MEMORIAL SERVICE IN ST. JAMES

Last Sunday evening the Honor Roll presented by Mr. W. A. Nichols, to St. James church was hung in the church, and a memorial service for those members of the congregation who had given their lives for the Empire, Justice and Freedom, was held. The Honor Roll contains 74 names, of whom four are Nursing Sisters. Nine were killed in action viz., Cecil Bryce, T. Cummings, H. Dowdall, Geo. Fanning, F. Fumerton, Geo. Hudson, Percy Moore, T. Reynolds and A. Simons. One died of injuries, Capt. Stearne T. Edwards. One died of wounds, H. Eastwood. One is missing, W. Lewis, and one was a Prisoner of War, now repatriated, Walter Rogers. Returned soldiers paraded in a body to the church. The organist and choir, which was composed entirely of men of the congregation, sang music appropriate to the occasion as follows: Prelude—Lamentation for the Fallen, Consolation for the Bereaved. Hymns—For All the Saints, Where the Light Forever Shineth, Rock of Ages and O Valiant Hearts. During the offertory a quintet—Messrs. E. J. Wetley, S. Hale, I. C. Langtry, Alf. McNeely and E. C. Moore, sang "Crossing the Bar," set to music by F. G. Mann. At the close of the service the Dead March in Saul was played by the Organist. The male choir was a great success and augers well for the future, which it is proposed to repeat from time to time. The attendance was the full of the church.

Duberville-Adams
A very quiet wedding took place on Wednesday evening February 19th, in Parnabas (Anglican) church, Danforth Ave., Toronto, when Miss Mabel Clara Adams, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert W. Adams, of Concession, Ont., became the bride of James Francis Duberville, only son of Mrs. Nicholas Duberville of Carleton Place. The pastor, Rev. F. E. Powell, officiated. Frank's many friends here extend congratulations.

The Women's Institute

Miss Elsie Gould, lately returned from overseas, gave a short address on her work in the British hospitals. Mrs. A. W. Bell, our delegate to the Central Convention, held in Toronto, gave her report which was an excellent one. Two new members were added to the roll, total for this year to date 102. Donations thankfully received for March:—Miss Elsie Gould, $5.00; Mrs. Tait, $1.00; Mrs. Hayes Boyd, $1.00; Mrs. Starr Stewart, $1.00.

Father Charged With Son's Death
A sensational arrest was made on Friday evening when Provincial Detective A. B. Boyd took into custody James A. Hartwick on a charge of murder in connection with the death of his son, Frederick Hartwick, who was found dead within one hundred yards of his father's barn in the village of Parham on Feb. 12th. Father and son went out into a bush a short distance from Parham on the afternoon of Feb. 11th, shooting rabbits. The father came home that night, but the son did not, and the next day a searching party found the dead body of the young man.

Fast Time by C.P.R. Special
A special train went through Smiths Falls over the C.P.R. on Friday with a specialist from Montreal, wanted in Toronto on some critical case. The train left Montreal at 1.33 p.m. and arrived at North Toronto at 8.35 p.m. It was delayed 10 minutes at Smiths Falls and 10 minutes at Whitby. The distance traversed was 339.4 miles and this would mean that the train was traveling at the average rate of 52 miles per hour. The crew on this train east of Trenton, were Conductor Tom Anderson and Engineer Smith with engine 2625, and west of Trenton, Conductor Hubel and Engineer Galvin with engine No. 2233. The distance from Trenton to Port Hope, 39 miles was made in 43 minutes.—Rideant Recorder.

SOME MAPLE GROVE

The maple bush operated by the Fathers of the Holy Ghost is situated near the village of Loosides, on the Gatineau River, Quebec, five miles from the city of Ottawa. The grove contains 3,500 trees available for tapping. It is operated on the most modern system. Fifteen years experience has taught that to make good syrup the sap must be gathered every day and placed at once in the evaporator. Evaporation must be done rapidly, the sap being placed in small quantities on a bright steady fire. The wood for the fire preferred is a mixture of maple and soft wood like pine and spruce. About 35 cords are used in a season. An up-to-date evaporator, with a corrugated bottom, set on such a fire can turn out 140 gallons of sap per hour. The 3,500 trees give an average crop of 500 gallons of syrup per year, or one gallon of syrup from an average of 7 trees. The spouts are of enamelware, and only tin pails are used. The Iron-side sugar makers also emphasize cleanliness if first class syrup is desired. Frequent and careful washing of all utensils is absolutely necessary. At $2.00 a gallon, the price received last year the return for the season's effort amounted to about $1,000.

HOME CIRCLE COLUMN

Pleasant Evening Reveries dedicated to tired Mothers as they Join the Home Circle at Evening Tide.

GIRLHOOD

To be a girl is to be the happiest state possible to humanity; but girls do not know it. They are always looking forward to something, wanting something—a diamond or a beau, flattery or new gowns. They rather envy women a little ahead of them, who have more self-possession, and are sometimes jealous of some married woman who firts and makes a dash. "I'm only a young girl," we heard one say. Only a young girl! Oh, be glad of it; delight in it! Thank heaven every morning that you are still a young girl. We cannot stop time. The years will slip through your fingers like the beads from a broken necklace after a while; but now they linger while you are still a girl—a girl in the home of parents, yet in the prime of life, with young brothers and sisters for companions. There will never be anything better than this in all the world. There are no skeletons in your closet, no ghosts in your reveries. Your future is all full of hope. You can fill in the distance as you like. You can fancy a lover coming to you who is perfect in all things; and every young man is interesting; because he may possibly be the other half of your soul. And every new girl may be the lifelong friend and confidante all girls hope for. As for beauty, the idea of a girl of seventeen thinking herself plain, as some do! In a few years she will look in the glass and see those fine horizontal lines on her forehead, on which Time scores down her troubles, and at the corner of her eyebrows three little pencil marks, and a little fall in her cheek, and a mouth that does not smile as readily as it once did; not an old face yet, but not a girl; and then she will realize what it was to have a girl's face! Oh, how few the years are! How they whirl away! Girlhood is gone so soon! But, while you have it, carry no woman her diamonds and laces, her carriage or her palace, her fortune or her admirers. While one is in one's teens, nothing else is necessary except to realize the fact and thank heaven for it.

Many a man is rich without money. Thousands of men with nothing in their pockets and thousands without even a pocket, are rich. A man born with a good sound constitution, a good stomach, a good heart and limbs, a pretty good head piece, is rich. Good bones are better than gold; tough muscles, than silver and nerves that flash fire and carry energy to every function; and it is better than a landed estate to have the right kind of a father and mother. The man is rich who has a good disposition, who is naturally kind, patient, cheerful, forgiving, hopeful, and who has a flavor of fun in his composition. The hardest thing to get along with in this life is man's own self. A cross, selfish fellow,

THE SQUIRREL

We have received from the Thrift Department a picture. In it you see a bright little red squirrel. If you study him closely you will learn what a sleek and handsome fellow he is. No creature of the woods is better known to all boys and girls and none is more interesting. Watch how he sits with his handsome tail arched gracefully over his back. He sits up and chatters and scolds just for the fun of teasing. He is the embodiment of good humour. Then again what a delight to watch him leap adroitly from branch to branch and from tree to tree! He never misses. In jumping, his long tail is of great use; it acts as a balance. Just as a tight-rope walker uses a pole to keep his balance, so the squirrel uses his tail. It is said that the squirrel never survives if a part of his tail is broken off.

