notice the President of the Privy Council has given—then there would be a much broader application of Standing Order 33 than I feel is justified. It is a very heavy handed rule, to be used only in very extreme circumstances which, incidentally, we do not think apply at this time; but nevertheless it is a very extreme rule and I suggest that it should be applied with extreme caution. In this particular case it is quite clear that the debate we are considering is not a debate on the main motion but merely a debate on the amendment, and my contention is that that is as far as the closure rule should apply at this time.

Mr. Speaker: Order please. I do not want to cut off debate and I tried to establish the practice yesterday of allowing all hon. members, who feel they have a constructive and positive contribution to make to these debates on points of order, to make their contributions, and I am prepared to hear such contributions at the present time. However, as the hon. member for Parry Sound-Muskoka (Mr. Aiken) indicated he was generous enough, as usual, to advise the Chair in advance of the very important point he was going to raise today. I have given the matter extremely careful consideration. With the assistance of the advisers to the Chair many hours have been spent poring over procedents, and I am inclined in the light of the arguments of the hon. member for Parry Sound-Muskoka, to give a ruling now. However, I am also inclined to wait for a moment to see whether hon. members have a contribution to make in respect of the point of order.

[Mr. Aiken.]

• (3:10 p.m.)

Hon. D. S. Harkness (Calgary Centre): Mr. Speaker, I should like to support the proposition put forward by the hon. member for Parry Sound-Muskoka (Mr. Aiken). I do not do so on technical grounds, but on the broader ground of the intention of this rule, and general grounds of logic and reason.

If a motion can be moved imposing closure on a main motion, such as the one under consideration, and also on the amendment which has been moved to that main motion, what this means is that no members, except the member who moved the amendment and the minister, will have an opportunity to speak on the motion itself. In other words all the discussion we have had so far has been on the amendment moved by the hon. member for Peace River (Mr. Baldwin). There has been no discussion on the main motion itself.

If this application of closure is applied today on the motion and the amendment itself, this means that every member of this house, except the hon. member for Peace River who introduced the amendment, will be precluded from speaking on the main motion. I do not think there ever was any intention, as far as the rule of closure was concerned, to create a situation in which members were to be precluded from speaking on a motion before the house.

I submit to Your Honour that on the general grounds of reason and logic it would be inappropriate and contrary to the general rules of debate in this chamber to allow a motion of closure covering both the main motion and the amendment, the amendment being the only matter which has been discussed.

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West): I intend only to add one point which I think Your Honour must consider and take into account. This concerns the effect of your interpretation of Standing Order 33. At the present report stage we must consider that the motion is to adopt the said report. There may be a number of amendments put forward to Your Honour, some of which are on the order paper. If the debate on the first items becomes protracted the first notice of closure is put forward, and then the minister conceivably closes off the consideration of every other amendment. This is why I feel the suggestion made the other day by the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield) in respect of this whole question relating to Standing Order 33 should be given much closer attention, in order to bring it more in keeping with our procedures of today. This should not limit debate merely to the proposals put forward by the government in respect of a particular debate. It is for that reason I share the difficulties of my colleague, the hon. member for Parry Sound-Muskoka (Mr. Aiken). To me Rule 33 is very questionable and imprecise at the present time.

I put this additional argument to Your Honour in order that your ruling, whatever it might be, will not exclude or settle the question which I feel has not been investigated or considered. I refer to Standing Order 33 which has to do with stages other than the report stage. I put to Your Honour that this rule is fraught with pitfalls, particularly as to the extent set forth.

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (Rosedale): Mr. Speaker, I will be brief in reply to the three points raised by the hon. member for Parry Sound-Muskoka (Mr. Aiken). First, with regard to his interpretation based on the British rule, I think it is fair to note that the British Standing Order 33 expressly talks about a question in the singular, while Standing Order 33 here in its final three lines refers to all such questions as may be decided. So, it is quite clear this rule is intended to cover all possible questions included in the order.

Secondly in respect of the amendment to Standing Order 33, since 1964 as I see it the amendment is really an amendment to delete the reference to the committee of supply and the committee of ways and means, committees which were abolished in 1968 under our new rules. Those amendments were made in that part of the rule which the member indicates does not apply here. Therefore the amendment does not in any way affect the substance of the motion made here.

Finally it seems to me that it would be difficult to have a case more on all fours with this situation than the case which was decided in this house on December 14, 1964, in connection with the flag debate resolution. At that time the amendment outstanding was in the name of the former member for Middlesex West, Mr. Thomas. The Solicitor General (Mr. McIlraith), who at that time was the President of the Privy Council, gave notice and moved a motion of closure in these terms and in identical circumstances. The Chair having the opportunity, and indeed the obligation, to decide on the question of order at that time found it to be in order.

For those reasons I submit that the motion made here in the terms of Standing Order 33 is equally in order.

Mr. Speaker: I am grateful to hon. members for the comments they have made as guidance to the Chair. The objections that have been made by hon. members have been logical and I have given very serious thought to them. At the same time I have given very serious consideration to the arguments advanced by the hon. President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald) in support of his rejection of the point put forward by the hon. member for Parry Sound-Muskoka (Mr. Aiken), of which he gave notice of his intention to bring forward procedural objection at this time.

I also recognize the difficulty referred to by the hon. member for Calgary Centre (Mr. Harkness). It is obvious that we may some day want to resolve the difficulties to which he has referred. That relates also to one of the difficulties referred to by the hon. member for Edmonton West (Mr. Lambert).

There is no question that Standing Order 33 as it now reads is not without uncertainty and pitfalls. As has been suggested it might well be that early consideration should be given to that Standing Order in relation to a consideration of other Standing Orders.

It has been my pleasure, good fortune and privilege to hear all the contributions which have been made to this debate during the last two weeks. I have had the impression that at times the discussion has not related to the amendment before the house. At the same time I thought some of the speeches which referred to the motion initially presented by the hon. member for Grenville-Carleton (Mr. Blair) had greater relevancy to the motion proposed by the hon. President of the Privy Council.

Let me now go to the argument advanced by the hon. member for Parry Sound-Muskoka, who has suggested that in view of the fact there may be some point at issue in the interpretation of Standing Order 33, we might be further ahead to consider the similar standing order in the British parliament, and how it has been interpreted. I would be in full agreement with this suggestion if there were not considerable Canadian precedent and practice in the interpretation of our Standing Order 33, as this Standing Order has been in effect in the House of Commons over 50 years.

There are many precedents, and more than those which have been quoted and referred to by hon. members when this point of order was raised. These precedents have been studied very closely, the Journals have been looked into and the debates have been read.

I should like to assume the dubious honour of taking the time of the house to go through these precedents. I think that after referring to a lot of these precedents the conclusion will be clear.

On August 30 of 1917, and I begin this review of precedents with this particular one, a motion was proposed and adopted in the following terms:

That the debate on the third reading of Bill No. 125, providing for the acquisition by His Majesty of the capital stock of the Canadian Northern Railway Company shall not be further adjourned.

At that time an amendment to the motion for the third reading of Bill No. 125 was also under consideration. Both the amendment and the main motion were subsequently disposed of under the provisions of what is now Standing Order 33. I refer hon. members to Journals of August 30 1917, pages 606 to 608 inclusive.

• (3:20 p.m.)

On September 10, 1917, a motion was proposed and adopted as follows:

That the debate upon the second reading of Bill No. 133, the War-time Elections Act, shall not be further adjourned.

It should be noted that in this case there was no amendment before the house when the motion to close debate was adopted. Later in the sitting of September 10, 1917, in the course of the debate following the submission of the motion under what is now Standing Order 33, an amendment was proposed and disposed of by a division. Subsequently in the same sitting a further amendment was proposed and debated. The latter amendment and the main motion were both disposed of by the operation of the provisions of the closure rule. In this connection I refer hon. members to Journals of September 10, 1917, pages 643 to 645 inclusive.

On September 14, 1917, a motion was proposed and adopted as follows:

That the debate on the third reading of Bill No. 133, the War-time Elections Act, shall not be further adjourned.

Again, it should be noted that when the motion to close debate was adopted there was no amendment before the house. Later in the same sitting an amendment was proposed and debated. Both the amendment and the main motion were disposed of by the operation of the provisions of what is now Standing Order 33. This is to be found in Journals of September 14, 1917, pages 659 to 661 inclusive.

On March 2, 1926, when the house was considering the Address in Reply a motion was proposed and adopted as follows:

That the debate on the proposed motion of Mr. Elliott, for an Address to His Excellency the Governor General in answer to His Speech at the opening of the session, and the proposed motion of Mr. Bird: "That this question be now put", shall not be further adjourned.

Once more, it should be noted that the motion to close debate related to more than one question, namely, the Address in Reply and also to a motion "That the question be now put". I refer hon. members to Journals of March 2, 1926, pages 123 to 126 inclusive.

On March 29, 1932, a motion was proposed and adopted as follows:

That the present debate, namely the debate on the proposed motion of Mr. Bennett: That Mr. Speaker do now leave the chair for the house to resolve itself into committee of the whole on the following proposed resolution:

That it is expedient to introduce a bill to amend chapter 58 of the Statutes of Canada, 1931, striking out the word "March" in section 8, and substituting the word "May" therefor; and the proposed motion of Mr. Weir (Melfort): "That this question be now put", shall not be further adjourned.

Here again it is suggested that the motion to close debate referred to two debatable motions. I refer hon. members to Journals of March 29, 1932, pages 177 to 181 inclusive.

On May 22, 1956, a motion was proposed and adopted as follows:

That the debate on the motion for the second reading of Bill No. 298, an act to establish the Northern Ontario Pipe Line Crown Corporation, and on any amendments thereto, shall not be further adjourned.

On that occasion, in addition to the main motion there was an amendment and also a subamendment under consideration by the house. The reference here is to Journals of May 22, 1956, pages 587 to 594 inclusive.

On June 5, 1956, a motion was proposed and adopted as follows:

That the debate on the motion for the third reading of Bill No. 298, an act to establish the Northern Ontario Pipe Line Crown Corporation, and on any amendments thereto, shall not be further adjourned.

On that occasion in addition to the main motion there was also an amendment under consideration by the house. Hon, members will find the reference in the Journals for June 5, 1956, pages 699 to 705 inclusive. The latest precedent for the use of Standing Order 33 on a proceeding with Mr. Speaker in the chair is to be found at pages 996 to 1002 inclusive of the Journals for December 14, 1964, when a motion to concur in the sixth report of the Special Committee on a Canadian flag was being debated.

On that occasion when the motion to clusive of the Journals for December 14, 1964, when a motion to concur in the sixth report of the Special Committee on a Canadian flag impose the provisions of Standing Order 33 was adopted, an amendment to the main motion was also under consideration. However, that amendment was disposed of prior to the cut-off time specified in Standing Order 33. To that extent I agree with the hon. member for Parry Sound-Muskoka that this precedent is not of particular assistance in the present circumstances.

In summary, it is suggested that all precedents support the viewpoint that any amendment, or other motion that may be proposed to a main motion, comes under the provisions of the cut-off time set out in Standing Order 33. No precedent has been found to support the suggestion that each amendment is a separate debate that must be covered by a motion in each case.

The hon. member has suggested that the adjourned debate is the debate on the amendment. If he will look at the proceedings of the house he will see that the adjourned debate is not only on the amendment but on the main motion. This is what is before the house at the present time. He would have a very serious point and one which would have to be given extremely close consideration if, in fact, it were agreed that what is before the house at the present time is the adjourned debate exclusively on the amendment. But that is not the procedural position. In fact the procedural position is that the adjourned debate is on the motion of the hon. member for Grenville-Carleton (Mr. Blair) and the amendment thereto of the hon. member for Peace River (Mr. Baldwin).

In this light I do not think the additional argument put forward for the consideration of the house by the hon. member for Parry Sound-Muskoka can be accepted. As I have said, no precedent has been found to support the suggestion advanced by the hon. member for Parry Sound-Muskoka. Indeed, the concluding sentence of Standing Order 33 reads in part:

—but all such questions as must be decided in order to conclude such adjourned debate or postponed consideration, shall be decided forthwith.

That is, of course, the point which has been made by the President of the Privy Council indicating the distinction between our Standing Order 33 and the corresponding standing order in the British house. In view of the precedents my interpretation of Standing Order 33 would lead me to believe that the point of order raised by the hon. member for Parry Sound-Muskoka cannot be accepted by the Chair.

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, on Tuesday afternoon between five and six o'clock I indicated to the house that at an appropriate time I would raise a point of order under Standing Order 51. May I say that if I had my choice, if I were sure I would be permitted to do it at that time, I would raise this point of order at one o'clock tonight, assuming things go as they probably will go, after the vote has been taken on the amendment.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I apologize to the hon. member for interrupting, but I thought it might be better to interrupt him before he is fully launched into his submission with regard to the point of order. As the hon. member indicated a moment ago, he gave notice in the house of his intention to raise this very important point of order.

My understanding is that the discussion on the point of order would be raised not in connection with the motion under Standing Order 33 but in connection with the debate on the motion of the hon. member for Grenville-Carleton (Mr. Blair). I want to make it clear that the motion of the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald) should be disposed of by the house before the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) can raise his point of order.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Fair enough.

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the provisions of Standing Order 33, I move, seconded by Mr. McIlraith:

That the debate on the motion, "That the third report of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization presented to the house on Friday, June 20, 1969, be concurred in", and on any amendment or amendment in amendment proposed thereto, shall not be further adjourned.

• (3:30 p.m.)

Some hon. Members: Shame.

Mr. Speaker: I will not interrupt the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr.

Division

Knowles). First I will read the motion, and then we may perhaps have a debate as to whether we should hear the hon. member's point of order at this time.

The President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald) moved:

That the debate on the motion, "That the third report of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization presented to the house on Friday, June 20, 1969, be concurred in", and on any amendment or amendment in amendment proposed thereto, shall not be further adjourned.

My understanding of the procedure is that this motion should now be put to the house and disposed of, following which we will resume the debate on the motion of the hon. member for Grenville-Carleton (Mr. Blair), at which time the hon. member's point of order could be raised. Does the hon. member agree with this interpretation of the proceedings?

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I would have thought that now was the time to do it, but it does not make that much difference so long as it is clear that I have the right to raise the point of order. Your Honour is perfectly right in saying that my point of order is not against the procedural validity of the motion just now made by the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald) but rather that Your Honour should take certain action under Standing Order 51 with respect to the main motion, namely the motion of the hon. member for Grenville-Carleton (Mr. Blair). If I do not raise my point of order at a moment when it is possible for me to do so, I might find myself denied the floor by Standing Order 33 tonight at one o'clock.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I do not think it would be necessary for the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) to wait until tonight at one o'clock to make his point. I think he could make it on a point of order when we resume the consideration of the motion of the hon. member for Grenville-Carleton (Mr. Blair). If the hon. member were to raise the point of order of which he has given notice at this time, I would have to tell him that it should not be raised now. If I understand his point of order correctly, his objection is not against the motion of the President of the Privy Council but against the motion of the hon. member for Grenville-Carleton.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): I am not against it procedurally but, I am against it in substance.

[Mr. Speaker.]

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those against the motion will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion the yeas have it.

And more than five members having risen:

Mr. Speaker: Call in the members.

The house divided on the motion (Mr. Macdonald, Rosedale) which was agreed to on the following division:

• (3:40 p.m.)

YEAS

Messrs:

Allmand
Anderson
Andras
Barrett
Basford
Béchard
Beer
Benson
Blair
Blouin
Borrie
Boulanger
Breau
Brown
Buchanan
Caccia
Cadieux (Labelle)
Cafik
Cantin
Chappell
Chrétien
Clermont
Cobbe
Comtois
Corbin
Côté (Richelieu)
Côté (Longueuil)
Cullen
Cyr
Danson
Davis
Deachman
Deakon
Douglas (Assiniboia)
Drury
Dubé
Éthier
Forest
Forget
Foster
Francis
Gendron
Gibson
Givens
Goode
Goyer
Gray
Greene
Groos
Guay (St. Boniface)
Guay (Lévis)
Guilbault
Haidasz
Hogarth
Honey
Hopkins
Howard (Okanagan Boundary)
Hymmen
Isabelle
Jerome
Kaplan
Kierans
Lachance
Laflamme
Laing
Lang
Langlois
Laniel
Leblanc (Laurier)
LeBlanc (Rimouski)
Lefebvre
Legault
Lessard (LaSalle)
Lessard (Lac-Saint-Jean)
Lind
Loiselle
Macdonald (Rosedale)
MacEachen
MacGuigan
Mackasey
McBride
McIlraith
McNulty
Mahoney
Major
Marceau
Marchand (Langelier)
Marchand (Kamloops-Cariboo)
Morison
Munro
Murphy
Noël

O'Connell
Orange
Osler
Otto
Ouellet
Pelletier
Penner
Pepin
Perrault
Pilon
Portelance
Pringle
Prud'homme
Reid
Richardson
Roberts
Robinson
Rochon
Roy (Timmins)
Roy (Laval)
Serré
Sharp
Smith (Northumberland-Miramichi)
Smith (Saint-Jean)
Stafford
Stanbury
Stewart (Cochrane)
Stewart (Okanagan-Kootenay)
St. Pierre
Sulatycky
Sullivan
Thomas (Maisonneuve)
Tolmie
Trudeau
Trudel
Turner (London East)
Turner (Ottawa-Carleton)
Wahn
Walker
Watson
Weatherhead
Whelan
Whiting
Yanakis—136.

NAYS

Messrs:

Aiken
Alexander
Alkenbrack
Asselin
Baldwin
Barnett
Beaudoin
Bell
Bigg
Brewin
Broadbent
Burton
Cadieu (Meadow Lake)
Caouette
Carter
Coates
Code
Comeau
Crouse
Danforth
Dinsdale
Dionne
Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands)
Downey
Fairweather
Flemming
Forrestall
Fortin
Gauthier
Gilbert
Gleave
Grills
Gundlock
Hales
Harding
Harkness
Hees
Horner
Howard (Skeena)
Howe
Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre)
Korchinski
Lambert (Edmonton West)
Laprise
Lewis
MacEwan
MacInnis
MacInnis (Mrs.)
MacLean
Macquarrie
McCleave
McGrath
McKinley
Marshall
Mather
Mazankowski
Monteith
Moores
Muir (Cape Breton-The Sydneys)
Muir (Lisgar)
Noble
Nowlan
Nystrom
Peddle
Peters
Ricard
Ritchie
Rodrigue
Rose
Rynard
Saltsman
Schumacher
Scott
Simpson
Skoberg
Stanfield
Stewart (Marquette)
Tétrault
Thomas (Moncton)
Thompson
Winch
Woolliams
Yewchuk—83.

• (4:00 p.m.)

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion carried.

Procedure and Organization

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

PROCEDURE AND ORGANIZATION

MOTION FOR CONCURRENCE IN THIRD REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

The house resumed, from Tuesday, July 22, consideration of the motion of Mr. Blair that the third report of the Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization presented to the house on Friday, June 20, 1969, be concurred in, and the amendment thereto of Mr. Baldwin (p. 10963).

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I rise to bring to Your Honour's attention the point of order, notice of which I gave on Tuesday and which I tried to raise a few minutes ago. I do not in my experience recall a point of order being raised under Standing Order 51. I recognize that it is a very serious matter to ask Mr. Speaker to make a ruling under this Standing Order. Nevertheless I feel the importance of the matter so deeply and seriously that I believe Your Honour should be called upon to act under Standing Order 51. This Standing Order reads as follows:

> Whenever Mr. Speaker is of the opinion that a motion offered to the House is contrary to the rules and privileges of Parliament, he shall apprise the House thereof immediately, before putting the question thereon, and quote the standing order or authority applicable to the case.

• (4:10 p.m.)

As I indicated earlier my point of order is against the main motion which is before the house in the name of the hon. member for Grenville-Carleton (Mr. Blair). If it were possible I would have preferred to wait until the house had voted on the amendment of the hon. member for Peace River (Mr. Baldwin) so that I might then raise my point of order against the main motion, but in view of what has just happened it is likely that point will not be reached until after one o'clock tomorrow morning, and having had some experience with this device in the past I recognize it might be difficult to get the floor at that time.

We are back on the debate on the motion of the hon. member for Grenville-Carleton and on the amendment of the hon. member for Peace River and it is my contention that before we proceed further I should call on Your Honour to face up to the fact, as I see it, that the motion of the hon. member for Grenville-Carleton is contrary to the rules and privileges of parliament. Because of that

I believe you should apprise the house of that fact before you put the question, which, as I say, may be some time after one o'clock tomorrow morning, and I think you should go further and refuse to put the question.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): But in any case if Your Honour will apprise the house of the fact that this motion is contrary to the rules and privileges of parliament, I am confident that the house will govern itself accordingly. In fact, despite the non-confidence I have in the government I believe even the government would be guided by your opinion in this matter.

Mr. Speaker, since I seem to be taking a position which involves Your Honour in making a decision, may I make it clear now—and I shall do so again at the end of my remarks—that I am not trying to involve Your Honour in the details or in the substance of a motion; I am not trying to involve Your Honour in the question as to whether the time limitation should be two days, one day or many days; I am not trying to involve Your Honour in the question of any of the terms of proposed Standing Order 75c. But I am trying to involve Your Honour in the more fundamental and more basic question of whether any government has the right to seek to amend the rules of parliament in the way that is being sought on this occasion. That applies in any case, but it applies even more seriously now that we are under the closure motion of Standing Order 33. The statements I have just made of course must be more than just assertions of mine; they must be backed up by statements from the authorities. I should like to read a few of them.

First of all may I draw Your Honour's attention to citation 4 of Beauchesne's fourth edition which is found at page 8, quite early in this book which I trust members have read from cover to cover:

> The principles that lie at the basis of English parliamentary law, as Bourinot so aptly says, are: "to protect a minority and restrain the improvidence or tyranny of a majority;

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): I submit that an attempt to change the rules in a way that is contrary to that basic principle should not be allowed by the impartial occupant of the Chair. Let me go on:

> —to secure the transaction of public business in an orderly manner;

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

[Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre).]

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre):

> —to enable every member to express his opinion within limits necessary to preserve decorum and prevent an unnecessary waste of time; to give abundant opportunity for the consideration of every measure, and to prevent any legislative action being taken upon sudden impulse."

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre):

> In a close contest when the House is considering a highly controversial measure, the positions of parties are equalized:

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Let me emphasize that. There is nothing in here about one side being master of the other. The basic rule of parliamentary procedure is that in a close contest when the house is considering a highly controversial measure the positions of parties are equalized. The quotation continues:

> —the Government side may rely on its majority but the Opposition is strengthened by the rules of procedure which both are bound to observe and which the Speaker must enforce.

I submit, Mr. Speaker, that if any attempt is made to change the rules of this house and to do it in a manner which destroys that equality and gives the government not only the force of its majority but the force of the rules, we have gone completely contrary to the basic principles of parliamentary procedure on which this house relies.

I regard that citation 4 in Beauchesne's fourth edition as one which every member of this house should read very carefully before he decides what to do in the remaining part of this debate. I submit that because the attempt to change the rules by government majority, in a way that will destroy the quality between the parties, is wrong, Your Honour, under Standing Order 51 should so apprise the house before you put the question tonight, and indeed in my view you should refuse to put the question.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Now let me draw your attention to citation 7(1). Again I am looking at Beauchesne's fourth edition. I wish to emphasize this sentence and one word in it as strongly as I possibly can:

> Another collective right of the House is to settle its own procedure.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): That is right.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, that one word, the word "collective", is the word that this government is defying throughout this whole debate. That one word is something they do not understand over there at all. They think that because they may have a majority of seats in this house they have the right by majority decision to change the rules of parliament. Mr. Speaker, in the spirit of parliamentary procedure that is not the way it is done. We settle our own rules on a collective basis. Mr. Speaker, collectivity includes us all. I submit that what is being done now under closure is so contrary to the terms of Standing Order 51 that Your Honour should so apprise the house.

• (4:20 p.m.)

I go on with citation 7, paragraph (1), and perhaps I might read the first sentence again to connect it with the following sentence:

Another collective right of the house is to settle its own procedure. This is such an obvious right—

I wish it were.

—it has never been directly disputed—

It is being disputed now by the government opposite, and I think Your Honour should so find. The citation continues:

—that it is unnecessary to enlarge upon it except to say that the house is not responsible to any external authority for following the rules it lays down for itself, but may depart from them at its own discretion.

Your Honour has been apprised of the fact, which has been recorded several times, that the motion of the hon. member for Grenville-Carleton (Mr. Blair) is dealing with a recommendation by a committee which all of the opposition members on the committee opposed. It has been made clear that proposal 75c—they seem to think this comes from the committee and is before us in the normal way—is a proposal or direction from the government, which is an external authority so far as the House of Commons is concerned.

This attempt to change the rules of this house on the basis of an external authority is again contrary to the privileges, practices and rules of this house. Let me quote citation 8, paragraph (1):

The proceedings of the houses (Senate and Commons) are governed by statutes, by rules and orders adopted by themselves—

It does not say adopted by the majority, it says adopted by themselves. It states that immediately after the citation which says we do this thing collectively. There is no authority, despite all the alleged authority there may be, for a majority to pass rules, and there is no authority for a majority to alter the rules of this house to meet the desire of an external authority, namely, the government. I submit what is happening now under closure is striking at the very fundamental proposition that the rules of parliament are parliament's rules, that they are the rules we arrived at collectively, and that they cannot be altered in this way.

Let me go on with the sentence in the citation:

—and by those usages which have grown up in the course of time and consequently become a part of their own practice or are derived from the common law of parliament by which they have consented to be guided in all matters of doubt.

Let me emphasize that word "consented". If I can zero in on the two words I have now quoted, the most important two words to this debate are the words "collective" and "consented", one which appears in citation 7 and the other in citation 8.

This the way the rules of parliament are made, and this is the way the rules of parliament are altered, by collective action and consent, not by dictation from an outside source, and not by the will of the majority being pushed roughshod over the minority, especially under a closure motion.

Citation 8(2) states:

The usages of parliament are to be collected from the entries in the journals, from the history of parliamentary procedure, from the treatises on parliamentary practice that have been published from time to time; and from the observations of experienced members, and the remarks of the Speakers in the House of Commons, with relation to the forms and methods of proceedings, as contained in the published debates.

It is difficult in this debate to single out individuals and put them in any special category. We are all equal in the debate as we are in freedom of speech, but I think it is significant that there have been no reasoned statements in defence of 75c from experienced members of this House of Commons. The older and experienced members—the ones who are steeped in the parliamentary way of doing things—know for a fact that we do not change the rules by the will of the majority, but that we change them collectively and by consent.

Perhaps I should read paragraph (3) of citation 8:

"In the interpretation of the rules or standing orders the house is generally guided, not so much by the literal construction of the orders themselves as by the consideration of what has been the practice of the house with respect to them."

The practice of the house, with a few exceptions, has been to make our rules collectively and by consent. Experience has taught us that they are the only rules that work. Rules imposed upon us do not work, and rule 75c imposed in this way will simply take this house into trouble.

Let me quote from citation 11 in Beauchesne's fourth edition, which I believe is still issued to every member of the house. It states:

An amendment to the standing order which is only intended to settle a small detail in the procedure and on which there seems to be general agreement may be passed on a simple motion after notice has been given under Standing Order 41. But if it is desired to make a general revision or to adopt some important rule—

Surely this is important or we would not have given it this much time.

—a special committee is appointed "to assist Mr. Speaker" for that purpose. The Speaker acts as chairman and the Clerk of the House acts as clerk of that committee.

Has that happened in this case? Has Mr. Speaker been given a committee to assist him to revise the rules of the house? That was the way it was done in most previous instances, and Mr. Speaker was chairman and the Clerk of the House was the clerk of the committee. In this instance it was decided that there would be a committee without Mr. Speaker, and without the Clerk of the House, but with a government member being the chairman of the committee.

I submit, when we are called upon to make such an important change as is proposed in 75c that the house should not be asked to act contrary to the rules and privileges of parliament. That is what is being done by bringing in this report, which is a report of the majority of the committee, representing nothing more or less than the will, dictation or intent of the government.

I draw your attention to another quotation from Beauchesne's, only this time it is from the third edition. I have them all upstairs; editions one, two, three and four, but I brought down extracts from only two pages from the third edition. They are pages with roman numerals lvii and lviii.

An hon. Member: Aye, aye, aye.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

An hon. Member: Olé.

[Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre).]

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): I am glad to hear the Liberals say "Aye, aye". I invite them to read this bit of Beauchesne's third edition:

"The government of the day, says Sir Guthbert Headlam, M.P., whatever may be its political complexion, must always regard itself, during its tenure of office, as the trustee of the whole nation and not as representing only the views of its own party or of a section of the community". Mr. Hugh Sellon, in "Democracy and Dictatorship", p. 40, says: 'To hasten drastic and contentious legislation through parliament—

Under 75c we have been told that this may be done during the next session of parliament because there are half a dozen tough decisions that have to be taken, so the government needs this rule to get them through quickly. I continue the quotation:

• (4:30 p.m.)

"To hasten drastic and contentious legislation through parliament, except on the basis of the clear and unmistakable approval of the majority of the electorate, might, strictly speaking, be legal. But it would be unconstitutional in the sense that it would offend against one of the foundations of parliamentary government, the principle that no party in office shall act so drastically along party lines as to cause grave apprehension among large numbers of citizens or as to be regarded as action designed solely to protect one class of the community, and not the community as a whole.

I commend to Your Honour, and to hon. members of the house in all parties, the principle that the role of the government of the day is only that of trustee; that it has no right, especially under the use of closure, to bring in rules that would make it possible to put legislation through in a hurry without the proper consideration that is constitutionally required.

The whole attempt to violate this basic concept, and to do it by putting through rules that have not been agreed to collectively, rules to which we have not consented, is, I submit, contrary to the rules and privileges of parliament. In my view, under Standing Order 51 Your Honour should so advise the house. I hope Your Honour feels as strongly about this as I do, and will say that in view of this action being so contrary to the rules and privileges of parliament the motion ought not to be put to the house at all.

Let me read one or two more quotations. Listen, please to this one:

I would like to conclude by emphasizing that the opposition, whatever its policies and tactics may be, shares with the government and, of course, with the electorate, the responsibility of making our form of democracy, based on parliamentary institutions, work for the welfare of all the citizens.

This is by an important personage—I shall give his name in a moment—saying that the opposition shares equally with the government the responsibility of making parliament work. I ask: how can the opposition share equally with the government that responsibility if it is hog-tied by rules that the government insists on imposing on the house, and that under closure? I quote further from the document I have in my hand:

> One of the tests of good and strong democracy is the acceptance without qualification of the role of the opposition as an indispensable element in its processes, with rights to be safeguarded and with responsibilities to be discharged.
>
> That test has not been met, and democracy has been lost, when opposition has degenerated into faction or when authority has become tyranny.

That is a quotation from the right hon. Lester B. Pearson.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): I am glad to see a few Liberals applauding him.

An hon. Member: The Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) didn't.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): The role of the opposition is equal to that of the government. This is the same theory, the same philosophy that I read from Beauchesne's. I submit that when, in the making of the rules of the house, the government says, "We will give you no part; we are deciding what the rules are to be", that is contrary to the rules and privileges of parliament. Let me quote one more authority:

> Notwithstanding these increasing demands, the time available to this house each week for the conduct of its business is not significantly greater than it was a century ago, nor have the traditional and proper roles of government and opposition changed.

They are still the same.

> It is the government's function to propose legislative solutions. It is the opposition's task to question these solutions and attempt to improve them or propose alternatives.

Then this sentence, short, to the point, and I support every syllable of it:

> Neither role can be subordinate to the other.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): I submit that it is Your Honour's responsibility to see that this dictum is observed, that the role of neither side in this house is made subordinate to the other. That should be the case in every aspect of our work, but when it comes to the fundamental matter of our rules, if ever that dictum applied, it applies there. We are not called upon to sit here in a subordinate position, to be told by the other side what our rules shall be. I continue this quotation:

> It goes without saying that any proposal for procedural reform must assist both sides of this house to function more efficiently. Anything less would diminish the very institution which we seek to assist.

That is a clear statement of the equality of the two sides, an equality that is being violated. Never mind the details of rule 75c; I am not concerned about that at the moment, but I am concerned about a government proposal being brought in the way it has, being put through this house by a government majority, and under closure. This same authority went on to refer to certain discussions which had taken place, and he said:

> Nor should they—

Referring to the discussions.

> —be permitted to lead, either by agreement or in the absence of it, to procedural changes which will upset the delicate and essential balance between government and opposition so necessary to the proper functioning of parliament.

That is a quotation from the right hon. Piere Elliott Trudeau. See Hansard, September 16, 1968, pages 72 and 73.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): I note that the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) is applauding himself.

Mr. McCleave: He didn't know they were his own words.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): I hope he will pay attention to what he said—

Mr. Dinsdale: He is schizophrenic.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): —namely, that there is a delicate and essential balance between government and opposition which is necessary to the proper functioning of parliament. This ties in to a matter that is basic to our whole operation, namely, our rules. We are being put in a subordinate position. We are being denied operating under collective action. We are being denied the right to consent. This is being done on the basis of an external authority, namely, the government.

I contend, therefore, that this whole way of doing things, bringing in rules in this way, is contrary to the rules and privileges of parliament, and that Your Honour should so find under Standing Order 51. Doing this takes the rules of debate out of the hands of members of parliament. It takes the rules of debate out of the rule book and puts them in the pocket of the government, in the pocket of the government house leader. It leaves all decision as to what time will be spent in debate to the caprice of the government. There is no more the matter of consent, no more the matter of collective action. This is being done in a manner which I submit is completely contrary to the rules and privileges of parliament.

I come back to what I said earlier because I think it needs to be emphasized. I have strong feelings about the details of 75c. With a few others I have been involved in seemingly endless discussion on these matters; in fact I said in a lighter vein to the President of the Privy Council in his office the other day that we started these discussions in his office last August and that we were getting pretty close to a full year of it.

I am concerned about the details of 75c, but that is not the issue. The issue is not the number of days to be spent at this or that stage of a bill. The issue is not the limitation of time for debate.

Indeed, when the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) tries to make out that we want to talk endlessly and never want to reach a decision, he knows he is just saying that. He knows that our rules are full of time limitations, limitations on the length of time a member can speak and limitations on this and that debate, and he knows there has never been a debate in the House of Commons in which every member has taken part. He knows that in point of fact we do reach decisions, and that the number of debates we have had in this session that have been lengthy have not done parliament any damage, they have done it credit. The fact of the matter is that these details are not the issue before us now, not the major issue in this whole debate of two or three weeks and certainly not the issue in this point of order.

• (4:40 p.m.)

The issue before us now is: how do we make our rules? Do we make them by collective action, do we make them by consent, or are they made for us by government majority? Because this motion denies collectivity, denies consent, because it is an attempt to make the rules by action of the government majority, I call on Your Honour to apprise the house under Standing Order 51 that this is contrary to the rules and privileges of parliament.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I apologize to the hon. member for interrupting him at this time. I was not too sure whether the hon. member was going to speak on the point of order, which allows for 20 minutes under Standing Order 33, or whether he should have the usual 40 minutes. I would be inclined to think that he is entitled to 20 minutes, but I assume that in view of the fact that he is discussing such an important point of order hon. members will allow him to continue. It is on this assumption that he has been invited to continue and to complete his remarks.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Thank you, Sir. My concluding remarks will be brief.

I know that there have been occasions when rules have been changed in other than the normal way. I know that in 1913 the closure rule itself, which has come back to haunt us again today, was put through not by having a committee with the Speaker as chairman but on a motion of the government. I know that under Mr. Pearson's government, after we had changed some rules by committee action, the present Solicitor General (Mr. McIlraith), who was then house leader, piloted through the house a government motion regarding the change of certain rules. It has been done on some occasions, but most of the times rules have been changed, as Beauchesne says, by a committee which assisted Mr. Speaker, with the Clerk of the House as clerk of that committee.

You may say, Sir, that because it has been done sometimes the way it is now being done, and because no Speaker interfered, you should not do so now. But I point out to you, Sir, that we are under a different régime. On all of these other occasions the Speaker who was in the chair was a member of the government party. Impartial though each of them may have tried to be, that was a fact.

You, Sir, to your credit and to the credit of parliament, are the first Speaker who does not belong to a political party. You are a Speaker who is completely independent, and in my view you have to give consideration to your responsibility to both sides of the house.

You have to look at what have been the rules and privileges of parliament with respect to our rules and our Standing Orders. I submit, therefore, that in that light you should find that the attempt to change the rules in this way is contrary to all of our best traditions and contrary to the principles of collectivity and consent, and you should advise the house, before you put the question tonight, that the motion of the hon. member for Grenville-Carleton is contrary to the provisions of Standing Order 51.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I should like to take some time to support the views put forward by the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles). I make no apology for taking a little time because I believe it is the most important question that we have had to face in this parliament since I first came here, and that we are likely to have to face for a very long time.

Standing Order 51 requires you, Mr. Speaker, to say whenever Your Honour is of the opinion that a motion offered to the house is contrary to the rules and privileges of parliament. The rules and privileges of parliament consist not only of the written rules, not only of the decisions of the Speaker from time to time, but also of the customs and usages of parliament referred to explicitly in the rules of the British house of 1867 in so far as applicable, to our own customs and traditions.

In view of the fact that closure is being imposed I suggest that it is essential that Your Honour interpret even more generously—or to put it in another way, more cautiously—the rules and privileges of the house. I suggest that in view of the fact that closure is being imposed it is Your Honour's duty to ensure that the rules and privileges of this house are not trampled upon in the process.

Certainly it is the tradition here that changes in the rules are brought about on a broad basis of agreement in all quarters of the house. This is a tradition of long standing and, as has been pointed out, it is the only effective way in which changes in the rules can be made. The house can operate only if the rules have a broad basis of support, but in addition to the functional aspect of rule changes it is certainly equally true that the customs and usages of this house require a broad basis of support. This has been violated in the manner in which the government party is proceeding at this time.

The use of closure to force through rule changes, which are opposed by every member of the opposition, is of course an aggravation, and the use of this method of forcing through rules that do not carry the approval of a single member of the opposition is so completely foreign to the traditions of this house as to constitute a breach of privilege. If the rules can be changed in these circumstances, and if closure can be resorted to in order to implement these rule changes, and can be used so as to alter fundamentally the very nature and role of the House of Commons, then we are in a very sorry state indeed in so far as democracy and freedom are concerned.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Stanfield: If Your Honour permits this motion to be put, particularly with the background of closure, then Your Honour will have established the precedent that the majority in this house can change the rules so as to permit, if it chooses, only the most nominal consideration of legislation by this house. Backed by closure the majority could put through changes in rules which would eliminate all stages of discussion except one, and, of course, at the same time require the house to vote prescribed amounts of money within a prescribed time.

• (4:50 p.m.)

Surely, Mr. Speaker, this is not the true concept of parliament. Surely, it is not the true concept of the privileges and rights of this house. I suggest there is a striking parallel between the struggle we are facing now and the old struggle of the House of Commons to resist the dictates of Stuart Kings—

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Stanfield:—and the subsequent efforts of the Crown to control the House of Commons. It is true the government is not sending in armed forces to impose its will on the House of Commons. But clearly the government is telling the House of Commons what it must do. The purpose of this motion, enforced by closure, is obviously to reduce the powers and the privileges of the House of Commons in order that the government can in future so control the house as to ensure that it passes within a specified time all legislation listed by the government, and, of course, that it votes X number of dollars in a specified length of time.

I am not trying to involve you in the substance of this motion, Mr. Speaker, but I would point out that if the motion is put, particularly by means of closure, it becomes a precedent so ugly, so full of foreboding for the future of parliament as to be tantamount to an attempt to subvert and destroy parliament as we know it.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Stanfield: If this motion can be put, sir, how far do we go before we become a chamber of deputies comparable to the kind of chamber established by General de Gaulle? How far are we from authoritarian institutions? If Your Honour puts this question tonight, supported by closure, then this house can step by step be stripped of every privilege and every authority which remains to it.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Stanfield: It might be said this could only be done upon the authority of a majority of members of this house. Mr. Speaker, the government, the external authority referred to by the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles), controls the members who constitute the majority in this house much more effectively and much more firmly than George III was able to do with members of the British house, no matter how hard he tried.

It is true the methods are different. I am not casting any reflection on members who support the government opposite, and I say this quite earnestly, but I would point out that members of this house who support the government, as conditions have evolved, are not interested in preserving the powers or the privileges of the House of Commons. It has been said they have been silenced by the government. I do not make this charge today but I do say they are given very little by way of a role to play in the house by the government. What private members who support the government are seeking is not authority or privilege in this house, particularly. What they are seeking is a share in the power of government; they are seeking to take some part in the formulation of decisions by the government. This is what motivates them, principally; they are interested in sharing the power of government but they have not the slightest interest in trying to control the operations of the government or in exercising the powers and privileges of the House of Commons.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Stanfield: So it really means nothing to say in these circumstances that the government has the support of a majority in the house, since the majority upon which it relies is, in the nature of things, not interested in preserving the powers and privileges of the House of Commons. Thus we have a government, with the help of its friends in the house, using a gag not simply to get a measuse through the chamber but to reduce severely the privileges of the house by compelling the adoption of some new form of closure. I do not know whether this is a new aspect of big "L" Liberalism, or what it is. I think it is a new form of betrayal, a new form of treason on the part of the intellectuals opposite. Regardless of this, sir, I say to you, as you have been reminded already today, that it is your duty to protect the minorities in this house. I should like to make a reference to a description of a great Speaker in the British house, Speaker Onslow.

> Onslows show of independence at the outset of his career as Speaker did not belie his subsequent conduct . . . The forms of proceedings, he held, as instituted by our ancestors, operated as a check and control on the action of ministers and they were in many instances a shelter and a protection to the minority against the attempts of power.

In view of what the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre has said, I do not need to expand upon Your Honour's role as a protector of minorities, nor does Your Honour—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. It is five o'clock and according to the standing order we would normally bring it to the attention of hon. members that we have to go on to private members' business. Hon. members may wish to allow the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield) to complete his presentation. Is that the wish of the Leader of the Opposition?

Mr. Baldwin: In view of the nature and the seriousness of the point which is being argued, and since Your Honour should be apprised of all the arguments pro and con—the Minister of Manpower and Immigration (Mr. MacEachen) obviously intends to participate—perhaps there would be willingness on the part of the house to dispense with private members' hour and continue until six o'clock.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): That would be our wish, too.

Mr. Lind: I agree to dispense with private members' hour and to carry on with the business of the house now before us.

Mr. Stanfield: Mr. Speaker, I was simply reminding you, even though it might scarcely be necessary, of your duty to protect minorities in the house. This is the issue we are discussing today. The protection of minorities involves the very preservation of responsible parliamentary government as we have known it.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Stanfield: Once the Chair recognizes the right of a majority to change the rules of the house without the support or approval of a single member of the opposition, and to do so by the use of closure, then we are on the slippery slope which will enable any government to destroy parliament simply by changing the rules of this house, using a simple majority controlled by itself alone. Therefore I say that a motion like this, which is put forward to change the rules without having the support of a single member of the opposition, violates the privileges and rules of this house.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

• (5:00 p.m.)

Mr. Stanfield: This is not a mere technical argument. We must consider it in the light of the authoritarian tendencies displayed by the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) and some hon. members of the government. It was a very unpleasant experience for me to sit here and watch hon. members opposite when the government house leader announced that closure would be imposed. I do not intend to use words like "fascist" and "nazi"—they are not proper and I do not intend to use them.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Stanfield: Watching the glee on the faces of hon. members opposite, and the obvious enjoyment they derived from the use of what I call arbitrary power, was an unsettling experience for me, and I am filled with foreboding about what may lie ahead for us.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Stanfield: I do not accuse my hon. friends opposite of anything ugly, but I say it is apparent they are prepared to exercise their power to achieve any objective they wish to achieve. That has been demonstrated here. I ask, how far away are we from the kind of Gaullist government under which this house would have no real power, under which we would have government by television interview, with an election every four or six years? If this motion is put tonight, how far away will we be from that sort of government?

An hon. Member: There might even be no elections.

Mr. Stanfield: That is one question we must consider earnestly. There is an additional reason for saying this motion ought not to be put and that it violates the privileges of the house. It is admitted on all sides that this is a bad rule. I believe there are few, even on the other side of the house—and this includes even the Prime Minister's most loyal followers—who will defend the proposed rule in its present form. The government house leader has even stated that changes to it are necessary and desirable. There is no question about that, Mr. Speaker. The great majority of hon. members opposite admit quite freely that the rule is unnecessarily harsh and unnecessarily restrictive.

The hon. member for Kenora-Rainy River (Mr. Reid) agreed that it should go back to the committee; the hon. member for Vancouver Quadra (Mr. Deachman) moved a subamendment saying it should go back to the committee. In all corners of the house it is admitted to be an unsatisfactory rule, and it is attributed to hon. gentlemen opposite that they realize this. They realize it is unsatisfactory. Yet they are asking the house to adopt it on the basis that at some future time it can be made satisfactory. Mr. Speaker, for the government to ask this house to adopt a rule which it admits to be bad and in need of correction is an imposition on and violation of the privileges of this house.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Stanfield: Thirdly, sir, the rule is ambiguous. I argue, and I think I am right, that as it reads rule 75c cannot be invoked if all opposition representatives agree under rule 75B. I have been told hon. members opposite dispute this, that they will argue, if the point should arise, that this is not so and that they will try to convince you that rule 75c can be used if the representative of the government is not party to an agreement under 75B.

Ordinarily Your Honour leaves it to the judgment of the house to determine whether any piece of legislation or matter coming before it is clear or ambiguous. Ordinarily you would leave the whole question to the house. But, Sir, now we are talking about the rules of the house; we are talking about the rules under which this house will operate, and I say it is a violation of the privileges of this house for the government to move the adoption of rules which are admitted to be ambiguous and which it must leave to Your Honour's interpretation. It is a violation of the privileges of this house for the government to impose this question on the house, and more so particularly, because it is backed by closure.

Only you, Sir, can now stop this violation of the privileges of the House of Commons. You, Sir, as have been your predecessors through the centuries, are the guardian of the rights of the House of Commons. When you go to the Senate, Sir, there is a ceremony in which you re-enact the assertion of your authority and parliament's authority over the Crown. It is to you, sir, that we must look for protection.

We have discussed this motion and this proposed new rule. We have negotiated, but there has been no evidence that representatives of the government had any serious intention to reach a settlement. There was no discussion until debate had gone on for more than a week. There was no discussion until the government became convinced we meant business and that debate would be sustained. When the government house leader realized this, he began discussions. May I put it this way, Sir: when Caesar returned from the west word went out that all talk must stop.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Stanfield: There is nothing more that we in the opposition can do to prevent this violation of parliament—unless we are prepared to so disrupt the business of parliament that it cannot proceed. And we do not intend to do that. I did not come to parliament to destroy it. I would like to be helpful.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

• (5:10 p.m.)

Mr. Stanfield: The rule which has been invoked is not often used. It is difficult to interpret and I regret, sir, that you have been placed in this difficult position. As a matter of fact if circumstances in the house had been different, I would have suggested that you might consider resigning as Speaker as a means of protesting against the exercise of arbitrary authority by this government. But I say to Your Honour that I believe your continuance as Speaker is essential to the continuation of this parliament. Your Honour enjoys the respect of every member of this house.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

[Mr. Stanfield.]

Mr. Stanfield: Your Honour's role has not been easy in recent days. It is not easy today, and it may not be easy in the coming sessions because this house has taken on an ugly complexion. There is no doubt that feelings are running deep and strong. The tragedy is that there was no need for it.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Stanfield: It is only Your Honour who can save this parliament and make it constructive. It is the respect that we all have for Your Honour that will hold this parliament together. I am sorry to add to your responsibility today, but the responsibility is there.

The decision on this point is vital to the future of parliament. I believe it will determine future responsible parliamentary government in this country. I call upon Your Honour not only to declare that this motion contravenes the privileges of this house, not merely to call this to the attention of the house, but that under this rule, in Your Honour's capacity as Speaker, Your Honour should refuse to put this motion to the house because it violates the privileges of this house.

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, we have listened to 40 minutes of pure tribute to the rules of parliament. It surprises me that the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) and the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield) should exploit a point of order to secure the floor today, which they could not secure normally under the rules of this house.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Is the hon. member rising on a point of order?

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Yes, I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. There is a rule in this house against the imputing of motives. That applies not only to the remark of the minister but to the laughter from the other side. I raised this point of order this afternoon out of genuine concern for the rules and procedures of this House of Commons and for no other reason.

Mr. Speaker: I am sure the hon. minister was not imputing motives.

Mr. Woolliams: I rise on the same point of order, Mr. Speaker. Surely if the minister is not imputing motives to the member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) and the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield) he is imputing that Your Honour is permitting something improper in this house. He is imputing something to Your Honour on which Your Honour cannot rule. That is what a Minister of the Crown is doing.

Mr. Speaker: It may be difficult to recognize that we are still dealing with a point of order relating to Standing Order 51. I invite hon. members to remember that. I reminded the hon. minister a moment ago that he could not impute motives. I am sure he will give that indication to the Chair.

Mr. MacEachen: I have not been imputing motives. I have been stating a simple fact. I am stating that under the rules of this house the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre and the Leader of the Opposition had no entitlement to the floor to take part in this debate.

Some hon. Members: Shame, shame!

Some hon. Members: Stupid, stupid!

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: The hon. minister will recognize that it is the responsibility of the Chair to determine whether—

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) and the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield) sought and were given the floor for the purpose of raising a point of order. In my view much of what was said by those hon. members, was specifically to the point of order, and I would think the hope that the minister will also relate his remarks to the point of order.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. MacEachen: Mr. Speaker, as I understand the point of order, as it emerged from the tortuous language of the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre, it is that Your Honour should not permit the motion moved by the hon. member for Grenville-Carleton (Mr. Blair) to be put before this house. Your Honour was asked to take an unprecedented responsibility which no Speaker, in this or in the British house, has ever been asked to assume.

The hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre is saying today that the motion for concurrence in the report of the standing committee, having been moved already, should not be further proceeded with. The hon. member is asking Your Honour, under a Standing Order, to assume that responsibility, and he is asking Your Honour to assume that responsibility in the name of parliament.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. MacEachen: I just want to put this in context, Mr. Speaker. Today the member for Winnipeg North Centre is telling us that to proceed with this motion is a breach of parliamentary privilege. Last week he and the Leader of the Opposition told us if we did not proceed with it that it would be a breach of parliamentary privilege.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. MacEachen: The government house leader put a motion on the order paper that might have had the effect of superceding the motion moved by the chairman of the committee. The member for Winnipeg North Centre and the Leader of the Opposition were in their places shouting that we must respect the committee system and that we must have this report from the committee.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition in his speech on the motion said that by moving concurrence in the motion parliament had scored a victory. Today the same gentleman is telling us that to proceed with the motion is unparliamentary.

• (5:20 p.m.)

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. MacEachen: No wonder the credibility of the Leader of the Opposition and of the member for Winnipeg North Centre is wearing thin.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. MacEachen: No wonder there is disillusionment and cynicism about parliament when two leading members will take a position such as they took last week, and reverse it this week.

Some hon. Members: Shame, shame.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. MacEachen: No wonder the young people and the young members are fed up with double standards.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. MacEachen: No wonder they are fed up with double standards and double talk. This motion today asks that we do not proceed with the motion they begged us last week to proceed with, in respect of which they said if we did not proceed with it it would be a breach of parliamentary principle. That is the issue. They do not read their former speeches. They are so busy with television and the press that they cannot remember what they said last week or the week before.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Baldwin: On a point of order—

Mr. MacEachen: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member for Peace River (Mr. Baldwin) on a point of order.

Mr. Baldwin: Let it be correctly known that the point raised by myself, by the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield) and by the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) was not that this motion should be proceeded with but the other motion, the infamous motion put by the President of the Privy Council, should not be put. That was our position.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I think I should remind hon. members again that we are supposedly on a point of order. The point of order has reference to Standing Order 51, and I feel abandoned in that the hon. minister is not even referring to the Speaker.

Mr. MacEachen: Mr. Speaker, I assure you that there is in my mind nothing but the highest respect for the Chair

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. MacEachen: In reply to the point made by the hon. member for Peace River (Mr. Baldwin), Mr. Speaker, may I read from the speech of the Leader of the Opposition which has reference to the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald) and to this motion. The hon. member for Peace River just stated that they were fighting to oppose the motion of the President of the Privy Council. This is what the Leader of the Opposition had to say as recorded at page 11075 of Hansard:

> What changed his mind was that there was a motion coming from this side of the house concerning the failure of the committee chairman to move concurrence in his report as he had been instructed to do.

An hon. Member: So what?

[Mr. MacEachen.]

Mr. Baldwin: The rule of anticipation.

Mr. MacEachen: The plain conclusion is that the purpose of members opposite was to have the motion for concurrence moved—

Some hon. Members: No, no.

Mr. MacEachen: —otherwise it would be unparliamentary.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I wonder if the minister might be allowed to continue. It is very difficult for the Chair to hear what is being said at the present time.

Mr. MacEachen: Mr. Speaker, I was delighted that today for the first time the British House of Commons has been reinstated in the minds of members of the opposition. We have listened to this debate for many days and for the first time today was there a reference made by the member for Winnipeg North Centre to the British House of Commons. We have heard the Reichstag mentioned more often in this house in this debate than the British house. Why is that? Because no member of the opposition can make a respectable argument about the procedures that we are proposing if they take a moment to compare them with those of the British house. So they have swept that under the rug.

Today, Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre followed his point of privilege by quoting Bourinot on the principles which laid the basis for English parliamentary law. He went on to argue that it was unparliamentary and unconstitutional for a government, acting as a government, to propose a motion to change the rules of parliament. As I understand it that was the basic constitutional argument. Well, of course, strictly speaking what is before us is not a motion of the government. It is a motion from a standing committee, moved by the chairman, seeking concurrence in it. That is what is before the house, not a government motion. We could have had a government motion if hon. members had not opposed that idea. But the suggestion that it is unparliamentary, undemocratic and strikes at the basis of English parliamentary law for a government even to move a motion to change the rules drastically, is nothing but an invention from the mind of the member for Winnipeg North Centre.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. MacEachen: Mr. Speaker, we know that one of the great objectives of the new Labour government of Great Britain was to make drastic changes in the rules of the British house. We know that Richard Crossman, who was former house leader, had as one of his objectives, when he became a member of the Wilson ministry, the drastic changing of the rules of the British house. Why are we getting points of order based on British parliamentary law? In December, 1967, Mr. Speaker, the Labour government of Britain, acting in the British parliament under English parliamentary law, brought in the timetable motion, the very heart of the proposals that are before the house now. They tightened up the guillotine that had been in operation for a long time, and which had been used by Harold MacMillan to put through one bill in all its stages in a single motion. It had also been used by Arthur Greenwood, the Lord Privy Seal, to put two bills, all three stages wrapped up in a single motion, through the house by guillotine in one day after a debate. That is the rule of the house.

But when the Labour party came in they decided a day's debate on the guillotine was too much and not necessary. They said that instead of having a full day's debate on the guillotine motion,—which in the case I cited covered two bills and all stages in one motion—"Let us make it two hours." They had their rules passed by a majority of the British House of Commons, not by consent and not by a consensus, but by a majority—a government majority which took its responsibility and put the changes into effect.

• (5:30 p.m.)

Mr. Baldwin: Look at the mess they are in now.

Mr. MacEachen: Then it was apparent, and it is apparent today, that the government has to have its will. The opposition in Britain did not go crying to the Speaker to bail it out. As you know, Mr. Speaker, the impartial Speaker of the British house had very much more history to call on to safeguard independence, which is only commencing in this institution, but the British Speaker was not asked to say no, and he was not asked to take the responsibility of government.

An hon. Member: Did they use closure?

Mr. MacEachen: He was not asked to take on the responsibility of bailing out the frustrated and defeated opposition. The man who put forward the rules motion in Britain, and spoke to it, is no has been. He is still the foreign minister in the British government, the Right Hon. Michael Stewart.

An hon. Member: Let's come back to Canada.

Mr. MacEachen: He was a friend and an intimate of our N.D.P. colleagues. When the Wilson government was elected—

An hon. Member: You can have him.

Mr. MacEachen: —the gentlemen of the N.D.P. came in with their chests stuck out. They took more pleasure out of the election of Wilson than they did out of the election of Schreyer.

Is it unparliamentary to put this motion and you should not, Mr. Speaker, withdraw it? I say that on the basis of this motion you are in the same position as the Speaker of the British house, and there the motion was decided by the government, supported by a majority. They voted on the rules change proposed by the Right Hon. Michael Stewart and they debated it. That gentleman had this to say:

> Mr. Speaker, one can not run a parliament without an ultimate sanction to prevent a minority preventing the majority from getting their way.

Mr. Nowlan: Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Is the hon. member rising on a point of order?

Mr. Nowlan: Yes. Mr. Speaker, I should like to know, after the minister finishes making such a rousing speech, whether he would like to answer a question.

Some hon. Members: Order, order.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I asked the hon. member whether he was rising on a point of order, and if he is he should state what it is.

Mr. Nowlan: It was not a point of order, I rose to ask—

Some hon. Members: Order, order.

Mr. Nowlan: I rose in order to catch your eye and to ask for your indulgence in order to direct a question to the minister.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member of course can ask a question if the minister will entertain one, as I understand his time has not yet expired. Does the minister consent to the entertaining of a question from the hon. member for Annapolis Valley (Mr. Nowlan)?

Mr. MacEachen: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I will entertain it, but I do not know whether I will answer it.

Mr. Nowlan: I am sure he will not answer the question, but I should like to ask it. He made a rousing speech during which he referred to the Labour government in Britain which made rule changes in relation to one day and two hours. Did that government use closure?

Mr. MacEachen: In reference to closure both parties understood the inevitability of parliamentary progress in Britain. They fought and they had a vote. They did not have to apply closure.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. MacEachen: Just to clarify that point, I do not know if there is any way in the British house to apply closure as it is applied in the Canadian house. I do not know if this is provided for there.

Mr. Baldwin: Perhaps the minister would entertain another question. Is it not a fact that the parties reached an agreement to fix the time they were to use in that debate through "the usual channels?"

Mr. MacEachen: If they went through the usual channels why would they have a debate in the house? My hon. friend remembers that last December he put a similar motion which was decided on by a majority. The opposition in Britain would not accept the proposed rules and the motion went to a vote. That is what we ought to be doing now.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

An hon. Member: You are avoiding the point.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I hope the hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands (Mr. Douglas) does not mind me reminding him that we are, in theory, supposed to be considering at the present time a point of order under Standing Order 51. I have the impression, which becomes stronger and stronger after listening to speech after speech, that the point of order has been lost in the shuffle.

Mr. Stanfield: Something has certainly been lost.

[Mr. Speaker.]

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, I want to support both the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield) and the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) in their appeal to you under Standing Order 51. I want to congratulate the Minister of Manpower and Immigration (Mr. MacEachen) for making a 20 minute harangue without ever mentioning that point of order.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Whenever this government is in trouble it brings the Minister of Manpower and Immigration out of mothballs to be its hatchet man.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Now the government can put him back in cotton wool until it is in trouble again, which will not be long.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): As a matter of fact it is fortunate for the minister that the government gets into trouble periodically, because then the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) notices him, and that is something he has not been doing for some time.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I find it difficult to relate the hon. member's remarks to Standing Order 51.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, I can understand your concern, but I would point out that the minister in his remarks, allegedly on the point of order, demonstrated the arrogance of this government. He began his speech by saying that the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre and the Leader of the Opposition had no right to speak. I took this to be not only a reflection on those two hon. members but, literally, in respect of you, Sir after all, you are still conducting the affairs of the house in spite of the Minister of Manpower and Immigration.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): I am sure, Mr. Speaker, that if you need any direction on how to conduct the deliberations of this assembly you will be able to get it from someone more competent than the Minister of Manpower and Immigration. This was demonstrated by his speech.

The second thing he did was to say that we have no right to be making an appeal to you, Sir, with reference to the impropriety of seeking a change in the rules of the house by closure, and a change in the rules of the house unilaterally. This government is not only changing the rules of the house by closure but the minister now gets up and tells us that although Standing Order 51 is there we cannot use it because he has decided we ought not use it. The government is not only changing the written rules, it is now changing the rules as the debate goes on.

The minister knows perfectly well that this hocus-pocus about the opposition calling for the report of the Committee on Procedure and—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

• (5:40 p.m.)

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): —and Organization is the sheerest of nonsense. All the opposition groups opposed both the motion and the report. They opposed the report in the committee, they opposed it when it came to the house, and they are still opposing the report as is shown by the fact that the government has been forced to use closure.

We on this side of the house are not seeking to embarrass Your Honour or to place you in an invidious position. We recognize that the basic principle of parliament is that the Speaker does not offer any opinion on the substance of legislation or of a motion; that the Speaker is the arbiter of the house in dealing with matters of procedure. If this were a closure motion dealing with a bill or a resolution, as was the case with the Canadian flag, of course the Minister of Manpower and Immigration (Mr. MacEachen) would be quite right: we ought not to make an appeal to Your Honour under those circumstances.

We on this side of the house contend that changing the rules of the house is in a totally different category. We contend that the rules of the house are not the sole property of the government; that the rules of the house are the property of the entire House of Commons with Your Honour presiding.

An hon. Member: We are the majority.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): One hon. member on the other side has said they belong to the majority. That is exactly what we are objecting to.

Mr. Muir (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): Those are the members with six months' experience.

Mr. Comeau: That interjection was the maiden speech of the hon. member.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): In any democratic, deliberative assembly the minority, sent there by the people of the country, has only two kinds of protection. One is the protection provided by the rules of the house, rules that set forth clearly and succinctly a member's rights, prerogatives and privileges. That is the only thing that protects a minority against an arrogant majority drunk with power. That is the only protection a minority has against a majority that seeks to impose its will. If the majority can change the rules of the house unilaterally, the rights of the minority are automatically eroded.

In this instance there has been no consensus. In this instance the rule which is before the house was brought in, supported solely by the government members on the Committee on Procedure and Organization. In the House of Commons that report has been supported solely by government members, and it is now to be railroaded through, if the government has its way, entirely by the support of government members.

Some hon. Members: Shame.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): If a majority can at any time use its weight of numbers in the House of Commons to change the rules, how long will the rights of the minority in parliament continue to exist? If the government unilaterally can change the rules, as it is seeking to do now, what can it do next session and the session after that?

The Minister of Manpower and Immigration said that all these fears were inventions from the mind of the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles). If the government can change the rules to limit debate to one day on any stage of a bill, is there anything to prevent it next session limiting the time to two hours, or limiting debate to one speaker for each party in the house? Is there any end to what can happen to the rights of private members and the rights of minorities in this house? I think we have a right to appeal to Your Honour, as we shall eventually appeal to the conscience of the people of Canada—

Mr. Lessard (LaSalle): Be careful. You know what happened once before.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): —that a democratic assembly cannot continue to function efficiently and effectively if at any time a government of its own volition can change the rules of the house, particularly if those rule changes reduce, erode and restrict the rights of members of opposition parties.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): I need hardly point out to Your Honour that the real tragedy of what is happening is that no one in any part of the house wants the rules the government is now trying to ram through the house. The government does not want them. The government itself recognizes that the rules are poorly drafted, that they are unsatisfactory. It is quite possible that if a proper interpretation is put on 75B, then 75C will prove to be completely inoperable.

The government is not satisfied with this report. The opposition parties are not satisfied with it. But here is a government that is going to do violence to the whole spirit of parliamentary procedure in order to get itself a series of rules that nobody really wants, and with which nobody will be satisfied. And this did not have to happen. Continued consultation would have worked out a rapprochement. The parties were coming closer and closer together.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): I shall not repeat the various statements that have been made by the house leaders. Concessions have been made by all the parties in the house, which brought them closer together. The government would have been wise to have used the methods that were used in days gone by to seek a solution. Instead the government proposes to muzzle parliament and to railroad through rule changes by closure, thus setting a precedent that can have disastrous consequences in the years ahead.

Cromwell walked into the parliament at Westminster with his soldiers and said, pointing to the mace, "Take away that bauble". This government is chipping it away bit by bit, but the consequences might eventually be the same. I heard Aneurin Bevan once say that "in Germany democracy died by the headsman's axe; we must be careful that here it does not die of pernicious anaemia."

• (5:50 p.m.)

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): That is the danger, not the sudden, cataclysmic destruction of our democratic rights in one fell swoop like burning the Reichstag, but step by step eroding, restricting and constricting the rights of members of parliament, until what we have come to know as a democratic parliament is completely changed and altered.

I said we had two sources of defence: The first is the rules of the house which are now under attack and the second is Your Honour, who is the custodian of the rights and privileges of members of parliament. I should like to say to you, Mr. Speaker, that I have had the privilege over a good many years of sitting under many speakers, both in this parliament and in the provincial legislature, but I have never sat under a speaker whom I enjoyed more, for whom I had greater admiration, both for his fairness and for his skillfull handling of the house.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Irrespective of the decision which Your Honour may make today, I can assure you that that respect and affection will continue to be held by us all. But I say to you, Mr. Speaker, that the only final recourse we have, confronted by this unprecedented action, is to appeal to you under Standing Order 51, asking you to apprise the house that the matter before us is contrary to the rules and privileges of parliament.

We would not ask this on any question of substance. We would not ask this if the government were using closure to pass a motion dealing with something else, or to force through legislation. But we are contending that when the matter before the house has to do with something as critical, as fundamental, and as essential as the democratic rights of this House of Commons, we have a right to appeal to you.

In the final analysis opposition parties have only two rights of appeal; one is to you, Mr. Speaker, as the guardian and custodian of the rights of all members irrespective of party, and we make that appeal now. The other right of appeal is to the electorate, and we are prepared at any time to make that appeal and to ask the Canadian people what they think of this dictatorial action of the government.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I will be brief, and at the risk of being unfashionable in this debate I will address myself to the point of order raised by the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles). He said in his argument that the issue before us now is how we make our rules, by collective action, by consent or by governmental majority. I think that was the central point of his argument. The hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre is an experienced member of the house. He has been here a long time, since 1942, I believe.

An hon. Member: Too long.

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): No, not necessarily too long. Of course he has had a lot of experience with the rules in the past. He knows, and Mr. Speaker you even had the opportunity to point out to the house last December, that there has been in the past more than one way of amending the rules of the house. As he suggested, there has been the decision by a committee of which Mr. Speaker was chairman. Equally, there have been decisions in the past by committees in which Mr. Speaker did not participate, and on motions by the Minister of the Crown.

The hon. member appeared to make something of the fact that in recent years we have been studying and changing the rules of the house using a committee of which Mr. Speaker is not a member. It seems to me that one should consider that if this is a bad principle now, it must have been a bad principle back in 1967 in the last session of the last parliament when, with the support of the hon. member, a special committee was set up of which Mr. Speaker was not chairman.

It must have been wrong in 1968 when the hon. member supported the setting up of the special committee in the earlier part of this session, and indeed it must have been wrong when the hon. member, as well as all members of the house, gave consent to Standing Order 65 under which the present Standing Committee on Procedure and Organization was set up.

I submit to you, Mr. Speaker, that it was not wrong on those occasions, and it is not wrong now. Parliament decided last December 20 that we should change our rules by this system.

There is one other point, Mr. Speaker. As I said, the hon. member is very experienced. He will recall that back in 1965 he was interested in and followed the deliberations of the house when it considered changes in the procedure at that time. The changes were to introduce provisional Standing Order 15A, the allocation of time rule. Was it introduced in a report by a committee of which Mr. Speaker, was chairman? No, it was introduced by the prime minister of the day with the support of my colleague and predecessor as president of the privy council.

The fact of the matter was that there are precedents both ways in this regard. If you look back to the 1965 debate you will see, Mr. Speaker, that the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre with his procedural agility appeared time and time again in the pages of Hansard, commenting on this and that, as to what was being done, and on the procedure being followed, but at no time then did he make any suggestion that because the government had introduced a motion to change the rules of the house to bring into effect the allocation of time procedure it was contrary to Standing Order 51.

I suggest that if it was not contrary to Standing Order 51 then, it is not contrary to Standing Order 51 now.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Before we call it six o'clock and the house rises until eight o'clock, may I say that I have some doubts as to whether the debate should be continued under the provisions of the point of order raised by the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles), that is under the guise of Standing Order 51. I must say in all candour that I have the impression that if this debate is continued it will be at the expense of the Chair, and I have very serious reservations as to whether this should be allowed. I hope that hon. members will allow the Chair as to make a ruling on the point of order soon as possible.

Some hon. Members: Make it now.

Mr. Speaker: A moment ago I noticed that two or three hon. members wanted to rise. They are rising allegedly, but I am sure honestly, for the purpose of discussing the point of order. However, at the same time, whether we like it or not, it is extremely difficult to limit contributions in this kind of debate to the strictly procedural aspects of the matter. It is perhaps natural for hon. members, without wanting to do so, to touch on the substance of the matter. This is what I am afraid of, and I really feel somewhat embarrassed by the thought that this debate might continue until one o'clock tonight always inviting the Chair to make a ruling ultimately at one o'clock. If it is the wish of hon. members I can make a ruling immediately, after which the debate will continue on the motion before the house.

• (6:00 p.m.)

A few days ago the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre was kind enough to say that he intended to raise this particular point of order and since then, as I try to do in every such circumstance, I have given serious thought to the points he has raised. I came to the chair armed with many books and precedents from this parliament, from the British parliament, and even from other parliaments. I have Beauchesne, Bourinot, May and the Standing Orders with me, as well as a long prepared opinion which I reached as a result of my studies in the quiet of the Speaker's chambers.

I wonder whether it is necessary to go over the details, the procedural details of the situation. I say, perhaps with a bit of sadness in my heart, that the debate we are having now is, as I said a moment ago, at the expense of the Chair, though no hon. member wants that, neither the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles), nor the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield) nor any of the others who have taken part in the discussion. But in a situation such as this, which is so close to a partisan situation, I do not see how we could have a debate of this kind without the Speaker being in some way involved in partisan considerations.

What we have, according to my limited comprehension of such matters, is the report of a committee. Some hon. members have said, and no one doubts it, that the report is the report of the majority. At the same time, we do not have in our parliamentary system minority or majority reports; we have the report of a committee which is before the house for adoption or rejection.

What hon. members would like the Chair to do under the provisions of Standing Order 51 is to substitute his judgment for the judgment of certain hon. members. Can I do this in accordance with the traditions of Canada, of Britain and in all parliamentary systems where the Speaker is not the master of the house, in spite of what Standing Order 51 says? The Speaker is a servant of the house. Hon. members may want me to be the master of the house today but tomorrow, when, perhaps in other circumstances I might claim this privilege, they might have a different opinion.

It would make me a hero, I suppose, if I were to adopt the attitude that I could judge political situations such as this and substitute my judgment for that of certain hon. members, either a majority or, perhaps, sometimes a minority. But I do not believe that this is the role of a Speaker under our system. I am not prepared at this time to take this responsibility on my shoulders. I think it is my duty to rule on such matters in accordance with the rules, regulations and Standing Orders which hon. members themselves have turned over to the Speaker to administer.

I have a set of rules, and precedents by which I am guided. I recognize it is my duty to protect the privileges of hon. members and to protect minorities. I have always tried to do this, and I shall continue to do so. But I do not think that in the circumstances I can go so far in abandoning my responsibility as a servant of the house as to be its master and to give a ruling or judgment along the lines suggested by the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre.

I am not saying I accept in any way the procedures which have been followed, though I do not think it is for me to express at this time an opinion in this regard. I would only say that after sincere thoughts on the matter in accordance with my way of looking at the situation I cannot accept the suggestion put forward by the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre under the terms of Standing Order 51.

I hope hon. members will realise that this is not an easy decision for the Chair to reach. I hope I shall never be placed in a position again in which I have to make this kind of decision. I count on hon. members on both sides to ensure that the Chair is not again placed in such a position.

It being five minutes past six o'clock, I do now leave the chair.

At six o'clock the house took recess.

[Mr. Speaker.]

AFTER RECESS

The house resumed at 8 p.m.

Mr. R. N. Thompson (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the good will evident in the house at this moment. I have a few minutes left. Your Honour will recall that last Tuesday evening I mentioned that you might have an increasingly difficult time in controlling this house in future because of the breakdown in rapport and confidence between the two sides of the house which has been brought on by the government's closure action and because of the Prime Minister's negative attitude and disdain for the house. Little did I think that today, less than 48 hours later, I should see a minister of the Crown, the Minister of Manpower and Immigration (Mr. MacEachen), actually call Your Honour's actions in question and thus challenge your office.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Thompson: He not only questioned your judgment, Mr. Speaker, but he had the audacity to imply that Your Honour actually went beyond your authority in allowing the motion of the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles).

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. If the hon. member had been here at six o'clock he would recall my suggestion that this debate should be conducted in a way that will keep the Chair out of it.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps the hon. member might keep that in mind.

An hon. Member: Rewrite your speech now.

Mr. Thompson: I respect your position, Mr. Speaker. Certainly, it was not a pleasant experience this afternoon for one who listened to the minister and realized what was taking place.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Thompson: I emphasize again, Mr. Speaker, that I am concerned about what is taking place in parliament as the result of the government's unilateral and arbitrary decision to limit the length of debate at its own will. Again, I emphasize that parliament cannot be subservient to government, no matter what party forms the government. That is where hon. members opposite have gone off the track. Rules governing this parliament are not the prerogative of the government. They are the responsibility of parliament itself. The rules of this House of Commons belong to this House of Commons and the government uses these rules to obtain the consent of the house for the legislation it wishes to introduce. If the rules are to be satisfactory, and be of general benefit, they must be arrived at as a result of consensus. We must all consent to them, especially if parliament is to remain the voice of the people and free.

By utilizing these rules the government is able to function and carry out its specific responsibilities. I only wish that the Prime Minister and hon. members opposite had this thought more clearly in focus. The house leader and others on the government side say that because their party forms the government, they must control the house. They say that they have the majority in this house. The government may have the majority of seats in this house but it does not represent the majority of electors in this country. It represents about 45 per cent of our people and those who sit on the opposition side collectively represent about 55 per cent. That shows why the rules of the house must be arrived at as a result of agreement in the house, because we must safeguard not only the minority but also the majority.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Thompson: I do not think that the majority of government supporters are behind this measure, Mr. Speaker. In today's Toronto Telegram I read that Ontario Liberals have protested against the government's closure. The article reads in part—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I hesitate to interrupt the hon. member but his time has expired unless he has the unanimous consent of the house to continue.

