A. B. Thompson (Simcoe) wants a law passed compelling oil companies tributing oil. He points out that peddlers have to do this, and some of the same trade on a large scale.

Joseph Howe, an old-timer of Caradoe township, is dead at the age of 75.
He leaves, besides his wife, nee Mary Jane Kettlewell, five sons—William H., Edward and David E., of Metcalfe;
Richard Henry, of Ekfrid; and Joseph
on the old homestead in Caradoc;
three daughters, Mrs. Guilford Carroll,

Glencoe; and Mrs. W. H. Brock, of

An enjoyable event took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ebenezer Ross, one of Alvinston's most highly respected citizens, on March 28, when their sons and daughters, with their children, numbering thirty, gathered at their home to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding. The presenters were six gold pieces and a gold cake plate. Mrs. Ross also received a gold watch.

The Hightgate Canning Factory and,
in fact, every factory belonging to the British-Canadian Cannery, will run full blast this season—so say the management. Mr. Day, of the Hightgate factory, has been in the vicinity of Dutton securing contracts for the growing of corn, and has secured agreements with farmers for about 100 acres. Hightgate factory will not can tomatoes this season.

Things are drifting in Great Britain
towards the prohibition of liquor drinking among the men, especially those upon whom the country is depending for ships, supplies and munitions
at the front supply. Can any fair-minded man imagine men in such positions, at such a time, taking the law into their own hands and defying
the authorities. How long the Government of Britain will refuse to take this matter into their own hands, and once and for all put a curb upon the liquor traffic, which is blamed, and rightly, too, for the hindrance to the successful carrying out of any kind of necessary work, is difficult to understand.

MRS. JANE WATTERWORTH

A Mosa Pioneer and Widow of the Late John Watterworth.

The death occurred at her home on Concession street Friday evening of Mrs. Jane Watterworth, an old and highly esteemed resident of Glencoe.
She was the widow of the late John Watterworth, who for 12 years represented West Middlesex in the Legislature. She had lived in the vicinity of Glencoe for about 33 years.

The family were 12 weeks crossing the Atlantic in an old-fashioned sailing vessel. Her father, the late John Walker, settled near Glencoe, the village being built partly on the old homestead. To the lot of the family fell the arduous work of clearing the forest that then covered the district.

The late John Watterworth, her husband, died in 1903. To them had been born a family of five boys and five girls, all but one of whom are now surviving. They are—James A.
Watterworth, of Duluth; Mrs. S. D.
Walker, of London; John S. Watterworth, of Rockie Harbor, Wash.;
William H. Watterworth, of Glencoe;
Benjamin Watterworth, of London,
high constable of Middlesex county and deputy sheriff; Mrs. Ernest Gosnell, of Highway years; Mrs. W. J. Hey-craft, of Murrkirk; Miss Martha, at home, and Isaac W. Watterworth, of Toronto.

The funeral services were conducted at her late residence on Monday afternoon by Rev. Mr. Howson, pastor of the Glencoe Methodist Church, assisted by Rev. T. T. George, of Thames-ville, a former pastor and personal friend of the family, who made appropriate and eulogistic references to the pioneer and motherly life of the deceased. The bearers were three sons and three sons-in-law.

Former Glencoe Girl "Showered."

A Winnipeg paper says:—Miss Gladys Wyatt, at her home 130 Smith street, was the hostess Saturday afternoon of a delightfully informal and original shower in honor of Miss Jessie Precious, a bride-to-be of next month.
The bevy of young ladies who attended found an afternoon full of pleasure
planned for them, the shower gifts, consisting of hosiery and handkerchiefs, being presented in novel form.
A bride's prayer-book was formed of the handkerchiefs, and a clothes-line full of the hosiery proved a more attractive curiosity than do such domestic line-ups usually. Miss Precious, who leaves for Edmonton on Thursday to be married, will spend the summer in the West, returning to Winnipeg in the autumn.

D. B. McColl Dead.

Daniel B. McColl, a well known
resident of the township of Ekfrid, died at the Aged People's Home in London yesterday morning in his 85th year. Mr. McColl was a school teacher for many years and was one of the best informed men in the township. Several times he occupied the position of auditor of the municipal accounts. Funeral will be from the Grand Trunk station, Appin, Thursday afternoon, at 3 o'clock, to the Eddie cemetery.

High School Literary Society.

The regular and last meeting of the Literary Society for the term was held on Tuesday. The president, E. S.
Brimhead, was in charge. A. E.
Aldred read the secretary's report.
Miss Chalk gave an instrumental, and Miss Johnston and Miss Graham gave an instrumental duet, which were very well received. Rev. G. Weir favored the school with a practical,
entertaining and instructive address.
The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

Agricultural Bulletins.

So great has been the demand for Bulletins, Pamphlets, Records and Reports under the Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa as a result of the Patriotism and Production Movement, that it has been found impossible to comply with all the applications as promptly as could be desired. Of some of the Bulletins the supply has been exhausted
and no time has been afforded for reprinting, while of others the quantity asked for individually has been such that instant compliance would mean
many applicants might have to go without. This has meant extra correpondence and consequent delay. The situation is, of course, satisfactory as indicating the success of the campaign, and the widespread interest created, but the inability to respond to the instant with the multitude of applications is greatly regretted. At the same time it is impossible that the size of the demand could have been foreseen. As fast as possible the requests will be attended to, but in the meantime there will have to be reprinting and in cases revising. In such circumstances patience appears to be a desirable and necessary quality.

Methodist Church.

REV. W. G. HOWSON, MINISTER
Next Sunday will be our educational anniversary. The pastor will take his own work. Subject—morning, "The man and his message"; evening, "On the brink of tragedy." Good music.
Helpful services. Visitors welcome.

All dead men are honest—so far as we know.

McKenzie-Duncan.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at Riverview, Sarnia, on Wednesday, April 7th, when Daniel Chisholm McKenzie, police magistrate of Glencoe, was married to Mary Duncan, of Wishaw, Scotland, at high noon. To the strains of the Wedding March the bride, with her maid of honor, Miss Mary McClymont, entered the drawing-room in which was a table with white and orange blossoms. The groom was supported by his nephew, J. A. Mc-Kenzie, of St. Thomas. The service was performed by Rev. J. J. Paterson, of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, in the presence of a number of personal friends of the bride and groom. After a dainty wedding breakfast the happy couple left for some eastern cities.
The bride's going away gown was a suit of navy blue gaberdine with navy
blue satin blouse and hat to match.
She also wore the groom's gift, a very handsome set of sable furs. The gift to the maid of honor was a handsome brooch. After May 1st Mr. and Mrs.
McKenzie will be at home at their residence, Ekfrid.

What is Your Diet?

Canadians eat too much meat. They are one of the three greatest meat eating peoples in the world. Australia and the United States being the other two. High prices for meat are coming. The cost of food as well as its nutritive value should be considered.
Prof. James Long, the eminent British authority, recently addressed the following advice to the War Office:
"Jam has three and a half times the energy value of meat. The value lies in its richness in sugar—of which one half its weight consists—in the minerals present in the skins of fruits, in its laxative character and mechanical aid to digestion. Commercial sugar,
if eaten too freely, causes irritation,
acidity and other freaks of indigestion.
The most nutritious and valuable varieties of jam are those made from plum, apricot, gooseberry and currant,
but a mixture of plum and apple stand at the head of the list. Jam should not be considered as a dainty but as an article of food."

Dr. Frank T. Shutt, of Ottawa, Dominion Chemist, gives us the following authoritative statement as to the great importance of vegetables, especially fresh or home grown. The importance in connection with small gardens in towns and cities is very apparent, and the subject is opportune at this time of the year. It may be that a small garden will keep down the doctor's bills.