But the most interesting thing in the picture is what he has in his mouth. It is a nut. Is he eating it? Oh, no! He is carrying it to the tree. Just think of that! The squirrel likes the kernel of that nut just as much as any boy or girl likes candy. Have you ever seen a squirrel eat a nut? As he does so he looks the most satisfied creature in the world. He cuts a hole in it with his long chisel-like teeth and he scoops out the kernel. You can almost see him smack his lips with pleasure as he eats it. Well, why is he putting them in that tree? He knows that now is the time to save. What hard work he has to do to get nuts to the tree! They are lying on the ground over one hundred feet away. He has to seize the nut and carry it up the trunk of an adjacent tree, then he makes a flying leap to the branch where you see him; but he will soon have it safely in the hole. Nut after nut he brings to the tree, never stopping to eat one. He started this morning just at the rise of the sun. And he will stop only when the light from the west falls.

These nuts are his Thrift Stamps. He derives himself of all unnecessary food and all pleasure and ease in order to lay them by for the winter. And how hard he works to earn them! Boys and girls should follow his example. Even if they have to work hard, they should lay by their Thrift Stamps. Just as he goes regularly to the ground to get the nuts, so they should go regularly to the post office or to the bank for Thrift Stamps.

Winter comes. The ground is covered with snow; the wind is bleak. Any nuts on the ground are buried deep. But the wise squirrel is now snug in the warm hole, each day eating the nuts, and the pile of shells at the foot of the tree tells the story of many meals.

Just so will the boys and girls who buy the Thrift Stamps and exchange them for War-Saving Stamps be enjoy-a despondent and complaining fellow, a time and care burdened man, these are all born deformed on the inside. They do not limp, but their thoughts sometimes do.

Would it not be a good plan for the girls in country neighborhoods to form classes and get a competent, experienced dressmaker to teach them the principles of dressmaking. It is a satisfaction to wear well fitting, stylish dresses, though they need not be, and if home-made, would not be, expensive ones. A perfect fitting waist pattern once secured—and this the teacher should be able to give them—endless variety may be made by different materials and modes of trimming. When their course of instruction was finished, the class might subscribe for two or three of the best fashion monthlies and then keep up with the best new modes. They could and should be able to help one another in the parts of fitting that one cannot well do for herself, and be gaining at the same time an art useful to them all their lives.

It is folly—and nothing less than folly—that characterizes the conduct of far too many parents in regard to their children, and especially their daughters, who, in some weak moment have behaved indiscreetly, and possibly shamefully. A child is a child, and no act of a parent can make it otherwise. Disinheritance, anger, unkindness and abuse only aggravate such matters, and that which might have been kept a private family sorrow, becomes a public scandal, so crushing the helpless victim that not even a whole life of remorse and repentance can succeed in washing out the blot on her reputation.

Thousands of young men who have comfortable homes—whose parents are willing to supply them with books and papers—instead of availing themselves of these advantages, spend their long evenings either in idle lounging around corners, or in company with frivolous associates, male and female. Thus, winter after winter passes away, each one bringing them nearer to the age of manhood, but not fitting them for the proper discharge of the duties that a full manhood requires. They enter upon the busy stage of life with none of those safeguards which a cultivated intellect throws around its possessor.

Let us say to you, young man, that pluck wins more battles than luck. Wishing is the easiest way in the world to get a poor living. Looking for the fortunate star to rise is like standing on the ocean's strand waiting and watching for wealth-laden ships to come over the sea that never "put out." Wishing brings a small income, and the taxes on it are enormous.

SAVED BABY'S LIFE

Mrs. Alfred Tranchemontagne, St. Michel des Saints, Que., writes:—"Baby's Own Tablets are an excellent medicine. They saved my baby's life and I can highly recommend them to all mothers." Mrs. Tranchemontagne's experience is that of thousands of other mothers who have tested the worth of Baby's Own Tablets. The Tablets are a sure and safe medicine for little ones and never fail to regulate the bowels and stomach thus relieving all the minor ills from which children suffer. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Could Make No Mistake

An editor said on his return from England: "The English beer is changed, indeed, from the potent and rich drink of pre-war days. Ah, well no doubt it's for the best. The insipid, watery beer of today will do no harm."

"But the marvelous beer of the past made men slaves. There's a story about a young Englishman who used to take his beer out of his own pewter mug. He said to the barmaid one day: "Always give me my beer in my own mug. Never any other. Make no mistake."

"Oh no fear of making any mistake about your mug, sir," said the barmaid.

"No?" said the young man.

"No," said she. The handle's always warm."

Sir Thomas Lipton is coming to America soon to inspect the Shamrock IV., which is in drydock at Brooklyn.

ing the fruits of their savings when money is scarce. Would not the squirrel be surprised to find more nuts in the hole than he put there? He never has such luck. Some are bad, and some may be stolen, but he still thinks it worth while to save them. But the person who buys Thrift Stamps and for them gets War-Savings Stamps finds, when he wants to use them, that he has more money than he put in, for he has been receiving 4 per cent interest. If boys and girls are half as wise as a little red squirrel they will buy Thrift Stamps whenever they have twenty-five cents.

LACE ON THE CURVED EDGE

How to Overcome the Perplexing Task of Putting the Straight Material in Place.

Have you often been troubled in putting straight lace on a curved edge? You have been if you have ever tried putting cluny, for instance, on the outside edge of a big round centerpiece. This is an easy way to overcome the difficulty. Roll the lace in a little tight roll. Wind it tightly about the center with a stout thread. Then dip the straight edge in water to about half the width of the lace. Let it dry and you will find a piece of lace ready shaped to your liking. You see what happens is that the straight edge, being wetted, shrinks, and so can be easily adjusted to the curved edge of the centerpiece.

If you have any new table linen—or cotton, mayhap—to hem, try this method. Trim such edges as need trimming and then run them through the machine hemmer, with a fine needle, unthreaded. This will crease the hems with perfect evenness and will also punch holes through the fabric with the unthreaded needle. Then you can turn the hem back and overhand the hems through the little holes with the least expenditure of effort.

Remember in many heavy materials that must be laid in platts and then pressed that pins can be used to fasten the platts into position until they are pressed. Then, as you press, take out the pins and press the material into position. You can do this with less marking than basting thread, heavy enough to hold the fabric makes. Of course if you want to you can use the heavy basting thread and snip it and pull it as you go along.

METAL AND COTTON THREAD

Combination is Effective and Affords Charming Variations; Suggestions for the Needlewoman.

There is an increasing vogue for combining metal thread with silk, wool, or cotton embroidery. It is tremendously effective and capable of such charming variations. Here are some suggestions for the needleworker who is interested in the unusual.

Say, suppose, you have some "solid" work in silk, cotton or wool. You don't know how very effective it can be made by an outlining in either gold or silver thread. The idea can be further carried out by adding French knot centers to the flowers of the same.

Where the embroidery is done entirely in outline, and particularly if it be the heavy wool or cotton kind, it is coaching in metal is a mighty successful addition. In fact, if the wool or cotton embroidery isn't already done, try coaching it on with the metallic stuff and just see if it isn't vastly more decorative.

Another suggestion for introducing the metal is to "whip stitch" the other thread with it. Wool whipped on the bias, spiral effect is the most fascinating thing ever.

ATTRACTIVE COATEE OF MOLE

Not only are narrow ribbons—usually half an inch to an inch wide—being used more or less in making hats for women, but on both popular-priced and expensive models gold or silver ribbons of the same widths are employed as trimmings. These trimmings are said to be especially effective when worn on dark hats.

ALFALFA VERSUS SWEET CLOVER

(Experimental Farms Note.)

During the last few years so much has been written in the agricultural press eulogizing sweet clover that, in many quarters, it has gained a reputation for superiority which, to say the least is misleadingly exaggerated. A few unbiased remarks on its real value, especially in comparison with alfalfa, may therefore not be out of place.