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I gather from the negative response in the house that we shall be deprived of the pleasure of hearing the rest of the hon. member's speech.

Mr. Thompson: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, you will no doubt recall that it was agreed last Tuesday that I be given an extra few minutes to make up for the constant interruptions from the government side. I wonder if I might have those few minutes to enable me to finish my remarks?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I am now taking that into account and I am sure that all hon. members will agree to allow the hon. member an extra minute.

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Thompson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. May I quote a few sentences from the article to which I referred?

> A mass demonstration was planned for today outside the Provincial Liberal headquarters—
>
> More than 3,000 pamphlets were being handed out to the public, protesting "the threats which now seem to be posed to parliamentary and participatory democracy—"
>
> Rule 75c in its current form is extremist and we believe it does not reflect the views of any political party in Canada, including the Liberals.

I conclude by saying that this is indeed a dark day for parliament and participatory democracy.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): This debate, Mr. Speaker, is no longer concerned with the subject with which it commenced some two weeks ago. It has strayed considerably. At the outset of this debate, the issue before you, Mr. Speaker, was the desirability or otherwise of adopting a technique for the allocation of time to legislative debate. That, however, is no longer the issue. The issue has been changed by the opposition parties who allege that more is involved than mere procedural reform, that at stake in this debate is nothing less than the role of parliament itself.

The opposition parties contend, and they have repeated this contention again and again, inside the house and out, that the opposition possesses the right to debate, and by debating indefinitely delay passage of any legislative proposal for as long as the opposition desires;—

Mr. Monteith: That is completely wrong.

Mr. Trudeau: —that if this so-called "right" is impaired—

Mr. Monteith: Again, that is completely wrong.

Mr. Trudeau: —parliament itself will be injured. Parliament will be destroyed. This is an important, if novel, contention, Mr. Speaker, and I hope that the opposition's efforts to publicize it have been successful. I hope that all concerned Canadians are acquainted with such a theory. For what has been put forward, and claimed by the opposition as non-negotiable principle, is a series of propositions for which no precedent exists elsewhere and for which no need has been shown here.

Parliamentary democracy, as defined so far in this debate by hon. members opposite, becomes something other than a system which gives to the majority party in the House of Commons the right to ask parliament for some decision upon the legislation the government deems necessary in order to carry out its mandate to the people.

Parliamentary democracy is not, according to this opposition definition, a system which permits the majority party to demand a vote on the proposals it seeks to incorporate into statute as solutions to the needs of the nation.

These views, Mr. Speaker, are, if nothing more, highly original, and if accepted by the government would revolutionize political theory. I should hesitate to accept them, however, without knowing more about them. Where in this scheme, for example, lies the responsibility for legislating, Mr. Speaker? Apparently nowhere. In its place we are told that parliamentary democracy no longer means government by the majority, with adequate protections for the rights of the minority. Instead, it seems to mean that a minority of the members of the house have the right to block for indefinite periods the wishes of the majority of Canadians as expressed in general elections.

• (8:10 p.m.)

If this be the opposition's view of what democracy is all about, it is fortunate that the people of Canada have been given this opportunity to learn of it. If the opposition accords so little respect to parliament that it defines governing as evil, that getting on with the job is regarded as tyranny, then I am happy to be given the chance to join issue. When the people of Canada returned this government to office they gave to it the responsibility of governing. We accepted that responsibility. We shall gladly leave to the electorate the assessment as to how that responsibility has been discharged during our term in office.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Trudeau: We leave to the electorate as well the assessment of which side of this house respects parliament more, that which engages in repetitious speeches that serve to deny the passage of legislation indefinitely; perhaps that which chooses on occasion to play games with the rules or hide-and-seek in the lobby curtains and then counts the result as a great tactical victory; or that which asks only to get on with the nation's business.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Trudeau: We have been told here, Mr. Speaker, that the government's view of parliament is wrong, that the possibility of endless debate is laudatory and that we are impatient and arrogant. Canadians are being told, in effect, that in the view of the opposition the world has stood still since 1867 and that the Canadian parliament should do the same.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Trudeau: We do not accept that view, Mr. Speaker, nor do I suggest, do Canadians. At this point in time, with social structures in greater ferment than on any occasion in history, with scientific achievements of fantastic magnitude, with concepts and applications of concepts so complex and revealing as to stagger and refute previous economic and demographic truths, at this time in history legislative institutions which fail to reform themselves do so at peril of their own destruction.

[Translation]

What has this government done in this session of Parliament to lead the opposition to charge that we are guilty of emasculation, of garotting, of assassination, of all those colourful phrases that have been sprinkled through Hansard these past days? What indeed?

Here are some of the Parliamentary reforms which have been made this year.

First, we have participated fully, Mr. Speaker, in implementing the wise proposal that the office which you fill with such distinction be separated totally from party politics.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Trudeau: We have in addition provided, for the first time in the history of this country, large sums of money to the opposition parties to permit them to employ their own research staffs and so be better able to fulfill effectively their proper function of examining and considering government legislation, of pointing out weaknesses and proposing, if necessary, alternatives. But this is not all. This government has been the first to provide to the opposition adequate and regular opportunities to bring into this House matters of debate of its own choice. The importance of this latter provision cannot be over-emphasized.

Hitherto, apart from supply motions which were generally concentrated in one or two short periods each session, the opposition has been able to control totally the topics discussed during debate on only two occasions: during the Throne Speech debate and during the debate following the presentation of the budget. In short, the opposition had had few opportunities in the past to choose the subject of debate.

For these reasons the rule changes introduced and passed by Parliament this year are outstanding achievements of which we are proud.

We are told that we are bent on muzzling the opposition, Mr. Speaker, but from now on, under the reforms which we have proposed to the house, of approximately 160 or 170 sitting days in a reasonable parliamentary year, 8 days are to be occupied by the debate on the Address in reply to the Speech from the Throne, 6 by the Budget debate, and an additional 28 are earmarked for the business of Supply and are allocated as opposition days, to be distributed throughout the sitting year so as to permit the opposition at frequent and regular intervals to challenge government policy on points of its own choosing. This means that 42 days in each session—approximately 25 per cent of the session—are days controlled by the opposition.

I think it proper to observe, Mr. Speaker, that in the current procedural debate, the opposition has chosen either not to mention at all, or to pass very lightly over the introduction of this important parliamentary safeguard. Far from fettering parliament, this government has moved further than any in the history of Canada to assure to the opposition regular and adequate opportunities to attack the government's record, and we have given them the means, Mr. Speaker.

Are these the acts of a government which is seeking to destroy parliament, to muzzle the opposition? Are these the acts of a government which has no respect for the principle of debate? To ask the question, Mr. Speaker, is to give the answer. To ask the question puts into proper perspective as well the accusations of the opposition in this debate. It serves to emphasize the contrasting attitudes to Parliament assumed by the opposition and the government. It illustrates for all Canadians just what little respect is shown for Parliament by an opposition making such exaggerated charges.

It is normal in any legislature that bills must often be given priority by the government, not because of their importance, but because of their urgency. What happens in Canada but not elsewhere is that if unreasonable debate delays passage of such urgent bills, then the important ones may never be dealt with at all. The result is that a form of closure is introduced not by the government but by the opposition; closure of government business by exclusion of it from the Commons' order paper through the lack of time to deal properly with it; closure, Mr. Speaker, by frustration.

Every democratic assembly requires some procedure for turning discussion into decision. In the parliaments of the United Kingdom, of Australia, of New Zealand, and of India, there are procedures for bringing on decisions. It is simply non-responsive to this need to say, as hon. members opposite interject from time to time, that closure is available. Closure is indeed available. It is available as well at Westminster and available in most other parliaments. But it does not in these places stand alone. It does not stand alone because its very clumsiness, its time-consuming procedures, demand that it be used only infrequently.

For instance, what happened in the house yesterday and up until now shows how precarious a measure closure is and how inefficient it can be at times.

At the report stage of the Omnibus Criminal Code Bill, for example, closure would have had to be moved approximately 30 times, exhausting some 60 sitting days, almost 3 months, in order to deal with all amendments. We must not forget that the rule of closure cannot be applied to proceedings of standing committees which, therefore, can extend the debates over a very long period of time if not forever.

For this reason, closure is complemented elsewhere by other techniques, in the British House of Commons, for example.

• (8:20 p.m.)

[English]

Every democratic assembly recognizes that issues will arise from time to time which the minority in all conscience cannot accept, which the minority in order to be true to its values must oppose vigorously and never concede. This is right and proper. It is one of the bases on which rest our democratic institutions. No doubt the allocation of time rule which we are debating now is one example of such an issue which the opposition feels it must oppose vigorously and forever. But that base of having a right to speak is not the only base. It is complemented by periodic tests of the will of the electorate to give to the people at large the opportunity to pass judgment on the acts of the majority, and on the attitude of the minority. In a democracy the ballot box, not the filibuster, is the ultimate and appropriate technique of assessment.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Trudeau: Recognizing this principle, Westminster, the so-called "Mother of Parliaments", has survived its own adoption years ago of a time-allocation rule. If that bastion of free debate continues to flourish, what weight should the people of Canada give to the present opposition cries that a rule be voted on in reasonable time. In addition, the opposition must be given reasonable opportunity at regular intervals to bring before the house those matters of complaint about government actions which it feels must be aired in public. Prior to this session, the rules of parliament did not offer adequate opportunity for either of these things to be done. The rules, as already changed by this government in the earlier part of this session, have given to the opposition the right which it should have had a long time ago. What the government now seeks is nothing more than a right which it needs equally as much and which has been recognized as deserving and reasonable by most parliamentary institutions in the world.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Trudeau: There is yet another perspective to this debate, Mr. Speaker. In dozens of newly independent countries democratic legislatures are now being tested to determine whether the parliaments now in existence elsewhere are credible models. If we here hope to serve as evidence of the ability of a parliamentary system to adapt and to adjust, to serve better the needs of a changing society, better than any authoritarian structure, to be relevant to the demands made upon it, we must not deny the need for change, nor refuse to accommodate that need. Perhaps most important, we must not eschew techniques which have proved successfuly elsewhere.

In this case we propose the adoption of a procedural rule which has been in use in the Mother of Parliaments for many years, a rule which has proved useful and necessary in the British House of Commons during that period and which no one here can say has in any sense circumscribed the democratic effectiveness of the opposition parties there; a rule which has been employed by both Conservative and Labour governments of Britain and which has been retained without repeal through several changes of government. Nevertheless and notwithstanding this need, notwithstanding this precedent, notwithstanding this evidence, we are still told by the opposition that this provision will destroy parliament.

Really now, Mr. Speaker! It is not this provision which endangers parliament, but rather such inaccurate talk as will lead Canadians and others elsewhere to doubt the ability of the parliamentary system to work honestly;—

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Trudeau: —such inflated accusations as will cause Canadians and others to lose faith in parliament as a means of conducting the legislative business of this and other countries.

The landing this week of a man on the moon is vivid evidence of the speed of change in men's lives. In a timeframe of less than seven decades in length, a period shorter than man's biblical life span, man has ceased to remain earthbound and has reached out into his universe with a skill and a success that promises future change at an even more bewildering a rate of acceleration. If this parliament, which is charged with the responsibility of assimilating these technological changes into legislation for the benefit of Canadians, cannot keep pace, then Canadians will seek other institutions which are capable of doing so. We have no choice. Parliament is not inviolate to rules of nature. It must be relevant. It will adapt or it will perish.

This government has revealed to the people of Canada how it chooses to be adjudged. I do not hesitate to declare again the confidence of my government in the future of Canada, in the future of Canadians, and in the future of this parliament of which we are all so justly proud. This proposed change will not weaken parliament, Mr. Speaker, it will strengthen it and permit it to accomplish the great tasks of nation building which devolve upon it and which now demand attention. These rules, Mr. Speaker, are needed now.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. David Lewis (York South): Mr. Speaker, I can tell hon. members in the house that I listened to the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau)—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Lambert (Edmonton West): Far more than government members ever did.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I do not claim the status of the Prime Minister in this house but he was given a very careful and respectful hearing and I think other hon. members should be given the same careful and respectful hearing.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

• (8:30 p.m.)

Mr. Lewis: I was saying that, like all hon. members here in this house, I listened to the Prime Minister with great interest. It saddens me to say this, but I think in all honesty I must say I have seldom heard a speech which contained such a complete distortion of the position of the opposition.

The Prime Minister stated that the position of the opposition was to claim the right, and he used this word, to "indefinitely"—and he did use it a number of times—indefinitely delay the debate on legislation. That is an utter, complete, unfair and conscienceless distortion.

Even before this Prime Minister came into this house, and before he joined a political party, there were members in this house—I was one of them, and there were many others—who spoke in this house and all across Canada about the need to change the rules of parliament to make it more efficient.

The reason for that distortion was evident in some of the other things the Prime Minister said. In fact, there was a twofold reason. The first was that he knew the present rule which he has placed before the house is indefensible, autocratic and unworkable. The second reason is that he made such an extravagant distortion of the position of the opposition that he had to defend against the fact, and it is a fact to which I will come back in a minute or two, that all the parties in the house were beginning to move toward a position of accommodation when he, and it must have been he because he is the power in the Liberal party, said there would be no more negotiation, there would be closure—this is what they will take and nothing else.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Lewis: I deny utterly, not only in the name of my colleagues, the members of this party, but in the name of other members of the opposition as I am sure they agree, that we wanted unlimited or indefinite debate in this house. The Prime Minister said that if you have extravagant debate you will lead people into thinking that the parliamentary system cannot work honestly. I suggest that he has a duty to be honest in his statements in the same speech.

The Prime Minister has not been in the house for much of the debate, except in the last couple of days when he was apparently waiting to rise in his seat, but he must have learned, even though he was not here, that every spokesman for every opposition party declared himself on behalf of his party ready to arrive at a scheme of allocation of time and limitation on time for debate.

An hon. Member: That is not true.

Mr. Lewis: It is absolutely true and if the Minister of Economic Regional Expansion (Mr. Marchand) says it is a lie, I tell him the lie goes right back into his mouth where it belongs. I am not going to pursue that because that is not what this debate should be about.

Let me say briefly, because my time is limited, that members should recall, along with the people of Canada, that a committee worked, not only in the last few months but for a few years before this session began, to change the rules and improve the procedures of this house. As a result of that work by the committee of this house and as a result of its recommendations—not as a result of the Prime Minister and the Liberal party—it unanimously proposed to this parliament a new way of dealing with the estimates and allotted days. This was not a decision of the government or the Prime Minister, it was the result of the work of a parliamentary committee.

Furthermore, and the Prime Minister has probably forgotten this, there are now 28 allotted days, but immediately before this change there were 38 allotted days for the consideration of estimates and non-confidence motions. Two, three or four years before that, there was unlimited time for the consideration of the estimates in this parliament. Those changes, I repeat because of the arrogance of the Prime Minister, were not the result of action on the part of this government, but the result of recommendations of an all-party committee that unanimously decided on this action.

This committee laboured hard. The members could not arrive at a unanimous decision in respect of the entire rule 75. What did it agree upon? Let us realize the importance of this? I will come back to my attitude in a minute, if I have one left.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

An hon. Member: We were worried about that.

Mr. Lewis: I can only say touché; I meant if I had a minute left. This committee agreed on 75A and 75B. What does that mean? That means an attempt by the parties of parliament to limit the time of debate. It means the rights formerly held by individual members of parliament, including the right to squeeze the government, if you like, for as long as the rules of parliament would permit until they got something for their constituencies or something that their electors sent them to this house to get, would be completely lost under 75A and 75B. It means that no individual under these rules could get up and refuse unanimous consent. Under 75A and 75B an individual member would not have the right to interfere with the progress of the house—not a single member or indeed ten, twenty or fifty members. This right would be withdrawn because the measure would be decided by a vote of the majority of this house. This was what was given up and agreed upon.

The Prime Minister has gone a step beyond this with 75C. Negotiations between house leaders and the President of the Privy Council resulted in some concessions. The official opposition made a number of concessions and accommodations. We made suggestions for accommodation, and I would like to deal for a minute or two with them.

We said to the government, and I was not there but I am sure that the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) presented this fully and carefully to the members of all parties, that we appreciated the debate on second reading is a debate on principle and that the principle could be stated and discussed in a couple of days, just as well as in four or five days. We admitted that the third reading stage is the apex of the entire process, and that when the clauses of the bill have already been passed this could be dealt with in a couple of days, but we said this cannot apply to the report stage.

We have upgraded the committees of this house, and instead of the committee of the whole we now have the report stage. As I have said and I repeat, it is utterly unreasonable to try, ahead of time, to limit the debate at the report stage. How can you do that? The present rule, as I understand it—and I will be corrected if I am wrong—is that if there is no amendment on the order paper at the report stage, there is no debate at all.

• (8:40 p.m.)

Mr. Woolliams: Right.

Mr. Lewis: Whether the debate should be half a day, one day, two, three, four or five days obviously depends on the number of amendments on the order paper, and not only the number but their importance, the weight of the issues with which the amendments deal. It is utterly stupid, to use an adjective the Prime Minister used in another connection much less reasonably, to suggest in a rule that you will limit debate during the report stage, when the report stage of every bill is an entirely different thing. In one case it may require no debate at all; in another case it may require a debate of an hour or two; in a third case it may require a day, and in a fourth case it may require five or six days, without delaying anything but dealing as honestly and as briefly as possible with the ideas of hon. members which they have the right to place on the order paper for the consideration of parliament.

We said to the government we would agree to a limitation of time on all the other stages, but the report stage should be removed from that limitation. It was possible to discuss the matter further. If the President of the Privy Council had not, on the orders of the Prime Minister, a cabinet committee or the cabinet, I do not know which, closed off discussion, I am certain that some accommodation would have been found. Personally, I felt that if we could not agree upon removing the report stage from 75c, a sensible way of dealing with the matter would have been to place the matter in the hands of Mr. Speaker of this house. In the light of the number of amendments that are put on the order paper and which he now has the duty to consider and decide whether they are in order, to group together wherever grouping is reasonable, and the duty and right to defer votes wherever that was good for the progress of the house, Mr. Speaker could have been given the authority, perhaps after consultation with the house leaders of the various parties, to set a reasonable time limit on debate, bearing in mind the weight of the amendments. This would have been a perfectly reasonable accommodation which would have been made if the government had not been determined to put this stupid, unworkable rule on the order paper.

I agree with the Prime Minister that parliament will not go to pot by the introduction of 75c. The people of Canada will make sure that in the future there will be the kind of government in this House of Commons that will protect parliamentary and democratic rights.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Lewis: I said that I wanted to say something about my own attitude. I tell you frankly, Mr. Speaker, that I do not get excited about rules, as some people do.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Lewis: I do not think that one particular rule or another will do this or that, in the long run, for the Canadian people. I do not have a technocratic approach to this question. I do not think we will settle the problems of Canada and the Canadian people by setting up a framework and believing that everything else will magically fall into place. This seems to be the belief of the Prime Minister. I do not believe in that kind of thing.

All the time we have spent on this question would not have been worthwhile if it were not for the fact that the government would not even look at the rule which the committee report proposes and see how stupid and unworkable it is, how it is designed to invite chaos in future sessions of this parliament.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Lewis: We are not discussing limitation of time in the abstract; we are discussing a particular rule which is before us. Rule 75B provides that if a majority of the parties in the house agree on something, there is an agreement.

An hon. Member: Brilliant!

Mr. Lewis: Unless there is no agreement, 75c cannot be imposed. I would, as a lawyer, be prepared to bet a great deal on whatever reputation I have in that realm that if the three opposition parties wanted to agree every time, they would produce an agreement under 75B and the President of the Privy Council would be unable to say to Mr. Speaker, "No agreement has been reached with regard to this piece of legislation". The government recognizes that.

I have tried hard to understand the government's position in this respect. I have listened to a great deal of the debate and read much more of it in Hansard. Why should the government have insisted on closure and on ramming this meaningless, unworkable rule down the throat of parliament, thereby inviting chaos in future sessions of this parliament? Would the Canadian people have lost anything if the committee had been asked to study the matter further and bring in a rule that made sense? Would the Canadian people have lost anything, would this parliament have lost anything, if we had adjourned and the government had taken the time to clean up this rule and to make at least the changes which the President of the Privy Council said must be made? I suggest that the answer is obviously no.

It would have been a sensible, responsible attitude of any government and any Prime Minister who did not believe in his divine right to govern and were not determined to impose their will on parliament, though that imposition made no sense even from their point of view. They were just going to show the opposition who is boss here. I can see no other purpose. When I look across this aisle from time to time—I say this not too offensively, I hope—and observe the disdain with which the Prime Minister treats parliament, and the way he looks at us in the opposition, I often say to myself: There but for the grace of Pierre Elliott Trudeau sits God.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Lewis: He sits there stern and severe, Mr. Speaker. Why do this to the house? Why create the atmosphere which is here now? What does participatory democracy mean, if I may use that favourite phrase? Does it mean merely the possibility of some people saying something some time at the will of the Prime Minister or a minister of the crown? What are our young people in Canada crying out for? Are they crying out merely for the opportunity to have a meeting—

An hon. Member: They are not crying out for you, anyway.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Lewis: Are they crying out merely for an opportunity to have a minister of the Crown, the leader of my party or the leader of the Conservative party appear at a meeting to speak to them? Participatory democracy, in any genuine sense, means giving people an opportunity to participate in the decision-making process of the country, giving them an opportunity to feel that the environment in which they live is one they have helped to fashion. Apply that to this parliament. Are not the members of this house as entitled to that kind of participatory democracy as anyone else in Canada? Is it not our duty to be a part of the decision-making process of parliament? And is a decision made merely by a vote? Surely, not!

• (8:50 p.m.)

Surely, it is a most simplistic and idiotic idea to say that a decision is made only by a vote. The process of decision making is more complicated than that. It is an exchange of ideas. It is listening to other proposals. It is producing a program which emanates from both sides of the house. This is what is now to be in the hands of the government alone under rule 75c. That is why we say it is a bad thing.

Many years ago I said at a meeting in one city in the country that in my view the days when parliament was a bear pit where the government and the opposition faced each other in battle are gone. Nowadays, parliament has more positive things to do and must play a more constructive role.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. It is most difficult to hear the hon. member's speech when there are these interjections.

Mr. Lewis: I think I can say without immodesty that, perhaps on many occasions in this parliament, I have shown that not only do I believe in the constructive work that must be done in parliament but I think I have participated in it. I think I can point without shame to my participation in the parliamentary committee dealing with collective bargaining for the public service and I think I can point without shame to my participation in the special committee on the official languages bill, to mention only two things. But I do not believe that the constructive work of parliament can be done by an unenforceable law. Every law which is not enforceable is a bad law. I do not believe that the constructive work of parliament can be done if the government is to have every right in its hands.

Mr. Speaker: I regret I have to interrupt the hon. member but his time expired a few moments ago. He can continue with the agreement of the house.

Some hon. Members: Continue.

Mr. Speaker: I believe there is agreement.

Some hon. Members: No, no.

Mr. Speaker: It is difficult for the Chair to ignore the negative voices. I regret to say that the hon. member cannot continue.

Mr. Lewis: As I was saying, Mr. Speaker, I do not believe—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I will ask again whether the hon. member has the agreement of the house to continue.

Some hon. Members: No.

[Translation]

Mr. Réal Caouette (Témiscamingue): Mr. Speaker, I shall point out that I represent the constituency of Témiscamingue, not that of Villeneuve. In any event, I would hate myself if I did not say a few words at this time on the new Standing Orders proposed by the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald) and by the government.

I was listening moments ago to the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) telling us about the great kindness he had shown the opposition. He said, for instance, that considerable amounts of money had been made available to opposition parties in order to facilitate research, to study legislative proposals, to find their weaknesses, so as to better discuss them.

On the other hand, the Prime Minister says to the opposition: from now on, debate on this or that bill will be restricted to so many days.

He makes me think of someone who takes the opposition members for school children to whom one gives candy to win them over. I saw once a man trying to break a horse in a corral; he did not show the halter, he hid it behind his back and held a dish full of oats in his hand to get the horse to come to him. Then, as soon as the horse started to eat oats, he put the halter on it.

That is about the way the Prime Minister is trying to treat the opposition. We are being offered a dish of oats and then the halter, in the form of rule 75c.

Mr. Speaker, for the last two days the Prime Minister has been busy repeating on local and national news casts, on CBC radio and television, that the opposition parties are talking drivel, that the opposition members are drivelers who are merely trying to keep the debates going interminably, wasting the time of the house, and so on. But if there are drivelers in the house, they are not to be found in the opposition but there on the government side.

The government is trying to impose rule 75c, and I will tell you exactly why. The opposition of the Ralliement Créditiste to the omnibus bill to amend the Criminal Code, on which the Prime minister had set his heart, is the reason why the government is now presenting rule 75c. And after that, they will come and tell us that the rights and privileges of the opposition parties are not interfered with. The President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald) even said, and I quote:

> —I do not expect hon. members to accept this. On the other hand, surely they cannot expect me to encourage a system under which a small group of members would control the activity of the house.

Mr. Speaker, our purpose was not at all to control the business of the house, but to take enough time to arouse public opinion in Canada and to enable the people of Canada to express their views to the government. This is what displeased the Prime Minister and this is why he will not forgive the Créditistes their fight against the omnibus bill.

Mr. Speaker, what we are doing here is no concern of the Prime Minister's. If the official opposition or the New Democratic party wages a fight against a bill, it does not behoove either the Prime Minister or the government to decide when that party will lay down its arms. It will fall, however, to the Canadian people to decide whether that political party abused public confidence, or the privileges of the house; when election time comes, the people will have their say. We have seen examples of it before. In 1964, we voted with the government of the right hon. Mr. Pearson, to impose closure at the time of the famous Canadian flag debate, and the one who opposed the most vigorously the Canadian flag, the right honourable member for Prince Albert (Mr. Diefenbaker) shocked not public opinion but his own followers to the extent where they replaced him as soon as they were able to do so.

Mr. Speaker, it is up to the people to decide whether or not a party deserves its confidence.

Let us go back to the great pipe-line debate in 1956: the one who fought to get the bill through, former minister C. D. Howe, lost the following election in 1957, in the riding of Port Arthur, to a young New Democratic teacher, Douglas Fisher, for having moved closure.

Mr. Speaker, it is public opinion which threw out the right hon. C. D. Howe. It is also public opinion which rejected the Liberal government in 1957, and elected a Progressive Conservative government.

Mr. Speaker, it is not the responsibility of a political party or a government to impose rules such as standing order 75c which they want to ram down the throat of the Canadian people.

Mr. Speaker, drivelers are not all in the opposition. There are some on the government side.

As far as extending the debate on the omnibus bill, the Canadian people will judge us in that respect. We fought in earnest. We fought with conviction and I cannot see why a government would now want to practically render the opposition powerless to carry on the struggle.

If we do not have the right to take the necessary time to arouse public opinion about a bill, what is the use of parliament? Why not resort to standing orders 75c and 75d in order to abolish all opposition parties?

The Prime Minister boasts about the fact that he gave us 28 days to blame the government but what bills can the opposition introduce in the house? We can criticize the government for a day or for 28 days but that does not change the legislation. The government alone has the right to prepare and introduce legislation. Now it practically takes away from us the right to discuss that legislation when the time comes to do so.

The government talks about improving parliamentary procedure. But the closure rule is nothing new. I heard the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald) say the other day "We will almost never use section 75c." Then, why include it in the standing orders of the house?

Opposition parties were willing to accept sections 75a and 75b, but not 75c which constitutes a permanent closure rule. Tonight we are witnessing, I repeat we are witnessing the last hours of parliamentary democracy. With standing order 33, they want to impose on us a permanent closure rule, known as section 75c.

Mr. Speaker, if that is democracy as the Prime Minister understands it, it is a democracy that strangely resembles what I saw in Moscow a few years ago and what is to be seen now in Communist China, under Mao Tse-tung.

Mr. Speaker, when debates are hindered, when the opposition is prevented from expressing its views, as I said a while ago, what is the use of an opposition? The Prime Minister said that a minority cannot impose its views on a majority. Therefore, must we always submit to the majority, refrain from discussing government measures, be content with receiving the allowances the Prime Minister says he has granted the opposition for research work, and then have no longer the right to debate anything? We are being gagged with section 75c.

Mr. Speaker, the opposition parties are not the only ones protesting against Standing Order 75c. I was reading today various Canadian newspapers—not Conservative, Progressive or N.D.P. papers—but papers of a certain intellectual standing that are against Standing Order 75c.

I have before me an editorial from the Montreal Gazette of July 24—it is not so long ago—and the writer warns the government against the passage of Standing Order 75c.

Finally, let us reverse the roles somewhat. If the Prime Minister were sitting in the place of the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield), what would he honestly say about Standing Order 75c? He would fight against the government that would want to muzzle him.

Well, we have the right to fight the government who wants to muzzle us. We do not accept closure and the government will not impose it upon us tonight, at one o'clock. I quote this editorial:

• (9:00 p.m.)

[English]

If that parliamentary majority approves of what the government proposes, then democracy is in action and must not be hindered. This doctrine, however, omits something which is essential. The government is very unlikely to receive critical review from its own supporters—

[Translation]

We have only to look in front of us to see that members do not rise often to criticize the government. They cheer at random, they howl because they are held up and caught, because they are put on the spot, because they have to do it, because they are afraid and it is with such spineless followers that an appeal is made to democracy in action in a country like ours.

[English]

The government is very unlikely to receive critical review from its own supporters, least of all in parliament. The majority which approves its proposals in parliament is a highly regulated majority. It is subject to all the pressures and penalties which any government in power may exert to regulate its followers.

Look at the regulation!

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Caouette: They are regulated under the regulations of the party in power.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, about the stab that is to be given at one a.m. to the right to debate in the house, I say that many who will vote in favour of this rule, will regret it in a few years. But, then, it will be too late. We are being sucked into one-sided decisions. We are moving towards we do not know what. The Prime Minister, to conceal the perfidy of rule 75c, talks to us about the men who have travelled to the moon.

I wonder why he did not join those travellers to the moon a few days ago, but for one way only.

Mr. Speaker, the rule of closure was first applied on April 24, 1913. A debate had lasted from December 12, 1912, to April 10, 1913. At that time, the Conservative government applied the rule of closure. It was applied twice in 1917 and, then, was not invoked for four years.

The closure rule was applied by the Borden administration in 1917, on third reading of the Canadian National Railways bill.

It was applied a second time when the War-time Elections Act was being considered. The war in question is that of 1914-1918.

It was applied again in 1921 by the Meighen government, in connection with interim supply.

It was also applied in 1932, by the Bennett government during a debate on unemployment. Mackenzie King said on that occasion that it was "the most arbitrary and most coercive measure a government could enforce." He expressed the hope that it would not be considered as a precedent.

His 1969 successor is trying to show us the bright side of a system that is gagging us, of a system that presents us from saying what we have to say. The goes on merely repeating that the opposition members are always making the same speeches and always singing the same tune.

It is sometimes important to repeat a speech when people do not understand or refuse to understand. Again I say that rule 75c could have been entirely discarded as recommended or suggested by the opposition. Rule 75A and 75B were enough. We would have gone on discussing here in the house while allocating reasonable periods of time for the consideration of government legislation.

Mr. Speaker, today it is a so-called Liberal who is applying the closure rule and who wants to make it permanent with this section 75c of the standing orders.

In 1956, it was applied four times in the space of 22 days by the Liberals during the pipe line debate. On May 14 1956, the Right Hon. C.D. Howe gave notice of the motion and on May 15 it was adopted. On May 30, prime minister St-Laurent gave a similar notice in the course of the debate on the bill to establish the crown corporation known as the Northern Ontario Pipeline. On May 31, the Right Hon. Louis St-Laurent had the legislation passed on quite recently, on December 14, 1964, the present solicitor general (Mr. McIlraith) took the same stand on the sixth report of the flag committee.

This measure always tends to cut off protracted debates.

Standing order 33 states that no member shall rise to speak after one o'clock in the morning and that the question should then be put.

Tonight, at one o'clock, the vote will be taken Mr. Speaker. We said what we had to say, we said what we thought and I think the government had in hand everything required to make progress in the business of the house.

Indeed, citation 88 of the fourth edition of Beauchesne reads as follows:

Let us now briefly indicate the influence directly exercised by the leader of the house on the course of business.

—of the house. In the present case, it means the President of the Privy Council.

It is his task in the name of the government and the party in office, to distribute over the session the programme of legislation announced in the king's speech and to advocate it in the house.

That is the responsibility of the house leader of the government.

He assumes the duty of proposing all such motions concerning the agenda of the house as are deemed advisable by the government and is their spokesman in the debate thereon.

When a bill is brought before the house, it becomes almost the sole responsibility of the government house leader. It falls to him to introduce a priority bill or one which is more important than another. And that is what the government has failed to do in the past. The government has failed to introduce the most urgent bills, the most important ones to deal, for instance, with Canada's economic problems.

We have been fighting for three weeks over section 75c while the number of unemployed is increasing in Canada, while the wheat problem has yet to be solved in the West even if $250 million have been promised and while the problem of milk production has not yet been solved in eastern Canada. So, our economic problems are not settled, but bills are being introduced so that the members of the house will spend four or five weeks discussing them.

Mr. Speaker, the President of the Privy Council is the one responsible for this situation.

• (9:10 p.m.)

As for the government bills, the house leader decides in the last resort the course to be taken. Indeed, he decides the period of time allotted for each stage of the debate and the putting through of closure, as he did this evening. He is asking hon. members to pass a provision to put through permanent closure or other means to shorten the debates and to bring matters to a successful issue.

The entire behaviour of the government, especially to the extent where it concerns the internal life of the house and the bills which are proposed, is centered on the person of the house leader. Moreover, when progress in the house is slow, the responsibility lies in the first place with the present President of the Privy Council.

Mr. Speaker, the Ralliement Créditiste will continue to fight, not for partisan purposes, but in order to give Canadian citizens the maximum results they expect from the administration of national affairs.

We will keep on calling for necessary economic reforms. The Canadian people do not need rule 75c but rather the implementation of effective and urgent measures which will bring results for the entire population. It is for this reason that Canadians elect a government and representatives to the Canadian Parliament. It is not only to give the government the exclusive right of proposing motions, legislation or rules in order to annoy everyone instead of clarifying the situation.

The Prime Minister is well aware that if he proposed to the house some workable economic reform, such reforms would be agreed to by the house and would attract public opinion. What is the use of going to western or eastern Canada and telling the people: We do not have any money. This is not a solution to the economic problems or today.

If the Prime Minister can find the billions of dollars needed to co-operate in all kinds of international programs aimed at assisting other countries, I think the government's first duty is to run the nation's business as the people expect it to.

Mr. Speaker, our position has been clearly set out in this connection. In fact, my colleagues rose in turn and stated the position of the Ralliement Créditiste with respect to rule 75c which amounts more or less to a stab in the back of Canadian democracy.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

[English]

Mr. J. P. Nowlan (Annapolis Valley): Mr. Speaker, as I listened to the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) speaking a few minutes ago I thought of Jonah in the whale. It was dark inside there for Jonah and the whale had swallowed quite a mouthful. As I listened to the Prime Minister's facetious sophistry about the minority wanting to frustrate the majority in the debating of legislation, I thought the Prime Minister felt a little sick and I was on the point of sending him over some Alka Seltzer.

Mr. Woolliams: If the Prime Minister can't take the heat he should get out of the kitchen.

Mr. Nowlan: The Prime Minister is now leaving the chamber. I did not realize that his stomach was so upset that he would have to leave the chamber when I rose to speak. Perhaps I ought to take some Tums to help my tummy, because as I listened I began to feel sick myself. I was upset that the principles of the just society had been subverted within one year.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Nowlan: It is no wonder that hon. members opposite were caught out of their seats not long ago. As you may remember, there were not enough government members present to constitute a quorum of 20 members. Why was that, Mr. Speaker? They are following the Prime Minister's example; since being elected leader of his party, he has made few contributions to debate except for statements made on motions. Immediately after routine proceedings are finished he gets up and leaves the house for other business, supposedly. In fact, since being elected to this chamber in 1965 he has made few contributions in this chamber. We were both in the same class that was elected here, so to speak, only he advanced, perhaps too quickly, because he has not learned what parliament is all about. I will not quote from his few contributions in this house. Having been elected in 1965, he first became a parliamentary secretary and then took the highest job in the land. Tonight, having made his contribution to the debate that some experienced parliamentarians say is the most important debate that will come up in the life of this parliament, the Prime Minister has left the chamber.

Make no mistake about it, Mr. Speaker. The opposition is united, man to man, as no opposition has been united since I came to parliament in 1965. We are in favour of change; we are in favour of the majority taking its responsibility on legislative items. But let there be no mistake about this, Mr. Speaker. The just society now means "just numbers". If you have a majority of numbers you can put anything through. The opposition, having agreed to rule changes in 1965 and in December of last year in addition to agreeing to adopt proposed rules 75A and 75B which, if adopted, would mean that there would be little likelihood of a filibuster, now stands united as it has never been united possibly since 1956. Not only did the Prime Minister swallow his principles today; but the Minister of Manpower and Immigration (Mr. MacEachen) has suddenly been resurrected to contribute to the debate for the first time in seven months. The last time he used his recognized talent for debate was in the rules debate last December. He has been on notice since then. He was resurrected, gave a definition and perhaps will not be heard from after this debate.

• (9:20 p.m.)

We, on this side, are left with this man who talked about dialogue, participation and communication. He has destroyed the meaning of all those words by misleading, mistating and misrepresenting the opposition. The opposition is in favour of change, in favour of the majority ruling on legislative items and of assuming its responsibility under closure, but this, Mr. Speaker, is closure on a closure rule of this institution.

In the criminal sense this is not only rape, but it is indecent assault compounding the act of rape. Dialogue is no longer the word. It is dictate! Participation is no longer the word. It is now program or programming procedures. Communicate is no longer the word. It is closure when you cannot get your own way by any other means.

This is a sad day for parliament, Mr. Speaker. I was elected to this house in 1965. I shared some of the aspiration of the many new members who came into this house after 1968. There are 64 new members opposite, 17 in our party, 9 in the New Democratic Party and 6 Créditistes. This makes a total of 96 new faces in this parliament. I am in a little better position to judge this debate than the 96 new members because I was in the class of 1965, as was the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau). I came into this house at the end of an old era which was moving off the political scene. This was the era of Mr. Pearson and Mr. Diefenbaker, both of whom contributed much to Canada.

We now have two new leaders, Mr. Trudeau and Mr. Stanfield. This was to be the new age. I shared with those 96 new members the hope and anticipation that there would be a new day. When I listened to the Minister of Manpower and Immigration (Mr. MacEachen) and the Prime Minister in his straining of logic and reason—he is supposed to be a man of logic and reason—trying to justify an ill-conceived rule which had been improperly drawn being forced upon a parliament in an autocratic and inexcusable manner, I came to the conclusion that the era of 1965 was a piece of cake compared to what it is going to be in the years ahead. That is, unless the government minimizes, clarifies and retreats from Rule 75c which is not a legislative item.

This is not a reasonable use of closure. It is the first time I have heard of closure being imposed on a debate on rules changes. After all the energy and animation used by the Minister of Manpower and Immigration this afternoon in telling us what dear old merry England was doing and how debate in that Parliament had been shortened from one day to two hours, I asked the question, was closure used? The minister knew the question was coming, and yet he never answered it He could not answer it. All I can infer from his convoluted answer, which I know is correct, is that they did not use closure to ramrod the new rules into that parliament. I do not want to waste the limited time I have pointing out the differences between England and this country. God help us if we are to be like England, with the troubles they have now, let alone the troubles they have in their parliament! We have yet to throw things back and forth or come to fisticuffs. If the condescending, autocratic, arrogant manner displayed in the last few days continues in this parliament for the next few years, we may have to behave in that manner.

By this arbitrary act of conflict and confrontation, we are beginning a period which could well stamp the 28th parliament as the sad and sick parliament. Why? We did not make it that way. The government brought in Rule 75c. The reason the opposition has been united, man for man, as it has rarely been united before, is not because of any one act or bill that the government has brought in about which the opposition feels so strongly. There may be such bills in the future. It is because this whole procedure has been so necessary. It has betrayed the hopes and aspirations of all of us that there would be a new day in parliament and there would not be conflict and confrontation.

The only conclusion I can reach as to why we have this dilemma and why there is this conflict and confrontation is that there is a fundamental difference in the concept of parliament which is predicated on two thoughts that have run throughout this debate. The first is the divine right of the majority to rule on any issue, even the rules of parliament itself. These are not the rules of government, they are the rules of parliament. The word "participation" has been replaced by the words "program and programming". I will not waste too much time talking about the philosophy of the divine right of the numbers game, the majority always rules, the majority is right. The hon. member for York South (Mr. Lewis) and others have belaboured that.

The Prime Minister, in a debate a few years ago, suggested that the government is the master of the house and the majority governs. I will not dwell too much on the fundamental fallacy of a man coming into this chamber and saying, "we are the masters of this house." No matter how Hansard might try to clarify that statement, I was in the house and heard the Prime Minister say it. I agree the Liberal Party was elected to be the government. They were given a mandate to lead. There is not a piece of legislation to which they can point in this 28th parliament and say that the opposition held up this item on the order paper.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Nowlan: They won an election, Mr. Speaker, but the point is no man is the master of this house. This afternoon, in an agonizing moment on a point of order, Mr. Speaker, said he was not the master of the house, but a servant.

Every member has equal stature in this house. Because a government wins a mandate, they cannot say they are the master of the land or the master of Canadians. They happen to be the government with a mandate to govern. That is all we ask, Mr. Speaker. There is no other institution like this in Canada. It symbolizes the heart of this nation. The members in this house personify a cross-section of the Canadians we represent in occupation, religion and geography. We in this house represent all Canadians, including native Canadians and those who have been discriminated against. The two members who came to this house in 1968, the hon. member for Kamloops-Cariboo (Mr. Marchand) and the hon. member for Hamilton West (Mr. Alexander) help us to represent all Canadians. This is what parliament is about.

Among the members of this house are lawyers, doctors, engineers and professors. There are also silly Canadians, stupid Canadians and bright Canadians. Sometimes in this chamber when members do not agree with the point of view of another member, they say it is a silly or stupid speech. We symbolize and personify 20 million Canadians. That is why it is sometimes hard to swallow that the Prime Minister, who was immersed in a classroom and had a protected existence for many years, finds it difficult to appreciate and listen to all types of speeches in this house. At times I can sympathize with him. But, Mr. Speaker, I was amazed that that same Prime Minister could call something which is fundamental to the rules of the house a stupid filibuster after only 10 hours of debate and after six Liberal, six Conservative, four N.D.P. and two Créditiste members had spoken, a total of only 19. That is when the Prime Minister said it was a stupid filibuster. On the same day, he said that 80 per cent of the question period was hypocrisy. The fear of the opposition is that if he will make such a statement with so little proof, who is to say this man would not say that 80 per cent of the debates in this house are hypocritical and wasteful. Who is to say that in a few years he will not say that 90 per cent is hypocritical and wasteful, and on as little evidence.

• (9:30 p.m.)

My time is moving so fast I can hardly believe it. The other point it has to do with programming, and I am speaking about the President of the Privy Council. Because we personify people, any government that tries to program people will run into the kind of conflict in which we are now involved. You can legislate, organize, consult, compromise and co-operate with people, but you cannot program people. That is the fundamental fallacy of the Liberal government's position. You can program a computer, but this commons has a long way to go before it will become a computer. I can only hope, in the months and weeks before we meet again, this government will appreciate that while we can organize, consult, conciliate and compromise, so long as it tries to use this idea of programming, we will run into conflict. Look at the Minister of Labour (Mr. Mackasey). I agree with a lot of things he says. Only yesterday he told us about the rights of collective bargaining. What is the ultimate weapon when the parties cannot come to terms? It is the weapon of the strike. I suggest there is an analogy in his domain.

The Minister of Labour is against compulsory arbitration because he says it takes away from collective bargaining. He has a very valid point and he agrees with me. I say, on a like principle, that in the parliamentary process, 90 per cent of which is dependent upon co-operation or agreement, if there is an insurmountable conflict, then the only weapon the opposition has—it is not the numbers game—is prolonged debate. You can call it what you like, but it is prolonged debate. That is as essential, I suggest, to the parliamentary system as the right of strike is to the collective bargaining and labour-management system. Any parliament or government which fails to recognize that will be in trouble.

With the rules of relevancy Mr. Speaker and with television right outside this chamber, the time limit in respect of debate will automatically be reduced. There is no reason whatsoever to even attempt to have this autocratic 75c. The sad thing is that the scar tissue—let no man doubt this—which has been created by this debate will fester in the ensuing sessions unless some people come to their senses. Some names have been called. I shall not adopt a name calling attitude. I am afraid we have come too close to the philosopher king concept in respect of 75c. I refer to the government's position that they are the masters and they will govern. Plato, in his "Republic" developed the philosopher king idea. It might have been an efficient way to govern, but it is not the democratic way to govern. So long as we have this philosophy permeating this government this scar tissue that has erupted will grow.

It is a strange paradox that the man who swept in on a tidal wave just a little over a year ago, in this age of consent, by communicating with the young who are so bothered about the establishment and the rules their fathers had, is not going to pay homage to these acts of consent but is going to cut off the right to debate in this supreme parliamentary chamber, this parliament which personifies the people of the land. There is not a provincial legislature which has this rule. I look across the way and see some hon. gentlemen who have been mayors and councillors.

Rule 75c is not a legislative bill. It represents the right of the government to predetermine how long we will debate a matter. It is this to which we object. Any mayor who ran for office on such a program would be defeated. There are many members here who have contributed their services to school boards. Any school board chairman who tried such a program would be tossed out of office. The university councils and the senates of the universities, which the students are trying to storm, would be in a state of constant uproar such as we have had in the past few days if such a thing were tried.

If anyone wonders about co-operation or compromise, they have only to look at the charade of yesterday when the rules were used to their full maximum. Things bogged down.

In my closing minutes I should like to refer to excerpts from the New York Times of November 26, 1922 in the days of Mussolini. There is a heading, "Rome (by wireless to the New York Times)." Then there is a headline, "Near Dictatorship given to Mussolini". Following that there is a subhead, "Premier Dominates House". Then there is a sub-subhead entitled, "Wrings Vote of 275 to 90 from Weary Members". I should like to read this report:

> By 225 votes to 90 the Mussolini Government tonight received from the Chamber full powers to adopt any measures it thinks best in all matters pertaining to bureaucratic and financial reforms. These full powers are valid up to Dec. 31, 1923—
>
> The Mussolini Government can now proceed with all the reforms it advocates, quite unhampered by parliamentary considerations. But at the same time the full weight of responsibility is thrown upon the Ministry—

—Premier Mussolini ... said "We ask for full powers because we wish to assume full responsibility for all our actions."

The entire afternoon in the Chamber of Deputies was spent in the discussion of the bill granting to the Government full powers for bureaucratic and fiscal reforms. At nine o'clock tonight Deputies on all sides of the Chamber, pleading that they were hungry and tired, asked that the sitting be adjourned to Sunday but Premier Mussolini rose and said: "I prefer that the discussion be concluded tonight."

The Speaker asked for a vote on the subject whereupon all the Deputies ... that desired adjournment approved of Mussolini's suggestion amid considerable hilarity.

Socialist Deputy Modigliani complained about the haste in closing discussion.

"The Chamber should be at least allowed to make its testament before being killed", he declared.

Deputy Chiesa said he would have preferred a full detailed program of what the Government intends to do if the Chamber granted full powers.

"Vote against the Government and be done with it", cried the Premier. "We don't need you."

My closing remark is not that we have come to the situation which existed in the days of Mussolini, because I do not believe this will happen in respect of 75c. I say, however, the end has come to the bright start of the 28th parliament. There is no doubt about this. This parliament will not die. There will be other members here in time. The unfortunate thing is that, although parliament is not dead, this marks the end of the beginning of the brightest prospects we have had, with some of the brightest members who have been elected to parliament. We now have the beginning of a parliamentary confrontation and conflict that will not do justice to and will not enhance this parliament. Mr. Churchill, many years ago, said that democracy is the most inefficient form of government designed by man but it works. That is the way this parliament has worked. In the name of God, Mr. Speaker, if men can land on the moon why can men not work together, debate together, consult together, co-operate together and compromise together in this institution? This is the only way parliament can function constructively in this day of change, as it always has functioned in the past.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. MacInnis: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I wish to draw Your Honour's attention to the fact that the government house leader is probably now sitting in the position in which he is in order to control the work of the Clerk's office.

[Mr. Nowlan.]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The hon. member for Don Valley (Mr. Kaplan).

• (9:40 p.m.)

Mr. Robert P. Kaplan (Don Valley): Mr. Speaker, as all sides of this house—

An hon. Member: Take your foot off the chair and stand up like a man.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

An hon. Member: And put your purse down on the floor.

Mr. Kaplan: Mr. Speaker, I do not claim the respect that the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) receives, and I do not claim even the respect that the hon. member for York South (Mr. Lewis) received, but I would appreciate the opportunity to be heard.

As all sides of the house acknowledge, yesterday and the day before have been sorry days in this house. This has been a shocking and frightening debate carried out at a low level. On Tuesday, Mr. Speaker was on his feet more often than the speakers from the floor.

There have been several low points in the debate. Perhaps the lowest was the speech by the hon. member for Skeena (Mr. Howard), who is unfortunately not in the house now. I hope there is no other speech in the records of this house that is as low.

Another low point came from a surprising source. It came from the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles). He laid before Mr. Speaker yesterday a series of considerations and arguments that the rules would permit, and indeed authorized, a procedure whereby without any intervening business the Chair might be obliged to entertain a series of motions for adjournment at fixed times—at perhaps 10 minute intervals. This novel proposal, which Your Honour indicated had never been argued before to your knowledge, would allow any five members of the house who could command a standing vote to prevent parliament from ever considering legislation again.

Your ruling, Mr. Speaker, was a great relief, because I read the rule in question and I could see the possibilities. This submission was not worthy of a man who loves this institution, as the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre does, and who has given his life to it. It was not worthy of that hon. member.

The final feature of the last two days on which I want to comment as a foundation for the points I should like to make is the demonstration we have had in the last two days that closure, in its 1913 variety, will no longer work against the style of dissent which we encounter these days. Then, if time allocation is appropriate, which is what I want to discuss, a new method is required. The proposed rules 75A, 75B and 75C are, generally speaking, such a measure although they would not apply to debates on changes in the rules. The question is, are the rights of parliament and of members of parliament really dead as a result of 75A, B and C? Is participatory democracy over? Have the rights of hon. members been extinguished? This is what I should like to consider.

On Tuesday night the member for Red Deer (Mr. Thompson) observed that parliament was just as much a place for the opposition as it was for the government. The hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre said this afternoon, that the right of the opposition was equal to the right of the government in the house. I go further than this and say, in a special sense, that parliament is more the opposition's place, and that in some respects the opposition's role is more important here than the role of the government.

I could sum up the difference by saying that the opposition expresses itself and performs its functions in this chamber; the government, on the other hand, expresses itself in its legislation and in its administration, not only by what it in fact achieves by way of a legislative program, but by way of what it fails to achieve.

We can talk in this chamber around the clock and around the calendar. Government members can produce the most beautiful speeches you have ever heard. Every member of this chamber can speak for 20 minutes or 40 minutes on every section of every bill. We would then have participation which would make ancient Athens look like a police state. But with such a forum, the government would not be giving this country what it wants; it would be failing the Canadian people.

This country is changing and the government has to respond as best it can to these changes. There is in this country a growing sense of fairness, a growing openness, an increasing humanism, a growing respect for privacy, a growing concern for poverty, a growing distaste for militarism and a growing trend towards urbanization. The government has to meet this mood. Whatever good the members of this house do in this chamber will not satisfy the Canadian people if the government of this country has not provided good administration and good laws.

The opposition has no such responsibility. Sometimes the opposition will propose a policy alternative; sometimes they will suggest improvements to legislation. I agree that the hon. member for York South (Mr. Lewis) often has done this, but the opposition has no such responsibility. If the government fails to govern or governs badly until the next election, normally that is no reflection on the opposition.

As a result there are two perspectives on parliament. Parliament serves more than one function. To the government, it is part of the process by which its legislative proposals are enacted. To the opposition it is a place to criticize government administration and to let the public know about government failings. It is a place for proposing amendments, not so much to have them accepted but in the spirit of showing that if the opposition were the government the legislative proposals would have been perfect to begin with. This is fair enough, it is our system.

A dangerous proposition which the opposition has lately advanced is that when the opposition proposes legislative changes the government has to compromise in order to have its legislation passed. I am not referring to compromises relating to the rules, I am suggesting that the opposition argues for the right to effect compromise in the substantive legislation program. As one opposition member put it, "we must have freedom in this institution to express differences and resolve them", with the suggestion that resolving our differences might take longer than ten days in the case of what he called bad legislation.

I firmly agree and all hon. members surely agree that there should be freedom to express differences, but I dispute that such differences have to be resolved here. Canada's differences will never be resolved and should never be resolved. This country with its diversity—cultural, religious, regional and economic—can never be governed by concensus, and any effort to try can only lead to frustration and inaction. The search for concensus is one way in which the public is informed of the differences between the parties, but I would be suspicious that if concensus were obtained on this measure or on a great many measures, that it would mean that all the interests in the country and all diverse points of view were not being effectively represented here.

This principle that concensus should not be our goal was wisely recognized by the fathers of Confederation and inserted in the B.N.A. Act as section 49, which says:

Questions arising in the House of Commons shall be decided by a Majority of Voices—

I would think that the B.N.A. Act would take precedence over the interpretation of the rules being alleged by the opposition. The concensus principle if accepted would be a tool by which any minority party, however small or regional or doctrinaire, could force its will on the majority at the price of deadlock. And yet, this is precisely the substance of the argument of the member for Winnipeg North Centre.

• (9:50 p.m.)

The hon. member for York South (Mr. Lewis) this evening advanced a different proposition. Perhaps that was his own point of view and not his party's because the position which has been taken all day and all through this debate by the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) is clear; he is arguing for consensus.

Mr. Stanfield: On rules.

Mr. Kaplan: I shall come to the question of the rules. I do not think there is very much difference between rules and other matters.

Mr. Stanfield: You can stick to the facts, anyway.

Mr. Kaplan: The hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre does not feel that the majority should have power to move forward until the minority agrees.

Mr. Barnett: Mr. Speaker, would the hon. member permit me to ask him a question?

Mr. Kaplan: I will at the end of my speech, Mr. Speaker, if I have any time left.

Why should the minority agree? As I say, it might in certain cases have to betray its minority supporters in order to agree. Why should it do this? Such position is simply not tenable. Parliament should be a place where a variety of views may be expressed loud enough and long enough for the country to hear; but it must be a place where legislation is considered and passed. It can never be, and should never be, a place where varying views must be resolved as a condition precedent to passing legislation.

There have been some strange noises in this debate.

An hon. Member: We are hearing the strangest one right now.

Mr. Kaplan: One of the strangest is the effort of the opposition to distinguish between procedure for rule changes on the one hand, and procedure for passing laws on the other. Attention is being concentrated on the fact that this is closure to create time allocation, and that closure is different when it deals with substantive legislation.

This is a distinction which is absolutely without a difference, more particularly because this rules debate deals with the question of time allocation. A failure to obtain the allocation on this so-called procedural matter would constitute failure to have time allocation on substantive matters. Mr. Speaker ruled before dinner that there was no such distinction in finding that although the resolution in question related to a report on rules; it was for Your Honour's purpose and the purpose of the house, like any other report, notwithstanding its content.

Standing Order 33, which deals with closure, makes no such distinction. All these questions are simply questions relating to resolutions whether dealing with rules or legislation. The British North America Act makes no such distinction.

This is an opposition that wants us to enact only what they call good legislation. With respect to bad legislation they want the right to veto. As a matter of fact, they now have the right to veto, and they want to keep that right. That is what this debate is about.

Mr. Stanfield: It is not what this debate is about.

Mr. Kaplan: This basic strategy is being masqueraded as a special concern for rules, which they allege deserve special treatment.

When the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) has spoken on this question in the past, he has talked in terms of a big legislative program and restrictions on our time, about planning, efficiency and the recognition of priorities. The opposition has called this the sausage factory approach. The hon. member for Annapolis Valley (Mr. Nowlan) used a similar expression this evening. But in addition to all the arguments one can raise about efficiency, planning and priorities, there is a question of principle. Is this country to be governed by negative veto, by a minority special interest group in this country or even, to follow the line of reasoning tendered to

Your Honour by the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre, by any five hon. members who would invoke repeated adjournments until they got their way; or is this country to be governed by majority rule?

A great deal of talk has been directed to the government's alleged unwillingness to compromise. I was not present at the negotiations and can only take note of the statements of the house leaders. Some of the Conservatives who attended the meetings, to their credit, accepted the principle of majority rule in regard to time allocation and seek only a longer period for debate. I would have thought that under those circumstances a compromise would have been possible. But the N.D.P., as the hon. member for York South has indicated, do not accept majority rule at the report stage. If there is no majority rule at the report stage, there is no majority rule. The Leader of the Opposition spoke of the tyranny of the majority. But is that worse than tyranny of the minority?

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Kaplan: It has been suggested that these hot, political, controversial issues be referred to Mr. Speaker who would determine the time to be allocated. This is obviously unacceptable.

The most difficult opposition argument to answer is that this rule is entirely satisfactory to no one. There has been the suggestion that further negotiation might lead to what the hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands (Mr. Douglas) called rapprochement. This might happen with the Conservatives, but never with the N.D.P. if they insist as a precondition that consensus prevail, because if it is to prevail in respect of the rules, it will prevail in respect of all our business. There is no difference between consensus in respect of the rules and consensus in respect of anything else.

The answer that satisfied me on this point was made in the house yesterday by the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald), who affirmed on behalf of the government that it would honour the package deal compromise which it offered in its negotiations, and that it would be prepared to see the rules changed to that effect. As I said, that satisfied me.

Mr. Stanfield: It does not take much to satisfy you.

Mr. Kaplan: In its pursuit of the consensus principle the opposition has introduced a theme, which was stressed again tonight by the hon. member for Annapolis Valley, which can only be described as a sort of blackmail. Speakers from all parties have stated repeatedly that if the rules cannot go their way, no business will be transacted in this chamber.

Mr. Forrestall: That is a harsh criticism of 1,000 years of democracy.

Mr. Kaplan: The hon. member for Annapolis Valley this evening said there is a scar tissue which will fester unless the government changes its position. What clearer threat could there be than that? There have been dozens of statements to this effect: if the opposition does not get its way, to hell with the majority, to hell with the business of the people. This is an interesting way of protecting a democracy. How does yesterday's performance differ from smashing computers at Sir George Williams University?

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Kaplan: How do these threats differ from throwing bombs in Montreal? No property was damaged here, but parliament was damaged.

One of the speakers in this debate said the other day that an opposition does not put the government out of power; the government puts itself out of power, and the opposition just puts the government out of its misery. If that has been true in the past, the next round may be, perhaps for the first time, a case of the opposition keeping itself out of power, reducing its constituency and doing itself real damage by its undemocratic approach to the procedures of this house.

Mr. Barnett: Mr. Speaker, would the hon. member permit a question?

Mr. Kaplan: I will entertain a question, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Barnett: I listened attentively to the hon. member because I thought he was trying to make a constructive contribution. Does he know of any other organization to which he has belonged wherein the constitution and by-laws are subject to change by a simple majority vote?

Mr. Kaplan: Yes, I do, Mr. Speaker. And, the constitution of Canada provides for changing the rules of this house by a majority vote.

• (10:00 p.m.)

Mr. Stanfield: I wonder if the hon. member would answer a question. All I wish to ask him is this: Is he honestly prepared to say that he would recommend the adoption of this rule by the house in its present form as a good rule?

Mr. Kaplan: With the undertaking of the house leader to make certain changes, yes.

Mr. Stanfield: I wonder if the hon. member would answer the question I asked him in simple and straightforward language. That is all I ask. Is he prepared to recommend to the house this rule in its present form as a good rule which the house should adopt?

Mr. Kaplan: The hon. member will see me vote for the motion, and that will express my feeling about it.

Mr. W. M. Howe (Wellington-Grey): Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I understand the hon. member for Oshawa-Whitby (Mr. Broadbent) would like to put a question. I might again point out to hon. members that it is not the usual practice to have a protracted question period following a speech by an hon. member, and I invite the hon. member for Oshawa-Whitby to put his question briefly.

Mr. Broadbent: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and I thank the hon. member who is about to speak. The reason for putting my question is that I enjoyed the contribution of the hon. member opposite which I think was a very thoughtful and constructive contribution to this debate. I agree with his argument to a very substantial extent. It is a serious point to which I would like an answer. I do not wish to be argumentative. If I understood him correctly, he said at some point that the majority should have the right to determine not only substantive legislation but also the rules of the house. In fact I am in agreement on this point, but would the hon. member agree—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. As I pointed out originally, I think it is a bad practice to allow a series of questions following a speech made by an hon. member. There is no provision for it in the rules. It is left to the discretion of the Chair and the courtesy of hon. members. Although I allowed hon. members to pose questions, I would not like this to be the pattern in the future. Therefore, I invite the hon. member to put the question immediately.

Mr. Broadbent: Would the hon. member agree that the provision that there should be a period no longer than one day for the report stage under the proposed legislation is sufficient for an important piece of legislation?

Mr. Kaplan: This would depend generally on the bill, but I do not think this would necessarily be one of the sticking points in the negotiations. It is the principle that is the important thing and it is the principle that is not acceptable to the hon. member's party.

Mr. Stanfield: The hon. member is just as evasive as his leader.

Mr. W. M. Howe (Wellington-Grey): Mr. Speaker, in the ebb and flow of debate that has been going on in this house for so many days, and in the ebb and flow of public opinion as expressed in our news media, the radio, the T.V. and the press, I had hoped that this debate would end by the meeting of reasonable men arriving at a conclusion I had hoped the government would be reasonable and adjourn this house or withdraw that part of the report which we find so obnoxious, namely rule 75c, so that we could adjourn the house and go home. Then, I would not have to make this speech tonight. However, I, along with a lot of other members of this house, have had the opportunity and the privilege of welcoming hundreds of young people to these beautiful parliament buildings, to these marble halls and to this attractive green chamber throughout my period in this house. I have been always proud to show them this building in all its beauty and magnificence. I have heard members of this house explaining to our visitors the traditions, privileges and rights of this place and what it stands for

However, this place in which my remarks are being made tonight is sometimes referred to as that funny house, that place, and this debate in which I am taking part has been called a stupid filibuster. I have a feeling that there are some people in this area who would like to see these walls come tumbling down, like the walls of Jericho. This could happen. It has happened before in democratic countries where irresponsible people let their rights and privileges be chiselled away. That is what is happening tonight; one of the privileges of free debate is being interfered with in this house. Sometimes I wonder if a time will come when members will be as proud as they are now of this particular chamber. It is rather interesting to note that the very chair in which Your Honour sits is made of wood from the roof of Westminster Hall and from Nelson's flagship. Westminster Hall is that great English hall where the law courts of England sat for so many years and from where many of our great laws and traditions were handed down.

This is a place of freedom, as is indicated by the accoutrements that we have here, and as such we should revere it and be honoured to be members here. We should stand on guard to prevent anybody from destroying our rights and democratic privileges.

It is with a feeling of nostalgia that I enter this debate tonight because my memory goes back to a few years ago when an arrogant government majority tried to curtail debate in the house, as will be done by the use of rule 75c. In 1955 an arrogant government tried to change a piece of legislation on which there had been a time limit of three years. I refer to the emergency powers legislation of 1951. In 1955, the government of the day thought: Why worry about a time limit? Let us change this legislation. What did they want to do? They wanted to extend those wartime emergency powers by removing the time limit on the legislation, thus giving the government arbitrary powers over every segment of our economy in peacetime, the same as had been necessary during the war years.

I say again, Mr. Speaker, that I take part in this debate with nostalgia because the debate to which I referred was instituted by a man who was a great Canadian. As an administrator during the war years he had done much to unite the whole Canadian economy in an all-out war effort. He brought together the economic forces of our farms, our manufacturing agencies, our mines and our forests into a unit which helped in the second world war by supplying food, munitions, clothing, lumber, and all the things necessary to support our forces and to help feed, clothe and supply a great many of the components assisting our allies during that terrific struggle.

• (10:10 p.m.)

I say this with a feeling of nostalgia, because that man bore the same name as myself; he was referred to tonight by the hon. member for Témiscamingue (Mr. Caouette), and his action at that time was the beginning of his downfall and of the downfall of his own party. I refer to the late Right Hon. C. D. Howe. He was something like our Prime Minister today who last session coined the phrase "We are the masters of this house." The Hon. C. D. Howe coined the phrase: "If we want to get away with it, who is going to stop us?" Mr. Howe did not like the House of Commons. We find this feeling exemplified today. As I said in my opening remarks, it would appear as though some would like to see the walls of this place torn down. There were days when those on the government side derided us in opposition, saying "Let the people decide". Well, in 1957 the people did decide, and in 1958 they did so even more emphatically.

The defence production debate left such a bad taste in the mouth of the Minister of Defence Production that he made up his mind to bring in some form of closure immediately debate was instituted in the following year should there be objection to his proposals. This is what he did. How similar this is to the situation which now faces us. The government of the day was forced to withdraw its 16A proposal before Christmas. Then, in the closing days of the present session they bring in a report which if adopted would create an untenable position for the opposition. It is interesting, too, Mr. Speaker, to recall that the debate to which I referred earlier took place in 1955, 20 years after the Liberal government had been elected in 1935. Today, just one year after its election, the Liberal government is trying by all the means available to it to force measures on the house which would destroy democratic principles by curtailing debate, by taking away from parliament the opportunity to debate an important issue long enough to make the people of Canada aware of the implications of a particular piece of legislation or to provide an opportunity for a vigilant press and a vigilant public to examine thoroughly each piece of legislation presented to it. This is of the utmost importance, Mr. Speaker, as is pointed out in an editorial which recently appeared in both the Kitchener-Waterloo Record and the Guelph Mercury. I should like to quote from one of these editorials. It is headed: "Voter Feedback Important in Commons Rules Debate."

> If, as seems likely, Parliament is headed for a prolonged and bitter battle over proposed rules changes, events will be guided to a large extent by public reaction.
>
> "Feedback from constituencies," is the way most MPs describe this. The feedback, in the form of letters, telegrams and telephone calls, pours into the offices of MPs whenever Parliament bogs down on a major issue.

No doubt the government thought that since this was holiday time the people of Canada would not be interested in the issue. They thought they could rush this through. They were wrong. Public opinion has been aroused, as editorials in most of our newspapers tell us today. Most of us here could cite many examples of cases in which public reaction has been important, and in which legislation has been improved by opposition amendments and criticism. I could refer to the Canada pension plan which was brought in and pulled out like a yo-yo. Even now I sometimes wonder whether the government realizes that this was one of the factors which produced the present inflationary period—and the problems which inflation has created particularly for all those who have to live on fixed incomes and old age pensions.

I might refer to the transport legislation which was presented at one session, withdrawn, and presented again at a subsequent session so amended that its final version bore little resemblance to the original except that it did provide a very rewarding job for the then minister of transport. I might also cite the drug licensing bill which in its original form did not contain the safety measures suggested in the Harley report which contended that the people of Canada were entitled not only to cheap drugs but to safe drugs. Many of those present can remember what happened when this bill was first presented. Arguments were repeatedly advanced by the opposition that measures for greater safety should be incorporated in the bill, while the then minister of consumer and corporate affairs persisted in indicating that the legislation under the Food and Drugs Act was adequate. Suddenly, after the debate had been going on for several days, the minister himself came over to the opposition saying: Keep it going; we want it to die tonight. Which it did. The legislation was not brought forward again during that session and when it did reappear this session, it incorporated the measures for which we had asked.

Had 75c been in force at that time, and had the government been adamant about passing the drug licensing bill, I wonder whether the cheap drugs which could have been brought into Canada under the legislation would have been subject to an adequate examination so as to ensure the good health of our people.

More recently, Mr. Speaker, there was the case of the estate tax. I do not need to remind the house how unrealistic this legislation was, or how great was the feedback to every member of parliament when those implications were understood. As a result, the government was forced to change its stand. I contend that had 75c been in force at the time very little opportunity would have existed to make the press and the public aware of the extent to which this particular piece of legislation was unrealistic, taking into account the present inflationary pressures.

It has been said that the government opens the house with the Speech from the Throne indicating its legislative program for the year, but that the opposition closes it after examining, criticizing and proposing amendments to government legislation and expenditures. This is the situation which has existed almost from the time of the first parliament, but today we are debating a proposal which gives the government the right to shut off debate, to shut up parliament, almost at will. Is this what the people of Canada want? Is this what government backbenchers want? I have participated in seven parliaments and in each there was a group of members who felt the rules needed revision. I was not a member of the committees which took part in this procedure, though I was of the opinion, as they were, that the rules of this place could indeed be improved and amended. I should like to congratulate all those who, in the past, in a friendly and amicable fashion, have been able to reach conclusions in this field without situations developing such as that which has developed here today. Never before has a government waited until the last two days before a recess, whether at Christmas, at Easter or in the summer, before bringing in a report containing an item such as 75c which would destroy all the privileges and rights of this, the highest court in the land. On whom is the onus? May I refer to an editorial in the Toronto Daily Star of Tuesday, July 8—and goodness knows, the Toronto Daily Star has never been a strong supporter of the Conservative party. I quote:

• (10:20 p.m.)

Canadians who take their politics seriously will applaud members of Parliament who are prepared to debate proposed changes in House rules at length, regardless of their shortened holidays. Rules are the stuff that democracy is made of. They permit governments to govern; they protect opposition parties from being ignored. Where you put the accent all depends upon which side of the Speaker's chair your party sits.

Then it goes on to say:

What's wrong with the existing closure rule, which puts the onus wholly on the party elected to govern? Or, better still, closure at one or more of the debate-stages of a bill's passage? No government is likely to forget the people's anger when closure was used during the Pipeline Debate. A deterrent was created there, and before any government overrode the opposition it would have to feel certain it had the people behind it.

Yes, Mr. Speaker, the onus in the present debate is on the government. Once again I detect a similarity between this debate in this parliament and the debate of 1955 in a previous parliament. Here, I wish to refer to the words of the late Hon. James Gardiner, then the minister of agriculture, who proved himself a great Canadian by his outstanding service to his province and nation. He became carried away by continual Liberal government and became somewhat arrogant and overbearing because, as recorded at page 1422 of Hansard for 1951, he said that as long as he, the minister of trade and commerce, and the prime minister, Right Hon. Louis St. Laurent, were here, the country would be assured of good government. There, however, the similarity ends because we all know that the President of the Privy Council has been told that until the Prime Minister decides he must not make a move. He is not a member of the present troika made up of the Secretary of State (Mr. Pelletier), the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion (Mr. Marchand) and the Prime Minister. So, he cannot sit in on their deliberations, he has been told to follow orders and to disregard what his colleagues in the backbenches, who should be looking after their businesses and getting acquainted with their families, may think.

In the former case I alluded to, two members and public opinion prevailed on the minister involved, C. D. Howe, and he was persuaded to go on holiday—maybe a fishing expedition with some of his colleagues from the Maritimes. When he came back a time limit had been placed on the legislation being considered and the opposition had won a battle for democracy and for parliament, the people's forum.

In closing I should like to say this. Rule 75c should never have been brought before the house. The government no doubt will win the vote and bring 75c into force; but that will not be a defeat only of the parties in opposition; that will be a defeat for parliament itself and for the democratic order it represents.

Mr. Douglas A. Hogarth (New Westminster): Mr. Speaker, I hope that in delivering my remarks this evening I can avoid generating the rancor and bitterness which seems to have been evident during the last two days of debate.

An hon. Member: Impossible.

Mr. Hogarth: It is my view, sir, that over the past decade or so, bit by bit the respect of the people of Canada for this institution has slowly been eroded. The science of politics in Canada has failed to keep up with advances in the other disciplines of the community. We have failed to provide immediate responses to challenges taking place in a rapidly changing society, and the younger generation that is now coming up is firmly of that opinion.

The reasons for this are obvious and some of them have become obvious in this debate during the last two days. Other reasons could be cited. I do not blame any particular government, any particular member or any particular opposition party here or in the other place for this. I just say that we have failed to accept change and to respond and react to it.

In my opinion, the people of Canada today think that we are all talk and no action.

Mr. Stanfield: That is right.

Mr. Hogarth: I think there is some justification for what they say.

Mr. Stanfield: That is absolutely correct.

Mr. Hogarth: I say that because in the last six months we have seen debates in this house—and I admit that both sides participated in them—which took a seemingly endless time to conclude.

Mr. Stanfield: Why does the hon. member not talk about policy?

Mr. Hogarth: We have seen debates which in part were filibusters and which were admitted by one segment of the opposition here to be filibusters in part. As a result, it has taken us until July to finish the work of the house.

Actually, we began debating the present subject matter last November, and the debate has no yet finished. We have seen how the Standing Orders of the house have been used to obstruct and delay the work of the house. We have had that obstruction in place of the constructive criticism the opposition is supposed to supply here. As a matter of fact, I have heard so much about this man Beauchesne in the last three days that I am convinced he would not be elected dog catcher in my riding. I think it is time to bring in a few changes to the rules.

An hon. Member: Why don't you burn the books?

Mr. Hogarth: We have had endless repetition. We have seen the same points endlessly repeated.

An hon. Member: Burn the books.

Mr. Hogarth: Speaker after speaker in the same debate has repeated the same point.

Mr. Bell: Stick around a little while and you will learn.

Mr. Hogarth: I believe we are dedicated to the simple proposition that this government must produce policies for the people of Canada—

Mr. Stanfield: Then why not produce them?

Mr. Hogarth: —because we must solve the contemporary problems facing the people of Canada today.

