I have been for about ten years very much troubled with indigestion and dyspepsia, have used a great many different kinds of medicines, and have been treated by a number of physicians and found no benefit from them.
I was recommended to try SOUTH AMERICAN

I have found very great relief, and have since taken two more bottles and now feel that I am entirely free from indigestion and dyspepsia.
I strongly recommend all my fellow sufferers

DEAD BIRDS AT EASTER.

It was an Easter Sunday, bright and calm.
And life, not death, was the glad theme that echoed in the air.

The air was full of Spring's delicious balm.
The maple buds were dropping on the lawn.
And one sweet leaf with flush of crimson on its edge.

Well on the dead birds of a woman's bonnet.
They fell as the bells at that Easter time.
They fell of vanished death and risen life.
Hush, then, O bells, your inconsistent chiming You and the dull old world's are hard at it.

For surely when the crimson fell on the I saw dead birds upon a woman's bonnet!
What does it cost, this garbure of death!
It costs this life which God alone can give;
It costs the life which God alone can give;
It costs the life which God alone can give;
It costs the life which God alone can give;

Oh! who would stop the sweet pulse of a lark, That flutters in such ecstasy of bliss!
Or lay a robin's bright breast, cold and stark For such a petty recompense as this;
Oh! who would love your babies, think upon it, Mothers are slaughtered just to trim your bonnet!

Will Herod never cease to rule the land,
That we must slay sweet innocency so!
Is any so cheap, for happiness so planned!
Tell me, O friend who are acquainted with woo
Does thy sad heart proclaim no protest on it Wouldst thou slay happiness just for a bonnet!

And must God's choir, that through His breath,
Granting sweet matinees to high and low, Must his own orchestra of field and grove,
And all the sweet voices of the world, Nay, my O God, be victim thy bonnet upon it, Guard thy dear babies from sport and greed and bonnet!

Their fine spun hennocks, swinging in the breeze,
Should be as safe as babies' cradles are;
And no rude hand that tears them from the trees,
Or dashes a sweet bird's property to naught, Deserves a woman's touch or kiss upon it, Unless she wears dead birds upon her bonnet!

Dead birds! and dead for gentle woman's sake,
To feed a vanity's poor breath!
And yet the foolish bells sweet clamor make And tell of those whose power hath vanquished death!

Ab! Easter time has a reproach upon it, White birds are slain to trim a woman's bonnet!

THEM FOREHAND CARBONS.

The Carson family consisted of Tom, aged nineteen, strong, methodical and ambitious to become a farmer; Walter, aged seventeen, caring more for his books and dreams than for outdoor sports, and Mary and Alice, aged fifteen and thirteen respectively, bright and capable and already well advanced in cooking and household economy.

They had been living with an uncle, and now at his death were thrown on their own resources. The uncle Jason Carson had lost an arm in the war, and his pension and the small sums which Tom and Walter could make during vacation and at odd hours had enabled them to live very comfortably.

A few miles back in the country was a small hillside farm which had been in the Carson family for several generations.
Many years before the house had been destroyed by fire, and since then Uncle Jason had abandoned the farm to briars and shrubs. He was not able to build and could find no one who wished to buy or rent. So the farm had been allowed to deteriorate year after year. And now it belonged to the children.

As yet they had made no plans. Tom wished to go West and hunt up a homestead; Walter had no preference and was willing to leave everything to remain where they were.

The farm was in a bad locality, and the neighbors found it difficult to make even a bare living from their rocky acres.
It would be almost impossible to sell at any price; and yet without money they could not go West, or, indeed, anywhere.
But they must do something.

One day Tom came in with a disas-tressed expression.

"Old James Halliday will give $200 for the place," he said, as he drew a chair up to the window and drummed impatiently on the sill. "He says that times are hard and farmers are getting to be a poor investment. Besides our place is very much run down and has no house."

"Uncle Jason used to say it was worth a thousand easily," remarked Walter, glancing up from his book.

"I know, but what are we to do?
There are half a dozen farmers for sale near by and nobody wants them. And ours is four miles from a railway or a market. Mr. Halliday says that any price is a good price. I don't like the idea of selling, but we must do something. I should like to go West, but after our fares are taken out of $200 there wouldn't be much left for farm tools."

"If all of us could get work maybe we could stay here," said Mary.

"But we can't get work," said Tom.
"I have tried everywhere I can think of.
Folk are not rich enough to hire much help. I have been thinking of going back in the country and hiring on a farm. My wages would help you a little." Walter here threw his book down on the table with a bang.