The reputation for superiority which sweet clover has gained is to a very large degree due to the fact that it is able to do surprisingly well in naturally poor soil or worn-out land deficient in plant food, and in soil lacking in moisture to such an extent that neither red clover nor alfalfa can be grown to satisfaction.

No one who has seen sweet clover flourish in places where, to use a common expression, "nothing else will grow," can deny that sweet clover might be employed as a remunerative crop on the type of land just referred to. However, it should be clearly understood that, though realizing the value of sweet clover as a revenue producer on poor soil, it by no means follows that sweet clover is, or even equal to, other crops of its type, especially alfalfa, on superior to good land. This should be clearly emphasized because many uncritical sweet clover enthusiasts have made the error of concluding, from the behaviour of sweet clover on very poor land, that it is also of outstanding superiority on good land suitable for growing such crops as alfalfa. The sooner such a conception is corrected, the better.

If alfalfa can be grown with reasonable success, it surely will prove superior to sweet clover in practically all respects. Alfalfa, when once established, will last for a great number of years and will continue, without re-seeding, to yield crops of high quality year after year, whereas sweet clover, being a biennial plant will have to be re-seeded second year unless it is given a chance to mature seeds and thus automatically re-seed itself.

Alfalfa may be grown for pasture, hay, silage and soiling, whereas sweet clover has a somewhat limited sphere of usefulness. Thus, sweet clover is not likely to make as good hay as alfalfa; neither can it be cured into good hay as easily as the latter. As a forage crop, its chief asset lies in its ability to furnish nutritious pasture, but even as a pasture plant it is hardly equal to alfalfa where the latter can be grown successfully. As, furthermore, sweet clover has some distinctly objectionable characteristics which are not found in alfalfa, for instance its peculiar flavour and its tendency to become a weed if not properly looked after, there is no valid reason why it should be grown in preference to alfalfa, if the latter can be grown with reasonable success. However, on land too poor to grow alfalfa, sweet clover may be used either as a forage crop or as a green manure crop for the purpose of improving the fertility of the soil.

Making a Life

You can shirk making a living; you cannot shirk making a life. You are at it now.

You begin making a life when you are very young, long before you can begin making a living. As soon as you begin to think and speak, every day and hour, no matter how they are spent, add something to the making of your life.

Every thought, word or deed helps to make it up, and that make up, that total, is what we are, the life we are making.

A boy who is selfish is making a selfish mis-shapen life. It looks ugly to all who see it.

A boy who fibs is making a life that is a lie and he will have to live with that life always.

A boy true and kind is making a life true and kind, a goodly and pleasant thing in the sight of God and man.

Yes, you may shirk making a living, but you cannot shirk making a life.

THE COUNTY GOOD ROADS

As Designated by Lanark County Council Approved

A large meeting, quite representative, was held in the town hall here last Wednesday, to consider the question of Good Roads, and especially the provincial highway as it affects Lanark County. The meeting was called on the initiative of Mr. C. J. Foy, of Perth, a member of the Eastern Ontario Good Roads Association executive.

Mayor R. W. Bates was appointed to the chair and Mr. C. M. Forbes, Reeve of Lanark, was appointed secretary of the meeting. Mayor Bates extended a welcome to the delegates and strongly endorsed the Good Roads Movement. He thought the present was a good time to take up in real earnest the Good Roads question as doubtless there will be a great deal of excess labor as spring opens up. Lanark County he understood was the pioneer county in the Good Roads Movement in Ontario and any matter affecting Good Roads in Eastern Ontario must take Lanark County into consideration. He pointed out that Mr. C. J. Foy, Reeve of Perth, had kept the interests of Lanark County before the authorities and he would now call on him to discuss the question as it affected the meeting assembly.

Mr. C. J. Foy said that the meeting had been called on his own initiative without consultation with any other party or body for the purpose of supplementing what County Council had done at Perth at its last session as it affected Good Roads. He stated that this County was the pioneer in good roads in Eastern Ontario, if not in the whole province, and he thought we had a system of roads that would compare favorably with any other throughout Ontario. The roads we built fifteen years ago, however, are not suitable for the requirements at the present time, mainly because of the extensive use of the automobile. He reviewed the formation of the Eastern Ontario Good Roads Association at Ottawa last July. In the past the Ontario Government has been besieged day after day by delegates from the West asking for this and that. It was felt that we in the East needed awakening and he thought he could safely say that the Eastern Ontario Good Roads Association had produced that awakening. It was proposed first to send a deputation composed of some 250 odd numbers from Eastern Ontario to wait upon the Ontario Government and lay proposals before that body for the improvement of the roads throughout this portion of the province. Mr. Foy said he had apposed this plan as it would have meant an expense of about some $6,000.00 and this money could very well be used in other channels. His proposal was to have the officials of the Government come down here and see us, see and learn what was needed and we would then have a better opportunity of arriving somewhere.

A number of the Government officials came down to Ottawa and attended the meeting of the Eastern Ontario Good Roads Association and as a result certain roads were agreed upon as entitled to Government support in building and maintenance. The only road asked for which had not been designated by the Councils throughout but which was proposed to the Government was that leading from Kingston to Ottawa, and Lanark County forms a link in that chain.

At the January session of the County Council of Lanark it had been decided to ask for a County Provincial Highway to connect the two ends of this Kingston to Ottawa road. This would entitle the counties to secure sixty per cent. of the cost of building from the Government and sixty per cent. would also be supplied by the Government for maintenance, so it could readily be seen what a big advantage it was to have this proposal go through. Mr. Foy stated that the Lanark portion of the road had been designated by the County Council starting at Oliver's Ferry, to Perth, to Lanark, Ferguson's Falls, Carleton Place and Ashton, there to connect with the Carleton end of the road. The Frontenac County Council have already designated their portion of the road from Kingston to Sealey's Bay. The Leeds and Grenville Counties have designated from Sealey's Bay to Portland, thus to connect up with the Lanark portion. The desire now was to try and have Carleton County connect up their portion from the Ashton end.

The speaker pointed out that Hon. Finlay McDiarmid's policy in giving support to good roads favored the road which was of "the greatest good for the greatest number" and Lanark County Council had taken this into consideration in designating this road through this county as they had done. This designation has already been sent into the Ontario Government and its receipt acknowledged. Lanark County knows what it wants in the way of good roads and it wants these roads now. The speaker pointed out that the only township not directly benefited by the proposed road through the county was the township of Montague and a portion of Beckwith. All the other townships could be served by this highway.

Mr. Foy read an editorial which appeared in a recent issue of the Smith's Falls News which urged that his road should come by way of Smith's Falls, Franktown, Black's Corners and then branch down the Ninth Line to meet the road from Carleton County. If this proposal was adopted the road would only serve a very small portion of Lanark County. The speaker said he believed in extending fairness to all portions of the county. The road coming by way of Smith's Falls would not do this.

The speaker recalled the time when certain expenses loomed ahead for County Council back in the year 1902 when Smith's Falls dropped out of the County Council. "Why," he asked, "did they do this?" The good roads movement was on at that time and Smith's Falls was thus able to escape taxation for this improvement. The town felt it was too far to the south to get very much benefit. Since that date Smith's Falls has not spent one cent for the building of good roads while the rest of the county are now committed to an expenditure of over $450,000. Now Smith's Falls comes along and undertakes to tell us where our good roads shall be. This is alright if she could get it. This meeting is called to point out the fallacy of that designation. He proposed that a committee be appointed at this meeting to work with Carleton County, and Leeds and Grenville to make the designation of roads so it would carry the Ministers idea of serving the greatest good to the greatest number. So far as Perth was concerned he would not give the snap of his fingers for another railroad, if we had the quality of roads equal to those of the state highways for where one person uses the railroad there are 100 who use the highways. The autos and tractors are here to stay and we should build roads which would enable farmers to come to town with three times as large a load as in the past. A large amount of money has been contributed to the Government by owners of automobiles and he favored having Lanark County get back this money to improve our own roads.