Mr. Monteith: Then it is time the government performed some single act which would support that claim.

Mr. Hogarth: If we want to carry out our aims, we must have a more effective parliament.

Mr. Stanfield: Nonsense.

Mr. Hogarth: To do all this, parliament must become more reputable in the eyes of the people of Canada. If we are to perform this work we must reform the rules under which our legislation is to go through parliament.

Mr. Stanfield: Really, this is nonsense.

Mr. Hogarth: We are also dedicated to the simple proposition that in a democracy the rule of the majority of members of the House of Commons must prevail.

Mr. McGrath: Might is right.

Mr. Hogarth: It does not matter to which political party you belong; the will of the majority of members must prevail. That is provided for under section 45 of the British North America Act which governs the manner in which substantive legislation shall proceed through the house.

In the report of the committee and in this debate we have reached an impasse. This is an obvious impasse, brought on perhaps because we have too many political parties in this country.

[Mr. Hogarth.]

Mr. McGrath: The government is prepared to have only one political party in this country. That is where it is heading.

Mr. Hogarth: Perhaps there are other reasons for the impasse. I do not attach blame. Nevertheless, the impasse is here to be seen. It seems to me that in the ensuing debate, which some members of the opposition have referred to as a senseless debate, the majority in this house has said that its will must prevail. Unless the majority will prevails the work of this house cannot be carried out. We cannot do something if all 260 odd members insist on talking about something. In the early hours of tomorrow morning, the majority will say that it must have the right to carry out a program. When I say majority, I do not necessarily mean one political party. It is the majority of the members of this house which will do it.

• (10:30 p.m.)

Mr. Stanfield: Will the hon. member permit a question?

Mr. Hogarth: No, not right now.

If we abuse this power under Rule 75B and 75C, if we have abused the power under Standing Order 33, we shall pay for it. We will be slaughtered at the polls in the next election.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Hogarth: As the hon. member for Wellington-Grey (Mr. Howe) stated a few moments ago, many of us in the Liberal Party acknowledge the mistakes of the fifties. On June 10, 1957 we got it in the neck because we abused the power with respect to closure. We know what can happen. We are conscious of this fact. Our house leader will continuously be kept conscious of this fact by the backbenchers on this side of the house.

I am very interested in some of the remarks made by some of the hon. members opposite, particularly those by the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles). The remarks of the hon. member were adopted by the hon. member for Annapolis Valley (Mr. Nowlan). The remarks I am referring to are recorded at page 11474 of Hansard:

> The result of this decision, if it is carried through, is as clear as can be. Proceedings during the next session of parliament will not be of the kind that they have been during this session. There will be confrontation and frustration. There will be work to rule, no more participating democracy. I appeal to the government even at this late hour to reconsider its position—

The reaction from other hon. members has also been disappointing. We have heard words of deep bitterness from members opposite. The words have been provocative rather than intending to find some solution. We have seen the Nazi salute given. Members of this house have been called fascists. Those things do nothing to enhance this parliament.

Mr. Bell: Who started it?

Mr. Hogarth: I want hon. members to know, Mr. Speaker, that as far as those words and gestures are concerned, they do not anger or embitter me or other members of this government. I reflect with sorrow on the effect to which they will extend and promote the degradation of the science of politics in Canada today, particularly dealing with the threat of working to rule.

An hon. Member: What about the Justice Committee?

Mr. Hogarth: I can think of countless instances in the Justice Committee of give and take and if the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) and the hon. member for Broadview (Mr. Gilbert) were here they would support me on this. There were no party politics.

An hon. Member: You destroyed all that.

Mr. Hogarth: There was no work to rule in this committee. All points of view were considered. Opposition amendments were sometimes recommended far more rapidly than those put forward by government members. What is going to happen and what did happen in that committee? We did not work to rule. Will we have to work with this threat being held over our heads? Injustice will be served.

I hope in the next session we will have another Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs. We have some very interesting legislative programs to bring forward. We must again serve justice. If we are going to be faced with working to rule, this parliament will not be serving the people of Canada.

I am a member of the Fisheries Committee. We went on a trip out west. I see the hon. member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) here.

Mr. McGrath: I didn't go west.

Mr. Hogarth: I was going to talk about the seal hunt when I referred to you.

Mr. Baldwin: There are the seals, over there!

Mr. Hogarth: In any event it was the member for Gander-Twillingate (Mr. Lundrigan) who went west. He has gone east tonight. If, when we went west, we had worked to rule and demanded that all the rules of the committee be enforced properly, I wonder if the people of western Canada would have presented so many briefs to our committee? I wonder what they would have thought of parliament if we had been quibbling about politics in this committee? I know a couple of issues that would not have got through. We would have been lynched.

An hon. Member: You might still be lynched.

Mr. Hogarth: My reaction is this, Mr. Speaker. There will be no confrontation by me during the next session. There can be no work to rule and frustration of good ideas. I say, Mr. Speaker, that only good will can bring about good government.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Hogarth: I say that only good rules can provide effective legislation. Backbenchers on the government side, considering their position and desire for freedom of speech and knowing that they will have to face the electorate when the time comes, have to make sure that it is not the government house leader that is going to fix the time for debate. They are going to make sure in caucus that there is ample time for everybody. We should not be here to promote the political ambitions of our independent parties over and above our obligation to serve the people of Canada.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Hogarth: It is regrettable that no solution was found in the negotiations that went on for so long with respect to this particular rule. It is regrettable that these proposals were met with filibuster and useless debate. However, the ultimate aim and objective of the majority must be carried out. It must be carried out in the manner that majority requires to have an effective parliament with effective legislation providing good and just laws for the people of Canada. If at the end of the time we have been sent here to serve the people of Canada it is proven we are wrong, we will not be back.

I do not pretend, as many members have done yesterday and today, to be an experienced politician. I do not pretend to be able to offer suggestions as to how this impasse could possibly be handled and dealt with. Some of us have not been here long enough. I am one of them. However, there are some who have been here too long.

An hon. Member: The Solicitor General.

Mr. Hogarth: We were all sent here to serve.

• (10:40 p.m.)

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member for St. John's East (Mr. McGrath) is rising on a point of privilege.

Mr. McGrath: Mr. Speaker, I do not think the hon. member should be allowed to insult the Solicitor General (Mr. McIlraith) like that. He is a respected long-standing member of the house, the dean.

Mr. Hogarth: Mr. Speaker, I always thought he was one of the younger members.

If I might conclude, I should like to say that the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield) suggested to the hon. member for Don Valley (Mr. Kaplan) that there are still some things wrong with the rules.

Mr. Stanfield: I asked him a question.

Mr. Hogarth: Yes, and he thought there were. I think any rule in a court of law or in the articles of association of a company or society can be misused or misconstrued. If these rules we shall adopt in the early morning hours tomorrow should work to the disadvantage of democracy, in my view and I know in the view of every member on the back benches either in the minority or majority, we will have to change those rules.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Hogarth: We will have to change them time and time again if necessary, until this chamber becomes a rational and productive institution responsible to the people of Canada.

Mr. Bell: By closure?

Mr. Stanfield: Mr. Speaker, I thought perhaps the hon. member might have indicated his willingness to answer my question when he finished. Will he say quite frankly and honestly whether he is prepared to recommend this rule to the house in its present form and whether he considers it is a good rule for the house to adopt?

[Mr. Hogarth.]

Mr. Hogarth: Mr. Speaker, is the Leader of the Opposition referring to 75B or 75C?

Mr. Stanfield: I am referring to the motion which is before us.

Mr. Hogarth: I will answer, Mr. Speaker. My position is that it is too late to try to change it now in this session.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Bell: There is the first honest answer we have had.

Mr. Hogarth: I say that we should use what we have here now, see how it operates and not cry until somebody is offended.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Crouse: Not one of you are satisfied with this rule.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I am sure all hon. members are anxious to hear the hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mrs. MacInnis).

Mrs. Grace MacInnis (Vancouver-Kingsway): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Tuesday, July 22, was a bleak day for parliament, for it marked the rupture of a process whereby government and opposition, the two essential parts of the House of Commons, were seeking to work together to streamline and modernize the machinery of parliament, and regardless of what may or may not be said here we all want to streamline and modernize the machinery of parliament. But we want it streamlined to work more effectively to pass government legislation without interfering with the vital function of the opposition which is to criticize government measures and bring forward alternative policies.

We have heard a lot in this debate from government spokesmen about the need for the government majority to rule. Let us make no mistake about what happened on Tuesday. When the government house leader gave notice of closure on Tuesday he was turning the country away from rule by the majority to the direction of arbitrary government, first the rule of one party and then the rule of one man government. Let us make no mistake about it; we are, under this rule, getting away from majority rule. Democracy is the new thing which the world is striving so hard to build today. Autocracy and dictatorship represent the age-old road—there is no doubt about it—of those who have no faith in the people, those who fear the people and those who are determined to ride roughshod over the will of the people. That is what has happened.

Last Tuesday we who sit opposite the government witnessed something very disturbing as the government house leader gave notice of closure. The mask of democratic leadership slipped suddenly from the face of the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) who sat revealed as a man of supercilious arrogance with mockery in his face. He sat there while the three opposition leaders made their statements. Then, in a house dazed by the shock of the government's action, he rose and, turning his back on parliament in an ultimate gesture of contempt, he made his nonchalant way out of the chamber. Those of us who witnessed it will not forget it. It will take many, many oceans of words to sweep away that expression. It will take much more than words; it will take a great deal of action to obliterate that.

An hon. Member: That is right.

Mrs. MacInnis: The hon. member for New Westminster (Mr. Hogarth) mentioned the fact that some members have been here in this chamber too long. That is probably true, but some of us are concerned about those who have not been here long enough to know the traditions of this house. In the Prime Minister we have a man who up until four years ago had had no parliamentary experience whatever, a man who had no feel for the traditions of parliamentary government, a man who would brook no opposition to his will. He was chosen by the members of his party because they felt he could lead them to victory at the polls. He did. But it is a hollow victory for the party today, and it is a bleak day for the Canadian people.

The Canadian people gave this government power because they believed that the new Prime Minister, a man of undoubted intelligence and charm, would use power wisely and responsibly and in the best interests of the whole population. But now, in one short year, we see what has happened. The first duty of the government is to protect and strengthen the instrument of parliament itself. A democratic parliament requires a strong opposition, for the job of the opposition is vital to protect the public. There are grievances to be raised and wrongs to be righted. There are minorities with viewpoints to be safeguarded. There are dangers and shortcomings in government policies to be criticized and removed. There are alternative policies to be enunciated and publicized. Without this, parliament becomes nothing but a dead shell of once living democracy where the government leader tramples on the remaining vestiges of freedom while eloquently assuring the people that he is building participatory democracy and a just society.

We of the opposition parties have done all we could to prevent this happening. We shall continue in the months ahead or in the weeks ahead in our efforts to prevent this happening and to see that the trend is reversed.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mrs. MacInnis: Mr. Speaker, influential sections of the press and the media are determined that this shall not happen. People are slowly but very surely beginning to realize that something is very wrong in this house, in this debate. They are beginning to ask questions. These questions are sifting in through letters, editorials and news items in the press. Questions of this nature are asked: Why, when the government has completed all its legislative program for the session is it necessary to bring in rule 75c to choke and gag the opposition? Why do they want to weaken the opposition if an opposition is necesary for good government? Why do they want to get rid of criticism of their policies if their policies are so good and meet the needs of today? Why, if they are anxious to get ahead with legislation, do they propose not to call parliament until October 22, three whole months from now?

The hon. member for New Westminster told us the government has policies in line with the requirements of the people of Canada and that they are programming legislation to meet the needs of the people in this country. Let me tell you this. Programming is no substitute for the failure during a whole year to introduce the kind of legislation that the people of this country want, need, and are crying for. Let me ask this question. Does programming for the next year include improved legislation to help veterans and their families?

• (10:50 p.m.)

An hon. Member: Yes.

Mrs. MacInnis: Then, why was it not done a year ago? Does it include legislation to help people on old age pensions? Will it help the superannuated civil servants? Will it include measures to assist people who do not have jobs? Will it include measures to assist families on low income to buy the houses they need at prices they can afford? Will programming include legislation for genuine consultation with the Métis and Indian people who are being told what is good for them, whether they like it or not? If it includes all these things the government does not need 75c. The opposition will be only too eager to pass such measures.

The people of Canada are alarmed by 75c, and we are alarmed about it. They know that the kind of legislation which will be passed with the full consent and co-operation of the opposition is the kind of legislation to which I have referred, and they wonder why in thunder we have not passed it before now. The reason for the alarm in respect of 75c is that if the government wants 75c it must want it to prevent the kind of legislation which should be brought in to look after people's needs in the years ahead and to stifle the criticism by the opposition.

Is this program that the government is proposing to bring in next year intended to control the high rates of interest in this country? Will it deal with the steadily rising cost of living? Will this program deal with the growing pollution problems of air, soil and water in this country? Will this programming deal with the problems of Canadian control of Canadian industry and its development?

An hon. Member: No, never.

Mrs. MacInnis: That is the answer.

An hon. Member: What about the cost of fudgsicles?

Mrs. MacInnis: It will not even deal with the false advertisement in respect of fudgsicles. I worked for two or three months to get this government to make a firm assurance that the weight of as small a thing as a fudgsicle would be as advertised and this relates only to one small item—chocolate bars that children buy.

On the basis of legislation introduced this session the answer to all these questions is a resounding, no. The government has shown no interest whatsoever in such matters. Some of you may smile because you feel you will keep the government in your hands and stifle the criticisms we are trying to make. Things will be different in this parliament after the next election.

People are not happy, and we shall not rest until we find ways and means of getting their needs across to the government in this chamber. There has been enough talk in this house about opposition obstruction. I want to tell you that it is this government which has obstructed every single effort to get action in respect of the urgent needs in this country. Only the government has had the power to bring in legislation dealing with these problems. It has failed to bring in that legislation; that is obstruction of the will of the people.

The people want the government to give top priority to things like jobs, training for jobs, the development of industry, restrictions on the interest rate and the high cost of living, and the provision for housing for people on low incomes and to deal with the wheat problem and all these things. Until the government absolutely had to give money to the western farmers to keep them from sinking into nothingness it did not do anything worthwhile about this problem. Let us have no more talk about opposition obstruction. If the government can now hamstring the opposition by this closure rule they think they will have no need to worry about criticism in the future. They can close their eyes and their ears to public clamour for legislation of the kind we need in this country.

The Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) claims that people feel parliament is becoming less relevant to the problems of today. If parliament is becoming less relevant to those problems in the minds of the people it is because this government has contributed to making it less relevant. It is no wonder that people feel parliament is becoming less relevant after trying in vain to get this government to understand that there are a number of problems that need solving. In spite of this, the government can turn a deaf ear and a blind eye to these needs of the people.

Let me point out that at Christmas time the Vancouver Sun, which is the organ of the Liberal party on the west coast, published an editorial pointing out that the government had the good sense to put the then proposed closure rule, 16A, in the deep freeze. It said it would be wrong for the rest of us to think that the government was putting this rule through to hobble parliament. But it added that the Prime Minister had made a mistake. The editorial went on to state:

> The plan of wholesale advance closure inherent in rule 16A was seen on examination to be intolerable. He [The Prime Minister] had not realized how sensitive parliament and people are to the rights of this great institution.

The Prime Minister, inexperienced as he was, was surely entitled to a mistake. But when only six months later we see the same mistake coming around again we are entitled to second thoughts. Why should he make the same mistake, one which shows complete lack of understanding and of respect for parliament? Is the Prime Minister that accident prone? Is this a death wish shared by the cabinet? There is mounting evidence that a number of Liberal backbenchers are reluctant to be a part of this new charge of the Light Brigade. They would rather have a more viable cause for which to lay down their political lives. The hon. member for New Westminster (Mr. Hogarth) indicated very well his reluctance about Rule 75c when he said it was too late now to back out of this position.

Let me point out that this is precisely the same mistake that was made once years ago by another Liberal government. This was back in 1956 when the Liberal government had a muscleman who also got himself confused with God. Among other lordly utterances of his were the famous "What's a million", and 'Who is to stop us?" These off-the-cuff remarks had about the same slow-burn effect on the public as the more up to date remarks "There is no housing crisis" and "Why should I sell the Canadian farmer's wheat?"

The effect in 1956 was to bring about the defeat of an arrogant government and to scatter its shattered remnants throughout the valley of desolation, where they wandered for years. The valley is still there, waiting. Parliament cannot be mocked or manoeuvered with impunity. Parliament has its defenders in this chamber as this debate amply testifies. As we fight on, the forces of public opinion outside are growing and will continue to grow as people realize more and more fully just what is at stake.

Who is to stop us, asks the present government as they bring down the guillotine. Let them reflect at this eleventh hour on the fact that this house is one of the few remaining places in Canada where the Liberal party remains in power today. Of course, there is Newfoundland. The Liberals are pretty rocky there as the stalwart contingent of opposition M.P.s from that province demonstrate in this Chamber. There is Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick, both with strong and effective shock troops here. Lastly there is Saskatchewan. Having recently experienced public sentiment there, I should think the Prime Minister would realize that there are times when discretion is the better part of valour, unless of course the urge for political suicide becomes too strong on his part to be resisted. The truth is that Canadians are becoming sick and tired of being fobbed off by grand gestures and empty phrases about participatory democracy and the just society. They want a start on the real thing. Province by province they are turning away from the Liberal party which tries to be all things to all men—and women—and ends up being nothing to anyone.

• (11:00 p.m.)

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mrs. MacInnis: Now, while there is still time, the once-great Liberal party would do well to look to its age-old traditions of free speech and free assembly. It used to be proud of the fact that it had those traditions. Unless it can reverse the step it proposes to take tonight, this government is headed for the boneyard of history. Already in British Columbia it is being written off in the forthcoming election.

In this modern age, when two men have set foot on the moon through the co-operative effort of thousands of people the world over, any petty attempt by a minor tyrant to stifle free speech in Canada's parliament is doomed to ignominious failure.

Mr. H. Russell MacEwan (Central Nova): Mr. Speaker, since the commencement of this very important debate on rule changes I have listened fairly constantly to it. I listened this evening to the hon. member for New Westminster (Mr. Hogarth), who sat on the justice committee. The hon. member's approach to the rules of the house reminds me of the Perry Mason series in which Hamilton Berger prosecuted in the courts of the United States. The hon. member for New Westminster may be able to do it in the courts of Vancouver and New Westminster, but he cannot come here and impose restrictions and coerce the members of this house, especially those in the opposition, the way he apparently does in the courts of the country.

I was very sorry to hear him speak the way he did. During the sittings of the legal affairs committee he quoted various people and books. He does not think much of Beauchesne, apparently. Beauchesne was here before him, and I suggest will be here long after the hon. member has gone. He spoke about the need of programming and all that goes with it. He spoke of the techniques of automation, of computers, and so on. He spoke of the necessity of changing the rules until parliament is productive, as he put it.

An hon. member of this house—I shall not pinpoint him—said not very long ago that by the time the new rules are passed we will not recognize parliament. I wonder what was meant by that. I wonder what legislation will be brought forward by the government during the next session.

Mr. Bell: "President" Trudeau.

Mr. MacEwan: There will perhaps be changes in taxation and welfare. One morning, as I was walking to the house with a government member—

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): You are a pretty broadminded guy, Russ.

Mr. MacEwan: —he asked how many members there were from the province I have the honour to represent. I told him. He said, "That is too many. I represent a large city constituency and I do not think it is right that your province has so many members." I said, "Try and change it. The number of members from my province is provided for in the legislation of this land. The members from my province can be no fewer than the number of senators". He said, "We will change that". Perhaps this is the thinking of the government, namely, to change the British North America Act and the number of members who have the right to represent the provinces of this country. Perhaps that is why the government brought forward 75c.

The hon. member spoke about rules and said, "We will try these rules, and if they do not work we will change them". I wonder who will change them. What faith can we have in this government when the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) at New Year's said, after rule 16A had been withdrawn after the great speech of the Minister of Manpower and Immigration (Mr. MacEachen), who came to the front today and rolled into the aisle to speak—he is always brought forward on occasions such as this—

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): He is a great Nova Scotian.

Mr. MacEwan: He is a member from Nova Scotia; in fact, the only one on the other side. At one time we enjoyed the fact that in parliament there was no Grit from my province. That will happen again.

An hon. Member: And very soon.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): One to ten is good odds.

[Mr. MacEwan.]

Mr. MacEwan: The grandfather of the Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) came from Nova Scotia.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): From your county.

Mr. MacEwan: I think the minister has forgotten that, because he is supporting these proposed rules. We Nova Scotians care for democracy and I am surprised at the attitude of the minister in this regard.

Mr. Bell: He deserted Quebec.

Mr. MacEwan: The hon. member for New Westminster said the government would change the rules if necessary. What faith can we have in this government when just after rule 16A was withdrawn the Prime Minister, in a television interview, told the Canadian people, "We are not really interested in changing the rules too much. All we did was suck the opposition in so they would accept a certain part of the rules which were put forward"? How can we believe a Prime Minister who makes such a statement?

The hon. member for New Westminster said that some members have been here too long. Perhaps they have. The Minister of National Revenue (Mr. Côté) has been here too long. He is collecting taxes, and that will not help him in the future; people may hold a personal grudge against him. It is not for the hon. member for New Westminster, the Prime Minister or any member of the government to tell me, the member for Central Nova, that I have been here too long. The people of Canada decide that.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. MacEwan: The area I represent does not have any beetroot growers, as has the hon. member for Essex (Mr. Whelan); we have coal miners, farmers, fishermen and shipyard workers who are in favour of democracy. They sent me and other members to this house. I suggest it is not for the government to introduce rules to muzzle members of parliament.

Mr. Howard (Skeena): Don't forget they are Liberals, Russ.

Mr. MacEwan: That is right. The question was asked: What is the government trying to do? The simple answer is that it is trying to control the procedures of the house; in other words, it is trying to make parliament the errand boy of the government. One of our oldest traditions is that parliament controls its own procedures. It is parliament which makes the rules, not the government. Now we have the government asking parliament to bind and gag itself.

I suggest that hon. members on the other side think about this. If we came into this house and silently acquiesed in what I would call the mummification of parliament, we would never again be able to hold up our heads among the honest Canadians of this country. They did not send me here in order to assist the government to ride roughshod over parliament. Those who have attempted to bring in these restrictions, those who have attempted to place parliament in a straitjacket, have used the excuse that this is the way things are done in England. I suggest it is not the way things are done in Canada.

• (11:10 p.m.)

I do not know who cooked up rule 75c, but I have an idea. Perhaps the government house leader had something to do with it, assisted by someone else who is now no longer within these walls but who is a former member of parliament. I will not go into personalities but at one time he sat as a member of the opposition.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): That is a pretty mysterious statement.

Mr. MacEwan: The Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) works in mysterious ways, as well as other members of the government. Some of them are here one day and gone another. Their spirits and ghosts are here, so we know about that. The Minister of Justice should uphold justice and remember about the previous great ministers of justice of this country. The present minister should keep that in mind when his legislation is brought before the house.

Mr. McCleave: He can forget about his predecessor.

Mr. MacEwan: With regard to these rules, if the house leaders cannot agree or do not reach a conclusion which is satisfactory to the government, then a minister will have the power of life and death over the business of the house. He, and he alone, will have this power. That is a lot of power to place in the hands of one man, however modest, unassuming and solicitous of the rights of others that man may be. In this particular instance I am not referring to the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald) because it is definitely a terrible temptation to place before him. I suggest that the government house leader has already demonstrated his lack of fitness to wield such absolute power over the business of this house.

There is one reflection which comes to my mind if rule 75c—to which I refer as the butcher rule—is passed, and that is the considerable saving that will ensue in parliamentary positions. For example, we will no longer require any of the opposition house leaders because in that instance the government house leader will be all powerful. Perhaps we will no longer require opposition whips. This would be a terrible thing for the hon. member for Saint John-Lancaster (Mr. Bell) because there would be no point in him coming to this chamber. If rule 75c is passed, this parliament will simply become a graveyard of free speech, and the battle, like so many battles for freedom, will be lost quietly, unspectacularly, and with hardly a whimper. Parliament will simply become another occupied country with the government acting as the occupying power.

Parliament cannot accept the imposition of a gag by this government. Members are not sent here simply to say yea or nay. Members are sent here to complain, to criticize, to demand redress of grievances and to point out the faults and failure of the government.

Mr. Sharp: And to legislate.

Mr. MacEwan: The minister should know all about that. He has been in the backrooms of deputy ministers for so long. He has been a bureaucrat, and he has shown it in the legislation which he has brought forth here.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. MacEwan: I am not sure how it is in other branches of the Department of External Affairs, but the passport branch is certainly not so good. I suggest that we need more legislation there.

However, let us go back to the consideration of rule 75c. Members are also sent here to be informed, to represent the people who sent them, to put forward the interests of their constituents, and so on. Parliament cannot degenerate into a series of seminars, with government ministers telling us what to think, what to say and how long to speak. If we are only allowed to vote and not to speak, we will be getting suspiciously close to the systems practised in countries where the state has been allowed to become the supreme entity of the nation. The issue is simple: Is the state a creature of the people, or are the people creatures of the state? A stand has to be taken, and that stand can only be made in parliament.

The control of the finances of this nation must be returned to the people of this nation, and that can only be done in parliament. It cannot be done in committee; it cannot be done in newspaper editorials; it cannot be done on TV panel shows. It can be done in this house, and this house only. That is why this parliament must rise up and reject the motion by the government and support the amendment proposed by the opposition house leader who clearly set out the dark chasm toward which we are steering. This is the time for parliament to say no and to make it plain that all sides of this house will maintain the supremacy of this institution and its freedom from control from whatever source.

Many editorials were written and many statements made regarding this matter. Perhaps I should quote what the Prime Minister said outside the house, where he usually says things. This is what he said:

—many Canadians have begun to feel parliament is irrelevant. His government will stand or fall on the proposition that reasonable men can take a decision on a proposal after the arguments have been heard, and the decision must be the decision of the majority.

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Hear, hear.

Mr. MacEwan: I am glad we have a little support from the Minister of Justice. The Prime Minister said that Canadians have begun to feel that parliament is irrelevant. I do not know where he got this idea. I suggest that he has a lot to learn. Canadians do not feel that parliament is irrelevant and they will prove this at the next election, wherever it may come.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. MacEwan: My suggestion is that under rules 75A, 75B and 75C members will not have a reasonable chance to speak. The time limit is such that after a lapse of ten days a vote has to be taken. Certainly, this is not a reasonable length of time. This allows only for four days of debate in ten days during which a major bill must be processed. Again I ask the following questions: What will the government bring forward during the fall session that requires us now to pass rule 75c, not to bring in further legislation but to bring in closure on debate in parliament, or closure on closure?

I have listened to my friend, the hon. member for Mercier (Mr. Boulanger). He is much changed since the time when we went on trips together. Since the government has a majority he has changed much. He was a pretty good fellow on the trips. When we were out west six years ago he showed democratic inclinations. Even the chairman of the committee, the former member for Hamilton West, was democratic. But now there is a change. We have listened to government backbenchers, and especially to the hon. member for New Westminster (Mr. Hogarth), who will streamroller over anyone who says that we have been here too long. Rule 75c curtail the right of the opposition to work effectively in this parliament. This is what was said in this regard:

If parliament is to be preserved as a living institution His Majesty's Loyal Opposition must fearlessly perform its functions. When it properly discharges them the preservation of our freedom is assured. The reading of history proves that freedom always dies when criticism ends. It upholds and maintains the rights of minorities against majorities. It must be vigilant against oppression and unjust invasions by the cabinet of the rights of the people. It should supervise all expenditures and prevent over-expenditure by exposing to the light of public opinion wasteful expenditures or worse. It finds fault; it suggests amendments; it asks questions and elicits information; it arouses, educates and molds public opinion by voice and vote. It must scrutinize every action by the government and in doing so prevents the short-cuts through democratic procedure that governments like to make.

It was also said once that:

The absence of a strong opposition means a one party state. A one party state means an all powerful cabinet.

Not every member of this house who has been here a few years has the opportunity to speak as much as he would like. This applies to everyone here, and especially to government backbenchers. Members sitting in the opposition have more opportunity to speak. I suggest this rule 75c will gag parliament. It will curtail the rights of all, and I hope some of the backbenchers on the other side, ordinary members like myself, will not go along with it because—and I say this seriously—if they do, they will live to regret it.

• (11:20 p.m.)

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de Grâce): While I do not think that I, or anybody else on this side for that matter, will ever be able to convince the opposition that 75c is a good rule, I do believe it is important that we on the back benches on this side should make it clear to the Canadian people that we fully support this rule and believe it constitutes an important and positive contribution to improving the rules of this house.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Stanfield: Would the hon. member permit a question? Is he prepared to recommend this rule to the house in its present form?

Mr. Allmand: While we on this side are not as perfect as members of the opposition are, I would say that the rule is one of the best rules I have seen—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Allmand: —suggested or put to the house in connection with the allocation of time. It is much better than anything proposed by the opposition and I shall fully support it when it comes to a vote.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): The Liberals bowed their heads in shame when you said that.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order.

Mr. Allmand: Right now we are seeing the respect the opposition have for democracy. I have sat here all night listening to their speeches. Now, when I get up they are not willing to listen to me for a while. I want to say that we, the backbenchers of this party, not only support this rule but support it as a matter of principle to the extent that we are willing to place our political careers on the line for it. If, as members of the opposition assert, this is a bad rule or one which the people of Canada do not want, then the people of Canada will have an opportunity to choose. If they want the kind of parliament which the opposition demonstrated yesterday and in the last week or so, I shall gladly leave this place and decline to participate in it because I do not want to sit in a house such as we sat in yesterday, and have sat in for the last ten days.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Allmand: During this debate members of the opposition have asked what we on the back benches over here think, and that is what we think. We do not support this rule because the whips are on, or because we are members of this party, but because we think it is an important rule in enabling parliament to do the business which needs to be done for Canada.

In particular, I think rule 75 is necessary for several reasons. I shall enumerate them because the opposition is so misinterpreting this rule that it is important we should put forward a positive argument in its favour. First, while this rule will allow reasonable time for debate, for all points of view to be put forward, it will not permit the filibuster, or debate merely for the sake of obstruction. Second, it will prevent long, unproductive debate with much repetition and irrelevance. Third, it will help the House of Commons to become a much more productive and efficient institution. I do not think there is any other way in which a government can properly plan a legislative program, schedule business and organize parliamentary manpower and parliamentary services. There must be proper co-ordination between the government and the legislature. The government has responsibility for preparing legislation and if this is to be done properly there must be some kind of schedule. Finally, I believe that a system providing for an allocation of time will make for much better debates. When there is a limit on debates I find that all parties put forward their best speakers; they are better prepared and this leads to a much more productive debate, within the limited time, than those endless debates which go on without limit.

What do we see at the present time? At the present time we have a parliament which is at the mercy of the opposition, as we saw yesterday. It is subject to the control of the opposition. As the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) pointed out tonight, we do have closure at the present time: it is closure by means of filibuster, repetition and irrelevance. While bills may eventually come to a vote, so much time is taken up in wasteful debate that many important measures never get to the floor.

There are several basic questions which I believe we in this house and the Canadian people generally should ask regarding this matter. First, should parliament be controlled by the majority or the minority in the final analysis? Second, should freedom of debate be an unlimited right or should it, like all other rights, be subject to limitation? As part of the civil law of Quebec we have a well known doctrine known as the abus des droits —the abuse of rights. According to this doctrine, no right is unlimited; it is always subject to restriction when it might interfere with the rights of others. There are many examples of the limitation to the right of free speech. In our present law we have a limitation in respect to slander, limitations in respect to libel, sedition, obscenity, and so on.

We need to ask ourselves another important question: to what extent should the freedom of debate be tempered by the need for efficient operation and productivity? What should be the balance between freedom and efficiency? When we talk about productivity we get the impression from hon. members opposite that they do not believe productivity in this house to be important. Yet I cannot recall one election campaign in which the main basis of attack by the opposition has not been: how much has the government done? How many bills have they passed? During this debate the opposition gives the impression that productivity is not important—that the important thing is freedom to debate as long as they wish, or for as long as they think is in their interest. What are we to believe? Are we to believe them at election time, or are we to believe what they say in the course of this debate? In my opinion their credibility is greatly in doubt. Both things are important. There must be freedom of debate but there must also be a measure of productivity. I should like to quote from an editorial which appeared in the Montreal Star this evening. It is entitled: "Not for freedom". It says:

• (11:30 p.m.)

As they waged their last ditch battle against the government's time-allocation rule, opposition members of Parliament tended to present themselves as the last bastion protecting defenceless citizens from a government anxious to ride roughshod over their liberties. But it is a curious fact that the last time the opposition exercised its power to hold up legislation by filibuster, it was trying its best to prevent an extension of freedom.

The issue was the bill to amend the Criminal Code of Canada. By decreeing that it would no longer imprison homosexuals for acts committed in private, or doctors for performing abortions considered necessary to preserve the health of the mother, the government achieved a modest but genuine increase in human liberty.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Allmand: I am surprised at the N.D.P., Mr. Speaker. I was attracted to its ideas in earlier years and had always looked on it as a party which believed in planning. I always thought that party was interested in planning and supported the principle that humanity should control its environment by planning, controlling and scheduling. Sad to say, that party uses the concept of planning for its own political expediency. It is interested in planning when planning helps it and against planning when planning does not help.

Mr. Howard (Skeena): Be accurate, for heaven's sake.

Mr. Allmand: The opposition has alleged that this government and this proposed rule are dictatorial and autocratic. I ask, was the government being dictatorial or autocratic when it proposed last fall that the opposition should have more money to spend on research so that it could better criticize the government. Was that a dictatorial or autocratic action?

An hon. Member: No.

Another hon. Member: That was a waste of public money.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. Could we have order so that the hon. member can deliver his remarks.

Mr. Howard (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, he deserves to be interrupted for not being accurate.

Mr. Allmand: Was the government being dictatorial or autocratic when it proposed that as a general rule all bills ought to go through committee, thus prolonging the legislative process? Every bill is to be examined in a forum that is open to the participation of the general public. Expert witnesses may be called—

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): For one day.

Mr. Allmand: Is this government being dictatorial when it proposes that we have a bill of rights entrenched in the B.N. Act?

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Where is it?

Mr. Allmand: Is it being autocratic when it seeks to preserve the civil liberties of Canadians and their language rights? Is the official languages bill, which protects the rights of a minority, dictatorial? Was the government being dictatorial when it introduced the bill providing for regional economic expansion and industrial incentives with respect to underdeveloped areas of Canada? When the Prime Minister went out west recently and sat in the back of a truck in Saskatchewan exchanging ideas with farmers, was he acting as a dictator?

An hon. Member: Why don't you read his book?

Another hon. Member: Tell us about the little boy.

Mr. Allmand: You see, Mr. Speaker, I am touching the opposition's sensitive spot, because it will not allow me to speak.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Allmand: They want to shout me down. That is their concept of democracy.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Allmand: Under our constitution, enshrined in the British North America Act that we cannot amend in this house, there is a provision that there must be elections every five years. We say that the majority has the right to put forward its legislative program. If it is bad legislation, if it is wrong in changing the rules, it shall answer to the people. It has that responsibility. If we are doing the wrong thing the opposition should be happy. After all, that will put them on this side of the house after the next election—but I doubt it. Our constitution guarantees that Canada, which is a federal state, shall have elections at least every five years. Therefore the accusations of dictatorship or autocracy are ridiculous.

It is strange to hear opposition members say that the opposition is badly treated and is not given enough debating time. Has anyone counted the pages in Hansard devoted to the speeches of the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre, the hon. member for Peace River and other opposition members? And we should consider not only debate but the question period and other procedures in this house. If we compare the number of pages devoted to opposition members with the number of pages on which we appear, then certainly it may be said that we on this side in the back benches are the slaves of the opposition.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Stanfield: Will the hon. member permit a question. Will he tell me at what point the house leaders of the opposition parties will be reduced to the status of backbenchers on the government side of the house?

Mr. Allmand: Mr. Speaker, I expect more sensible questions from the Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. Monteith: That is a typical approach.

Mr. Allmand: Why do we require time limits in this modern age, Mr. Speaker? Would anyone belonging to a club, trade union, corporation, or private association tolerate a situation in which a minority of people at a meeting could prevent the taking of a decision indefinitely? Would opposition party members at one of their political conventions tolerate a situation in which a minority group could block the taking of an important decision? Just look at political party conventions. They are conducted under time limits, and that is reasonable. The opposition has a double standard, supporting the idea of time allocation when it suits it at their conventions and similar party functions, and opposing it here, simply because it is the opposition.

An hon. Member: Is that the case for the defence?

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): There is no need to impose time limitations on a party that has nothing to say.

Mr. Lewis: I shall think of a retort to that quip by tomorrow.

Mr. Allmand: Some hon. members are trying to give the country the impression that the idea of time allocation on debate is new and that we are trying to foist something on the parliament of Canada. I think it is time the Canadian public were made aware of a few facts. There are many instances in our rules in which time limitation is permissible.

Mr. Bell: By agreement.

Mr. Allmand: It is not always by agreement. The time limitations have been brought in over the years because legislation has become more voluminous and complex. First of all, we have a six day limitation on the budget debate.

Some hon. Members: By agreement.

Mr. Allmand: And an eight day limitation on the Throne Speech debate.

Some hon. Members: By agreement.

Mr. Allmand: We have limitations on supply debates.

Some hon. Members: By agreement.

Mr. Allmand: And we have limited the question period to 40 minutes.

Some hon. Members: By agreement.

Mr. Allmand: We have limited the time to be spent on private members' business.

Some hon. Members: By agreement.

Mr. Allmand: Obviously, Mr. Speaker, the opposition accepts the principle of limitation of time.

Some hon. Members: By agreement.

Mr. Allmand: If they are to be consistent and logical, they should be willing to extend this principle and accept this rule.

Mr. Lewis: That is a classical non sequitur.

Mr. Allmand: We have set limits on how long we are to speak in debates. There is a limit of 40 minutes.

Some hon. Members: By agreement.

Mr. Allmand: The opposition parties have accepted the principle of 75A and 75B.

Some hon. Members: By agreement.

Mr. Allmand: Clearly, the opposition accepts the principle of time limitation.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): By agreement.

Mr. Allmand: Had 75B been in effect in the previous parliament in which the Liberal party was in a minority position, it could have formed a majority with the Ralliement Creditiste and the Social Credity party under that rule which would have enabled the government to set an allocation time against the wishes of the conservatives and N.D.P. Those two opposition parties, with the government, could have combined against approximately 90 Conservatives and 22 or 23 N.D.P. members. In the previous parliament, this rule would have meant that closure would be imposed against slightly more than 100 members. They will accept that situation under 75B, but they will not accept 75c which could impose closure on a smaller number of people in parliament. I submit, Mr. Speaker, there is a great inconsistency in their stand for principles here. On the other hand there are many safeguards for the opposition.

• (11:40 p.m.)

Mr. Lewis: Repeat it. We did not quite understand you.

Mr. Allmand: I am very easy to understand. There were many other simple things you failed to understand in this debate.

Mr. Baldwin: Will the hon. member permit a question at this time?

Mr. Allmand: I have already answered two or three questions from that side. They have not been very productive.

Mr. Baldwin: Will the hon. member answer a question?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Allmand: Mr. Speaker, I want to repeat some of the safeguards in the constitution of this nation and in the rules of this house which protect the opposition from autocratic rule, dictatorship and all the other things they allege. As I mentioned before, there is the British North America Act which guarantees an election every five years.

Rules 75A, 75B and 75c can only be put at one stage of the bill at a time. This means that after we have put on time allocation under Rule 75c for second reading on the committee stage and the public has had a chance to listen—to that debate and there has been reaction from the press and perhaps the public, we then have to set another allocation for the next stage. This is a very real protection and safeguard for the opposition. We can only set a time allocation for one stage at a time.

As was pointed out by the Prime Minister, there are 28 opposition days. There are also the very real powers of the free press in this country. At this time I wish to read a letter I received this afternoon from a student in my constituency in regard to this matter. The letter reads:

Dear Mr. Allmand,

I absolutely support the government position on house procedures and support immediate implementation of Rule 75c, as well as 75A and 75B.

Mr. Trudeau was correct in his analysis of the public in Canada. Parliament is becoming regarded as irrelevant . . . because so much talk goes on and very little action seems to be forthcoming. Important business is always snowed under by so much verbocity on completely trivial matters.

Messrs. Stanfield, Douglas, Caouette seem unaware of the fact that we now live with nearly instant communication (in T.V. and radio) and that public opinion may be stirred up literally overnight to prevent passing of undemocratic or unconstitutional law.

An hon. Member: Who signed it, Dr. Ollivier?

Mr. Allmand: Mr. Speaker, this letter is from a young student in my constituency.

Mr. Baldwin: It sounds like he is an old student.

An hon. Member: Who signed the letter?

Mr. Allmand: Never mind who signed it. It is a person I never met or even saw before.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Allmand: It is an ex-member of the N.D.P..

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member for Charlevoix.

[Translation]

Hon. Martial Asselin (Charlevoix): Mr. Speaker, I do not think the rules allow a member to put on the record a letter he has received without giving the name of the one who sent it.

If it is actually signed, the member should, under the Standing Orders, indicate the name of the sender before the letter can be entered in the official report of the House of Commons.

[English]

Mr. Allmand: Mr. Speaker, as far as I know that is not a rule or precedent of this house.

An hon. Member: Yes it is.

Mr. Allmand: Your Honour can make a ruling. As far as I know, there is no rule. I do not have permission from this person to use his letter.

Mr. Monteith: You read it.

Mr. Alexander: You should not have read it then.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Monteith: Learn the rules.

29180—733

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I think the practice of the house has been when an hon. member reads a letter he takes the responsibility for its contents. I think this has been the normal practice. In the event it is a personal letter, hon. members may request the name of the author. I could consult further with the table if this objection is pursued. The solution may be that the hon. member's time has already expired.

Mr. Baldwin: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker. I rise to correct a misrepresentation made by the hon. member during the course of his speech. When the hon. member said it is only the opposition that is responsible for obstructing and not permitting matters to be brought to a vote in the house, I am compelled, unwillingly, to bring to the attention of the house and the hon. member that he is the hon. member who moved an amendment to the fifth report to the Standing Committee on Transport dealing with the railroad situation in Newfoundland. This report had been approved by a majority of the committee, and he thereby stopped that report from being voted on in this house.

Some hon. Members: Shame.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Allmand: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker. I moved that the report be sent back to the committee because I thought it was a bad report. I followed the same course as the opposition when they moved that rule 16A be sent back to committee.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I have very grave doubts as to whether the original point of order is valid.

Hon. J. W. Monteith (Perth): Mr. Speaker, I had intended bringing to the attention of the house that the hon. member had moved this amendment to Government Order 68, obviously causing obstruction to the operation of this house. I feel almost out of this tonight after hearing some of the so-called young-fry from the Liberal backbenches suggesting there is a new look in the house.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Monteith: Quiet please.

Mr. Mackasey: I never said a word.

Mr. Monteith: The hon. member for New Westminster (Mr. Hogarth) was here a moment ago. He seems to have disappeared.

An hon. Member: It's his bedtime.

Mr. Monteith: The hon. member suggested that many of us have been in this house too long. I am pleased to see the Solicitor General (Mr. McIlraith) coming into the chamber because he has some 13 years more service than I.

An hon. Member: He is ready for the Senate.

Some hon. Members: To the Senate, to the Senate!

Mr. Monteith: I suggest that some hon. members who have been around here a few years have quite a reasonable amount of respect for this House of Commons as an institution. I think the hon. member who just took his place, the member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce (Mr. Allmand) was properly put in his place by the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield) when he was asked a very simple question. He was asked if he would recommend the adoption by the house of the rule as it presently exists. He cannot follow that through. He knows very well there have been suggestions made by his own house leader and by our people with which he would go along. Therefore, the present rule is not one which should be adopted by this house. Your Honour has had a very long day. I trust Your Honour will be patient with me. I do not intend to be disruptive or argumentative. I will try to put forward what I consider a rather serious approach to this whole problem we are facing. As I rise to participate in this debate tonight, my memory goes back to 1956. I was sitting in front of the curtains. I was participating in another closure debate. At that time I was called to order by the late Deputy Speaker of the House of Commons, a very good friend of mine, because I had been attempting to compare the late Right Hon. C. D. Howe to Julius Caesar. I thought I had a good point. The Deputy Speaker did not think so. I had to bow to his opinion and as a consequence did not follow up that argument any further. That was during the closure debate. Tonight, I trust I shall keep entirely within the bounds of what you, Mr. Speaker, may suggest is order. I am entering this debate tonight because I feel so strongly that the government is completely wrong in its approach to this matter. This is not the way reasonable men should resolve their differences or reach solutions to problems in which there is conflict on both sides. This House of Commons is, or has been, a democratic institution. Until this particular stage it has been an institution where members have the privilege and the duty to be heard. I am not a particular student of the rules of the House of Commons. I have never pretended to be such, but I have been here long enough, since 1953, to feel I know what makes parliament tick. I think I have a feeling for this institution. I do not like what I see going on here today.

• (11:50 p.m.)

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Monteith: I see the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) who has been here longer than I have. I see the hon. Solicitor General who has been here longer than I have. I do not see the hon. member from Brantford, but he came here the same time I did. There are several others who came at about the same time or prior who do not like what is happening to parliament today.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Monteith: Mr. Speaker, I should like to discuss what happened in this House of Commons in 1955. I believe it was a very interesting situation. During my years here I have seen rule changes. Subsequently, those changes have had to be reformed because they became outdated. I think this is a natural course; it is something which must happen. However, I should like to review exactly what happened in 1955. I was here at that time. Not too many of the present members were here. The Solicitor General will recall this, and I hope that he will listen intently to me because I am sure he will have to agree exactly with what I say.

In 1953 following the election of August 10, a special committee was set up to consider, study, evaluate and recommend changes in the rules. That committee sat for approximately two years. It had frequent meetings. Our party at that time was in opposition. I remember very distinctly the members of our party coming back to caucus and reporting that they and the government members on the committee were trying to negotiate and work together so that they might eventually come up with a unanimous recommendation. The Hon. E. Davie Fulton was a representative of our party on that committee. I recall him coming back to caucus and suggesting that certain steps might be taken. The Hon. Walter Harris was government house leader at that time. The approach we had to the rule changes at the time was entirely different from the approach of the Prime Minister and the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald) today. This Prime Minister and this minister are trying to ramrod changes through the House of Commons. In that day it was done by negotiation.

May I just tell you a little about the result of that negotiation. It was for the good of parliament. The hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre will recollect this because he was a member of the committee. In those days, some 15 or 16 years ago, he was even then considered a knowledgeable man concerning the rules of the house. I think he probably was about the most knowledgeable man in the House of Commons at that time. The committee met on many occasions. The members of the committee came to the conclusion that the only thing to do was to bring in a unanimous report, one that would receive the commendation of all parties in the House of Commons. That procedure is so different from the procedure we are facing today. I suggest that the recommendations of that committee were as far reaching as they could be. In 1955, the first time since 1867, a period of 88 years, one of the recommendations brought in was that there should be a limitation of time for the throne speech debate. Another was that there should be a limitation of time on the budget debate.

This evening the Prime Minister spoke about allocation of time as though it was something entirely new. What does he know about it? He has only been around here since 1965. In 1955 a change in the rules was brought in to effect a limitation on the throne speech debate and on the budget debate for the first time in history. I think that should be noted. This was done by negotiation. It was done by a conciliatory approach by all parties. This was the approach that was felt to be proper by all members of the committee of that day. When members of the government today suggest that allocation of time is new they are talking utter nonsense. They do not know what they are talking about. This particular change was brought in by negotiation, by agreement and by good common bargaining and consent. It is true the members had their differences at times, but they got together.

At this point, Mr. Speaker I should like to place on the record one or two quotations from the debates in 1955. I believe they are very interesting. Here is one quotation.

• (12 midnight)

> I want to make it very clear that we appreciate the attitude taken by the minister—

He was referring to Walter Harris, at that time the house leader of the government. The quotation continues:

> —in the subcommittee and carried forward by him into the main committee after the subcommittee had completed its negotiations.

That quotation can be found at page 5564 of Hansard for July 1, 1955. The statement was made by the hon. E. Davie Fulton who was in the opposition at that time. I am sure the hon. member for Peace River (Mr. Baldwin) would be pleased if he could find himself able to make that statement at the beginning of this particular debate after reasonable negotiation and the application of simple good common sense by everyone.

Mr. Stanfield: The hon. member for Peace River is a very reasonable man. Everybody knows that.

Mr. Monteith: I am sure the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre must also have nostalgia when reading Hansard for July 1, 1955. I am sure he would like to have been able to repeat today what he said on that occasion.

An hon. Member: He certainly has neuralgia.

Mr. Monteith: The hon. member said this:

> I too wish to add my expression of pleasure at the way in which the Minister of Finance dealt with us. Not only did he spend a great deal of time in connection with this matter, not only did he bring to bear the results of a great deal of study, but when it got down to the hard business of compromise and bargaining the four of us who met together found that as a result of collective bargaining in good faith—something which I support wholeheartedly—we have been able to come up with a report which is unanimous so far as the committee is concerned.

That quotation can be found at page 5568 of Hansard for July 1, 1955, and those are the words of the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Times have changed.

Mr. Monteith: Times have changed drastically, as the hon. member suggests. This is the way it was, and members from both sides of the house worked toward a common sense end for the good of this institution.

I should like to refer to one other quotation. I will not quote it but it is a reference to the debate at that time in 1955. The right hon. member for Prince Albert (Mr. Diefenbaker) delivered a short and friendly speech in which he recalled the tradition set forth by Macdonald, McGee, Laurier and Burke. Contrast that speech or approach with the speech he delivered here last week in which that right hon. member felt obliged to launch a vigorous attack on the decision of the government as embodied in the report of the committee. He said the privileges and prerogatives of the house and its members were at stake, and there is no doubt about that. This is the result of the intransigency and ill will caused by this government and its approach to these rule changes.

I should like to suggest to you, Mr. Speaker, that hon. members of the house should compare the approach to the 1955 rule changes to the present one. I neglected to mention this earlier, but at that time the rule changes were discussed in his chamber for exactly two half days; one half day on July 1—we worked in those days when I first came here on all holidays, and the house sat on July 1—and another half day.

In 1955, the actual motion for adoption was moved by the Hon. Walter Harris and seconded by the Hon. E. Davie Fulton. This indicates co-operation, and what can be done if the determination is there to get together and work out a common sense solution. That is not what has been done by this government today. This government is trying to shove everything down the throats of the opposition.

Mr. Stanfield: DeGaullism, that's what it is.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Co-operation, that was a very important factor.

Mr. Monteith: It was a very important factor. I have referred only to two of what I thought were the major changes in respect of limitation, one in respect of the throne speech debate and the other on the budget debate. There has never, in 88 years of our history, been any limitation on the time of debate.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I hesitate to interrupt the hon. member but I must bring to his attention that his time has expired. He can continue with the consent of the house.

Some hon. Members: Carry on.

An hon. Member: No.

Mr. Monteith: Mr. Speaker, I would not deign to continue any longer as a result of the "no" I heard from across the chamber in this House of Commons. I was only pointing out certain truths which I hope members on the government benches will appreciate and realize to be truths.

Mr. Andrew Brewin (Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, this debate is coming to a close and, indeed, to a forced closure. I am not so certain, on the basis of my persuasive powers, that I expect at this witching hour of midnight to persuade any members opposite to change their minds and vote against this illiberal and iniquitous measure before us. I want to say that my conviction is that this has been a very sad week for the Canadian parliament. It has been sad because the spirit of free co-operation which is essential to the successful operation of any institution such as a parliament has suffered a severe blow. It has been over-ridden and crushed down by a government decision to impose its own version of parliamentary procedure by the arbitrary means of closure. The government has deliberately preferred the bulldozer, the bludgeon, and the parliamentary knout to the principle of consultation among reasonable men.

I suspect that this will turn out to be a sad week for a party which calls itself Liberal.

Liberalism at its historic best, as I understand it, involves responsibility toward minorities, respect for the process of debate and discussion among equals and willingness to give oppositions and minorities their fair share in decision making and debate. I am distressed that in a party which calls itself Liberal not a single person has stood up during this debate and propounded genuine Liberal principles. I fear that within a few minutes we will vote on this motion to limit the debates of this parliament, and not one Liberal will have the courage to vote for the amendment and against the motion before us. That flouts every principle of Liberalism.

I do not believe that a party which has so clearly demonstrated its contempt for parliament will long enjoy the confidence of the Canadian people who are, I believe profoundly committed by a sense of fair play to democratic principles and practices. Another melancholy feature of this whole matter is that it has been totally unnecessary. It is unnecessary because the reason for the prolonging of this debate and the imposition of closure to conclude it have both been caused by the insistence of the government to put through rule 75c. This rule is as unnecessary for its stated purpose, a reasonable allocation of time, as it is arbitrary. I do not say this because I do not believe in the reform of our parliamentary procedure, nor because I do not believe in the necessity of time allocation. On the contrary, I have been a zealous advocate of both parliamentary reform and time allocation.

• (12:10 a.m.)

I have been appalled at times by what seemed to be the inefficiency and dilatoriness of house procedure. I think that if parliament is to do an effective job, it is necessary to streamline parliamentary procedure. The Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) and the Liberal party have no monopoly on the desire to streamline parliamentary procedure. I have always advocated that our procedure needs streamlining, and I do so now. We should have a greater limitation on the time allowed for speeches. I believe it would be better if more members spoke and the time limit for speeches were reduced. I think most of us can do better in 20 minutes than we can in 40 minutes. I agree that there is a necessity for getting through the house in an orderly way an extensive legislative program. Legislation has been promised year after year and not introduced at all. I have personally listened to ten different ministers of immigration promise a new Indian Act, which I assure the house is badly needed; but it has never been introduced.

We have heard successive Speeches from the Throne promising a Canada Development Corporation. The Minister of Justice (Mr. Turner) has brought forward a long awaited revision of our expropriation statutes, which are much outdated and unjust, but we have not found time to enact it into law. Problems of pollution are grave; they have found their way into the forefront of the public conscience, and rightly so. The water act, which is to set up machinery to enable full federal participation in dealing with water pollution, languishes in some ministerial filing cabinet.

I believe that members of parliament can, through the committees system, become the originators of much needed legislation. I am quite sure that when the party I represent becomes the government, which I think may be sooner than some hon. members anticipate—

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Brewin:—it will want to present, and will present, a varied and vigorous program of legislative action. For all these reasons I welcome, as I believe this party does, steps toward an orderly allocation of time and the planning of the business of the house. It is for this very reason that I regret the government has chosen a method of time allocation and a means of imposing it which could not help but rouse the firm opposition of any self-respecting member of the house who is not silenced by obligatory support of the government.

I regret that the government brought this measure into the house at a time when perhaps it hoped the weariness of the opposition after a long session would enable it to ram through something unacceptable. I think the government was mistaken in believing that the opposition could be bludgeoned or cajoled by the deprivation of a summer vacation into abandoning its duties and what it believes in, which is parliamentary rather than governmental control of parliamentary business.

I regret that the government has seen fit to ram through the house this unconstitutional and improper rule change through the process of the guillotine or closure, which should be used only in an emergency. There has been no emergency. The Prime Minister, in his superior manner, spoke of the stupid filibuster. I distrust the judgment of those who accuse their opponents of stupidity and hypocrisy. To do so smacks of the spirit of blindness, if not arrogance. Whether or not the battle put up in this house by the opposition parties has been stupid depends upon the purpose of the operation. I think this operation, call it filibuster if you will, was to preserve a balance between the rights of the executive on one hand, and the rights of opposition members, representing as they do the people of Canada, on the other.

We are not being stupid. We are only doing our clear duty in resisting a change in procedure which would put the balance too far in favour of an executive-dominated house. If there is stupidity in connection with this debate, may it not more reasonably be charged against those who have made the debate necessary and who have to resort to closure to end it? The government insists on the passage of 75c, but 75c is not necessary to the effective conduct of legislative business.

The root question which we are deciding in this debate is whether as a general rule the business of parliament is to be based on consultation or consensus on the one hand, or coercion and dictation on the other. I am absolutely convinced, as a believer in time allocation, that the former method is more effective. However, the government has deliberately chosen the latter.

Without 75c, and indeed without 75A and 75B, the government has received from the opposition parties, through the process of consultation among the house leaders, all the co-operation required to run the business of parliament in an orderly fashion. There has been no evidence of obstruction in this parliament. I think the criticism of the government by opposition members has been constructive. We have tried to urge the government forward rather than to hobble it. Good politics as well as common sense, not to mention ordinary patriotism, means that with 75A and 75B an orderly allocation of time could have been effected.

The government seems to be basing its insistence on 75c on the fears of the past rather than the realities of the present. It is one of the ironies of history that those who would be responsible for making time allocation work under 75A and 75B are all men of responsibility and moderation, men who believe as much as any government member in making parliament work. The hon. member for Peace River (Mr. Baldwin), the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) and the hon. member for Lotbinière (Mr. Fortin) are all of course, responsible to their respective parties; but it would be hard to imagine individual members more conscious of the importance of a working and functioning parliamentary system. I would have been prepared to add to that group of reasonable men the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald). He is a man with a reputation of being an able, cool-headed lawyer. To my mind one of the mysteries of this debate has been the part he has taken in the proceedings. I personally thought he would have had more sense than to ram this measure through the house. Perhaps it is because he is not his own master.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Brewin: I repeat that 75c is not necessary and never has been. A reasonable time allocation could be achieved by 75A and 75B which the opposition parties were ready to accept, without any question of closure or any need to rely upon Standing Order 33 which should be used only as a last resort. Supposing I am wrong? Why not proceed by steps? Why not try rules 75A and 75B which the opposition parties accept? Why not try to work out a reasonable and agreed system of time allocation, and if that does not work, obstruction occurs and the government's timetable is disrupted, then would be the time to press for some such rule as 75c. One can only conclude that the insistance—in pressing on with 75c is evidence of an attitude of mind which prefers to impose its will rather than to persuade.

I prophesy that future historians will see in the events of this week the seeds of the disintegration of the Liberal party. The ultimate judges under our system are the sovereign people of Canada, whose servants we are. I believe the people of Canada will condemn in no uncertain manner the government for what it has done this week as soon as they can. I believe this will be a salutary lesson of the vitality of Canadian democracy and the parliamentary system as it is known in Canada. I believe that the people of Canada will restore the balance between the government and parliament which has been seriously upset by the procedures we are asked to approve tonight.

• (12:20 a.m.)

Mr. Colin D. Gibson (Hamilton-Wentworth): Mr. Speaker, as a backbencher I rise to speak in this debate near the end of a thrilling, difficult and exciting series of speeches, points of order and motions. I believe that there is one point that can be made from all parts of this house in unanimity, that is that you, Mr. Deputy Speaker, and the speaker have conducted this debate on the highest plane and have set an example for all parliaments throughout the world by conducting this debate with distinction and decorum. I think I can speak for all members of the house in thanking you for the magnificent manner in which you conducted our deliberations.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Gibson: May I say as a backbencher that the performance of the Speaker in the Chair is one of the most important facets of our life in parliament, and we all appreciate this.

It seems to me that the debate which we have been conducting here is very much like the situation where an irresistible force meets an immovable object. Someone has to give, and the majority party in this house is not going to give; it cannot give or we will have no government at all, we will have chaos.

Our parliamentary colleagues opposite in the New Democratic party, who profess to be the main repository of parliamentary principle, who adorn themselves in the unstained raiment of virtue, and who profess an undying allegiance to the right to free speech, have provided the House of Commons with another example of why so many people in Canada have become disenchanted with this great institution. Two nights ago, in a virtuoso performance of invective, the hon. member for Skeena (Mr. Howard) went on a rampage of character assassination of the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau), festooned with solemn appeals to principle.

The speech of the hon. member for Skeena was a great insult to the greatest contemporary Canadian, namely the Prime Minister of Canada.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Gibson: In reply to his poetry of sarcasm, I have only this to say:

> There once was a member from Skeena,
> Who bayed like a wounded hyena,
> The force of his words fell flat on the floor,
> And he left for a smaller arena.

An hon. Member: Such as Manitoba.

Mr. Gibson: I was saddened by the television antics of the hon. member for York South (Mr. Lewis) who, on a T.V. program, in discussing the conduct of the Prime Minister before a group of students at the centennial fountain, by means of the most reprehensible demagoguery, misled these young Canadians by implying that the Prime Minister is a dictator.

An hon. Member: Fascist.

Mr. Forrestall: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I wonder if the hon. member could identify for us the document from which he is reading.

Mr. Gibson: I am reading my speech from notes.

No party in Canadian history was ever permitted more freedom of speech, suggestion and action than the present Liberal party under the leadership of the Prime Minister and the cabinet. I submit that this house is the freest house in the world. The entire rules debate reveals how powerless the majority is when faced by obstruction and how necessary it is for Canada to return to majority rule. The Prime Minister has successfully contributed more in the process of uniting the people of this country from any threat of tyranny and fascism than any other Canadian. The proof is in his record when he actively helped to defeat the Duplessis machine in Quebec. His writings demonstrate his belief in federalism and the Canadian constitution. His actions prove the validity of his words. If opposition members would only realize that we are moving toward more freedom and not less freedom, then parliament would be a stronger place.

An hon. Member: Who wrote that?

Mr. Gibson: The charter of civil liberties and the bill of rights, as well as the language bill and all the other measures, coupled with our rules reform in the whole context are unfolding a new democracy for Canada that is freer than ever before in our history. We are all on this side of the house bound and determined to make parliament work more effectively in co-operation with the opposition parties. We on this side of the house have learned, participated and constructively strengthened parliament with existing reforms of committees and rule changes. We have also learned through the course of this debate that there are many very valuable members of the opposition who have contributed a great deal to this debate, and we have much to learn from many of them, including the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield).

Mr. Stanfield: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member mentioned me by name. I wonder if he would permit a gesture?

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): He is taking a bow.

Mr. Gibson: It is more than a coincidence that in the past few months parliament has successfully passed over 50 statutes, including the omnibus Criminal Code amendments and the languages bill. So progress is on the way, and we have demonstrated in this debate the necessity to complete reform of the rules, as we were given a mandate in 1968 to do.

An hon. Member: Go on to page three.

Mr. Gibson: The hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) has taken a very active part in this debate. If we adopt the suggestion of the hon. member to remove closure from rule 75c at the report stage, it would make a real mockery of the closure rule for it would permit unlimited debate at the report stage.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Would the hon. member permit a question?

Mr. Gibson: The hon. member knows that this would not work.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Since the hon. member has mentioned my name, would he permit a question?

Mr. Gibson: No, Mr. Speaker. To pretend otherwise is sheer hypocrisy, and that fact is well known to all of us in the house.

An hon. Member: The answer to the question is not in his notes.

Mr. Gibson: The entire structure of rules reform would collapse because, as hon. members well know, and particularly the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre, any number of amendments would be debated at the report stage and no reform would be passed. There would be no restraint on a filibuster which has been and would be conducted by frustrated opposition parties.

I condemn the shoddy tactics of the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre to invoke "work to rule" tactics in the House of Commons. Such a sloppy, unCanadian idea was resented by all good Canadians during the recent Air Canada strike, and it is resented now. We do not advocate such a course.

• (12:30 a.m.)

Mr. Lewis: Would the hon. member permit a question?

Mr. Gibson: We in the government party are sincerely dedicated to making parliament work well—

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, since the hon. member—

Mr. Turner (Ottawa-Carleton): Keep going.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. I hesitate to interrupt this interesting speech, but I cannot hear whether the hon. member for York South (Mr. Lewis) is rising on a point of order or to ask a question.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I was about to say that since the hon. member did not mention my name—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Lewis: —may I ask him a question?

Mr. Gibson: I might entertain it, if the hon. member could get it out.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Lewis: Yes, or no!

Mr. Gibson: It is only in exceptional circumstances, when the opposition prevents the majority from governing, that closure will ever be used. I am sure all members realize that the government believes this, and we believe it. If this does not happen, I pledge, as a backbencher and as a member of our caucus to see that it is changed.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Gibson: Modern living requires some order in our parliamentary lives. Our mandate in 1968 was to govern Canada, not to be shackled to outmoded procedural barriers in the way of reform. Let us proceed to participatory democracy.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Stanfield: In view of the assurance given by the hon. member that he is going to straighten everything out, I wonder whether the house would agree to our adjourning until three o'clock so that we could reconsider our position?

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

[Translation]

Hon. Martial Asselin (Charlevoix): Mr. Speaker, first of all, I should like to congratulate the hon. member for Hamilton Wentworth (Mr. Gibson) who, at such a late hour, with a well prepared speech, has cheered up the house. But, in refusing to answer questions, he certainly did not give the example of participatory democracy as his leader wants it.

In any event, I can forecast a promotion for him for singing the praises of his leader as well as those of the cabinet members. I am convinced the hon. member will be promoted in a very short time.

Anyway, Mr. Speaker, if the hon. member believes in Standing Order 75c, I say to him, this may be the last speech he will deliver in the house because it applies to the backbenchers as well as to the members of the opposition.

Mr. Speaker, since the beginning of this session, the Prime Minister, (Mr. Trudeau) the ministers, and the government members have used the news media to publicize their views. They have stated that in the house of commons nothing was being done, time was being wasted and that, obviously, drastic measures were required to remedy the situation.

The Prime Minister told us tonight, that his government had received a mandate to move this motion of closure known as rule 75c. Had he told the people of Canada that he would introduce rule 75c to muzzle the opposition and to bring it to heel, his government would not be in power today.

Yet, Mr. Speaker, as a young university student, I was deeply interested by the present Prime Minister's statements and writings. I told myself he was a true defender of freedom and democracy. I was also interested in the fight he carried on to try and protect the asbestos workers' freedom. I considered him a supporter of democracy. I used to read his articles published in Cité libre, where he defined what he meant by "an efficient opposition in a democratic government" and criticized the Union Nationale government, and sometimes he was right. When he became Minister of Justice, I hoped that at last someone in the House of Commons would respect and enforce the principles of true democracy.

But unfortunately, Mr. Speaker, since he has said those famous words while Minister of Justice, during the debate of February 1968, when he told the house that the government was master there, the Prime Minister started to disappoint me and I thought that he was not sincere when he referred to real democratic principles.

Mr. Speaker, introduction of standing order 75c means that the Prime Minister wants to put into effect what he said in the House of Commons in February 1968, that the government is master of the House of Commons. All those who took part in the debate, at least the opposition members, have strongly reaffirmed the equality of all hon. members, of their rights and privileges, and it is not the Prime Minister of Canada who is going to change these privileges even with his closure rule standing order 75c.

Mr. Speaker, by using its majority to impose standing order 75c which is in fact, as I said earlier, a permanent measure of closure, the government has shown through such inflexibility that there was no place anymore for the opposition in parliament.

This measure which represents the basic philosophy of totalitarian governments will lead us inevitably to the establishment in this house of a one party system in which the members of the opposition, stifled by the government majority, will not be able to make people hear the complaints and the claims of those who elected them democratically and, as many speakers said today: There is nothing, in he present circumstances, to justify the introduction by the government of rule 75c because in the course of this session—and I think I can say it—no government ever received such sincere and frank co-operation from the official opposition and from the other opposition parties as did the present government.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Asselin: The Prime Minister and other members of the government accuse us, through the radio, television, and public statements, of holding up government bills, because repeatedly in the last session, the government was not ready to bring bills before the house, although we were ready to study them, criticize them and approve them. That is the role of the opposition, Mr. Speaker.

Besides, we of the opposition know, as I said a while ago, that the Prime Minister of Canada, when he wrote articles for Cité Libre, studied the concept of opposition in politics. In the May 1960 issue, No. 27 of Cité Libre, the Prime Minister spoke of the opposition but not quite in the same way as he did tonight.

He said and I quote:

> In a parliamentary democracy, the opponent is the one who professes to believe that the party in power should not be there; not necessarily because everything the party does is wrong but because another party could often do better. Consequently, whether he sits in parliament or is otherwise active in politics, the opponent must systematically and mercilessly criticize the errors of the government, and use all true arguments and legal means to bring the people to eventually bring another party to power.

That is the definition the Prime Minister gave of the opposition when he wrote in Cité Libre. However, when he introduced 75c, he forget his great democratic principles; he is trying, as I said a while ago, to muzzle the opposition, to destroy it.

Of course, Mr. Speaker, we dwelt at length on important measures, such as the amendment to the Criminal Code, the officiel languages bill, but the members of the opposition have not abused their privileges.

• (12:40 a.m.)

Indeed, rule 75c is going to change drastically the structure of parliament, or the rules. From now on, the executive will no longer be at the service of parliament, but parliament will be at the service of the executive. Such will be the natural outcome of the government's tendency to establish forcibly—as I said before—the one-party rule, that of the majority which will not only rule also impose its will in the drafting of important legislation, which will have serious consequences for every Canadian.

This one-party system that rule 75c aims at establishing, exists in developing countries, in young African countries, for instance. In order to step up their development, those countries have adopted the one-party system, thus wiping out opposition.

Well, under rule 75c, the Prime Minister and the government are indirectly trying to impose on us the one-party system. Mr. Speaker, in a democratic parliament, there is place for an opposition. In a free and democratic country, it has an important part to play.

History has proved repeatedly that freedom dies where criticism is stifled. Opposition maintains a proper balance between freedom and democracy. As a matter of fact, it was Lord Acton who wrote, and I quote:

> Power tends to corrupt and absolute power corrupts absolutely. Men and governments alike fall a prey to the temptation brought by power.
>
> The word "democracy" ensures no protection against tyranny. Without supervision and control, the better disposed people become autocrats.

The favour British parliamentarian Quentin Hogg said, and I quote:

> Without an organized opposition, countries cannot be entirely free.

Between the absence of an organized opposition and complete dictatorship, there is not very far to go, Mr. Speaker.

> Without an opposition to watch, to scrutinize, to sound the alarm, a government could oppress the people without limit. The opposition is an assurance that the government governs fairly, taking into account individual rights and liberties.

Mr. Speaker, the opposition's role, I repeat, is to scrutinize, to ask questions, to consider, to make suggestions and amendments, so as to obtain in every possible way the necessary information, for the education and guidance of public opinion, in order that electors might make a sensible choice.

The government sometimes begrudges the opposition the time they take to pass legislation. We know—and the government also knows—that weeks and days can go by before the public becomes aware of a measure.

We have found that the government, following an intelligent argument put forward by the opposition and representations on the part of the public, often changed a legislation because they realized that such a measure was not in the public interest.

[Mr. Asselin.]

Parliament, Mr. Speaker, is a place where in the heat of debate, freedom is preserved, arguments are put forward and considered and decisions are made. An opposition, which properly fulfills its responsibilities, becomes, for the purpose of sound critic, the public's instrument.

I compare section 75c to compulsory arbitration and I know that the minister of Regional Economic Expansion (Mr. Marchand), who is not here tonight, has always fought against the imposition of compulsory arbitration on unions by the provincial government. Maybe he was right. At that time, the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion stood up, as a union leader, for the collective freedom of workers.

I wonder today why he approves that legislation that smacks of compulsory arbitration, in my opinion, because according to standing orders 75A and 75B, if the house leaders agree, the debates might be restricted. However, rule 75c states that the government, on its own initiative, through a minister, will arbitrarily decide to apply standing orders without consulting the other house leaders. This compulsory arbitration goes still much farther than the one existing in labour circles, because there an unbiased arbitrator is selected, while under 75c, the government house leader will be arbitrator and party at the same time.

I maintain that under those circumstances standing order 75c, being close to compulsory arbitration, is not only unacceptable to parliament, but also to all Canadian democratic organizations.

The opposition is not alone in its fight against rule 75c. Almost all Canadian newspapers opposed it.

Tonight, the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce (Mr. Allmand) quoted the Montreal Star as a newspaper supporting the government for introducing rule 75c. I would advise the hon. member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce to be very careful because it was the only newspaper, in 1956, to support the government for imposing closure during the pipe-line debate. We remember that the government was defeated then Mr. Speaker. Therefore, if the member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce has the backing of no other newspaper than the Montreal Star, I can tell him that he is due for some surprises at the next election, if history repeats itself, as it often does.

• (12:50 a.m.)

Mr. Speaker, several newspapers have supported our stand in this connection. I have here an article published in Le Devoir of July 15, 1969, where it is said:

> Therefore, the government did not have any serious grounds for complaining about filibustering tactics by opposition parties. They were actually resorted to on one occasion only, in the debate on the omnibus bill, the passage of which was unduly delayed by the Créditiste group. But that case alone did not justify the introduction of such a rule as 75c.
>
> The government should have made better use of the friendly atmosphere that prevailed to extend further the co-operation between the free men who make up parliament. Instead, they preferred to put forward a rule which would amount to converting parliament into a college. Such an attitude, unacceptable in principle, actually points to an unfortunate lack of understanding of the human element without which the finest technocratic plans are doomed to failure.

I could also read certain articles published in La Presse and Montréal Matin that matter. After having called on the good will and good faith of the government house leader and of the government members, concerning the possibility of negotiating on rule 75c, it seems strange that those people should think that all the members of the opposition are wrong and that the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald) alone possesses the truth. Apart from that, in this house all the members of the opposition were absolutely wrong when they opposed rule 75c.

Mr. Speaker, in a few minutes we will be casting the fateful vote which I think will toll the bell for parliamentary freedom. That does not mean, that we of the opposition should give up fighting here tonight. We will continue in the months ahead to fight against rule 75c, even if it is adopted tonight, so that the government cannot apply it abusively. Otherwise, a dictatorial system will be established in the house, which is unacceptable to the opposition, and which will be rejected, I am sure, at the proper time by the majority of sensible Canadians.

Mr. Speaker, I therefore say that the opposition will keep on watching—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I regret to have to interrupt the hon. member, but his time seems to have expired. Unless he has the consent of the house, the hon. member will not be able to finish his speech. Is it agreed?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Asselin: I therefore say, Mr. Speaker, that the leader of my party (Mr. Stanfield) has put up a brave, courageous and gallant fight against the way the government has presented and wishes to implement rule 75c.

I wonder if the Prime Minister was sincere when he stated this afternoon that it will perhaps be possible to revise rule 75c.