"I move we go West," he cried, with sudden energy. "We must try to keep together somehow. The $200 would pay our fares, and Tom and I could be sure to get work enough to keep us from starving. I have been reading about poultry lately, and I believe there's money in it. And Hopkins tells me it is worth more to him than farming. He says his chickens to the hotels at the point."

"Oh, I don't doubt there is money in it," said Tom, with animation, "but one must have land for that as well as for farming. If I were sure we could get steady work or a homestead, I'd say let us go West. But it would be a very bad mistake should I get all you kids out there to starve."

"Folk don't generally starve when they are strong and willing to work," said Mary, sturdily. "I'd rather stay here, but am willing to go West if you think best. We could get on somehow. We are all healthy."

So far impulsive, quick-witted Alice had not spoken. Now she glanced up with sudden light in her eyes.

"If you should find a homestead, Tom, how far do you suppose it would be from a railway?" she asked.

"Oh, I don't know," he replied, vaguely. "Ten or twenty miles perhaps more.
Government land is getting scarce, the papers say. Of course we couldn't expect to find it in sight of railway stations."

Alice opened the oven and looked at the bread she was baking.

"Grasshoppers, drought and cyclones injure the farm crops sometimes, don't they, Tom?" she asked laying a hand on his shoulder.

"Yes, I guess so," ceasing his drumming and looking at her.

"Our land is but four miles from the railway," she suggested.

Tom and Walter glanced at her blankly for a few moments. Mary began to clap her hands softly.

"But there isn't any house on the land," Tom said at length.

"Do you expect to find one on the government land?"

Tom turned to the window and looked out. Walter rose and made a profound bow to Alice, then picked up his book and resumed his reading.

Presently Tom turned round with a whimsical smile on his face.

"Funny none of us thought of that before," he said, "but I believe you are right, Alice. The best thing we can do will be to homestead the old homestead."

We have plenty of furniture and a few small garden tools to begin with, and before winter comes we can build some kind of a house. We shall have to convince our great-grandfather did with a log cabin, throwing back his head with an unconscious movement of decision that will become his strong, old figure."

"This summer we shall have to camp out. You girls can use the tent and Walter and I will rig up some kind of shelter near by. Walter can commence his poultry business, and I will get out logs for our cabin. And we will clear up and live the old life for a year or two's planning. How does it suit you?"

"Splendid! Tip-top!" exclaimed the girls in a breath.

"Regular lark!" cried Walter. "When shall we move?"

"At once. We have only thirty dollars, and we must make that go as far as we can. We probably won't earn much this summer; but we shall have no rent to pay, and we can live very cheaply.
And we'll be getting ready for next year.
Of course our land is poor and needs to be brought up, on the other hand, we have better markets than they have out West. I think we can make it go."

"Of course we can," cried Alice, enthusiastically.

"Alice and I will make a garden and raise all our vegetables," said Mary; and we will pick huckleberries and blueberries.
Perhaps we can sell some of the berries.
And there are lots of apple trees and quince bushes. Next fall we shall have barrels and barrels of fruit. It will be no end of fun!"

"And work," added Tom, quietly.
"But I think we shall all like it. As you say, there are lots of fruit, and when I get the ground ready I am going to put in strawberries and currants, and such things. None of the farmers round here raise them, and I think we can establish a good business."

"I with my hens, and you with your fruit, and each of the girls a strong result."

And Walter, as he once more closed his book and pushed it back on the table.

"But say, Tom, why can't we get some railway ties? We have splendid timber on the place. I heard Sam Rice say yesterday that his father was going to give up farming this summer just to get out the ties. The railroad company wants a big lot. Sam's father says it will pay better than farming. We could get somebody to haul them for us. What say you, Thomas?"

"Grand idea!" exclaimed the head of the house, who was delighted with the project. "We will need some ready money to get our fruit and poultry business under way, and the ties will be just the thing. Uncle used to grumble because his fields had grown up to timber, which wasn't worth anything in this country, he said, and the land would all have to be cleared over again. If we can sell it for ties it will be worth almost as much as experience has proved and shall from to us as meadow land. Seventy-five or one hundred dollars will come in handy next fall. Maybe we can put aside enough by another year or buy an old horse and wagon."

The next day the owner of the small house was notified that it would be given up at the end of the month, and then Tom and Walter hired a team and carried a load of lumber and their tent out to the farm. A few days were sufficient to build a rough board shanty and to put up the tent, and they made the camp as attractive as possible for the reception of the girls. Such furniture as could be used was brought to the farm and the rest stored with a neighbor until they should have a cabin to receive it.