"That many of the ills that flesh is heir to arise from indiscretions in diet
is a fact that more of us should realize
—and the earlier in life the better.
Many of us, and perhaps this applies especially to those who live in the city,
eat too much. As a result, we get too stuffed as life advances and, what is still more serious, an extraordinary strain is put on certain organs of the system in nature's effort to get rid of the waste. Further, we who live more or less sedentary lives eat too much meat; the man who sits at a desk all day long or stands behind a counter may work as hard as the navy or ploughman, but it is a different kind of work. It does not call for the same amount of strenuous food. There is no necessity to diet ourselves by formula
or to weigh out what we should eat, but we ought to be guided to a certain extent by our eating by common sense and the knowledge which science furnishes respecting the requirements of the body for the maintenance of the vital heat, the development of energy and the repair of tissue.
"As city people we might keep in better health and live more cheaply if we would eat less meat and concentrated foods and use more vegetables and fruit. And, Rev. G. Weir might especially be emphasized for the summer diet, when there is not the same
call for the system for the stronger foods.
"Fresh vegetables are wholesome,
palatable and productive of good health. Though in direct food value vegetables yield a first place to meats,
it must not be supposed they are destitute of those nutrients which build up the body tissue and keep the machinery going. It would be possible, though not desirable, to live exclusively on vegetable foods. But vegetables and especially fresh vegetables, are not to be regarded merely from the standpoint of maintenance—though we assert that now-a-days they would make a very good showing on the grounds of economy. Nor need we urge their extensive use on the grounds simply that they are appetizing and furnish variety to the diet. They, in addition to these excellent qualities, possess a medicinal value; they are aids to digestion and afford that bulk or volume to the food necessary for the right distension of the alimentary tract. Many vegetables contain salts which are gently laxative, relieving constipation, that scourge that is the forerunner of so many dangerous, and not infrequently fatal, diseases. And, again, many vegetables, especially those used in salads, have a special value in cooling the blood and are,
therefore, most wholesome, especially in the summer season.
"Fresh vegetables are vastly superior to those that are winter from keeping a day or two, in succulence, crispness and palatability. To be enjoyed at their best, vegetables must be eaten strictly fresh."

The town of Winham, with a debenture debt of $140,000.00, has applied to the Legislature for legislation to empower the municipal council to issue 30-year debentures to meet a floating debt of $12,000 and a drainage
claim of $1,200.

Ekfrid Pioneer Dies

John Allan Lived in the Township
for Over Eighty Years.

The death of John Allan, which occurred at Strathburn on Saturday, April 3rd, removes one of the earliest settlers of this section of country.
Mr. Allan was born at Fredericton,
New Brunswick, on June 3rd, 1829,
and came to Ekfrid with his parents,
the late Mr. and Mrs. James Allan, in 1834, the family settling near the River Thames, then in the midst of the primeval forest. He experienced, along with the other members of the family,
the hardships and privations of the early pioneer. The parents being the first settlers in that section of country
bordering on the Thames in Ekfrid.

In 1861 Mr. Allan was married to Jean Webster, who survives him, together with a family of three daughters and three sons—Agnes (Mrs. J.
Dykes), of New Rockford, Nor. Dakota; Mary (Mrs. Farris), of Coleville, Sask.; Annie, at home; James, of Appin, and David and George, on the old homestead.

The funeral took place from his late residence to Oakland cemetery on Tuesday afternoon.

The Late Mrs. Wm. Boyd.

The death took place at her home in the village of Appin on Wednesday night last of Mrs. Laura Boyd, widow of the late William Boyd. Born in Auburn, N. Y., she came when a child with her sisters and father to Malahide
township, where she passed her girlhood. Coming to Metcalfe in 1854, she shortly after became the wife of William Boyd, who predeceased her three years. Together they made a comfortable home for themselves on the farm now occupied by their son Charles, notwithstanding the privations of pioneer life. Her home was always open and many in the early days enjoyed the hospitality that was always extended. In 1863 they came to Appin to live and since then enjoyed something of what industry in early life helped to provide for later years.
She was a consistent member of the Methodist church. Her memory is cherished by six daughters and two sons.

The funeral service was conducted by Rev. C. W. Bristol, her pastor, on Saturday last, and was largely attended. Interment was made in Gough cemetery, Metcalfe, near the old home.

St. John's Church.

The annual vestry meeting was held on Tuesday evening in the basement of the church.

The total receipts for the year were $1,118.96 and the total expenditure was $1,113.63, leaving a balance in hand of $5.33. There is a small outstanding obligation, less than $30, which will be mostly covered by monies to come in.
The ladies' work showed a very successful year of service. Their total receipts were $375, which was made up
as follows:

Bazaar fund	$ 59.55
Collected by Mrs. Lamont	29.38
Contributed by Mrs. Roome	12.00
Calendar society	46.86
Guild and other funds	183.21
Collected by Mrs. Owen for rectory	14.00
	$ 375.00

The Women's Auxiliary, Senior and Junior, raised a little over $90.

The auditors' report was presented by Mr. Roome. The wardens for the past year, Messrs. Moss and W. Hagerty, were reappointed and votes of thanks to the ladies, organist, choir
and wardens were passed.

The contributions to missions on the part of the congregation were $105.01.
St. John's church will start a new year's work with a very much better
financial outlook than twelve months ago.

Mr. Roome was appointed delegate to Synod and Mr. Lamont as substitute.

St. Alban's, Appin.

The annual vestry meeting of the St. Alban's (Appin) congregation was held on Monday evening at 8 o'clock.
The report of auditors was presented by Messrs. Covey and Banks. The total receipts for the year were $129,
the disbursements $100.

The wardens for the past year and treasurer were reappointed, namely,
Messrs. May, Covey and Edwards.
Mr. Covey was appointed delegate to Synod.

After the meeting all retired to John Cramp's where Mrs. Cramp furnished refreshments and a very pleasant time
was enjoyed.

Peter a Real Farmer.

Extract from report of meeting in Toronto World:—

"In the first place let me introduce myself," said Peter McArthur in addressing four hundred delegates at the fifteenth annual meeting of the Ontario Literary Association at the College street Public Library last night.
"I am a farmer. When I say a farmer
I mean a real farmer, for I have a farm with a mortgage, a hired man
and a sick cow."

The speaker gave a general talk on the work of libraries from an educational point of view and his reading was full of witty sayings which are so characteristic of the writer.

"I was at dinner in a Toronto restaurant this afternoon," he said, "and had a conversation with a gentleman on the Johnson-Willard fight. It was amusing how embarrassed I felt for I found I knew but little of the subject. It was far too intellectual for me and I could not reach to such a height."

The Amateur Expert

The automobile party — among whom was the young man who knew it all — had stopped to watch the workmen who were engaged in building an enormous steel bridge, and some of the more venturesome had fared cautiously out upon the job. The young man referred to above accompanied them.

Once there, with a cigarette dangling from his lips and with his feet widely spread, he shed information — accurate and otherwise — upon all that came to listen. He gave graphic and highly colored accounts of similar feats of engineering that he professed to have seen in various parts of the world. Finding his own party inattentive, he turned his attention to a young man that stood near.

The young man had the air of belonging in some way to the work in hand. He had swung easily from point to point of the job, and now stood talking in an undertone with one of the gang foremen. Meanwhile he chewed a straw, and apparently fretted about nothing. As the foreman nodded and moved away, the young man with the cigarette moved forward and spoke.

"Fairish-sized job they're doing here," he remarked, patronizingly. The quiet young man looked up and nodded.

"One of the biggest anywhere," he responded, briefly.

"Oh, I don't think I'd say that if I were you," he corrected easily.

"It's just about what I called it, I think — just a fair-sized job. You ought to see some of the really big jobs engineers do nowadays — you'd have reason to be proud of your part in the profession, no matter how small it is. I won't mention the Assuan dam, because I didn't see that until after it was finished, but I call to mind one bridge I saw in the building down in the Andes a year ago. Here the information young man became so excited that he dropped his cigarette, and as he raised his voice the workmen near him paused to listen. As he proceeded, some of them showed signs of amusement; so, indeed did the quiet young man.

"That was what you might call a big bridge," the informant went on, largely. "I was stopping at Dash," here he named the place, "and we used to go over every little while and watch them. It was practically impossible to get out on the bridge, as you can here, so we had to watch from a distance. But I was told on good authority that three firms failed to build it, and that they let it lay over one year until they could get Hawkins — he's the big noise when it comes to difficult jobs, you know — to come down and finish it. Ever hear about that bridge?" he demanded.

The quiet young man smiled a little deprecatingly, and nodded his head.

"Why, yes," he replied. "I've heard it mentioned, and I've seen sketches of it in the engineering papers. In one way and another almost all men in this line of business hear of these big jobs, you know. I had really thought, though, that this bridge was bigger — more metal and a longer span. This is really supposed to be one of the biggest — at least, so I've understood."

The young man imparting information smiled tolerantly.

"When you get a chance," he advised, "just look up the bridge I spoke of in your trade papers. I think you'll find I'm right and you're wrong. I really make a study of these things, although my work is in a different line. I'm very sure."

At this interesting juncture something on the far end of the job attracted the attention of the quiet young man, and with a hurried excuse he took his departure. Some of the party watched his easy progress admiringly, and one young lady spoke to the expert on bridges.

"Who was that young man, Sydney?" she wanted to know. Sydney glanced carelessly at the retreating back.

"Why, I don't know — clerk, or something like that," he replied. "Timekeeper, I guess. I saw something that looked like a time-book in his pocket."

A brawny riveter that had been within earshot during the colloquy raised his head, and addressed the young lady diffidently.