I am still willing to give the Prime Minister credit for the good faith he deserves. However, I would have preferred that the Prime Minister and the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald), before introducing a rule as serious and significant as rule 75c, had consulted the leaders of the minor parties and the Leader of the Official Opposition, and tried to come to a compromise in an effort to correct this rule. Here we have the Prime Minister putting us before a fait accompli. Rule 75c will be passed and will become part of the Standing Orders of this house. But we may be able to correct it later if we find that it is too rigid.

Beforehand, Mr. Speaker, I say to the Prime Minister that rule 75c will perhaps be useful to the government, but at the same time it will destroy the freedom of speech that has existed for a century in this house.

Mr. Speaker, in spite of rule 75c, we will carry on the fight because we feel that ours is a just cause, that the majority of Canadians support it and that in due course will be able to see that the government was mistaken in putting into effect rule 75c.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

[English]

Mr. John Roberts (York-Simcoe): Mr. Speaker, it is not often I speak in the house. I was reluctant to inject myself into this debate. I thought as one of the new members that perhaps I should leave it to some of the more experienced members. However the fact was brought home dramatically two days ago yesterday and today, that experience is a far cry from wisdom.

I was astonished to hear what some hon. members, such as the hon. member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mrs. MacInnis), had to say. I thought it was uncharacteristic of her and the hon. member for Perth (Mr. Monteith) to taunt the new members of this house by saying they did not have sufficient experience to judge this question.

Mr. Monteith: You don't.

Mr. Roberts: They tried to discredit these new members because of a lack of experience. We are all equal in this house. We do not speak by virtue of the fact that we have five, ten or 20 years' experience. We speak by virtue of the fact we have been sent here by our constituents to represent them.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Roberts: I do not deny those with experience and who know this house have a legitimate point of view to present, but those who have just come to this house have a fresh point of view. They also have something of interest and value to say because they do not look at this house with the coloured and distorted spectacles that some members who have been here many years sometimes inherit.

Some of the experienced members, especially on the opposition side, spoke of their love for this place and their love of democracy. I wish to assure these members that new members on both sides also love this house and democracy. Over the past few days we have been called Nazis and fascists by the opposition. This impasse has been described as good guys versus the bad guys. It has been described as stopping evil men. That is not the issue, Mr. Speaker.

I do not charge the members of the opposition with insincerity, nor should they charge us with wicked intentions. Both sides of this house are motivated by a sincere concern for parliament. Members of the opposition have no monopoly on these qualities. Before us are the differences of honest men with divergent views concerning a basic problem in parliamentary organization.

This is not a new problem, although it takes a new form today. It is a concern for that tension which has always existed in parliament, that tension between the right of the government and the public, to have legislation passed in this house; and the right of the opposition, and the public, to scrutinize that legislation.

I think it was the leader of the New Democratic Party who quoted the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) as if the Prime Minister were on his side of the debate. The Prime Minister was dealing with exactly that balance I am describing, the balance between the right to govern and legislate and the balance on the other side to criticize.

• (1:00 a.m.)

The history of parliament, at least over the past century, has been a history of a steady increase of government control in the House of Commons. Why? Not because of imperialistic government but because parliament does not exist in a vacuum. The rules of parliament correspond to social needs. We cannot freeze our procedures so that they become irrelevant. We cannot look simply to the legacy of the past. We must look at the function of parliament in the context of the society in which it operates. The hon. member for Hillsborough (Mr. Macquarrie), in a speech which I thought was one of the best and one of the most learned speeches in this house, referred to Burke. I do not quote Burke often because he is not one of my favourite philosophers, but what Burke emphasized above all else was that political institutions, and society itself, were growing organisms which were developing through time, that they were moulded by time and that they must meet the changing interests of the society in which they exist. That is true in this parliament as well. The old rules of the past simply are not sufficient for the new era. That is the mistake which I think the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre has made in this debate.

The hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre focussed completely on what has happened in the past, a point of view governed by his rear view mirror. I have been enormously interested, amused and delighted by the whole pageantry of characters that the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre has presented in this debate. There was first St. Stanley of St. Stanley and the Dragon riding to the rescue of a beseiged democracy plaintively crying for help. But, of course, the outrage and distress in democracy was more in his mind than anywhere else. Members of the opposition have spoken of the outraged public but I did not need to fight my way through outraged mobs of citizenry to get into the house today. The newspapers have been split on the issue; some have been for and some against. Some of the columnists have been for and some have been against. I have received two letters on the issue and two telephone calls, one for, one against.

After the image of St. Stanley we had the member for Winnipeg North Centre as Horatio at the bridge valiantly battling back the forces of tyranny. That was replaced by his kind of King Canute-like stance bidding the waves to recede. After that we drop to perhaps a little less attractive image. It was the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre as a little boy with the marble game—"If you don't play by my rules I will break it up". What did he say? He said there would be confrontation, there would be no more participatory democracy, there would be no more co-operation. That seems to me, Mr. Speaker, to be one of the most remarkable things a member of the opposition could say. I could understand him saying, "Look, when you bring in bad legislation we will oppose it vigorously" but when he says they are going to oppose to the death all legislation, are going to oppose everything whether it is good for the public or not and are going to punish the public of Canada for what he considers to be the sins of the government, that seems to me to be going too far.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, on a point of order; I do not mind the pleasure the hon. member is having with these characterizations he is making of me, but I ask him not to say things which I did not say. I gave no indication that we would oppose good legislation.

Mr. Roberts: Well, Mr. Speaker, I did not want to put words into the mouth of the member. What he said was there will be confrontation, there will be frustration, there will be work to rule and there will be no participatory democracy. If he says he is not going to do it, who does he expect to do it? Does he expect the government is going to do it? Where is the obstruction and confrontation going to come from? Well, that takes me to the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre in his last role. I hope he will not mind a slightly light comment. In the end he really came to remind me of that lovable old codger who used to inhabit Allen's Alley on the Fred Allen show, Digby O'Dell, the friendly undertaker—

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Roberts: —because what he keeps emphasizing is the desire to preserve the traditions of parliament. What Digby O'Dell arrived at was embalming.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. Leader of the Opposition is rising for the purpose of asking a question, if the member will allow a question.

Mr. Roberts: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I will allow a question.

Mr. Stanfield: Mr. Speaker, since the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre has been referred to as an undertaker I wonder who the hon. member considers is buried.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Roberts: Well, Mr. Speaker, there has been a great deal of talk on the part of the opposition on the right to scrutiny and the right to debate. I suggest in all sincerity—and I am speaking more I think of the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre than the official opposition—what they are really concerned with is not the right to scrutinize and not the right to debate; they are concerned with the right to obstruct and the right to blockade.

They have discovered that procedure can be used—as it was used by the Irish members in the mid 19th century in Great Britain—to blockade the government. If that had not been so, if they were concerned simply with debate and a full discussion of the issues, why did the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre not accept the suggestion of the government house leader for unlimited debate and discussion in the committees? That would have given time for a full discussion of the issue and would have given time to arouse the press and the public. I suggest the reason he did not want the debate in committee and wanted unlimited debate in the house instead was because he knew that unlimited debate in the house would block not simply one piece of legislation but the whole government program. That is what he wanted—to blockade the house. He does not want simply to blockade one piece of legislation. He does not want simply to debate it to arouse the country. He wants a pistol at the head of the government. He wants a weapon to use as an exercise in political blackmail, a quid pro quo for the government bending to the opposition.

Our task, Mr. Speaker, I think is not simply to discuss and debate in parliament. Our task is to make parliament pertinent to the needs of the nation. When listening to members of the opposition I was reminded of a statement made only two years ago by a Conservative member in this house—

An hon. Member: You were not here then.

Mr. Roberts: That is right; I was not here then, Mr. Speaker. I had the pleasure of listening to the debates of the house from the balcony. I remember very well the hon. member, Mr. Heward Grafftey, rising in this house and saying during the debate—and it was a statement which was acclaimed spontaneously from the galleries of the house—that everybody who sits here knows that this establishment, particularly for the young generation, is becoming meaningless. He continued and said that the people of Canada were becoming sick and tired of seeing parliament fritter away its time.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Roberts: I say that is still true. I say the people of Canada are sick and tired of parliamentary tricks and treats as played by so many members of the opposition. The basic question is how much time for debate is reasonable and who should decide this. I admit freely to the house, and I said so at the time, that the provision called 16A presented by the government last December was not a provision I could support. I would not because I did not think the balance it presented was fair. I am convinced, however, that the present allocation is a fair one which corresponds to our age of telecommunications. It may be that one day in the past, in the horse and buggy days, it required weeks and months of debate so that members could go back to their constituents and bring home to them the matters of concern. That is not true in an age when you can send in seconds a signal to the moon. It is not true when we have, as we do now, television, radio and newspapers nation-wide and responsive in bringing home to the public issues of public concern. Ten days delay and four days debate are sufficient in communicating to the public if the issue is one of genuine, serious and important concern.

Some of the best debates—those on urgent matters—are short. They take only one day. But they capture more press and public attention than long winded efforts.

I suggest that the people of Canada do not want simply a debate; they do not want repetitious, time wasting, sterile, fractious, carping. They want action. What the opposition wants is the ability to close off action and to obtain indirectly the power which the voters denied them directly. They want to be able to talk forever—to talk legislation to death. I have some news, for members of the opposition. There are many people in this country who are not as fond of hearing members of this house as some of the members are of hearing themselves.

• (1:10 a.m.)

The public want a House of Commons which will wallow less and do more. They do not want a web of words, a cocoon of parliamentary technicalities from which no butterflies of legislation fly.

In closing, perhaps it would be appropriate for me to mention the Leader of the Opposition who has been rising periodically in this house with a voice of doom, stretching out his wavering hand and saying, "In all honesty can you as a member of this house support this measure?" I will save the Leader of the Opposition that dramatic gesture. Let me say to the Leader of the Opposition that the best is sometimes the enemy of the good. Nothing under God's sun is perfect. But this is a good proposal and I support it unreservedly.

An hon. Member: Oh, sit down.

Mr. Roberts: I will sit down shortly, but I have one more comment which I think hon. members might find interesting and useful. It relates to the Leader of the Opposition. He and those people behind him have been charging the Prime Minister with arrogance and a disrespect for members of parliament, no responsibility or respect for backbenchers, no respect for traditions and no respect for the rights of this house. They have charged him with having no respect for democracy with being a computerized technocrat and so on.

There is another hon. gentleman of this house who was once the leader of a government. What was his reaction when crossed during debate? I refer to the Leader of the Opposition who was crossed in a debate once in the Nova Scotia legislature. What he said was I am giving serious consideration to the idea of introducing a bill that would remove that hon. member's legislative immunity retroactively.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Roberts: That was his instinctive reaction. That is what he did say; and if that is what his instinct was as the leader of a government I suggest it is better that he and members of the opposition do not trot out charges of arrogance against our Prime Minister. It lacks credibility.

Mr. Stanfield: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege. The incident to which my hon. friend refers involved a matter of possible slander against someone outside the house. This was a case of the abuse of the privileges of the house by an hon. member. The circumstances were totally different.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Stanfield: I do not wish to prolong things at this hour, but I simply say this was a case of—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Stanfield: This was simply a case of bringing the attention of the legislative assembly in Nova Scotia to an abuse of the house rules and privileges, the same sort of thing I have been accusing the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) of here.

Mr. Speaker: It being one o'clock, pursuant to Standing Order 33 and in accordance with an order made this day and the provisions thereof, it is my duty to interrupt the proceedings and put all questions which may be necessary to dispose of the amendment and the motion now before the house.

The house divided on the amendment (Mr. Baldwin) which was negatived on the following division:

Division

YEAS

Messrs.

Aiken
Alexander
Alkenbrack
Asselin
Baldwin
Barnett
Beaudoin
Bell
Benjamin
Bigg
Brewin
Broadbent
Burton
Cadieu (Meadow Lake)
Caouette
Carter
Coates
Code
Comeau
Crouse
Danforth
Dinsdale
Dionne
Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands)
Downey
Fairweather
Flemming
Forrestall
Fortin
Gauthier
Gilbert
Gleave
Grills
Gundlock
Hales
Harding
Harkness
Hees
Horner
Howard (Skeena)
Howe
Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre)
Korchinski
Lambert (Edmonton West)
Laprise
Lewis
MacEwan
MacInnis
MacInnis (Mrs.)
MacLean
Macquarrie
McGrath
McKinley
Marshall
Mazankowski
Monteith
Moores
Muir (Cape Breton-The Sydneys)
Muir (Lisgar)
Noble
Nowlan
Nystrom
Peddle
Peters
Ricard
Ritchie
Rodrigue
Rose
Rynard
Saltsman
Schumacher
Scott
Simpson
Skoberg
Stanfield
Stewart (Marquette)
Tétrault
Thomas (Moncton)
Thompson
Valade
Winch
Woolliams
Yewchuk—83.

NAYS

Messrs.

Allmand
Anderson
Andras
Barrett
Basford
Béchard
Beer
Benson
Blair
Blouin
Borrie
Boulanger
Breau
Brown
Buchanan
Caccia
Cadieux (Labelle)
Cafik
Cantin
Chappell
Chrétien
Clermont
Cobbe
Comtois
Corbin
Côté (Richelieu)
Côté (Longueuil)
Cullen
Cyr
Danson
Davis
Deachman
Deakon
De Bané
Douglas (Assiniboia)
Drury
Dubé
Éthier
Forest
Forget
Foster
Francis
Gendron
Gervais
Gibson
Givens
Goode
Goyer
Gray
Greene
Groos
Guay (St. Boniface)
Guay (Lévis)
Guilbault
Haidasz
Hogarth
Honey
Hopkins
Howard (Okanagan Boundary)
Hymmen
Isabelle
Jamieson
Jerome
Kaplan
Kierans
Lachance
Laflamme
Laing
Lang
Langlois
Laniel
Leblanc (Laurier)
LeBlanc (Rimouski)
Lefebvre
Legault
Lessard (LaSalle)
Lessard (Lac-Saint-Jean)
Lind
Loiselle
Macdonald (Rosedale)
MacEachen
MacGuigan
Mackasey
McBride
McIlraith
McNulty
Mahoney
Major
Marceau
Marchand (Langelier)
Marchand (Kamloops-Cariboo)
Mongrain
Morison
Munro
Murphy
Noël
O'Connell
Olson
Orange
Osler
Otto
Ouellet
Pelletier
Penner
Pepin
Perrault
Pilon
Portelance
Pringle
Prud'homme
Reid
Richardson
Roberts
Robinson
Rochon
Rock

Division

Roy (Timmins)
Roy (Laval)
Sharp
Smith (Northumberland-Miramichi)
Smith (Saint-Jean)
Stafford
Stanbury
Stewart (Cochrane)
Stewart (Okanagan-Kootenay)
St. Pierre
Sulatycky
Sullivan
Thomas (Maisonneuve)
Tolmie
Trudeau
Trudel
Turner (London East)
Turner (Ottawa-Carleton)
Wahn
Walker
Watson
Weatherhead
Whelan
Whiting
Yanakis—141.

• (1:40 a.m.)

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I declare the amendment lost. I also bring it to the notice of hon. members that they should not come into the house or leave the house before the vote is completed. This would be the time to come in.

The question is now on the main motion. Is it the wish of hon. members that we put the division of the house without the call of the bells?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The house divided on the motion (Mr. Blair) which was agreed to on the following division:

YEAS

Messrs.

Allmand
Anderson
Andras
Barrett
Basford
Béchard
Beer
Benson
Blair
Blouin
Borrie
Boulanger
Breau
Brown
Buchanan
Caccia
Cadieux (Labelle)
Cafik
Cantin
Chappell
Chrétien
Clermont
Cobbe
Comtois
Corbin
Côté (Richelieu)
Côté (Longueuil)
Cullen
Cyr
Danson
Davis
Deachman
Deakon
De Bané
Douglas (Assiniboia)
Drury
Dubé
Éthier
Forest
Forget
Foster
Francis
Gendron
Gervais
Gibson
Givens
Goode
Goyer
Gray
Greene
Groos
Guay (St. Boniface)
Guay (Lévis)
Guilbault
Haidasz
Hogarth
Honey
Hopkins
Howard (Okanagan Boundary)
Hymmen
Isabelle
Jamieson
Jerome
Kaplan
Kierans
Lachance
Laflamme
Laing
Lang
Langlois
Laniel
Leblanc (Laurier)
LeBlanc (Rimouski)
Lefebvre
Legault
Lessard (LaSalle)
Lessard (Lac-Saint-Jean)
Lind
Loiselle
Macdonald (Rosedale)
MacEachen
MacGuigan
Mackasey
McBride
McIlraith
McNulty
Mahoney
Major
Marceau
Marchand (Langelier)
Marchand (Kamloops-Cariboo)
Mongrain
Morison
Munro
Murphy
Noël
O'Connell
Olson
Orange
Osler
Otto
Ouellet
Pelletier
Penner
Pepin
Perrault
Pilon
Portelance
Pringle
Prud'homme
Reid
Richardson
Roberts
Robinson
Rochon
Rock
Roy (Timmins)
Roy (Laval)
Serré
Sharp
Smith (Northumberland-Miramichi)
Smith (Saint-Jean)
Stafford
Stanbury
Stewart (Cochrane)
Stewart (Okanagan-Kootenay)
St. Pierre
Sulatycky
Sullivan
Thomas (Maisonneuve)
Tolmie
Trudeau
Trudel
Turner (London East)
Turner (Ottawa-Carleton)
Wahn
Walker
Watson
Weatherhead
Whelan
Whiting
Yanakis—142.

NAYS

Messrs.

Aiken
Alexander
Alkenbrack
Asselin
Baldwin
Barnett
Beaudoin
Bell
Benjamin
Bigg
Brewin
Broadbent
Burton
Cadieu (Meadow Lake)
Caouette
Carter
Coates
Code
Comeau
Crouse
Danforth
Dinsdale
Dionne
Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands)
Downey
Fairweather
Flemming
Forrestall
Fortin
Gauthier
Gilbert
Gleave
Grills
Gundlock
Hales
Harding
Harkness
Hees
Horner
Howard (Skeena)
Howe
Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre)
Korchinski
Lambert (Edmonton West)
Laprise
Lewis
MacEwan
MacInnis
MacInnis, Mrs.
MacLean
Macquarrie
McCleave
McGrath
McKinley

Division

Marshall	Ritchie	Thompson	Woolliams
Mazankowski	Rodrigue	Valade	Yewchuk—84.
Monteith	Rose	Winch
Moores	Rynard
Muir (Cape Breton-	Saltsman
The Sydneys)	Schumacher
Muir (Lisgar)	Scott
Noble	Simpson
Nowlan	Skoberg
Nystrom	Stanfield
Peddle	Stewart (Marquette)
Peters	Tétrault
Ricard	Thomas (Moncton)

• (1:50 a.m.)

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion carried. It being after ten o'clock this house stands adjourned until eleven o'clock this morning.

It being ten minutes to two, Friday, July 25, the house adjourned, without question put.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Friday, July 25, 1969

The house met at 11 a.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

COMMISSIONERS OF INTERNAL ECONOMY—EXTRACT FROM MINUTES CONCERNING MEMBERS' EXPENSES

Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to lay before the House an extract from the minutes of a meeting of the Commissioners of Internal Economy, concerning certain additional expenses payable to members.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

TAX REFORM

HOUSE MEMBERSHIP ON SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the house will recall that a few days ago we constituted a special joint parliamentary committee on tax reform but at that time did not name the personnel. I have a formal order here which, if the house is agreeable, perhaps might be made in order to constitute the membership of the committee so that it can meet during the recess. I therefore move:

That the Members of the House of Commons on the Special Joint Parliamentary Committee on Tax Reform to consider the Government's proposals for tax reform be Messrs. Blair, Burton, Clermont, Comtois, Danson, Gillespie, Gray, Kaplan, Latulippe, Leblanc (Laurier), Noël, Roberts, Saltsman, Trudel, Danforth, Ritchie, Downey, Flemming, Harkness and Lambert (Edmonton West); and

That a Message be sent to the Senate to acquaint Their Honours thereof.

Mr. Winch: Mr. Speaker, how does the House of Commons send a message to the other place when it has adjourned until October 14?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member will have to consult the Postmaster General.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): It will never get there by October 14.

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the house to adopt the said motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

COMMISSIONERS OF INTERNAL ECONOMY—EXTRACT FROM MINUTES CONCERNING MEMBERS' EXPENSES—MOTION FOR CONCURRENCE

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, Your Honour just referred to the decision of the Commissioners of Internal Economy concerning certain additional expenses payable to Members of Parliament. If the house is agreeable I should like to move, seconded by Mr. Olson, that the said extract from the minutes of a meeting of the Commissioners of Internal Economy laid before the House today by Mr. Speaker, concerning certain additional expenses payable to members, be concurred in.

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the house to adopt the said motion?

Mr. John Burton (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, as one of the members affected by this matter I cannot give my consent to leave to discuss this motion at this time. My refusal does not concern the substance of the motion but rather the granting of leave. In view of the discussion in respect of the rules over the past several weeks and in view of the fact that the government wants to operate on the basis of the rules, I feel we should operate on that basis.

Mr. Speaker: Since there is not agreement for the motion to be put, the motion will not be put.

MOTION FOR ADJOURNMENT TO OCTOBER 22, 1969

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council) moved:

That when the House adjourns for its summer recess it shall stand adjourned until October 22, 1969, provided always that if it appears to the satisfaction of Mr. Speaker, after consultation with Her Majesty's Government, that the public interest requires that the House should meet at an earlier time during the adjournment, Mr. Speaker may give notice that he is so satisfied, and thereupon the House shall meet at the time stated in such notice, and shall transact its business as if it had been duly adjourned to that time; and

That, in the event of Mr. Speaker being unable to act owing to illness or other cause, the Deputy Speaker or the Deputy Chairman of Committees shall act in his stead for the purpose of reconvening the House.

Motion to Adjourn House

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the house to adopt the said motion?

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I am not prepared to support the motion. I propose to move that the motion be amended by deleting the words "October 22" where they appear in the second line and substituting therefore the words "September 22".

• (11:10 a.m.)

I rise to present this amendment, Sir, on behalf of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition. The effect of the amendment is clear: We should resume parliament not on October 22 but a month earlier on September 22. In view of the accumulation of serious problems facing this country it is immature and irresponsible for the government to send parliament off on a three-month vacation. I think the people of this country will be scandalized at the casual and apparently carefree attitude adopted by the government toward the problems of the country and its responsibilities to find solutions to those problems.

I do not deny for a moment that Members of Parliament are as entitled to a holiday as anybody else, and it must be clear that a good many members of parliament are rather tired today. Furthermore, we all have important work to do in our constituencies and elsewhere. However, there is no reason in the world that parliament should shut down until October 22. The people of Canada will regard a three-month holiday as rather too much of a good thing and as representing a very blasé attitude toward our responsibilities.

I want to make it very clear where the responsibility for this proposed action rests. The government, and the government alone, is insisting on a prolonged adjournment and we on this side, at least those in this party, disassociate ourselves completely from this casual irresponsibility of the government. They are like kids who want to play truant from their responsibilities.

There is no reason—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Stanfield: I would suggest, Sir—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Stanfield: I would suggest that my hon. friends save their breath and their voices because if they are disturbed by what I have said so far they may need their lungs more for what I am going to say later.

[Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale).]

There is no reason for the government to keep parliament shut down for almost three months, except the complete disdain of the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) and the cabinet for this institution. They do not like questions, they do not like free debate, and they find parliament a nuisance and an inconvenience. They cannot quite do away with the institution altogether but they impose rules which will give them complete control over it, and they will keep it adjourned just as long as they can.

In view of the kind of parliament envisaged by this government and its supporters in the house, a parliament which meets relatively briefly to endorse the decrees of Caesar after very cursory discussion, it is clear that the attitude of the government and its supporters toward the institutions of government in this country, the attitude of the federal Liberal party, particularly those in this government, differs very little from the views expressed by General de Gaulle—a great soldier, a great patriot, a great man, but hardly a democrat as we understand democracy in this country. It is not for me to suggest what kind of government or government institutions are suitable for France.

Mr. Trudeau: Why are you talking about France?

Mr. Stanfield: As I say, Mr. Speaker, it is not for me to say what is suitable for France. But it is coming through loud and clear all the time that this government envisages periodic elections and government in the meantime by press conference and pre-sessions of parliament. It is true we do not have a president, but a rose smells just as sweet by any other name—or a carnation, as far as that is concerned.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear!

An hon. Member: So does an egg plant.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Stanfield: Now we are told that parliament is to meet toward the end of October.

Mr. Hogarth: What year?

An hon. Member: That was a great contribution, Hogarth.

Mr. Stanfield: I do not know. It might be put off for another year. In view of the problems that face the country, there is no adequate excuse for this action. The government says it needs this time to get its legislative program ready for the next session. This is one of the most incredible explanations that could possibly be put forward at this point in time. The government was elected in June of 1968. This session of parliament began on September 12. It was stated in the Speech from the Throne, and it has been repeated numerous times by members of the cabinet and by the propagandists of the Liberal party, that the present session of parliament should be regarded as merely a "clean-up session", that the government, in its orderly and efficient way, wanted to tidy up all the legislative items that were hanging over from the Pearson administration. This session of parliament was chiefly to clear the decks for the new exciting legislation that would usher in the just society.

After spending a whole session of parliament dealing with legislative left-overs from the Pearson government, are the members of this cabinet seriously trying to pretend that they do not have a program ready for the next session of parliament?

Mr. Woolliams: They do not have a program.

Mr. Stanfield: That explanation, Mr. Speaker, is just not believable, unless the government is more inept and dishonest with the people than we feared. It should be mentioned in passing that there were items, some of them very important, in the Speech from the Throne which the government has not yet brought forward in legislative form.

An hon. Member: Due to filibuster.

Mr. Stanfield: I am not impressed by that interjection, Mr. Speaker. We hear all this talk about filibuster, and now the government is asking the house to recess for three months and to meet on October 22.

Mr. Crouse: What a joke!

Mr. Stanfield: It is comforting to have a government supporter show how hollow all this talk has been. What has happened to the educational television bill? What has become of that hardy, old perennial, the Canada Development Corporation? The government removed from the order paper the item having to do with the Indian Claims Commission, thus welshing once more on the understanding given to the Indian people. They have now decided to appoint a commissioner who, in effect, will decide whether there should be a claims commission and, if so, what claims will be considered worthy of being heard by it.

• (11:20 a.m.)

What has become of this magnificently efficient cabinet structure, organized so finely that decisions roll out just as though they came from a computer? What has happened to it, Mr. Speaker? I suppose someone will tell us that committees are meeting in September and that it is a good idea to have the committees free to meet when parliament is adjourned. That is not the same reason that has been given to us so far in any explanation as to why the house is not meeting earlier. We have been told that the government needs time between sessions to get its program ready. This is very difficult to believe of this highly structured, highly organized, computer-like administration.

We have been told in the course of recent days that the government has urgent and important business to bring before the house when the session resumes. Some of it is even said to be highly controversial. This, we were told, was why they needed the weapon of rule 75c. Let us come back here in September and let us see that important legislation.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Stanfield: If the government is going to chop off debate when we start to consider legislation, I suggest it is going to be pretty hard to add to this more subtle form of closure by keeping parliament adjourned for long periods. I know how unappealing the idea is to the finer sensibilities of the hon. gentlemen on the treasury benches, but is it not time that the parliament of Canada began to deal with specific solutions to the disgraceful situation in this country regarding poverty? The entire field of anti-poverty measures has been left completely untouched by this government. I suppose they do not want to get their hands dirty.

We were told there has been a review of the whole social welfare system in Canada. Where is it and what is it? When will we see it? What new solutions does the government have to propose? These are questions that directly relate to the thousands of people who are hopelessly trapped by poverty.

While this government relaxes during the month of September, many young people will be prevented from returning to school. Many will not be able to take advantage of educational training programs because they have not been able to get work and will not be in a financial position to do so. For every day that this government delays the introduction of effective anti-poverty measures, thousands of Canadians sink deeper and deeper into poverty.

An hon. Member: Who is the author?

Mr. Stanfield: We were told that the water act is supposed to be ready in the course of the summer. Why cannot we start work on that? What about the government's own public service pensioners? Are they going to continue to be put off while parliament is in recess? What about the veterans of our armed services? These people and others must be near the top of the priority scheme of the government, if there is one. The people of Canada can only assume that the just society is just a cynical piece of hypocrisy.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Stanfield: Are we to stay out until October 22 and leave the country's anti-inflationary program to the tender mercies of this government? Then there is supposed to be legislation relating to corporate disclosure. Why can we not deal with that?

There is no need for me to go on longer detailing the list of things that need urgent consideration. All I will say in closing is that this motion to recess until the 22nd day of October may be all right for the hon. gentlemen opposite who consider this institution to be of small importance, and who consider the important decisions as being those taken by the government and not those taken by parliament. It may suit them fine. But I suggest to you, Mr. Speaker, that it will appear reprehensible in the eyes of the Canadian people, and I call upon the house to support the amendment I propose and to reject the date proposed by the government this morning.

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, I rise for the purpose of supporting the amendment which has just been moved by the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield). Indeed had he not moved such an amendment I would have moved one along similar lines because I am in full accord with the proposition that parliament ought not to recess for three months and that we ought to be back in our places by at least September 22.

[Mr. Stanfield.]

Mr. Trudeau: Why not earlier?

An hon. Member: Why not?

Mr. Trudeau: Why did your members leave?

An hon. Member: So did yours.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands has the floor.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): I can understand the Prime Minister's petulance. He probably has not had much sleep.

I want to point out that the government motion that this house recess until October 22 completely destroys the credibility of the government. For months they have been trying to convince the Canadian people that parliament has been preventing them from passing much needed legislation, that they were obstructed in some way, or hindered in bringing in legislation which would completely revolutionize Canadian society. Now they have so little to present to parliament that they are suggesting parliament take a three-months' holiday.

In the house on July 8, as reported on page 10982 of Hansard, the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald) said that if there had not been prolonged debate on certain matters, particularly the omnibus bill on the Criminal Code, the government would have proposed many important measures. Well, if there are important measures which the government desires to see passed, there are two things we could have done. We could have continued to sit on into July instead of planning to adjourn on June 27. There would have been no objection on the part of opposition members to sitting during the summer months in order to discharge their responsibilities. We have done it before.

The second thing the government could have done was to call for the reconvening of parliament early in September, immediately after Labour Day. But the government has not done either one of these things. We have dealt with no legislation at all since the first two or three days in July, and now the government suggests it has nothing to put before parliament and that there is no need to bring members back before October 22. I would remind the house that if we start a new session on October 22 with the debate on the address no legislation will be dealt with until the month of November. This means a period of almost four months during which no legislation will have been dealt with by parliament.

• (11:30 a.m.)

On July 22 the Prime Minister gave an interview before the television cameras, where he seems to prefer to carry on most of his debates because the cameras cannot interrupt, ask questions or talk back. At that time he said that the people were confronted with a "do-nothing parliament". I would point out that parliament has been very busy. It has been busy most of the time trying to get the government to take action on the important problems that are facing the country. But the country is confronted with a "do-nothing government". The best proof that it is a "do-nothing government" is that it does not even want to bring parliament back until October 22 because it has nothing to put before it.

I would ask Your Honour whether you can imagine a course of action more inconsistent than this. The government brings in rules changes, ostensibly for the purpose of streamlining parliament. But we now find that the only purpose of streamlining parliament is not to enable parliament to do more business but to give its members a longer holiday. Closure was not introduced so that the government could streamline parliament and deal with the important issues of the day; it was introduced so that we could have shorter sessions of parliament, so that the government could get parliament out of the road.

I said that the government's credibility had been destroyed because it had talked about legislation it wanted to put before the house and had not done so. Where is this legislation? Why is it not put before us? Why does the government not bring it down, either now or in September? The time has come for the government to stop bluffing and to start performing. The time has come to put up or shut up. To use an old fishermen's phrase, the time has come to "fish or cut bait". There is also an old printer's phrase that is apt, Mr. Speaker, but our parliamentary rules would not allow me to use it.

The real fact of the matter is that this government, particularly the Prime Minister, does not want parliament around at all. Parliament is an unnecessary encumbrance, a continuing embarrassment. Hon. members opposite would like us to go home because the opposition has become a nuisance. The opposition keeps asking questions that the government cannot answer. The opposition keeps insisting that the government state its policies in regard to a whole host of matters, but the government has no policies and does not like to admit it. So the simple solution is to send members of parliament home and to keep them at home for as long as possible.

The government claims that it needs time to formulate its policies and to prepare its parliamentary program. If the President of the Privy Council is right and there is a lot of legislation that the government wanted to get through, then surely that legislation must be ready now. Therefore parliament could meet in September and deal with it while the cabinet meets to prepare any other legislation the government has in mind.

The government does not need three months to sit in an ivory tower to consider problems that have been before it for a long time. These are problems in regard to which the government has appointed task forces, committees and commissions. The desks of ministers opposite must be piled high with reports. If the government has no policies or legislation, then it should say so honestly. Let it say to the members of this house: "We are not ready because we have no legislation. We want a little time to think up some new answers to old problems, so please go away and leave us alone." That would at least be an honest attitude to take.

What the government is doing is telling the public, on the one hand, that there are many things the government wants to do but which an obstructive opposition keeps it from doing. On the other hand, when the government does have a chance to put legislation before the house, it tells parliament: "We don't want you around at all". The motion moved by the government to recess the house till October 22 demonstrates that the government is made up of phonies who are trying to fool the people of this country, and I want to tell the government that it will not get away with it.

During the course of the interview on July 22 to which I referred a few moments ago the Prime Minister said: "I think the greatest danger in this country was not closure, but the feeling of the people that the government was irrelevant, that things were happening, whether pollution, or housing, or moonshots, or urban slums, that parliament was not dealing with.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): I hear a few backbenchers opposite applauding. I notice that the majority of the government members have the uncomfortable feeling that the matters which the Prime Minister says parliament was not dealing with are the very things that the government has not been dealing with. Has parliament not been dealing with pollution? Certainly opposition members have raised the question of pollution on every conceivable occasion. But what has the government done in connection with pollution?

Mr. Hees: Nothing.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): It is almost two years since I heard the Minister of Manpower and Immigration (Mr. MacEachen), at a time when he was minister of health and welfare, make a resounding speech in the house about legislation that he was just ready to bring down and which, to quote his words, was going to give Canada pure water and clean air. Where is that legislation? Never has there been as much pollution in Canada as there is today.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I would take the liberty of bringing to the attention of hon. members that it is extremely difficult to follow the speech of the hon. member.

• (11:40 a.m.)

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): I do not mind the interruptions, Mr. Speaker. There is an old saying in the north that if you throw a stone into a pack of dogs and one yelps you have hit something.

Some hon. Members: Explain.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Never has the problem of pollution been so acute as it is today. Never have the people of this country been so conscious of what we are doing to the environment of the Canadian people. Where is the water act? Where is the legislation to deal with pollution? We have had no legislation, We have not got pure water or clean air. All we have had is a lot of hot air.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): When the Prime Minister has the unmitigated gall to say that parliament is not dealing with pollution, the responsibility rests right on his doorstep because he and his party are the people who should be introducing legislation to deal with the matter.

[Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Island).]

The second matter that the Prime Minister said parliament is not dealing with is housing. We are very conscious of the fact that parliament is not dealing adequately with housing. As a matter of fact, the government did nothing about housing until the hon. member for Trinity (Mr. Hellyer), when he was the Prime Minister's senior cabinet minister and deskmate, finally got so frustrated that he gave the Prime Minister a kick in the place where the Prime Minister was going to kick the little boy in Regina.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): We finally got some legislation. It is inadequate legislation, but that is the only time the government moved with any commendable speed. The other matter the Prime Minister referred to that parliament was not dealing with was moonshots. I do not know what the Prime Minister wants us to do about moonshots, Mr. Speaker, but something which concerns the human race even more than moonshots is the danger of a nuclear holocaust that could destroy the human race.

As far back as March the Prime Minister said that the government would follow the question of the Safeguard A.B.M. system closely. He said that if Canada thought it would escalate the nuclear arms race the government would express its disapproval to the United States and to the world. On the other hand, if the government felt the Safeguard system would be of value it might be prepared to participate and its decision would be made known to parliament and to the Canadian people. Months have elapsed. The other day I asked the Prime Minister whether a decision had been reached. He said no.

In the course of the next few days the United States Senate will make a decision. The majority leader of the Senate says that in all probability the construction of the Safeguard A.B.M. system will be approved by that body. Instead of worrying about moonshots, the Prime Minister should be worried about the A.B.M. system. This parliament should have an opportunity to debate that question. We should be able to debate it on the basis of what the government's stated policy is, not on the basis of no comment and no decision.

The Prime Minister said the other day that parliament is not dealing with slum clearance. The only reason it is not dealing with slum clearance is that the government has not put any really useful and effective legislation before the house so that we can deal with the question of slum clearance.

The Minister of Finance (Mr. Benson) keeps turning down every proposal on the basis that it is inflationary. Yet we have had no legislation to deal with the problem of inflation. Just two days ago the near-banks of this country raised their interest rates again. This will undoubtedly bring pressure to bear on the chartered banks to increase their rates further. An announcement two days ago indicates that the increasing interest rates for mortgage money has had the effect of reducing housing starts with the distinct possibility that starts this year will not even reach the 197,000 starts of last year.

Where is the legislation to deal with inflation? It took the government almost a year to set up the Prices and Incomes Commission. There has been no legislation on the matter of interest rates. There has been no legislation to implement the report of the Porter Commission to bring the near-banks under the control of the federal government through the Bank Act. There has been no legislation on inflation at all.

The government says that the most pressing problem in Canada today is inflation, yet there is not one piece of legislation before us now. We are going to be sent home until October 22. No legislation can be dealt with until November. Yet the government says inflation is a serious problem. There are many other problems, Mr. Speaker. I need not enumerate them all.

One of the most pressing problems is veterans' pensions. The veterans of this country have been waiting years for the Woods report. Now we have the Woods report. Instead of acting on it, the government is waiting for a white paper. They are going to send the report and the white paper to a committee. We could have had legislation in this session. If the government requested it, every member would stay here to deal with legislation to improve the plight of the veterans.

An hon. Member: Where are your members?

Mr. Stanfield: They are coming back on Monday.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): The hon. gentleman is worrying about members. What he should worry about is where the government members were on the day parliament adjourned early for lack of a quorum.

Mr. Hees: There were seven in the house.

Mr. Speaker: Again it is difficult to hear the hon. member. I think in fairness I should point out that the verbal crossfire is between individual members on both sides of the house.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): One of the most serious problems which has not been dealt with by parliament because the government has no program and no policy is the plight of western agriculture. We are being asked to go home only a week before the end of the crop year. We do not know what the government's policy is going to be with respect to assuring the farmers that they will be able to deliver at least five bushels per acre in the present crop year which ends July 31. We have no understanding as to what the government's intentions are with respect to the price the farmer will receive in the new crop year which begins on August 1. We have received no indication from the government as to what its policies are to inject a massive infusion of cash income into the pockets of the western farmers.

• (11:50 a.m.)

The Prime Minister spent the best part of a week in western Canada talking to the farmers and meeting with various farm groups. When he had finished those discussions, at least he admitted that the farmers need money. When he returned we had a day's debate on this matter. The Prime Minister took no part in it. We had no announcement from the government concerning any policy envisaged for the coming year. The only reference was to legislation passed months ago to provide for cash advances on farm stored grain. Just a week ago I asked the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Sharp), when he was Acting Prime Minister, when the government would make a statement concerning its policy in respect of western agriculture. His reply was very clear. He said it would have to be made before the end of the crop year. But we have had no statement.

It is very likely, Mr. Speaker, that important legislation will be required if we are to salvage the economy of western Canada. Next November will be too late. We should either be dealing with that legislation now or should be told by the government that it will have legislation ready for early September. We should be dealing with that legislation.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): I want to remind you, Mr. Speaker, that the plight of western agriculture is not purely a regional matter. The farmers of Saskatchewan alone buy annually about $100 million worth of farm machinery, most of it coming from central Canada. They also buy large quantities of hardware, cars, trucks and other supplies. When agricultural income on the prairies declines by $430 million in a single year, it is only a matter of time until the rest of Canada feels the adverse effects of that decline. Here we have a government which professes to be concerned about the problem of the prairie farmers asking us, on July 25, to go home without any statement from the government about what it is going to do, and not only to go home but to remain at home until October 22 which means that in that period no legislation will be possible to salvage the situation in the prairie provinces.

There are a great many other things with which parliament has not dealt. In closing I wish to say there is only one reason parliament has not dealt with these matters. It is not because there has been obstruction. It is not because we are unwilling to sit here in the summer or come back early in the fall. The only reason parliament has not grappled with the problems that assail the Canadian people is that this government has no policies and no programs. It is completely bankrupt of leadership, and the motion today exposes that fact for all to see.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

[Translation]

Mr. Réal Caouette (Témiscamingue): Mr. Speaker, at one o'clock this morning, the Liberal majority applied the rule of closure. At 1:20, the sinister rule 75c was imposed upon us again by the Liberal majority and now, at noon today, they propose no more or no less the pure and simple closing down of parliament for three months.

The present government is heaved-handed when it comes to closure, while very serious and urgent problems not only remain unsolved but have not been discussed or introduced by the Liberal administration.

Mr. Speaker, we are about to go on holidays. I am not against holidays for the hon. members, but in all ridings we note that there are some people who do not have the means to take holidays but who have them to pay taxes and allow their member of parliament to go on holidays.

[Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands).]

An hon. Member: You have been on holidays for three weeks already.

Another hon. Member: Some members take ten-month holidays.

Mr. Caouette: I hear a member saying that some members take ten-month holidays. We know that. We see them in the house on holidays, because they are not brave enough to rise and state their opinions. Those people are on holidays for four years. However, they are not on holidays when they have to go and beg for votes which they obtain on false pretences to come here and wear out the seat of their pants in the Canadian parliament.

Mr. Speaker, I am not against taking holidays, even for three months, as was suggested by the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald). That would be normal under a normal system, if the legislative program were brought in. As for problems, we solve them from day to day.

Hardly a few days ago, the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) or the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Olson) said that we could do nothing for western farmers with regard to their wheat surplus.

The Prime Minister went to Winnipeg and told farmers: You have wheat, sell it. It belongs to you. We have no miracle solution to suggest.

Recently the Prime Minister returned to western Canada where, in some places, he was given a rather stormy welcome. He was even insulted. The Prime Minister then made the following statement: We shall ear-mark $250 million to help western farmers. We shall provide them with those funds without interest until they have sold their crop.

And, in order to project a better image to the farmers, the Minister of Agriculture visited the same regions the following day and told the farmers: We may even ear-mark up to $500 million rather than only $250 million.

Mr. Speaker, in order to get the government to act, will it be absolutely necessary that the Prime Minister be insulted from one end of the country to the other, and that Canada's poor fling insults at him and at the government?

As far as the summer recess is concerned, the motion moved by the President of the Privy Council reads in part as follows:

—provided always that if it appears to the satisfaction of Mr. Speaker, after consultation with Her Majesty's Government, that the public interest requires that the House should meet at an earlier time during the adjournment—

—at that time, the house might meet again in September, in August or early in October.

• (12 noon)

Mr. Speaker, would it not be in the public interest to solve the unemployment problem in Canada in July 1969, in order to assist some 400,000 unemployed who cannot earn a decent and honourable living in their own country?

Mr. Speaker, would the introduction of measures designed to efficiently fight poverty in Canada not serve the public interest? There are many poor people in Canada, Welfare recipients, for instance, write us day in, day out. The Liberal members also get the same kind of letters. Some mothers are utterly crushed because they have to manage to live on a monthly income of $110, $115 or $125. Mothers with five, six, eight or even ten children write to us: We have no security, we are entitled to nothing more than $125 or $135 per month.

Mr. Speaker, would it not be more important for the Prime Minister and the government to present legislation to improve social welfare so that every individual would have the right to life, security and liberty in his own country, that is Canada?

Mr. Speaker, is it more important to go on holidays or to solve these problems? Is it more important to go on holidays than to work at boosting the Canadian economy?

Day after day, the Prime Minister repeats that we have enormous problems to solve. Are we going to leave those problems pending? When the time comes for solving problems, the Prime Minister says exactly what he said recently to the representatives of the provinces: We have no money.

Would it not be more important, during the holidays, to look into the monetary system of Canada, in order to gear it to our opportunities for developing the country?

No, they prefer to move a motion to enable us to take holidays. Meanwhile, all problems remain unsolved and their study is deferred. The provinces complain to the federal government and municipalities complain to provincial governments, yet no solution can be found to those problems.

Mr. Speaker, I spoke earlier of western producers who, according to the Minister of Agriculture, will get up to $500 million in cash, as long as their wheat remains unsold. We are not against western farmers being assisted. We have always supported the measures that are likely to assist western farmers.

But, Mr. Speaker, there are farmers in eastern Canada also. The dairy farmers in Quebec have surplus problems. Some farmers in the Maritimes, some potato farmers and corn producers in Ontario have to sell their production below cost price.

Mr. Speaker, the government does not propose anything to help these farmers. It is good of the Prime Minister and the Minister of Agriculture to solve problems, to help and to promise $500 million to the western farmers.

However, this does not complete the farm policy for the whole country. Has the government offered a national farm policy for Canada since it has come to power? Has the previous government ever presented a general farming policy for Canada as a whole?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member will allow me to interrupt him for a moment in order to remind him that the house is presently considering a specific motion. The hon. member should somehow keep in mind the rule of relevancy, and his comments should relate to the motion under consideration at this time.

Mr. Caouette: Mr. Speaker, the amendment of the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield) allows us to give the reasons why we will support it. The Leader of the Opposition himself blamed the government for its inaction.

The leader of the New Democratic party (Mr. Douglas) had every chance to come out with what he had to say, and this too is related to the amendment, whereby the house would resume its work at the end of September in order to solve the problems that have been set aside, and which the government or the Prime Minister did not want to put before the house.

Since the beginning of the session we have been asked to adopt bills of very little importance while the government neglected to introduce the important ones. That is why, we will support the amendment of the Leader of the Opposition, so that the house might be invited to meet sooner to enable the government to introduce its legislation. The government has certainly prepared its legislative program because for a year and a half now, we have been hearing of all those steps that have been taken to realize a "just society". So, legislation must be ready. Why wait before putting it before parliament?

Some bills were introduced, namely the omnibus bill, other secondary bills were also put to us. This last month we have been discussing parliamentary procedures. But has that solved the economic problems in Canada?

To my mind, Mr. Speaker, it is important for the members to meet as soon as possible. If this was not urgent, I admit that perhaps we could take a break until October 22. I could even suggest better than that: that sessions always be held at set dates, that the opening of the session be set for such and such a date, the closing or adjournment for Christmas and the New Year be always from December 20 to January 18 or 20 and that the house adjourn in June to come back in September. In summer, the house would adjourn at the end of June or the beginning of July and convene when the school opens early in September, because there are so many school children on the other side and it would be too bad to deprive them of the education they are entitled to.

Mr. Speaker, I believe it would be appropriate for the government to pass legislation so that sessions should always be within fixed dates. However, owing to circumstances, such is not the case; we are asked to adjourn until October 22. The Leader of the Opposition suggests September 22 so that we may have a month for the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne. As the leader of the N.D.P. pointed out, that would take about ten days or about the whole of October. In November we could begin with the bills that were so much promised by the government in the last Speech from the Throne.

Mr. Speaker, in the public interest, I believe it is urgent that we talk for instance about the underdeveloped areas the producers the farmers the overall agricultural policy in Canada, the social security structure that should be amended, old age pensions, pensions to veterans and retired people.

Those matters should be discussed as soon as possible. For three, four years or even five years already, the government has been asked to bring solutions in order to help those pensioners. The minister will say again: We are asked by the opposition to spend more money, but the government has less and less money.

And the Treasury will run dry because precisely the government allows financial sharks to increase their interest rates. The government will be supplied by financial sources on which it has to pay accrued interest. If it borrows $1 million or $1 billion on a 12-, 15- or 20-year basis, it would have to pay back $2 billion. And to pay off the second billion, it would have to borrow again, because this is how the system works.

• (12:10 p.m.)

Mr. Speaker, the Créditistes maintain that the first thing to be settled in Canada is the monetary system. The government should introduce in the house a specific, clear and definite legislative program with regard to the Canadian monetary system, which is at the origin of the inflation so often referred to by the Prime Minister. He dealt with it and we are sinking deeper and deeper into inflation which enables the rich to get richer and the poor to get poorer.

This is the system in which we operate and as long as that system controls the destiny of our nation, we will be in the same mess. Whether it be under the government of this Prime Minister or the next one or a former one, we always end up in a dead end and a solution is impossible to find. Such is the situation in which we find ourselves.

The government proposes now the adjournment until October 22nd simply because he has no solution to offer, because he does not have the courage to introduce its legislative program and to suggest solutions to the problems. Let him at least put the problems to the house and we are going to provide it with the solutions Canada needs.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the amendment purports to have the session resume on September 22 instead of October 22.

I listened carefully to the interventions of opposition party leaders. I must say that one of them did not surprise me very much. As for the other two, I will deal with them in a moment.

The hon. member for Témiscamingue (Mr. Caouette), the leader of the Ralliement Créditiste did not surprise me very much. He was never in power and he will never be. He does not know what is a government.

An hon. Member: He will never know it.

Mr. Trudeau: He will never know it. This position is easy and quite clear. A very long time ago, no doubt when he was still a child, he stated his political theory and economic philosophy. Everything boils down to the monetary system. He found the truth several years ago. He thinks he can stop thinking, studying and examining because he has the answer to everything: the reform of the monetary system. If there is too much pollution it is because of the monetary system. If housing is in a bad way, the monetary system is to blame. Canadian participation abroad also depends on the monetary system, and digestion too, for that matter.

Mr. Speaker, I understand why that party does not need any respite, that it does not need any time to study and do research. In theory, as well as intellectually, they have found out everything. They have only one thing left to do and it is to make the people believe it and for that, of course, they must talk. And in order to do so, they must of course, be in the house. Give them holidays and they vanish out of the picture. They become nobodies—they are just nil.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Trudeau: They are here, Mr. Speaker, to be seen and to be heard. They need a forum and there is none except in the house. They do not want to go in their constituencies, because the people there do not want to see them. They have heard the same things over and over again for too many years.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Trudeau: Well, they are welcome to stay in Ottawa if they like.

Yes, Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for Témiscamingue has a problem. He wants to say a few words on the monetary system.

Mr. Caouette: You say you have no money?

Mr. Dionne: That is always what is missing, dollars!

Mr. Speaker: Order!

Mr. Caouette: You mentioned that in Rouyn, you said you did not have any money.

An hon. Member: You also said that in western Canada.

Mr. Trudeau: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for Témiscamingue and his colleagues of the Ralliement Créditiste might take advantage of the time we are allowing them to study the problems a bit and to examine the solutions we are proposing.

The hon. member has just mentioned my trip in western Canada and, talking through his hat as usual, he referred to the solutions we proposed.

He refers to $250 million and $500 million that we are supposed to have thought up as a result of my trip in western Canada. It is not true, Mr. Speaker. It is only a matter of applying a policy already in existence which was misunderstood in the west. As a matter of fact, it is a policy of advance payments on unsold wheat. However, the hon. member did not understand it neither did several Canadians in the west.

That is why we are urging the hon. members to spend a little more time in their constituency in order to explain the policy or solutions that have been misunderstood.

Mr. Speaker, in order to understand and to be in a position to explain, one needs a little silence, a little reflection and a little study. That is asking a lot from the opposition parties, especially from the Créditistes, who have always been in possession of the truth in all fields. They should at least show some indulgence and realize that others are not as blessed and are trying to determine the extent of the problems and to find solutions.

And so, Mr. Speaker, in order to program to some extent the legislative year, we have presented the measures under study. We have implemented a recommendation contained in the report of the Standing Committee on Procedure, presented to the house on December 6 last.

[English]

The Committee on Procedure recommended that there be a pattern of regular parliamentary sessions whereby a session would normally commence in September or October and the house would rise for the summer recess on or about July 1. There was no hidden desire on the part of the government to change this. We are following the plan that was proposed by the committee on procedure and about which I spoke in the house on December 10 last. At that time I explained that it was our intention as a government to follow this plan to have a regular legislative year which would begin probably early in October and end late in June. On December 10 I said we thought this was necessary, and I continued:

> This would enable the government to complete its legislative program during the summer months. By the time the house convenes, a substantial number of bills would be ready for first reading. The bulk of the legislative work would be undertaken in the autumn and early winter. The house would be able to concentrate on the main financial work in the spring and to complete it before a summer adjournment. During each of three periods of the proposed annual session a fixed number of days would be set aside for the opposition.

And so on. This was the government's plan. We did not pretend that we had all the bills written up and all the policies defined for four years in advance. We said we would have to do a little bit of thinking and a little bit of reading of the reports which the leader of the New Democratic party (Mr. Douglas) has said are piled up on our desks. It is true that there are many reports we have to study and many policies that we have to think through. We have to give the civil service many directives so they can draft bills and prepare white papers under governmental direction in order that they can be examined by cabinet committees and then by the cabinet. These things take a little time.

I said that the leader of the Créditistes did not surprise me because he did not know much about governing. I am a little more surprised by the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield) and the leader of the New Democratic party because they were premiers; they were heads of government in the past. They used to know what it was to govern.

Mr. Stanfield: And still do.

Mr. Trudeau: What were they doing in those days? I think it would be fair to say that the legislative assembly of Nova Scotia sat perhaps two or three months a year. Why not six? Was it because they did not clear up the mess in their province?

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

• (12:20 p.m.)

Mr. Trudeau: What were they doing in the other eight, nine or ten months of the year? Were they off on vacation, as the leader of the New Democratic party just said? Is it because they wanted to send everybody home to do nothing, or is it because they thought that the purpose of the government was to come to grips with problems and to look for solutions, and that it was necessary for the members of the various political parties to be in their ridings, not only to understand the problems of the ridings but to explain to their parts of the province the problems in other parts?

Mr. Coates: Then you better give them a whole year to explain it.

Mr. Trudeau: Do you want to ask a question?

[Mr. Trudeau.]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) should be allowed to make his speech.

Mr. Trudeau: I would have answered this question if it had been put, but let me tell the hon. member's neighbour, the hon. member for Cape Breton-East Richmond (Mr. MacInnis), not to ask me any questions because I do not answer people who are not gentlemen.

Mr. MacInnis: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order which arises from the remark of the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) about not answering my questions. When he does not answer me he does not answer thousands of the constituents whom I represent, but at least he has not threatened to kick me, brown belt and all.

Mr. Bigg: He kicks children only.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: I will recognize the hon. member in a moment. I would just like to suggest to hon. members that we should conduct this debate as objectively as possible, and I am not sure we are going in the right direction at the present time. I now recognize the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) on a point of order.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): My point of order is that I agree completely with you, Mr. Speaker, and I think that our debate will be carried on in a better vein if we do not say of members in the house that any hon. member is not a gentleman.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Without commenting on the point of order, perhaps I might revert to my original thought that we should return to the substance of the motion now before the house.

Mr. Trudeau: I was speaking to the amendment, Mr. Speaker. I related the reasons why we need to have a certain period of time between the sessions of this house, and I was saying that I was somewhat surprised that the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield) did not know about this. It is not so long ago that he was the head of a government in a province which had economic and social problems. Was his solution to these to sit two months a year and send the members home on vacation for the rest of the time and go on vacation himself, or did he have to stay around and do some work? And if ten months were needed for him, why would three months be too much for us?

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Trudeau: I must say that if both he and the leader of the New Democratic party had sat a little longer than six or eight weeks or even three months, perhaps they would not have left their provinces in such a mess and the federal government would not have to pick up the pieces.

I think we should encourage members of the opposition to leave. Every time they do, the I.Q. of this house rises considerably.

When the Leader of the Opposition rose to speak of truancy, there were only 27 out of the 70 members of his party in the house.

Mr. Baldwin: And there were only 65 of your party here at that time.

Mr. Trudeau: One of the difficult problems with which we have to deal, and which takes a lot of our time in cabinet committees and in cabinet, and with which the civil service has to come to grips, is the problem of regional economic disparity. Much of this disparity occurs in the province of the Leader of the Opposition, and if he had not left that province in such a mess, if he had done a little more for education and housing, if he had not left the heavy water industry and Clairtone in such a mess, perhaps we would not have to deal with it now, and perhaps the economic situation of the whole region would be better.

But no, they wanted ten months of holiday a year. According to their interpretation of the reason for our three months' recess, we want to send members on vacation. Apparently that is what they did and they think we are doing the same. But we are not; we are not sending members home on vacation. I hope they will take a few weeks' vacation and I hope the ministers will do so also, but we certainly do not intend to take three months' vacation.

Our members of parliament, the members of the Liberal party, do things in their constituencies during the three months' recess.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Trudeau: I understand that the government of the leader of the New Democratic party sometimes sat as long as six or eight weeks a year. Big deal! But when he is here he really comes to grips with problems. When he is in the opposition, he really knows how to solve problems which he did not know how to solve when he was head of a provincial government. We hear a lot of talk about wheat and about inflation. I wonder if the leader of the New Democratic party really did much to solve the problem of wheat when he was premier of Saskatchewan.

Some hon. Members: Oh, come off it.

Mr. Trudeau: When I was there last week I was appalled to see how many friends of his political party were misinformed about wheat problems, how his party has not really helped the people of that province to understand the real nature of the wheat problem, and how they have not helped this wheat growing population to embark on any kind of forecasting or planning in the solution of these problems. I can understand why.

The leader of the New Democratic party says that we are adjourning until October 22 because we want to give our members longer holidays. By virtue of the same reasoning which I applied to the Leader of the Opposition, I suppose that is what they did in Nova Scotia after sitting six or eight long weeks a year. They adjourned to send their members, as he said, on longer holidays. That is not the way we see it.

The opposition seems to think it has nothing else to do but talk. They say: if there is a problem, we will talk. If there is a difficulty, we will talk about it. If the government is going too slowly, we will talk about it. If there is a real problem in some part of Canada, we will talk about it. That is all they have to do. They do not have to govern, they have only to talk. The best place in which to talk, if they want a forum, is, of course, parliament. When they get home, when they get out of parliament, when they are 50 yards from Parliament Hill, they are no longer hon. members—they are just nobodies, Mr. Speaker.

• (12:30 p.m.)

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Trudeau: We are quite candid about it. We have to do some thinking. Before solving the problems we have to examine them in depth. They have to be discussed between ministers. We have to get departments to work on them. Sometimes we have to name outside experts or set up task forces to look for solutions. Then we have to take time to discuss them; we have to arrive at policy decisions. Then we have to send them for drafting, whether in the form of white papers or bills.

Mr. Nowlan: Macgregor Dawson said all that.

Mr. Trudeau: Yes, but you should have read Macgregor Dawson.

Mr. Nowlan: I did.

Mr. Trudeau: So the hon. member read Macgregor Dawson. Now they have two authorities on which to rely—Macgregor Dawson and the Canada Year Book.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Trudeau: Yes, and the Colonial Laws Validity Act.

It is only fair to confess that unlike the leader of the Creditiste party (Mr. Caouette) we did not formulate our solutions for all time 50 years ago, or 60 years ago, I suppose. We have to find new solutions all the time because the problems of Canada are changing. I may say we also have to spend time doing so.

I would suggest that the role of the opposition—and this is perhaps a chapter which the hon. member for Annapolis Valley (Mr. Nowlan) did not read—is not merely to talk about everything, not merely to be against anything the government does, not merely to say that our Indian policy is bad, that our position with regard to the Commonwealth is wrong, and that we are failing to stop inflation. This is one of the roles of the opposition, of course, and this is why we have allotted to them under the new rules—

An hon. Members: Isn't that kind?

Mr. Trudeau:—one quarter of the days in a normal parliamentary session. Hopefully this will give them a little time in which to talk against our policies and criticize our mistakes. But we urge them also to spend a little time trying to become a credible opposition.

We are told that the government has destroyed its credibility, Mr. Speaker. That is possible. We have come forward with policies which perhaps have failed to please everyone in the country. Someone asks, what policies? We have come forth, for instance, with a policy position on the Indian problem. When it was presented to the house I remember distinctly the leaders of all the opposition parties saying: Too late; you should have done that years ago; we have been pushing that for years; we told you so. In effect they told us we had adopted their policies, only many years too late.

A few days later, Mr. Speaker, the Indians began saying the policy was not such a good one after all—it is true they had once been against the Indian Affairs department, but now it did not seem so bad. The opposition switched!

Some hon. Members: Shame.

Mr. Trudeau: Suddenly our policy decision, which had been theirs, but which had been adopted ten years too late, was no longer theirs. Somebody in the country was against it. Right away, it was no longer their policy. It was wrong, and it should be reversed.

Perhaps our Indian policy is wrong, Mr. Speaker. We are asking the Indians to discuss it, and we are asking the provinces to discuss it too. Perhaps the Canadian people are not prepared to live without discrimination among themselves. Perhaps the Canadian people think there should be treaties between one section of the Canadian people and another section. Perhaps we shall not be able to succeed in selling what we believe to be the right Indian policy.

But what is the opposition's Indian policy? It was one thing one day, and ten days later it was another. Precisely what it was we do not know. On one day it was years too late and on another it was years too soon. It might not be too much to suggest that in the time between now and September 22 the opposition members should try to meet a few of their constituents who still believe in them, and perhaps they could take a little holiday. But they might take the time between September 22 and October 22, the extra month we are asking hon. members to take as an interval between the two sessions, as time in which to come up with an Indian policy. Possibly it would be better than ours and possibly we could hear about it.

As to the other subjects which have been mentioned, it is true we did not settle all the problems of Canada. We did not pretend we would. But we did bring some propositions forward. For instance, for weeks and months one hon. member kept asking me what we intended to do about offshore mineral rights. I would say that we hoped to make a statement soon, next month, perhaps, or in two weeks time. Then one day we announced it. And not a word has been heard since then on the subject of offshore mineral rights. Is our position the right one in the estimation of hon. members opposite, or is it wrong? We know that many of the provinces have approved its general lines while others have declined to accept it. The provinces will not get any guidance from the opposition, Mr. Speaker. Apparently they have not had time to think about it or to formulate a policy.

We have heard a great deal from the expert on oil. He has asked us constantly about our oil policy, and about the "secret agreement" which is a figment of his imagination. But what is the policy of the opposition on these complex questions involving offshore mineral rights? Should we divide the revenue—and I am talking now of the share which would accrue to the federal government—among the provinces claiming it, or among all Canadians? Should we divide it on a per capita basis? Should we divide it only among those provinces which have coastlines or should we give part of it to provinces which are already rich in oil, such as Alberta?

These are difficult problems, Mr. Speaker. We proposed some solutions. What are the solutions offered by the opposition? One day they hope to sit on the treasury benches. One day, they say, they will govern this country. And I am sure the first thing they will do is to abolish this infamous rule 75c. Their program is quite set in this respect. We know about that. And there will never be any closure under a Conservative government. I need not talk about any other hypothesis. This is their program. They will go to the people with it—"We shall abolish closure and we shall remove rule 75c".

What will they do about offshore mineral rights? What will they do to settle the Indian problem? What will they do about inflation? I realise I am probably testing your patience a little, Mr. Speaker, and I do not wish to deal at length with any of the issues. However, I want to explain that these are difficult problems

On the subject of inflation we have been asked, I suppose, 50 questions by one hon. member during the course of the year. They were not all in order, Mr. Speaker, but we have at least done something about inflation. We have not cured it, but we have provided for a budgetary surplus this year, the first, I believe, in 12 or 13 years. In order to continue this surplus we will have to do some more cutting. I remember that when we had to cut from our programs the causeway to Prince Edward Island the opposition were up in arms. They said we should have built that causeway. They told us to forget about the tunnel to Newfoundland, which had never been promised anyway, but the causeway was inviolate.

• (12:40 p.m.)

Mr. Speaker: Order. The Prime Minister did suggest that he was testing my patience in this debate, but the Speaker's patience cannot, of course, be tested. I suggest to the Prime Minister, as I did to the previous speaker, that we are not debating the budget or the Speech from the Throne; we are dealing with a motion to adjourn the house. The comments of hon. members should be related at all times to the motion and the amendment before the house.

Mr. Trudeau: Mr. Speaker, I agree with you. The only point I was trying to make was that there are going to be some more difficult decisions that we will have to take during the next three months. We need three months because we are faced with the problem of further cuts in expenditure. We have had no guidance as yet from the opposition as to whether we should lay off more civil servants or should cut back on some public works. These are problems that are being dealt with by the government. We have a good deal of work to do. We will be using most of the summer, as I said in my speech on December 10 and to which I referred a moment ago, to prepare sufficient legislative material so that when parliament reconvenes it will progress efficiently in the next session.

Next session we are looking forward to hearing from the opposition not merely negative rejections of our positions but hopefully some constructive ideas that will help us as a government to be better informed to find solutions—not the problems which we can all see, but to find some of the solutions.

Mr. Baldwin: Would the Prime Minister answer a question at this point?

Mr. Trudeau: Yes.

Mr. Baldwin: During the course of the recess which lies ahead would the Prime Minister mind examining the 69 private members' notices of motions, the 133 private members' public bills and the numerous amendments that were put forward, substantially by members of the opposition, which might give the Prime Minister some guidance in connection with the problems confronting him?

Mr. Trudeau: That is true. I think the hon. gentleman will recognize that in much of our legislation we have tended to incorporate ideas that appeared in private members' bills. However, these are not always bills sponsored by members of the opposition; a great deal are sponsored by private members on the government side.

[Translation]

Before concluding my comments, Mr. Speaker, I wonder if it would be worthwhile to ponder over the considerable attention which the Leader of the Opposition has been giving to gaullism for several days. He constantly speaks about General de Gaulle, his tactics, he sees gaullism everywhere. It seems to me that it is somewhat out-of-date. I feel that this attempt to bring hate and contempt on a country and on its former president is strangely irrelevant. I do not know if—

An hon. Member: It is despicable.

Mr. Trudeau: Yes, indeed, it is despicable. I would ask the hon. member to count the number of times that his own leader has spoken of gaullism during the past few days and to note in what context he does it. That gaullism means the end of parliamentary government, I agree, but it is his interpretation. But what brings him to compare this policy with that of the government? I do not know.

All I can say about General de Gaulle is that I did not always agree with his policy, but I will at least pay him this tribute that to my knowledge, he never considered, unlike the Leader of the Opposition, depriving any member of his privileges retroactively.

[English]

Hon. George Hees (Prince Edward-Hastings): Mr. Speaker, I am sure we have all listened with interest to the pompous, glib, condescending lecture that has been delivered to us by the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau). I am sure we have all been interested to learn from the Prime Minister's own lips that nobody, but nobody, in this country knows anything about running a government or a parliament except this self-styled little tin god on wheels. The pomposity of his speech is indicative of why this house finds it impossible to get along as other houses have been able to do, and to work out legislative procedures for the good of parliament and the country as a whole.

I want to join in this debate at this moment to speak to the amendment moved by the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield) and to say why I believe parliament should not be recessing at the present time for three months. Between one and two o'clock this morning the government brought in by means of closure a guillotine measure that will allow it to program parliament, to turn parliament into an assembly line. At one end of the pipe you will put in proposed legislation; at the other end you will take out statutes all polished and ready for proclamation to the people.

The justification for this action on the part of the government is that the opposition has been holding up parliament. In sending parliament home for three months the government is admitting that it has no legislation ready, and will have none ready for another three months. This indicates parliament has not been held up in any way, shape or form by the opposition. In fact the opposition has co-operated so well with the government that every piece of legislation that the government has brought forward has been dealt with expeditiously. Now the government has nothing to present to parliament and so wants to send members of parliament home for three months.

Parliament should reconvene a great deal earlier than proposed by the government because there is a great deal of work to do. The prime example of the sort of job parliament should tackle—the government has proved that it has no solutions at all to tackle this problem—is the No. 1 problem in this country, namely, inflation and the steadily accelerating rise in the cost of living. Parliament must sit to solve this problem because, as I shall demonstrate in a moment or two, the government's policies have proved a complete failure.

What is the situation today in regard to inflation? By May 1 the increase in the cost of living during the previous 12 months had risen to 4.4 per cent. One month later, on June 1, it had risen to 4.7 per cent. On July 1, the latest date for which we have figures, the increase over the past 12 months was 5.2 per cent. We ask ourselves what is the figure going to be for the 12 months period ending August 1? The answer is that it will probably be close to 6 per cent because right at this moment the cost of living in Canada is rising at a rate of 10 per cent a year.

• (12:50 p.m.)

What solutions has the government offered to combat this rising inflation and this steadily increasing cost of living? It brought in three budgets by which it raised taxes. The cost of living kept going up faster and faster each month. Finally the government brought in a budget on June 3 and introduced two new policies. Those new policies were, first of all, to stop building in large cities in Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I appreciate the remarks now being made by the hon. member are in the form of an introduction to the address he is going to deliver to the house, but I have to remind him, as I reminded previous speakers, that the contributions of hon. members in this debate have to relate to the motion before the house.

Mr. Hees: With great respect, Mr. Speaker, I intend to show that there are very real problems that should be dealt with in the next three months. I intend to show the reason why parliament should be called back earlier than October 22. The policies which the government has produced are a complete failure. The only chance this country has of getting sensible policies effectively introduced is for the government to adopt those policies that are suggested by the opposition. I intend to suggest them today.

The Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) taunted the opposition and asked for positive policies. I intend to give him positive policies on a number of subjects if he will just sit in his seat, as he so seldom does, and listen to what the opposition has to say regarding positive policies for solving the problems of the country. This is the reason the Leader of the Opposition introduced an amendment to the motion stating that this parliament has no right to be recessed for three months.

Mr. Trudeau: Tell us what to do about inflation! Go ahead!

Mr. Hees: I will be very glad to do just that. First of all I will tell you in the next couple of minutes about your policies.

Mr. Trudeau: No, no. Tell us what you will do!

Mr. Hees: I will do that.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member will have to tell this not to the Prime Minister, but to the Speaker.

Mr. Hees: Yes, Mr. Speaker. The first policy that you have introduced is to stop building—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I do not intend to adopt that policy at all! The hon. member should address the Chair.

Mr. Hees: My apologies, Mr. Speaker. I got rather interested in my subject.

Mr. Trudeau: Interested in yourself.

Mr. Hees: I will relay my message through Your Honour. This policy of trying to stop building in the three provinces of Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia has already been a complete failure. Every builder in those provinces will tell you this. The government tried to stop them by withholding the 5 per cent capital cost allowance. The Prime Minister cannot take it! He is leaving the chamber! He asked for positive policies. You come back into the chamber at two o'clock and you will hear them. You won't be here because you cannot stand positive advice.

Mr. Speaker: Order.

Mr. Hees: I am sorry, Mr. Speaker. I spoke directly to the Prime Minister because I was afraid he would be out of the house before I got through what I was saying to him.

I want the Prime Minister to be here at two o'clock. He will get the positive policies that I intend to lay before him for his consideration. I say he has not got the desire—I was going to use another word—because he makes a taunt, then turns around and runs away. He cannot stand the truth! I am going to give him the truth during the next 35 or 40 minutes. If the Prime Minister comes in here at two o'clock I will personally walk over and congratulate him. It will be very interesting to see if he has the plain, ordinary guts to come back into this chamber at two o'clock.

Mr. Speaker: I wonder whether we might return to the motion The hon. member has much less than 35 or 40 minutes remaining.

Mr. Hees: Yes, Mr. Speaker. Any builder in any city in Canada will tell you this policy is a complete failure because the cost of building is increasing at the rate of 12 per cent a year. If a builder postpones building for two years, as the government wants him to do, he knows that by that time the cost of building will have increased by 24 per cent.

The government in its naïvety is asking the builder to absorb a 24 per cent increase in the cost of building for the sake of saving 10 per cent in capital cost allowance. This just does not add up. The builders in Canada are laughing themselves silly at this stupid, naive Minister of Finance (Mr. Benson) who brought in a measure which any practical man knows simply will not work. That policy simply is not working.

The second, and only other policy introduced was to bring in the Kennedy round tariff reductions three years ahead of schedule. That was supposed to bring down the cost of goods because lowering the import duties would make it possible for Canadians to buy goods cheaper. That would be a good policy, Mr. Speaker, if the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Basford) required the importers in this country to pass on to the consumer the reduction in tariff which was introduced in the budget of June 3. The minister is not doing it. He does not intend to do it. Like the builders the importers are laughing themselves to death at this government. There is nothing to require them to pass these tariff reductions on to the consumer, and so they are pocketing the tariff reductions. This policy is also a complete failure.

I see it is almost one o'clock, Mr. Speaker. When we resume at two o'clock I will tell the Prime Minister, and any other members who wish to listen, what should be done in specific, positive terms to lower the cost of living. On that high note—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. It being one o'clock I do now leave the chair until 2 p.m. this afternoon.

At one o'clock the house took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The house resumed at 2 p.m.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The hon. member for Prince Edward-Hastings (Mr. Hees).

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Hees: Thank you very much. Mr. Speaker, when I was speaking to the house—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The hon. member for Mercier (Mr. Boulanger) on a point of order.

Mr. Boulanger: Mr. Speaker, my point of order is to tell you there is one Tory in the house, two Socialists and one Créditiste.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): And no Liberals.

Mr. Hees: Mr. Speaker, when I was speaking to the house before the luncheon break the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) challenged me to outline what I suggest the government should do to control inflation and the steadily rising cost of living. I am sorry to see the Prime Minister has not seen fit to come into the house at two o'clock. I assured him at three minutes to one that I did not have time then to outline these positive programs, but that if he would come into the house at two o'clock I would be glad to do so. It is easy to see that the Prime Minister is not interested in positive programs, and is not interested in positive suggestions which he has continually asked for. When an hon. member is asked to give them, rises in his place, and is prepared to do so, the Prime Minister turns tail and runs away.

An hon. Member: You are a turn-tail too.

Mr. Hees: That is a pretty good indication of how the Prime Minister regards parliament. He is not interested in it. He is not interested in its operations. He is not interested in the ideas which are put forward in all sincerity by members of this house.