Mr. W. A. Burgess said that Carleton County Council had held back the designation of this road until they saw what roads would be designated by the County of Lanark. This road had now been designated as outlined by Mr. Foy. Mr. T. B. Caldwell, Perth, stated that the counties of Leeds and Carleton want to know where they are at in connecting up with this road from Kingston to Ottawa and he felt they should back up our own County Council in their action at the January session and appoint a committee to confer with these other counties on the matter. Mr. Foy suggested that petitions should be circulated throughout the county in order to back the committee and County Council. Mr. G. A. Burgess said he would like to see first class roads in every part of the county. The Government should build a first class cement road leading from the cities, and then the counties could build roads leading to these highways. His suggestion was that the road should be constructed in a straight line between given points and where the country was most level. He thought that the system of building roads around here was throwing money away, citing the case of the road recently built between Carleton Place and Almonte, which at times was not fit to travel on. He wanted to see good roads but he wanted also to see the most direct route between given points be chosen. Mr. T. B. Caldwell said that we should always bear in mind in building these roads to do the greatest good to the greatest number. Mayor Bates pointed out that Lanark County Council had already designated a route through the county and this meeting should back then up. Mr. J. D. Ferguson, of Montague, warden of the County, favored the Smith's Falls route and felt it was up to the Lanark County to set a pace for the counties on either side. He claimed that if Mr. Foy's suggestion was carried out the road would only serve the north part of Carleton. Mr. Foy contradicted this and pointed out on the map that the road would be equidistant from the roads already designated from Ottawa leading to Pembroke on the north and Prescott on the south. Continuing, Mr. Ferguson described the route from Ferguson's Falls and Lanark as circuitous and mountainous. He suggested that this meeting adjourn and that another meeting be called for Smith's Falls to discuss the question when representatives from every part of the county would have an opportunity to attend. Mr. C. M. Forbes, Reeve of Lanark village, called the attention of the meeting to the fact that the previous speaker was the warden of Lanark County. He stated that at the January session of County Council the designation made connecting up the Kingston to Ottawa route through Lanark County was unanimous on the part of the whole council with one exception—the warden. "Why," asked the speaker, "because he lives in the township of Montague and he wanted this road to lead through this township at the expense of the rest of the county." Mr. Forbes showed a rough plan of the proposed good road and claimed that the road designated served the whole of the county much better than that through the town of Smith's Falls and by way of Franktown.

Mr. G. A. Burgess said he would like to see a concrete road built from Brockville up through Smith's Falls and Carleton Place and on through the county. He was opposed to the proposed route by way of Ferguson's Falls as it was a hilly section and not the most direct route. Mr. Foy said that Mr. Burgess was theoretically right but practically wrong. The Honorable Finlay McDiarmid is not in favor of all lines. His idea in the building of good roads is to give the greatest good to the greatest number.

Mr. Ferguson said he was not opposed to the best interests of the county. Referring to Smith's Falls dropping out of the County Council he thought that town might come back if they were asked properly to do so. Rev. J. W. S. Lowry, of Franktown, wanted some further light on the route as designated by Mr. Forbes. Personally he was in favor of the road going by Franktown and the Fourth Line of Beckwith.

Mr. N. M. Riddell gave a resume of the discussion leading up to the designation of the good road through Lanark County from Oliver's Ferry to Ashton. It was first thought to bring the road by way to Carleton Place and Perth, but after thorough discussion Mr. Forbes suggested bringing Lanark in thus bringing the good roads through a section which would serve the greater number. After Council had considered all the interests affected the designation was made as stated by Mr. Foy.

Mr. Riddell then moved, seconded by Mr. T. B. Caldwell, of Perth, that this meeting of the representative ratepayers of the County of Lanark assembled in the town of Carleton Place on Wednesday, the 26th of February, hereby endorse and ratify the designation of roads made by the County Council's part of the proposed County Provincial Highway between the cities of Kingston and Ottawa. And that a Committee composed of Messrs. Foy, Forbes, Nichols and Ferguson be and they are hereby appointed to co-operate with the counties of Carleton and Leeds in determining the designations within these counties and of bringing to the attention of the Government the need for immediate action in the project.

The motion was put to a vote and was carried with one dissenting voice. The meeting then adjourned. The following delegates were registered at the meeting: C. J. Foy, Perth; C. M. Forbes, Lanark; Wm. Dyer, Perth; G. J. Hunt, Lanark; Wm. J. Scott, M.D., Lanark; T. B. Caldwell, Perth; Michael Connors, Pakenham; Wm. Aitken, Almonte; J. H. Blair, Bathurst; J. D. Ferguson, Montague; D. J. Robertson and Wm. Allan, councillors. The minutes of last meeting were read and adopted. The following communications were read:— From S. J. IN THE LEGISLATURE

Toronto, March 1.—The fifth session of the 14th Parliament of Ontario opened with pre-war-time brilliancy on Tuesday the 25th of February. The session was an extraordinary one also inasmuch as it is the first time in the history of the province of Ontario since Confederation that a fifth session has been held. The ordinary period under the Constitution is for four years, but this was amended last session under an empowering clause of the British North America Act extending the life of the Legislature until after the soldiers had returned from the war.

The new members of the Legislature elected at by-elections since last session were introduced to the House on the opening day and were accorded the right to take their seats. Mr. Ben Bowman, who was returned by the United Farmers from Manitoulin, was introduced by the Chief Whip of each Party.

The Speech from the Throne forecasted legislation along the following lines: To extend to women the right to sit in the Legislature and to fill municipal offices; enabling farmers' wives and daughters to serve as school trustees; to amend the Ontario Temperance Act; relating to loan companies; better administration of estates; providing a Deputy Minister of Labor; extending the Moratorium.

Sir Wm. Hearst introduced the proposed new Housing Bill, which is the intention of the Government and the House to pass through its various stages at the earliest possible moment.

The mover and seconder of the Address in reply to the Speech from the Throne were Mr. Hall (Waterloo) and Mr. Hilliard (Dundas), respectively. The war was spoken of at considerable length and each member did his best to place the Government in a favorable light before the people.

Mr. Proudfoot, the Opposition Leader, criticized the Government for its failure to foreshadow certain important matters in the Speech from the Throne. Some of the matters which Mr. Proudfoot suggested were as follows: The placing of soldiers in community centres; that the Government should appoint a Minister of Labor and not daily with the question by appointing a Superintendent and then a Deputy Minister, when later on they would be obliged to create a full Department. Mr. Proudfoot also constructively criticized the question of education. He urged the introduction of a Faculty of Commerce into the University, commended the Government for adopting the Liberal policy of giving women seats in the House, and urged careful consideration of the request for the extension of the T. & N.O. to James Bay.

The Liberal Leader also expressed surprise at the omission in the Speech of changes in the Election Act. He was in favor of returning to the old municipal lists.

Mr. Proudfoot, who is one of the members of a Special Committee appointed by the Legislature to consider the Loan and Trust Corporations Act, takes issue with the Government members as to proposed amendments to the Act, and he and his Liberal colleagues will present to the House a minority report embodying their own suggestions.

Debate on the Address will be continued Tuesday.

Increasing Pasture Grass Growth

To grow more forage on pasture land, specialists in soil fertility at the Ohio Experiment Station recommend the application of fertilizer and manure to permanent pastures having good blue grass sod; this may be done during the winter months when the ground is frozen as the rush of the spring generally prevents the carrying out of pasture improvement.