"Beg your pardon, miss," he said, "but if you are speaking about the young fellow that just left, I can tell you. He's the chief engineer of the road. They got 'im up 'ere from South America on puppets to build this bridge. Me'n my buddy here — he indicated his helper with a wave of his hand — 'come with him. He was the fellow that built that bridge down there arter three others made a mess of it." Here he raised his voice, for the visiting expert, with a very red face, was leaving the job in a hurry.

"His name's 'Awkins,' bawled the riveter after that discomfited young man, "and he forgets more 'bout bridges." But the rest of his remarks were drowned in the laughter of the party — not that the expert could have heard them, for he was already out of hearing, and getting farther every second.

REPLENISH YOUR BLOOD IN THE SPRING

Just now you are feeling "out of sorts" — not your usual self. Quite exhausted at times and cannot devote real energy to your work. Sleep does not rest you and you wake up feeling "all tired out." Perhaps rheumatism is flying through your muscles and joints, or may be your skin is disfigured by rashes, boils or pimples. Headaches, twinges of neuralgia, fits of nervousness, irritability of temper and a disordered stomach often increase your discomfort in the spring.

The cause — winter has left its mark on you. These troubles are signs that your blood is poor and watery, that your nerves are exhausted. You must renew and enrich your blood at once and restore tone to your tired nerves, or there may be a complete breakdown. The most powerful remedy for these spring ailments is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, because these Pills cleanse bad blood — and strengthen weak nerves.

New, rich, red blood — your greatest need in spring — is plentifully created by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and with this new, pure blood in your veins you quickly regain health and increase your strength. Then your skin becomes clear, your eyes bright, your nerves strong, and you feel better, eat better, sleep better, and are able to do your work.

Begin your spring tonic treatment to-day for the blood and nerves with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills — the Pills that strengthen.

These Pills are sold by most dealers, but do not be persuaded to take "something just the same." If you can't get the genuine Pills from your dealer they will be sent you by mail, post paid, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

AMAZING WAR RELICS.

Interesting Articles Sold by Auction in London.

There will doubtless be seen in this country some strange relics of the present great European conflict, says The Times.

Only the other day, a Lancashire man received from the front the actual bullet which had caused his brother's death.

A few years ago there was sold by auction the spear that was used by a rebel reviver to kill General Gordon. The relic ultimately fetched thirty guineas.

On another occasion the sword used by Lord Cardigan in the battle of Balaklava was disposed of at the same auction-mart for eight and a half guineas.

A very different war relic realized a very different price. This was the silver-gilt table-service used by Napoleon in the course of his many campaigns, and it went for £650.

A really extraordinary war relic was brought to light in the Tottenham Police Court some years ago. A woman applied to the magistrate for a summons against a pawnbroker for damage to a hearthrug. She explained that during a campaign on the Indian frontier, her son had made a large hearthrug out of the garments of his slain comrades, and sent it home to her.

A few years ago a relic of the siege of Paris was discovered in a windmill near Besancon. This was the mummified body of a pigeon, to one of the wings of which a quill was attached. Inside this was a brief message, dated 1870, which read: "Darling — All well, but starving — P. P. G." The pigeon was one of the homers which had been released during the siege and, maybe, shot by the Germans.

Perhaps the most gruesome of all war relics was one of the first Ashanti War, in 1824, when Sir Charles McCarthy and six hundred men fell into an ambush, and were slaughtered to a man.

The skull of the leader of the gallant six hundred was rimmed with gold, and used as a drinking-cup by the kings of Kumasi for half a century.

MOTHER'S PRAISE BABY'S OWN TABLETS

Mrs. S. E. Laurie, Grafton, Ont., writes: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets ever since my baby was two weeks old and would not be without them as I consider them the best medicine in the world for little ones." What Mrs. Laurie says thousands of other mothers say. Simply because they have found the Tablets safe and sure and pleasant for the little ones to take. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Lesser Evil.

"I can give you a cold bite," said the woman.

"Why not warm it up?" asked the tramp.

"There ain't any wood sawed," "So! Well, give it to me cold."

THOUGHTS FOR THE DAY.

He who gains a victory over other men is strong, but he who gains a victory over himself is all-powerful. — Lao Tze.

No human actions were even intended by the Maker of men to be guided by balances of expediency, but by balances of justice. — Ruskin.

Be not uneasy, discouraged or out of humor because practice falls short of precept in some particulars. If you happen to be beaten return to the charge. — Marcus Aurelius.

Our destiny is really nothing more than our character; our character but the result of our active and passive being, the sum, the combination of all our capacities and gifts. — Rahel.

We are apt to give up work too soon, to suppose that a single breakage has ruined the cloth. The men who get on in the world are not daunted by one nor a thousand breakages. — John Morley.

Look not mournfully into the past. It will not come back again. Wisely improve the present. It is thine. Go forth to meet the shadowy future without fear and with a manly heart. — Longfellow.

No Beans.

"Always be definite, Edla, darling," said the fond grandmother, "and when you are asked a question answer definitely in the affirmative or negative and always answer politely."

Edla listened attentively to her grandmother and determined to follow her direction. That day at dinner grandma said, "Edla, dear, will you have some more beans?"

"No," replied Edla.

"No what?" enquired grandma, reprovingly.

"No beans," answered Edla definitely.

Will Quickly Cure Any Sour Stomach

Relieves Fullness After Meals.

"When I was working around the farm last winter, I had an attack of inflammation," writes Mr. E. P. Dawkins, of Port Richmond, N. J., "for a long time, but well enough to work until spring. But something went wrong with my bowels, for I had to use salts or physic all the time. My stomach kept sour, and always after eating there was a pain and fullness, and all the symptoms of intestinal indigestion. Nothing helped me until I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Instead of hurting, like other pills, they acted very mildly, and seemed to heal the bowels. I did not require large doses to get results with Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and feel so glad that I have found a mild, yet certain remedy. To-day I am well — no pain, no sour stomach, a good appetite, able to digest anything. This is a whole lot of good for one medicine to do, and I can say Dr. Hamilton's Pills are the best pills, and my letter, I am sure, proves it."

PURIFYING WATER.

The Most Efficient and the Least Expensive.

Recent experiments in Paris, Marseilles and other French cities offer encouragement that electricity may prove to be the long-sought means of cheap and effective water purification. Purity of water supply is generally recognized as most important for the health of the community, and large expenditures are made annually by cities to maintain a reasonably pure and safe supply for drinking and cooking.

All efforts against water-borne disease for large communities have been only partly successful heretofore, because complete sterilization cannot be accomplished by any method of filtration now known so as to be practical for use on a large scale.

It has long been known that ultra-violet rays of light have very remarkable germicidal effect, quickly destroying the vitality of the most virulent disease-producing germs. Through the discovery by Dr. Cooper Hewitt the ultra-violet rays may be produced in great quantity at very small cost by means of the mercury vapor lamp.

The new method of purification is said to be not only the most efficient but the least expensive method yet discovered. An electric current necessary for a single 16-candle lamp will sterilize perfectly 14,000 gallons of river water in 24 hours at a cost less than 1 cent per 1,000 gallons. The apparatus is said to be simple, not very expensive and may be installed in private homes.

Electricity also has been recently applied to killing germs in milk so that the contents of a capped bottle will keep sweet for eight days. A rapidly alternating current at a pressure of about 4000 volts has succeeded in the desired results of killing harmful bacteria without altering the chemical composition of the milk.

Great thoughts seldom come in very big packages.

I Never Want to Be Without Them

WHAT MRS. A. AVERON SAYS OF DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Alberta Lady Feels It Her Duty to Tell Her Friends of the Benefit She Has Received from Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Faith, Alberta, April 5th (Special). — "I never want to be without Dodd's Kidney Pills," says Mrs. A. Averon, one of the oldest and most highly respected citizens of this place.

"I am an old lady, sixty-eight years of age," Mrs. Averon continues, "and had Kidney trouble for twenty years. My heart bothered me, my muscles would cramp, and my back ached. Neuralgia was added to my troubles."

"Dodd's Kidney Pills are the only medicine that have helped me, and I cannot recommend them too highly. I feel it my duty to tell my friends what Dodd's Kidney Pills did for me."

"Dodd's Kidney Pills are the favorite remedy of the old folks. They cure the Kidneys, which are the first of the organs of the body to feel the strain of years. By curing the Kidneys Dodd's Kidney Pills ensure pure blood and pure blood gives renewed energy all over the body. That's why the old folks say 'Dodd's Kidney Pills make me feel young again.'"

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

Man is made of dust, and is generally out for more.

Success only comes to the man who goes after it with a club.

Many a man's idea of contentment is having more than he can use.

No really big man allows his head to outgrow the rest of his anatomy. Our opinions cost us nothing, so long as we keep them to ourselves. It's when a fellow is hard up that he feels he should be let down easy.