The first thing I would do to control inflation would be to control the government spending which has doubled in the six years during which this Liberal government has been in power. By so doing, the government could greatly relieve the upward pressure on prices, which is brought about by the increased government spending which has been going up at a phenomenal rate each year since the government took office six years ago. Several times in the past three or four years I have suggested that the government should do this, but on every occasion the Prime Minister or the Minister of Finance (Mr. Benson) assured me there was no need to do this, that the government's policy of raising taxes would look after the steadily rising cost of living—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I am sorry to interrupt the hon. member but I must remind him that the house is now seized of an amendment to a motion to adjourn. I realize it offers a fairly wide scope for debate, but it would be appreciated if the hon. member would relate more to the question of whether the house should adjourn until September 22 or October 22.

Mr. Hees: I shall be glad to do that, but what I am speaking about is the need for parliament both to remain in session and to return much earlier than October 22 because of the great many important matters which must be dealt with by parliament since the government obviously does not have the answers to the problems, as has been demonstrated day after day in this house. The Prime Minister and other members dealt with these many subjects, and I am sure you will realize, Mr. Speaker, that what I am doing is the same thing. I am outlining the reason parliament should remain in session, and should meet again much earlier than the designated date of October 22.

As I say, the government has always answered that it cannot cut expenditures in the present fiscal year. It has assured the house that it would do so in the forthcoming fiscal year, the next year. But as you and I know, Mr. Speaker, cuts of that kind are the type of routine cuts that every minister of finance makes in the estimates of every department when they are brought before the Treasury Board.

Each minister, as much as he possibly can, always inflates his estimates before they go before the Treasury Board. He knows they will be cut very drastically. By putting in as much as he can, he concludes that he will receive the most workable package possible. Every minister, or every member of this house, who is, or has been a minister will realize that this is true.

Mr. McIlraith: No.

Mr. Hees: So the cuts in the next fiscal year have always been simply routine cuts. I suggest that we ask ourselves whether it is possible to make cuts in the present fiscal year. The answer is yes, because it was actually done in 1962 by the then Conservative government. On June 23, 1962 the government of that day was faced with an international monetary crisis. In order to obtain the international credit which we need to keep the country's currency solvent, we were required to cut $200 million in expenditures immediately. Those expenditures were cut within a period of three days. Cutting $200 million on that date, effective during that present fiscal year, amounted to the same thing as cutting $265 million in a full fiscal year.

• (2:10 p.m.)

Therefore, remembering that this can be done, the government should immediately cut one quarter of a billion dollars from its expenditures in the present fiscal year, thereby greatly reducing the upward pressure on prices, and lowering the increasing cost of living. Let us remember the reduction in spending that took place in 1962. If the government cuts $250 million from its expenditure this year, it would be doing little more than the Conservative government did in 1962 when it cut its expenditures by $200 million in that fiscal year, during a period of three days. This can be done, and it is necessary that it be done immediately.

The second suggestion I have for controlling the escalating cost of living is to lower prices by increasing productivity. I urge the government, as I have done on many occasions in the past, to bring in tax incentives in order to interest industry in this country to invest in new plant, machinery, and production systems, necessary to cut the cost of production, materially and lower the selling price of goods. This could be done if the government introduced tax incentives. The cost to the treasury would be more than made up—many times over—in subsequent years as a result of greater sales abroad of Canadian products. The lower cost of production would make possible lower selling prices, and this could be brought about by greater productivity.

The third positive suggestion I make to the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) is that he approach the provinces immediately at a federal-provincial conference with the objective in mind of persuading the provinces to give the federal government the means to impose consumer credit restrictions. As we all know the public today is being bombarded with advertisements urging it to buy anything from a packet of pins to a red convertible, with little or no down payment, and several years to pay. In other words the public today is spending a vast amount of money it does not possess.

We all agree that credit is very necessary to our economy, and reasonable credit should be made available. What I suggest is that unreasonable or ridiculous credit should be avoided. A down payment of at least 25 per cent should be required on purchases that are reasonable, and a payoff period should be allowed depending on the type of product. Today consumer spending is completely out of control, and vast sums of money are being spent that people in Canada do not possess.

This great increase in the purchasing power of the Canadian people is one of the things pushing up the cost of living. There are inflationary pressures because there is an overdemand for goods resulting from easy credit. As the governor of the Bank of Canada advised the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs a few days ago, consumer credit control would undoubtedly have been imposed by the federal authority in the past two years if the federal government had possessed the power.

At the present time the provincial governments possess that power, and they are as worried about inflation, and the increase in the cost of living, as we in the federal government. I am sure if the Prime Minister called the premiers together, and asked for the power to bring in credit restrictions, enforcing a provision that credit be advanced on reasonable terms, thereby reducing this upward trend in prices, the premiers would be glad to give the Prime Minister and the Minister of Finance this power.

My fourth suggestion to the government is that it should require the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, set up specifically to do this job, to protect the consumer against unfair prices for goods. This department has been in operation for some two years, but its record has been nil; it has not done the job it was set up to do, paid for by taxpayers' dollars. It has not required the producers in this country to keep their prices to the consumer at a reasonable level.

Let me suggest to the Prime Minister, who I am glad to see entering the house, although I am sorry he missed ten minutes of—

An hon. Member: He missed nothing.

Mr. Hees:—very constructive suggestions for which he asked, but which he obviously did not want or he would have been here on time. I say to the Prime Minister, now he has deigned to come into the house, that he should require his bumptious Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Basford) to do the job he is now being well paid to do, but is not doing. His only activity today seems to be to sprain his wrist once in a while patting himself on the back, as he has done so often in this house.

A good example of what the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs is not doing was referred to during the question period yesterday. He was asked by the hon. member for Wellington (Mr. Hales) whether it was the intention of his department to require bakers to pass on to consumers the savings that would immediately be made available to them as a result of the great reduction in the price of wheat. The minister refused to answer the question, signifying very clearly that he intends to do absolutely nothing about this situation, just as he has refused to do anything about requiring importers of goods resold to consumers to pass along the lower prices made possible as a result of tariff reductions brought into effect three years ahead of time. This minister seems to be content with making snide and smart aleck remarks, and doing absolutely nothing constructive.

I hope the Prime Minister will review my remarks in order to ascertain what has been done by this department. I think the members of the house would be interested in hearing an answer to the question regarding that. I think the answer must be nothing, and that the minister has no intention of doing anything.

Those are the four suggestions I put forward to control the increasing cost of living which, as I say, is presently going up at the rate of 10 per cent per year. Statistics indicate an increase in the cost of living month by month. This has been taking place during the last several months.

The recess of parliament is intended for today, and it is proposed that we will not come back until October 22. This means that the processes of parliament will be absolutely worthless for this unnecessary extended period of time. This government attempted to increase taxes and has met with failure on each occasion. It is now attempting to bring in measures that will prevent the opposition from criticizing its actions. The length of the debate now indicates that that policy is not working.

Evidence today demonstrates very clearly that the reduction of tariffs as a result of the Kennedy Round, implemented three years early, is having no results. This is because the minister will not take action requiring importers to pass on these reductions to the consumer. What the government has done has been absolutely useless. The only way we are going to get action from the government is by staying here, requiring the government to answer questions regarding the positive suggestions we put forward, and requiring it to take some action on behalf of the Canadian people.

• (2:20 p.m.)

Another problem that should be dealt with by parliament, and obviously can only be dealt with here because the government refuses to take action, is that of pollution. The President of the United States has set a very impressive example by personally heading their environmental quality council. On that council he has put all the senior members of his government. This is evidence of the fact that the President of the United States and the United States government consider this to be the No. 1 problem in that country. The problem is just as grave in Canada.

I have asked the Prime Minister on several occasions whether he will follow the good example of President Nixon, and he has simply said no. The Prime Minister could not care less about this problem. The water he uses at Harrington Lake is not polluted, and he does not give a hoot about the holidays and recreation of millions of Canadians being spoiled by pollution. He does not care that the beauties of our countryside are being spoiled because pollution is an extremely grave problem, and is becoming worse.

The government has produced absolutely nothing in the way of legislation requiring pollution to be controlled. It has not called the provincial premiers together to discuss what can be done on a co-operative basis. I repeat, Mr. Speaker, that the government has done absolutely nothing. I direct these remarks to the Prime Minister, who asks for positive suggestions and then is too occupied to listen to them. He could not care less whether or not parliament meets.

We need a national pollution policy for this reason: It is very difficult for a province to bring in good, tough legislation requiring municipalities to instal the type of machinery costly machinery necessary to deal with pollution. Legislation must be enacted which deals with this problem on provincial borders. For instance if Ontario were to enact a tough law, industries from other countries that might be settling in Canada and looking for a place in which to establish a factory might say, "We shall not go to Ontario because they have tough laws with regard to pollution; therefore we had better go to Quebec, Manitoba, Nova Scotia or somewhere else."

If we are to have the kind of legislation that is necessary to require industries and municipalities to instal the type of machinery that will remove bacteria from waste before it is released into the environment, it must be a national law which applies equally to industries and municipalities in all parts of the country. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister is responsible—as is President Nixon, who has accepted the responsibility—for calling together the provincial premiers and proposing to them that there be a national law requiring pollution control in their provinces.

The provinces know that a national law is the only thing that will be effective in this area; therefore they would welcome this kind of invitation. But the Prime Minister could not care less. He will not invite the provincial premiers to Ottawa to discuss this matter and put into effect an anti-pollution law. He cannot be bothered. He wants to talk about the constitution and matters of the classroom. As the former deputy prime minister, the hon. member for Trinity (Mr. Hellyer), said before he was forced to resign because he could no longer stomach the sort of thing that occurs in the cabinet, the Prime Minister is not interested in the practical problems that today plague the average Canadian. He is interested only in matters of the classroom, I suggest to the Prime Minister that now is the time to get out of the classroom, to call together the provincial premiers and suggest that they give him the power to pass a national anti-pollution law.

Mr. Trudeau: I am listening.

Mr. Hees: I hope you are. This is the first sign of life that I have seen in the Prime Minister. Perhaps it is not too late, if he is listening. Very seldom does he listen in the house. He likes talking, but not listening. The Prime Minister should do what was done by parliament in wartime to make it easy for industries to get into the production of war materials.

Mr. Trudeau: Declare war.

Mr. Hees: Declare war on pollution, you bet your sweet life. And let us see you do it, instead of sitting in your seat and doing nothing. To make it easy for industries to get into war production the government of the day made available to industry low interest loans, very fast write-offs, and other inducements. The machinery that industry and municipalities must invest in, in order to take the bacteria out of waste, is very expensive. I suggest to the Prime Minister that he make this move as a means of helping industry and municipalities to do something to solve the problem. Nothing will be done if we simply keep talking of pollution the same as we talk about the weather.

The Prime Minister has to do three things. He has to call the provincial premiers together. I see that the Prime Minister is making notes on a little pad. I will give him time to write down that suggestion. I am speaking through you, Mr. Speaker.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Hees: The Prime Minister must persuade the provincial premiers to give him the power—they will do this readily because they are anxious to solve the problem—to pass a national anti-pollution law which will make conditions in all provinces the same, and then there will be no question of industry going to another province if the regulations with regard to pollution are not so difficult there. In addition the Prime Minister should make low interest rate loans available to industry and municipalities, and fast write-offs. If he does that, he will be taking a good step forward.

I now wish to speak about the matter of poverty in this country. Last August, nearly a year ago, the Economic Council of Canada made available a very valuable report to the Canadian people and the government. It devoted 38 pages to the question of poverty, which it described as a national disgrace. When the Prime Minister was asked whether he agreed with that description he said yes. So the Prime Minister knows that poverty in this country is a national disgrace. The government admits it is a national disgrace, and it came into power pledged to bring in the just society, which should include the elimination of poverty.

On September 13 of last year I asked the Prime Minister whether he would consider increasing the federal minimum wage as an example and inducement to the provincial governments to follow suit and bring minimum wages up to a reasonable level. This is very necessary because, as the report of the Economic Council of Canada pointed out very clearly, poverty does not exist to the greatest extent with people who are on welfare. Those people are usually maintained just above the poverty level. The report pointed out that those suffering poverty in this country are for the most part living on minimum wages, which vary across Canada from 80 cents an hour to $1.30 an hour.

The Prime Minister is making some motions about the time. I am glad that for once he is paying attention to what we have to say. I ask the Prime Minister not to worry about the time; I will look after that. My time is not up; I have a few more minutes, have I not, Mr. Speaker?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. If it is of any help to the house I would inform hon. members that I am watching the time quite closely. The hon. member still has three minutes.

[Mr. Hees.]

Mr. Trudeau: Mr. Speaker, I apologize, but I was not drawing the hon. member's attention to the time he had, but to the time I have—and I have no more time to listen to him.

Mr. Hees: Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister came into the house for just a short while today. That is quite a concession on his part because he hates the place, as he demonstrated last night. I am glad he came into the chamber for just a short time today. I hope he will accept the very sound, practical suggestions I have made regarding what the government must do in order to solve the problem of pollution.

• (2:30 p.m.)

The Minister of Labour (Mr. Mackasey), who is the self-styled Babe Ruth of the bargaining table, appears on television every once in a while, takes a bow and announces proudly that he has engineered a wage settlement for a strong, powerful union, giving that union about a 10 per cent increase each year. He takes a bow and says that he is very pleased and proud to do so.

But the people on minimum wages for whom this government is responsible, the people in federally controlled industries who work on minimum wages, and of whom there are many thousands, are receiving a wage of $1.25 an hour which was set more than four years ago. Since that time the cost of living has increased by no less than 17 per cent. What does the government expect these people to do, tighten their belts by 17 per cent? That is exactly what it expects them to do. Their idea of the just society is to give fat and well justified raises each year to strong industries because these industries can make trouble for them by going on strike. But they sit back and do nothing for the people who are weak and not organized, who live on minimum wages and who suffer poverty which the Prime Minister agrees is a national disgrace.

All they do is watch the cost of living go up by no less than 17 per cent in four years, and do absolutely nothing about it. That proves what a bunch of phonies they are. So much for their just society. I want to know what the government are going to do about that. I say they should immediately raise the minimum wage so that it would more than compensate for the increase in the cost of living that has taken place in the last four years, and show they mean what they said during the election, namely, that they would bring in a just society.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I regret to interrupt the hon. member but his time has expired. I know the hon. member is anxious to continue but he can do so only with the unanimous consent of the house.

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Apparently there is no unanimous consent.

Mr. Hees: I have given you all the lesson you can absorb.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Prior to recognizing the hon. member for Saskatoon-Biggar (Mr. Gleave) I might perhaps express the misgiving I have. It seems to me that we are getting more and more into what amounts to a budget debate or an address debate, and I think all hon. members appreciate the difficulty in maintaining relevance to an adjournment motion. I appeal however to hon. members to try to relate their remarks to the motion before the house.

Mr. A. P. Gleave (Saskatoon-Biggar): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate your admonition that our comments should be relevant to the motion. That is not very difficult. There are all kinds of arguments and reasons why we should assemble again here on September 22 instead of in October. First there is the business of this nation which is crying for attention, and there are economic circumstances that exist in both western and eastern Canada and which can only be described as unfinished business so far as this house is concerned.

We have spent the better part of a month discussing a procedural question, and the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) himself charged the opposition with being stupid even to discuss it. So if we were stupid to discuss it, I wonder what one can say about the government which brought it in. As a result this month, which could have usefully been used to deal with some of the real problems that exist, has been lost. What should have been done has been left undone.

Surely the Prime Minister cannot be unaware of the circumstances existing in western Canada. He went out to have a look, and the people there made him very welcome. If he is out there again on September 22 I am sure they will make him welcome again, because I suspect that the government will have done no more in regard to the conditions that face the western farmer by September 22 than they have done up to this day in July. We have had no report from the Prime Minister since we came back. He has not chosen to rise in his place in the house and say, "This is what I saw when I went to visit the people in Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Alberta." He did rise today and in the course of his address told the leaders of two opposition parties what he thinks of the kind of shop that they ran when they were in their provinces. I have some sympathy for him and I am sorry that he came to Saskatchewan at the particular time and under the particular circumstances which he did. We have suffered a Liberal government for some five years in that province and what the Prime Minister was seeing were the results of that administration.

All we see is the ineptitude of the federal Liberal government in its marketing policy, as is evidenced in the present situation of western grain farmers. I can understand why his impressions were as they were.

The reason for the real urgency in meeting again a month ahead of the date suggested by the government is that we may have some report on what has been accomplished in regard to the very serious difficulties that face Saskatchewan and western Canada.

Let me point out that as of October 22 we will be about ten days short of a quarter of the new crop year in marketing western grain. We start on that crop year on August 1, and there is no indication from the government, either through the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Olson), the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce (Mr. Pepin) or the Prime Minister that they are aware of the depth of the problem in the marketing of western grain. I am speaking not only of wheat. I am speaking also of barley, flax, and rapeseed. There is no indication as yet that the government are aware of the magnitude of the problem they face or that they have put in motion the machinery to deal with that problem. If they have done so, they have not told this house.

The Prime Minister expressed his contempt for the opposition, and for individual members of the opposition. Perhaps this is why he has not felt it necessary to inform people such as myself, who were elected by the voters in Saskatchewan, and who are backbenchers, how the government intends to deal with the problem. He referred to us as nobodies. Fortunately I do not mind it because I know the traditions of this house, and the parliamentary traditions that went before it.

I know to whom I am responsible. I am not responsible to the Prime Minister. Perhaps some of the unfortunate individuals sitting on the other side of the house are, but I am not. I am responsible to the people of Saskatoon-Biggar, and as long as they return me to this house I shall stand in my place and speak on their behalf. I want to tell the government that I have not that much confidence in them that I am willing to wait until October 22 to see what they have done for and to the people of Saskatoon-Biggar.

• (2:40 p.m.)

I have here two reports, one from the meeting between the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) and the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool, and one from his meeting with the National Farmers Union. These reports represent what these two organizations have chosen to send out following the meetings. One would look in vain in either of them for any reference to an in-depth discussion or study of the problems of marketing grain on the world markets of today. This is a time at which the International Grains Arrangement is in danger of collapse. Indeed, it has collapsed as far as minimum prices are concerned. The nations which have signed it, responsible nations which have been content to seize the benefits which they have received under the GATT negotiations, have disowned it. They now say to the Canadian grain growers: It is too bad; yet we are putting up with it and the government is putting up with it.

Why do we not have the courage to stand as a nation and say: A bargain is a bargain? Does the government not have the courage, using the Wheat Board and the other instruments at hand to go into the markets of the world and get our share of those markets? Hon. gentlemen opposite do not have that kind of courage or that kind of initiative. They are willing to let the thing go down the drain. If this is not the situation, this house has been told nothing to the contrary.

Other nations sell wheat and barley. What prices should we sell at? We have asked the minister these questions but have been given no firm answer except that present policy will continue. If we have failed by doing what we are doing at the present time, why do we not set about doing things differently? These are the questions: what prices, what volume, how fast will our stocks move? I do not want to wait until October 22 to learn the answers. When they appeared before the standing committee, the officials of the Canadian Wheat Board were asked about promotion programs, the adequacy of their staff and the countries they intended to approach with a view to sales. The answers were not encouraging. When asked about price differentials between ourselves and our competitors, they had to say we were at a disadvantage. Is this disadvantage being corrected?

I do not mind diversification being discussed with western farmers. Some of us will diversify. A great deal is being done in this direction now. But diversification alone is not the answer. The problem facing western Canada is, first of all, a marketing problem, and it is not being met. At the beginning of the new crop year there is no sign that it will be met, any more than the transportation problem is being met. The transportation of western grain during the past year has been a disgrace to the efficiency of the Canadian nation. We are reaching the end of the crop year when a five-bushel quota will be set up at most of these stations. They are running box cars up and down the country as fast as they can these days, but the situation is still confused. Some farmers will get their quota in, and others will not. Confusion is all we are offered, yet communications are the very lifeline of this nation.

The Prime Minister sneers at Saskatchewan. In 1964 when the Liberal government was elected in Saskatchewan, they took office in a province which had been well governed for 20 years and which understood what communications were about. We had a grid road system through the municipalities and on to the highways. It was modern and up to date. We had placed power in most of the farms. We had provided assistance for the modernization of farms so that living conditions might be comparable to those in the cities.

Mr. Cullen: Will the hon. member permit a question?

Mr. Gleave: Yes. No, I do not think so, Mr. Speaker.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Gleave: Well, I have changed my mind. It is my time, and I intend to use it. I notice that members on the other side have repeatedly refused the normal courtesy of allowing some of our members to continue their speeches, so I shall not permit a question.

It is this forward look in terms of communication and transportation which the present administration needs.

Last fall, immediately after the election, there was a grain handlers' strike in western Canada. It was settled on the eve of the date on which this house met. Why? Because if it had not been settled the government would have been obliged to answer questions about a situation which was totally unsatisfactory. One right which still remains in this house despite 75c is the right of the people back home to have somebody representing them here who will speak on their behalf and demand that the government shall answer. This is what parliament is all about.

The Standing Committee on Agriculture made certain recommendations in its report. It might as well have stayed at home. The Minister of Agriculture says we have met these recommendations—that the introduction of cash advances will mean the injection of many millions of dollars into the western economy. Do the Minister of Agriculture and the members of the house not know that not one extra dollar will be available to the individual as a result of these cash advance payments? I could have taken exactly the same amount of money by way of cash advance on August 1, 1968, as I can take on August 1 of this year.

• (2:50 p.m.)

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. I am sorry to interrupt the hon. member but may I again express some misgivings about the range of this debate. I have been very patient and have listened to him with great interest, but may I remind him that we are discussing an adjournment motion. I would ask him to relate his remarks about agriculture as much as possible to the need for deciding whether the house should reconvene on September 22 or October 22. I appreciate his difficulty but I invite his co-operation.

Mr. Gleave: I would have to admit that I am straying a little from the motion, but these matters are urgent. That is what concerns me about setting back the time for returning. Matters that could have been dealt with before now will not be dealt with until October 22 if this amendment is defeated. Thus there will be this much more delay and time for dallying on the part of the government. This much more time will be lost for taking effective decisions, and time is of the essence under these circumstances.

I have said what I want to say on this adjournment debate. My point is that the needs of the people of this nation, and particularly of those in the area I represent, are not being met. The standing committee on agriculture toured eastern Canada; I am sure the farmers there are only a little better off than western farmers, though some might not even be as well off. Perhaps I should make a plea for them too. My direct concern, of course, is with the area I represent.

I will stop at this point, Mr. Speaker, since I know from the tone of the Prime Minister's address this morning that it is very unlikely that anything I say might cause him to change his mind.

Mr. Osler: Would the hon. member now permit a question?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Would the hon. member for Saskatoon-Biggar permit a question?

Mr. Gleave: Yes.

Mr. Osler: It is not a very important question, but when the hon. member was discussing the role of the ex-premier of Saskatchewan, whose government may or may not have been an excellent one, I was not clear whether the hon. member was relating the length of those legislative sessions to the excellence of the government. That seems to me the point that had been discussed earlier. Did the ex-premier acquire excellence only because his legislature had long sessions, or did he acquire excellence as a result of his skill and ability, which have nothing to do with the length of sessions?

Mr. Gleave: I am very pleased that the hon. member opposite concedes that the former premier of Saskatchewan achieved excellence. He achieved that excellence not because of time but because of ability and imagination.

Mr. Ray Perrault (Burnaby-Seymour): Mr. Speaker, it is not my intention to be provocative today; nor is it my intention to be long. I do not want to prolong this debate, but some statements have been made that should be answered by those of us who occupy the government back benches.

I am sorry the hon. member for Prince Edward-Hastings (Mr. Hees) is not in the house, because he certainly propounded a new theorem this afternoon in that the profundity of his remarks varied indirectly in ratio to the decibel volume of his voice. We thought this afternoon that we were to be treated to a description of what the policies of the Official Opposition would be were they to be entrusted with the responsibility of government. We were told that the government should cut expenditures and fight inflation, but time did not permit the hon. member to delineate those areas where certain programs should be curtailed and money saved. Then a few minutes later we were told that more money must be spent on pollution, that we should have a national pollution policy. The burden of the hon. member's remarks rested on those two concepts—first of all, that we have to cut budgetary expenditure, and secondly that we have to spend more money fighting pollution.

I do not think the hon. member made a constructive contribution to the debate, especially in view of the fact that the debate relates to whether or not the proposed recess should extend until October 22. It is unfortunate that when he was a member of a previous government the hon. member for Prince Edward-Hastings was unable to produce the kind of action that he is advocating today. It is unfortunate that the party whose leader is an exponent of retroactive justice is not as skilful in developing retroactive policies. It is likewise unfortunate that many of the events that occurred between 1957 and 1962 cannot be undone.

I do not want to continue in this vein. Rather, I want to read to the house some quotations from the debates of the Nova Scotia house of assembly when the Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition (Mr. Stanfield) was premier. I should like to put on record what he said when answering opposition criticisms that he had failed to develop constructive policies, that he had failed to take sufficient, effective action in time. As reported at page 107 of the 1967 debates he said:

> I am sure that any member of the house can present a list of projects which are desirable and important. Any member can stand in his place and say that this should be done and that should be done, but our resources are limited in comparison to the needs to be met, yes, inadequate in comparison to the needs to be met.

Then when he was accused of failing to provide sufficient programs at the session in 1967, he said:

> Time will tell . . . I suggest that we are certainly not meeting all the needs, but we have tried to allocate the resources that are available toward the most pressing needs in an effort to produce the most beneficial results that we can offer our province and its people.

The hon. gentleman went on to point out that not everything can be accomplished in one short session. Then he continued—and this is a truism of anyone who occupies a position of government:

> —even this government cannot please anybody.

[Mr. Perrault.]

It is clear, I suggest, that when he had the responsibility for government he recognized the need for time for long-range planning. This is what he was asking the opposition to understand in the Nova Scotia house, and he should surely be just as understanding now when he occupies such an important position in the House of Commons.

In the one breath we heard the opposition complain about too short a recess. They alleged we should have recessed a month ago. In the next breath they complain the recess will be too long, that we are obsessed with plans for taking holidays. These are the arguments we have been hearing in recent days. What they do not tell the Canadian people is that almost all of them have had extensive vacations during the rules debate. Their system of triple platooning for vacation purposes would make the Green Bay Packers look like a Little League squad. This talk about selfless dedication to parliament, while many of them have sampled vacation delights around the country, is really quite laughable as far as government members are concerned, and I think the people of Canada will understand.

Speaking about the recess, legions of opposition members rise in their places to remind us that this has been the most productive parliament in the history of Canada. Member after member of the New Democratic and Conservative parties has made orations in this house to this effect. They ask why we need rule 75c since this is the most productive parliament in history. But somewhere down the line their ideological mores have become short circuited. The leader of the New Democratic party (Mr. Douglas) today accused the government of being a "do-nothing" government, one devoid of ideas. He suggested we were cowering in fear that our legislative nakedness would be exposed if the house were to meet earlier than October 22. These two concepts, of course, are not mutually compatible. You cannot be the most productive government in the history of Canada, with more legislation going through in a given number of days than in the past, and be a "do-nothing" government.

• (3:00 p.m.)

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): On a question of privilege, Mr. Speaker. I have no objection to this bag of fetid wind continuing this kind of speech, but I am not going to allow him to put words in my mouth or in the mouth of any other member of this party. We have said it has been a productive session in terms of co-operation.

We never referred to it as being a productive session in terms of bringing down solutions to problems which face this country.

Mr. Perrault: I could cite numerous references in Hansard where specific members of the opposition stated, this has been one of the most productive sessions in the history of Canada. I am prepared to send these quotations to the leader of the New Democratic party before the adjournment of the house. The fact is, of course, that this has been a productive government with more being accomplished in a shorter period of time than in any other period in our history.

A recess does not mean we are going to hang up the sign, "Gone fishing". It does not mean the shop is closed. It means unprecedented work on parliament hill on many of the problems which have been referred to by opposition members today. There will be a great deal of action in the weeks to come. On the one hand we hear the charge that the government is trying to ram through too much legislation on too restricted a schedule. On the other hand, the government is accused of having nothing to advance. I say the poverty of the logic is manifest.

I had the record of the dates of the recesses of parliament drawn a few moments ago. The dates of the recesses and resumption are as follows: 1957, December 21, to January 3, 1958; 1958, none; 1959, none; 1960, April 13 to April 25, and December 21 to January 16, 1961; 1961, July 13 to September 7; 1962, December 20 to January 31, 1963; 1963, August 2 to September 30; 1964, December 18 to February 16, 1965.

Almost all of these were short recesses, yet this government which proposes a longer recess in also the government which the opposition credits with getting more done than any other government in the history of Canada in a given period of time. During the three month recess much will be done by members of all parties, both here in Ottawa and at the constituency level. The argument the opposition provides is one of the most unusual than can possibly be developed with regard to a recess.

Mr. Robert Coates (Cumberland-Colchester North): Mr. Speaker, we have viewed quite an exhibition here today. Probably most members have never seen anything like this in many, many years. During my 12 years in this chamber I have never seen such a scurrilous attack make on leaders of every opposition party as that produced by the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) today. One immediately asks the question, why has the Prime Minister adopted such an attitude? I can arrive at two quick and immediate conclusions. The first is that the Prime Minister and his government are running like a bunch of scalded cats because of the attitude they have adopted with regard to Rule 75c. The second is that since they have secured through closure the passage of Rule 75c, they no longer feel they need the co-operation of the opposition parties in order to run parliament. They are going to run it as a one-man show.

We do not believe that parliament is the prerogative and the soul right of the Prime Minister. We are willing to come back here on September 22 and endeavour, on behalf of the people who have sent us here, to secure the kind of action that those people need, must have and have not received to the present time. We are going to see that the government is well aware of our determination to serve our country and serve it well in the House of Commons.

I can well understand the approach of the Prime Minister is this debate. I have before me a copy of today's Globe and Mail, Friday, July 25. There is a very significant cartoon in that paper. It shows a picture, that I assume is a picture of the Prime Minister, through the eyes of the cartoonist. He has these words to say. First, "I have silenced my cabinet". This has been done very effectively with the roster system. Then he says, "I have silenced my party". There was never any great doubt about that. Third, "And now, that stupid opposition". Fourth, "Nobody says anything anymore". He is deaf because he will not hear and is not here. Fifth, "In Parliament" and, sixth, "I might as well do away with it". He has been endeavouring to do his best to "do away with it".

There have been a lot of comments about Caesar and Little Caesar. As far as parliament is concerned, I think it is an institution for which Brutus would be better suited than Caesar. In his remarks the Prime Minister made comments about the conduct of both my leader and the leader of the New Democratic Party during their tenure as premiers of provinces of this country. He made some statements about the performance of Robert Stanfield as Premier of Nova Scotia. I will not bother to go into the details of the Prime Minister's argument, but I will say that during the period that Robert Stanfield was leader of the Conservative Party in Nova Scotia, every time he went to the polls the people gave him a greater endorsation than they did the time before. I am quite willing to leave it to the people of Nova Scotia to determine the kind of performance which Robert Stanfield produced for the people of that province.

• (3:10 p.m.)

If the Prime Minister has any thoughts about Mr. Stanfield's performance in Nova Scotia, he should look at the election results of June 25, 1968, not just in Nova Scotia where one Liberal barely managed to squeak through, but throughout the Atlantic provinces especially Newfoundland which has had a Liberal government for the past 21 years. No, Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister did not enter this debate because he was concerned about the way in which the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield) performed when he was Premier of Nova Scotia. He entered this debate because he was trying to put some backbone in the backbenchers of his party who will have to go home and during the next three months try to explain to their constituents why this guillotine is necessary in this parliament, and why they sat back and said nothing. I want to say to the Liberal members of parliament that the Prime Minister said members of the opposition do not wish to leave parliament because when they get 50 yards away from the House of Commons they are nobodies. Let me say that he has twisted this statement. Liberal backbenchers cannot even hope to achieve this position because they are faceless, nameless robots. When the button is pushed to support the Prime Minister, who is all but a dictator in every way, shape and form, they jump.

If we are forced to spend three months away from the House of Commons, we will do our work. We will see that the people of this nation are made well aware of the type of performance that has taken place—not throughout this session because this was a good session until July—prior to June 27. It was a good session. It operated in harmony and co-operation. It was a session that moved on whatever legislation the government brought forward. I do not say that the legislation introduced was necessarily the type of legislation that would receive top priority by the opposition parties. What I am saying, however, is that what legislation was proposed was dealt with constructively, reasonably and efficiently.

Never let it be said, Mr. Speaker, that this was the most productive session in the history of parliament so far as the Canadian people are concerned. But it can be said to be one of the most productive sessions in the history of parliament so far as the government is concerned in respect of the legislation to which it gave priority. But there is a great difference. We in the Atlantic provinces would like to come back here on September 22 with the hope this government might take some action that would be of value and benefit to our people. Every day we see statistics which indicate that unemployment is escalating, that the cost of living is escalating and that there is nothing for the people of the area which is better today than it was yesterday. Indeed, almost everywhere we look we see indicators which lead us to believe it will be a pretty tough winter for everybody in this country, especially those hundreds of thousands of people who will not be able to find employment. We should be here endeavouring to pass the type of legislation that will give some hope to the hundreds of thousands of people who will not be able to find employment. But instead, we are to be in our constituencies because the Prime Minister has deemed it so.

I say to Liberal backbenchers that things have not changed a great deal. During the pipeline debate of 1956, when the Liberal government brought in closure, the Liberal backbenchers were singing, "Hail, hail the gang's all here, what the hell do we care". They have not been doing such singing this time. I say to them that when the next election comes along they will be in the same position in which they were in 1956 and 1957. It will be the end of a government that is doing its best to eliminate completely any kind of criticism.

The Prime Minister really has not changed, Mr. Speaker. When he was Minister of Justice in 1968 he rose in this house and told members of the opposition that the members of the government were the masters of this house. Today, he says they are the masters of this house, and even more. He says they will not even bother having a house. He says we will meet as little as possible because, after all in his opinion the debates are stupid and most of the members are either bums or idiots.

The attitude of the Prime Minister is that he would just as soon be away in his ivory tower dreaming dreams of things which might be accomplished in some way other than by having to put up with the inconvenience of parliament. He has now regimented his cabinet ministers so that they only dare appear in the House of Commons on certain days. The Prime Minister said that when the members of the opposition leave the house they upgrade the I.Q. of this chamber. Apparently he has also reached the conclusion that if he can get some of the cabinet ministers out of the house he can upgrade the I.Q. of the cabinet. He probably believes that, since he has a roster system now the cabinet ministers are not much of a problem, and since he has regional desks the backbenchers are not much of a problem. It is not necessary for him to find out from the backbenchers what is going on in given areas of the country. All he need do is go to his regional desks to find out what is happening and where it is happening.

All I can say to the Prime Minister is that his computers and regional desks did not work very effectively when he made his trip out west. He failed so badly when he went out west that he has not yet recovered, and probably never will. I suppose the Prime Minister believes that since he has the roster system and the regional desks, there is only one thing more he really needs and that is the guillotine. Then he can handle the obnoxious members of parliament who give him difficulty by asking many questions which he cannot answer.

An hon. Member: These nobodies.

Mr. Coates: Yes, these nobodies. Members of the opposition do not need to get 50 yards from the House of Commons to become nobodies; they are nobodies every day.

Mr. Muir (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): What does this make the people who voted for Trudeau?

Mr. Coates: We now have a new kind of parliament for the Canadian people to see, completely different from the parliament that was elected on June 25, 1968. It is different from the parliament the Prime Minister led the people to believe would be in existence after June 25, 1968. It is a parliament devoid of democracy. It is not interested in democracy and is not interested in the type of action that is required for the benefit of the people of Canada. We, from the Atlantic provinces, listened with interest, and more than passing interest, to the comments of the Prime Minister during the election campaign about regional economic disparity and about the just society. We had some hope that when he was elected Prime Minister legislation might be introduced that would be of benefit to the Atlantic provinces and would eliminate the chronic problem that has been with us throughout generations. So, we from the Atlantic provinces came to Ottawa in anxious anticipation of what might be presented to parliament to correct the economic imbalance in this nation.

• (3:20 p.m.)

We heard the throne speech debate. We listened to the grave words associated with the establishment of the new Department of Regional Economic Expansion. We had hopes, but we find now that we had nothing but hopes because no action has been taken in the Atlantic provinces which would make us believe that times might be better tomorrow than they were yesterday. One of the first actions taken by this government was the cancellation of the Northumberland Strait Crossing, a transportation link that has been promised since Confederation. The former Liberal government initiated some construction on this project, but this government cancelled it.

Today, we are beset with concern in respect of the possibilities of the base consolidation program of the Department of National Defence. We do not know what is going to happen. We have been given an assurance by the Minister of National Defence (Mr. Cadieux) that every possible consideration will be given to these people. The minister is a good man, and I personally have faith in his honesty and integrity, but we will not be here to find out what happened. It may be, as the minister indicated in the house, the various members affected by this consolidation program will be informed; but surely this is the type of program which parliament itself should consider. Parliament should be sitting in hopes that some solutions might be proposed to offset the economic hardships that follow a decision of this nature.

The Prime Minister says we will not be here when this decision is made. He says we are going to go home and we are going to stay at home until October 22, like it or not. We suggest that anything which might be discovered in 2½ months should not require another month for consideration. There is no reason for members to be away from the House of Commons for such a long period of time, particularly when some action is required by the country. The hon. member who preceded me referred in his remarks to parliament in recent days. Certainly, in the 12 years I have been a member of this house members have never been asked to take a recess for such an extended period of time.

If there was ever a time in the history of this country when parliament should be here it is now, when the economic difficulties facing this country are so significant. They are so foreboding and frightening that no one could have any confidence in a government that has talked more and done nothing to face up to the realities associated with inflation and economic hardship.

The Prime Minister will accomplish little or nothing for anyone, including the backbenchers—certainly nothing for the office which he holds, or the people of Canada—by the type of performance we witnessed today. Certainly, he did nothing for the dignity of this country. Let him now take notice that there is nothing to be accomplished by getting into the gutter. There is no one in the opposition who is going to get into the gutter with him; if he wants to be there, he will be there by himself. We are not going with him.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Coates: I was utterly shocked to hear in this chamber, where there has always been evidence of that degree of respect hon. members have had for each other, the Prime Minister gratuitously and without reason say to a colleague of mine, who is a good man, a tough man fighting for his constituents, that he is no gentleman. That is about as low as anyone can get. We are not willing to get that low or go down into the gutter with the Prime Minister.

Mr. Muir (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): That hon. member also fought for his country.

Mr. Coates: His war record alone stands as something the Prime Minister should consider. This is an indication of the kind of day we have had. I was not here on "black Friday" in 1956, but this is another black Friday in parliament.

Mr. Perrault: Mr. Speaker, would the hon. member entertain a question?

Mr. Coates: Sure.

Mr. Perrault: Mr. Speaker, would the hon. member tell the house who was the premier of Nova Scotia when the heavy water plant at Glace Bay was started?

Mr. Coates: At that time in Nova Scotia—

Mr. Perrault: I should like the hon. member—

Some hon. Members: Wait for the answer.

[Mr. Coates.]

Mr. Coates: If you will sit down I will answer the question.

Mr. Muir (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): The Prime Minister doesn't even know him. He is one of his bums and idiots.

Mr. Coates: Mr. Speaker, I suggest that it was the present Minister of Manpower and Immigration (Mr. MacEachen) who took credit in all the newspapers in which he could have his name printed for allocating the power plant to Nova Scotia.

Mr. Perrault: I asked the hon. member to tell the house who the premier of the province of Nova Scotia was when the Glace Bay project was implemented.

Mr. J. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa-Whitby): Mr. Speaker, being a mere backbencher of a minority party, after hearing the Prime Minister's (Mr. Trudeau) harangue today, I hesitate to get to my feet. The only consolation I have is that for some peculiar reason the Prime Minister gives more status to a mere nullity in the House of Commons than a member once he is outside this house. Once I leave this place and I am 50 yards down the street I am according to the Prime Minister a nonentity. Perhaps there is something in favour of being a nullity rather than a nonentity, at least by the Prime Minister's reasoning.

I found the entire speech of the Prime Minister extremely distasteful in tone, even if it contained a series of arguments which have to be taken seriously. Let me refer to one or two of the statements the Prime Minister made. He referred to the period of time we should adjourn for the summer. The tone of his argument in this respect was extremely, intellectually arrogant. His was the kind of argument one should not make during the normal discourse or conversation between civilized adults. Certainly, it should not have been made by the Prime Minister of a democratic country.

The attitude the Prime Minister took in respect of the leader of the Ralliement Créditiste (Mr. Caouette) was very reprehensible. It is one thing to disagree with an individual's ideas and say that in your judgment he is mistaken, but it is quite another thing to call that person a fool. I suggest that is exactly what the Prime Minister did today. This attitude, considering the whole history of democracy even back to the times of Athenian Greece, is extremely unpleasant. I hoped that the attitude of the right hon. gentleman would change when he became Prime Minister. I hoped he would display a little more modesty and a little less of the assumption that he knows all the answers and other people are not likely to know them, especially the backbenchers of his party on mere members of the opposition. I believe that by his speech today he did a disservice to himself, both as an intellectual and as Prime Minister of this country. I shall not say anything more about his attitude because I want to deal with the substance of his speech before making my own comments.

• (3:30 p.m.)

As I understood it, the substance of the Prime Minister's argument was that the government needs a recess of three months in order to prepare legislation for next session. He cited other legislative bodies, namely, those of the provinces of Nova Scotia and Saskatchewan, which have in the past had extremely short sessions presumably, he argued, so that their cabinets would have time to prepare legislation. In one sense this is a good argument and should be considered seriously. My answer to it is twofold. One is that, as everyone knows, the sessions of provincial legislatures are becoming longer each year as the responsibilities of those governments become greater. The duration of the sessions of provincial legislatures is not becoming less but is in fact increasing. Therefore, one has to make a practical judgment about the length of time necessary to prepare legislation. The general trend is that the sessions of provincial legislatures are becoming longer.

The Prime Minister is entitled to make a judgment about the length of time this house is required to sit. On the other hand, we are entitled to make a judgment about the length of time required in this respect. Reference to the legislative experience of the provinces or other national governments is not directly relevant to the question. We have to consider the kind of legislation we want introduced in this country, and how much time should be allowed during the summer for its preparation.

The Prime Minister's argument seems to be that only during the summer months can the cabinet get together and work out its legislative program. I think this is ridiculous. Cabinet officials and civil servants work all year. What is true is that during a recess members of parliament are not in the House of Commons to raise serious questions and carry out serious work on legislative committees. That argument was explicitly put forward by the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Stanfield), the leader of my party and the leader of the Ralliement Créditiste. Their argument was that the government should be introducing legislation now. It has had, God knows, enough time to prepare legislation. It has had more than a year since the election in which to prepare meaningful legislation. We on this side of the house suggest that rather than taking another three months to dawdle and fiddle around, undertaking more studies, the government should be introducing legislation now. Members on both sides of the house should be dealing with meaningful legislation in our legislative committees.

Before I deal with what has not been done and what could be done if we returned to the house earlier than October 22, I wish to give a small amount of credit to the government for what it has done. During the past ten months we have passed two significant pieces of legislation, and two only. One was the languages bill and the other was the omnibus Criminal Code bill. In the main, both these bills were supported by all members of the house. They were old pieces of legislation in the sense that they were part of the Pearson program. I do not say that in criticism of the present government. The fact is that this is the only significant legislation with which we have dealt during the past ten months.

We have been dealing with legislation covering the kind of things in which the Prime Minister is interested. It is bound up with an area that I believe he takes seriously as a politician and as an intellectual. I refer to legislation dealing with civil liberties. The languages bill and the omnibus Criminal Code bill are very important because they bestow important rights on individual citizens. This is a subject to which the Prime Minister is committed because of his civil liberties orientation.

Since the 18th century all civilized people have had a commitment to civil liberties; there is nothing new about these principles. To some extent such legislation is new to this country, but it has been in existence in other countries for the last 200 years. The languages bill and the omnibus Criminal Code bill were necessary pieces of legislation, but I suggest they will benefit relatively few people. I do not say this to denigrate the legislation, but there are not millions of Canadians who are homosexuals; nor are there millions of Canadians who will be directly affected by the official languages bill. Those pieces of legislation are important, but they do not affect very many people.

What does profoundly affect the citizens of this country and people all over the world is socio-economic legislation, that is, legislation aimed directly at improving the material well-being of the average income and poor people in society. We have not done a damned thing in that regard. There have been tentative approaches to serious legislation in this area. We all recognize that there is a housing crisis. Every serious Canadian has known that for the past five years there has been a housing problem. What has this so-called progressive Liberal government done about the housing crisis? It has introduced a little tidbit of legislation which will benefit only those people earning more than $8,000 a year. It has not done anything to assist the poor people in our cities. It has not done anything about slum clearance. It has done nothing to assist the average working man who lives, for example, in a city such as mine who although being a prosperous Canadian, relatively speaking, cannot buy a house because of the high interest rates that are in effect. The government has done nothing for housing except effect a marginal improvement for middle class people. So much for the progressive Liberal party and what it has done to solve the housing problem.

What about taxation? The great reformer, Prime Minister Trudeau, introduced one piece of legislation dealing with taxation. He instituted the 2 per cent social development tax which is one of the most reactionary pieces of legislation presented to the House of Commons. We have no capital gains tax. There has been no revision of the tax structure to assist those people with families and earning $4,000 a year or less. So much for what the government has done to assist the poor and the average income man in this country.

The government introduced a good bill dealing with regional poverty. But what happened? The government allocated a pittance of funds for the program, enough to buy a newspaper for every poor Canadian but not much more. So we have a good bill but no meaningful action in terms of allocation of money. Then, there is the wheat situation. I shall not spend any time discussing that problem because in the last few months hon. members of my party and those of the Conservative party have demonstrated what a disastrous year farmers in the prairie provinces have had. Again, we have witnessed a very callous attitude on the part of the Prime Minister to the problem. No one is denying that the problem calls for a serious, long-range program. Statements have been made to wheat farmers, such as, "Look fellow; you will have to change your growing practices. It's too bad, but we don't sell your wheat". This is a callous attitude and should not be adopted towards any citizen of this country. It is one thing to say, "We must work out long-range programs", but quite another to say to a man, "You made a mistake; why don't you do something else, fellow?"

• (3:40 p.m.)

It is foolish and irresponsible to say to such a man: "You have $100,000 in capital equipment so you are not poor". It is absurd, when everyone knows that he can do nothing with that capital equipment. Who is going to buy it? Are there many people in my city or a city in the east likely to move west to buy one of those farms? Of course not! These statements seem to me to suggest an absence of constructive policies on the part of the government as well as a callous attitude.

One other item about which something should be done within the next couple of months is an increase in the pensions of the thousands of veterans in this country. The Woods report has been waiting around for many months now, a report upon which the government has decided not to act. Even some backbenchers in the Liberal party have said that this report should have been sent to an appropriate committee a long time ago and that action should have been taken on it. But this has not happened.

These are the five areas in which the government has either done nothing or has done something to benefit only those who are already well off. It seems to me inconceivable that people on the other side of the house should not see their government for what it is. It is the most conservative government we have had in Canada in 15 years. Any serious political scientist or economist describing the régime we now have would reach that conclusion, I am sure.

It seems to me that we are adjourning much too soon or, if we are to adjourn now we should come back in two months time. If the government is interested in something other than civil liberties, which are important, if it is interested in dealing with regional poverty, not only in the maritime provinces but also in the heart of our major cities in the so-called prosperous provinces of Ontario and British Columbia, if it wants to redistribute income, if it wants to help pensioners, whether they be veterans or simply our elderly citizens, then why do they not wish to come back here sooner, by the middle of September? This course would enable us to get on with some serious social and economic legislation which would provide substantial benefits for the average and poor Canadians?

Mr. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): As a member of this house representing one of the regionally dispossessed areas of Canada I am astonished, as I am sure the people I represent will be, that this parliament is on the verge of adjourning for three months when there are so many serious problems facing the country. We have been through a very critical session and, as has been said by many members who have participated in the debate on the rules, a very productive session. It is true that parliament will never be the same, but surely that is not to suggest that parliament no longer has a role to play.

I sat here today and listened with amazement to the speech of the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) when, as is often the case, he misconstrued our motives and indeed tried to impute motives. I could not believe my ears when I heard him say that perhaps one of the reasons we were opposing a long adjournment of three months was that we had some doubts about our status when we leave this place. Indeed, the Prime Minister suggested that we would no longer enjoy the distinction of being hon. members when this place adjourns.

In my view, this is indicative of the contempt in which the Prime Minister holds parliament, the utter contempt with which he has treated parliament, because the role of a member of parliament is a long and well established one. There are ample quotations on the record and authorities on this subject. Our responsibilities as members of parliament or as 264 ombudsmen are continuing responsibilities whether or not this house sits. Indeed, we are going to have even more responsibilities during this recess trying to justify to our constituents and to the Canadian people why, in the light of so many serious problems facing Canada, we allow ourselves to take a three months' recess.

The Prime Minister and the government house leader have had their way. We saw them last night as they appeared in the house, complete with white carnations, showing their utter disdain, which has been so characteristic, behaving like two bank robbers who apologize for having shot the teller because they had to get the money. They got their way. What they have done to parliament in the process only time will tell. Today, we witnessed the spectacle of the Prime Minister losing his cool, a quality which has come to be so characteristic of him. Indeed, we saw him representing himself as a great man, a great devotee of General de Gaulle whom he maligned in this house just a short time ago. But now it becomes fashionable for the Prime Minister, who loosely tosses out charges about hypocritical speeches and stupid filibusters, to behave in such a way as to leave himself open to this very type of accusation.

Perhaps it can be said of him that if he gets his way in this instance he will behave like a latter day Nero who is content to fiddle while Rome burns, because while parliament stands adjourned for three months not only do the serious problems facing this nation continue but they continue to escalate without solution. These problems will continue without reference to hon. members of this house who, whether or not the Prime Minister accepts the fact, have the responsibility of continuing to represent their constituents and to protect the national interest in the best way they can. How can I go back to my unemployed constituents and say I have three months off? They will look at me and say: We have 12 months off, the only difference is that you are getting $18,000 a year for it whereas in our case our unemployment insurance benefit expired long ago. We are relegated to having to get on our hands and knees, swallow our pride and beg for welfare from the state. What can I say to them? They are underhoused; in many instances they are under-nourished because of a lack of a proper diet, and they are over-governed. They have no opportunities and they are suffering the consequences of 20 years of unrestricted Liberal dictatorship as well as the type of arrogance that we saw manifested in this house in the last few days.

In the final analysis, these are the people who have to suffer the consequences of the arrogance of a government that has gone mad with power. I should like the Prime Minister to go to Newfoundland or to the Atlantic provinces and talk to the people who are regionally dispossessed, and who suffer the consequences of regional disparity through no fault of their own.

• (3:50 p.m.)

We are moderate people in the Atlantic provinces. We are reasonable people. But how much are reasonable people expected to put up with? Poverty continues to be a major problem in this country though the government continues to ignore it. Our people continue to suffer the consequences of spiralling inflation, of high interest rates, of the lack of adequate housing, of the lack of ability to buy suitable houses, of the lack of public housing. They are beginning to realize the serious consequences of pollution and the failure of the Government of Canada to meet its responsibilities in this direction. They know from personal experience what the rising cost of living means. The working people of this country and those living on fixed incomes not only in the region from which I come but from across Canada, in the cities and on the farms from coast to coast, know the consequences of the monthly increases in the cost of living index because they experience them on a day to day basis as they go to the store to buy provisions for their families. Can you blame them for thinking: surely, the government must be able to come to grips with these serious problems over which we have no control.

We have a government which is determined to operate in a parliament whose members have been relegated to a position of rubber stamps. Perhaps this is the reason the government insists on proceeding with its plan for a three month adjournment. Under the new rules, perhaps we can get up and make a few speeches but we shall no longer be able to directly influence measures which will be brought forward for enactment. We have already given up our traditional, ancient right to withhold supply to the government. It was a sad day, Mr. Speaker, when that right left us. But at least we gave it up voluntarily. We gave up some of our debating days, too. We gave these things up because we wanted to co-operate with the government in a spirit of goodwill. We wanted to co-operate with the government because at that time we had no reason to suspect that its intentions were anything but honourable. Now, this government stands indicted by its own action.

Sure, we can come back in September and meet in committees. If the committees are anything like the committees were this session, conducted by partisan chairmen and controlled by a government which only accepts reports with which it agrees, this exercise could easily and usefully be dispensed with. Parliament should be asked to come back in September, at least, to discuss even on the basis of the limited power we now have, the serious problems facing the country.

The Atlantic provinces are passing through a crisis unparalleled in the history of confederation. The province from which I come is on the verge of a serious financial crisis. It is a well established fact that the same applies in the province of New Brunswick and in the province of Prince Edward Island. What is this government doing? It suggests parliament should take a three month recess and expects us to go back to our constituencies and defend this action. Members opposite may laugh and jeer because they got their way in this instance but I hope that when they have to face the unemployed, the badly housed and the poor in their constituencies they can find a good explanation for adjourning for three months. If they do, perhaps they will let us in on it, because I do not know what I shall say to the people I represent. What can I say to them? Nothing has been done by the government so far. They have been retrogressive steps. We see fish plants closing all over the place. We see advantages we have enjoyed in the past taken from us. We have lost the salt rebate. The fisheries are in a crisis. Yet the government sits by and does nothing. Perhaps the government wants parliament to adjourn for three months in order that it can prepare the country psychologically for what to expect—

Mr. Speaker: I have to interrupt the hon. member. It being four o'clock the house will now proceed to the consideration of private members' business, namely, private bills.

PRIVATE BILLS

LONDON AND MIDLAND GENERAL INSURANCE COMPANY

The house resumed from Thursday, March 13, consideration in committee of Bill No. C-101, respecting London and Midland General Insurance Company—Mr. Lind—Mr. Faulkner in the chair.

The Chairman: When the committee rose on Thursday, March 13, clause 1 of the bill was under consideration.

On clause 1—Change of name.

Mr. Lind: Mr. Chairman, this is a bill to change the name of the company concerned from London and Midland General Insurance Company to Avco General Insurance Company. The company does not desire to change its capitalization nor to make any corporate change other than the change in title.

I urge hon. members to accept the bill before us. The company has been doing business in Canada for a number of years, operating not only in Ontario but across Canada and it has rendered good service to Canadians. A few years ago the company was purchased by the Avco Delta Corporation. All the bill seeks to do is to change the name of the company from London and Midland General Insurance Company to Avco General Insurance Company.

• (4:00 p.m.)

Mr. Howard (Skeena): Mr. Chairman, something much more fundamental is involved in this bill than the mere purpose stated by the sponsor. True, on the surface, the intent is to change the name of the company. But what is of much more fundamental importance, something that has been explored on many occasions in the house, is the extent to which parliament is being asked to give formal endorsation to the concept of further inroads made by foreign capital into the Canadian economy, and whether it is desirable to accede to such request.

London and Midland General Insurance Company is not a simple, uncomplicated company with a Canadian structure, as the name would lead us to believe. It is a company that is involved in as large an international or multi-national corporate entity as exists anywhere, especially in the finance or insurance field.

When this bill was first considered before the committee, a Mr. David Alexandor, the parliamentary agent for the company, gave certain evidence. I should like to refer to that evidence to indicate the intricate involvement of London and Midland General Insurance Company in the finance and insurance world.

Mr. Alexandor initially explained, as did the sponsor of the bill, what appears on the surface of the bill to be its purpose. Then, he went on to make reference to Delta Acceptance Corporation, indicating that it was incorporated as a public company under the laws of Ontario on March 26, 1954. Then, in July 1962 Delta Acceptance Corporation Limited acquired all the outstanding share capital of London and Midland General Insurance Company. In other words, since 1962 London and Midland General Insurance Company ceased to be a Canadian company in the full sense of the word, and in fact became a wholly owned subsidiary of Delta Acceptance Corporation. Delta Acceptance Corporation subsequently changed its name to Avco Delta Corporation Canada Limited.

Perhaps, it would be worth while to set out, as did Mr. Alexandor, the extensions that Avco Delta Corporation has in the insurance, finance and other fields, in order to indicate we are not dealing here simply with a proposal to change a name. Perhaps I should read from the text what Mr. Alexandor said:

> In addition to London and Midland General Insurance Company the following companies are also subsidiaries of Avco Delta Corporation Canada Limited. Avco C.F.C. Limited which was formerly C.F.C. Finance Corporation Limited, Avco Delta Dominion Limited which was formerly Delta Acceptance Canada Limited, Avco Delta Quebec Limited, which was formerly called D.A.C. (Quebec) Ltd., Avco Finance Limited, which was formerly The Crescent Finance Corporation Limited, Avco Highland Plan Limited, which was formerly called Highland Trial Plan Limited, Avco Delta Realty Limited, which was formerly Grand Prairie Investments Limited, Adanac General Insurance Company of Canada, Avco Delta Realty, Manitoba, Limited, which was formerly called the North West Mortgage and Finance Company Limited, Consolidated Finance Western Limited, Empire Acceptance Corporation Limited, General Finance Company Limited, Lorne-Bruce Motors Limited and Waverly Finance Company Limited.

The latter company, Waverly Finance Company Limited, wishes, or at least wished at the time of the committee hearings, to make an application to change its name to Avco Security Canada Limited. Adanac General Insurance Company, which we are told by Mr. Alexandor conducts a very limited operation, will be wound up in a short time.

Then, Mr. Alexandor goes on to indicate further involvement of the other companies. He says:

> Four out of the last five companies named which were Consolidated Finance Western Limited, Empire Acceptance Corporation Limited, General Finance Company Limited and Lorne-Bruce Motors Limited are non-operating and it is intended to wind most of them up in the near future pending, for example, the distribution of a designated surplus, the maturing of debentures and the transferring of any old business still remaining. One or two of these companies are just corporate shells. Therefore, in effect, there are ten companies in this group which are operating at this time. All of these ten operating companies bear the name "Avco" in their corporate name except for Adanac General Insurance Company of Canada and London and Midland General Insurance Company.

I would like to point out that prior to the change of name of Delta Acceptance Corporation Limited to Avco Delta Corporation Canada Limited that Company became an almost wholly owned subsidiary of Avco Delta Corporation which is a Delaware company. This occurred in 1964. In turn, Avco Delta Corporation is a wholly owned subsidiary of Avco Corporation of New York. There is one other Canadian company using the name "Avco" which is not a subsidiary of what we call the parent company,—

Then, Mr. Alexandor goes into more detail. From that recitation of the company's corporate involvement we see very clearly that the purpose of changing the name of the company from London and Midland General Insurance Company is to tie the company more closely in a psychological way to the massive Avco Delta finance structure. In other words, the present name of the company is detrimental to Avco Delta, which seeks not only the continuation of the subsidiary position of what was at one time a Canadian company, but in addition to that to give the company the stamp of Avco's own corporate international or multi-national structure.

• (4:10 p.m.)

This brings us to the question of government policy as it relates to foreign ownership in the field of finance, in the field of insurance and to Canadian economic activity in general. London and Midland General Insurance Company is simply one facet of it. There has been ample dialogue in the country, ample discourse of ideas and ample expression by many people in Canada, about the necessity of taking some steps to halt and eventually reverse the trend toward a greater and greater domination of our Canadian economy by foreign interests. We all know that while foreign ownership presumably carries with it certain benefits, mainly the benefit of investment money in the nation, it also carries with it a far greater number of detrimental effects.

One of these is the siphoning out of the country by way of dividends part of our national wealth expressed in terms of dollars. Another awkward feature is the tendency of these multi-national foreign companies resident in another nation to concentrate a great part of their research activities and the like in the structure of the company in the foreign country. In other words, they disregard the Canadian section of their activities in so far as research, engineering and other matters are concerned. This is detrimental to us.

There is a tendency to do a certain amount of the total administrative research and engineering work in the parent company. There is also a tendency to offer an inducement to Canadians to leave Canada and work in the head office of the parent company in the United States. This trend is also detrimental to Canada.

There is a tendency for the parent company, and this has happened on a number of occasions, to make decisions about what it will do economically based on the political and economic considerations in the foreign country rather than on the necessities that may exist in Canada. In other words, as has been shown in a number of instances, not in the finance field but in the manufacturing field, the decisions of the United States Congress, the laws of which are applicable to resident companies within the United States, have extra territorial effect and are detrimental to Canadian interests.

The more we sell out our economic interests to foreign capital, the more we sell out the possibility that we ourselves can use our national resources and our own wealth for the greatest possible advantage of Canada. There has been ample public conversation and discussion about this. The Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau), apropos of what he said this afternoon, does not really need any great period of time for an interchange of ideas in the cabinet. He does not need a lot of cabinet committees to understand and appreciate the difficulties attendant upon Canada in so far as foregoing ownership in concerned.

We had a very extensive royal commission to examine all these prospects, the report of which was made and subsequently hidden in some recesses of a government office. The government has had an opportunity to do something about this. In so far as the insurance industry is concerned, representatives of the Canadian government told the insurance industry in a private way, not in public conversation, not to worry about the objections being raised in Canada about the incorporation of foreign insurance companies. The government would take steps to protect the interests of foreign investors in Canada.

Representatives of the insurance companies went home contented and happy, knowing they were going to receive that protection. They knew they would no longer have to explain their activities by way of the private bill process in parliament. They knew they would no longer have to come before a public body, such as the standing committee, to explain what they wanted to do. The Canadian government told the insurance and finance industries in the United States, because that is where most of the owners are, not to worry and fret because their interests would be protected.

The government lived up to its word. It sold out Canadian interests and introduced bills in order to carry out that commitment. There are a number of pieces of legislation on the order paper designed to amend the Canada Corporations Act, The Foreign Insurance Companies Act, the Loan Companies Act, the Trust Companies Act and the Canadian British Insurance Companies Act. A reading of those companion pieces of legislation shows that the government has not considered the views of Canadians about foreign ownership and the detrimental effects of it. It has considered the vested interests of the foreign corporations and has come down four-square on the side of foreign domination of our industry.

These bills are certainly not having any trouble in the other place, with all the boards of directors endorsing everything that is protective of foreign investment. If those bills subsequently become law, it will mean companies like the Avco Delta Corporation, Seaboard Finance—which has appeared before parliament and has not a very good relationship with its borrowers—and other similar companies who have a large chunk of the Canadian economy in their grasp will be able to walk into the office of the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Basford) and offer him whatever is necessary to obtain a charter. They may get a change of name, an alteration in their capital structure or a stock-spilling arrangement. Such companies will be able to obtain whatever alteration they need with the complete sanctions and blessing of the Canadian government. All this will be done in the close confines of the minister's office.

These companies will no longer have to come before the Canadian public, the standing committees of the House of Commons, to explain why they want the particular changes, why they want to split their stock. They will be able to engage in all sorts of relatively underhanded corporate activities to preserve their own position and increase the ownership they have of the Canadian economy. The government studied the matter carefully, weighed the interests of the foreign owners of the United States corporate entity against the interests of Canadians, opted for the foreign owners in the United States and disregarded the interests of the Canadian public. This is a preposterous insult emanating from the government of Canada. The Prime Minister and the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs have talked publicly about the value of Canadian companies. They talk publicly about the necessity to protect our whole national economy and the various interests of Canadians, but privately, quietly and secretly they act in the opposite way. This, of course, is typical not only of this government but of previous governments which have been stamped with the same label, namely that of being two-faced about most matters; they say one thing and do another.

• (4:20 p.m.)

The Chairman: Order, please. I am sorry to interrupt the hon. member but his time has expired.

Mr. Barnett: Mr. Chairman, it had occurred to me that members of the house at this hour on Friday afternoon, rather than listen to me talk, might prefer to observe a period of 20 minutes' silence to reflect upon the body blow that was delivered in this house to the freedom and rights of members of this parliament. But, on reflection I was afraid the Chair might say such a silence would not be relevant to the subject matter of the bill which is now before us. I did think of another alternative. I thought that perhaps the 20 minutes' silence might be used to observe the symbolic death of what I understand was once a genuine Canadian company and which, according to the sponsor of the bill, enjoyed the respect and confidence of the community in which it originated. I am not sure whether the hon. member sponsoring the bill would be prepared to agree that that is the kind of observance he would want, inasmuch as he is prepared to sponsor a bill of this nature in this house.

This is the first time I have spoken on the subject matter of Bill C-101. When I read through its provisions, it seemed to me I was meeting once again an old friend or old enemy whichever way one might prefer to describe it, because there was a similarity to certain other bills which were before us in previous parliaments. The explanatory note is very similar. It states that the sole purpose of the bill is to change the name of the company to Avco Insurance Company from London and Midland General Insurance Company. This may seem to be a very simple and innocuous proposal to which there should be little dissent. However, I believe it is necessary that we give some detailed attention to what is being asked by the bill. The hon. member for Skeena (Mr. Howard) gave us some of the details in respect of the proposed new Avco Insurance Company. Under its present name this company is involved in what is known as the Avco group.

When this matter was before the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs, the hon. member for Calgary North (Mr. Woolliams) asked the obvious question. He asked what does Avco stand for. The witness before the committee replied that it is an abbreviation of the names of aviation companies, and through the years has dwindled down to Avco. I suggest that while the name may have dwindled down, the activities of the corporation have not dwindled down. Indeed, the company would appear to have enlarged to the proportion of a giant octopus. The president of the London and Midland General Insurance Company said that the parent company in New York has become something along the lines of what might be called a conglomerate, involved in such things as aeroplane parts and extensive research and development, including the mechanical heart.

One can see, Mr. Chairman, that what is now the London and Midland General Insurance Company is something which is quite large indeed, and that the funds gathered through the corporate side may be directed into a great many different fields including indeed, if I may say so, what is sometimes referred to as the military industrial complex in the United States of America. I suppose one might develop a line of reasoning which would indicate that through this kind of mechanism the people who buy insurance through this company are directly or indirectly assisting in the financing of the United States war effort in Viet Nam. So, Mr. Chairman, it is not very difficult to indicate to the house that when the explanatory note says the sole purpose of this bill is to change the name, it is not as simple as that.

It may be true that the passage of this particular bill will not greatly affect the corporate structure of the company, but I submit that members of the house must give consideration to the fact that if they lend their assent to this proposal they are in effect putting their stamp of approval on something which I suppose, for practical purposes, has already taken place, namely the drawing into the United States conglomerate of some of the financial institutions of Canada.

[Mr. Barnett.]

This bill was under consideration by the committee of the whole on March 13 last. Not having participated in the debate on that occasion, I have looked at some of the remarks which were made during that particular part of the consideration of the bill. I notice that the hon. member for Vancouver Quadra (Mr. Deachman) saw fit to intervene in the debate. I shall read, in part at least, the remarks he made. On examination of those remarks, I have concluded that the hon. member for Vancouver Quadra is almost as adept at turning the truth upside down as the Prime Minister, who demonstrated his capabilities during the discussions that have taken place in this house in the last couple of days.

• (4:30 p.m.)

I thought I might make one or two comments about the arguments presented on that occasion by that hon. member. He said:

> No one can argue this case better than do the hon. members who, throughout their history in the House of Commons, have been confined to the far left hand corner of the house—

I should like to correct the hon. member's statement. There was an occasion when we sat in the far right hand corner of the house and he and his colleagues were sitting on this side of the chamber. I realize that may not be significant or relevant to the argument the hon. member has advanced, but I am sure he would not want that inaccuracy to remain unnoted.

The hon. member for Vancouver Quadra was talking about Canadian companies. In reference to our theories about the desirability of having foreign ownership and investment in Canada, he said, as reported at page 6589 of Hansard for March 13:

> —hon. gentlemen opposite, who have held up these bills, have constantly argued that foreign capital militates against the progress of the Canadian economy and industry. We do not believe that on this side of the house.

The hon. member for Timiskaming (Mr. Peters) is recorded as having said at that point:

> That is not true.

The manner in which the hon. member for Vancouver Quadra was presenting the argument indicates that the hon. member for Timiskaming was quite correct on that occasion. The argument presented by the hon. member for Vancouver Quadra obviously had nothing to do with the subject matter of this bill, because the nature of his remarks indicate that he was talking about the kind of company which puts investment into natural resources in Canada and brings about industrial development.

This is a subject matter on which various people in Canada have differing views at this time. I agree that the hon. member was correct in that regard. This is an important question, but it is not the question which was being discussed in relation to this bill. It is quite apparent that this bill has to do with a financial institution, the function of which is to gather the funds of the Canadian people into a pool. Our submission is that this is an area of debate very different from that being pursued by the hon. member for Vancouver Quadra. The argument which applied in one connection did not necessarily apply to the other.

I am one who believes we have been very foolish in the manner in which we have allowed industrial development and exploitation of natural resources to take place in this country. We have allowed foreign companies to gain control through the investment of a very small amount of equity capital and, in many cases, allowed that control when the actual capital investment has been raised from Canadian sources in non-equity form. This process should be reversed. As I have sometimes said, if we had taken a leaf from the book of the United States in the way it has drawn foreign capital, we would be in a much more sound position than we are today. Unless I am very much misinformed, the United States drew in large blocs of investment capital from abroad—in a large part from the United Kingdom—and most of that capital inflow was in the form of borrowed funds which the United States paid back with interest.

What we have in this bill is something completely different. In fact, what we are acquiescing to is the idea of a United States company being able to gain control of a Canadian financial institution and, through that mechanism, invest Canadian funds wherever it sees fit. I submit this makes the argument advanced on March 13 by the hon. member for Vancouver Quadra completely irrelevant to the subject matter of the bill. I say that while emphasizing again that his remarks on that occasion were completely inaccurate in portraying the position he alleges we in this party have taken.

The whole question involved in some of the debates that have taken place during this particular procedure has a significance which is much greater than the subject matter of the particular bill we are discussing today, or the subject matter of some of the similar bills we have had under discussion in this and preceding parliaments. I think it has been made clear time and time again by some of us who have spoken—some might say at length and some would say at great and undue length—that the bill represents an opportunity to attempt to draw the attention of the government to what we consider to be a very serious trend in our society. This trend is going to militate seriously against the future economic viability of the Canadian economy.

We have been adopting this course not because we have any particular vendetta against this particular company, or against its United States parent corporation, but rather because we feel we should draw the situation to the attention of that country. We feel that we should control our own economic and political destiny. It is for that reason I do not want to see this bill passed. I feel that somewhere along the line some Canadians ought to take a stand to reverse this trend which has been so apparent in recent years in Canada, and one which has been accelerating more and more. This trend is not new.

I believe I am right when I recall that the first essay I wrote as a first year university student was entitled "The Americanization of Canadian Life". I do not mind admitting to hon. members that I was a member of the arts class of 1931 at the University of British Columbia. As a young university student, I had some concern about what was happening in Canadian life and to the Canadian economy. That concern is something which has been with me through all the years since then, a concern about which I have become increasingly aware during the time I have been a member of the Canadian House of Commons.

I must say that most of the arguments which have been advanced by those of us who have spoken during these debates on this bill, and others like it, appear to have been falling on deaf ears in this house. There certainly does not appear to be recognition by the Canadian government of the fact that steps should be taken to prevent us from having to deal with situations such as the one alluded to in this particular bill.

• (4:40 p.m.)

The Chairman: Order, please. I am sorry to interrupt the hon. member, but his time has expired.

Adjournment of the House

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): Mr. Chairman, I wonder whether the committee would be agreeable to rising and reporting progress. I think there might be a possibility of disposing of the business that was before the house earlier today.

The Chairman: Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale) moves that I rise and report progress.

Mr. Peters: Mr. Chairman, the President of the Privy Council can move that motion if he wishes. There would not be unanimous agreement otherwise.

The Chairman: Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale) moves that I rise, report progress and request leave to sit again at the next sitting of the house. Is it the pleasure of the committee to adopt the said motion?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Progress reported.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

HOUSE OF COMMONS

ADJOURNMENT TO OCTOBER 22, 1969

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, could we have the consent of the house to revert to motions for the purpose of calling the amendment and also my motion, which were under consideration earlier today? I think there might be disposition to dispose of them at this time.

Mr. G. W. Baldwin (Peace River): Mr. Speaker, we are agreeable to that being done. I shall say nothing more than that having made the case which we set out to make, we are prepared to let the house come to a decision on the issue at this time.

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): That is substantially our position, Mr. Speaker. I think I can speak for all of us when I say that one of the reasons for the kind of agreement that we have reached is our concern for the staff.

[Translation]

Mr. Réal Caouette (Témiscamingue): Mr. Speaker, as the official opposition and the New Democratic party have done, we agree to the proposal of the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Macdonald).

[The Chairman.]

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Is this agreed?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The house having reverted to motions:

The house resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale), and the amendment thereto of Mr. Stanfield.

That when the house adjourns for its summer recess it shall stand adjourned until October 22, 1969, provided always that if it appears to the satisfaction of Mr. Speaker, after consultation with Her Majesty's government, that the public interest requires that the house should meet at an earlier time during the adjournment, Mr. Speaker may give notice that he is so satisfied, and thereupon the house shall meet at the time stated in such notice, and shall transact its business as if it had been duly adjourned to that time; and

That, in the event of Mr. Speaker being unable to act owing to illness or other cause, the Deputy Speaker or the Deputy Chairman of Committees shall act in his stead for the purpose of reconvening the house.

Mr. Speaker: Is the house ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Speaker: The question is on the amendment to the main motion. Is it the pleasure of the house to adopt the said amendment?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: Is the amendment carried?

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): On division.

Mr. Speaker: The amendment to the main motion is negatived, on division.

Amendment (Mr. Stanfield) negatived on division.

Mr. Speaker: Does the house wish the Chair to put the main motion at this time?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: The question is on the main motion. Is it the pleasure of the house to adopt the said motion?

Some hon. Members: On division.

Mr. Speaker: Carried, on division.

Motion agreed to on division.

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I move, seconded by Mr. McIlraith:

That this house do now adjourn.

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the house to adopt the said motion?

Order, please. Before adjourning the house I should like to take one moment to thank hon. members for the excellent and heart-warming co-operation which they have extended to the Chair during this long session. The last two or three weeks have been trying for hon. members and perhaps for the Chair also.