Heavy stocking with farm animals aids in keeping down the weeds after pastures have been fertilized and it is possible after manuring to carry more animals to the acre without being detrimental to the sward.

Where the clovers can be grown easily, liming is considered unnecessary, but the application of acid phosphate alone has been found to be particularly beneficial to clover. While the increase on pasture land cannot be determined, in growing much material for orchards the use of 350 pounds of acid phosphate to the acre brought about a growth of 2,716 pounds of clover more than when no fertilizing material was applied.

NOTHING ELSE LIKE IT IN CARLETON PLACE

There has never been anything in Carleton Place with the INSTANT action of simple buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adler-ika. ONE SPOONFUL flushes the ENTIRE bowel tract so completely it relieves ANY CASE sour stomach, gas or constipation and prevents appendicitis. The INSTANT, pleasant action of Adler-ika surprises both doctors and patients.

There passed away at her home in Ramsay, on Sunday, Feb. 23rd, Mrs. W. G. Gilmour, in her 74th year, her death being due to a gradual breaking up of system. Her maiden name was Catherine Kaino, and she was born in Bathurst on Feb. 12th, 1845. She, with her mother and sister, moved to Ramsay in 1869, and in 1871 she was married to Mr. W. C. Gilmour, who with one son, Wm. is left to mourn her loss. In religion she was a Presbyterian. The funeral on Tuesday afternoon to the eighth line cemetery was conducted by the Rev. S. G. Brown, and was very largely attended. The pallbearers were Messrs. Wm. Rca, Wm. Allen, Peter and Albert Naismith, Wm. Gilmour and Robt. Black. Thus one by one the old settlers who experienced the hardships and privation of those early years are passing out, and soon they will all have gone and left the generation that follows them to enjoy the comforts and advantages which their thrift and energy has secured to them.

Two of the fifty years old trees on the A. V. McLean property facing the "little river," were sawn down this week by Larry Byrne and Albert Dixon, and they made a good job of it, the twin falling directly across the stream without doing damage to adjacent buildings.
Last Friday a deal was put through when the Imperial Hotel, Perth, was sold to Mr. Frank Lambert, late owner of the Queen's Hotel, now converted into stores. This hotel was purchased by Mr. Jas. P. Hogan in 1912, from the Barrie Estate, and considerable money spent on it which made it one of the best and most commodious hotels in Perth.
Where Pat Was
In a small village in Ireland the mother of a soldier met the village priest who asked her if she had had news. "Sure, I have," she said. "Pat has been killed."
"Oh, I am sorry," said the priest.
"Did you receive word from the War Office?"
"No," she said, "I received word from himself."
The priest looked perplexed, and said, "But how is that?"
"Sure," she said, "here is the letter; read it for yourself."
The letter said, "Dear Mother—I am now in the Holy Land."
"War Cities"
At the end of the war the United States Government had on its hands dozens of "wooden war cities" with populations ranging from 1,500 to 30,000. These cities, that is, the houses, were erected for the accommodation of workers engaged in the manufacture of special material required for the prosecution of the war. The question is, what to do with these places now that the war is over. In many cases the places are already depopulated and what were once hives of industry are likely soon to be as barren as the sites of one-time-lumbering villages in old Ontario.

A Delicate Hint

The morning milk delivered to the new gentleman was certainly weak, and the head of the household considered it necessary to remonstrate. "Are you aware," he remarked to the milkman "that we require this milk for the hitherto recognized purpose?"
"I hope so, sir," replied the tradesman.
"That's all right, then," returned the parson gently; "I merely mentioned it in case you may have thought we wanted it for the font."

"He was, but at the first squall he began to drag his anchor."

SAVED WORLD FROM GERMANY

Great Claim Is Made for Lord Northcliffe.

HE IS TAKING A HOLIDAY

Outstanding Figure in Journalism in Our Day and Generation Is the Proprietor of the London Times—Played an Important Part in British Politics Before and During the War.

COMMENTING on the retirement of Lord Northcliffe from the management of the score or more newspapers and periodicals which he owns, Col. George Harvey, one of the most brilliant of American publicists, expresses the opinion that Northcliffe cannot really retire. "He will die with his boots on," says Harvey. He also expresses the opinion that to Northcliffe and the London Times the world owes the fact that Germany was defeated. Northcliffe was aware of the German peril. In 1912, in the course of a conversation with Harvey, he predicted that there would be war with Germany within three years. In 1915 he said that the war was not being won, and that it would be lost unless Lloyd George could be put in Asquith's place. He said that Lloyd George was the one man in England for the tremendous task. He believed that the war was being lost under Asquith and that the tide was turned by the Coalition Government must admit that Harvey's tribute to Northcliffe and the Times is justified, for to Northcliffe and the Times was due the downfall of Asquith.

Lord Northcliffe is easily the outstanding figure in the journalism of this generation. He started with nothing, and in little more than thirty years made himself many times a millionaire—in pounds sterling—won for himself a peerage, and another for his brother, secured control of the most important newspaper in the world, the London Times, which he had the rare judgment not to either debase or uplift, and bought up a score of other papers and periodicals. He has made and unmade Governments, and altered the policy of the war. It is not so long ago when Northcliffe was the best hated man in England. This was when he was attacking Lord Kitchener for sending shrapnel instead of high explosive shell to the front. Kitchener was the British idol. He had been made Secretary of War largely at Northcliffe's behest. Now he was being accused of impeding the British army because of his failure to understand that shrapnel was useful only for use against troops advancing in the open. Northcliffe was burnt in effigy in a hundred English towns.

A veteran journalist who worked on one of the Northcliffe papers for years and came often into contact with Northcliffe, says that he was the best employer a newspaper worker ever had—if the newspaper worker had the goods. Since Northcliffe entered the field of daily journalism in London, some twenty odd years ago the wages of writers have doubled, largely because Northcliffe paid large salaries to attract the men he wanted. It used to be said of him, as it has been said of his American counterpart, Hearst, that he lured men by high wages, squeezed them dry in a few months and then tossed them aside. To this it may be said that men are not squeezed dry of ideas in a few months. Thomas Marlowe, editor of the Daily Mail, who succeeds Northcliffe as chairman of his various publishing interests, has been editor of the Mail for twenty years. He evidently was not tossed aside.

Northcliffe, he tells us, in the New York Sun, was always available to the men who worked for him. He encouraged them to make suggestions. Those who had good ideas were generously rewarded. If they were ill they were sent on long voyages until they recovered. Money was no object. He used often to stop his reporters and editors and question them. One young fellow who had been with him for three months was questioned one day on the stairs as to how he liked his job. He said everything was fine, he was perfectly contented and happy. "How much are you earning?" asked Northcliffe. "Five pounds a week," was the answer. "Then you are not the man for me," was the retort. "I don't want any member of my staff to be happy and contented with five pounds a week."

WILHELM'S BIRTHDAY.

All-Highest Finds Himself Without Any Friends.

The sixtieth birthday of Wilhelm von Hohenzollern, sometimes German Kaiser, King of Prussia, Margrave of Brandenburg, etc., etc., also All Highest War Lord, would-be Attila and "friend and patron of Gott," was marked by the calm and dignified manner in which the overwhelming majority of the world's inhabitants, evidently without any previous agreement, refused to take cognizance of the event. In view of his boundless vanity probably no amount of scorn and abuse could have caused more anguish to the celebrated friend of Karl Rosner and the owner of 573 military and naval uniforms than the extremely scanty notice with which everybody passed up the anniversary.

Even in Germany the majority of the newspapers did not so much as mention the Kaiser's birthday. Only the ultra-conservatives availed themselves of the opportunity to stage a monarchist demonstration and to shed a few tears for the glory that was Wilhelm II.