Many a fellow is left-handed who still feels that he does everything right.

If we could see ourselves as others see us, conceit would be a drug on the market.

The race is not always to the swift, the faster a man runs into debt, the more he gets behind.

SOME HARD KNOCKS

Woman Gets Rid of Habit.

The injurious action of tea and coffee on the hearts of many persons is well known by physicians to be caused by caffeine. This is the drug found by chemists in tea and coffee.

A woman suffered a long time with severe heart trouble and finally her doctor told her she must give up coffee, as that was the principal cause of the trouble. She writes:

"My heart was so weak it could not do its work properly. My husband would sometimes have to carry me from the table, and it would seem that I would never breathe again."

"The doctor told me that coffee was causing the weakness of my heart. He said I must stop it, but it seemed I could not give it up until I was down in bed with nervous prostration."

"For eleven weeks I lay there and suffered. Finally husband brought home some Postum and I started new and right. Slowly I got well. Now I do not have any headaches, nor those spells with weak heart. We know it is Postum that helped me. The Dr. said the other day: 'I never thought you would be what you are.' I used to weigh 92 pounds and now I weigh 158."

"Postum must be prepared according to directions on pkg., then it has a rich flavour and with cream is fine."

Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Postum comes in two forms: Regular Postum — must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum — is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

Both kinds are equally delicious and cost per cup about the same.

"There's a Reason" for Postum. — sold by Grocers.

WHEN TO EAT.

Scientist Declares We Do So at the Wrong Time.

That we eat at exactly the wrong time, at least in some countries, is the somewhat remarkable conclusion which Prof. Bergonie of the Bordeaux University reaches as the result of his researches, and it is very apropos at this time when we have the Taylor system of best use of the human motor.

Again, in an electric station, the engineers regulate the coal consumption so as to concord with the variable demand for current. But human beings, according to him, although they work at stated hours, carry out the absorption of food quite by chance and without being occupied with making the food supply concord with the periods of most work.

Fortunately, the liver acts as a reserve of energy, owing to its glycogenic function, but its capacity is, of course, limited. Take, as an example, a repast composed of 1 part fatty elements, 1 part of proteins (meat), and 4 to 5 parts carbohydrates — sugar, starch, etc., the utilization of the energy commences almost at once, and the amount of energy available increases up to some three hours after absorbing the food; then it decreases slowly.

According to this, it follows that most Europeans and Americans use exactly the wrong hours for taking their repast, that is, from 12 to 1 o'clock, and from 7 to 8, for the early morning breakfasts — coffee, etc., can hardly be counted. Especially to be remarked is that the evening meal acts to produce energy just when the organism is about to rest for a long period, and this can only act to overload the liver, being unused for a long time.

According to Prof. Bergonie, the principal repast should be taken at 7.30 a.m., and should be completed by two others, of lighter nature, taken at 4.30 and at 8 o'clock p.m. We would remark that in France and some other countries an early morning repast would not be practicable on account of an absolute lack of appetite for heavy food which is felt at that time, at least by a great number of persons. The Romans had the same habit, points out the Scientific American, so that this must be due to the effect of climate, as it does not depend upon the race of the person who may at any time inhabit such countries.

Fever and Ague.

"It-er-seems," said he, "regarding the unfortunate with scientific interest, 'that the attacks of fever and chills appear on alternate days. Do you think — is it your opinion — that they have, so to speak, decreased in violence, if I may use that word?'"

The patient smiled feebly. "Doc," said he, "on fever days my head's so hot I can't think, and on ague days I shake so I can't hold an opinion."

Guard the Tongue.

You would not think of taking your neighbor's life or wounding him with any physical weapon. But you perhaps do not realize that when you say an evil thing about him you are wounding him more grievously than you could possibly wound him with gun or dagger. You may be killing his reputation, which may be a worse calamity to him than killing his body. It is strange, indeed, that this terrible item of wrong-doing is so easy and so widespread. It is hard to understand the peculiar pleasure which many people seem to feel in saying unkind things about others. Bad as it is simply as a breach of good neighborliness and good citizenship, it is unspeakably bad form from the standpoint of Christianity and the teachings of Christianity's founder.

AN INTERESTING CASE.

Heavy Fine Imposed on an American Railroad.

The close supervision exercised by the Interstate Commerce Commission over the United States railroads is illustrated by the heavy fine imposed recently by the federal courts on the Michigan Central Railroad of $24,000 for failing to collect demurrage charges from the National Fireproofing Company. In the case of these demurrage charges the unfortunate railway is sometimes between the devil and the deep sea; for the shipper, particularly the large shipper, is often slow in paying, whereas the watchful commission, suspecting a concealed rebate, is ever threatening punishment. A fine such as the one just imposed will probably force the railroads to insist on prompt collections, and the Canadian Board of Railway Commissioners may follow suit. Shippers who have been storing their goods on freight cars at the railroad's expense will then no longer be able to escape payment by putting up excuses or playing on the fact that they are good customers of the railroad.

CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY

To the Panama Exposition via the Canadian Rockies.

At the present time a great many are planning their annual tour. Considerable numbers visit the popular California resorts, while many prefer the unsurpassed resorts, palatial hotels and magnificent scenery of the Canadian Rockies. This year why not combine the two by a visit to the Panama Pacific Exposition? Numerous people in comfortable circumstances, well able to afford a trip have the mistaken idea that a journey of this nature is most expensive. This is not so; thanks to modern railway facilities, an extensive trip, both interesting and educational, can be made with speed and comfort at a comparatively small cost. Why not investigate?
Those contemplating a trip of any nature will receive full information from any C. P. R. agent; or write M. G. Murphy, district passenger agent, Toronto.

VIOLET MESSAGE NEW LUXURIOUS BARBER TREAT.

Tonsorialist Shoots Rays Into "Patient" and He Arises a "New Man."

If you should wander into Mr. H. Moore's barber shop and spy your favorite tonsorialist shoving large electric sparks about another customer's hair, using only his fingers to accomplish this result, don't turn and run.

And don't try to guess how he does it, for you would rattle your brain and give up, believing that the man who had shaved your face for the last three or four years had been studying magic and neglected to let you in on his secret.

Just pretend you know all about it. Stroll leisurely to a chair and stay there until the familiar "next" is yours.

In the meanwhile watch closely and you will see your predecessor receive the latest electrode treatments. Yep, that's it—electrode.

Should the customer call for the entire list, here are a few of the things the barber will do to him: Darken his grey hair, produce a rosy color to his cheeks that will last from five to ten hours, cure that terrible headache, chase away warts, moles, pimples, blackheads, etc., and end with the newest massage and shampoo.

If you notice the operation, you will see the customer holds a small glass tube that shoots violet streams of electricity. These sparks go up the victim's fingers, up the arm, around the shoulder, and jump out of the ends of the hair when the barber disturbs the locks with his fingers.

The razor manipulators call the apparatus the barber's X-ray, and say it will perform a hundred feats never heard of.

The stream of sparks is the entire secret, and whatever your ailment is, the barber can effect a cure by turning the violet ray on the location of the pain.

We Don't Know Everything!

How can we? Why should we? We feel no loss of self-respect when we find ourselves unable to cope with another man's theme. NOTES AND COMMENTS

The Germans are evidently seeking to convince themselves and the wretched population of the occupied French provinces that they have come to stay, and they carry this idea so far that they are actually changing the departmental limits in those regions. In this way it is announced that "By decision of the German authorities the administration of the French territory of Givet has been attached to the governorate general of Belgium."

In the little village of Olley, Confans, which originally had about 400 inhabitants, there now remain only five men eighty-three women and children. After making them work in the field the Germans deported all the rest into Germany. For the last two or three months neither officers nor soldiers have any other money than paper marks. They have requisitioned all the French gold and silver and forced the people to pay two per cent. for German paper instead of gold. Some of these villagers have reached Paris via Switzerland and say that when they had to change the German paper in Bale they again lost twelve and one-half centimes on every mark, making altogether about ten per cent.

The following order of the day, signed by Governor von Heindrich, has been placarded over Lille: "All the inhabitants who have barley or wheat, rye, potatoes, rice, oatmeal, salt, sugar, hay or straw, shall make a declaration of the same to the government commissariat. Quantities under 225 pounds of any of these do not come under this order. Failure to comply with it will be punished with a year's imprisonment." Another order states that "All the mobilization orders of the French government for the army and navy are no longer binding," innocently adding: "Nevertheless, any one who complies with these orders of mobilization will be severely punished."

And, lest it be thought that we are more outspoken than our ancestors in characterizing the Germans, this is how Wellington described them in 1870: "I can assure you that from the general of the Germans down to the smallest drum boy in their legion the earth never groaned with such a set of murdering, infamous villains. . . . They murdered, robbed, and ill-treated the peasantry wherever they went." Wonder what Wellington, who was a patient man, not given to strong language, would say about them to-day—after Belgium, and Scarborough and Yarmouth.