I hope hon. members will, in a gesture of good will, join the Speaker; there will be the usual friendly meeting for a few moments in a room which is not room 75 but is still room 16.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Motion agreed to and the house adjourned at 4.48 p.m. until Wednesday, October 22, at two o'clock p.m. pursuant to special order.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Wednesday, October 22, 1969

The house met at 2 p.m.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

COMMITTEES OF THE HOUSE

[Translation]

Twenty-sixth report of Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs—Mr. Gaston Clermont (Gatineau).

[English]

Fourth report of Standing Committee on Veterans Affairs—Mr. Francis.

[Translation]

Thirteenth and fourteenth report of Standing Committee on Transport and Communications, in French and English—Mr. H.-Pit Lessard (LaSalle).

[English]

Third report of Special Committee on Statutory Instruments—Mr. MacGuigan.

[Editor's Note: For text of above reports see today's Votes and Proceedings.]

[Translation]

COMPANY OF YOUNG CANADIANS

STATEMENT ON ACTIVITIES

Hon. Gérard Pelletier (Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, during the past two weeks there have been numerous allegations concerning some persons associated with the Company of Young Canadians.

According to the act adopted by parliament in 1966, the basic objective of the Company of Young Canadians is to support, encourage and organize programs for social and economic community development in Canada through voluntary service. The Company may engage in community development work, in urban and rural areas in Canada, and it may organize programs designed primarily to widen the social and economic opportunities of Canadians. The result is that inevitably the Company of Young Canadians works with urban renewal, rural poverty, and other less privileged groups of society.

Because of the nature of these activities, the government must expect to receive from time to time requests for investigation of alleged indiscretions committed by volunteer members of the Company of Young Canadians.

The most recent requests have been disturbing. Allegations of criminal activities which are substantiated should be dealt with before the courts in the normal manner.

However, usually responsible sources, without producing evidence, have alleged the utilization of the Company of Young Canadians to cover the furtherance of subversive activities. If these allegations are accurate, the Government stands ready to recommend to parliament necessary action, either by way of amendment to the act or establishment of a trusteeship to oversee the activities of the Company. If, on the other hand, these allegations are not substantiated, it will be necessary to reaffirm the good name of the Company of Young Canadians.

This house unanimously established the Company of Young Canadians as an organization which is uniquely independent. Ten of the fifteen members of its governing council are elected by the volunteers. The Company is not an agency of the Crown or in any way subject to direction by the government or any minister.

Parliament insisted upon this degree of independence. Therefore it would appear appropriate that any fundamental review of the Company's activities be undertaken by this house.

[English]

For the aforesaid reasons, Mr. Speaker, the government proposes that this whole matter be examined by a committee of the House.

• (2:10 p.m.)

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, since I have suggested that at least a committee of the house should be established in order to inquire into the charges made, I must welcome the change in the government's attitude as expressed by the minister this afternoon.

Serious charges have been made. The original attitude of the minister seemed to be that a police inquiry and a government inquiry would be adequate. This seemed to me to be a most inadequate and unfortunate response to the serious charges made by persons in very responsible positions at the federal and other levels of government.

I want to make it clear that I certainly support the original aims and purposes of the Company of Young Canadians. It is important that parliament and the public receive answers in respect of some of the charges, and the only satisfactory method under the circumstances appears to be a public inquiry. I trust that the terms of reference of the committee will be broad enough to permit a full review of the Company's activities, thus ensuring that the house will be fully informed as to whether or not the Company and its members are conforming to the purpose for which it was established or whether, on the other hand, they are departing from these purposes.

It is natural, and I understand this, that a company established for the purpose of assisting the underprivileged is bound to create a certain amount of controversy. However if members of the Company have gone so far as to engage in activities designed to undermine municipal governments, as has been alleged, then of course that is a very different story.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I do welcome the change in the minister's attitude and I support the establishment of this committee.

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, the minister has intimated to the House that it is the government's intention to ask that a committee of this House investigate the Company of Young Canadians. If the purpose of appointing such a committee is to examine and evaluate the program which the Company of Young Canadians is endeavouring to implement then, of course, we would welcome this statement.

However, if one reads the minister's statement carefully, one cannot but gather the impression that the purpose of appointing the committee is to look into the fact that, and I quote the minister's own statement:

> —usually responsible sources without producing evidence, have alleged the utilization of the Company of Young Canadians to cover the furtherance of subversive activities.

[Mr. Stanfield.]

I suggest that if that is the purpose of appointing a committee, then we are setting a very dangerous precedent and embarking upon a path that could do irreparable damage. This parliament is not a court of law. This parliament ought not to be used for witch hunting. If there are individuals who have conducted themselves in a manner that is unbecoming to the role of the Company of Young Canadians, then they should be dealt with by turning over specific complaints about the individuals concerned to the executive director. If the executive director does not take disciplinary action then the director, who is appointed by order in council, can be dismissed by the government.

If there are members of the Company of Young Canadians who have been guilty of illegal acts, then of course it is in the courts of the country that they should be tried. But if a committee of this House is to be asked to investigate alleged utilization of the Company of Young Canadians in the furtherance of subversive activities, which the minister himself says have not been corroborated by any evidence, then I submit it is only a matter of time until other public agencies will be subjected to this kind of sweeping indictment. I submit that to indict an agency is a dangerous procedure. If there are specific complaints, the persons responsible should be named and disciplinary action should be taken. I hope this House is surely not prepared to emulate the sinister witch hunts which were set in motion in the United States by the late and unlamented Senator McCarthy.

All of us have had some concern about the effectiveness of the program of the Company of Young Canadians. Some of the projects that have been undertaken have been excellent; some have not been successful. Part of the responsibility for this lies with the government. This organization was set up as part of the window dressing for the war against poverty. The role of the Company of Young Canadians has never been clearly defined. It has never had either the personnel or adequate resources to do the job allocated to it. The permanent council was set up only at the beginning of this month. All this time the Company has been operating with a provisional council.

Certainly, an examination of whether or not this organization is fulfilling any useful function is important. I submit that if we are going to investigate unsubstantiated charges that the organization is a front for subversive activities, there is a proper place for that to be done and it is not in parliament.

[Translation]

Mr. Gilbert Rondeau (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, following the remarks made by the Secretary of State (Mr. Pelletier) about the Company of Young Canadians, I must say that the conclusion he has arrived at is somewhat disappointing to us on this side of the house, because it does not follow the recommendations and wishes of the Chairman of the Executive Committee of the city of Montreal, who is an important figure, and who has made some very serious charges. Mr. Saulnier has asked the federal government to set up a royal commission of inquiry to clarify the whole matter, but the minister concerned has not seen fit to follow up this request made by the Chairman of the Executive Committee of the city of Montreal where the trouble occurred a few weeks ago, creating a very dramatic and serious situation.

Considering the circumstances, a committee of the house would, to my mind, be a tool in the hands of the federal government, a tool that it would use to minimize the importance of an investigation in such a serious and important matter.

For instance, the Chairman of the Executive Committee of the city of Montreal states that the Company of Young Canadians has become the tool of revolution, that it promotes revolution, disorder, dictatorship, resistance to the police and criminal activities such as the use of firearms or potassium cyanide.

Mr. Speaker, considering the circumstances, and since very serious charges have been made, parliament would be well advised to establish a royal commission, free from all control by the house, to investigate thoroughly the activities of the Company, and its finances in particular, in order to prove definitely that the charges are unfounded or to find the guilty parties.

• (2:20 p.m.)

As, for instance, we presently know of some newspapers which are encouraged by the Company of Young Canadians, it would be important to know where the money to finance such newspapers comes from, since they spread the idea of revolution and advocate subversion.

In view of the accusations made by the chairman of the Executive Committee of the city of Montreal, we think it would be preferable that a royal commission be established to inquire into every aspect of the matter, because a committee of the house might not have the powers needed to scrutinize the accounts of the Company of Young Canadians and determine what funds were spent each year—in the range of about $2 million—to support this Company.

There are good elements within this Company, and we should not only strive at uncovering the guilty ones, but rather at straightening up an attitude, a way of thinking and the procedures that have been used. I have here the August 1969 issue of Pouvoir Ouvrier, the workmen's newspaper in St. Jerome, in which the Company of Young Canadians published the following advertisement on page 2, and I quote:

Visit:

Livres et Périodiques Progressistes Ltée.

Marxist-Leninist and anti-imperialist literature, as well as revolutionary papers from around the world. "People, and people alone, are the generating power, the makers of history".

Mao Tse Tung

Such literature is spread around and we would set up a parliamentary committee, with extremely limited means, to change the policy the Company of Young Canadians has been following for some time.

No other solution was found except to refer the problem to a committee of the house. The committee would not have enough powers and would be too directly dependent on parliament. It would then be difficult to find those who are really responsible. The public wants explanations and a serious inquiry into this matter, because after all it has been financing the Company of Young Canadians until now.

It is our duty to ask for a judicial inquiry into this matter in order to meet the demands of the taxpayers and to punish the agitators. We must do justice to the good elements in the Company who have been affected by the bad publicity their association has received these last few weeks.

[English]

CANADIAN COMMITTEE ON CORRECTIONS

TABLING OF REPORT

Hon. G. J. McIlraith (Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to table the report of the Canadian Committee on Corrections.

Questions

PANARCTIC OILS LIMITED

TABLING OF ANNUAL REPORT

Mr. Russell C. Honey (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to table the annual report of Panarctic Oils Limited for 1968.

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

AUTHORITY FOR POWER TO ADOPT REGULATIONS

Question No. 1,080—Mr. Fortin:

1. At the present time, under what authority is power to adopt regulations granted to (a) the Cabinet or the Governor in Council (b) Ministers (c) any other body, individual or government agency?

2. Over the past five years, what federal regulations have been rescinded, in whole or in part by a jurisdictional body, with reference in each case?

3. Before a regulation is adopted, what steps are taken to ensure that it does not go beyond the delegated authority limits agreed to by Parliament?

Mr. Yves Forest (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): 1. and 3. The answers to this question have been furnished in general terms in the government's response to questions posed by the Special Committee on Statutory Instruments. As to the actual regulatory powers they are set out in the Statutes which are public documents.

2. There has been no comprehensive record kept of the instances where a regulation has been nullified.

CANADIAN CONSTITUTION—APPLICATION OF STATUTE OF WESTMINSTER

Question No. 1,546—Mr. Matte:

Is it the government's intention to avail itself of the provisions of the Statute of Westminster-1931 in order to resolve problems now being faced in constitutional matters?

Mr. J. E. Walker (Parliamentary Secretary to Prime Minister): The government, in its constitutional discussions with the provinces, pays heed to all statutes of a special constitutional nature in force in Canada.

[Mr. McIlraith.]

MINIMUM LIVING STANDARD—STUDY OF ESSENTIAL FACTORS

Question No. 1,655—Mr. Fortin:

1. Has the government undertaken or will it undertake a study in order to define the essential factors of a satisfactory minimum living standard and, if so, when will the report be available?

2. Who are the members of the Task Force working on such study?

Mr. J. E. Walker (Parliamentary Secretay to Prime Minister): 1 and 2. At the present time there is no study underway at the federal level to define and identify minimum standards for satisfactory living. However, a proposal for such a study has been made and consideration is being given to this matter.

REPRESENTATIONS CONCERNING THE LABRADOR QUESTION PRIOR TO 1964

Question No. 1,658—Mr. Fortin:

1. With regard to the answer to Question No. 979, concerning Labrador, what correspondence, briefs or other documents did the government receive relating to this matter, prior to 1964?

2. What was the substance of these documents, and with whom did they originate?

3. Will these documents be made public, and if not, for what reason?

4. Has the government studied, or will it study, the Labrador question?

[Translation]

Hon. John N. Turner (Minister of Justice): 1 and 2. In 1907 the Governments of Canada and the Colony of Newfoundland agreed to submit the question of the Labrador boundary between Canada and Newfoundland to the decision of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. The Department of Justice records on this subject consist of sixteen volumes and numerous large storage pockets, containing correspondence and memoranda with reference to the conduct and preparation of the case, exchanged between the Department of Justice and various other government departments and the governments of Newfoundland and Quebec, all of which are privileged documents. The latter part of the file consists of correspondence from interested parties and libraries requesting copies of "The Labrador Boundary Case", a small number of which were available for free distribution. The case consisted of twelve volumes. Sets were distributed to libraries throughout Canada, the United States and Europe.

3. The documents have been made public in the form of "The Labrador Boundary Case", as mentioned above. A set of the volumes was supplied to the Parliamentary library.

4. Newfoundland became a Province of Canada pursuant to negotiated Terms of Union that defined the boundaries of the new province in terms of the Judicial Committee's report of March 1st, 1927 in relation to the coast of Labrador. The Terms of Union were given the force of law by the British North America Act, 1949. In the circumstances the Government is not aware of any current question in this connection that requires study.

[English]

EXPO CANAL BOATS

Question No. 1,792—Mr. Saltsman:

1. Were the eight canal boats built for and used at Expo (which were used last summer to ferry passengers across the Detroit River to Peche Island by the Sirrah Company), put on the open market for sale by the department responsible for Expo?

2. What was the original cost of the boats?

3. What was their selling price to the Sirrah Company?

4. Was the selling price published in any newspaper or other periodical in the Windsor area?

5. What percentage did the federal government pay towards the construction of the four ferries?

6. Does the Sirrah Company receive a federal ferry subsidy and is it a condition of this subsidy that these ferries shall operate on regular half-hour schedules notwithstanding weather conditions and, if there was such a subsidy, in what amount?

Mr. Yves Forest (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce and the Department of Transport as follows:

1, 2, 3 and 4. The canal boats referred to in Part 1 were not owned by the Canadian Corporation for the 1967 World Exhibition. There was no subsidy paid for the construction on these canal boats by either the above corporation or the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce.

The purchase and sale of these boats and the arrangements related thereto, were between private interests. No knowledge is available on the original cost, selling price or the terms.

5. The Sirrah Company did construct four ferries in 1968 which were eligible for subsidies by the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce. Total costs for these ferries amounted to $441,000 for which a subsidy was paid amounting to $110,250.

6. No.

29180—737

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS COMMUNICATIONS SERVICE

Question No. 1,848—Mr. Mazankowski:

1. Does the CNR operate an exclusive communication service and, if not, under what arrangement is this service offered the public in the name of the CNR?

2. Did the CNR's telegraph service operate at a profit in 1968 and, if so, what was the amount of profit to the company?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): The management of Canadian National Railways advises as follows: 1. Pursuant to Section 26 of the Canadian National Railways Act being Chapter 29 of the Statutes of Canada 1955, the CNR is empowered to establish, construct or acquire by purchase, lease or otherwise and to maintain and operate telecommunication facilities systems and services in Canada and elsewhere. In addition, it may carry on a public telecommunications business and may enter into arrangements with other telecommunication companies or Her Majesty for the exchange and transmission of messages or for the maintenance or working, in whole or in part, of the telecommunication systems of the respective companies or Her Majesty. However, it does not possess an exclusive franchise anywhere in Canada for the provision or operation of such services. Certain telecommunications properties or works in the Yukon Territory, in parts of Northern British Columbia and in Newfoundland which are vested in or owned, controlled or occupied by Her Majesty, pursuant to various Orders in Council have been entrusted to the Railway for management and operation. In addition, Canadian National provides the only public telecommunication services in parts of the Northwest Territories.

2. In addition to a telegraph message service provided to the public the Company engages in a diversity of telecommunications activities including the operation of local and long distance commercial telephone services, the provision of private wire circuits, a Telex Network, and facilities for radio and TV network transmissions. The telegram constitutes less than $\frac{1}{4}$ of the commercial communications business handled by the Company and is not compensatory. However, as shown on Page 37 of the Company's Annual Report for the year 1968 which was tabled in the House of Commons on April 24, 1969, the net income realized from the overall operations of the Telecommunications Department during the year 1968 was $8,654,140.

Questions

INVESTIGATION OF REGIONAL MONETARY POLICY

Question No. 1,917—Mr. Broadbent:

1. Is the Department of Regional Economic Expansion or the Department of Finance or the Bank of Canada investigating the question of regional monetary policy in Canada and, if not, for what reason?

2. If so, what specific research projects have been undertaken and when are they expected to be completed?

Hon. E. J. Benson (Minister of Finance): 1. The Bank of Canada has investigated the question of regional monetary policy in Canada over a lengthy period commencing with its establishment in 1935 and its conclusion on this question has been indicated on a number of occasions over the years, in particular in the Bank's annual reports, in evidence to the Royal Commission on Banking and Finance and to the House Committee on Trade, Finance and Economic Affairs and in speeches by the Governor. The Bank's conclusion, and that of the Royal Commission on Banking and Finance, has been that it is not possible to have a different monetary policy in different parts of an area which has a common currency, a unified banking system and a unified capital market. Problems of different rates of economic activity in different regions were considered to be dealt with more appropriately by specific measures.

In the study "Economic Development and the Atlantic Provinces" sponsored by the Atlantic Provinces Research Board, Professor A. K. Cairncross concluded that:

"if monetary measures are to be used in future to regulate activity throughout Canada, it will be desirable to supplement these measures by more selective instruments of control designed to procure a more even pressure of demand in the various parts of the country;

These instruments of control might include: (a) pressure on the commercial banks to exempt selected areas from the full force of credit rationing; (b) the freer provision of mortgage funds through the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation or in other ways, in under-employed areas where there is an unsatisfied demand for new houses; (c) increased disbursement by the federal government either in public works or through higher grants-in-aid;

Monetary policy is not an appropriate means of dealing with the long-term problems involved in differential rates of growth in different parts of Canada."

[Mr. Jamieson.]

A variety of fiscal and other economic measures, including those referred to by the Cairncross Study, have been instituted to deal on a selective basis with regional economic disparities.

2. Answered by 1.

INDUSTRY MODERNIZATION LOANS TO COMPANY

Question No. 1,919—Mr. Saltsman:

1. What is the name of the company referred to in the Auditor-General's report that received $457,000 in federal industry modernization loans?

2. During which fiscal years, what were the respective amounts which the above company received in loans from the government?

3. When was the Crown-owned foundry at Haley Station near Renfrew sold to the company for $165,000?

4. Was this foundry sold under competitive tendering and, if not, for what reason?

5. If so, what were the names of the other companies bidding and their respective amounts?

Mr. Yves Forest (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce and the Department of Supply and Services as follows:

1. The name of the company referred to in the Auditor General's report is Haley Industries Limited, Haley, Ontario.

2. In 1969 Haley Industries Limited was awarded a contract for capital assistance support for production equipment under the Industry Modernization for Defence Exports Program valued at $457,000. Under this program 50 per cent of the acquisition cost of the equipment is provided in the form of a grant and the remainder in the form of an advance repayable over a five year period. Total payments to date are as follows: FY 1968/69, $252,243.32; FY 1969/70, $127,865.73.

3. The Crown-owned foundry at Haley Station near Renfrew was sold to Bartaco Industries Limited of Orillia, Ontario, in December 1967.

4. The Foundry was not sold under competitive tender. As explained by the Minister of Industry on March 19, 1968, at page 7819 of Hansard, the Department of Defence Production solicited 28 companies in both Canada and the United States with the result that only one firm showed sufficient interest to make a definitive offer. To achieve its objective of finding a buyer who would continue the Foundry operation, the Department's inquiries to the prospective buyers were kept on a confidential basis to minimize the possibility of key customers losing confidence in the Foundry as a reliable supplier.

5. See answer to Part 4.

5. See answer to part 4.

CANADIAN GOVERNMENT DEPOSITS IN CHARTERED BANKS

Question No. 1,936—Mr. Saltsman:

1. Does the Government of Canada leave large sums on deposit with the chartered banks in non-interest bearing accounts and, if so, under what authority or statute?

2. If so, why did the Government of Canada receive no interest on government deposits totalling $100 million in the chartered banks as reported by the Auditor-General in his annual report?

Hon. E. J. Benson (Minister of Finance): Section 16(2) of the Financial Administration Act as amended provides that the Receiver General shall establish, in the name of the Receiver General, accounts for the deposit of public moneys with such banks and fiscal agents as are designated by the Minister of Finance. Section 93(3) of the Bank Act provides that nothing in subsection (2) of the same section (which prohibits the banks from making specific charges for cashing cheques drawn on the Receiver General) shall be construed to prohibit any arrangement between the government of Canada and the banks concerning interest to be paid on any or all deposits of the government of Canada with the banks.

Under the authority of these statutes, balances are held in accounts with the chartered banks as well as in accounts with the Bank of Canada.

These balances vary considerably over time depending on daily revenue and expenditure patterns and on debt and cash management operations. In line with normal business practice, the government maintains on deposit with the chartered banks non-interest bearing current balances to meet daily cheque encashments. There are no undertakings to leave specified amounts on deposit. On the other hand, chartered banks have agreed that they should pay interest on an agreed basis on any amounts in excess of $100 millions held in these accounts. This arrangement permits the government to earn interest on investible funds without having to withdraw balances from the banks in order to buy treasury bills or other government of Canada securities or to sell such securities in order to replenish its bank balances. The movement of funds by the Government in such a way could have a disturbing influence on the money market and should be avoided.

29180—737½

RCMP—ROLE IN MARCH ON MCGILL

Question No. 2,070—Mr. Robinson:

1. How many RCMP were involved in police work during the recent march on McGill University?

2. What was the cost to the federal government of the police service provided?

3. Was any other service provided, apart from police services and, if so, what service and what was the cost to the federal government?

4. Will the Government of Quebec make any financial contribution toward the cost of the RCMP services provided and relevant to the recent march on McGill University?

Hon. G. J. McIlraith (Solicitor General): 1 to 4. It is not in the public interest to disclose this information.

*NATIONAL MUSEUM—PROVISION OF NEW BUILDING

Question No. 2,108—Mr. Dinsdale:

1. Has Dr. A. W. F. Banfield resigned as Director of the National Museum of Natural Sciences and, if so, what is the reason for his resignation?

2. Has there been an increase in the budget of the National Museums for the fiscal year 1969-70 and, if so, what is the amount of the increase?

3. When will the new Museum building announced by Prime Minister Diefenbaker in 1961, deferred by Prime Minister Pearson in 1965 in favour of the National Centre for the Performing Arts, be proceeded with?

[Translation]

Hon. Gérard Pelletier (Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, the answer is as follows: 1. Yes. Dr. A. W. F. Banfield resigned as Director of the National Museum of Natural Sciences, and stated in his letter of resignation, submitted to the Chairman of the Board of Trustees that his decision to resign was "purely personal and related to achievement of career goals".

2. I am informed by the National Museums of Canada that the National Museums' budget was increased by $1,500 for the fiscal year 1969-70 over the preceding fiscal year 1968-69.

3. No decision has been reached with respect to a new Museum building.

[English]

RCMP—EDUCATIONAL REQUIREMENTS

Question No. 2,111—Mr. Robinson:

1. What is the minimum educational requirement to join the RCMP in Ontario and when was this standard last changed?

Questions

2. What is the minimum educational standard recommended by the Canadian Association of Police Chiefs?

3. Is the Canadian Government considering the raising of the minimum standard of education for RCMP and to what level?

4. How many members of the RCMP have, at the present time, the following education according to Ontario standards (a) grade 8 (b) grade 9 (c) grade 10 (d) grade 11 (e) grade 12 (f) grade 13 (g) Bachelor of Arts or equivalent degree (h) Post-Graduate Degrees (i) Post-Graduate training (j) other qualifications such as Ontario Police College, FBI courses and other?

Hon. G. J. McIlraith (Solicitor General): 1. An applicant is required to produce proof of having satisfactorily completed Grade XI in the province in which he completed his education. The Grade XI requirement has been in effect since August 17, 1963.

2. This question should be directed to the Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police.

3. The minimum standard of education and other basic qualifications are constantly under review by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and studied in conjunction with manpower requirements. At present the most acceptable minimum standard of education to ensure that the Royal Canadian Mounted Police is kept up to strength is Grade XI although 50 percent of those now engaging have in excess of this standard.

4. Records maintained by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police do not equate educational qualifications according to Ontario standards. (Refer to Answer 1 above).

PUBLIC SERVICE STAFF RELATIONS BOARD—CHAIRMAN'S NAME AND SALARY

Question No. 2,153—Mr. Coates:

What is the name and salary of the Chairman of the Public Service Staff Relations Board?

Hon. James Richardson (Minister of Supply and Services): In so far as the Public Service Staff Relations Board is concerned: J. Finkelman—$28,750 per annum.

[Mr. Robinson.]

LAND SETTLEMENT—OVERCOMING OF PROBLEMS

Question No. 2,143—Mr. Corbin:

1. What government departments are involved in overcoming problems arising from mistakes in settlement, particularly the settlement of land since proved unfit for arable culture?

2. What legislation and what programs have been initiated to correct this situation and on what date was this legislation initiated and affecting what areas?

3. To what extent are individual provinces participating in these programs?

4. What has been the cost to the federal government to this date for each individual program in each of the three Maritime Provinces (New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia)?

Hon. Yves Forest (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): 1. The Department of Regional Economic Expansion.

2. Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Act (1935), applicable to the three Prairie provinces; Agricultural Rehabilitation and Development Act (1962) and Agricultural and Rural Development Act (1966), applicable to all provinces. Federal-Provincial Rural Development Agreements (1965-70) made under the ARD Act with all the provinces of Canada; Fund for Rural Economic Development Act (1966), so far applied to certain areas in the provinces of Manitoba, Quebec, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island.

3. The provinces share in the planning of all programs and they share in the costs, to varying extents, of many of them.

4. Cost to the federal government during the period April 1, 1962 to March 31, 1969 was:

	First ARDA Agreement	Second ARDA Agreement	FRED Agreements
Prince Edward Island	$238,168	$ 981,447	Not applicable
Nova Scotia	540,904	4,478,574	Not applicable
New Brunswick	482,303	2,580,083	$422,831

PUBLIC RELATIONS STAFF, DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

Question No. 2,216—Mr. Robinson:

1. Does the Department of Justice have a public relations staff and, if so, how many?

2. What is the total cost of the public relations for the Department for each of the years 1960-1968 inclusive?

Hon. John N. Turner (Minister of Justice): In so far as the Department of Justice is concerned:

1. No.

2. Nil.

PUBLIC RELATIONS—INDUSTRY, TRADE AND COMMERCE

Question No. 2,268—Mr. Robinson:

1. Does the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce have a public relations staff and, if so, how many?

2. What is the total cost of the public relations for the Department for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): 1. The Publicity Branch of the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce is engaged in developing publicity, industrial promotion, and sales promotion activities around the world as part of the Department's program of industrial and trade development. The Canadian Government Travel Bureau carries out information and publicity services as part of the Departmental activity of travel promotion. Most of the work involved for the Department and the Travel Bureau is not of a character normally associated with the term "public relations". Staff figures of officials classified as Information Service Officers are listed in the reply to written question No. 2,018 made an Order for Return in the House of Commons on July 14, 1969.

2. Expenditures of the Trade Publicity Branch and the Information and Promotion Branch of the two former Departments, as well as for the Canadian Government Travel Bureau, are listed in reply to written question No. 2,291.

CROWN CORPORATIONS—SALE OF SHARES TO PUBLIC

Question No. 2,434—Mr. Robinson:

Will the federal government consider selling shares in Crown Corporations to the public?

Mr. J. E. Walker (Parliamentary Secretary to Prime Minister): The Government has no present intention to make available shares in Crown Corporations for purchase by the public.

MONTREAL—PORT ADVISORY BOARD

Question No. 2,451—Mr. Fortin:

1. Does the government intend to set up an advisory board for the Port of Montreal?

2. Does the government intend to appoint a representative of the City of Montreal as a member of the Board of Directors of the National Harbours Board?

3. Has the government studied the Merineau Report which calls for the establishment of a harbours board for Canada but giving more independence to local authorities and, if so, at what stage is such study?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): Parts (1), (2) and (3) of Question No. 2,451 concern specific aspects of the administration of Canadian ports. The government has currently under review the matter of administrative systems of all harbours and will on completion of this review, consider such changes which are deemed to be desirable.

APPLICATION OF GOVERNMENT COMPANIES OPERATION ACT

Question No. 2,453—Mr. Fortin:

1. Does the Government Companies Operation Act presently apply to Polymer Corporation Limited and, if not, for what reason?

2. Does the government intend to adopt the same approach toward (a) Eldorado Nuclear Limited (b) Eldorado Aviation Limited, and (c) Northern Transportation Company Limited?

3. If not, for what reason?

Mr. Yves Forest (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): 1. No. Polymer Corporation Limited is in keen competition with publicly owned companies throughout the world and it is essential for its continued success that it be free to act quickly in response to changing business conditions and have the same relative freedom of action as its competitors.

2 and 3. No consideration has been given to adopt the same approach at this time.

TOBACCO ADVERTISING—STUDY BY CRTC

Question No. 2,455—Mr. Fortin:

1. Has the Canadian Radio-Television Commission studied, is it studying, or will it study the possibility of banning tobacco advertising and, if not, for what reason?

2. Does the government intend to issue directives in that respect?

Mr. Yves Forest (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Department of the Secretary of State and the Department of National Health and Welfare as follows: 1. The Canadian Radio-Television Commission has studied the matter of tobacco advertising, since under the Broadcasting Act (Section 16(1)(b)(ii)) the Commission has the power to regulate "respecting the character of advertising and the amount of time that may be devoted to advertising".

In view of the fact that other government agencies are making studies of the effects of tobacco on health, the Commission has reached the conclusion that no action would be taken on this matter at the present time.

2. No.

VANIER INSTITUTE OF THE FAMILY—FEDERAL SUPPORT

Question No. 2,476—Mr. Dinsdale:

1. Has the Government of Canada withdrawn financial support from the Vanier Institute of the Family?

2. If so, what is the reason for this withdrawal of financial support?

3. What financial contribution has been made each year by the federal government to the Vanier Institute since it was established?

4. What contribution will be made in the fiscal year 1969-70?

Hon. E. J. Benson (Minister of Finance): 1. Not yet. The Federal Government will continue its financial support in the form of grants to match contributions from other sources received before April 1, 1970 by the Endowment Fund of the Institute. The Institute has been informed, however, that matching grants will not be made in respect of contributions received after March 31, 1970.

2. It is considered that the work of the Vanier Institute of the Family now is sufficiently known and appreciated that Federal Government grants can be terminated at the end of this fiscal year, leaving to other sources any further necessary financial support of the continuing operations of the Institute. The termination of federal contributions to the Endowment Fund under these circumstances is part of the government's general program of restraint in expenditures.

3 and 4.

Fiscal year	Financial contribution ($000)
1965-66	100
1966-67	2,167
1967-68	700
1968-69	425
1969-70	Nil
1970-71	450 (Estimated)

[Mr. Forest.]

"LA CORRESPONDANCE DE POLITIQUE ÉTRANGÈRE"

Question No. 2,483—Mr. Dumont:

1. Is the periodical La Correspondance de Politique étrangère published by the Press Department of the Foreign Ministry of the German Democratic Republic considered as first, second or third class mail?

2. What is its total number of copies distributed by the Post Office Department in Canada and what amount is paid annually for such delivery?

Hon. Eric W. Kierans (Postmaster General and Minister of Communications): In so far as the Post Office Department is concerned:

1. The Canadian Post Office Department has no information respecting the publication in question, which is not registered as second class mail in Canada.

2. Not known.

PRICES AND INCOMES COMMISSION

Question No. 2,498—Mrs. MacInnis:

1. How much money has been appropriated for the Prices and Incomes Commission?

2. What is the anticipated size of the staff of the Commission?

3. How many members of the staff have been hired to date?

4. Has there been any difficulty recruiting professional staff?

5. If so, what are the reasons for this difficulty?

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): I have been informed by the Chairman of the Prices and Incomes Commission as follows: 1. Prior to the establishment of the Commission, the Treasury Board approved an initial allotment of $500,000 for the Prices and Incomes Commission for the fiscal year 1969-70. A more precise determination of the financial requirements of the Prices and Incomes Commission for the fiscal year 1969-70 will be submitted to Parliament at the time of supplementary estimates.

2. The Commission is now engaged in formulating its work program and necessary staff requirements in order to carry out the mandate that has been given to the Commission. It is, therefore, not possible at this time to provide an estimate of the staff requirements of the Commission.

3. At the time that the question was tabled, there were five persons on the staff of the Commission. As of September 24, 1969, the Commission was composed of 25 persons including the four Commissioners.

4 and 5. Yes. There is a severe shortage of highly qualified staff everywhere, and all agencies both public and private have been encountering recruiting problems.

TREASURY BOARD INFORMATION SERVICE

Question No. 2,515—Mr. Robinson:

1. Does the Treasury Board provide an information service and, if so, what was the cost for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive?

2. How many publications and/or periodicals and/or information sheets and/or public releases were provided by the Department for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive and what was the cost for each publication for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive?

3. How many copies of each publication are provided and to whom are they distributed and how is the distribution effected?

Hon. C. M. Drury (President of the Treasury Board): 1. The answer to Part 1 has already been provided by the Treasury Board in reply to Question Number 2,175 (Hansard, June 4, 1969, page 9722).

2. (a) Publications: nil; (b) Periodicals: nil; (c) Information Sheets: nil; (d) Press Releases:

Year	Number	Estimated Cost
1960-64	nil	$.....
1965	4	331.00
1966	15	499.00
1967	12	227.00
1968	38	1,567.00

3. The number of copies of each press release averages 850. Distribution is to the Parliamentary Press Gallery (by hand) and to Heads of Agencies and Deputy Ministers and their Directors of Personnel (by mail).

PUBLIC BUILDINGS—CUTBACK IN CONSTRUCTION

Question No. 2,518—Mr. Dinsdale:

1. Has there been any cutback in the planned construction of federal public buildings as originally announced for the 1969-70 fiscal year?

2. If so (a) how many buildings are involved (b) in what cities were they to have been built (c) what is the total sum of money saved by the cutbacks in each province?

Mr. Yves Forest (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): 1. No.

2. Not applicable.

INDIAN AFFAIRS AND NORTHERN DEVELOPMENT INFORMATION SERVICE

Question No. 2,532—Mr. Robinson:

1. Does the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development provide an information service and, if so, what was the cost for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive?

2. How many publications and/or periodicals and/or information sheets and/or public releases were provided by the Department for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive and what was the cost for each publication for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive?

3 How many copies of each publication are provided and to whom are they distributed and how is the distribution effected?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): 1. 1960-66.

2. The department has no central record of all publications for the period mentioned. An inventory of publications is being prepared but will not be ready for several months.

However, available figures show that the number of publications has increased from 193 in 1966-67 to 235 in 1967-68 to 311 in 1968-69, and 182 publications have been published since the beginning of 1969-70, or by extrapolation, to a total of approximately 412 for the full year. Between 1966-67 and 1969-70, the circulation of all departmental scientific reports and of publications related to industrial development in the North has increased by 500 per cent, National Parks by 200 per cent and all others by 30 per cent.

3. To provide a reply to this question would take several months and as the Department has no central record for the period in question, the accuracy of the reply would be questionable.

As mentioned in the reply to part 2, an inventory is being prepared which will take several months to finalize.

NATIONAL ARTS CENTRE—PUBLIC RELATIONS AND ADVERTISING

Question No. 2,548—Mr. Harding:

1. What is the public relations and/or advertising budget for the National Arts Centre for the fiscal year 1969-70?

2. Up to June 10, 1969, what have been the actual public relations expenditures for the National Arts Centre?

Hon. Gérard Pelletier (Secretary of State): I am informed by the National Arts Centre as follows: 1. $589,576.

2. The Centre's accounting methods do not permit a reckoning of expenditures to June

Questions

10 but expenditures to June 30 were approximately $406,000.

NATIONAL DEFENCE INFORMATION SERVICE

Question No. 2,550—Mr. Robinson:

1. Does the Department of National Defence provide an information service and, if so, what was the cost for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive?

2. How many publications and/or periodicals and/or information sheets and/or public releases were provided by the Department for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive and what was the cost for each publication for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive?

3. How many copies of each publication are provided and to whom are they distributed and how is the distribution effected?

Hon. Léo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): 1. See Hansard dated July 23, 1969, pages 11518-9.

2. Prior to 1964, the Royal Canadian Navy published The Crowsnest, and the Royal Canadian Air Force, Roundel. All three services issued press releases. Costs prior to 1965-66 were not maintained in a manner which would permit this data to be readily identified. Since 1964, the Canadian Forces information publications consist of The Sentinel, La Sentinelle and, since 1966, the Canadian Forces' Bulletin, as well as press releases. Publication costs:

	1965-66	1966-67	1967-68	1968-69
The Sentinel La Sentinelle	$ 35,118.13	$117,867.93	$128,581.44	$125,876.53
Canadian Forces' Bulletin	——	$ 14,000.00	$ 10,000.00	$ 10,000.00

Press releases are prepared by the information offices in Ottawa and in the field as a part of their information duties. Records are not kept in a manner which permits the cost of producing press releases to be isolated.

3.

	1965	1966	1967	1968
The Sentinel	96,000	480,000	480,000	480,000
La Sentinelle	14,000	70,000	70,000	70,000

Published ten times a year, these magazines are distributed to the Canadian Forces, on the basis of one for every five persons serving in the Regular Forces, one for every ten in the Reserve Forces, and one for every 20 in the Cadet Services. Copies are also distributed to the military associations and to Canadian news media. In addition, there are over 7,000 paid subscriptions through the Queen's Printer.

Canadian Forces' Bulletin—English	32,500	110,000	316,000
French	7,500	21,300	37,100

Variation in number published is due to the production, from time to time, of special editions which are issued to each member of the Canadian Forces (these editions contain detailed information on major changes in service conditions & terms of service). Normally one copy is distributed to each Commander, and one copy for each five persons serving in the rank of Sergeant and above.

Press Releases	2423	2561	2649	3433

These are distributed nationally, regionally to news media depending on the subject.

[Mr. Pelletier.]

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE—COST OF PUBLIC RELATIONS

Question No. 2,555—Mr. Robinson:

1. Does the Department of Finance have a public relations staff and, if so, how many?

2. What was the total cost of public relations for the Department for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive?

Hon. E. J. Benson (Minister of Finance): 1. The Department of Finance does not have a public relations staff as such. Relations with news media and the public are handled by the Information Office, and by other departmental officials.

2. The costs attributable solely to public relations cannot be identified, but see the answer to question No. 2,572.

RESEARCH ECONOMISTS, PRICES AND INCOMES COMMISSION

Question No. 2,556—Mrs. MacInnis:

1. What are the names of the research economists who have accepted positions with the Prices and Incomes Commission and on what dates did they indicate their acceptance?

2. How many economists in academic institutions have been offered positions on the staff of the Prices and Incomes Commission?

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): I have been informed by the Chairman of the Prices and Incomes Commission as follows: 1. The names of the research economists who have accepted positions with the Prices and Incomes Commission and the dates they indicated their acceptance are as follows:

Mr. D. Brazier, May 23, 1969;
Mr. H. Bubeck, July 30, 1969;

Questions

Mr. J. Cragg, June 15, 1969;
Mr. W. Dymond, July 11, 1969;
Mr. J. Hague, June 25, 1969;
Mr. T. Houston, August 6, 1969;
Mr. L. Reed, June 22, 1969.

2. The Commission does not maintain a record of preliminary approaches to economists in academic institutions.

FOREST FIRES IN CANADA

Question No. 2,562—Mr. Robinson:

1. How many forest fires were reported in Canada in each of the years 1960-68 inclusive?

2. How many acres of forest were destroyed by fire in each of the years 1960-68 inclusive?

3. What was the estimated value of the timber lost as a result of forest fires in each of the years 1960-68 inclusive?

4. What percentage of the forest fires in terms of (a) acreage (b) timber value, were the result of (i) natural causes (ii) careless hunters and fishermen (iii) careless campers and tourists (iv) other?

Mr. E. F. Whelan (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Fisheries and Forestry):

	1960	1961	1962	1963	1964	1965	1966	1967	1968
1. Number of Fires	8,881	8,655	6,285	7,670	6,944	7,238	7,468	8,650	6,933
2. Acreage burned	1,616,344	9,313,479	863,495	470,001	2,993,290	521,148	1,144,439	2,211,954	(Estimated) 2,052,000 (Estimated)
3. Estimated Value	10,409,625	69,125,608	6,977,748	4,265,926	6,522,947	8,314,546	3,970,283	18,191,893	Not available
4. (a) (i) Natural causes		56.5	38.5	51.2	79.7	57.5	56.5	73.5
(ii) and (iii) Careless hunters, fishermen, campers and tourists (records not kept separately)		10.1	22.9	16.8	6.5	13.0	1.2	4.2
(iv) Others		33.4	38.6	32.0	13.8	29.5	42.3	22.3

NOTE: Records for 1960 and 1968 are not available.

(b) Data not available in this form.

[Mr. Whelan.]

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE—INFORMATION SERVICE

Question No. 2,572—Mr. Robinson:

1. Does the Department of Finance provide an information service and, if so, what was the cost for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive?

2. How many publications and/or periodicals and/or information sheets and/or public releases were provided by the Department for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive and what was the cost for each publication for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive?

3. How many copies of each publication are provided and to whom are they distributed and how is the distribution effected?

Hon. E. J. Benson (Minister of Finance): 1. Yes. An information office was established in 1966. Prior to 1966 information duties were performed by officers of the Department as part of their other duties, and the costs attributable solely to information duties before 1966 cannot be identified. The costs since then, including salaries, are: fiscal year 1966-67, $53,714; 1967-68, $96,244; 1968-69, $45,638.

2. Accurate information is not available with respect to fiscal years 1960-61 to 1965-66 inclusive. Numbers and total costs since then are as follows. Costs attributable to individual publication cannot be identified.

	1966-67		1967-68		1968-69
	No.	Cost	No.	Cost	No.	Cost
Publications and/or Information Sheets	9	$30,930	13	$74,950	8	$23,474
Periodicals		NIL		NIL		NIL
Public (Press) Releases	118	$ 7,538	176	$ 5,001	175	$ 4,800

3. During the period 1966-67 to 1968-69: distribution of information relating to budgets has averaged 2,500 copies per year; distribution of material relating to government guaranteed loans has averaged 335,000 copies per year of brochures, 119,000 copies per year of guidelines, 4,700 copies per year of annual reports and, in 1967-68 only, 6,500 copies of the consolidation of one of the acts; distribution of public (press) releases has ranged from 50 to 3,000 copies depending on the subject matter, with an average distribution of 700 copies.

Information relating to budgets, guaranteed loans administration publications, and public (press) releases are distributed to the news media, to Members of Parliament and Senators, to interested libraries and embassies, and to interested officials and individuals in the fields of government, banking, industry, commerce and educaiton. Copies of brochures, guidelines or acts relating to government guaranteed loans are sent in bulk to those agencies empowered to make loans under the relevant acts and, through those agencies, are distributed to prospective borrowers.

Distribution is mainly by mail but departmental messengers are used in the case of some local recipients.

ROBERTS BANK—PROTECTION OF DELTA RESIDENTS FROM POLLUTION

Question No. 2,574—Mr. Goode:

What steps will be taken by the railways, Kaiser Steel Corporation and National Harbours Board to protect the residents of the Municipality of Delta from the following sources of pollution stemming from the development of Roberts Bank Superport (a) railway cars carrying coal at high speeds (b) oil slicks and other hazards from ocean vessels (c) spillage and dust from loading operations?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): In so far as the Minister of Transport is concerned:

The Canadian Transport Commission advises as follows: Regarding pollution arising from railway car operations, no problem of this nature is foreseen at this time due to the speed at which coal trains will operate and the normal load level of cars and location of the loading area.

The National Harbours Board advises as follows: Pollution will be controlled by Section 4 of the Board's By-Law A-1 which states:

"4. (1) No person shall cause or do or omit to do anything which may cause in any manner (a) an encumbrance of the water or shore of the harbour; or (b) an obstruction or danger to navigation in the harbour.

(2) Nothing shall be thrown, drained or discharged in the water, allowed to come in contact with the water, or deposited anywhere within the limits of the harbour, which may in any manner (a) damage vessels or property; or (b) cause any nuisance or endanger life or health; Provided that ballast or rubbish may be placed, left or disposed of at such places in the harbour as may be assigned by the Board.

(3) Every encumbrance, obstruction, nuisance, or possible cause of danger or damage, in contravention of the provisions of this section, may be removed by the Board at the risk and expense of the person who so contravenes such provisions."

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT DIRECT AND GUARANTEED DEBT

Question No. 2,582—Mr. Mather:

1. What was the total of the federal government's outstanding direct and guaranteed debt at the end of May 1967, May 1968, and May 1969?

2. What was the cost in each of those years of interest and other public debt charges?

3. If statistics are available indicating the outstanding direct and guaranteed debt of the provinces and the annual cost thereof, what are the totals for the same periods?

Hon. E. J. Benson (Minister of Finance): 1. As published in Bank of Canada Statistical Summary:

1967	$21,286 million
1968	21,763 million
1969	23,171 million

2. As determined from the government's regular monthly statement of financial operations:

1967	$ 1,119 million
1968	1,339 million
1969	1,507 million

3. Gross amount of provincial direct and guaranteed bonds outstanding as at December 31 is published in the Supplement of the Bank of Canada statistical summary. These amounts were as follows:

as at December 31, 1966:	$13,410 million
as at December 31, 1967:	$15,484 million
as at December 31, 1968:	not yet available

The corresponding figures for May 1967, 1968 and 1969 are not published. The annual costs of the direct and guaranteed debt of the provinces are not available.

INFORMATION SERVICE—DEPARTMENT OF FISHERIES

Question No. 2,583—Mr. Robinson:

1. Does the Department of Fisheries provide an information service and, if so, what was the cost for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive?

2. How many publications and/or periodicals and/or information sheets and/or public releases were provided by the Department for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive, and what was the cost of each publication for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive?

3. How many copies of each publication are provided and to whom are they distributed and how is the distribution effected?

Mr. E. F. Whelan (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Fisheries and Forestry): 1. Yes. Expenditures are as follows: 1960-61, $188,659; 1961-62, $216,412; 1962-63, $240,703; 1963-64, $222,667; 1964-65, $253,738; 1965-66, $334,029; 1966-67, $421,469; 1967-68, $531,037.

These figures represent total costs for supplies, services and salaries for both headquarters and regional establishments.

2. Title of Publication	Expenditures 1966-67	1967-68
Fisheries of Canada and La Pêche (12 issues)	$12,000	$15,000
Canadian Fish Culturist (2 issues)	6,000	3,500
Canadian Fisheries Reports (2 issues)	8,000	4,500
Annual Report	7,000	5,500
Press Releases	2,000	2,100
Consumer Publications	14,000	17,000
Information Sheets	12,000	18,000

Expenditures for the years 1960-65 are not available.

3. Fisheries of Canada, 6,200 English, 2,300 French copies; Canadian Fish Culturist, 3,500 copies; Canadian Fisheries Reports, 2,000 copies.

Distribution of the above publications is made by mail. They are sent to fisheries research institutions, universities, libraries, officials of fish and game departments, editors and representatives of trade organizations, Canadian embassies and trade commissioners, fishery training institutions, conservation magazines, fishermen, processors, industrial concerns, Members of Parliament and honourable Senators.

Press releases are distributed by hand and by mail to Canadian Press and to all Canadian daily and weekly newspapers, radio and television outlets, fishery magazines, Members of Parliament and other interested parties.

PROVISION OF INCENTIVES TO REHABILITATE PEOPLE ON WELFARE

Question No. 2,584—Mr. Robinson:

Will the federal government consider the feasibility of providing incentives to rehabilitate people from the welfare rolls of municipalities?

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of National Health and Welfare): The federal government does provide financial incentives, by way of cost-sharing, to the provinces for rehabilitation programs, for example, work activity projects under the Canada Assistance Plan. In addition, through the on-going consultative services of the Department of National Health and Welfare and through federal-provincial working groups, increased attention is being given to the rehabilitative aspects of welfare services.

REPRESENTATIONS CONCERNING THE RECOGNITION OF COMMUNIST CHINA

Question No. 2,585—Mr. Laprise:

1. Has the Canadian Government received letters, telegrams or resolutions from Canadians or from Canadian associations objecting to the recognition of Communist China?

2. If so, how many has the Government received?

3. Has the Government received Notes or indications from foreign governments opposing Canada's recognition of Communist China?

[Translation]

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): 1. Yes, the Canadian government has received letters and telegrams from Canadian citizens and from Canadian associations objecting to our proposal to recognize the Government of the People's Republic of China. The Canadian Government has also received letters from Canadian citizens and associations supporting the proposed recognition of the Government of the People's Republic of China.

2. Since May 29, 1968 when the Prime Minister made his initial statement concerning the intention of the Canadian Government to enter into negotiations toward recognition with the Government of the People's Republic of China, the Office of the Prime Minister and the Department of External Affairs have received 183 letters objecting to this proposal.

3. Yes. Two protest notes have been received from the Embassy of The Republic of China. The U.S. State Department press officer, Robert McCloskey, commenting on the Canadian proposal to recognize the Government of the People's Republic of China said on February 11, 1969, "We are very much concerned over the possible implications of such moves for the position of the Government of the Republic of Nationalist China, which is a responsible and co-operative member of the international community and with which the Government of Canada maintains diplomatic relations". A small number of other governments have indicated confidentially that they have certain reservations about the decision of the Canadian Government to recognize the Government of the People's Republic of China. Several governments have similarly indicated that they welcome the Canadian initiative.

[English]

SIR GEORGE WILLIAMS UNIVERSITY RIOT

Question No. 2,596—Mr. Hales:

1. With regard to the riot at Sir George Williams University, how many people were arrested?

2. What was their Country of origin?

3. How many were in possession of Visas and what status did each one who was from another Country have?

4. What fines were levied?

5. How many were deported as a result of this riot, and to what Countries were they deported?

6. How many of those arrested were receiving student loans, grants, or scholarships from the Canadian Government?

7. Were any of those involved receiving grants from the Canada Council and, if so, how many and what was the total amount of the Canada Council grants?

Mr. Yves Forest (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the departments of Manpower and Immigration and External Affairs and the Canada Council as follows: 1. Ninety-seven.

2. Forty-nine were Canadian citizens. The breakdown by citizenship of the remaining 48 people is as follows: Trinidad, 10; Jamaica, 4; Guyana, 2; Barbados, 2; Bahamas, 1; Dominica, 1; Haiti, 1; Other West Indies, 10; Belgium, 1; Algeria, 1; Israel, 1; New Zealand, 1; U.S.A., 5; Portugal, 1; Morocco, 1; France, 1; Italy, 1; Great Britain, 2; Germany, 2.

3. The status of the aliens is as follows: Landed Immigrants, 26; Applicants for Landing, 2; Students, 18; No status, 2.

4. Only one person has so far been fined under the Immigration Act in connection with this matter. Information on other fines which may have been levied under the Criminal Code or Juvenile Delinquency Act would have to be obtained from the courts in Montreal.

5. Until at least such time as the courts have dealt conclusively with the charges against the individuals awaiting trial in this matter, the Department of Manpower and Immigration has no basis for instituting deportation proceedings against any of the aliens.

6. One.

7. No.

ACRES INTERTEL LTD.—EMPLOYMENT AS CONSULTANT

Question No. 2,606—Mr. Macquarrie:

1 Has Acres Intertel Ltd. at any time acted as a consultant to the Department of Communications in the preparation of reports for the Department?

2. If so, at what cost to the Government of Canada?

3. Is it the intention of the Government to Table these reports?

Hon. Eric W. Kierans (Postmaster General and Minister of Communications): 1. Yes.

2. The cost to the Department of Communications for services provided by Acres Intertel Ltd. is as follows:

Fiscal year 1968-1969, $49,187.86; 1969-1970, (to date) $31,000.00 (committed).

3. Acres Intertel Ltd. has been providing professional consultants to assist the Department of Communications in interference studies related to radio spectrum utilization. These professional consultants also provide specialized advice to Departmental personnel in their day-to-day operations. This assistance and advice is not normally incorporated in reports for publication, however, a special report on Communications in the Canadian North, being prepared with their assistance, will be tabled at a conference on Telecommunications and the North, scheduled by the department for mid-1970.

"PUT YOUR NAME IN SPACE"—PAYMENTS TO CONTEST JUDGES

Question No. 2,611—Mr. Macquarrie:

1. How much is to be paid to (a) Marshall McLuhan (b) Gratien Gelinas (c) Leonard Cohen, for their services as judges in the "Put Your Name in Space" contest?

2. What is the cost of advertising this contest?

3. For what reason is this contest being sponsored by the Minister of Communications rather than by Telesat Canada?

Hon. Eric W. Kierans (Postmaster General and Minister of Communications): 1. $200 including expenses.

2. Direct advertising costs were $750. Total costs including printing, promotion, and sorting of entries was $12,000.

[Mr. Forest.]

3. At the time the contest was initiated, Telesat Canada did not exist.

FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS—INVESTIGATION OF FOREIGN TAKEOVERS

Question No. 2,612—Mr. Saltsman:

1. What are the terms of reference of the internal group in the Department of Finance reviewing and investigating the question of foreign takeovers of financial institutions in Canada as stated by the Minister of Finance in Parliament on July 2, 1969?

2. Who are the individuals in the Department of Finance investigating this area?

3. When is it expected that this review will be completed?

4. Are representations being solicited on the subject from the Canadian public?

5. If so, when is the deadline for submitting such representations?

Hon. E. J. Benson (Minister of Finance): 1. Officials have been asked to review the significance for the national interest of foreign takeovers of firms in the securities industry, keeping in mind the following considerations: (i) the broad interest of the Canadian public including the responsiveness of the securities industry to official Canadian economic and financial policies, and the contribution of firms in this industry to the efficient channelling of savings into the most productive Canadian investments; (ii) The interest of Canadians who seek to raise investment funds, including their need for efficient and competitive financial institutions through which to raise the required funds at the most economical cost; (iii) The interest of Canadian investors seeking profitable and appropriate investment of their funds; (iv) The interest of the Canadian firms in the securities industry in the growth of international financial business which is a reflection of the growth in international economic relations.

2. Officials in the Department of Finance with responsibilities in the areas of financial institutions and capital markets in consultation with officials of other interested Departments and the Bank of Canada.

3, 4 and 5. Arrangements have not been made for formal representations on the subject by the Canadian public. The Minister of Finance would welcome receiving the views of interested groups and individuals. A study of foreign ownership and control of member firms is being carried out within the securities industry itself. The government wishes to take into account the views of interested groups and hopes to be in a position to make a statement on the subject of the review within the next few months.

NATIONAL ARTS CENTRE—AVAILABILITY OF FACILITIES

Question No. 2,613—Mr. Nystrom:

1. What facilities or services of the National Arts Centre are only available to "important" or "very important persons"?

2. What steps have been taken to insure the participation in the benefits of the National Arts Centre by all cultural and income groups in Canada?

3. Does the National Arts Centre have any regulations about the dress or appearance of its patrons?

Hon. Gérard Pelletier (Secretary of State): 1. There are no facilities or services of the National Arts Centre which are restricted to important or very important persons.

2. Under the National Arts Centre Act in object of the corporation is to develop the performing arts in the National Capital region and to assist the Canada Council in the development of the performing arts elsewhere in Canada. The Centre has an obligation to encourage talent and provide entertainment for all income groups through an artistic policy which provides quality performances on every level from classical to popular. In keeping with this, ticket prices for respective performances are kept as low as possible. The Centre conducts week day public tours and weekend popular events on adjoining terraces during the summer months which are free to the general public. The programming to date reflects as many aspects of Canadian culture as possible.

3. No.

PUBLICATION GRANTED SECOND CLASS MAILING PRIVILEGES

Question No. 2,615—Mr. Orlikow:

1. What is the name of the publication which has been granted second class mailing privileges under registration number 1965?

2. Who publishes the periodical in question?

3. What is the periodicity of the publication?

4. Who are the subscribers?

5. Is it sold to the public on newsstands or otherwise?

6. What is (a) the sale price of individual copies (b) the subscription rate?

7. On whose application was the second class privilege granted?

8. What was the basis of the decision to grant second class privileges in this case?

Hon. Eric W. Kierans (Postmaster General and Minister of Communications): In so far as the Post Office Department is concerned: 1. Up to the Neck.

2. Up to the Neck, 3553 St. Urbain, Montreal 130, P.Q.

3. 12 issues per year.

4. This information is not known to the Post Office Department.

5. This information is not known to the Post Office Department.

6. (a) This information is not known to the Post Office Department. (b) This information is not known to the Post Office Department.

7. Mrs. M. Destounis.

8. This publication met the criteria outlined in the regulations respecting second class mail made pursuant to Section 12 of the Post Office Act as amended by Chapter 5, of the Statutes of Canada 1968.

LONG HARBOUR, NFLD.—POLLUTION BY ELECTRIC REDUCTION PLANT

Question No. 2,618—Mrs. MacInnis:

1. Following the answer by the Department of Fisheries and Forestry to part (6) Question No. 2,470, by what authority and under what regulations was this decision made?

2. If it is found that the Electric Reduction Company of Canada is responsible for paying the cost of reclaiming Long Harbour, Newfoundland for fishing, who is responsible for paying compensation to the fishermen for income lost while the bay was polluted?

3. How much compensation has been paid so far and in what form?

4. What is the total estimated cost to the federal government of such compensation?

Mr. E. F. Whelan (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Fisheries and Forestry):

1. The decision was made by the Electric Reduction Company of Canada Limited at the request of the Department of Fisheries and Forestry.

2. The matter is now before the court in Newfoundland.

3. This information would have to be secured from the company.

4. Nil.

POSSIBLE CONTAMINATION OF THE EARTH BY RETURNING SPACE VEHICLES

Question No. 2,619—Mrs. MacInnis:

1. Is any Department or Branch of the Canadian Government making studies of the possibilities of contamination of the earth by returning space vehicles?

Questions

2 Is the government aware of any such studies being made under the auspices of the United Nations?

3. What procedures, if any, have been incorporated for decontamination of returning space vehicles to protect the human and natural resources of the earth before further vehicles are sent into space?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): 1. No.

2. No. However, the U.N. Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space has taken note of such studies made by the Committee on Space Research (COSPAR) of the International Council of Scientific Unions (ICSU).

3. The United States National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) has recently passed to the Canadian Embassy in Washington, as a matter of routine, a copy of NASA Press Release No. 69-83K of July 6 1969 which contains information on decontamination procedures for the return of Apolo 11 (pages 64-67 and 181-190). The United States Embassy in Ottawa has indicated it would be pleased to provide copies of these or other pages of special interest from the above release upon request.

REVIEW OF BASIC WAR PENSION RATES

Question No. 2,620—Mr. Mather:

Is consideration being given to making a review of the basic war pension rates every two years, as is being done in the United Kingdom, for the purpose of compensating recipients for price increases?

Hon. Jean-Eudes Dubé (Minister of Veterans Affairs): Yes, consideration is being given to this and to various other methods.

DOT FLIGHTS FROM OTTAWA, JULY 6 AND 7

Question No. 2,621—Mr. McGrath:

1. How many Department of Transport flights left Ottawa on July 6 and July 7, and at what times did these flights leave?

2. What aircraft were used for each of these flights?

3. What were the names of the passengers on board each of these flights?

4. What were the destinations of each of these flights?

5. What was the purpose of each of these flights?

Mr. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): Fourteen Department of Transport flights left Ottawa July 6 and July 7. These were training, ministerial and operational flights. The following aircraft were utilized: July 6—CF-GXK at 9:10 p.m.; CF-DOL at 10:00 a.m.

July 7—CF-CGE at 6:35 a.m.; CF-DTA at 9:05 a.m.; CF-DTF at 8:10 a.m.; CF-CGZ at 8:40 a.m.; CF-CGY at 9:10 a.m.; CF-CAQ at 4:45 p.m.; CF-CAY at 1:55 p.m.

CORRESPONDENCE FROM A. G. HEAKES

Question No. 2,622—Mr. Rondeau:

1. Did the Prime Minister received letters dated June 3, 7, 9, 10, 11, 12, 14, 15 and 16 from Mr. A. G. Heakes?

2. Did these letters enclose letters to the Solicitor General dated June 4, from the Correspondence Secretary to the Prime Minister dated June 5 and June 9?

3. Have these letters been acknowledged and, if not, for what reason?

4. Did the Prime Minister or the Prime Minister's Parliamentary Secretary receive any protests following the tabling of an answer to Question No. 1,930?

5. Did these protests have any connection with the announcement on June 5 that there had been a change in the Prime Minister's Correspondence Secretary?

6. (a) Did the Minister of Manpower and Immigration receive a letter dated June 5 from Mr. Heakes (b) has it been acknowledged (c) has the Minister of Manpower and Immigration or the Office of the Minister of Manpower and Immigration directly acknowledged any letter from Mr. Heakes (d) was a communication from the Montreal Office of the Department of Manpower and Immigration sent by registered mail on May 27 to Mr. Heakes and the reply to him by the Minister of Manpower and Immigration as the result of the intervention of the Prime Minister and, if so, was it signed and, if not, for what reasons?

7. Has the Minister of Communications received correspondence from Mr. Heakes, what is the nature of this correspondence, has any letter from Mr. Heakes to the Minister of Communications in the current calendar year been acknowledged and, if not, for what reason?

8. Did the Solicitor General receive a letter of June 4 from Mr. Heakes, has it been acknowledged and, if not, for what reason?

9. Did the Prime Minister receive a telegram on June 15 from Mr. Heakes, has it been acknowledged and, if not, for what reason?

10. Have the Prime Minister, the Solicitor General, the Minister of Manpower and Immigration and the Minister of Communications received any letter from Mr. Heakes since June 16, have they been acknowledged and, if not, for what reason?

Mr. J. E. Walker (Parliamentary Secretary to the Prime Minister): 1. June 3, yes. June 7, 9, 10, 11, 12, 14, 15 and 16, no.

2. No.

3. No.

4. No.

5. Not applicable.

6. (a) No; (b) Not applicable; (c) No; (d) Yes; it is not known whether or not it was signed.

7. Yes; request for an investigation of the actions of various persons in respect of Mr. Heakes' proceedings in bankruptcy; no.

8. There is no record on file of a letter to the Solicitor General from Mr. Heakes dated June 4, however, a copy of an undated letter from Mr. Heakes to the Solicitor General was received at that time and is probably the letter referred to; the foregoing letter was not acknowledged.

9. Yes; no.

10. Yes; some of this correspondence has been acknowledged by the Office of the Prime Minister and by the Office of the Solicitor General. The Ministers mentioned above have been the recipients of a constant flow of correspondence from Mr. Heakes in recent months, often of a repetitious nature and often at a rate of several letters a day. This correspondence refers mainly to the problems experienced by Mr. Heakes as a result of a bankruptcy in which he was involved several years ago but contains as well allegations by him of conspiracy and libel, of mail tampering and of police harassment. It has been pointed out to Mr. Heakes that his problems are essentially within the jurisdiction of the provincial government. For these reasons much of the correspondence received has been unanswered as it would appear to serve no useful purpose to continue to do so.

SCIENTIFIC RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT—PERCENTAGE OF GROSS NATIONAL PRODUCT ALLOCATED THERETO

Question No. 2,624—Mr. Orlikow:

1. Has the Government of Canada or the President of the Treasury Board set a goal regarding the percentage amount of the Canadian Gross National Product that should be allocated annually toward scientific research and development expenditures as stated by the Science Council of Canada in their Third Annual Report?

2. If so, what is that percentage and what criteria was used in its determination?

3. Has any target year date been set regarding the above percentage allocation of research and development expenditures?

Hon. C. M. Drury (President of the Treasury Board): 1. No.

2. Not applicable.

3. Not applicable.

SCIENCE COUNCIL—ANALYSIS OF THIRD ANNUAL REPORT

Question No. 2,625—Mr. Orlikow:

1. Which government agency or department is analyzing the recommendations of the Third Annual Report of the Science Council of Canada?

2. When is it anticipated that the above analysis on the Science Council's recommendations will be made public?

Mr. J. E. Walker (Parliamentary Secretary to Prime Minister): 1 and 2. The Third Annual Report of the Science Council of Canada will be reviewed by the Privy Council Office. Government statements which arise will be announced at the appropriate time after consideration of the opinions of other interested groups.

CANADIAN FILM DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION—LOANS FOR PRODUCTIONS

Question No. 2,628—Mr. McCleave:

1. How many film productions have the Canadian Film Development Corporation lent money to or invested money in and what are such productions and the amounts involved in each case?

2. What proposals for film productions have been turned down by the Corporation, and what was the amount involved in each case?

3. What criteria does the Corporation use to establish significant Canadian creative content?

4. Does the Corporation require that films be mainly based in Canadian settings?

5. Does the Corporation require that films be restricted to plots dealing with Canadian themes?

Hon. Gérard Pelletier (Secretary of State): I am informed by the Canadian Film Development Corporation as follows: 1. Applications for assistance for loans and investments reach the Corporation by way of requests for financing in: (a) complete feature film productions; (b) versions and other post-production assistance; (c) pre-production (scripts and related expenses).

As of July 9, 1969, the Corporation had lent money to or invested money in three feature film productions: "The Act of the Heart", "The Blast" ("Explosion"), and "La Chambre Blanche".

Due to the confidential nature of negotiations between the applicants, distributors, and other financing parties, the Corporation does not disclose financial details of the films or projects in which it is involved.

2. Eleven proposals for film productions have been refused. The Corporation does not disclose financial details of its negotiations with producers.

Questions

3. The purpose of the Canadian Film Development Corporation is to foster and promote the development of a feature film industry in Canada. In the view of the Corporation, this means developing film writers, directors, directors of photography, and producers, all of whom make major creative contributions to feature film production. The corporation does not, however, exclude from consideration, especially during the early stages of the development of the feature film industry in Canada, film productions in which there is an important non-Canadian contribution provided there is the opportunity for Canadians to participate along with non-Canadians.

4. No.

5. No.

AIR CANADA STEWARDESSES

Question No. 2,629—Mr. Coates:

1. How many stewardesses have been hired by Air Canada since January 1, 1965?

2. Were all the stewardesses hired bilingual and, if not, what proportion were bilingual?

3. How many of those hired were resident in the Province of Quebec, how many from the remaining nine provinces and how many were non-Canadians?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): The Management of Air Canada advises as follows: 1. 2,352.

2. No; 1300, or 55 per cent were bilingual.

3. Resident in Province of Quebec, 990, 43 per cent; Resident in other 9 provinces, 1147, 49 per cent; Non-Canadians, 215, 8 per cent.

PUBLIC SERVICE—SALARIES OVER $12,000

Question No. 2,630—Mr. Coates:

How many individuals in the Public Service of Canada receive a salary of $12,000 annually or more?

Mr. Yves Forest (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): 12,735.

MINISTERS' OFFICES—INCREASES IN STAFFS

Question No. 2,631—Mr. Coates:

What has been the increase in the personnel staffs in the offices of the Prime Minister and of his Cabinet Ministers since April 1, 1969, and in each instance, what has been the increase in the cost of operation of the offices of the Prime Minister and of his Cabinet Ministers?

Mr. Yves Forest (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council):

	(a)	(b) $
The Right Honourable the Prime Minister	4	31,745 per annum
The Hon. the Minister of Communications and Postmaster General	1	5,727 per annum
The Hon. the Minister of Fisheries and Forestry	1	6,202 per annum
The Hon. the Minister of Justice	1	3,988 per annum
The Hon. the Minister of Transport	3	17,918 per annum
The Hon. the Minister without Portfolio (Humbolt-Saskatchewan)	1	6,182 per annum
The Hon. the Minister without Portfolio and Leader of the Government in the Senate	2	20,211 per annum

All other ministers have submitted nil returns.

CABINET MINISTERS' OFFICES—RENOVATION AND FURNISHING

Question No. 2,633—Mr. Coates:

1. How many offices of Cabinet Ministers, either in the Parliament Buildings or in their departmental offices have undergone renovations and received new furnishings since April 1, 1969?

2. What are the names of the Cabinet Ministers who have had new furnishings and renovations carried out to their offices and what was the cost in each instance?

[Mr. Pelletier.]

Mr. Yves Forest (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): 1 and 2.

Name	Amount
Parliament Buildings
The Hon. Otto E. Lang	$ 80
The Hon. Ron. Basford	413
Departmental Offices
The Hon. Eric W. Kierans	$ 6,600
The Hon. Allan J. MacEachen	1,280
The Hon. John N. Turner	1,062
The Hon. E. J. Benson	1,208
The Hon. Bryce Mackasey	109

NATIONAL DEBT, MARCH, 1967, 1968, 1969

Question No. 2,635—Mr. Mather:

1. What was the total of the National Debt at March 1967, 1968 and 1969?

2. What was the total of the annual interest and debt charges on the National Debt at the same periods?

Hon. E. J. Benson (Minister of Finance): 1. 1967, $15,965 million; 1968, $16,760 million; 1969 (Preliminary), $17,326 million.

2. 1967, $1,190.6 million; 1968, $1,300.8 million; 1969 (Preliminary), $1,479.0 million.

CITIZENSHIP STATUS OF BRITISH WIVES OF CANADIAN WAR VETERANS

Question No. 2,636—Mr. Marshall:

Are British wives of Canadian War Veterans considered as Canadian Citizens in application for passports to travel to foreign countries?

Hon. Gérard Pelletier (Secretary of State): No, unless they have acquired Canadian citizenship in their own right.

NEWFOUNDLAND WAR VETERANS' WIVES—CITIZENSHIP STATUS

Question No. 2,637—Mr. Marshall:

1. What is the status of citizenship of wives of Newfoundland War Veterans who married overseas during World Wars I and II?

2. Are they considered Canadian citizens in application for passports to travel to foreign countries?

Hon. Gérard Pelletier (Secretary of State): Citizenship does not derive automatically from marriage to a War Veteran. However, the great majority of wives to whom the question refers are Canadian citizens and would be issued passports.

ANNUAL BUDGETS, CBAF AND CBAFT, MONCTON, CBZ, FREDERICTON

Question No. 2,638—Mr. Corbin:

1. What were the annual budgets (a) of radio station CBAF (b) of television station CBAFT of the Société Radio-Canada in Moncton for each year since they were opened or began operations including building, rental and operating costs?

2. What was the annual budget of station CBZ in Fredericton (including the CBD relay in Saint John) of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation for each year since it was opened or began operations, including building, rental and operating costs?

Hon. Gérard Pelletier (Secretary of State): It has not been customary to require the CBC to disclose information which could adversely affect the Corporation in the competitive business in which it is engaged.

INSTRUMENT LANDING SYSTEMS—LOCATION OF INSTALLATIONS

Question No. 2,641—Mr. Marshall:

Are any of the 29 instrument landing systems (ILS) recently purchased by the Department of Transport to be installed at the Airports at Stephenville and Deer Lake, Newfoundland?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): The intention of the Department of Transport is to install an (ILS) in support of the operation of jet aircraft into Deer Lake.

An (ILS) is presently installed at Stephenville.

CANADIAN PREFERENCE IN CHARTERED BANK LOANS

Question No. 2,648—Mr. Orlikow:

1. What machinery has been established in the Department of Finance to ensure that the Chartered Banks in Canada will be following the guidelines put forward by the Minister of Finance regarding loan preference to Canadian rather than U.S. customers and loan preference to lesser developed Canadian areas and small businesses as stated by the Minister in Hansard on page 11,019, July 9, 1969?

2. Was there any correspondence between the Minister and the Chartered Banks regarding these guidelines?

3. If so, will this correspondence be Tabled in the House?

Hon. E. J. Benson (Minister of Finance): 1. None, but the Governor of the Bank of Canada, when he appeared before the House of Commons Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs, stated that at recent meetings with executives of the chartered banks the Bank of Canada had expressed the view, as it has in earlier periods of tight credit conditions, that the banks should have special regard for the needs of borrowers in less prosperous areas of the country and of small businesses that do not have alternative sources of credit. In addition, very recently when it became apparent that in view of the higher bank loan rates in the United States U.S. corporations would have an incentive to borrow here directly or through Canadian subsidiaries, he had suggested to the banks that they should give priority in the use of their total loan resources to the credit-worthy demands of their Canadian customers. The Minister of Finance stated in the House on July 9 that he had expressed the same views to the banks.

2. No.

3. Answered by 2.

POLICY RESPECTING TRADE WITH SOUTH AFRICA

Question No. 2,649—Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre):

1. Is it the policy of the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce to stimulate trade opportunities between Canada and the Republic of South Africa, in spite of Canada's expressed opposition to South Africa's racial policies?

2. If so, have any special activities been undertaken in the last year to stimulate such trade?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): 1. Yes, normal trade promotional activities are conducted.

2. Canada has maintained trade posts in Cape Town and Johannesburg, South Africa for many years which process trade enquiries from both the Canadian and South African business communities. During fiscal year 1968-69 two trade missions visited South Africa as well as other countries.

NATIONAL DEFENCE—PURCHASE OF FALCON AIRCRAFT

Question No. 2,650—Mr. Deakon:

1. Has the Department of National Defence recently purchased eight Falcon aircraft?

2. If so, for what purpose?

3. What was the cost of these aircraft?

Mr. D. W. Groos (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Defence): 1 and 2. Seven Falcon aircraft have been purchased to provide faster and more economical transportation, as replacement for older, larger aircraft being withdrawn from service.

3. $13,200,000 including support requirements.

FARMERS' AVERAGE INCOME, QUEBEC, PRAIRIE PROVINCES

Question No. 2,651—Mr. Deakon:

1. What was the average income of farmers in the Province of Quebec for the years 1967 and 1968?

2. What was the average income of farmers in each of the Prairie Provinces for the years 1967 and 1968?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): The Dominion Bureau of Statistics reports that: 1 and 2. The average net income of farmers from farming operations for Quebec and each of the three Prairie Provinces is as follows for 1967 and 1968 in thousands of dollars:

Province	1967	1968	Average
Quebec	193,233	209,016	201,125
Manitoba	155,889	170,043	162,966
Saskatchewan	361,122	479,167	420,145
Alberta	280,459	381,724	331,092

These estimates of farm income are calculated by adding together farm cash receipts from farming operations, value of farm perquisites, value of changes in farm inventories of field crops and livestock, and deducting farm operating expenses and depreciation charges.

CANADIAN ARMY—ELIGIBILITY OF NEWFOUNDLAND PHARMACISTS

Question No. 2,652—Mr. Marshall:

1. Are persons registered and qualified as pharmacists in the Province of Newfoundland eligible to enter the Canadian Army as Pharmacist Officers without the requirement of additional training?