It was still early in May, but the air was warm and dry. The girls were delighted with the out door life, and even Walter forgot that there were cereals such as books in the world. As the weeks went by the dreamy indecision left his face and he became almost as eager and enthusiastic as Alice herself.

A neighbor was hired to plow up a small piece of land near the camp and this was planted with vegetables and placed under charge of the girls.

The boys spent most of their time in the woods getting out ties. But already there were numerous camps scattered about the place, and the air was mellowed with the peep, peep of an army of chickens.

By the end of September they had put aside over a hundred dollars and near the side of the old farm house was a pile of logs which the boys had hauled during the summer. A carpenter was engaged to oversee the building and with his help and occasional assistance from the neighbors the cabin went up rapidly. Before cold weather arrived they were comfortably installed in their new home.

After the carpenter was paid and the rest of the furniture brought from the village they had nearly $40 left. This was expended in provisions and farm tools.

During the winter the boys worked at their ties as steadily as the weather would permit. In the spring they bought a horse and cow, and were obliged to wait until the next fall for a wagon. Currently they set strawberries, currants and fruit trees and Walter added turkeys and geese to his poultry business. The next year they bought a pair of oxen and more tools and several new fields were fenced in. At the end of five years the log cabin was replaced by a neat frame-house which they were spoken of by the neighbors far and near as "them forehanded Car-sons."

Dominion Parliament.

Ottawa, April 24.—This was private members' day in the house, and Mr.
Charlton occupied the first hour in advocating his bill to amend the Dominion Franchise act by substituting the proportional lists.

Mr. O'Brien in Mr. McCarthy's absence moved his bill to amend the Dominion Election act. He explained it was to put a stop to railway companies making themselves election agents by carrying voters to the polls and to provide for the trial by summary process in case of perjury.

THE PROHIBITION REPORT.

The report of the prohibition committee, which was presented to-day, is a voluminous document, making nearly 1,500 type-written pages, apart from the printed evidence. The committee summarize their work as follows: The enactment of a prohibitory law for the whole Dominion would, in the opinion of the undersigned, prejudicially affect the business, industrial and commercial interests of the country. The effect of the law on the federal, provincial and municipal revenues from the traffic would be to practically wipe them out. In Quebec the wiping out of so large a sum as $200,000 would prove severely embarrassing. Of the South act it can only be remarked that it still remains the law of the country. That it is the nearest approach to a general prohibitory system which has been attempted, and that the act has been repealed in 50 per cent. of the counties and cities which originally adopted it, and no new district has put the act in force since 1886. A prohibitory law was enacted in New Brunswick in 1855, put in force in January, 1856, and repealed the same year. The prohibitory system with permit provisions has been in force for several years in the Northwest and abandoned for a license system in 1892. It may be asked if the progress in the states of the United States which have adopted prohibitory laws has been greater than the various Canadian provinces where the law has been what has just been described. The committee refer to the information already given and in the evidence submitted, for an answer to that question.
They believe that it must be answered in the negative by everyone disposed to weigh the facts dispassionately.

The comparison deals with prohibition as a system. The committee cannot agree with the view so earnestly put forward by some church organizations and many witnesses, that the recognition of the traffic by licensing it is an immoral and a national sin. On the other hand Editorial Notes.

The budget speech delivered by Hon. Geo. E. Foster in the House of Commons on Friday last, in spite of the large deficit caused by hard times, from which countries than this had suffered seriously, pointed out that Canada was fairly prosperous, the imports last year being slightly higher than usual and in exports Canada held her own, the decreased customs receipts being caused by the decreased value of goods, which the London "Economist" estimated at 71 per cent last year.

The estimates show that the expenditures are to be cut down considerably in the various departments, and the Finance Minister stated that for probably the first time since Confederation there would be no supplementary estimates.
To provide for this deficit and prevent a recurrence of the same a duty of a half cent per lb. has been put on raw sugar, previously free, while increased excise duties have been placed on spirits manufactured in Canada as well as an increased duty on spirits imported.

Supreme Court.

In the Dominion Supreme Court at Ottawa on Monday the case of Bank of Nova Scotia vs. James O. Fish, appeal was allowed with costs.