Playing Animals.

Danny and Daisy are brother and sister. In the yard behind the house where they live there is a mound of soft, loose earth where they play with their animals. The animals are wooden and they are painted different colors. They came in a Noah's ark at Christmas time. The children mould the earth into the shape of a mountain, the top of which is as high as Danny's shoulders. They dig into the side of the mountain until they make about twenty little caves. They place the animals in these caves with their heads pointing out. Some of the caves are larger than others. In the larger caves they put four, and sometimes six, animals. The children are careful to put together only tame animals, such as horses, cows, sheep, and dogs. The wild animals like the lions, the tigers, and the leopards, they keep in separate caves.

In the largest cave of all they put the elephants, and that cave is on a level with the ground. To the giraffes they give the highest caves. When the caves are all inhabited, Danny takes his spade and hoe and digs a trench round the mountain. Then the children pat the earth on the bottom and sides of the mountain until it becomes firm. Then, with the garden hose, Danny fills the trench with water. In this canal they place the ducks and swans. They have made two boats out of safety-match boxes; with tooth-picks fastened in the centre of these boats they make splendid sails.

Every afternoon when they have finished the game, they put the animals back into the ark. Then Danny wrecks the mountain with his hoe. That he does so that they can have the fun of building it again and digging a new canal.

If a man has the right kind of material in his makeup, it doesn't matter whether he was born with a silver spoon or wooden ladle in his mouth.

Dishes Made With Cream Cheese.

Cheese and Pepper Salad.—Remove the top from a sweet green pepper and wash out the inside, taking out all seeds and drying with a clean cloth. Cream a cake of cream cheese with a little fresh cream and mix with it some chopped walnut meats and a very little finely minced red pepper. Season with salt and pepper. Stuff the pepper with this and put on the ice until it becomes firm and cold. Then slice in thin slices with a very sharp steel knife and serve as a garnish for cold meat or else on lettuce leaves for a salad.

Cheese Balls.—Cheese balls are an appetizing accompaniment to any green salad. They can be put on the separate portions of salad or else passed in a little cheese dish with a silver fork. Toasted wafers served with them add to their attractiveness. One way to make them is to soften a cake of cheese with a little fresh cream and to mould it into balls. Into each ball press two perfect halves of walnuts. Another way is to roll the balls in minced, fresh parsley. Still another way is to mix the cheese with minced pecans and then form it into balls.

Frozen Cheeses.—These can be served with salad and are especially appropriate on a warm day with a crisp, cool salad of fresh vegetables. To make them moisten the cheese slightly with cream and season it generously with paprika and salt. Then add enough chopped red pepper to make the cheese quite peppery and hot. Press into a little pasteboard box, lined with waxed paper, and freeze in salt and ice.

Leed Cheese Creams.—Mix two ounces of freshly grated Gruyere cheese with three ounces of freshly grated Parmesan. Add a gill of liquid aspic, a generous sprinkling of cayenne pepper, and a cupful of stiff whipped cream. Put the mixture into little paper cases, arrange them in a tin can or box and pack them in ice and salt to freeze.

Dainty Dishes.

Apple Fluff.—For apple fluff, stew four large apples till tender, pass through a sieve, add sugar to taste, a little spice and the whites of two eggs. Whisk the whole till fluffy and pile high in a glass dish or serve in jelly glasses.

Eggless Salad Dressing.—One tablespoon of butter, two tablespoons of good vinegar, one-half teaspoon salt, one tablespoon of sugar, two tablespoons of flour, one cupful of good rich milk. Beat until smooth and cook until it thickens. (Sugar is well omitted.)

Apple Pie with Crumbs.—Those who cannot eat pastry, yet require a nice baked apple pie, should prepare some apples in the usual way for stewing, and put into a pie-dish with sugar to taste, and the strained juice of a lemon. Then cover with fine, stale breadcrumbs, pour a little new milk over them and bake until the apple is soft and the top nicely browned.

Buttered Buns.—Take two cups of scalded milk, three tablespoonfuls sugar and one-half cup of butter. The other ingredients consist of one yeast cake dissolved in one-fourth cup lukewarm water and three eggs lightly beaten and flour enough to knead. Scald the milk, when it becomes lukewarm add the flour and the yeast cake, and beat thoroughly. Cover and set to rise in warm place. When it is light add salt, sugar and butter worked to a creamy consistency. Then add eggs well beaten and flour enough to knead. Let it rise again until it is light, then knead lightly and make into small balls. Cover and set to rise until light. Bake twenty minutes in an oven; be sure and have the oven hot. Just before removing brush off the tops of the buns with egg and milk wash, and bake a few minutes longer. When making these buns be careful and do not use too much flour.

Bread or chops may be successfully cooked in a corn popper over a furnace fire or even over a grate fire.

Oil the bearings of the carpet sweeper occasionally if you would lengthen its days of usefulness.

Wash white painted woodwork with water to which has been added a handful of whiting. It will make it look like new.

Serbian Parents Trace Son to Bloody Battlefield and Kiss Cross Marking Grave.

This most pathetic scene was enacted on one of the bloody battlefields which marked Serbia's sturdy resistance to the invading forces of Austria. An old Serbian peasant had received the formal notice from the War Department that his son "had sacrificed his life in the worthy cause of the defence of the Fatherland." With his simple wife, he laboriously trudged his way to the battlefield and there he found the cross on which his son's name had been painted and which marked the last resting place of the glorious soldier. He stooped down and in his simple peasant way kissed the wooden cross. His wife is standing by grief-stricken.

water until it is whirling rapidly. Then drop the eggs in quickly.

Squeeze a lemon into a quart of milk and it will give you a mixture to rub on your face night and morning and give you a good complexion.

When removing cake baked in tin pans place a wet cloth over the inverted pan and the cake will drop out nicely, never sticking to the pan.

Chopped cooked beets mixed with horseradish make a delicious filling for celery stalks. Arrange the stalks on a nest of green and top with mayonnaise.

If the bright parts of the kitchen range turn black from the heat, rub the blackened parts with a cloth dipped in vinegar, when the blackness will disappear.

After washing oilcloth and paint work rub them well with a flannel cloth dipped in linseed oil. Then polish with a soft duster. It will make them look quite new.

When eggs are broken and cannot be used at once, they will keep much better if the shells are removed and a quarter of a teaspoonful of salt water beaten in for each egg.

A good way to insure equal wear on all parts of linen is to take out from the bottom of the pile, and when the linen is freshly laundered put it on the top of the pile.

When counting the pieces of clothing to go to the laundry, it will be found a great convenience to have a book with carbon paper in it. Write the list once and another is traced.

If you are mixing a cake with a wooden spoon, beat the mixture with the back of the spoon. It is far easier and becomes beautifully light in half the time.

Cut bananas in halves lengthwise and put them into a baking dish; cover thickly with sugar, flavor with cinnamon and a clove; add a very little water, squeeze over all the juice of an orange, and bake to a light brown. (This may also be served cold, turned out and covered with custard.)

To renovate a man's black coat dip a sponge in some very strong black coffee, to which a few drops of ammonia have been added; wet well the coat with it, then dry by rubbing briskly with a clean woolen cloth.

Preserves so often become mouldy just on the top that it is well to know that if the inside edges of the jars are smeared with glycerine before covering no mould will appear.

THE RED CROSS SOCIETY.

Toronto, March 15th.—In connection with letters and circulars that have been sent broadcast throughout Canada, especially from neutral countries, for the purpose of bringing the war to an immediate close and generally propagating a peace movement throughout the country, the following important statement has been issued by the National Committee for Patriotic Service. The statement is signed by Mrs. Gooderham, president, and Mrs. Plumptre, Secretary of the Committee.

The statement is as follows:—Letters and circulars in praise of peace have been issued, calling on women all over the world to unite in a great effort to stop the war. In some cases, signatures to a petition are requested; in others membership in a Peace Society.

In these circumstances, the Committee calls your attention to the following considerations:

Few, indeed, are the men or women who would hesitate to declare themselves "in favor of peace."

No neutral nation can hate war with half the intensity of hate felt by the nations who are bearing war's burdens. But declarations in favour of peace may be represented as condemning all who have been engaged in the war. Through we may hate war, and though we may admit that there is always wrong at the root of war, yet we cannot unconditionally condemn all war, nor regard all belligerents as equally guilty. History teaches us that nations and individuals have been compelled to draw the sword in defence of the rights of truth, honour, and liberty, holding these dearer than peace, and even than life itself.