2. Is there a requirement of additional training and, if so, for what reasons?

3. If persons qualified and registered as pharmacists in the Province of Newfoundland are not eligible to enter the Canadian Army as Pharmacist Officers without additional training, is there a prohibition against civilian pharmacists qualified and registered in Newfoundland prescribing for Armed Forces personnel in Newfoundland?

4. Are qualified and registered pharmacists in the Province of Newfoundland considered eligible for appointments in the federal Food and Drug Directorate of the Department of National Health and Welfare?

5 Are qualified and registered pharmacists employed in the federal Food and Drug Directorate in Ottawa eligible for entry into the Canadian Forces as Pharmacist Officers?

6. Are the standards of qualification for Newfoundland pharmacists considered equal in both the federal Food and Drug Directorate and the Canadian Armed Forces and, if not, for what reasons?

Mr. Yves Forest (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Department of National Defence and the Department of National Health and Welfare as follows:

1. A person registered and qualified as a pharmacist in the Province of Newfoundland is eligible for enrolment in the Canadian Forces without additional training if he: a. holds a degree in pharmacy granted by a university or recognized school of pharmacy; and b. is in good standing with the Newfoundland Pharmaceutical Association.

2. Applicants without a degree in pharmacy would require additional training to obtain such a degree before becoming eligible for enrolment. The academic and professional enrolment standards were established as the minimum professional requirements for pharmacists entering the Canadian Forces. In addition to assuring a minimum academic entry standard, these criteria permit equal opportunity for progression in rank, post graduate training, and general professional responsibility for all Canadian Forces' pharmacists. Pharmacists enrolled without a degree would be at a distinct disadvantage in competing with their colleagues and would undoubtedly be restricted in career advancement.

3. The ineligibility of persons qualified and registered as pharmacists in the Province of Newfoundland to enter the Armed Forces as pharmacist officers does not preclude their dispensing drugs in a civilian capacity to Armed Forces personnel in Newfoundland.

4. Pharmacists who apply for employment with the Food and Drug Directorate of the Department of National Health and Welfare must possess the basic qualifications for entrance to the Pharmacy Group. These qualifications are at least university graduation in pharmacy, or eligibility for registration as a pharmacist in a province of Canada. Additional qualifications and experience may be required, depending on the classification level of the position for which an individual is being considered.

5. Pharmacists employed in the Federal Food and Drug Department in Ottawa are eligible for entry in the Canadian Forces as pharmacist officers if they have a degree in pharmacy and are a member in good standing as a practising or non-practising member of the Pharmaceutical Association, Society, or College of a Canadian province.

6. Insofar as the federal Food and Drug Directorate is concerned see answer to part 4.

The minimum academic and professional qualifications established for pharmacists entering the Canadian Forces are a degree in pharmacy and membership in good standing as a practising or non-practising member of the Pharmaceutical Association, Society, or College of a Canadian province.

EMPLOYMENT OF NEWFOUNDLANDERS IN LABRADOR

Question No. 2,653—Mr. Marshall:

1. How many applicants from Newfoundland have obtained employment in Labrador as listed at Canada Manpower Centres (a) Labrador City (b) Wabush (c) Churchill Falls?

2. How many applicants are listed at the following Manpower Offices in Newfoundland (a) St. John's (b) Gander (c) Grand Falls (d) Corner Brook?

3. How many applicants from the Province of Quebec have received employment in Churchill Falls through applications made through Canada Manpower Centres?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): 1. (a) and (b), 23; 1. (c), 32.

2. (a), 2,058; (b), 79; (c), 170; (d), 361.

3. 39.

CANADIAN ARMY—ISSUE OF NEW UNIFORMS

Question No. 2,654—Mr. Marshall:

1. When is it expected that issue of the new Canadian Army uniform will be made?

2. What will be the estimated cost of the new uniforms?

3. What is the value of present stocks of Army, Navy and Air Force uniforms and accessories on hand, in (a) Ordnance Stores (b) anywhere else?

4. With the cutbacks in strength of the Canadian Forces is it intended to decrease the orders for new uniforms with regard to economy?

5. How is it intended to dispose of present stocks of Army, Navy and Air Force uniforms and accessories after delivery of new uniforms?

6. When is it expected that the issue of new uniforms will be made to the Reserve Forces?

Mr. D. W. Groos (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Defence): 1. and 2. See reply to Question No. 994, Hansard page 4307, dated January 15, 1969.

3. $6,000,000.

4. Yes.

5. By phasing the issue program over a 3 year period, present stocks will be reduced through normal usage. Stocks remaining on completion of the issue of the new uniforms to members of the Regular Forces, will be used by the Reserves, until they in turn are converted to the new uniform, and by the Cadet organizations. Any surplus beyond these requirements will be issued to the Emergency Supply Planning Branch of the Department of Supply and Services, for the Canada Emergency Measures Organization or National Health and Welfare for future emergencies, or will be declared surplus to Crown Assets Disposal Corporation.

6. No firm date has been established and issue will not commence until after completion of the Regular Force issue program.

Questions

CANSO, NOVA SCOTIA—APPROVAL BY TOWN OF PLANS FOR FEDERAL BUILDING

Question No. 2,655—Mr. MacEwan:

Have site and building plans for a new federal building at Canso, Nova Scotia, been approved by the Town of Canso?

Hon. Arthur Laing (Minister of Public Works): Yes.

NEWFOUNDLAND—EMPLOYMENT OBTAINED BY STUDENTS THROUGH MANPOWER CENTRES

Question No. 2,657—Mr. Marshall:

How many students have secured employment during the months of May and June, 1969 through Canada Manpower Centres at Corner Brook, Grand Falls, Gander and St. John's, Newfoundland?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): The number of students who secured employment during the months of May and June 1969 through Canada Manpower Centres at Corner Brook, Grand Falls, Gander and St. John's Newfoundland was as follows:

	May	June
Corner Brook	144	171
Grand Falls	22	12
Gander	17	35
St. John's	78	130

RESERVE FORCES—CONSULTATION WITH CONFERENCE OF DEFENCE ASSOCIATIONS AS TO CUT-BACKS

Question No. 2,658—Mr. Marshall:

1. Has the Conference of Defence Associations been consulted with regard to cutbacks in the Reserve Forces?

2 If so, when was the meeting held?

3. If not, is it intended that they will be consulted?

4. What are the reasons for the cutting back of the reserves?

5. What is the strength of the Reserve Forces of Canada under (a) the Militia (Army) (b) the Naval Reserves (c) the Air Force Auxiliary?

Mr. D. W. Groos (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Defence): 1. Yes, see Hansard dated 15 July, page 11220, and 16 July, page 11284.

2. 11 July, 1969.

3. Not applicable.

4. The limitations imposed by a fixed budget have involved a reduction in the over-all size of the Canadian Forces, and this reduction applies also to the Reserves.

5. (a) 23,237; (b) 2,799; (c) 807.

[Mr. Groos.]

ESTABLISHMENT OF MILITARY BASE IN NEWFOUNDLAND

Question No. 2,659—Mr. Marshall:

1. Will consideration be given to the establishment of a military base in the Province of Newfoundland as requested by the Newfoundland Command of the Royal Canadian Legion?

2. What steps are being taken to make a study of the factors surrounding the establishment?

3. Under whose responsibility in the Department of National Defence does such a study fall?

Mr. D. W. Groos (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Defence): 1, 2 and 3. The proposal submitted by the Newfoundland Command of the Royal Canadian Legion for the establishment of a Canadian Forces' base in Newfoundland was given careful consideration during the recent review of defence policy by the Chief of Defence Staff and his advisors. However, it is not intended to establish such a base in Newfoundland at this time.

TAX REFORM—PERSONS INVOLVED IN PREPARATION

Question No. 2,660—Mr. Saltsman:

1. Have there been any individuals, other than civil servants, who have been involved in the preparation of the Government's White Paper on Canadian Tax Reform?

2. If so, who are these individuals and on what basis were they selected?

Hon. E. J. Benson (Minister of Finance): 1. Yes. Two categories of individuals who are not civil servants have been involved in the preparation of the government's White Paper on Canadian Tax Reform. Those in the first category are members of the government, and the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance. The second category includes three individuals; Mr. D. Andison, a lawyer working full time on contract with the Department of Finance, and Messrs. P. M. Farwell and M. C. F. Gillan, full time Special Assistants to the Minister of Finance. A third group have not been involved in the preparation of the White Paper as such, but did take part in the analysis of the recommendations of the Royal Commission on Taxation and of the views on tax reforms put forward by the provincial governments, national associations and others. These individuals were on contract to the Department of Finance. Their names are: Mr. R. J. Bertrand, Mr. R. Bourassa, Mr. J. R. Brown (presently a civil servant), Mr. R. W. Collins, Dr. R. W. V. Dickerson, Mr. D. G. Hartle (presently a civil servant), Mr. D. R. Huggett, Mr. E. G. Miller, Mr. A. Raynauld, Mr. L. M.

Read, Mr. A. E. J. Thompson (presently a civil servant), Mr. J. B. Tinker.

Also in this third group would be a number of economists who collaborated on the six studies prepared for the Department of Finance by the Institute of Quantitative Analysis of Social and Economic Policy (University of Toronto), referred to in question No. 1,111 on page 5310 of Hansard for February 10, 1969.

2. Mr. Andison and those in group three are accountants, economists or lawyers with particular experience in tax matters or in economic analysis. They were selected by the Department on the basis of that experience.

FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL MEETINGS AND CONFERENCES—PARTICIPATION BY MAYORS

Question No. 2,661—Mr. Marshall:

1. Is it the intention of the federal government to accede to the resolution of the 32nd Annual Conference of the Canadian Federation of Municipal Mayors at the meeting on "Local Communities and the Constitution" (a) to invite selected delegates to attend meetings or to participate in matters relating to federal, provincial or municipal interests as they feel are desirable, and (b) to invite selected delegates, wherever possible, to future Federal-Provincial Constitutional Conferences?

2. If the answer is 'no' for what reasons?

3. If the answer is 'yes' is it intended to invite such delegates to the next Federal-Provincial Conference?

4. If municipal authorities are not invited to participate directly, will the government request that provinces include municipal representatives in provincial delegations?

Mr. J. E. Walker (Parliamentary Secretary to Prime Minister): 1. The government will give careful consideration to any resolutions of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities that the Federation wishes to present to it. No resolution of the sort referred to in the question has been submitted to the government.

2. Not applicable.

3. Not applicable.

4. It is the view of the government that such a request on its part would not be appropriate.

SHIPMENTS OF CODFISH TO NIGERIA—BIAFRA

Question No. 2,663—Mr. Marshall:

1. Which department and/or agency arranged for the shipments of codfish sent to Nigeria/Biafra in 1968?

2. Which firms performed the work connected with shipment of this fish including the work of receiving, loading and overseeing shipment?

3. In each case, were tenders called for this work and, if not, for what reason?

4. In each case, how much was paid to these firms?

5. Was codfish transhipped from Newfoundland to Halifax before being shipped to Africa and, if so, for what reason and at what cost?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): 1. The Canadian International Development Agency in conjunction with the Fisheries Price Support Board, and the Department of National Defence.

2. 1st Consignment—Fisheries Price Support Board and Department of National Defence.

2nd Consignment—Keel Shipping Ltd., Fisheries Price Support Board, Canadian International Development Agency.

3. 1st Consignment—First consignment shipped by air on Department of National Defence aircraft at a cost of $27,000.

2nd Consignment—Second consignment shipped by chartered vessel which carried not only fish but other foodstuffs as well as hospital supplies. Total cost of charter: $149,021.44.

4. 1st Consignment—In view of urgency, first consignment purchased directly from Fisheries Price Support Board without tender call.

2nd Consignment—Tenders were called by Fisheries Price Support Board on behalf of the Canadian International Development Agency for the second consignment, and contracts were awarded to lowest bidders.

5. The fish supplied by the Fisheries Price Support Board from stocks held in Newfoundland was transported to Halifax for loading on board the chartered vessel as it was more economical to bring the fish to Halifax than to arrange for the vessel to call and load in Newfoundland. Total cost of transporting the fish from Newfoundland to Halifax amounted to $52,732.27.

CANADIAN FIRMS PARTICIPATING IN U.S. ROCKET CONSTRUCTION

Question No. 2,665—Mr. Beaudoin:

1. How many Canadian corporations participated directly or indirectly in the manufacture of parts used in the construction of American rockets since 1960, and for each of the years since?

2. What is the name of each?

3. How much money was earned from such participation?

Questions

Mr. Yves Forest (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce as follows:

Although a number of Canadian firms have participated in the United States space programs, no information is available on any Canadian firms participating in the manufacture of parts used in the construction of American rockets, per se.

CHANGE IN RUN OF M.V. "LUCY MAUD MONTGOMERY"

Question No. 2,667—Mr. Macquarrie:

1. Is it intended to transfer the M V Lucy Maud Montgomery from the Borden-Tormentine ferry service to the Wood Islands-Caribou run?

2. If so, when is such transfer to be made?

3. What alterations or extensions to dock and harbour facilities would be necessary to accommodate this ship?

4. What would be the total cost of such extensions or alterations?

5. If such transfer is not to be made, is it the intention of the government to assist in providing a third ship at Wood Islands-Caribou?

6 When is it intended to augment this service?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): The Canadian Transport Commission advises as follows: 1. Active consideration is being given to adding a third vessel to the Wood Islands-Caribou run, but no decision has yet been taken as to the identity of the vessel.

2. See Answer to 1.

3. See Answer to 1.

4. See Answer to 1.

5. See Answer to 1.

6. See Answer to 1.

RIVERS SUBDIVISION, CNR—INVESTIGATION OF ACCIDENT

Question No. 2,669—Mr. Skoberg:

1. Has the Canadian Transport Commission completed their investigation into the mishap on the C.N.R. Rivers Subdivision on April 28, 1968, where three employees were killed when the engine went through the bridge and, if so, what were the findings of the investigation?

2. If the Canadian Transport Commission has not completed its investigation into this mishap, how long does it expect to take?

3. Will the report be made public upon completion of the investigation and if not, for what reason?

4. How many man-hours have been spent, to date, in attempting to determine the cause for such mishap?

[Mr. Beaudoin.]

5. How many investigators have been assigned by the Department, to date, in determining the cause of such mishap?

6. Have any reports been received or requested from accredited representatives from the running trades and the Brotherhood of Maintenance-of-Way Employees into the cause of such a mishap?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): The Canadian Transport Commission advises as follows: 1. The investigation is completed and the report thereof is being considered by the Railway Transport Committee of the Canadian Transport Commission. The findings of the investigation are dealt with in three below.

2. Not applicable.

3. The application of the Brotherhood of Maintenance-of-Way Employees and of certain running trades for the report to be made public is now before the Railway Transport Committee.

4. Man-hours estimated at 170.

5. Eight.

6. Answered by three.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS—FOREIGN SERVICE OFFICERS, ADMINISTRATIVE TRAINEES

Question No. 2,671—Mr. Fairweather:

1. What is the total number of Foreign Service Officers or Administrative Trainees now employed by the Department of External Affairs?

2. How many persons designated as a Foreign Service Officer resigned from the Department for reasons other than retirement (a) in 1969, to date (b) in each of the last ten years?

3. How many persons designated as Administrative Trainee resigned from the Department for reasons other than retirement (a) in 1969, to date (b) in each of the last ten years?

4 Of those now in the service, how many in each category were stationed in Ottawa in June 1969?

5. Of those stationed in Ottawa, how many in each category were assigned directly to the office or the staff of the Secretary of State for External Affairs?

6. Are persons so assigned in addition to Special Assistants, Executive Assistants or Private Secretary not drawn from normal resources of the Department?

7. What are the funtcions of each Foreign Service Officer or Administrative Trainee assigned to the staff of the Secretary of State for External Affairs?

8. What are the special functions in the office or on the staff of the Secretary of State for External Affairs which require a Foreign Service Officer or an Administrative Trainee to perform them?

9. On the basis of what criteria is a Foreign Service Officer or an Administrative Trainee assigned to the office or the staff of the Secretary of State for External Affairs?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): 1. 495 Foreign Service Officers and 9 administrative trainees.

2. (a) 15. (b) The number of separations for reasons other than retirement or death for each of the last ten fiscal years is as follows: 1959-60, 8; 1960-61, 12; 1961-62, 8; 1962-63, 7; 1963-64, 10; 1964-65, 18; 1965-66, 11; 1966-67, 9; 1967-68, 10; 1968-69, 14.

3. (a) 3. (b) The Administrative Trainee Programme was begun in 1967. There was 1 resignation in 1968.

4. 223 Foreign Service Officers and 11 Administrative Trainees.

5. 3.

6. Such persons are drawn from normal resources of the Department.

7. The Departmental Assistants to the Secretary of State for External Affairs share a number of functions. These are: scanning the flow of reports from Canadian missions abroad and making selections and summaries for the Secretary of State for External Affairs and the Prime Minister; following proceedings of Parliament with particular reference to items relating to the Department of External Affairs; coordinating the preparation of replies to parliamentary questions and returns; assembling material from Departmental sources for statements and speeches by the Secretary of State for External Affairs; preparing replies to correspondence on Departmental matters addressed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs; and generally acting as liaison officers between the Minister's office and the various divisions of the Department of External Affairs and the Canadian International Development Agency.

8. See answer to part 7.

9. An attempt is made to provide officers who have the qualities required for the effective performance of the duties mentioned in the answer to part 7 and who will benefit from the general experience provided by such duties.

CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION—EXPENDITURES FOR NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING

Question No. 2,672—Mr. Peddle:

1. What is the total expenditure for advertising on behalf of the CBC in papers belonging to the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Association or Les Hebdos de Langue Française du Canada, in each of the ten provinces in the fiscal year 1968-69?

2. What was the total expenditure for advertising on behalf of the CBC in each of the following newspapers in the fiscal year 1968-69:

Canadian Middle East Journal, Bielaruski Holas, The Chinese Times, The Chinese Voice, The New Republic, Shing Wah Daily News, Bratstvo, Glas Kanadskih Srba, Hrvatski Glas, Kanadski Srbobran, Nas Put, Slovenska Drzava, Kanadsky Slivak, Nase Hlasy, Novy Domov, Slovensky Hlas, Modersmaalet Convinist-Contact, Compass-Onder Ons, Duca-Post, Goed Nieuws, Hollandia-News, De Nederlandse Courant, De Nederlandse Post, Pioneer, Meie Elu, Vaba Eestlane, Canadian Uutiset, Vapaa Sana, Der Courier, Dies und Das, Hamilton Journal, Ihre Brigitte. Kitchener Journal, Mennonitische Rundschau, Montrealer Nachrichtex, Montrealer Zeitung, Der Nordwesten, Torontoer Zietung, Die Zeit, Estia, Greek Canadian Tribune, Hellenic Echo, Hellenic Free Press, The Hellenic Postman, Hellenic Tribune, New Times, New World, Fuggetlen Magyarorszagot, Kanadai Fuggetlen Hirlap, Kanadai Magyar Ujsag, Kanadai Magyarsag, Kepes Vilaghirado, Magyar Elet, Magyar Hirlap, Menorah-Egyenloseg, Sporthirado, Logberg-Heimskringla, Il Cittadino Canadese, Corriere Canadese, Corriere Illustrato, Corriere Italiano, L'Eco d'Italia, La Famiglia Christiana, Il Giornale di Toronto, Il Mondo, L'Ora di Ottawa, La Tribuna Italiana, The Continental Times, The New Canadian, Canadian Jewish News, Canadian jewish Weekly, Chronicle Review, The Daily Hebrew Journal, The Jewish Eagle, The Jewish Post, Jewish Western Bulletin, The Yiddish Press, Latvia-America, Liaudies Balsas, Nepriklausoma Lietuva, Teviskes Ziburiai, The Malta Herald, Norrona, Czas, Glos Polski # Gazeta Polska, Zwieazkowiec, Correio Portugues, O Jornal Portugues, Lusitano, Luso-Canadiano, O Mesageiro, Voz de Portugal, Correo Hispano-Americano, Canada Svensken, Canada Tidningen, Nya Svenska Pressen, Batkivshchyna, The Canadian Farmer, Homin Ukrainy, Moloda Ukraina, My I Svit, Nasha Meta, Novi Dni, Novy Shliakh, Postup, Promin, Svitlo, Ukrainsky Holos, Ukrainsky Visti, Vilne Slovo, Yevanhelsky Ranok, Yunak, Zhinochy Svit?

3. What was the total expenditure for advertising on behalf of the CBC in daily newspapers in each of the provinces in the fiscal year 1968-69?

Hon. Gérard Pelletier (Secretary of State): I am informed by the CBC as follows: 1. Newfoundland, Nil; Maritimes Provinces, Nil; Quebec, $5,900; Ontario, Nil; Prairie Provinces, $316; B.C., Nil.

2. CBC spent a total of $127 on advertising in the ethnic press. It has not been customary to require the Corporation to disclose individual payments since such specific details could adversely affect business relationships.

3. Newfoundland, $3,900; Maritime Provinces, $8,085; Quebec, $56,448; Ontario, $12,433; Prairie Provinces, $50,664; B.C., $2,000.

Note: The above figures represent cash expenditures only. The bulk of CBC advertising is in daily newspapers on a contra-account basis.

Questions

POST OFFICE—EFFECT OF MAILING COSTS ON PERIODICALS

Question No. 2,674—Mr. Beaudoin:

1. To the knowledge of the Post Office Department, how many periodicals have had to cease their distribution because mailing costs are too high?

2. Is the government considering granting a special rate to periodicals which are concerned directly with educational information?

Hon. Eric W. Kierans (Postmaster General and Minister of Communications): In so far as the Post Office Department is concerned: 1. The number of periodicals which have had to cease publication because mailing costs are too high is not known to the Post Office Department.

2. No.

*CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION—ENGLISH PROGRAMS AMONG TOP TEN

Question No. 2,675—Mr. McCleave:

Of the regularly scheduled programs telecast by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation on its English network during mid-season 1968-69, which ones made in Canada were among the top 10, and which of such was not renewed?

Hon. Gérard Pelletier (Secretary of State): I am informed by the CBC as follows:

If, by the "top ten" among CBC-TV network programs is meant the ten programs with the biggest average audience, four such programs in mid-season 1968-69 were made in Canada—"Tommy Hunter", "Saturday Night Hockey", "Don Messer" and "Front Page Challenge". Of these four, one was not renewed—"Don Messer". There are, however, various ways of evaluating the performance of network programs: ranking by size of total audience to produce a "top 10" is only one of them.

POST OFFICE—RESCINDING OF FEE FOR SECOND CLASS PRIVILEGES

Question No. 2,676—Mr. Macquarrie:

1. Is it the intention of the Postmaster General to rescind the $15.00 application fee for second class postal privileges for publications in favor of an initial registration valid for the life of the publication?

2. How many publishers have received refunds of the $15.00 fee?

Hon. Eric W. Kierans (Postmaster General and Minister of Communications): In so far as the Post Office Department is concerned: 1. No.

2. Up to the 9th September, 1969, 1091.

[Mr. Pelletier.]

DEPARTMENT OF COMMUNICATIONS, ASSISTANT DEPUTY MINISTER (OPERATIONS)

Question No. 2,677—Mr. Macquarrie:

1. Was the position of Assistant Deputy Minister (Operations) in the Department of Communications filled by regular Public Service Commission procedures and competition?

2. Was this position advertised and, if so, in what manner?

3. If this position was open to competition, what was the number of that competition and who applied in the competition?

4. If this position was not open for competition, for what reasons was no competition held?

5. Who currently is Assistant Deputy Minister (Operations) for the Department of Communications, what salary does he receive, and what are his qualifications?

Hon. Gérard Pelletier (Secretary of State): I am informed by the Public Service Commission as follows: 1. The position of Assistant Deputy Minister (Operations) in the Department of Communications was filled by process of selection provided for in Section 10 of the Public Service Employment Act.

2. The position was not advertised.

3. Not applicable.

4. An executive search was carried out by the Executive Program of the Public Service Commission. No candidates were identified, either within or outside the Public Service, whose qualifications and experience were equal to or better than those of the candidate selected.

5. Mr. Gilles Bergeron. His salary is in the range $23,000-$29,000. Mr. Bergeron holds a Bachelor of Science Degree in Mining Engineering from the University of Montreal and a Master of Science Degree in Business Administration from the University of Toronto. The Commission considered that his experience in the private sector, and as an executive with the Quebec provincial public service and the federal public service, together with his educational qualifications, provided appropriate background and experience for his appointment to the post of Assistant Deputy Minister (Operations), Department of Communications.

POST OFFICE—REDUCTION OF THIRD CLASS RATES

Question No. 2,678—Mr. Mather:

Is consideration being given to reducing the third class postal rates presently charged to association periodicals to bring them into line with the rates being charged second class commercially-published periodicals?

Hon. Eric W. Kierans (Postmaster General and Minister of Communications): In so far as the Post Office Department is concerned: No.

MID-CANADA DEVELOPMENT CORRIDOR FOUNDATION

Question No. 2,679—Mr. Harding:

1. How much has the federal government contributed to the Mid-Canada Development Corridor Foundation since its inception?

2. What will be the extent of the federal government's participation in the Mid-Canada Development Corridor Conference planned for August 18-22?

Mr. Russell C. Honey (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): 1. Nil.

2. Two officials, Mr. André Saumier, Regional Economic Expansion and Mr. R. R. Cope, Canadian Transport Commission, attended as observers.

*PROVISION OF AID TO AMATEUR SPORT

Question No. 2,680—Mr. Rynard:

1. Has there been any consideration given to the requested increase of administration funds to all sports governing bodies under the Amateur Sports program?

2. What other grants, if any, have been approved?

3. What payment, if any, has been made to the Canadian Water Ski Association of the 50 per cent travel grant to the General Meeting which was held in Halifax, Nova Scotia?

4. What grants specifically have been promised to the Canadian Water Ski Association?

5. What number of grants have been paid to the Canadian Water Ski Association and what number are being considered?

Mr. Stanley Haidasz (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, the answer to this question is as follows: 1. Yes. Consideration has been given to the requested increase of administration funds to all sports governing bodies under the Amateur Sports program.

2. Other grants approved are for the purpose of assisting the holding of national championships, participating in international competitions and world championships, and conducting training programs for coaches, officials and athletes.

3. The Canadian Water Ski Association has been awarded a grant of $2,800 to assist in covering its administration costs as well as providing 50 per cent of travel assistance to its annual and one executive meeting during the 1969-70 fiscal year.

4. Other grants awarded to the Canadian Water Ski Association are as follows: Assistance to hold the 1969 national men's and women's championships: $6,898. Assistance to conduct a national coaches clinic in 1969: $3,844. Assistance to participate in the 1969 world championships in Denmark: $4,530. Pretraining of national team prior to world championships: $3,671.

5. All grants, as listed under Part 4 above, have been paid to the Canadian Water Ski Association, and none are presently being considered.

NATIONAL DEFENCE—GOODS SOLD AT CANEX STORES

Question No. 2,682—Mr. McCleave:

1. What is the policy of the Department of National Defence regarding the variety of goods sold at Canex stores?

2. Has the Department received complaints from civilian retailers and, if so, what is the nature of complaints?

3. What happens to any surplus realized by Canex stores?

Mr. D. W. Groos (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Defence): 1. The policy is to ensure that a Base Exchange will offer for resale the range of goods and services necessary to meet the needs of its patrons.

2. Yes. Prior to 1968, the three services operated their own resale activities. Subsequent to unification, CANEX was the name chosen for the consolidated non-public fund resale outlets of the Canadian Forces, and a number of merchants and operators of services located near some of the military bases thought a new activity was being introduced which would be harmful to their own particular business. When it was explained that this was not so, apprehensions prompting these complaints appeared to be dispelled.

3. Any profits realized are used to provide social, recreational and welfare benefits to the military community.

FINANCE—PLACING OF NEW MONEY IN CIRCULATION

Question No. 2,683—Mr. McCleave:

By what process is new money put into the financial bloodstream of Canada, over and above the replacement of worn out currency?

Hon. E. J. Benson (Minister of Finance): The Bank of Canada, through its monetary operations, is able to determine broadly the rate of increase in the combined total of currency outside banks and chartered bank deposits.

The proportion of this total which is held in the form of currency, however, is determined by the public. Anyone having a balance in his account at a chartered bank may withdraw all or any part of it in the form of Bank of Canada notes and anyone holding such notes may deposit them for credit to his account.

The chartered banks, of course, keep sufficient holdings of Bank of Canada notes in their vaults and tills to meet demand by their customers, and obtain them from the Bank of Canada by paying for them out of deposit accounts maintained at the Bank. They may also return excess notes in their possession for credit to their deposit accounts at the Bank of Canada. A chartered bank's holdings of Bank of Canada notes in its own tills, along with its deposit at the Bank of Canada, constitute the statutory cash reserve which it is required to maintain under the Bank Act.

NUMBER OF EUROPEAN STUDENTS WORKING IN CANADA

Question No. 2,684—Mr. Dionne:

1. How many European workers, students or others came to Canada during the years 1966-67-68-69 to work on fruit or tobacco farms in Ontario or other provinces under an agreement with the Department of Citizenship and Immigration?

2. (a) What were their nationalities (b) under what conditions did they work?

[Translation]

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): 1. European students have been admitted for employment on tobacco farms in Ontario under special arrangement with the Department of Manpower and Immigration. In the years 1966, 67 and 68, there were respectively 506, 1295 and 1174 students admitted for such work in Canada. In 1969, 802 European students were admitted for work on the tobacco harvest.

2. (a) Nationalities of students—British, French, German, Austrian, Dutch, Belgian. (b) Conditions of employment are the same as those for Canadian workers and students are paid the prevailing wage rates for the industry.

3. Figures are not available for students who came to work on fruit farms, as there is no formal program for this group of employers.

[Mr. Benson.]

[English]

ESTABLISHMENT OF WAGES INDEX

Question No. 2,687—Mr. Robinson:

Will the federal government consider the advisability and/or feasibility of setting up a wages index along the lines of the consumer price index and, if so, will it be made retroactive in order to be more meaningful?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): The Dominion Bureau of Statistics reports that: In the Dominion Bureau of Statistics monthly publication "Man Hours and Hourly Earnings" (publication no. 72-003), Table 12 shows the average weekly wages for production workers in the manufacturing industry adjusted for changes in the consumer price index. This table also contains an index of weekly wages in the industry mentioned on a 1961 base. The same table is included in the monthly DBS publication "Prices and Price Indexes" (publication no. 62-002).

As the majority of production workers are located in manufacturing, there are no plans to extend the published data to other industries.

IMMIGRATION—ENTRY APPLICATIONS BY FOREIGN ARMED FORCES PERSONNEL

Question No. 2,689—Mr. Robinson:

1. How many applications have been received from members of the Armed Forces of other countries for permanent entry to Canada and how many have been received from each country for which an application was made?

2. How many have been (a) accepted (b) rejected (c) are still being considered?

3. Are aplications considered from applicants (a) within Canada (b) outside Canada and are they both given the same consideration and, if not, what is the difference in the consideration given?

Hon. Allan J. MacEachen (Minister of Manpower and Immigration): 1 and 2. Because an immigrant's membership in the armed services of another country has no bearing on his admissibility to Canada, information on this subject is not recorded on immigration documentation.

3. Applicants whether in Canada or outside who are eligible to apply for landed immigrant status under the Immigration Act and Regulations, must meet the same basic requirements in order to qualify for admission with one exception. Those applicants who are in Canada cannot obtain any units of assessment under the selection criteria for arranged employment. This exception applies to all applicants in Canada and is in accordance with paragraph 4 of Schedule A of the Immigration Regulations as revised by Order in Council P.C. 1967-1616 with effect from October 1, 1967.

NATIONAL DEFENCE—ORDER FOR OFFICERS' UNIFORMS

Question No. 2,691—Mr. Hees:

1. Was there an order placed in recent weeks for 14,000 or more officers' uniforms for the Department of National Defence?

2. If so, what was the name of the company which received the order?

3. Was the order placed after tenders had been called?

4. If so, what were the other firms or companies that were asked to tender on this order?

5. If the order was awarded without a call for tender, what was the reason?

Hon. James Richardson (Minister of Supply and Services): In so far as Department of Supply and Services is concerned: 1. No.

2 to 5. Not applicable.

ASSISTANCE TO NEW BRUNSWICK FOR PARK DEVELOPMENT

Question No. 2,692—Mr. Corbin:

1. Has the federal government granted assistance to New Brunswick under the ARDA program, for the purchase of land for park development?

2. If so, where are the parks for which land was acquired between April 1, 1963 and March 31, 1969?

3. During this period, what was the total expenditure on land acquisition and park development?

[Translation]

Mr. Russell C. Honey (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): 1. Yes.

2. Gloucester, Caraquet, Belledune, Val Comeau; Northumberland, Sandy Point; Kent, Jardine; Queens, Waterborough; Kings, Pine Grove; Charlotte, New River Beach.

3. Federal expenditure, $238,063.

[English]

NEW BRUNSWICK—SUBSIDIES TO COMPANIES BY REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT AGENCY

Question No. 2,693—Mr. Corbin:

1. What companies in the Province of New Brunswick have received financial aid under the Regional Development Agency's subsidy program since the inauguration of this program and what amount did each company receive?

2. What is the address of each company?

Mr. Russell C. Honey (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Regional Economic Expansion):

Questions

1. Name of Firm	Grant Paid	2. Address
Atlantic Business Forms Ltd.	$ 19,741.29	Dieppe
Crystal Beverages (1963) Ltd.	191,069.84	Moncton
Maritime Agencies Ltd.	7,687.70	Moncton
New Brunswick Wire Fence Co. Ltd.	22,503.08	Moncton
Hub Meat Packers Ltd.	45,929.07	Moncton
McCready Foods Ltd.	87,322.93	Sussex
Sussex Refrigerating Mfg. Co. Ltd.	24,447.09	Sussex
Craig's Machine Shop Ltd.	4,295.46	Hartland
Canadian Industries Ltd.	42,926.00	Hartland
Eagle Fisheries Div. of National Sea Products Ltd.	280,453.52	Shippegan
United Maritime Fishermen Ltd.	128,936.74	Lamèque
Restigouche Abattoir Ltd.	35,288.29	Campbellton
Caraquet Ice Co. Ltd.	25,669.25	Caraquet
The Anglo-British Columbia Packing Co. Ltd.	209,728.25	Caraquet
Industrial Cab Co. Ltd.	47,200.00	McAdam
Raoul Coutourier Lumber Ltd.	26,288.00	Edmundston
Bishop Sawmills Ltd.	46,413.92	Canaan Forks
Oscar Belanger Lumber Co. Ltd.	823.00	St. Arthur
Southampton Contractors Ltd.	22,070.00	Nackawic
Mason & Risch Ltd.	137,353.34	Woodstock
Long Fertilizers Ltd.	20,000.00	Clair
Highland Hardwoods Ltd.	52,141.60	Veneer Siding
Normandie Wines Ltd.	47,130.96	Scoudouc
Emile J. Bourque	6,822.46	Lower Cape Bald
Atlantic Industries (NB) Ltd.	81,357.66	Dorchester Cape
S. W. Bell Ltd.	41,250.63	Stickney
Charles V. Bartlett	4,473.89	St. Andrews
McCain Foods Ltd.—Carleton Cold Storage Co. Ltd.	304,221.54	Florenceville
Belledune Fertilizers Ltd.	2,602,855.17	Belledune Pt.
George Burchill & Sons (Plywood) Ltd.	163,181.54	South Nelson
British Canadian Pitwood Ltd.—Millerton Wood Products Ltd.	20,423.75	Newcastle
Nadeau Poultry Farms Ltd.	51,527.89	St. François
Salaison Gauvin Ltée	47,338.69	Paquetville
Christopher Mills Ltd.	37,841.00	Christopher Siding
Canadian Tuna Company	900,000.00	St. Stephen
TOTAL	$5,786,713.55

STEPHENVILLE, NEWFOUNDLAND—ASSISTANCE TO INDUSTRIES

Question No. 2,694—Mr. Marshall:

1. What industrial enterprises in the Stephenville area, Newfoundland have received federal government assistance?

2. How much did each receive in the years 1968-69, 1967-68, 1966-67, 1965-66, 1964-65?

[Mr. Honey.]

Mr. Russell C. Honey (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): 1. As of July 15, 1969: West Coast Dairy Limited; Lundrigans Limited; Atlantic Brewing Co. Limited; Aluminum Co. of Canada Limited.

Questions

2.	1969-70	1968-69	1967-68
West Coast Dairy Limited	$ 1,531.00	Nil	$4,291.00
Lundrigans Limited	66,984.49	"
Atlantic Brewing Co. Limited	170,682.38	"
Aluminum Co. of Canada Limited	131,032.00	"

No payments made prior to 1967-68.

NATIONAL ARTS CENTRE—PERFORMANCES HELD, COST OF PUBLICITY

Question No. 2,695—Mr. Harding:

1. What performances have been held at the National Arts Centre to date?

2. What was the expenditure on publicity in each case?

Hon. Gérard Pelletier (Secretary of State): I am informed by the National Arts Centre as follows:

1. Date	Performance	Number of Performance	Auditorium
June 2-5	National Ballet	6	Opera
3-7	Montreal's TNM, French Theatre	6	Theatre
6	Toronto Symphony	1	Opera
8	Gordon Lightfoot	1	Opera
4-7	Party Day (theatre)	5	Studio
4 & 5	Manitoba Consort (Music)	2	Salon
8 & 9	Orford Quartet (music)	2	Salon
9-14	Vancouver Playhouse (theatre)	8	Theatre
10-14	Studio-Opera (Orpheus)	6	Studio
10-12	Montreal Symphony	3	Opera
13	Monique Leyrac (singer)	1	Opera
14	Pop Electronic (variety)	1	Opera
13 & 14	Cassenti Players (music)	2	Salon
17-28	Charlottetown (Festival)
	"Ann of Green Gables"	7	Opera
	"Johnny Belinda"	6	Opera
23-28	Underground Film Festival	6	Theatre
June 30 to July 5	Instantheatre	7	Theatre
3	Montreal Symphony	1	Opera
6	Duke Ellington (jazz)	1	Opera
7-12	Montreal's TNM (Fr. Theatre)	7	Theatre
8-18	Love & Maple Syrup (variety) (Held over after the 18th)	13	Studio
9	Juliette Greco (singer)	1	Opera
10	Montreal Symphony	1	Opera
14-19	Harry Belafonte (variety)	6	Opera

2. It has not been customary to require Crown Corporations to make public information of this kind, which in the case of the National Arts Centre would affect negotiations with impresarios and artists.

ANGOLA AND MOZAMBIQUE—DISAPPROVAL OF PORTUGUESE POLICY

Question No. 2,697—Mr. Nystrom:

With reference to Question 2,599, has Canadian disapproval of Portuguese policy in Angola and Mozambique been expressed in the NATO council or any NATO meeting?

Questions

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): As was noted in reply to question No. 2,599, the Canadian attitude towards Portuguese policy respecting Angola and Mozambique has been expressed at the United Nations General Assembly and directly through the Canadian Embassy in Lisbon, which we considered to be the appropriate channels. We have not raised the matter in the NATO Council or other NATO meetings.

DR. MARY WADDINGTON—EMPLOYMENT BY DEPARTMENT OF INDIAN AFFAIRS AND NORTHERN DEVELOPMENT

Question No. 2,698—Mr. Orlikow:

1. Did the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development employ either on a part-time basis or a contract basis, Dr. Mary Waddington of London, England?

2. What duty was Dr. Waddington asked to undertake, and for how long?

3. What payments have been, or will be made to Dr. Waddington in the form of salary, per diem allowance, expenses, etc.?

4. Was an attempt made to engage anyone in Canada, particularly any Canadian Indian, to undertake the task assigned to Dr. Waddington?

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): 1. Dr. Mary Waddington was employed by the Department on a contract basis.

2. Dr. Mary Waddington was hired on a two month contract to assist in designing and evaluating training programs for kindergarden teachers and Indian teacher aides sponsored by the Department in the provinces of British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Ontario. She was also asked to observe similar programs sponsored by the Bureau of Indian Affairs in the United States.

3. Dr. Waddington was paid a contract salary of $334 per week for a period of 11 weeks.

4. No.

STUDY OF INDIAN SELF-GOVERNMENT

Question No. 2,699—Mr. Orlikow:

1. Has the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development engaged, on a contract basis, someone to do a study on Indian self-government?

2. Who is the person employed, what is his name, what are his qualifications and what payments will he receive?

3. If the person employed is not a Canadian, from what country does he come?

4. Was any attempt made to find a Canadian, and more particularly a Canadian Indian, qualified to do this kind of special study?

[Mr. Nystrom.]

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): 1. The Department has no knowledge of anyone who has been engaged to do a study on Indian self government.

2. Non Applicable.

3. Non Applicable.

4. Non Applicable.

CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION—COMPLAINTS RESPECTING PROGRAM CHANGES

Question No. 2,700—Mr. Coates:

1. Has the CBC at any time in the past received as many complaints about a program change as was the case with the Don Messer Show?

2. What program changes in CBC programming in the past have resulted in a strong public reaction, what were the names of the programs and on what dates were these programs cancelled?

3. Has the CBC ever reinstated a program previously cancelled as a result of public reaction?

Hon. Gérard Pelletier (Secretary of State): I am informed by the CBC as follows: 1. Yes.

2. Many programs and program changes have prompted strong favourable or unfavourable reaction. Over the years, there have been several instances in which strong reaction came as a result of cancellation of an established network series, such as the Don Messer program, but no complete list is available. Examples that come to mind are the cancellation of "Life is Worth Living", with Bishop Sheen, in 1957, and the decision not to renew contracts of the hosts of "This Hour Has Seven Days", in 1966.

3. No cancelled CBC network program has been reinstated as a result of public reaction alone. However, this factor is considered in arriving at various program decisions or reviewing program schedules.

LOCKHEAD L-1011—CONTRACTS AWARDED TO CANADIAN FIRMS

Question No. 2,701—Mr. Coates:

1. How many contracts have been awarded to Canadian firms who work on the Lockheed L.1011 and what was the amount of each of the contracts awarded to Canadian firms?

2. Was Enamel and Heating Products Limited considered by the government for any of the contracts awarded firms in Canada and, if so, for what reason has any not received any of the work involved on this aircraft?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): 1 and 2. The Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce has provided the Lockheed Aircraft Company with advice, guidance and assistance on the placement of contracts with Canadian firms for the Lockheed L1011; however, the ultimate selection of Canadian sub-contractors and the awarding of contracts is the responsibility of the aircraft company itself.

The total number and value of all contracts is not known at this stage. However the initial value of major contracts awarded to date is estimated at approximately $58 million.

RADIO AND TELEVISION POLITICAL INTERVIEWS

Question No. 2,702—Mr. Broadbent:

With reference to the reply to Question No. 1,901, Part 1(b) and 2(b) for the period of time tapes or script are kept, for (a) CBC radio, and (b) CBC television, how many members of each political party have been interviewed on the National News?

Hon. Gérard Pelletier (Secretary of State): I am informed by the CBC as follows:

As stated in the reply to Question No. 1,901 no continuing record of individual news interviews is maintained. However, it has been possible to meet the original request to some extent through a review of scripts and tapes. In the case of English networks, total figures for the original six month period requested, October 1968-March, 1969, could be established but, in the case of French networks, totals for the same period could not be ascertained and have been tabulated for a more recent two-month period, May-June, 1969. As requested, the figures listed below refer to the number of members of parliament interviewed, and do not necessarily indicate the number of occasions on which each appeared.

Number of Members of Parliament Interviewed On CBC Network News Programs

English Radio Network		English TV Network
(October, 1968-March, 1969)
Liberal	76	Liberal	32
P.C.	35	P.C.	21
NDP	19	NDP	11
R. Cr.	4	R. Cr.	1
French Radio Network		French TV Network
(May and June 1969)
Liberal	14	Liberal	25
P.C.	2	P.C.	5
NDP	—	NDP	1
R. Cr.	2	R. Cr.	6

29180—739

Questions

AUTOMOBILE COMPANIES—NATURE OF INFORMATION SUPPLIED

Question No. 2,703—Mr. Broadbent:

1. With reference to the reply to Question No. 2,587, what categories of confidential information are supplied by the automobile companies?

2. Without releasing specific numbers, what indicators were referred to to conclude Kaiser Jeep fully complied with the terms of the program in question?

3. What steps were taken to verify confidential information supplied to the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce by the various business concerns it deals with?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): 1. Companies participating in the Automotive Program supply confidential reports to the Government on their activities related to the Automotive Program. The data in these reports relates to production, sales and trade. From this information the Government is able to determine the performance of the company relative to its commitments under the Automotive Program.

2. The indicators referred to in determining the performance of any company relative to its qualification requirements are Canadian value added in vehicle production the net sales value of Canadian vehicle production relative to the net sales value of vehicle sales in Canada and the growth of the value of Canadian sales.

3. In the case of confidential information supplied by vehicle producers participating in the Automotive Program, the Department of National Revenue conducts an audit of the company's records and reports for each production year and determines the performance of the company relative to its obligations.

TRAINING OF ITALIAN AIR CADETS

Question No. 2,704—Mr. Brewin:

1. Has the Italian Government requested the Canadian Government to train Italian air cadets?

2. Has the Canadian Government agreed to such a proposal and what are the arrangements as to numbers, payment for training, etc.?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): 1 and 2. No. However, informal enquiries concerning the possibility of training academy pilots in Canada were made by the Military Attaché at the Italian Embassy in Ottawa in July. Thus far, no formal request has been made by the Italian Government concerning this subject.

Questions

NORANDA, ROUYN—CONTRIBUTIONS TO PROJECTS

Question No. 2,705—Mr. Caouette:

1. What amount is the federal government contributing to the cost of constructing a new hospital in Noranda?

2. (a) Is the federal government subsidizing the construction of the "Maison Pie XII" home for the elderly in Rouyn and, if so, in what amount (b) is Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation granting a loan for the construction of this establishment and, if so, in what amount and at what rate of interest?

3. Is a large polytechnical school to be built in Rouyn and, if so (a) will the federal government contribute to the cost of this project (b) in what amount will this contribution be made under the terms of a federal-provincial agreement and what particular agreement?

Mr. Yves Forest (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): 1. No project has been received requesting federal assistance towards the cost of constructing a new hospital in Noranda, P.Q., under the terms of the Hospital Construction Grant.

2. (a) No. (b) Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation has granted a loan to the Quebec Housing Corporation for the construction of "Maison Pie XII" in the amount of $730,071 at an interest rate of 6¾% per annum.

3. Not applicable.

INVESTIGATION OF MERITS OF METRIC SYSTEM

Question No. 2,706—Mr. Guay (St. Boniface):

1. Is the government investigating the merits of the Metric System?

2. If not, are there any plans to do so?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): 1. The interdepartmental committee responsible for studying present, prospective and ultimate applicability of metric measurement in Canada has prepared a report which is being presented for the consideration of the government.

2. N/A.

*NATIONAL PARKS—LEBRETON FLATS, OTTAWA

Question No. 2,707—Mr. Mather:

Is the Government of Canada giving favourable consideration to the establishment of a national park at the LeBreton Flats area in Ottawa?

Mr. Russell C. Honey (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Mr. Speaker, the answer to this question is no.

[Mr. Sharp.]

ACTIVITIES OF SOVIET VESSEL "TAJMYR"

Question No. 2,708—Mr. Anderson:

1. Has the Department of External Affairs recently been in touch with the Soviet Embassy concerning the activities of the Soviet vessel Tajmyr?

2. Has this vessel been challenged in recent weeks by Canadian Armed Forces vessels about her intentions on the B.C. Coast?

3. Has this vessel refused to answer such requests for information?

4. Was this vessel boarded by Canadian Government officials in Vancouver Harbour?

5. For how long has this vessel been under surveillance by Canadian Armed Forces units?

Mr. Yves Forest (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Department of the Secretary of State for External Affairs and the Department of National Defence as follows:

1. No.

2. No. The Soviet vessel TAJMYR conducted all operations outside the limits of Canadian territorial waters.

3. Not applicable.

4. Yes. All foreign vessels entering a Canadian port are subject to inspection by Customs and Immigration officials. In addition Department of Transport Radio Inspectors board foreign vessels upon request. In those cases where a diplomatic request for permission to visit a Canadian port has been received on behalf of a naval-associated ship, and has been approved, an officer of the Canadian Forces also goes on board.

5. Since June 1, 1969.

MUSCULAR DYSTROPHY—EXPENDITURE ON RESEARCH

Question No. 2,709—Mr. McCleave:

1. How much money does the federal government put into research in muscular dystrophy?

2. How, much by province, is made available for help to victims of muscular dystrophy and what is the formula?

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of National Health and Welfare): 1. No specific projects in the field of research in Muscular Dystrophy have been submitted to the Department of National Health and Welfare by the provinces or National Muscular Dystrophy Agencies.

2. Despite the fact that specifically designed projects have not been submitted by the provinces in support of muscular dystrophy victims, assistance is made available and rendered to the provinces for such purposes under a number of federal-provincial programs, such as the Medical Rehabilitation and Crippled Children's Grant, the Child and Maternal Health Grant, and the Hospital Insurance and Diagnostic Services Program.

DIVORCE ACT—SEX OF PETITIONERS

Question No. 2,711—Mr. McCleave:

How many petitioners were male and how many female in the first year of the new Divorce Act?

Hon. John N. Turner (Minister of Justice): 14,309 male, 23,807 female.

NORTHWESTERN ONTARIO WATER DIVERSION PROGRAM

Question No. 2,712—Mr. Penner:

1. What has been the total cost of a study entitled "A Proposed Water Diversion Program out of Northwestern Ontario into Lake Superior" presented in June 1964, and the six progress reports which have followed up to November, 1968?

2. How much has been spent on this study since November, 1968?

3. What amount of this sum was provided by the federal government and what amount came from the Province of Ontario?

4. Did any other group, organization or private concern make funds available for this study?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister without Portfolio): 1. The study entitled "A Proposed Water Diversion Program out of Northwestern Ontario into Lake Superior" presented in June 1964, was not prepared by this Department or by the Department of Northern Affairs and National Resources. No copy of any study or report by this name and with this date is available in this Department.

The six progress reports are those of the co-ordinating Committee on Northwestern Ontario Water Resources studies established in accordance with announcements made by the Prime Ministers of Canada and Ontario in the latter part of 1965 indicating that studies of Ontario's natural water resources and related economic development would be undertaken by each Government; and that these studies would be co-ordinated by a committee representing the two Governments to avoid duplication of effort. Expenditures for the studies done by Canada which are referred to in the six progress reports mentioned in the Question are as follows:

Fiscal Year	Cost ($)
1966-67	147,000.
1967-68	616,000.
1968-69	755,000.
1969-70	685,000. (estimated)

2. Expenditure figures not broken down as at November 1968. See (1) above.

3. All sums referred to in (1) provided by the Federal Government. Ontario's expenditures on its investigations are not known.

4. No.

"MAN AND HIS WORLD"—DISPLAY PORTRAYING MONTREAL AIRPORT

Question No. 2,713—Mr. Crouse:

1. What has been the total cost of the special display portraying the new Montreal International Airport at Sainte-Scholastique that has been established at "Man and his World"?

2 What will be the cost of maintaining this exhibition at "Man and his World"?

3. What has been the cost of the supporting ceremonies associated with the special display?

4. How many individuals will be directly involved in the showings at "Man and his World", what are their names, what work do they ordinarily carry out within the departments they are associated with and what salary does each receive?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): 1. The total cost of the New Montreal International Airport Exhibit at "Man and His World" has been $18,622.34.

2. The exhibit is being maintained without cost to the Department of Transport; maintenance and operation is being provided by the "Man and His World" organization.

3. Cost of the ceremony associated with the opening of the exhibit, insofar as the Department of Transport was concerned, was under $1,000.

4. No Department of Transport personnel are involved in the daliy showings at the "Man and His World" display. The presentation is self-explanatory; projectionists and hostesses are provided by the "Man and His World" organization.

CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION—FEES PAID TO JOHN LENNON, YOKO ONO AND OTHERS

Question No. 2,714—Mr. Schumacher:

1. What fees were paid by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation to John Lennon and/or Yoko Ono for their appearances on CBC television and/or CBC radio during the period May 20, 1969 to June 10, 1969?

2. What fees were paid to any other person in respect of the appearances of John Lennon and/or Yoko Ono on CBC television and/or CBC radio by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation during the period May 20 to June 10, 1969?

3. Did the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation contribute in any financial way in respect of the appearances of John Lennon and/or Yoko Ono on CBC television and/or CBC radio?

4. What are the full names and addresses of any party and/or parties receiving financial contributions from the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation in respect of the appearances of John Lennon and/or Yoko Ono on CBC television and/or CBC radio?

Hon. Gérard Pelletier (Secretary of State): I am informed by the CBC as follows: 1 and 2. Nil.

3. No.

4. Not applicable.

LEGAL AND MEDICAL SERVICES, P.E.I.—PAYMENTS BY DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS

Question No. 2,715—Mr. Macquarrie:

1. (a) What is the total amount which has been paid by the Department of Veterans Affairs in Prince Edward Island for legal services for each of the last five fiscal years (b) to whom were such fees paid and what is the total amount in each case?

2. (a) What is the total amount which has been paid by the Department of Veterans Affairs in Prince Edward Island for medical fees for each of the last five fiscal years (b) to whom were such fees paid and what is the total amount in each case?

Hon. Jean-Eudes Dubé (Minister of Veterans Affairs): 1. (a) 1964-65, $9,474.31; 1965-66, $7,879.89; 1966-67, $7,995.60; 1967-68, $10,187.49; 1968-69, $8,323.40.

(b) F. A. Large, $15,715.39; G. B. MacDonald, $19,052.38; J. B. Nicholson, $9,092.92.

2. (a) 1964-65, $40,010; 1965-66, $43,699; 1966-67, $60,893; 1967-68, $50,857; 1968-69, $45,722.

(b) Dr. M. N. Beck, $15,360; Dr. M. L. Bonnell, $17,784; Dr. W. E. Callahan, $2,240; Dr. L. S. Cox, $16,716; Dr. R. D. Drysdale, $40,140; Dr. E. M. Found, $6,690; Dr. S. Hellmich, $2,258; Dr. G. G. Houston, $27,708; Dr. T. A. Laidlaw, $16,716; Dr. J. B. Lantz, $18,460; Dr. A. A. MacLeod, $9,937; Dr. F. A. MacMillan, $16,716; Dr. M. J. Putnam, $16,716; Dr. G. E. Robinson, $2,544; Dr. J. C. Sinnott, $23,880; Dr. J. C. Theriault, $3,104; Dr. F. W. Tidmarsh, $4,212.

Note: In answer 2. (a) and (b), amounts under $2,000 are not available.

MINISTER OF SUPPLY AND SERVICES—POSITION IN RELATION TO PSSRB

Question No. 2,716—Mr. Macquarrie:

1. Was the Hon. James A. Richardson appointed Minister through whom the Public Service Staff Relations Board reports to Parliament, in order that the Minister reporting for this Board not be a Minister involved as a disputant in any grievance?

2. Now that the Hon. James A. Richardson has assumed departmental responsibilities, is it the intention of the government to make another Minister responsible for reporting on behalf of the PSSRB?

[Mr. Schumacher.]

Mr. J. E. Walker (Parliamentary Secretary to Prime Minister): 1. Yes.

2. Yes.

CANADA—WIDE POSTAL CODE—CONTRACT TO DESIGN

Question No. 2,719—Mr. Macquarrie:

1. When was Samson Belair Riddell Stead Inc. awarded the contract to recommend a design for a Canada-wide postal code?

2. When is the final report regarding this postal system expected?

3. How much is it anticipated this study will cost?

4. Is the report to be tabled when completed?

5. Will the zone codes now in use in Toronto and Vancouver be studied by this group?

6. Will the codes recently established in these cities be retained in a new national code system?

7. What other cities will have their present codes retained?

Hon. Eric W. Kierans (Postmaster General and Minister of Communications): In so far as the Post Office Department is concerned:

1. July 7, 1969.

2. Near the end of 1969.

3. Approximately $63,500.

4. Consideration will be given to tabling this report when it is received.

5, 6, 7. Yes, the terms of reference of the study call for consideration of the present postal zone numbering system. In the design of any national postal code for Canada, full consideration will be given to integrating present postal zone designators.

POST OFFICE—SUBSIDIES TO PERIODICALS

Question No. 2,720—Mr. Macquarrie:

1. Is the Post Office considering a program of subsidies or other aid to periodicals seriously affected by reclassification and/or raises in postal rates?

2. Is the Post Office specifically extending aid to Le Devoir and/or L'Evangeline as was suggested as being needed by the Postmaster General on May 22, 1969, during the television program "Tirez au Clair"?

3. Are there two or three English language newspapers being considered for assistance, following on the Postmaster General's suggestions in this regard during the same television program and, if so, what are the names of these newspapers?

Hon. Eric W. Kierans (Postmaster General and Minister of Communications): In so far as the Post Office Department is concerned:

1. No.

2. No.

3. No.

PERIODICALS—ASSISTANCE BY SECRETARY OF STATE

Question No. 2,721—Mr. Macquarrie:

1. Is the Secretary of State considering a programme of subsidies or other aid to periodicals seriously affected by reclassification and/or raises in postal rates?

2. Is the Secretary of State specifically extending aid to Le Devoir and/or L'Evangeline as was suggested as being needed by the Postmaster General on May 22, 1969, during the television programme Tirez au Clair?

3. Are there two or three English language newspapers being considered for assistance, following on the Postmaster General's suggestions in this regard during the same television programme and, if so, what are the names of these newspapers?

Hon. Gérard Pelletier (Secretary of State):

1. No.

2. No.

3. No.

PUBLICATIONS GRANTED SECOND CLASS MAILING PRIVILEGES

Question No. 2,722—Mr. Macquarrie:

1. How many of the publications listed in the answer to Question 2,311 of the honourable Member for Wellington have since been granted second class mailing privileges?

2. Before the granting of second class privileges, what was the name and publisher of each of these publications and what is now the name and publisher in each of these cases?

3. Which of these publications were granted second class privileges by virtue of the fact that they are now published by private interests which are eligible for second class privileges, but were formerly published by associations ineligible for these privileges?

Hon. Eric W. Kierans (Postmaster General and Minister of Communications): In so far as the Post Office Department is concerned:

1. Twenty six.

2. List attached.

3. Canadian Boy.

Title	Publisher Before Registration	After Registration
Humanist in Canada	Pacific Northwest Humanist Publications	Same
The Grain Grower	United Grain Growers Ltd.	Same
Ontario Report	Canada Law Book	Same
Bible Deliverance Fellowship	Theodore Ruud	Same
The Northern Beacon	K. D. Campbell	Same
Student's Letter	Millar Memorial Bible Institute	Same
Liste Loi Lacombe	J. C. Lussier	Same
Liste Actions Judicaires	J. C. Lussier	Same
Open Bible Bulletin	New Brunswick Bible Institute Inc.	Same
Full Gospel Bible Institute Bulletin	Full Gospel Bible Institute	Same
Rivers of Living Water	Nipawin Bible Institute	Same
Out of the Storm	The Yonge Street Mission	Same
Dimes on the March	Rehabilitation Foundation for the Disabled	Same
The New Life	Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Frank Uhlir	Same
V.I. Catholic News	Mr. E. J. Flynn	Same
Dominion Outreach	Pentecostal Assemblies of Canada	Same
Philippines	The Brothers of the Sacred Heart	Same
Maritime Messenger	Maritime Christian College	Same
Le Nouveau Progrès	Le Progrès du Comté de Terrebonne Inc.	Same
Reflection	United Church of Canada	Same
Ontario Naturalist	Federation of Ontario Naturalists	Same
The Young Naturalist	Federation of Ontario Naturalists	Same
The John Howard Society of B.C. Newsletter	John Howard Society of B.C.	Same
Le Naturaliste	Les Cercles des Jeunes Naturalistes	Same
Educational A.B.C.'s of Industry	Educational A.B.C.'s of Canadian Industry	Same
Canadian Boy	Boy Scouts of Canada	Canyouth Publications Ltd.

BROADCAST BY CBC OF POEM DEDICATED TO CHE GUEVARRA

Question No. 2,723—Mr. Dinsdale:

1. Was the poem dedicated to Che Guevarra and written by Michele Garnot broadcast by CBC Radio as a part of Sunday Supplement under the title "Che" on July 20, 1969?

2. Was the same poem featured in Sunday Supplement on January 26, 1969?

3. If so, what is the reason for this double exposure?

Hon. Gérard Pelletier (Secretary of State): I am informed by the CBC as follows: 1. A poem entitled "Che", concerning Che Guevara and written by Michel Garneau was broadcast by Sunday Supplement July 20, 1969.

2. Yes.

3. Many outstanding items are rebroadcast in order to effect summer budgetary economies. This poem was one of the most favourably received of all the items broadcast in the program since it began in October, 1968.

QUESTIONS PASSED AS ORDERS FOR RETURNS

CONSULTANT STUDIES—GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENTS

Question No. 1,323—Mr. Skoberg—Supplementary

1. For the fiscal years 1963-64, 1964-65, 1965-66, 1966-67, 1967-68 and 1968-69, what outside consultant studies have been undertaken or are presently in progress sponsored by the following Departments and Agencies (a) Agriculture (b) Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation (c) Consumer and Corporate Affairs (d) Defence Production (e) Energy, Mines and Resources (f) External Affairs (g) Fisheries (h) Forestry and Rural Development (i) Indian Affairs and Northern Development (j) Justice (k) Labour (l) Manpower and Immigration (m) National Defence (n) National Health and Welfare (o) National Revenue (p) Post Office (q) Prime Minister's Office (r) Privy Council Office (s) Secretary of State (t) Solicitor General (u) Trade and Commerce (v) Transport (w) Treasury Board (x) Veterans Affairs?

2. What was the cost for each outside consultant study prepared for each department and agency and were the contracts from each department or agency awarded by competitive tendering and, if not, for what reason?

Return tabled.

DEPARTMENT OF INDUSTRY, TRADE AND COMMERCE—ASSISTANCE TO GROUPS IN CANADA

Question No. 1,662—Mr. Robinson:

1. Does the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce provide subsidies and/or support programs for any segment of the economy, groups or individuals inside Canada and, if so, to what extent, in what amounts, and to whom are the amounts paid?

[Mr. Kierans.]

2. What amounts have been paid for subsidies and/or support programs during each of the years 1960-68 inclusive?

Return tabled.

LEGISLATION—USE OF OUTSIDE ADVISERS

Question No. 1,989—Mr. Lewis:

1. On which bills introduced or to be introduced in this session has the government organized committees of outside advisors to consult on the bill prior to its introduction in the House?

2. On which bills introduced or to be introduced were outside experts paid expenses or honoraria or fees for consultations prior to the introduction of said bills in the House?

3. In each case, what are the names, addresses and occupations of those consulted?

4. What was the amount in honoraria, expenses or fees paid to each individual consulted?

Return tabled.

MILITARY AID TO PORTUGAL, THE NETHERLANDS, GREECE

Question No. 1,990—Mr. Lewis:

1. For each year from 1960 through 1968, what is the amount of military aid supplied to (a) Portugal (b) the Netherlands (c) Greece?

2. Has the Government of Canada sold, arranged or approved the sale of military materiel to (a) Portugal (b) the Netherlands (c) Greece and, what is the amount of these sales to each country for each year from 1960 to 1968?

Return tabled.

EXPROPRIATIONS OF LAND BY FEDERAL GOVERNMENT

Question No. 2,045—Mr. Robinson:

1. How many acres of land have been expropriated by the federal government during each of the years 1960-68 inclusive in each of the provinces and territories of Canada?

2. What was the cost of such acquisitions of land in each province and territory of Canada for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive?

Return tabled.

DEPARTMENT OF SECRETARY OF STATE—PROVISION OF SUBSIDIES

Question No. 2,090—Mr. Robinson:

1. Does the Department of the Secretary of State provide subsidies and/or support programs for any segment of the economy, groups or individuals inside Canada and, if so, to what extent, in what amounts, and to whom are the amounts paid?

2. What amounts have been paid for subsidies and/or support programs during each of the years 1960-68 inclusive?

Return tabled.

DEFENCE RESEARCH BOARD—CONTRACTS AWARDED TO R.C.A. VICTOR

Question No. 2,171—Mr. Broadbent:

1. Who are the present members of the Defence Research Board?

2. What criteria was used in the selection of members of the Board who are not government officials?

3. Is Mr. J. D. Houlding, President of R.C.A. Victor, a member of the Defence Research Board?

4. For the fiscal years 1962-3, 1963-4, 1964-5, 1965-6, 1966-7, and 1968-9, how many D.N.D. contracts and the respective expenditures, were undertaken by R.C.A. Victor and for what purposes?

5. For each of the above contracts, was there any competitive tendering and, if so, what were the names of the tendering firms?

6. If not, for what reason?

CONTRACTS AWARDED BY DEPARTMENTS OF FORESTRY AND ECONOMIC EXPANSION

Question No. 2,180—Mr. MacDonald (Egmont):

1. Since January 1, 1964, what persons have been awarded contracts for consulting or professional services to the Department of Forestry and Rural Development or the Department of Regional Economic Expansion?

2. (a) What were the purposes of these contracts (b) for what length of time were these contracts (c) at what cost (d) were some contracts renewed, extended or modified, and (e) which ones?

3. What contracts are presently in operation and when is it expected they will be completed?

Return tabled.

ANTI-POVERTY PROGRAMS

Question No. 2,271—Mr. MacDonald (Egmont):

1. What specific anti-poverty programs have been in effect since 1963?

2. When were they instituted?

3. What amount of money was expended?

4. Who were the senior staff people responsible for these programs?

5. Have these programs been continued and, if not, for what reason and which ones have been discontinued?

6. What steps are presently being considered with regard to anti-poverty programs?

Return tabled.

INFORMATION SERVICE, DEPARTMENT OF SECRETARY OF STATE

Question No. 2,273—Mr. Robinson:

1. Does the Department of the Secretary of State provide an information service and, if so, what is the cost for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive?

2. How many publications and/or periodicals and/or information sheets and/or public releases were provided by the Department for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive, and what was the cost for each publication for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive?

3. How many copies of each publication are provided and to whom are they distributed and how is the distribution effected?

Return tabled.

ATLANTIC PROVINCES——ASSISTANCE FOR RESEARCH FACILITIES

Question No. 2,275—Mr. MacDonald (Egmont):

1. What research facilities or activity did the Atlantic Development Board assist in 1963, 1964, 1965, 1966, 1967, 1968 and 1969?

2. What research facilities or activity has the Department of Regional Economic Expansion assisted or contemplates assisting?

3. What applications are currently pending for research facilities or assistance in the Atlantic provinces?

Return tabled.

INFORMATION SERVICE—INDUSTRY, TRADE AND COMMERCE

Question No. 2,291—Mr. Robinson:

1. Does the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce provide an information service and, if so, what was the cost for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive?

2. How many publications and/or periodicals and/or information sheets and/or public releases were provided by the Department for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive, and what was the cost for each publication for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive?

3. How many copies of each publication are provided and to whom are they distributed and how is the distribution effected?

Return tabled.

SUMMER EMPLOYMENT OF STUDENTS BY FEDERAL GOVERNMENT

Question No. 2,307—Mr. Robinson:

1. How many students were employed by the federal government in all departments during the summer months for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive?

2. How many students will be provided with summer jobs during the year 1969 with all departments of the federal government?

Return tabled.

CANADIAN MEMBERSHIP IN INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

Question No. 2,343—Mr. Beaudoin:—Supplementary

1. What is the number of international organizations to which Canada belongs?

2. What is the annual cost to Canada for participation in each of these organizations?

Return tabled.

TASK FORCES APPPOINTED

Question No. 2,349—Mr. Burton:

1. What is the name of each Task Force or body with equivalent status to a Task Force appointed by the government since June 25, 1968?

2. With respect to each such Task Force or equivalent body (a) on what date was it appointed (b) what is the name of the Chairman and other members (c) what are its terms of reference (d) has it reported to the government and, if so, on what date was the report submitted (e) if the report has been submitted, has it been made public and on what date was it made public?

Return tabled.

INFORMATION SERVICE, DEPARTMENT OF LABOUR

Question No. 2,351—Mr. Robinson:

1. Does the Department of Labour provide an information service and, if so, what was the cost for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive?

2. How many publications and/or periodicals and/or information sheets and/or public releases were provided by the Department for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive, and what was the cost for each publication for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive?

3. How many copies of each publication are provided and to whom are they distributed and how is the distribution effected?

Return tabled.

TRADE AND COMMERCE ADVISORY GOVERNMENT-INDUSTRY COMMITTEES

Question No. 2,390—Mr. Rose:

1. What are the terms of reference and functions of each advisory government-industry committee established by the Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce?

2. Who are the members of each advisory committee and what criteria was used in the selection of each member of the respective committee?

Return tabled.

[Mr. Robinson.]

CANADA LABOUR CODE—REQUESTS FOR DELAY IN IMPLEMENTATION

Question No. 2,393—Mr. Dionne:

1. What Canadian employers have requested a delay in implementation of the Canada Labour Code as it affects their enterprises?

2. What reasons have such employers advanced in support of their requests for extensions of the time allowed for implementation?

3. Have all such requests been granted?

4. If not, what are the names of the employers whose requests have been refused?

Return tabled.

COST OF FRED PROGRAMS

Question No. 2,395—Mr. MacDonald (Egmont):

1. What FRED programs are presently in effect?

2. When was each agreement signed?

3. What is the general purpose in terms of each plan?

4. Over what period of time will they be in effect?

5. What amount of federal money is committed?

6. What amount of provincial money is committed?

7. When will each of these plans be up for renegotiation?

8. How much has already been expended by the federal government and by provincial governments?

9. What machinery exists for evaluating the effectiveness of the various FRED programs?

Return tabled.

SHARED-COST PROGRAMS

Question No. 2,400—Mr. Robinson:

1. How many shared-cost programs does the federal government contribute to with the provinces?

2. When did the shared-cost programs start?

3. How much has been paid per year under shared-cost programs since the inception of each program?

4. What is the total estimated federal contribution to shared-cost programs for 1969, 1970, 1971, 1972 and 1973?

Return tabled.

AREA DEVELOPMENT AGENCY

Question No. 2,417—Mr. Yewchuk:

1. (a) How much money has been spent on and by the Area Development Agency to date (b) how many new jobs were created as a result of aid by the Agency (c) what was the average salary of the jobs created (d) what are the present positions of the senior officers of the Agency, as well as their salaries, both present and while they were with the Agency?

2. (a) Which firms received aid from the Area Development Agency (b) how much financial aid was received by each (c) how many new jobs were created by each?

Return tabled.

CROWN CORPORATIONS—NUMBER AND COST

Question No. 2,421—Mr. Robinson:

1. How many Crown corporations are there in Canada?

2. How many of them have a monopoly?

3. How many are self-supporting?

4. What was the subsidy, if any, paid to each Crown corporation during each of the years 1960 to 1968 inclusive?

Return tabled.

CONSULTANT FIRMS—NUMBER AND COST OF THOSE RETAINED

Question No. 2,452—Mr. Fortin:

1. During each of the last three years, which management consultant firms were retained by the government or its agencies?

2. What were the terms of reference of each of these firms and what was the remuneration in each case?

3. Of these management consultant firms retained during the past three years, which were American owned; and does the government give preference to Canadian firms and, if so, in what manner?

4. What was the duration of each of the contracts awarded to each such firm?

ADJUSTMENT ASSISTANCE BOARD—NAMES OF FIRMS ASSISTED

Question No. 2,490—Mrs. MacInnis:

1. At what date was the Adjustment Assistance Board created to provide federal financing for the automotive industry?

2. Who have been the members of that Board?

3. Which firms have obtained financial assistance from the Board and on what terms?

4. Which firms were in default on their income tax payments for 1968 to the collective amount of over $80 million?

5. Have any of these defaulting firms been granted assistance for 1969 and, if so, which and in what amounts?

INFORMATION SERVICE—DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS

Question No. 2,503—Mr. Robinson:

1. Does the Department of Veterans Affairs provide an information service and, if so, what was the cost for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive?

2. How many publications and/or periodicals and/or information sheets and/or public releases were provided by the Department for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive and what was the cost for each publication for each of the years 1960-68 inclusive?

3. How many copies of each publication are provided and to whom are they distributed and how is the distribution effected?

Return tabled.

INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITIONS—CANADIAN PARTICIPATION

Question No. 2,522—Mr. Robinson:

What international expositions or exhibitions does Canada enter yearly, including trade fairs and where is each located and what is the cost to the government for each such exhibition, exposition or trade fair?

Return tabled.

POST OFFICE—APPLICATIONS FOR SECOND CLASS MAILING PRIVILEGES

Question No. 2,590—Mr. Baldwin:

1. How many applications for second-class mailing privileges have been received by the Postmaster General?

2. (a) How many such applications have been rejected or denied (b) who or what are they?

3. Have the $15 fees accompanying the rejected applications been retained in all cases?

4. (a) Have refunds been made in some cases (b) if so, for what reason?

Return tabled.

INDIAN AFFAIRS—TECHNICAL SERVICES BRANCH

Question No. 2,593—Mr. Orlikow:

With reference to the information contained in the reply to Question No. 1,984 (May 7, 1969) Sections 2-(a) and 2-(c), the following additional facts are sought (a) what is the age of Mr. E. W. Wallace; what degrees, if any; what diplomas, if any, does he hold from recognized universities; when were these obtained; what positions (including where and for how long) has Mr. Wallace held in the USA and in other countries (b) was Mr. Wallace the first or original American citizen among the six of eleven professional people in the Physical Planning Division (c) what was the date on which each of these Americans were hired by the government (d) what are the names, ages, degrees held, diplomas held, teaching posts held, working posts held, and present classification rating of the other five Americans in this Division (e) are there any reasons for such a concentration of Americans in one specific area of employment in view of the fact that as of 1969 there is an opportunity to hire Canadians trained in landscape architecture in Canada?

Return tabled.