The history of this case shows the history of the law, and how expensive a suit may be made when a wealthy corporation sues a private individual, and carries their case from court to court until the expenses amount to more than the original amount claimed. At the request of the agent of the Bank of Nova Scotia here Mr. J. A. O. Fish, and others endorsed drafts which they understood was for the accommodation of the Bank and not for that of the Agent. The agent did not know the drafts were made for this purpose, Mr. Fish among the number, declined to pay, and suit was entered for the amounts. In the case against Mr. Fish a jury of the Circuit Court gave a verdict in his favor; the Bank carried the case to the Supreme Court of New Brunswick when he again won the case, and being carried to the Dominion Supreme Court the appeal has been allowed with costs, which means a new trial and that probably the same routine has to be gone over again if the defendant feels able to further defend the case. It is stated that the bank wishes to have the law decided which their responsibility is for the acts of their agents in this favor; Mr. Fish is the means by which they hope to get this decision at his expense. Rather hard lines for Mr. Fish, who has the good wishes and sympathy of all outside of the bank.

Northumberland's Representative.

Ottawa notes in the St. John "Sun" under date of April 29, thus alludes to the labors of Mr. Adams, representative of this county, in behalf of his constituents:

Mr. Adams of Northumberland does not talk much in the house, but in hustling for his constituents he has few rivals in parliament. He is now persistently urging the members of public works to set the steam dredge Dominion at work, continuing the deepening of the Miramichi bar, so that large steamships can pass over it outwardly, fully laden, with cargo, and also to get the engineers to continue the hydrographic survey. His most important work, however, has been to secure for the residents of the main southwest and northwest Miramichi a restoration under proper conditions of the right to fish for salmon with nets, a privilege which they formerly enjoyed, but was taken away before Mr. Adams entered parliament. This order was not secured until Mr. Adams had placed the whole facts before the minister of marine, explained the reasons forwarded to him from Blackville, Blissfield and Ludlow, and entered fully into the merits of the case. Hon. Mr. Conington, who has shown deep personal interest in the matter of the Miramichi fisheries, is anxious to do all he can consistent with his position, to meet the wishes of the fishermen. At Mr. Adams' instance he has ordered the placing of two hundred and fifty thousand Restigouche salmon fry in the Miramichi, and will have the buoy service of this important port improved by the placing of new iron buoys. A further good thing secured by Mr. Adams is in modernizing the methods at the Douglastown marine hospital so that sailors will be far better cared for than in the past. Heretofore much of the cost of collection on vessels entering the Miramichi will be used for the hospital purposes of the port. With the above record to his credit, Mr. Adams is particularly happy to-day.

Scott Act Cases.

Cases against Michael Kain, Alice Curry, and Mary Lynch, all of Chatham, were tried before Geo. B. Fraser, Esq., on Tuesday and Wednesday of last week for violation of the Canada Temperance Act, were found guilty and each sentenced to a fine of $50 and costs.
The case against Wm. Bailey was dismissed for want of evidence, and the case against George Palmer was postponed until yesterday.
The Fitzpatrick and Carroll cases Nelson, have been further adjourned at the request of their counsel, Hon. L. J. Tweedie.

Obituary.

The sudden and unexpected death of Mrs. J. H. Phinney, of this town, of heart failure, took place at her residence on Thursday evening last shortly before ten o'clock. Deceased had been seriously ill from a bilious attack for several days which had been overcome and she was apparently on the road to recovery when heart failure came on and caused her death. She was in her 43rd year.

Mrs. Phinney was the youngest daughter of the late Obadiah Call, of the village of Call, Cal., and was a universal favorite with every one. Of a lively temperament she was ever jovial, the life of any house or party where she was present. In her own home she was hospitable and kind to all and will be much missed by a large circle of relatives and friends. To the husband and daughter, as well as her brothers and sisters, her loss is a severe one and universal sympathy is felt for them in their affliction.

The funeral took place on Sunday afternoon at which the attendance was very large. The casket was covered with beautiful flowers, the gifts of friends with the exception of St. John and Halifax, testifying by their fragrances and beauty the esteem in which the memory of the deceased was held by the donors. The service at the house was conducted by Rev. Geo. Harrison, and the prayer at the grave was delivered by Rev. W. Atkinson. The pall bearers were Messrs. Donald Morrison, John Morrison, John Fleming, Wm. Malley, T. W. Crocker, W. C. Anslow. Upwards of five hundred persons are expected to be present in the procession, in addition to a number of carriages in the rear.

St. John Notes.

(From our special Correspondent.)
St. John, May 6, 1895.