The war in which we are now engaged is no mere scramble for gain, nor quarrel over rights in which all parties are alike to blame. It is rather a struggle between the principles of law and force—between the policeman and the armed criminal, whose liberty is a menace to the neighbourhood. In such a conflict, neutrality has no particular merit; while to entreat the policeman to stop fighting does not tend to promote peace, but only tends to prolong a period of terror and insecurity.

We have drawn the sword to defend the rights of the weak, the liberty of the many, and the pledged honour of the Empire. To sheathe the sword before these ends are achieved is to render useless the sacrifice of countless lives already laid down in defence of these great principles; for could we at this juncture secure peace, we should but leave to our children a dreadful legacy of hate and uncertainty. It would be, in truth, not a peace but a truce, lasting only until the nations had recovered sufficiently to test the issue once more by an appeal to arms; and, worse than all, we should leave Belgium to its fate as a German province.

Shall not the women of this country bear their part in this war with the same high courage and steadfastness of purpose as animate our troops? And what is our share?

To possess our souls in patience during war's hardships and uncertainties; to refrain from embarrassing our rulers by demands for a premature and illusory peace; to prepare ourselves for the new conditions and duties which peace will inevitably bring while applying ourselves to the peculiar tasks imposed by war; and, above all, so to bear ourselves, as to be an inspiration in courage and self-sacrifice to the men who are fighting for our Empire—and for us. This is our share.

When Germany has learned that right is stronger than might; when the mailed fist no longer threatens Europe, then may we hope for a peace which our children's children may inherit. And with such a peace, we may hand on, unbroken, the great traditions of our Empire—honour unstained, liberty safeguarded, justice vindicated.

Such are some of the conditions before we unreservedly condemn war, or make petitions for immediate peace.

Signed on behalf of the National Committee.

ADELAIDE M. PLUMPTRE, Secretary.

EMPEROR WILLIAM'S BED

HE SLEEPS ON A FACTORY-MADE BEDSTEAD.

All About the Couch on Which the War Lord Dreams of Coming Victory Over Allies.

The Kaiser has many homes, and, therefore, many sleeping apartments; but the room in which it is estimated he seeks repose for a hundred nights of the year is situated on the second floor of the Royal Palace in Berlin.

Judging by the Kaisers' general love of display, we might naturally expect that his bed-room would be a sumptuous apartment, richly harmonious, and the last word in luxury. Lofty and spacious it certainly is, but very few people would call it really beautiful. There are treasures in plenty in this Imperial chamber, but even the Empress herself grumbled because she had to content herself with "the remnants of centuries scattered among Berlin-made showpieces."

The Tale of a Bed.

The bed of a king! Visions of heavy damasks, richly woven, with silken canopies, pass before our eyes. But, no! The Kaiser sleeps on a factory-made bedstead, which is a brazen monstrosity in his bed-chamber. The brass bed reigns. Yet it was not always so, and there-by hangs a tale.

During the early years of his reign, William II. slept upon a couch of stately splendor—a magnificent bed, with canopy and curtains, heraldic designs, and plenty of comfort.

Then, one day, the Empress saw English bedsteads in the beautiful castle of the Prince and Princess Frederick Leopold of Prussia, and determined not to be outdone by these richest of the Hohenzollerns, declared that she, too, would have shining brass bedsteads.

The Kaiser was fond of the old and beautiful bed, but he had to give in to the Kaiserin on the matter, for Augusta Victoria was determined to have her way for once. So the antique couch left its alcove and the brass bedstead came in its stead. However, the Emperor did not give way entirely. He slept upon the new couch, but he insisted upon its removal by day, and would have the old Elizabethan bed set up, to be removed again at nightfall.

Short of Sheets.

Naturally, a daily exchange of beds caused plenty of grumbling among the servants, so gradually the order fell through, and to-day

THE TEACHINGS OF JESUS

He Knew That Physical Violence Reacts and They Who Take to It Shall Perish by It

It has been shown by Dr. James Hope Moulton that the teachings of Jesus were framed in the terms of Oriental thought—terms which never anticipated the literalism which has been the curse of biblical exegesis. Utterances rich in symbolism and imagery, owing their impressiveness to the imagination which clothed them and addressed to the ears of all generations, are robbed of their essential meaning, when the worshipper of the letter exaggerates that at the expense of the spirit.

Jesus was the supreme idealist; but he also possessed an unequalled sanity. When He instructs us to turn the other cheek to the smiter, we remember that He did not do this, but rebuked the creature that smote Him. When He tells us to go the second mile with the disturber who has already commandeered the first we see in that picturesque illusion the reality that no sacrifice is too great to win a soul from the dark ways of hate. We know that we must not allow envy and vengeance and mere lust of reprisal to drag us down to their level. But we do not apprehend that we must stand by in sheepish docility while civilization is being blown up.

He Liked the Soldier.

The Master recognized war to this extent, that He drew a parallel from the strategies of a king who watched anxiously the progress of an invading army on his borders; He commended the centurion's discipline, He had a tender place in His heart for the soldier. Peter carried a sword to the scene of the treachery of Judas and used it there. Jesus sternly rebuked him for the rash act, because the Divine Sufferer chose to win by higher means than the sword.

That it was His bidding is evidenced from His own words in reference to the attending legions of angels who would have made short shrift of His persecutors had He invoked their aid. However, skillfully they prepare, however vast the extent of their preparations, nations which defy war are finally crushed beneath the juggernaut to which they have offered their obessions.

It is not our favorite reminiscence of the Christ, but it has its place and meaning. It shows us the brass bed stands in triumph in the Kaiser's bed-chamber all the time.

The Empress has ordered that clean linen be put upon the Royal bed every day, but it comes as something of a shock to learn that there are not enough sheets for the change. Top sheet must go to the bottom when this happens, and everybody hopes that the "All-Highest-in-his-own-estimation" will not become aware of the homely manoeuvre. The paucity of the linen chest jars on Imperial notions.

Everybody knows that the Kaiser fears illness and shudders at the mention of any kind of disease. This being so, every precaution is taken to preserve his health. "No draughts" is the motto for those who attend to his Majesty's health. During summer and winter heavy curtains screen the Imperial bed; at least the doors and windows near are shrouded carefully. Even the bedclothes are fastened down—not with the idea of preventing one royal occupant of the bed from stealing a royal share of the blanket, but simply to exclude the possibility of draughts from the gossamer sleepers. It looks as if the Kaiser must crawl into bed one leg at a time.

By his bedside stands a night table, the top drawer of which contains a self-cooking revolver, fully loaded. This weapon of ivory, steel and silver is always beside his Majesty while he sleeps.

Plenty of Colors.

One object of furniture in the room is rather gruesome. It is an old mahogany chest of drawers, loaded with morbid emblems of death and sorrow.

As to the other details of the Emperor's sleeping-chamber, where neither simplicity or opulence reigns, the hangings and upholstery are of heavy damask, sandy-grey, with yellow flowers in bold relief. Two sofas are of the same color, while a lounge and armchairs are covered in red. A blue carpet, Japanese tables, wicker and bamboo chairs, silk cushions—muslin covered—various vases and flower-pots, masterpieces of burl and marquetry, and a crystal chandelier and bronze candelabra. What a hotch-potch of a color scheme. Small wonder that the Kaiser's mother once called it "a regular second-hand dealer's shop!"

"how awful goodness can be." It sanctioned the ringing protests of all His servants who have boldly stood athwart the path of the pirate and challenged his policies. Defensive war, waged in behalf of legitimate objects, such as the honor of women and the freedom of man, is a heaven of heavens above the desolation which the tyrant and the bloodless sycophant miscall peace.

Trust in Armaments.

Once more, we are wise to keep well in view the significant fact that whatever Jesus said was intended for the most advanced stages of human development. Yet so long as the race has not attained those stages we must adapt the principles of the New Testament to the exigencies of our times. They are unintelligible until the family of man has attained a given degree of spiritual perception. They are incapable of complete realization while large portions of the human race revel in slaughter and put their trust in armaments.

Slavery was never directly attacked in the New Testament. But once the slave knew that he was also a man and a brother, his bonds were doomed. Whenever the New Testament has been received, slavery has been rejected. We grow impatient with the slow movements of divine machinery, and would fain precipitate a premature millennium. Such a fictitious state would end in worse disaster than any we now confront, and the gospel does not favor the attempt.

Already the most persistent militants are clamoring at the bar of Christianized public opinion to be heard in their own defence. And kings and statesmen will have to reckon with that opinion when this ruinous conflict has ended as they have never reckoned with it before. Its indignation is deep, is irresistible, is divinely inspired. The Church of God is not so inert and helpless as some would have us believe.

The social order which has been top-heavy with feudalism and absorbed in hero-worship and so morally stupid as to claim for human dust, still dust, though robes in the meretricious pomp of obsolete regalia, those titles and honors which belong to God alone, will pass away forever.—Dr. S. Parkes Cadman.