A tearful note is sounded by the Coblenz "Volkszeitung": "He is spending his sixtieth birthday in a foreign country. He is an exile. Some there will be however, who will think of him to-day with loyalty and veneration as in former days, especially when they consider the sad situation occupied by Germany at the present time."

The Berlin "Lokalanzeiger," the newspaper which had published Rosner's account of the Kaiser's war days, remained loyal to its traditions by publishing the following elegy: "Lonely and broken, the Kaiser, an involuntary exile, steps over the threshold into old age. Behind Wilhelm lies a rich life ending in the dreadful four years of war, during which his tortured soul fell from proud posts to bitter disappointment when each victorious joy was drowned in a flood of calamity.

"Before him lies a dark and joyless future. Over his head the hatred of the whole world suspends a Damocles sword of judgment.

"The only consolation we can give him is to tell him that millions of German hearts feel deeply that this awful accusation made against him only veils the guilt of his accusers and to justify his punishment—although the people are equally guilty—and to tell him that this judgment cannot stand before the tribunal of world history."

Besides this outpouring of the ex-Kaiser received a large quantity of flowers from his admirers in Germany and Holland, or, as a correspondent puts it, naively, "from schoolgirls and former supporters."

The Reichsbote bewailed the fact that all the Conservative parties, only the German National People's party (the old conservatives and pan-Germans) had the courage to suggest in its election program the restoration of a monarchical form of government, and that even this solitary suggestion, extremely modest in its form, was suppressed in nearly all the conservative papers. To which the Vorwarts retorted that this proved only how "damned unpopular" the monarchical idea has become.

The New York Tribune, noting the movement in Berlin to bring the Kaiser back to power, reprints the name of an inventor in New York who patented Mayor Gaynor for permission to leap off a skyscraper with his contraption. "Dear Mr. Commissioner," wrote his honor, "this gentleman wants to jump off the highest building in the city. For God's sake let him!"

Bristles of the Pig.

Pigs are raised everywhere in China, and pigs' bristles have become an important article of export, amounting to 4,000 tons a year, valued at about $6,000,000. Bristles that are long, thick, stiff, bright, wiry, and clean command the best prices. The yield of each hog is tied in a bundle, placed in water for a few days, then scraped off, combed to remove impurities, sun-dried, steamed, and then sorted into bundles 1 1/2 inches in diameter, with bristles of uniform length. Most of the work of cleaning and tying the bristles is done by women, who receive about five or six cents a day. Buyers are very particular about the bristles, being well cleaned, of uniform length and color, and the bundles solid. This is apparent when it is considered that prices vary from twenty cents to 300 cents per picul (133 1/3 pounds), depending on the assortment. The collecting season is from November to April, as bristles are soft and useless for the trade during the hot months. This accounts for the fact that the main producing and shipping centres are north of the Yangtze. For export the bristles are packed in boxes containing one picul to a box. The ports from which they are shipped are, in the order of their importance, Tientsin, Chungking, and Hankow. Manchuria and Shantung are increasing in importance in this trade. China offers an excellent field for the manufacture of brushes. It is surprising that greater developments in this direction have not taken place.

For Literary Clubs.

"This passage," said the publisher, "seems ambiguous to me. What do you mean by it?" "I don't know," replied the great author. "I left it there for the commentator and literary clubs to work over when I'm dead."

His Bravery.

"I forgot myself and spoke angrily to my wife," remarked Mr. Meekton. "Did she resent it?" "For a moment. But Henrietta is a fair-minded woman. After she thought it over she shook hands with me and congratulated me on my bravery."

Her Pulse.

Betty accidentally discovered her pulse one day, and running to her mother she exclaimed: "Oh, mamma I got the hiccoughs in my wrist."

OUT WENT SINNER!

A Negro Superstition That Still Survives.

The well-known practice of negro folk of "conjuring the shadow" and thereby fixing the guilt of some one under suspicion, is described by L. Frank Tooker in a story in the Century magazine.

The room was full of people when later in the evening Sis' Mame appeared at the door. She ducked her head and laughed.

She sidled into the room with a funny little hitching step, humming a gay tune as she advanced; but as she neared the middle of the room, her tall, gaunt form suddenly stiffened into immobility, and her keen eyes glanced about her. "Sin 's done in de do!" she said harshly—"sin 's done come in. Ah feel it in ma ol' bones, col' an' shibbery, lak ere grabe."

She walked to the table, and, taking up two lighted candles that stood there, carried them to the front of the room and set them on a shelf by the open door. Then she walked back to the middle of the room.

In the deathlike stillness she stood rigid, like one in a trance. To the strained eyes of the watchers her face seemed gradually to take on all the aspects of death itself. Her eyes were open, but in their unblinking fixeness of gaze there was neither sight nor intelligence; her jaw had dropped; an ashen grayness overspread her face; her wrinkled ridges looked hard, like stone. For a long time she stood thus, and then slowly almost imperceptibly, life seemed to flow back in a tiny trickle. Her arms twitched, now and then, she moaned like one in pain; and presently her whole body was in motion—motion that seemed apart from volition, and which gradually increased until her frail form seemed the vehicle of unconscious frenzy.

Her eyes were blazing now as she whirled rhythmically in a wild dance that kept time to a low-hummed accompaniment. The accompaniment grew louder, a clearly enunciated series of sounds that were yet unintelligible. Then suddenly she broke into a chanted song:

One man passed froug da needle's eye
(O sinner, doan' you' see da do?)
On da flo' see his shadder lie
(Sinner, sinner, come no mo!)

Shader o' blood an' heart o' sin
(O sinner, doan' you' see da do?)
Go froug da do' dat' you' come in
(Sinner, sinner, come no mo!)

Still dancing, she pointed a finger at Peter Bohun, imperiously waving him out.

Scowling, he hesitated; but something about that grimly pointed finger and gaunt form, with all the traditional dread of Sis' Mame's mysterious power, bore down his resistance, and rising slowly at last, he slunk away. His face showed both resentment and apprehension, but no one heeded; all eyes were turned toward his shadow as it darkened across the dirt floor. A sigh of relief ran through the company, and all eyes turned toward Sis' Mame, for the shadow was not red.

X-Ray's Value Proved.

The X-ray, as might readily be imagined, has proved to be one of the most valuable aids in the surgical system of our army. Like plastic surgery and many other specialties of medical science, it has been set ahead at a rate equal to a decade's progress in time of peace.

For instance, one of the most important uses of the ray is to ascertain the exact position of foreign substances—shrapnel fragments and the like—in the body.

One of the most ingenious of these is the Hertz compass, invented by Col. Hertz of the French army. Details of its construction are not available for publication, but it furnishes the surgeon a direct guide to the foreign body during the operation for its removal. The element of guesswork is said to be eliminated. The ordinary X-ray machine serves only to tell the surgeon how far the splinter or bullet is perpendicularly beneath a point marked on the skin. The operation follows.

There is another X-ray outfit which can be taken anywhere, for it furnishes its own electric current. A standard ambulance is altered slightly so that it carries a gas engine, a high tension transformer, a special portable X-ray table, a portable dark room and the other necessary accessories. The gas engine and generator remain in the ambulance. The portable X-ray table is set up near it. Thus the outfit can be taken anywhere a motor car can travel.

Another outfit can be taken to the bedside of the patient. This is particularly valuable in the case of certain chest wounds.

Gas as a Fuel.

Experiments in England with ordinary producer gas as a fuel for internal combustion engines has shown that as the size and power of the engine increases the loss on producer gas diminishes. The fact that coal gas, although of lower calorific value than gasoline, gives better results is accounted for by the pressure of the gas in the bag, which delivers this fuel to the engine with little or no "back pull."