Bicycles are becoming more popular every day and a larger number will be in use in St. John this summer than ever before. Young and old, male and female, ride a wheel when they can afford to do so, and the keen competition has reduced the price wonderfully, so that persons who could not afford such a luxury heretofore can this spring be seen gliding around the town on a "silent steel".

These are hard times but still there is money in the neighborhood to spend. This appears from the fact that one firm of bicycle dealers has this early in the season sold $8,500 worth of one kind of wheels. As there are many dealers and many kinds of wheels the sales must have already amounted to a large sum.

The poor farmers will have to suffer this spring. Seeds are up in price, Timothy now costs fifteen cents more than it did ten days ago, Mammoth Clover is a cent per lb. and red clover 2 cent. Timothy and clover seeds are selling for seventy-five cents per bushel more than last year and are worth nearly double as much as they were in 1893.

And now there is a scholastic called at Lockport. She has just been launched at Trinity, is 31 tons register and is intended for use as a fisherman. The owner is seeking to get insurance on her in this city.

W. A. Brady, of Boston, has paid $15,000 for the privilege of playing Trilby in this city.

Messrs. Cummings & Casey, of the Canadian Photo Company of Montreal, are in this city for the purpose of taking views in St. John, its public buildings, business establishments and private residences for publication in Upper Canadian papers.

Roger Hunter of this city who has been blind for eighteen years was successfully operated upon a few days ago by a celebrated Montreal physician, and will have his sight restored as perfectly as ever. He will enjoy it as soon as a week or more of darkness which is necessary after such an operation has passed.

A physician was summoned to a lady to rank as one of the most wonderful in medical history, certainly nothing of this compared with it has ever occurred in this community. It was generally believed in this city that the lady knew Mr. Hunter that his eyesight was gone forever and that he would never be able to see the light of this side of the grave.

For eighteen years Mr. Hunter has been blind and the streets and from his place of business by a member of the family, a son eighteen years old, he has never seen Mr. Hunter's friends and now assured that his sight will be perfectly restored so that he will be able to read the finest print and view again those scenes which he has so long been shut out by darkness.
Many readers of this paper will regret exceedingly to hear of the death of Professor Joseph Heine, the famous blind pianist. His death took place in the city hospital a few days ago. His company was to give a concert in Carleton on Monday night under the auspices of the West side Methodist and the hall was crowded, about five hundred to eight o'clock Prof. Heine was tuning his violin before he went on to play his opening piece, when he suddenly took a pain in his head. He was led into the open air and he grew more rapidly, and was not able to go on with the concert. A physician was summoned and Prof. Heine was sent to the hospital where he lingered only a few hours. His wife and daughter were at his bedside when he died. Professor Heine had a most remarkable career. He was wonderfully gifted and had at one time been a pupil of Ole Bull, who nearly every person has heard. Professor Heine appeared during his career before most of the great halls of Europe, and was twice awarded a signal mark of honor from Queen Victoria.The funeral was very largely attended. It is said to think that the family of this great player, a wife and daughter, are thrown in support upon the sympathy of the community.
A concert will be given next week by the Artillery Band under the auspices of Lady and Sir Leonard Tilley, the Mayor of St. John and others, in behalf of the family of the late famous violinist, Mr. Joseph Heine.

As I was passing along King Street, Saturday afternoon, my attention was directed to the stream of people going in the direction of the store of C. Flood & Sons. The establishment was full of ladies and gentlemen and the staff of clerks seemed to be almost rushed off their feet. I enquired if there was anything extra going on in this store and was informed that this firm had just inaugurated a grand clearance sale of $75,000 worth of staple stationery, fancy goods, steel engraving, etchings, solid silver, quadruple plate, cut glass, bronze and gold statuary, music and musical instruments, piano, harp, Princes and table lamps, art china, etc., etc.

Newcastle Board of Trade.

The adjourned annual meeting of the Newcastle Board of Trade was held in their room in the Creighton building on Monday evening last. The attendance was small. President W. A. Hickson in the chair. Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

Communication from the St. John Board of Trade in reference to a Maritime Board of Trade and requesting this Association to correspond with Mr. Creed, of Halifax in reference to this matter, was also suggested when and where the first meeting should be held. Opinions favorable to the formation of a Maritime Board of Trade were expressed and the date and place of meeting was announced. Halifax being mentioned as the probable place of first meeting for organization.

The Secretary, Mr. Donald Morrison, read his report for the past year. The report was read, and the report of members was in arrears for dues, a committee consisting of the Secretary and Messrs. J.