HEALTH

Muscular Rheumatism.

Rheumatism is a malady caused by cold and damp in combination, and is, therefore, naturally prevented by carefully avoiding damp clothes, damp sheets, damp cushions, exposure to cold and wet. That is not always or even possible in a damp, chilly and very changeable climate. Whenever there has been an unavoidable wetting the best plan is to take off all clothes as soon as possible, have a hot bath, and go to bed.

Some people are much more liable to rheumatism than others; a great deal depends on constitutional tendency. They should carefully adapt their clothing to the season. It is an error to wear too many garments in a hot July. That means excessive perspiration, with a probable chill afterwards, which has the same effect on the functions of the skin as a wetting would have. On the other hand, in winter plenty of warm flannel underclothing is more or less essential to the rheumatic, as to every one else. It is generally the best policy to wear next the skin only the underclothing, in which you feel quite comfortable indoors, supplementing this by an overcoat easily removed at will when you go outside.

Much depends on the choice of habitation. Dry sites on sandy, porous soils are infinitely preferable to houses built on clay, or in damp hollows, and with unsound foundations.

For medicine when a person suffers from any form of rheumatism nothing is better than salicylate of soda, given in 10 grain doses every three hours; and sometimes 10 grains of saltpetre (nitrate of potash) may be given in addition. Any chemist will make up such a mixture on request. For local irritation, rub with any good embrocation, or ointment, night and morning. Avoid beer or stout. Keep warm, dry and smiling.—A Physician.

His Line of Business.

"No," exclaimed the eloquent orator at the meeting of the Society for the Suppression of Other People's Foolish Habits, "no, indeed, at my establishment we will not employ a man who smokes at his work."

As the hum of approval went round a curious person in the rear of the hall arose and inquired:

"May I ask what line of business you follow, sir?"

"Well," was the slightly embarrassed reply, "I'm in a gunpowder magazine."

CHAPTER XLV.

"Your wife!" Sir Lucian Ferrier staggered back as he saw the treacherous knife had stabbed him to the heart. He too had recognized the dark, Spanish face, the oblique light of the long-lashed, Oriental eye, and knew that St. Just was not dead as they had believed and hoped, but stood a living presence, before their eyes—a presence as hateful as it was unexpected.

"So I have thwarted your nice little arrangement, eh?" said St. Just, looking with blood-cooled triumph from Leslie to Sir Lucian. "Well, my girl, why don't you say you're glad to see a fellow? It's a nice thing to be a married man, and have a wife that's so delighted to welcome you, isn't it?"

"I thought you were dead!" wailed Leslie, clinging to Sir Lucian's arm, and forming the words with difficulty, so rigid and cold were her lips.

"Not quite," sneered St. Just. "Oh, I know there was a nice little newspaper paragraph that blazoned about the impression for me. I assure you, but I didn't write that paragraph, and I'm not responsible for it. I was hurt and Larry thought I was killed, and the quill-driving fools got it that it was Larry who was wounded, and I don't care. But I never expect that my wife would be getting married again on the strength of such a canard as that. You're too impatient, my dear, with a vengeance, to get on your teeth, and always wailing 'It's your fault.' But now look here, Sir Lucian Ferrier, if that's what they call you now, I haven't forgot the good turn you did me on the sands of Long Branch, two years ago. I've no reason to love you, and I don't but I can be reasonable for all that. You might have had me arrested, but you didn't. You let me slip through your fingers. Not that I'm consoled enough to suppose that it was for my own sake. It wasn't. It was for her!" nodding his head toward the beautiful, pale figure in the bridal dress. "But I don't bear malice for that. Come, Sir Lucian, I won't be unreasonable. Let's make a business matter of it. She's your wife, but she don't like me. Make me a snug little allowance per annum, and you'll all have her. Let her wailing go on. I'll guarantee to keep dark so long as the money is regularly paid. I'm sorry I frightened her under the bridge this afternoon, my dear, turning with a satirical smile toward Leslie, but a man has to protect around sometimes, and of course I didn't want to travel about the country with an unnecessary flourish of trumpets. Come, Sir Lucian, you can't say I'm hard upon you. Give me the money, and you shall have my wife!"

"Villain!" exclaimed Sir Lucian, unable to control his horror and indignation, "how dare you utter so vile a proposal in this lady's hearing? If you do not immediately withdraw, you shall at once be handed over to the disposal of the law you have so flagrantly outraged."

St. Just uttered a long, low whistle.

"So," said he, "you've decided to come the high road, have you? But it's all right. I'll have the money. I'll have a good round sum, too, or I'll have my wife. You choose, my dear, but I'll have your traps together. I haven't much left in the world, but I've got you, and I'll have this very independent young man of yours that talking won't go down with me!"

"Come, I say! You are my wife, and you shall go with me to the world's end now. If I starve, you shall starve, too. If they hang me up, people shall point at you as the criminal's wife!"

"Oh, Lucian, Lucian, don't let him take that high road, he says you! But it's all right. I'll have the money. I'll have a good round sum, too, or I'll have my wife. You choose, my dear, but I'll have your traps together. where the remainder of my days a dragged out? Now go to your room, dearest!"

"But your mother, Lucian? And Helen and Catherine?"

"Do not let them in! Tell them you are tired. God help us all! It will be time enough to let them know all of this misery to-morrow."

He bent and kissed her on the lips. Once more for the last time, as he told himself he held her close to his heart, the strong heart whose pulse he could feel beating passionately against his own.

"Now leave me," he said, almost pushing her from him. And moving slowly and with downcast head, the bride that was doomed to be no bride passed out of the presence of the man who felt that all life light and sunshine went with her!

Ten minutes afterward, Catherine Tremayne tapped at the door.

"Lucian, are you here? Is Leslie with you?"

And Sir Lucian controlled his mind to answer in the usual tones.

"She was here a few minutes ago. She has gone to her own room."

And Mrs. Tremayne, thinking it rather strange, went on to Leslie's room, and knocked a second time.

"Leslie!" she called.

"I am here," Leslie answered.

"I would rather be alone to-night, dearest," Catherine pleaded, the poor girl.

"My head aches, and I am tired. Please excuse me to your mother, and Helen, and Mr. Utley."

"Shall I send Dolly with the smelling salts and cognac?"

"That's all right. I only want to rest."

"Good-night, then, dearest."

She could hear Catherine's footsteps driving away from the long carpeted corridor, and then, sinking back among her pillows, she burst into tears bitterer than gall, each one fraught with the anguish of a lifetime.

She had been so happy, of late life had seemed so full of joy and brightness, the security of Sir Lucian Ferrier's love, the prospect of blissful years spent at his side, and now the darkness was closing over her path, denser and deeper than before.

"Oh, God! hear!" she prayed, in the wilderness of her soul, "help me to endure. For the sake of those who laid on me as heavier than I can bear!"

So the wedding-veiled bride, in starlight and moonlight, lay there like a crushed lily, sleepless, pale and broken-hearted!

CHAPTER XLVI.

While Sir Lucian Ferrier sat in his study, his forehead resting on his clasped hands, and his attitude that of one who suffers intensely and silently, the poor Leslie lay alone in her own room trying to comprehend the full force of the crushing blow which had fallen on her.

"Oh, God! hear!" she prayed, in the wilderness of her soul, "help me to endure. For the sake of those who laid on me as heavier than I can bear!"

So the wedding-veiled bride, in starlight and moonlight, lay there like a crushed lily, sleepless, pale and broken-hearted!

J. BULL—GENERAL DEALER

THE BRITISHER IS FOUND ALL OVER THE WORLD.

He Will Buy and Sell Anything From a Camel to a Modern Battleship.

During the last hundred years or so, John Bull has made the British Empire grow at the rate of something like 10,000 square miles a year, and in the peaceful victories of trade he has made a progress which is little less than astonishing.

The China tea trade has fallen into his hands in India; Canada has secured a great portion of the world's paper industry; while ships laden with British goods have been in the habit of passing procession-like up the Suez Canal.

Thousands of British companies are running railways, tramways, gas, and electric factories in almost every corner of the two hemispheres.

Where Britons Lead.

The Britisher is everywhere — on the sea and off the sea.

There doesn't appear to be any good reason why foreign nations should not supply themselves with marine engines instead of sending to the United Kingdom for them.

Yet of the engineers born and bred at North and South Shields, a good many hundreds are abroad in the engine-rooms of merchant vessels and ironclads. At one time Spain and Portugal absolutely depended on them to keep their fleets in steaming order. And it has been remarked that the United States Navy has more "Geordie" engineers, as the Shields men are called, than American.