Zinc.

Zinc is being used instead of brass for the manufacture of numerous small articles, such as shoe and corset eyelets, lace tips, show clips and metal buttons, and in every way as satisfactory as brass and materially less expensive.

Elevation of Mountains.

The elevation of mountains is usually determined by the barometer, by noting the boiling point of water as it is carried upward, or by the use of surveying instruments and computations in trigonometry. The last is the scientific method.

The French were the first people to preserve fruits and vegetables. This was in 1810.

A Trail Across the Rockies

(1) In the Sinclair Canyon at the Red Gate.

(2) Fording the Vermillion River.

The first trip over the Simpson Pass through the Canadian Pacific Rockies was made by Sir George Simpson, Governor of the Hudson's Bay Company, in 1841, and formed part of the first recorded overland tour round the world, that is to say across the North American Continent, and by way of Siberia and Russia, occupying about nine months, and the subject of considerable literature. Jim Brewster, the famous guide and outfitter at Banff, discovered the fallen tree on the summit of the Pass on which the travellers left their record.

Fired by the ambition to cross this pass, I set out one day this summer, with two guides, ten ponies and camping outfit and supplies for six or seven days. Jim Brewster set these over from Banff to Invermere at the headwaters of the Columbia Valley, where I had promised to wait for them. Close to Invermere are the remains of Kootenai House, an outpost of the Northwest Trading Company established by David Thompson in 1808. Now there is a comfortable little tourist hotel, much appreciated by motorists who use the excellent Government road through the Upper Columbia Valley.

On our first day's ride we stopped off for a swim at the hot radium-water springs of Sinclair Canyon, where St. John Harmsworth, brother of the famous Lord Northcliffe, and himself proprietor of the still more famous Perrier water, built a concrete bathing pool under the springs which pours its naturally warm water out of the rock. At night we found shelter in a homesteader's cabin, the owner of which was away at the war and hospitable enough to leave the latch loose. Next day we were in the forests of the "Cooney"—a wonderful resort for big game judging by the tracks we saw and the animals we even met—two black bear and a deer on the trail with moose paths worn deep like small Devonshire lanes along the meadows beside the river.

The Kootenay River had a rather bad reputation. Two parties were drowned in the attempt to make the crossing at the same time, last year, and we ourselves had been warned to postpone our trip. However, we found a ford where we did not even have to swim our horses, and next day were on the banks of the Vermillion River. Into the Vermillion pours the raging torrent of the Simpson, which itself is fed from the melting glaciers of the snow-clad Rockies high above. At least one cyclone seemed to have swept down its valley, and the river itself had washed away several corners so that our trail had to be made, or found anew on many a mile.

Once while Ed. Dawson, the leading guide was hacking a trail through a deadfall, his saddle pony took it into its head to cross the torrent. The packponies followed suit, and before we could stop them, our camp, and most of all our food supplies were on the wrong side of the most vicious looking water I ever care to see. There was nothing to do but follow, and evidently we got across—else how could this tale have ever been told? As we approached the Summit of the Pass, one grizzly left a visiting card such as grizzlies do leave—scented—upon the trail and again we saw deer.

The Summit, according to the guides, should be ten feet deep in snow, and the description given by Sir George Simpson gave the same anticipation:—"We were surrounded by peaks and crags on whose summits lay perpetual snow; and the only sounds which disturbed the solitude were the crackling of prostrate branches under the tread of our horses, and the roaring of the stream as it leaped down its rocky course."

"About seven hours of hard work brought us to the height of land, the hinge as it were between the eastern and western waters. We breakfasted on the level isthmus, which did not exceed fourteen paces in width, filling our kettles for this one lonely meal at once from the crystal sources of the Columbia and the Saskatchewan, while these willing feeders of two opposite oceans, murmuring over their beds of mossy stones, as if to bid each other a long farewell, could hardly fall to attain our minds to the sublimity of the scene.

"But between these kindred four-the common progeny of the same snow wreaths, there was this remarkable difference of temperature that the source of the Columbia showed 40°, while that of the Saskatchewan raised the mercury to 53 1/2°, the thermometer meanwhile striking as high as 71° in the shade.

"From the vicinity of perpetual snow, we estimated the elevation of the height of land to be seven or eight thousand feet above the level of the sea, while the surrounding peaks appeared to rise nearly half that altitude above our heads."

"We ourselves found the snow all gone and our horses found sweet and ample pasture on an Alpine meadow. As we looked back from the Great Divide upon the mountains of the Selkirk, we had as fine a panorama as any artist could desire—rugged outlines capped and fringed with perpetual snow.

"The Banff side of the Summit comes within the jurisdiction of the Dominion Government, and its Superintendent of Parks was good enough to provide us with a trail which really was a trail. To the right up Healy Creek we had a glimpse of Mount Assiniboine, the giant of these giant mountains—only a glimpse however, for in a minute his head was caught in a turban of clouds. Thence without adventure except for a plague of mosquitoes we reached the C.P.R. Hotel at Banff, alive with summer tourists who found in our cavalcade a fitting subject for innumerable snapshots.

"The fishing, I may say in passing, is of the very best. Every creek, every pool seems to be stocked with trout, all inquisitive about the nature of the fly. Brown Hackle and Gray Hackle are always deadly. The red flies such as Parmachene Belle do not seem to take so well in these waters. There were both Dolly Varden and Steelhead to our credit on the Simpson, averaging a little over a pound. In the Kootenay the trout ran up to two and three pounds and were very game, though shy in the middle of the day.—J. M. G.

But the plea failed. With a sharp sinking of his heart he saw her pretty brow wrinkle in an impatient frown.

"You mean you want to go? You'd really rather?"

Junior and me out at Aunt Clara's instead of moping around a cheap, dingy flat or boarding house.

"You mean," he tried to keep his voice steady—"you want to go? You'd really rather—aside from saving money?"

"Want to! I'm wild to go. Of course I'll be homesick for you, but all husbands and wives expect to be apart sometimes on vacations and trips and—oh, David, can't you see? It's been so long since I've had any really good times, and I'm hungry for them—starving. And out there at Aunt Clara's, where you don't have to think of money all the time—Why, you couldn't—it isn't like you to be so selfish as to refuse me that."

He said no more. He sat fumbling with a napkin, his eyes cast down. He dared not lift them to Shirley's lest he see there a truth he had not the courage to face just then. After a little he rose, went to the door and opened it.

"Will you come in now?" he nodded to Aunt Clara. "The family council is over."

Aunt Clara marched into the room. "Well, what have you decided?" "Shirley has convinced me," he smiled queerly, "that you are right. But your hospitality is all we ought to accept. For her other expenses I will send something from my salary every month."

made the youngster wave his hand. David managed an answering smile. He walked homeward by a long, roundabout way. The rest of the day he spent in working feverishly at unfinished odds and ends of packing. Then he got out all his sketches and plans and slowly tore them into bits, until the floor around him was littered with the fragments. Last of all he came to the St. Christopher's plans. But his hands refused his command to destroy. He sat looking at this evidence of his failure until darkness fell and hid them from his sight. He rose then and, wrapping them up carefully, put them with the boxes for storage.

There was nothing more that he could do. He had not eaten since morning, but he was not hungry. He leaned back in a chair and let all the thoughts and feelings he had held at bay during the busy days rush at him in the darkness. An incredible loneliness was upon him, a sense of loss bitterer even than loneliness. It seemed that something for which he had paid dearly had been stolen from him.