NUMBER AND COST OF AIRCRAFT AVAILABLE TO CABINET MINISTERS

Question No. 2,632—Mr. Coates:

1. How many aircraft are presently available to the Prime Minister and members of his Cabinet, what types of aircraft are a part of this fleet, what was the total mileage logged in the last fiscal year and what was the expenditure for maintaining and operating these aircraft in the last fiscal year?

2. How many trips have been undertaken by these aircraft in the present fiscal year to date, what has been the total mileage logged to date, how many times has the Prime Minister used the aircraft in the present fiscal year and what has been the total mileage?

3. How many Cabinet Ministers have made use of the aircraft in the present fiscal year, what are the names of the Ministers, how many times has each used the aircraft and what was the destination of the Minister in each instance?

4. Has the Prime Minister or any of the members of his cabinet used any of the government aircraft at any time for personal reasons and, if so, what ministers and on what dates and in each instance, what was the destination of the aircraft and the estimated cost in each case?

Return tabled.

OFFICIAL LANGUAGES BILL—SUBMISSIONS IN OPPOSITION

Question No. 2,634—Mr. Coates:

How many submissions were received by the Prime Minister and/or the Secretary of State, in opposition to Bill C-120 and what were the names of the individuals or organizations who presented the submissions in question?

Return tabled.

APPOINTMENTS TO COURTS, 1960-69

Question No. 2,640—Mr. Robinson:

1. How many appointments have been made to the Supreme Court of Canada in each of the years 1960 to 1969 inclusive and from which province did each come?

2. How many appointments have been made to each county and superior court of each province for each of the years 1960-69 inclusive?

3. Were any appointments to the county and/or Supreme Court of any province appointed from outside that province and, if so, from what province was the appointment made?

Return tabled.

HUMBER-ST. GEORGE'S-ST. BARBE—PUBLIC WORKS

Question No. 2,662—Mr. Marshall:

1. What projects are being undertaken by the Department of Public Works in the District of Humber-St. George's-St. Barbe and what are the projects (a) being investigated (b) approved (c) for which are tenders being prepared (d) for which tenders have been accepted, who are the successful tenderers and the amounts?

2. What are the expected completion dates of approved projects?

Return tabled.

PUBLICATIONS—LANGUAGES OF PRINTING

Question No. 2,664—Mr. Robinson:

1. In how many different languages and in what different languages are government and/or departmental publications printed?

[Mr. Coates.]

2. What is the cost of translating the publications into languages other than French or English?

3. Where are the translated publications circulated and for what purpose?

Return tabled.

SPACE PROGRAMS—UTILIZATION OF CANADIAN SCIENTISTS

Question No. 2,670—Mr. Beaudoin:

1. Since 1960, and for each of the subsequent years, how many Canadian Scientists immigrated to the United States to work for the American Government in the development of space programs?

2. Since 1960, and for each of the subsequent years, how many Canadian Scientists were working for Canadian corporations whose operations are related to American space programs?

3. How many Canadian Scientists are working in space research for the Canadian Government in conjunction with American space program authorities?

4. Have Canadian Scientists made any discoveries which would contribute to the development of American space programs (a) in the United States (b) in Canada.

Return tabled.

PURCHASE OF CLEANING SUPPLIES FOR EASTERN TOWNSHIPS POST OFFICES

Question No. 2,681—Mr. Rondeau:

From which retail or other companies does the Department of Supply and Services, acting on behalf of the Public Works and Post Office Departments, "purchase cleaning and maintenance supplies for post offices in the Bois-Francs, Eastern Townships and Montreal areas, and what procedure does it follow in selecting such suppliers?

Return tabled.

STUDY OR INVESTIGATING BOARDS APPOINTED SINCE 1950

Question No. 2,685—Mr. Dionne:

1. How many study or investigating boards and commissions were appointed by the Canadian Government since 1950?

2. (a) What was the cost of each such commission (b) what were these commissions and what were the names of the members of each?

Return tabled.

NATIONAL FILM BOARD—TRANSLATION OF AND REMUNERATION FROM FILMS

Question No. 2,688—Mr. Robinson:

1. Does the federal government provide a translation service for documentary films produced by the National Film Board?

2. In what countries are National Film Board films shown?

3. What remuneration was received from the showing of National Film Board films outside Canada in each of the years 1960 to 1968 inclusive, in (a) USA (b) United Kingdom (c) France (d) other English-speaking countries (e) other French-speaking countries (f) other countries?

Return tabled.

CANADIAN COMMERCIAL CORPORATION—MILITARY AND NON-MILITARY SALES

Question No. 2,696—Mr. Nystrom:

1. With reference to the answer to Question No. 2,375, by country, what was the value of non-military sales in which the Canadian Commercial Corporation was involved for the years 1965, 1966, 1967 and 1968?

2. What was the value of military sales, by country, in which the Corporation was involved during 1966?

3. What types of weapons and what quantities were involved in the sales to the Netherlands and to West Germany for each of the years 1965, 1966, 1967 and 1968?

4. If Portugal was a purchaser operating through the Corporation for any of the years above of either military or non-military material, what specific commodities were involved and in what quantity?

Return tabled.

DIVORCE ACT PETITIONS

Question No. 2,710—Mr. McCleave:

1. How many divorce petitions presented in the first six months under the new Divorce Act have been decided, by province?

2. How many petitions were presented in the first year under the new Divorce Act, by province?

3. What grounds were alleged in the petitions presented during the first year, by province?

Return tabled.

W. S. MARTIN—POSITION HELD AND GRIEVANCES ADJUDICATED

Question No. 2,717—Mr. Macquarrie:

1. (a) When was W. S. Martin appointed Chief Adjudicator for the Public Service Staff Relations Board (b) when did his term as Chief Adjudicator end?

2. What position does W. S. Martin now hold with the Public Service Staff Relations Board?

3. (a) In what capacity did W. S. Martin adjudicate the grievances of The Council of Postal Unions against the Treasury Board (b) when did W. S. Martin complete work on this adjudication report (c) when was the report submitted to the Public Service Staff Relations Board?

4. What is signified by "date of decision" as used on the cover page of this report?

5. In what capacity did W. S. Martin adjudicate the grievances of A. Southern against Treasury Board and the grievances of Gomez, Coppock, Levins, Beauchamp, Levesque against Treasury Board?

6. When was work completed on each of these reports and when did W. S. Martin submit each of these reports to the PSSRB?

Return tabled.

• (2:30 p.m.)

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, it is my understanding that the members who have posed the remaining questions on the order paper have either indicated their wish that they be withdrawn or have agreed to do so.

Mr. Speaker: It is my understanding that questions 1,706, 2,057, 2,568, 2,575, 2,668, 2,690 and 2,718 are to be withdrawn. Is this agreed?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

MOTIONS FOR PAPERS

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, notices of motions for the production of papers Nos. 179, 203, 217, 225, 254, 264, 266, 268, and 269 are acceptable to the government.

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House that notices of motion Nos. 179, 203, 217, 225, 254, 264, 266, 268 and 269 be deemed to have been adopted?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

CANADA ASSISTANCE PLAN APPEAL PROCEDURES

Motion No. 179—Mr. Orlikow:

That an Order of the House do issue for copies of all appeal procedures established by the Provinces made pursuant to the Canada Assistance Plan.

Motion agreed to.

SUBMISSION TO SENATE COMMITTEE ON SCIENCE POLICY

Motion No. 203—Mr. Broadbent:

That an Order of the House do issue for copies of the studies referred to by the Department of Regional Economic Expansion in their submission to the Senate Special Committee on Science Policy, Wednesday, April 23, 1969, appearing on pages 4929-4932 and pages 5003-5008, of the Committee Proceedings.

Motion agreed to.

BRITISH COLUMBIA—PLANT REJECT IN TASU SOUND

Motion No. 217—Mr. Rose:

That an Order of the House do issue for copies of all correspondence between the Government of Canada and Wesfrod Mines Limited regarding the dumping of cobbling plant reject and mill tailings in Tasu Sound, adjacent to Moresby Island, Queen Charlotte District, B.C.

Motion agreed to.

Motions for Papers

BOROUGH OF YORK, ONT.—LAND SALES

Motion No. 225—Mr. Gilbert:

That an Order of the House do issue for copies of all correspondence between Levy Industries Limited and the Government of Canada regarding the sale of lands in the Borough of York, Ontario.

Motion agreed to.

TELESAT CANADA—PLANS OF FREQUENCIES AND LOCATION OF INSTALLATIONS

Motion No. 254—Mr. Macquarrie:

That an Order of the House do issue for plans of frequencies and locations of installations for use of Telesat Canada referred to on pp. 161-162 of the Proceedings of the Standing Senate Committee on Transport and Communications.

Motion agreed to.

DRUG PRICES

Motion No. 263—Mr. Orlikow:

That an humble Address be presented to His Excellency praying that he will cause to be laid before this House a copy of all correspondence between the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs and provincial governments regarding the subject of drug prices.

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): Mr. Speaker, notice of motion No. 263 is acceptable to the government subject to the usual reservations concerning confidential documents and to the authorization of the government authorities concerned.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker: Subject to the conditions mentioned by the minister, is it the pleasure of the house to adopt motion No. 263?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

DUMPING OF ACID INTO HAMILTON BAY

Motion No. 264—Mr. Harding:

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of the investigation report on the dumping of 150,000 gallons of acid into Hamilton Bay by the Steel Company of Canada mentioned by the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources as reported in Hansard, July 15, 1969 on page 11269.

Motion agreed to.

LOAN OF AIRCRAFT TO CANADAIR

Motion No. 266—Mr. Orlikow:

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of the Order-in-Council passed during June 1969, under the Financial Administration Act, the loan of one CL-41 Tutor Aircraft and one CF-104 Starfighter to Canadair for Aerospace Exhibits Limited.

Motion agreed to.

[Mr. Rose.]

ANGOLA, MOZAMBIQUE—STATEMENT DISAPPROVING PORTUGUESE POLICY

Motion No. 268—Mr. Nystrom:

That an Order of the House do issue for copies of the Canadian Government's statement of disapproval of Portuguese policy in Angola and Mozambique referred to in the answer to Question No. 2,599.

Motion agreed to.

ORDER IN COUNCIL AUTHORIZING MEMBER TO VISIT SWEDEN

Motion No. 269—Mr. Orlikow:

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of the Order-in-Council passed during June 1969, authorizing C. L. Caccia, M.P. to visit Sweden to study their manpower policies.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): Mr. Speaker, would you be so kind as to call notices of motions Nos. 139, 152, 176, 178, 189, 197, 200, 201, 204, 221, 222, 227, 228, 230, 231, 232, 233, 234, 235, 236, 237, 238, 239, 240, 241, 242, 243, 244, 245, 246, 247, 248, 249, 250, 251, 252, 253, 258, 259, 260, 261, 262 and 270?

SUMMER EMPLOYMENT OF STUDENTS

Motion No. 139—Mr. Broadbent:

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of the Cabinet Directive on summer employment for students referred to by the Minister of Manpower and Immigration in his Press Release of April 30, 1969.

Mr. J. E. Walker (Parliamentary Secretary to Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, a cabinet directive is a cabinet document. It has always been the position of this House that cabinet documents would not be included among those documents covered by motions for the production of papers. I would hope, therefore, that the hon. member would be agreeable to withdrawing the motion.

Mr. J. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa-Whitby): I do not agree to such a decision, Mr. Speaker, but I will carry this motion over to the next session.

Mr. Speaker: Dropped.

Order discharged and motion withdrawn.

REPORTS FROM MRS. CLAIRE CULHANE

Motion No. 152—Mr. MacDonald (Egmont):

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of all correspondence and reports with the Prime Minister, Secretary of State for External Affairs and the Canadian International Development Agency from Mrs. Claire Culhane with respect to her observations concerning Canada's involvement in foreign aid to Vietnam.

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, some of the correspondence referred to I believe has been shown to the hon. member, and I am not quite certain whether he is prepared to withdraw his motion.

Mr. David MacDonald (Egmont): Mr. Speaker, I have had no documentation shown to me yet by the officials that would persuade me that this motion should not go forward, but in view of the fact that this is the last day of this session I am prepared to bring it on again at the earliest possible moment in the next session.

• (2:40 p.m.)

PUBLIC WORKS OUTSIDE CONSULTANT STUDIES

Motion No. 176—Mr. Skoberg:

That an Order of the House do issue for copies of all agreements and arrangements on consultant fees negotiated between the Government of Canada and the Royal Architectural Institute of Canada and provincial associations of the Professional Engineers of Canada as mentioned in reply to Question No. 1,256, Tabled on May 14, 1969.

Hon. Arthur Laing (Minister of Public Works): Mr. Speaker, the arrangement to which this motion makes reference has to do with an undertaking on the part of my department to adhere substantially to provincial professional fees. The agreement to do so was made verbally. There is no written agreement whatsoever and I therefore ask the hon. member if he would consent to withdrawing this motion.

Mr. John L. Skoberg (Moose Jaw): Mr. Speaker, I cannot agree. Therefore I will raise this matter again in the next session.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. We must assume that the motion has been dropped.

Order discharged and motion withdrawn.

QUEEN ELIZABETH II TELESCOPE

Motion No. 178—Mr. Orlikow:

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of the Committee Report, headed by Dr. D. C. Rose, on the Queen Elizabeth II telescope, presented to the government in August, 1968.

Mr. J. E. Walker (Parliamentary Secretary to Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the Rose report is a confidential report sponsored by the Science Secretariat, in its role as part of the Privy Council Office, at the request of the government. It is under active study at the present time and consideration will be given to making the report public at a later date. In these circumstances I wonder if the hon. member would withdraw his motion?

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, since today is the last day of the present session I agree to having the motion withdrawn. May I tell the Parliamentary Secretary that I will re-introduce my motion early next week since I do not believe the government has the right to keep such reports confidential.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The motion is dropped.

Order discharged and motion withdrawn.

REPORT ON PENSIONS OF RETIRED PUBLIC SERVANTS

Motion No. 189—Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre):

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of the report of the special committee on increasing the pensions of retired public servants referred to by the President of the Treasury Board in his speech on May 8, 1969, to the Canadian Pension Conference, and noted in Hansard on May 16, 1969, at page 8782.

Mr. J. E. Walker (Parliamentary Secretary to Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, as was indicated by the President of the Treasury Board on May 8, the report of the special committee referred to in his speech deals with costs and benefits involved in the whole of the social security system, including the issue of pensions of retired public servants. This report forms the basis of reappraisal of government policy in this area and as such it is part of the internal function of government and not in the public interest to be released.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Walker: In view of this, perhaps the hon. member would be agreeable to withdrawing his motion.

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, because I believe it to be in the public interest to have this report I shall introduce this motion again in the new session.

Order discharged and motion withdrawn.

CORRESPONDENCE RESPECTING POLLUTION AT LONG HARBOUR

Motion No. 197—Mr. Harding:

That an Order of the House do issue for copies of all correspondence between the Department of Fisheries and Dr. L. Dickie of the Bedford Institute of Oceanography regarding potential pollution of Long Harbour, Newfoundland.

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, may I move this order on behalf of the hon. member for Kootenay West.

Mr. E. F. Whelan (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Fisheries and Forestry): Mr. Speaker, there is no correspondence on file between the Department of Fisheries and Dr. L. Dickie. In view of this fact it would be a nil return and I wonder if the hon. member would, therefore, be prepared to withdraw his motion?

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Agreed.

Order discharged and motion withdrawn.

REPORT BY DR. R. W. TRITES RESPECTING LONG HARBOUR AREA

Motion No. 200—Mr. Harding:

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of the report by Dr. R. W. Trites of the Bedford Institute of Oceanography for the Department of Fisheries regarding the Long Harbour area, Newfoundland.

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I move this motion on behalf of the hon. member for Kootenay West.

Mr. E. F. Whelan (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Fisheries and Forestry): Mr. Speaker, the report referred to in this motion is an internal working paper prepared by a member of the staff for use by department officers. Such documents are traditionally privileged and not tabled. I would therefore ask the hon. member to withdraw his motion.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I believe the hon. member for Kootenay West would like to introduce this motion again in the next session.

Mr. Speaker: The motion is dropped.

Order discharged and motion withdrawn.

CORRESPONDENCE RESPECTING POLLUTION OF B.C. WATERS

Motion No. 201—Mr. Rose:

That an Order of the House do issue for copies of all correspondence between the Department of Fisheries and Forestry and pulp mills in British Columbia regarding the pollution of B.C. waters and the pollution guidelines of the Department.

Mr. E. F. Whelan (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Fisheries and Forestry): Mr. Speaker, it is the view of the government that the tabling of this correspondence would seriously affect the confidence and effective relationships between the department and the companies in question. Frank discussions between the parties would be inhibited and the successful relationships established between the department and the pulp mills seriously hampered. In view of this fact we should like to request that the motion be withdrawn.

[Mr. Harding.]

Mr. Mark Rose (Fraser Valley West): Mr. Speaker, I find the grounds for refusal unacceptable in view of the minister's recent statement supporting greater access to public information.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Motion No. 201 is dropped.

Order discharged and motion withdrawn.

CORRESPONDENCE RESPECTING ELECTRIC REDUCTION COMPANY PLANT

Motion No. 204—Mr. Carter:

That an humble Address be presented to His Excellency praying that he will cause to be laid before this House a copy of all correspondence exchanged between the Government of Canada or any of its representatives and the Government of the Province of Newfoundland, the Bedford Institute of Oceanography and the Electric Reduction Company relating to the establishment of the Electric Reduction Company's Plant in Long Harbour, Newfoundland.

Mr. E. F. Whelan (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Fisheries and Forestry): Mr. Speaker, the correspondence requested in this motion which can be produced has already been approved by the acceptance of motions Nos. 198 and 199. In view of this fact I would suggest that the hon. member may wish to withdraw his motion.

Mr. Walter C. Carter (St. John's West): Withdrawn, Mr. Speaker.

Order discharged and motion withdrawn.

TECHNOLOGICAL CHANGE IN UNDER-DEVELOPED AREAS

Motion No. 221—Mr. Broadbent:

That an Order of the House do issue for copies of all studies or reports, etc., undertaken by the Department of Regional Economic Expansion regarding the subject of the effects of technological change in less developed areas of Canada.

Mr. Martin P. O'Connell (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): Mr. Speaker, the Department of Regional Economic Expansion has not undertaken any studies such as are requested by the hon. member.

Mr. Speaker: Is the motion dropped?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Order discharged and motion withdrawn.

GROWTH CENTRES IN UNDERDEVELOPED AREAS

Motion No. 222—Mr. Broadbent:

That an Order of the House do issue for copies of all studies or reports, etc., undertaken by the Department of Regional Economic Expansion regarding the subject of growth centers in less developed areas of Canada.

Mr. Martin P. O'Connell (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): Mr. Speaker, the answer to this motion is the same as the one for the previous motion.

Mr. J. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa-Whitby): So is mine, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. This motion is also dropped.

Order discharged and motion withdrawn.

WINNIPEG—DISPOSITION OF AIR CANADA OVERHAUL BASE

Motion No. 227—Mr. Orlikow:

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of the Contract or Agreement between Air Canada and Northwest Industries, regarding disposition of the Air Canada Overhaul Base in Winnipeg, including the contract showing purchase price, agreement as to future employment of present Air Canada employees, etc.

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, Air Canada reports to me that the agreements and contracts between Air Canada and CAE Aircraft Limited are considered to be proprietary documents between two commercial corporations and therefore should not be released.

In answer to the motion I would be pleased to file a short listing provided by Air Canada containing a summary of the provisions for the employees, both permanent and temporary, together with other pertinent information, if it is agreeable to the hon. member for Winnipeg North.

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I will accept that for now but I give notice that I will introduce a similar motion early in the next session.

Mr. Speaker: Subject to the conditions and reservations expressed by the minister is it agreed that motion No. 227 be deemed to have been adopted?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

RAINBOW TROUT FARMING

Motion No. 228—Mr. Orlikow:

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of the cost-benefit study on rainbow trout farming referred to by the Minister of Fisheries and Forestry in the June 23 press release of the Fisheries Research Board of Canada.

Mr. E. F. Whelan (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Fisheries and Forestry): Mr. Speaker, notes prepared for the use of the Minister of Fisheries and Forestry when announcing the construction of the new Freshwater Research Institute in Winnipeg on June 23, 1969, referred to "other possible methods of commercial trout rearing" which "justify experimentation." To date no cost-benefit analysis of these alternative fisheries has been completed. Since there is no conclusive study or final report available on these "other possible methods of commercial trout rearing", the hon. member may wish to withdraw his motion.

Mr. Speaker: The motion is dropped.

Order discharged and motion withdrawn.

REVIEW OF CANADA-U.S. AUTOMOTIVE PACT

Motion No. 230—Mr. Broadbent:

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of the review at the end of 1968 of the Canada-U.S. Automotive Pact referred to by the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce in his statement before the Standing Committee on Public Accounts on June 17, 1969.

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I am advised that only one paper in the form of a press release was prepared as a result of the review referred to in this motion. This paper, outlining the results of the review, was tabled on September 16, 1968, and I would refer the hon. member to pages 39 and 40 of the House of Commons Debates. In light of this I wonder if the hon. member would be agreeable to withdrawing his motion.

Mr. J. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa-Whitby): Agreed, Mr. Speaker.

Order discharged and motion withdrawn.

IRON ORE—HANNA MINING CORRESPONDENCE

Motion No. 231—Mr. Orlikow:

That an humble Address be presented to His Excellency praying that he will cause to be laid before this House a copy of all correspondence between the Government of Canada and the Government of the United States regarding the Iron Ore Company of Canada and its parent company Hanna Mining Company of Cleveland.

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, when the hon. member for Winnipeg North first raised this matter it was an oral question that was directed, I believe, to the Minister of Finance. Your Honour suggested that the hon. member should put it on the order paper. On that there now appears a notice of motion for the production of papers which involves correspondence between the Canadian government and the United States government. It would have been possible to answer the original question but I now have to obtain the acquiescence of the United States government, and that is being sought.

Mr. Speaker: Will the hon. member agree that the motion might be dropped for the time being.

Mr. Orlikow: Agreed.

Order discharged and motion withdrawn.

FEDERAL WORKING PAPER ON REGIONAL DISPARITY

Motion No. 232—Mr. Broadbent:

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of the federal government's working paper dealing with constitutional aspects of regional disparities in Canada presented at the recent federal-provincial constitutional conference in June 1969.

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I am advised that the paper to which the motion refers was in the nature of a preliminary consideration of some aspects only of the subject of regional disparities and reviewed certain positions of the federal government which have been revealed in white papers published on the occasion of the several Constitutional Conferences. The government's over-all approach to the subject of regional disparities is still being examined and will be discussed in the future with the provinces. For that reason it would not be helpful nor proper to table at this time the preliminary statement made at the private session of the Constitutional Conference in June, and I would ask that the hon. member withdraw his motion under these circumstances.

Mr. J. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa-Whitby): Agreed, Mr. Speaker. I look forward to the final statement.

Order discharged and motion withdrawn.

[Mr. Orlikow.]

PRIME MINISTER—SCIENCE COUNCIL CORRESPONDENCE

Motion No. 233—Mr. Broadbent:

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of the November 4, 1968 letter by the Prime Minister of Canada to the Chairman of the Science Council of Canada as mentioned in the Third Annual Report of the Science Council.

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the letter from the Prime Minister to the chairman of the Science Council of Canada is part of the internal functions of the government and not in the public interest to be released. In view of the long established principle of the House that such documents are privileged, perhaps the hon. member would be agreeable to withdrawing his motion.

• (2:50 p.m.)

Mr. Broadbent: Agreed today, but this matter will be raised again next week.

CONSUMER AND CORPORATE AFFAIRS CONSULTANT STUDIES

Motion No. 234—Mr. Skoberg:

That an order of the House do issue for copies of all outside consultant studies undertaken for the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs as mentioned in answer to Question No. 1,323, tabled on June 25, 1969, as reported in Hansard on page 10597.

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, this notice of motion for the production of papers and the 18 which follow are all related to a number of consultants studies which were identified in an Order for Return tabled in response to a question. To grant this motion and the other 18 motions would involve the tabling of 1,188 consultant studies, or literally thousands of pages of documents. In the circumstances I wonder whether the hon. member would be prepared to withdraw his motions and be prepared in the new session to indicate the specific reports he would like to see. We could then consider whether they could be tabled.

Mr. Skoberg: I am sure we would not want the individual reports as such to be tabled, but we must have the reports which are available to the public. I deplore this type of governmental secrecy and ask Your Honour to put this notice of motion to the vote.

The house divided on the motion (Mr. Skoberg) which was negatived on the following division:

• (3:00 p.m.)

Division

YEAS

Messrs:

Aiken
Alexander
Asselin
Baldwin
Bell
Benjamin
Broadbent
Burton
Cadieu
Carter
Code
Comeau
Crouse
Diefenbaker
Dinsdale
Dionne
Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands)
Downey
Dumont
Fairweather
Flemming
Fortin
Gleave
Grills
Gundlock
Hales
Harkness
Hees
Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre)
Korchinski
Lambert (Edmonton West)
La Salle
Lundrigan
MacDonald (Egmont)
MacInnis (Mrs.)
Macquarrie
McCleave
McGrath
McIntosh
McKinley
McQuaid
Marshall
Mather
Mazankowski
Moore
Muir (Cape Breton-The Sydneys)
Muir (Lisgar)
Nesbitt
Noble
Nystrom
Orlikow
Peddle
Peters
Ritchie
Rondeau
Rose
Saltsman
Scott
Simpson
Skoberg
Stanfield
Stewart (Marquette)
Thomas (Moncton)
Thompson
Valade
Winch
Woolliams
Yewchuk—68.

NAYS

Messrs:

Allmand
Anderson
Andras
Badanai
Barrett
Basford
Béchard
Benson
Blair
Blouin
Borrie
Boulanger
Breau
Brown
Buchanan
Cadieux
Cafik
Chappell
Chrétien
Clermont
Cobbe
Comtois
Corbin
Côté (Richelieu)
Côté (Longueuil)
Crossman
Cullen
Cyr
Danson
Davis
Deachman
Deakon
Laflamme
Laing
Lang
Langlois
Leblanc (Laurier)
LeBlanc (Rimouski)
Lefebvre
Lessard (LaSalle)
Lind
Loiselle
Macdonald (Rosedale)
MacGuigan
Mackasey
McBride
McIlraith
McNulty
Major
Marceau
Marchand (Langelier)
Marchand (Kamloops-Cariboo)
Morison
Munro
Murphy
Noël
O'Connell
Olson
Orange
Osler
Otto
Douglas (Assiniboia)
Drury
Dubé
Duquet
Éthier
Forget
Foster
Francis
Gervais
Givens
Goode
Gray
Greene
Guay (St. Boniface)
Guay (Lévis)
Guilbault
Haidasz
Harries
Hellyer
Hogarth
Honey
Hopkins
Howard (Okanagan Boundary)
Hymmen
Isabelle
Jamieson
Jerome
Kaplan
Lachance
Pelletier
Pepin
Pilon
Portelance
Reid
Richard
Richardson
Rock
Roy (Timmins)
Roy (Laval)
Ryan
Serré
Sharp
Smerchanski
Smith (Northumberland-Miramichi)
Smith (Saint-Jean)
Stanbury
St. Pierre
Sullivan
Thomas (Maisonneuve)
Trudeau
Turner (London East)
Turner (Ottawa-Carleton)
Walker
Weatherhead
Whelan
Whicher
Whiting
Yanakis—119.

• (3:20 p.m.)

AGRICULTURE CONSULTANT STUDIES

Motion No. 235—Mr. Skoberg:

That an order of the House do issue for copies of all outside consultant studies undertaken for the Department of Agriculture as mentioned in answer to question No. 1,323, tabled on June 25, 1969, as reported in Hansard on page 10597.

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, this motion and the succeeding 17 relate to the 1,184 remaining consultant studies. In the light of the decision which has just been taken, might we have agreement that these 18 motions be dropped?

Mr. John L. Skoberg (Moose Jaw): Mr. Speaker, this is a small price to pay for democracy, but in view of the time element today I agree to drop these motions and re-introduce them during the next session of parliament.

Mr. Speaker: Motions 235 to 262 inclusive are dropped.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, you just mentioned going as far as motion No. 262. Are there not some motions other than those of the hon. member for Moose Jaw which should be called, for example, 258, 259, 260 and 261? With respect, I think Your Honour went too far when you went to 262.

Motions for Papers

Mr. Speaker: I will now call No. 261.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): I move it on behalf of the hon. member for Kootenay West (Mr. Harding).

NORTH AMERICAN WATER AND POWER ALLIANCE

Motion No. 261—Mr. Harding:

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of all studies, briefs and correspondence submitted to or prepared by the Government of Canada in relation to North American Water and Power Alliance (NAWAPA).

Mr. R. J. Orange (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I am informed there are no studies or briefs and there is no correspondence relating to North American Water and Power Alliance. Under the circumstances, I would ask the hon. member to withdraw the motion.

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): I guess I have no alternative.

Order discharged and motion withdrawn.

NEWFOUNDLAND—REGIONAL ECONOMIC EXPANSION STUDIES

Motion No. 258—Mr. Marshall:

That an Order of the House do issue for copies of all studies and reports, etc., undertaken by the Department of Regional Economic Expansion regarding the Province of Newfoundland.

Mr. R. J. Orange (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, the Department of Regional Economic Expansion has not undertaken any studies such as are requested by the hon. member.

Order discharged and motion withdrawn.

ARMED FORCES VOTERS, HUMBER-ST. GEORGE'S-ST. BARBE

Motion No. 259—Mr. Marshall:

That an Order of the House do issue for a list of the names of all members of the Canadian Armed Forces who were entitled to vote in the Armed Forces Vote for nominated candidates for the District of Humber-St. George's-St. Barbe during the Federal Election of June 25, 1968; the present military address of these personnel and the listed Newfoundland address of these personnel.

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I am informed by the Minister of National Defence (Mr. Cadieux) that a list of the type referred to by the hon. member for Humber-St. George's-St. Barbe in this motion is not required under the Canadian Forces Voting Rules, Schedule II to the Canada Elections Act. Lists are only prepared and provided where authorized by virtue of the Canadian Forces Voting Rules. Under these circumstances, it is requested that the hon. member withdraw his motion.

Order discharged and motion withdrawn.

WATER DIVERSION STUDY, NORTHWESTERN ONTARIO

Motion No. 260—Mr. Harding:

That an Order of the House do issue for copies of the study "A Proposed Water Diversion Program out of North Western Ontario into Lake Superior" dated June 25, 1964, and all the progress reports which have followed this study.

Mr. R. J. Orange (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, in response to the request contained in the hon. member's motion, I must advise that the June 25, 1964 report to which he refers does not appear to be available in the department. If the hon. member could advise what agency prepared this report I shall endeavour to have a copy obtained for further consideration of his request.

With regard to the progress reports which the hon. member has requested, I do not consider it would be in the public interest to table these at this time. They simply report progress achieved on certain elements of this co-ordinated investigation and study. Some of these elements could be misinterpreted if they were considered separately, without regard to the over-all scope of the study—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I suggest to the hon. parliamentary secretary that the statement he is making now should not be in the form of an answer to the motion proposed by the hon. member. He should indicate as briefly as possible, on behalf of the government, whether he is prepared to answer the motion or whether he wishes it dropped.

Mr. Orange: Mr. Speaker, I accept your ruling. In the light of what I have said, I would ask the hon. member if he is prepared to withdraw his motion at this time.

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I will draw the remarks of the parliamentary secretary to the attention of the hon. member for Kootenay West (Mr. Harding) when he returns from the NATO parliamentary conference at Brussels.

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion dropped.

Order discharged and motion withdrawn.

NORTHERN CANADA TOUR BY UNITED STATES GROUP

Motion No. 262—Mr. Harding:

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of all correspondence, or memoranda in relation to the tour of Northern Canada by a group of sixty-eight Americans including Senator Frank Moss in the month of June, 1969.

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I am informed that a search of departmental files has revealed that there exists no correspondence within the purview of this motion. The motion is, therefore, not acceptable to the government and it is hoped that the hon. member might wish to withdraw his motion.

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Agreed.

Order discharged and motion withdrawn.

COMBINES—EXCLUSION OF SERVICE INDUSTRIES FROM ACT

Motion No. 270—Mr. Orlikow:

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of the study undertaken by the Combines Investigation Branch and forwarded to the Economic Council regarding the implications of the exclusion of service industries from the Combines Investigation Act.

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the study referred to in this motion was prepared for internal use in the department and was passed to the staff of the Economic Council of Canada to assist the Council in the reference by the government to the Council for a report on competition policy. It is considered to be a privileged document and in view of this I would ask the hon. member to withdraw his motion.

Order discharged and motion withdrawn.

Mr. Macdonald (Rosedale): Mr. Speaker, I would ask that the remaining motions, if any, be stood.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

SOCIAL SECURITY

INCREASED PENSIONS TO MEET COST OF LIVING

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. Has the government decided to take any immediate action to relate old age security and other pension payments more appropriately to the real increase in the cost of living which has been at the rate of about 5 per cent for the past several years and which has increased already this year by 3.5 per cent?

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of National Health and Welfare): No immediate action is contemplated.

Mr. Stanfield: Is the government reconsidering the 2 per cent ceiling on cost of living adjustments under the Canada Pension Plan and the Old Age Security Act? If so, when may we expect a decision to be made with regard to these matters in view of the fact that pensioners who depend on this income seem to be steadily losing ground in competition with the cost of living.

Mr. Munro: Mr. Speaker, as the hon. Leader of the Opposition knows, this is part and parcel of the over-all review of which he is aware. When the government has come to a decision on policy matters of this kind it will be announced in the house.

Mr. Stanfield: I have one further supplementary question. Does the hon. minister think these people can exist on government reviews?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The question is argumentative.

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): May I ask a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker, and I wonder if I may address it to the Prime Minister. In view of the problems facing all our older and retired people, the old age pensioners, the retired civil servants, veterans on the war veterans allowance and so on, can we expect action to increase the pensions of these people early in the new session?

Mr. Speaker: It seems to me the hon. member has simply reiterated the question asked by the Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, the previous question had to do with only one phase, namely the 2 per cent cost of living bonus. I am asking about a general increase in pensions across the board.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): The program for the next session will be announced in the Speech from the Throne and subsequent speeches. Therefore I suggest that the hon. member is a little premature with his question.

Inquiries of the Ministry

LABOUR CONDITIONS

UNEMPLOYMENT—INQUIRY AS TO SPECIAL WINTER PROGRAM

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. Having regard to the fact that the seasonal unemployment figure is the highest since 1963, is the government contemplating any special program to alleviate unemployment this winter when unemployment is usually higher than at any other time of the year?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, we are waiting for a reaction from the Prices and Incomes Commission which has been faced with a new position by the labour unions. We will see if we have to have other policies to combat inflation which will do it in a way that will not increase unemployment.

Mr. Douglas (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. In view of the fact that the unemployment problem is already here, may I ask the Prime Minister whether any information has been conveyed to either the provincial governments or the municipalities, to the effect that the government intends to introduce an improved and adapted winter works program in the coming months.

Mr. Trudeau: No, Mr. Speaker. As the hon. member knows, the winter works program has been replaced by a much more productive and useful program, that of manpower retraining, and we do not want to go back to old programs.

[Translation]

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

REPLY TO PROTEST RESPECTING VISIT OF JEAN DE LIPKOWSKI

Mr. Gilbert Rondeau (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, I would like to put a question to the Prime Minister. Could he tell us if he has received an answer to the note of protest he has sent to the French government with regard to the famous Lipkowski affair?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): No, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Rondeau: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask a supplementary question. Could the Prime Minister tell us if communications have been exchanged between himself and the government of Quebec in that connection?

Mr. Trudeau: No, Mr. Speaker.

[English]

TRADE

WHEAT—CONTRACT WITH U.S.S.R.—FUTURE SALES

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Minister without Portfolio, the hon. member for Saskatoon-Humboldt. It has to do of course with the assumption of his new responsibilities—

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Diefenbaker: —in connection with wheat with which I hope he will be more successful than with some of the other responsibilities that have fallen on him recently. I should like to ask him whether he is in a position to advise us on the present situation relative to the 135 million bushels of wheat which were comprised within the three year contract that terminated in July. Have any final arrangements been made respecting the terms, the price, etc. for these 135 million bushels, and when is a meeting expected between the authorities in Canada and the food authorities in the U.S.S.R. concerning not only the 135 million bushels but also future sales of wheat to that country?

Hon. Otto E. Lang (Minister without Portfolio): Mr. Speaker, I believe the right hon. gentleman is aware of the fact that when the foreign minister of the Soviet Union was in Canada he made a very positive response in connection with the negotiations which were to be undertaken relative to the past and future contracts for wheat between our two countries. It has not been the practice in the past, and I do not intend that it should be my practice in the future, to discuss in public negotiations which are under way or about to be undertaken. This is not the best way to negotiate. Therefore, I will not talk about specific details until these negotiations are completed.

Mr. Diefenbaker: May I then pass on to the minister the fact that the meeting is to take place in about six weeks time. He does not know anything about it yet, it seems.

WHEAT—MOVEMENT THROUGH PORT OF VANCOUVER

Mr. Eldon M. Woolliams (Calgary North): I should like to ask the Minister of Labour a question relative to the same subject matter of grain. Is the strike in Vancouver over yet and can he assure the house, as he has assured the public through the newspapers, that grain is moving unhampered through Canadian ports?

Hon. Bryce Mackasey (Minister of Labour): As I promised, the grain is and has been moving. I know from questions previously raised by the hon. gentleman that he shares my belief that the problem of grain is a national one.

In so far as the strike itself is concerned, unfortunately the collective agreement was not ratified by the membership. However, may I say in a more positive vein that I understand the point of dissension so far as the membership is concerned is not centred on the monetary issue but rather on certain clauses concerning working conditions, and I am hopeful that these can be ironed out in the next few days.

Mr. Woolliams: I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the Minister of Labour could intimate to the house whether it is the new labour policy to move certain commodities and not others.

Mr. Mackasey: Mr. Speaker, judging from the attitude of the hon. gentleman just before the house recessed he, more than any other person, emphasized the necessity of moving grain in this country—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I have the impression that the question was in some way argumentative. The reply is of the same nature. I think that we should go on to a further supplementary question.

THE CANADIAN ECONOMY

INFLATION—VOLUNTARY GUIDELINES—ACTION BY GOVERNMENT

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. In view of the unequivocal refusal by the CLC and the CNTU, announced last Friday, to co-operate in any way with management and government in establishing voluntary guidelines as urged by the Prices and Incomes Commission, will the minister advise the house what alternative action the government will propose as a substitute for its apparent failure in its fight against inflation?

Mr. Speaker: I suggest to the hon. member that the question he is asking, although very important, is one which invites a statement of a general nature which normally should be made on motions, and I doubt that hon. members would want to return to motions at this time.

PRICES AND INCOMES COMMISSION—POSITION OF CHAIRMAN

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a related question to the Prime Minister. Can the Prime Minister, who referred to the situation a few moments ago, tell the House whether there have been any discussions between him or any other member of the government and Dr. Young about his continuation as head of the Prices and Incomes Commission? Is he going to return to his post at the University of British Columbia, a position which is still held open for him?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I think that the question was put in an improper form.

[Translation]

PRICES AND INCOMES COMMISSION—CANCELLATION OF PRESS CONFERENCE

Hon. Martial Asselin (Charlevoix): I should like to put a supplementary question to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs.

The Prices and Incomes Commission was supposed to hold this morning a press conference which was cancelled or postponed. I should like to know whether the postponement of that press conference is due to the statements made by the labour leaders on the price freeze as a means to fight inflation, and whether the Commission had been instructed by the minister not to comment on that matter.

[English]

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): I have only read the morning newspapers from which I gather that the press conference was cancelled without comment. I do not think it is related to the factors to which the hon. member referred.

[Translation]

Mr. Asselin: Mr. Speaker, I wish to put a supplementary question. In view of the fact that the Prices and Incomes Commission is scheduled to hold a national conference next December, can the minister give us the assurance that this conference will take place on that date?

Mr. Speaker: I wonder whether the question is so urgent as to be put at this time. I have doubts in that respect. However, if the minister is ready to answer, I have no serious objections to it.

[English]

Mr. Basford: As I understand it, that was the plan announced by the chairman of the Prices and Incomes Commission. If there is any change, since this is an independent commission, any announcement would have to come from the commission.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

UNDERGROUND NUCLEAR EXPLOSIONS—TEST BAN TREATY

Mr. Barry Mather (Surrey): I should like to address my question to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Having in mind the recent massive underground nuclear tests conducted by the Soviet Union and the United States, the latter being of particular concern to many British Columbians, can the minister undertake to make an early report on what Canada is doing to expedite the signing of a test ban treaty?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Yes, Mr. Speaker, Canada has been very active in its discussions to try to bring about a comprehensive test ban and is of course on record to that effect in the general assembly and the Geneva committee on disarmament. The main problem is how to identify violations of an underground test ban. We will be sponsoring a motion at the current General Assembly calling for all member states to submit lists of their seismological monitoring facilities, together with assurances that they will promptly supply data to help verify whether or not a seismic event is an earthquake or an underground nuclear test.

Mr. R. N. Thompson (Red Deer): As a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker, I wish to ask the minister whether the question of nuclear testing has been one of the subjects discussed by the Government of Canada with representatives of the government of Peking at Stockholm, and whether any mention was made in those discussions of the high-level nuclear testing that has taken place in recent weeks in China?

Mr. Sharp: Mr. Speaker, the general purpose of our negotiations at Stockholm is to get into a position where we can have these kinds of discussions with a government that represents so many millions of people.

[Mr. Speaker.]

[Translation]

CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION

ACCUSATIONS AGAINST FRENCH NETWORK PERSONNEL

Mr. André Fortin (Lotbinière): I should like to put a question to the Right Hon. Prime Minister.

In view of his recent statements concerning the CBC in which he seemed to speek of a factual situation, can he tell us what specific steps he intends to take to throw light on this matter and substantiate his accusations?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): As far as the truth of the matter is concerned, Mr. Speaker, I was relying in part, on what the leader of the Ralliement Créditiste (Mr. Caouette) said repeatedly during the last session, and also on what has been said by members of all parties in the house.

With regard to specific steps, Mr. Speaker, I do not intend to take any at the present time; I have confidence in the management of the CBC. I feel that, for the time being, I should rely on them, trusting that they will live up to their responsibilities. If they are not successful, the question becomes hypothetical, and the government will have to consider some other action.

Mr. Fortin: Mr. Speaker, a supplementary question. In view of the fact that the Prime Minister made serious charges against the CBC and that the latter is answerable to parliament, can he say whether he intends to bring this question before the house or one of the committees?

Mr. Trudeau: Mr. Speaker, the committee already exists and if its members express the wish to look into this matter, I will be very happy to hear their request. But members of the Ralliement Créditiste sit on that committee and as I said, the most violent charges brought against the CBC came from them. I feel therefore that they must know their diagnosis better than I do.

[English]

Mr. W. B. Nesbitt (Oxford): As a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker, in view of the Right Hon. Prime Minister's suggestion that the government might deal with separatist propaganda broadcast by the CBC, I am wondering if the Prime Minister has any similar plans to deal with the overwhelmingly heavy percentage of propaganda broadcast by the CBC favourable to states such as the Soviet Union and China as opposed to the United States?

Mr. Trudeau: I have no such plan in mind, Mr. Speaker.

[Translation]

Mr. Martial Asselin (Charlevoix): Mr. Speaker, I would like to put a supplementary question to the Prime Minister.

In view of the fact that Mr. Davidson has intimated, in a statement, that he would not take into account what the Prime Minister has said and that he would carry on with the planning of CBC programs as he thinks best, does the Prime Minister intend to take any action against Mr. Davidson who was appointed by the present government?

Mr. Trudeau: I have no inclination to do that, Mr. Speaker, but I should be pleased to receive representations from hon. members in that connection, if they feel that I should do it.

[English]

NATIONAL DEFENCE

RESERVE FORCES—CONSULTATION WITH DEFENCE ASSOCIATIONS RESPECTING STRENGTH

Hon. D. S. Harkness (Calgary Centre): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Minister of National Defence. Since the minister made his statement with regard to reductions in the Armed Forces of Canada, both regular and militia, a little over a month ago, has he had consultation with the defence associations in connection with the strength and organization of our militia forces in the future? If so, can he indicate when he will be in a position to make a statement to the House as to what the future organization of our militia will be?

Hon. Léo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, we had many consultations with the defence associations, the last one being held on Monday of this week in the conference room at the Defence Department. It was a very fruitful meeting. I am sure that eventually we are going to produce a plan to which we both agree, but this of course will depend on many circumstances. However, I think there is hope that within three weeks to one month this matter will be finalized.

Inquiries of the Ministry

PUBLIC SERVICE

METHOD OF REDUCTION OF PERSONNEL

Hon. George Hees (Prince Edward-Hastings): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Right Hon. Prime Minister. In carrying out the government's plan to reduce the Civil Service by 25,000 has the government given consideration to allowing the normal attrition of 10½ per cent per year to do the job in one year and four months, as it would do, instead of dismissing a large number of people who are senior in years and who must retire on inadequate pensions because they will be unable to find other jobs?

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Yes, Mr. Speaker, a great deal of consideration has been given to that. The figure of 25,000, as has been abundantly explained, is one which comprises those who would be released by attrition, plus those positions that would not be filled and for which there has been establishment, as well as those who would be dismissed. The figure of 25,000 comprises all these classes.

Mr. Hees: As a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker, may I take it that it is the government's plan not to fire any civil servants but to allow attrition alone to look after the lessening of the numbers of civil servants, something which the Prime Minister and the government have expressed their intention of doing?

Mr. Trudeau: No, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Hees: As a further supplementary, Mr. Speaker, would the Prime Minister explain to the country just what the hell he intends to do?

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Benson: Why don't you listen?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

BEEF

REQUEST FOR INVESTIGATION OF PRICES

Mrs. Grace MacInnis (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. In view of the statement made yesterday by the Ontario Minister of Agriculture that retailers are not passing on to the consumers the recent reductions in the producer price of beef, will the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs initiate a full investigation into beef prices as I urged as far back as June 16?

Inquiries of the Ministry

Hon. Ron Basford (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, my officials are obtaining a copy of the report mentioned by the Minister of Agriculture for Ontario.

Mrs. MacInnis: As a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker, may we have some indication when that report will be available to this House?

Mr. Basford: Well, Mr. Speaker, it is a report published by a provincial government and I am trying to obtain a copy of it. I will now try to obtain two copies, one for the hon. member.

[Translation]

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

ISRAELI-ARAB HOSTILITIES—PROMOTION OF CEASEFIRE

Mr. Georges C. Lachance (Lafontaine): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct to the Secretary of State for External Affairs a question relating to the conflict between Israel and the Arab world.

In view of the speech delivered by the Secretary of State for External Affairs before the General Assembly of the United Nations on September 29 last, and in the light of the recent statement of the Prime Minister of Israel as to the lack of UN authority, what steps does the hon. minister intend to take to promote a cease-fire in that conflict?

[English]

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): As the hon. member knows, Mr. Speaker, it is not a matter of establishing a ceasefire; it is a matter of respecting a ceasefire that has already been agreed upon. On behalf of the Canadian government, I have been urging the parties to this dispute to observe the ceasefire and avoid the forays and raids which are causing so much loss of life and property.

POLLUTION

CO-ORDINATION OF CONTROL EFFORTS IN INTERNATIONAL WATERS

Mr. G. H. Aiken (Parry Sound-Muskoka): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. It arises from the announcement of a $30 million federal-state program in the United States to cope with pollution in the Great Lakes, the Arctic and other waters. Has his department been in consultation with United States officials to see that Canadian efforts are co-ordinated in international waters?

Hon. J. J. Greene (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, my department is in continuing consultation with U.S. authorities under the aegis of the International Joint Commission. I do not know of any specific negotiations that are going on in connection with this particular program that was announced by the Vice-President of the United States on Saturday last. But I certainly believe there will be some under the aegis of our continuing negotiations with the United States in this regard.

Mr. Aiken: Mr. Speaker, as a supplementary question may I ask the minister whether his department is considering a similar type of program for Canada, that is a federal-provincial co-ordinated effort?

Mr. Greene: Well, Mr. Speaker, during the summer recess the government announced its position papers in respect of the proposed Canada Water Act, and there has been continuing negotiation with the provinces on the subject matter of those position papers. It is our belief that the Canada Water Act will achieve the objectives that are envisaged in the presidential program announced in the United States, and in fact our's is a program that will be even better suited to the problem of fighting water pollution in Canada.

SHIPBUILDING

EXTENSION TO OTHER VESSELS OF STEEL SHIP CONSTRUCTION SUBSIDY

Mr. Lloyd R. Crouse (South Shore): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Minister of Transport who, I am pleased to note, has removed himself from the leadership fiasco in his native province. In view of mounting unemployment in our shipyards in Atlantic Canada, is the government giving any consideration to making the present 35 per cent subsidy payable on the construction of steel ships applicable to ships constructed of other substances such as wood, fibreglass or ferrous concrete?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I have also removed myself from the shipbuilding subsidy responsibility and questions on this matter should now be directed to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce.

Mr. Crouse: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I presume the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce heard my question. Perhaps he would be permitted to answer.

Mr. Thomas M. Bell (Saint John-Lancaster): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question. May I ask the minister if it is true that there has been a delay in the departmental investigation on this subject and if so, what is the reason for the delay?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): I am not aware there has been a delay, Mr. Speaker. I received a report yesterday, and I saw an article in the paper confirming it, that the inquiry was going quite well.

HISTORIC SITES

THREATENED DEMOLITION OF SIR ROBERT BORDEN'S RESIDENCE

Mr. Heath Macquarrie (Hillsborough): I should like to direct a question to the right hon. Prime Minister concerning the threatened demolition of Clansmere, the long-time residence of Sir Robert Borden, one of his illustrious predecessors. Can he advise if the government is taking any steps to preserve this historic house for the people of Canada whom Sir Robert served so well?

Mr. Speaker: I am not sure the destruction is imminent or that the question is urgent, but in view of the fact this is the end of the session and it is difficult to suggest that the matter be debated at ten o'clock tonight, the question might be allowed.

Right Hon. P. E. Trudeau (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I will undertake it will not be done before the next session.

CAPE BRETON DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION

INQUIRY AS TO APPOINTMENT OF CHAIRMAN

Hon. Robert L. Stanfield (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion and ask him whether the position of chairman of the Cape Breton Development Corporation, which has been vacant for some months, has been filled? If not, when we may expect such an appointment?

[Translation]

Hon. Jean Marchand (Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): Unfortunately, Mr. Speaker, we have not yet succeeded in finding someone to replace Mr. Fullerton, which is not an easy thing to do, but I hope to be in a position to find somebody who could fill that difficult position in the near future.

[English]

AIRPORTS

MONTREAL—MURRAY HILL LIMOUSINE SERVICE

Mr. Raymond Rock (Lachine): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Transport and I hope he does not remove himself from this question too. Has the Minister of Transport anything to report regarding the serious problems involving the Murray Hill limousine service at Dorval airport?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): There is a pun there but I will resist it. It is my intention, immediately the new session begins, to raise this entire matter of transport at airports in Canada with the parliamentary Committee on Transport and Communications.

DRUGS

ALLEGED INEFFECTIVENESS OF PRESCRIPTION PRODUCT

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. Last July I asked the minister whether he would consider making a statement on motions based on a study released by the United States Food and Drug Directorate which showed that large numbers of prescription drugs were ineffective. Did the minister give consideration to the statement?

Hon. John C. Munro (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I will be prepared to make a full statement on this matter. I intend to do so on motions at the first opportunity.

[Translation]

CANADIAN SOVEREIGNTY

RECOGNITION OF ARCTIC WATERS AS CANADIAN TERRITORY

Mr. Bernard Dumont (Frontenac): Mr. Speaker, I should like to put a question to the Secretary of State for External Affairs.

Can the minister tell us whether some action has been taken since the Manhattan has sailed in Northern waters, with a view to having such waters recognized as Canadian territory?

Inquiries of the Ministry

[English]

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I expect that this matter will be the subject of some discussion at the next session.

Mr. G. W. Baldwin (Peace River): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Has the government now settled its anxieties and vague doubts and is it in a position to make a definitive statement as to sovereignty in Arctic waters and resources on the continental shelf, as well as the extent of the continental shelf north of the Arctic coast?

Mr. Sharp: This will be discussed in the coming session. I think the government has a pretty clear idea of the extent of our sovereignty in the north, but I hope the opposition is not confused.

Mr. Stanfield: We are not thinking about it; we have known for some time.

CAPE BRETON DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION

INQUIRY AS TO FURTHER ALLOCATION OF MONEY

Mr. Robert Muir (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): My question is for the Minister of Regional Economic Expansion. May I ask how soon he will be in a position to make a statement to the effect that the Cape Breton Development Corporation will receive a further allocation of money?

Hon. Jean Marchand (Minister of Regional Economic Expansion): I do not understand the question, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Muir (Cape Breton-The Sydneys): For clarification to the minister, may I explain that the monies allocated to Devco, as they call it, are rapidly being depleted and as a result their work will be curtailed.

Mr. Marchand (Langelier): I will answer the question during the next session.

[Translation]

COMPANY OF YOUNG CANADIANS

DATE OF ESTABLISHMENT OF COMMITTEE

Mr. Fernand-E. Leblanc (Laurier): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Secretary of State a question about the Company of Young Canadians. Since the problem is urgent and of national importance, could the minister suggest a possible date for the establishment of the committee he mentioned in his statement and inform the house about its terms of reference?

Hon. Gérard Pelletier (Secretary of State): This will be done as soon as possible in the course of the next session, Mr. Speaker. As for the terms of reference they are still to be set in a specific way.

[English]

LABOUR CONDITIONS

CHURCHILL, MAN.—ACTION TO ASSIST DISPLACED WORKERS

Mr. Robert Simpson (Churchill): I have a question for the President of the Treasury Board, Mr. Speaker. In view of the decisions of this government and of the United States government to reduce sharply the work being carried on at the National Research Council range at Churchill, Manitoba, and in view of the statements by local spokesmen concerning the drastic effect this action will have on the economy and the entire future of Churchill, what action is the government planning to assist those displaced as a result of this decision?

Hon. C. M. Drury (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, it is a matter of great regret that the NASA authorities, National Aeronautical Space Administration of the United States, have not found themselves, for budgetary reasons, able to continue the rocket research at Churchill. The National Research Council, however, will continue on its own, and on a reduced scale, the rocket investigation which has been conducted. With a view to causing as little local dislocation as possible, a study is now under way by the personnel of the National Research Council and the Department of Public Works to see how this can best be arranged.

Mr. Simpson: I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Can the President of the Treasury Board say if any consideration is being given by this government to asking the NASA authorities for further consultation before a final decision is made?

Mr. Drury: Mr. Speaker, the news to which the hon. gentleman referred emanated from an almost five-day discussion with NASA at which an endeavour was made to get them to continue.

Mr. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): Mr. Speaker, a supplementary question. Is it the intention of the National Research Council to continue to operate the NASA tracking station at St. John's Newfoundland, which has also been closed down?

Mr. Drury: No, Mr. Speaker. This was a station being operated by Canada on behalf of NASA as part of a total world space program. Since this station was built by NASA, they concluded that, for budgetary reasons and because the fall-out of scientific information from that particular station had reduced very considerably, they no longer wished it kept open.

Hon. D. S. Harkness (Calgary Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question on this matter for the Minister of National Defence. Is his department giving consideration to re-activating Churchill as a military base in order to take up this slack and also to meet the demands he mentioned in his statement a month ago for greater military presence in the north?

Hon. Léo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, to the specific question of whether we are contemplating the re-opening of the base at Churchill, unfortunately my answer has to be no, at the present time. In answer to the other question about the Canadian presence in the north, I may say this matter will have to be studied with more precision by the task force that we are forming. I hope it will make some recommendations to the Minister in the near future so that we can better determine where the facility should be based in the north.

Mr. Baldwin: Why not send the Bonaventure up there?

Mr. Simpson: A supplementary question—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I must advise hon. members that we are running short of time. Other hon. members are anxious to ask questions and perhaps we might go on with some others and, if there is time, return to the question asked by the hon. member for Churchill.

MONTREAL—SMITH REPORT—REQUEST FOR ACTION

Mr. Georges Valade (Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, I have a question about an important matter to direct to the Minister of Labour. Since the operations of the Port of Montreal were almost brought to a standstill on October 21 because of a dispute between truckers and longshoremen, what action is the minister contemplating to bring this dispute to an end and assure the free movement of goods through the port? May I also ask if the minister has received the Smith report which has to do with an inquiry into labour unrest at the Port of Montreal? When will this report be tabled? May I also thank you, Mr. Speaker, for recognizing me at last.

Hon. Bryce Mackasey (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I am happy to say that the labour unrest to which the hon. member has referred, and which brought the Port of Montreal to a halt yesterday, has been rectified and that the port returned to normal operations this morning. However, I should not want to mislead the House by saying there are no serious problems involving labour unrest in Montreal. I received the Smith report on October 2. There is now a translation. I hope the report can be the basis of action that will once and for all rid the Port of Montreal and, indeed, other ports in this country of many causes of labour unrest.

TRADE

SASKATCHEWAN—JURISDICTION TO ISSUE POTASH EXPORT PERMITS

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina-Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce. May I ask, in view of the announcement by the government of Saskatchewan of its intention to institute minimum prices or price controls and disposal programs with respect to potash for export, and the obvious conflict of interest that arises in these two areas between provincial and federal jurisdictions, whether there was any consultation on this matter between the federal authorities and the government of Saskatchewan? If there was, has the federal government given permission to the government of Saskatchewan to issue export permits, or is it just looking the other way?

Hon. Jean-Luc Pepin (Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce): Mr. Speaker, there was plenty of consultation. The obvious possible conflicts were brought to the attention of the Premier of Saskatchewan; they were ones having to do with legality, feasibility, economic desirability, and so on. The premier is going ahead with his program. It is difficult, before we know exactly how it will look, to pass judgment on it. I, therefore, reserve my judgment. I will not pre-judge the sort of program he will come up with, but he is very much aware of the pitfalls.

[Translation]

AGRICULTURE

SUBVENTIONS FOR TRANSPORT OF FEED GRAIN

Mr. Bernard Dumont (Frontenac): Mr. Speaker, I would like to put a question to the Minister of Agriculture.

Could he tell us by how many millions the subsidies granted for the transportation of feed grain in western Canada and in British Columbia will be reduced?

[English]

Hon. H. A. Olson (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, the subsidy on feed grains to eastern Canada and British Columbia will not be reduced in the current year. Indeed, the subsidies will be increased from $21.5 million to $22.5 million. There is such an increased volume of grain moving from the prairie area to both eastern and western Canada that it is necessary to reduce the rates as well, to keep this matter within budget limitations.

[Translation]

LABOUR RELATIONS

SUDBURY, ONT.—SUGGESTED ACTION BY MINISTER IN NICKEL STRIKE

Mr. Gaétan J. Serré (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Minister of Labour.

Since the miners' strike in the Sudbury area has been going on for more than three months, as the nickel market has substantially decreased inside and outside this country, as thousands of families find themselves in a more and more precarious condition, and also as the unemployed are calling for the federal government's intervention in this conflict, on account of the provincial mediator's failure to bring both parties to an understanding, is it the intention of the minister to make representations to the responsible authorities so as to bring this conflict to an end?

[English]

Hon. Bryce Mackasey (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, may I say from the outset that this naturally is a provincial matter. I wish to reassure the hon. gentleman that the provincial mediator in the dispute, Mr. Dickie, is considered one of the most respected and talented mediators in the country and I am sure he is capable of bringing this dispute to an end. I understand talks will be resuming in a day or two. In any event, the Minister of Labour has enough federal problems on his plate without becoming involved in provincial disputes.

HOUSING

BUILDING SOCIETIES—REQUEST FOR INCOME TAX EXEMPTION

Mr. Lincoln M. Alexander (Hamilton West): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Minister of Finance which has to do with the recent announcement by the government of Ontario that it is showing interest in building societies. These, I understand, will perhaps make more money available for mortgages. Could the minister advise us whether the government has been in contact with the government of Ontario about this matter and, in particular, whether the matter of the granting of income tax concessions was discussed, since this would help with respect to the formation and operation of such societies?

Hon. E. J. Benson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, there has been no direct consultation between myself and the government of the province of Ontario. The only information I have received in this regard has come through the press and from my colleague, the minister in charge of housing, who said that he heard something about this. Perhaps the Ontario minister with responsibility in this field would like to meet with me at some time in the future.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

GREECE—SUGGESTED NATO PRESSURE TO OBTAIN PARLIAMENTARY DEMOCRACY

Mr. R. Gordon L. Fairweather (Fundy-Royal): Mr. Speaker, I have desperately been trying to ask a question about the political situation in Greece, although I expect it could wait until the next session. I wonder how Canada responded to the appeal of the political committee of the North Atlantic Assembly last week when the suggestion was made that NATO should place concerted pressure on the government of Greece within the NATO council with a view to a rapid return to free elections, parliamentary democracy and the rule of law in that unfortunate country.

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, that has been the view of the Canadian government throughout. We do not believe that Greece should be thrown out of the NATO alliance because of the nature of its present government when we are all trying to help restore democracy in that country.

INQUIRY OF THE MINISTRY

Mr. W. B. Nesbitt (Oxford): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Transport which, I suppose, could wait until the next session; but it will save time then if I ask it now.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Since the question period has expired, it seems to me that questions that can wait until the next session might very well be asked within the next few days. With the consent of the House, we might take another minute to recognize a few of the hon. members in the back benches who have not had an opportunity to ask questions.

AIRPORTS

REGINA—REQUEST FOR STATEMENT ON SALE OF PROPERTY TO FEDERAL GOVERNMENT

Mr. John Burton (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Minister of Transport. In view of the urgency of reaching a settlement of negotiations between the city of Regina and the government of Canada on the sale of airport property to the federal government, can the minister indicate what progress is being made in these negotiations?

Hon. Donald C. Jamieson (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I am happy to announce that the Mayor of Regina is coming here and that I am to meet with him at ten o'clock on Friday morning.

HIGHWAYS

EASTERN PROVINCES—REQUEST FOR STATEMENT ON COST SHARING ARRANGEMENTS

Mr. Robert McCleave (Halifax-East Hants): Mr. Speaker, since my question involves the Departments of Transport and Regional and Economic Expansion, perhaps I might direct it to the Prime Minister. Would he, as soon as possible in the new session, indicate what cost sharing arrangement with regard to highway construction will be offered to eastern Canadian provinces?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The hon. member is asking for a statement to be made in the new session. Perhaps the question might be asked again then.

Inquiries of the Ministry

NATIONAL PARKS

NEWFOUNDLAND—STATUS OF NEGOTIATIONS CONCERNING BONNE BAY

Mr. Jack Marshall (Humber-St. George's-St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, may I address a question to the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development. I gave him notice of it. Could he advise us if the government of Newfoundland has indicated it is willing to turn over the land for the establishment of a national park in the Bonne Bay area? Could he also advise us of the present status of negotiations between the two levels of government?

[Translation]

Hon. Jean Chrétien (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Mr. Speaker, I thank the hon. member for giving me notice of his question. Negotiations are being carried on in a regular way.

[English]

FINANCE

DATE OF PRESENTATION OF WHITE PAPER ON TAXATION

Mr. Herb Breau (Gloucester): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Minister of Finance? Can he tell the House when he will present the government's white paper on taxation?

Hon. E. J. Benson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, on November 7 at 6 p.m. I will table it in the House, with the consent of the House.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

CLINTON, ONT.—REQUEST FOR NORMAL MAINTENANCE OF BASE

Mr. R. E. McKinley (Huron): I have a question for the Minister of National Defence, Mr. Speaker. In view of the announcement that the Canadian Forces Base at Clinton is to be phased out by September, 1971, would the minister give us an assurance that the normal maintenance service, such as the painting of houses, will continue to be carried out up to that time?

Since I may not have an opportunity to put a supplementary, Mr. Speaker, I shall ask a further question at this point. Would the minister consider initiating, and paying for, a feasibility study by a private concern so that such a study could be made available to potential buyers who may take over this place after 1971? Can the minister give an assurance, also, that nothing will be removed from the base—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Hon. Léo Cadieux (Minister of National Defence): First, I can give the hon. member an assurance that the base will be kept in good shape and good order until we vacate it on the date the hon. member has quoted. As far as a feasibility study is concerned, it has been our experience that working with the provincial organizations, which specialize in problems of this nature, we have been quite successful. Instead of my department paying for a feasibility study, it is my suggestion that perhaps the provincial authorities who are concerned with these problems might wish to talk to us about it. They would be welcome to do so. I am sorry, but I did not hear the last part of the question.

Mr. McKinley: It is very short, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. member indicates he has a short supplementary question. At the same time there are a number of other hon. members who would like to ask questions, and I suggest we have for some minutes, now, gone beyond the hour reserved for oral questions.

PROROGATION OF PARLIAMENT

Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to inform the house that I have received the following communication:

Government House, Ottawa
October 17, 1969

Sir,

I have the honour to inform you that the Right Honourable John R. Cartwright, P.C., M.C., Chief Justice of Canada, in his capacity as Deputy of His Excellency the Governor General, will proceed to the Senate Chamber at 4.45 p.m. on Wednesday, October 22nd, for the purpose of proroguing the First Session of the Twenty-eighth Parliament of Canada.

I have the honour to be, Sir, Your obedient servant,

Louis-Frémont Trudeau,
Brigadier General
Assistant Secretary to the Governor General.

PRIVILEGE

MR. McGRATH—OMISSION FROM TRANSPORT COMMITTEE REPORT

Mr. James A. McGrath (St. John's East): I am rising on a question of privilege, Mr. Speaker. I had hoped to direct a question to the chairman of the transport committee, the hon. member for LaSalle, but since he is no longer in the House, and since I failed to catch Your Honour's eye, perhaps I could raise the matter now in the form of a question of privilege. It has to do with the 13th report of the Standing Committee on Transport and Communications which was presented in the House this day. My question arises from the fact that this report does not contain the unanimous recommendation of the transport committee, which met on Monday last, October 20, in accordance with which the committee decided to recommend to the House that the House extend its order of reference to the committee, permitting it, or instructing it, to make a study of the transportation problems of the Atlantic provinces and, more particularly, of those relating to Labrador and the north shore of Quebec.

The report of the committee presented today contains only a part of that recommendation. Unfortunately, as this is the last day of the session I am not in a position to move a motion—otherwise I would do so—to refer this matter to the appropriate committee in order to find out why the instructions of the transport committee were not carried out.

Hon. Donald S. Macdonald (President of the Privy Council): I am not familiar with the report or with its contents but I have had discussions with various members of the committee and I understand that the verbatim transcript of the committee's proceedings was not prepared in time for the committee to complete its final report. I indicated that to the extent I could give such an assurance we would establish a new order of reference in the new session in order that the subject matters referred to by the hon. member could be considered by the committee. The committee could then complete its report. I am glad to repeat this assurance, given privately, in public.

I wonder if I might suggest to Your Honour that we suspend this sitting until the call of the bell.

Mr. Speaker: Is that agreed?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: The house will accordingly suspend its sitting until the call of the bell at 4.45 p.m.

SITTING SUSPENDED

SITTING RESUMED

The house resumed at 4.45 p.m.

PROROGATION OF PARLIAMENT

A message was delivered by Major C. R. Lamoureux, Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, as follows:

Mr. Speaker, the Honourable the Deputy Governor General desires the immediate attendance of this honourable House in the chamber of the honourable the Senate.

Accordingly, Mr. Speaker with the House went up to the Senate chamber.

Whereupon the Deputy Governor General was pleased to close the first session of the twenty-eighth parliament of Canada with the following speech:

Honourable Members of the Senate:
Members of the House of Commons:

The first session of the twenty-eighth Parliament was noteworthy both for the importance of the measures carried into law, and for the preparations set under way for further action in this Parliament.

Canadians were saddened during this session by the death of a distinguished and much respected former Governor General, Field Marshal The Right Honourable The Earl Alexander of Tunis. His gallant leadership in war and his devoted public service in peace won His Lordship the respect and affection of all Canadians.

Appreciative of the need for the effective administration of our public affairs, you approved far-reaching changes in the organization of the Government and its departments, and procedures by which each of the chambers of Parliament discharges its public duties. The Departments of Regional Economic Expansion, Communications, and Supply and Services were established. The rules of the House of Commons have undergone fundamental reform so that the Members of that chamber may undertake a more profound scrutiny of public affairs. Research assistance was provided to the leaders of the Opposition parties to enable them to better discharge their vital responsibilities.

Amongst the most important legislative contributions to the preservation of Canadian unity were steps taken to reduce inequalities of language rights and economic opportunities. The Official Languages Act recognized the right of Canadians to deal with federal government institutions in French or English. To combat regional economic disparities, you sanctioned the creation of the Department of Regional Economic Expansion and the enactment of the Regional Development Incentives Act.

During the session, the Government re-convened the Federal-Provincial Constitutional Conference to consider changes which a century of experience and the challenges of our time demand in our basic constitutional structures. Wide ranging proposals for constitutional reform continued to be studied by heads of governments and by their official representatives.

In pursuance of its objectives of justice and equality, the Government proposed a policy within which Canada's Indian peoples might overcome the discrimination, economic, legal and social, under which they have long suffered.

The Government has, as a result of its review of external and defence policies, undertaken fresh departures in foreign policy. It decided to re-align Canadian forces within the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Negotiations were commenced with representatives of the People's Republic of China with the aim of establishing formal diplomatic relations with that government. Discussions between Canada and the Holy See resulted in the decision to exchange representation at the ambassadorial level. Canadian ministerial missions visited Japan and Latin America to explore possibilities of increased trade, investment and closer co-operation.

The Prime Minister attended the Conference in London of Commonwealth Prime Ministers and visited Washington at the invitation of the President of the United States. He and his colleagues received a number of leaders of other countries, including the Presidents of Niger and Tanzania; the Prime Ministers of Barbados, Lesotho, Singapore, Australia and New Zealand; the Foreign Ministers of the United Arab Republic, Belgium, Israel, Germany, Britain, Dahomey, Gabon, the Soviet Union, Italy and Burma; and the Secretaries-General of the United Nations and NATO.

Inflation continues to threaten the economy. Through fiscal and monetary policies, the establishment of a Prices and Incomes Commission, and strict control of its own expenditures, the Government is attempting to reduce the upward pressure on prices. Continued care by the Government and matching concern at other levels of government and in the private economy will be necessary, however, to contain cost and price increases within the limits of increased productivity.

The Canadian dollar has remained strong during a period of uncertainty in world foreign exchange markets. As one step toward the establishment of a larger liquidity base for international trade, you have approved changes in the Bretton Woods Agreement to establish special drawing rights.

You have also approved amendments to the Customs Tariff for the purpose of implementing Canadian undertakings in the Kennedy Round Trade negotiations. At the same time, you approved the Anti-Dumping Act and the creation of an anti-dumping tribunal to protect Canadian producers from unfair trading practices. As a further aid to the competitive position of Canadian producers on world markets, you have established the Export Development Corporation with broad financial powers to facilitate sales to foreign customers.

You have approved amendments to the Estate Tax Act, and to the gift tax provisions of the Income Tax Act, which will ensure a fairer distribution of the burden of taxation. Other amendments to the Income Tax Act with relation to insurance and banking institutions will have the same effect.

The Government has initiated a thorough review of the present social security system and of veterans' pensions. Parliament has approved amendments to the National Housing Act to expand the powers of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation to assist limited dividend and non-profit housing companies. You also increased the funds available for housing loans to individuals and revised the terms on which such loans may be made.

At no session since the Criminal Code was introduced in Canada have there been such extensive and fundamental amendments of the criminal law. The amendments which you approved reflected the concern of Canadians that criminal sanctions be employed to protect public order, but not to enforce private beliefs.

It was this concern about the use of legal controls to regulate private conduct which caused the Government to establish a committee of enquiry into the non-medical use of drugs.

You have directed your attention to the high cost of the medical use of drugs and by assuring competition in their production and sale without prejudice to safety standards, you have strengthened the position of Canadian consumers.

You have also approved legislation that will protect Canadian consumers from the dangers of certain hazardous products which may be available on our markets.

In order to improve the quality of health, recreation and competitive sport in Canada, the Government tabled the Report of the Task Force on Sport and implemented a substantial number of its recommendations.

Labour disputes of major concern to the national interest were considered by Parliament. Anxious to improve many aspects of management-labour relations, the Government tabled a Task Force Report on Labour Relations which wil provide the background for legislation to be introduced in the next session.

During this session, you have enacted a number of measures to give financial assistance to the farming community. You have extended the provisions of the Prairie Grain Advance Payment Act to provide further liquidity to the farmers of Western Canada. The Farm Improvement Loans Act, the Farm Syndicates Credit Act, and the Farm Credit Act have all been expanded in their application. You have approved a measure to regulate plant quarantine, and to provide or extend compensation for losses due to pesticide residues, animal contagious diseases, and plants destroyed to prevent the spread of disease.

A new measure which you have enacted established the Freshwater Fish Marketing Corporation to improve marketing opportunities for the fisheries industries of Western Canada. The Government has also provided special assistance to the producers of the Atlantic fisheries to help them through a difficult period.

The creation of the new Department of Communications sought to consolidate the responsibilities of the Government of Canada in that field and to assure that recent advances in technology would be made available to Canadians. You approved amendments to the Post Office Act, and a study of the future development of the Post Office was undertaken. An imaginative piece of legislation established Telesat Canada which will provide this country with communications from a synchronous satellite early in the next decade.

In the face of encouraging prospects of resource development in the Yukon and Northwest Territories, you have approved the Oil and Gas Production and Conservation Act which will provide a new system for the orderly development of oil and gas resources.

A number of other important items of legislation were approved in this first session of the twenty-eighth Parliament which has been distinguished by innovation and reform. This creditable record is the beginning of a comprehensive program of legislation which must be enacted if we are to achieve our common goals of peace, justice and national prosperity.

Members of the House of Commons:

Thank you for the provision you have made for the public services in the previous and current fiscal year.

Honourable Members of the Senate:

Members of the House of Commons:

May Divine Providence continue to bless our country.

This concluded the first session of the twenty-eighth parliament.