British shipbuilders and gunmakers have often been sent abroad to help some king or other, and, at the same time to put money in John Bull's pocket.

When the Ameer of Afghanistan required some new guns to defend his country, a small army of gunmakers of British nationality went out East with a shipload of tools and appliances. They built some beautiful pieces of artillery for the Ameer.

John's shipbuilders turn out all sorts of vessels for foreign powers. Messrs. Yarrow, for instance, have built many torpedo boats and torpedo boat destroyers for the Japanese Government. Four of Japan's first-class destroyers were built by them at one time.

"Sandy" Frao Scotland.

The finest divers in the world are British, and many of them come from the little village of Leigh, at the mouth of the Thames. These men have worked in all the seven seas for foreigners as well as Britain.

If a foreign power wants a good shepherd it will often send to Britain for one. Our best shepherds are, perhaps, those who learn their business in Scotland, principally at Ramoth Moof and the Ochils, in Perthshire, and they find their way all over the world.

The splendid merino flocks of Spain are controlled by shepherds of the Perthshire breed, and "Sandy," of the Ochils, roams over Texas. It can be said without exaggeration that 2,000 of John Bull's shepherds are working for foreign powers, and that another 2,000 are distributed over his own overseas dominions.

There is a town of ironworks in Russia, and it was built up bit by bit by John Hughes, of Glamorgan. This Welshman not only opened up trade for Britain all over Russia, but he converted a practically waste piece of land into a thriving town, and erected fourteen ironworks for the inhabitants to work in. That town is called Hughesoff, after its founder.

Profits from Animals.

John Bull also does quite a decent trade in animals. He owns a great proportion of the camels that tumble over the sands of the Sudan, and most of the ungainly beasts of this breed in the menageries and zoos of the world were bought from him.

John's elephants, however, are sold literally by the ton, for he has more than enough in India for his needs. He always retains eight thousand of the best for military purposes, drawing huge transport trains along mountain roads, and moving heavy pieces of artillery.

The great bulk of the world's fire

STRENGTH OF INSECTS.

Weight for Weight the Bee Is 30 Times as Strong as a Horse.

If men were but as strong as oysters they could perform prodigies. For the muscles with which a good, big oyster holds its shell closed will support a weight of 37½ pounds without opening. A man with the same relative strength could lift a pile of locomotives.

It takes the weight of more than 6½ pounds to open the shell of a common mussel. And there is a sort of clam found in the Mediterranean that will support 402 times its own weight. This is equivalent to a 150-pound man holding up 73,800 pounds, or 39½ tons.

These figures are those of the Belgian naturalist, Felix Plateau, who has made many ingenious experiments on the strength of the lower animals. To test shellfish he introduced two claws between their shells, by one of which they were suspended; to the other he hung a balance on which he placed weights until the shell opened one millimeter.

To measure the strength of insects he constructed delicate harness to which a wire was attached, its other end drawing upon a weighing machine. By prodding the insects a bit he made them walk and try to get away, adding weights until they could not move.

By this means he found that a bee, weight for weight, was 30 times as strong as a horse. In other words, if a bee were as big as a horse, it could do the work of 30 horses. A horse can draw no more than five or six times its own weight.

Some of the smaller flies are stronger than the bee. An ordinary house fly held up by the wings can lift a match stick with its feet. Weight for weight, this is equivalent to a 150-pound man hanging by his hands and supporting with his feet a beam fourteen feet long and two feet six inches square. And there is a little fork-tailed bug that burrows in pears and figs which can drag six match sticks, equivalent weight for weight, to a man dragging 330 beams as big as himself.

Professor Plateau fastened crabs securely, hung a balance to their movable claws, and teased the creatures until they opened and closed their claws. This proved that the force of the nip of a crab's claws often reaches 4½ pounds, depending, of course, upon the size and species of crab. A general average being 30 times the weight of the crab. A 150-pound man gripping a dynamometer with his good right hand will rarely register more than 100 pounds, or two-thirds of his own weight. If he was as strong as a crab he could register 2½ tons.

These tremendous forces are probably not so great as those developed by the wings of some of the small migratory birds. Swallows, for instance, fly from France, to Africa, without an opportunity for a single rest.

"FOOD OF THE GODS."

Many Mystic Traditions About the Apple.

The apple has become so familiar as the commonest of all fruits that its value as man's greatest friend in the vegetable kingdom may not be fully realized. It was called the "food of the gods" because it was believed to be the magic renewer of youth to which the gods resorted when they felt themselves growing old and feeble.

There have been many mystic traditions about the apple, which has been credited with varied potency. It is the healing fruit of the Arabian tales. Latin chronicles and institutes and early English poems contain many references to it. Scientific analysis of late years has justified all the ancient glorification of this fruit, which has been found to contain albumen, sugar, gum, malic acid, gallic acid, fibre, water and phosphorus.

Malic acid of apples neutralizes the excess of chalky matter caused by too much meat, and thereby helps to keep us young. Apples are good for the complexion, as their acids drive out the noxious matters which cause skin eruptions. They are good for the brain, which those same noxious matters, if retained, render sluggish. The acids of the apple diminish the acidity of the stomach that comes with some forms of indigestion.

The phosphorus, of which apples contain a larger per cent. than any other fruit or vegetable, renews the essential matter of the brain and spinal column. England, Normandy and the United States have made the most notable improvement in the quality of the fruit, of which there are between 400 and 500 distinct varieties.

There is a good story told in the London Nation about one of the slighter accidents of the fleet. The other day the commander of a destroyer, rolling heavily in a gale, and with his engine disabled, tried to lessen the strain by lading out oil. The seaman engaged in this work was washed overboard and washed back again by a returning wave. He picked himself up, saluted his officer, and said: "Very sorry, sir; lost the bucket."

Shed Your Winter Complexion

Winter weather and Spring winds have roughened and hardened your skin, and it requires care and proper treatment to bring back its rosy freshness and softness. "Your Complexion" is the title of a most useful book just issued by the Nylal people and obtainable free from any Nylal Agency Drug Store. It tells all about this most important subject, care and treatment of the complexion, including full directions for massage.
Nylal's Face Cream is the one great toilet necessity for every woman. Greaseless, oxygenated, refreshing, it is the very best emollient. Get a 25c or 50c jar of Nylal's Face Cream and gently rub this deliciously perfumed cream into the face. It quickly cleanses and leaves the skin soft and fragrant, removing any irritating, burning sensation. All the injurious effects of unkind winds are permanently eradicated by its touch. Nylal's skin preparations, soap, powder, etc., are first aids to good complexion. 117a All Nylal preparations are justly famous and none more so than Nylal's Face Cream which we unhesitatingly recommend. SLEEPLESSNESS.—When the nerves are unstrung and the whole body given up to wretchedness, when the mind is filled with gloom and dismal forebodings, the result of derangement of the digestive organs, sleeplessness comes to add to the distress. If only the subject could sleep, there would be oblivion for a while and temporary relief. Parson's Vegetable Pills will not only induce sleep, but will act so beneficially that the subject will wake refreshed and restored to happiness.

CAIRO.

On the evening of March 22nd, the members of the Presbyterian church choir filed into the home of George E. Banghart and gave them an agreeable surprise. After engaging in amusements for a short period, time was called, and the play began by the reading of a kindly address by Miss Mary Barron, when at the appropriate moment Miss Sadie Young presented Mr. Banghart with a pen's travelling companion as a token of esteem by the choir. Mr. Banghart was taken completely by surprise, but after a few moments was able to express his pleasure at accepting their kind expressions as contained in the address and also their generous gift. The party then returned to their amusements. Afterwards a sumptuous lunch was provided, and the party dispersed after bidding all adieu.

It is usually safe to say that when a child is pale, sickly, peevish and restless, the cause is worms. These parasites rattle the stomach and intestines, causing serious disorders of the digestion and preventing the infant from deriving sustenance from food. Conquers Asthma.—To be relieved from the terrible suffocating due to asthma is a great thing, but to be safeguarded for the future is even greater. Not only does Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy bring prompt relief, but it introduces a new era of life for the afflicted. Systematic inhalation of smoke or fumes from the remedy prevents attacks and often effects a permanent cure.

HIS HEALTH IN A TERRIBLE STATE

"Fruit-a-tives" Healed His Kidneys and Cured Him

HAGERSVILLE, ONT., AUG. 26th 1913.

"About two years ago, I found my health in a very bad state. My kidneys were not doing their work and I was all run down in condition. I felt the need of some good remedy, and having seen 'Fruit-a-tives' advertised, I decided to try them. Their effect, I found more than satisfactory.
Their action was mild and the result all that could be expected.

My kidneys resumed their normal action after I had taken upwards of a dozen boxes, and I regained my old-time vitality. Today, I am enjoying the best health I have ever had."