An odd fish, no doubt of it, was Jonathan Radbourne, though a good man to work for and, as Jim Blaisdell had said and David soon found, by no means a fool. There was no hint of masterfulness about him, which was because he never thought of himself as a master. He never gave orders and never reproved; he made polite requests and sometimes, gently and apologetically, he showed where mistakes had been made. If you happened to do about what you were paid for doing he beamed with delight and thanked you as though you had done him a favor.

He was always busy and nearly always on the move, fitting back and forth between office and shop with hopping little strides that made him more robin-like than ever and really accomplished a great deal. But he often found time for friendly little chats with his employees on topics that had no connection with business, such as the babies at home, the rheumatic old mother, the state of the heart or the lungs; he made it a specialty to know all their troubles. And he always was smiling—on that mouth it was really a grin—a crooked, cheery smile that made others smile, too, and he never acknowledged bad weather.

From the first he made a habit of seeking out David. His manner on such occasions was of shy, wistful friendliness, not quite sure of its welcome, that gave David an impulse to pat him on the head and say: "There, there, little man! It's all right. You're my chief and my time is all yours—though I'd rather use it for work."

However, he never said that, but was always respectful and polite. He took advantage of these chats to learn more of his duties. With unwearied patience Jonathan explained them, as well as other details of the business, expressing delight at David's interest. David saw that he had much to learn, and he had grave doubts that he was earning his salary. He knew next to nothing of mechanics and did not always understand when Jonathan or Hegner, the foreman, explained some new device for which drawings were needed. But that wrought no change in Jonathan's manner.

"I'm afraid," he would say, "we weren't very clear on that." And he would go over the explanation once more.

When the drawings were correct, "Very good!" he would beam. "I wish I could draw as beautifully as you." "Do you think," David asked on one such occasion, when he had been in the position nearly a month, "that I'm really the man you want? Sometimes I seem pretty slow."

"Oh, you mustn't think that," Jonathan said warmly. "You're catching on faster than I ever hoped for. You don't know what a help you are to me. The draftsman I've had before used only his hands. You use your head."

"Thank you," said David, grateful for the assurance, even if the good will behind it was a trifle obvious. "And you find your work interesting, don't you?" "I'm learning to like it—very much." He tried to men his answer convincingly. But when he had left the office, Jonathan shook his head and sought out his bookkeeper.

"We've got to try that. We must make a little conspiracy to that end. I'll try to think up some details."

Miss Summers smiled as though she liked making little conspiracies with Jonathan. "Of course," she said again and looked upon that as a promise.

Very quietly she set about keeping it, a little timidly, too, which was strange since with others in the office and shop she was not in the least timid. She could do little, it is true—a cheery "Good morning" and a friendly nod at evening, an occasional smile when something brought David into her office, once in a long while a brief little chat in which she, with a breath-taking sense of having an adventure, took the lead. Another young man might have detected her friendliness and considered his charms, but David, though his grave courtesy never failed, neither thought of his charms nor was conscious of hers. Her charms, to be sure, were not of a striking sort—at least at first glance. She was a frail looking body whose face was nearly always pale and sometimes toward evening of a hot day rather pinched; her arms were too slender to be pretty, and the cords of her broad white neck stood out. She was not very tall, and perched on her stool at the tall, old-fashioned desk by the window she seemed more girlish even than her years, which were four and twenty. She did not look at all like an Iris, even a white Iris girl. David would almost as soon have suspected Miss Brown.

"We must make a little conspiracy to that end."

loaned desk by the window she seemed more girlish even than her years, which were four and twenty. She did not look at all like an Iris, even a white Iris girl. David would almost as soon have suspected Miss Brown.

"I might," thought Miss Summers, "be a part of the furniture for all he sees in me." She did not think it resentfully, though with an odd little twinge of disappointment. She regarded him as a very superior young man, the sort she had always wanted to know. But she had made a promise, and she would not desert the conspiracy.

She noticed that he never ate or went out at the noon hour, as if there were no such thing as an inner man demanding attention. Thereafter her luncheon, which was always carried in a dainty little basket, was seasoned with a conviction of gross selfishness. And one day, after she had eaten, she went, basket in hand, to the door of David's little room.

"Mr. Quentin!" she began. Instantly David was on his feet—one of his habits she liked so well; it was men in the office did not have it. "Yes, Miss Summers?"

She held out the basket. In the bottom reposed two fat cookies and a big apple whose ruddy cheeks had a rival in hers at the moment.

"My eyes were bigger than my appetite. Would you care for them?" "Thank you, Miss Summers," he said politely, "but I never eat at noon."

"I wish you would," she insisted. "If you don't try—they'll spoil." "By tomorrow? Hardly, I should think. Thank you, no," he repeated. "I find it doesn't agree."

He saw her face fall. "On second thought I believe I will. They look so tempting. It's very good of you to think of it."

He took the basket from her hands. But she did not leave. She stood, still hesitant, looking up at him. He motioned to his chair, the only one in the room.

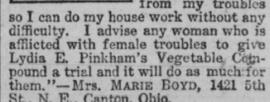

"Won't you sit down?" "Where will you sit?"

He answered by brushing some papers from the corner of the table and seating himself there. She took the chair, and the sense of adventure was very vivid.

HOW MRS. BOYD AVOIDED AN OPERATION

Canton, Ohio.—"I suffered from a female trouble which caused me much suffering, and two doctors decided that I would have to go through an operation before I could get well."

"My mother, who had been helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, advised me to try it before submitting to an operation. I relieved me from my troubles and I can do my house work without any difficulty. I advise any woman who is afflicted with female troubles to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial and it will do as much for them."

"Mrs. Marie Boyd, 1421 5th St., N. E., Canton, Ohio. Sometimes there are serious conditions where a hospital operation is the only alternative, but on the other hand so many women have been cured by this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, after doctors have said that an operation was necessary—every woman who wants to avoid an operation should give it a fair trial before submitting to such a trying ordeal."

BUY YOUR SEED RIGHT!

Be Sure the Clover and Grass Seed Is Pure.

Why Every Farmer Should Have Spray Calendar—How to Get It and Use It—Only Spraying Done at Right Time Is Effective.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

SUCCESS or failure depends to a large extent upon the quality of the seed sown. No man can afford to use low-grade clover or grass seed. The risk of seeding down the farm with noxious weed seeds is too great. High-grade clover and grass seed is freer from weed seeds and produces more healthy, vigorous plants per pound than does low-grade seed. Impure seed is dear at any price. Pure seed is the purchaser's right and he should insist on having it.

In the purchase of clover and grass seed the following qualities should be looked for:—

1. Freedom from weed seeds, especially those weed seeds covered by the Seed Control Act. The weed seeds can be properly seen only by spreading out the sample of clover or grass seed on a clean white sheet of paper and looking carefully over it with the aid of a tripod magnifier or hand lens. No farmer should be without a lens of some kind. Everyone who has to purchase seed should endeavor to become familiar with the common weed seeds and know the standards of purity required by the Seed Control Act for the various grades of clover and grass seed.

2. Freedom from dirt, grit, broken straw and other inert matter. A great many samples of clover and grass seed contain far too large a percentage of such inert matter. Those buying such seed are paying a high price per pound for dirt.

3. Good size and color. A good sample of seed of any kind should be large, plump, bright, and have the characteristic color well developed. Plumpness, brightness and good color are usually indicative of high germinative capacity.

4. High germinative capacity. Good clover or grass seed of any kind should have a high germinative capacity. This can be accurately judged by an examination of the seed and can be ascertained only by a germination test. Purchasers of seed can have such tests made for them by sending their seed to the office of the Seed Commissioner, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Farmers are reminded that the Department of Botany of the Ontario Agricultural College is at their service at all times for the testing of seed as to purity. In submitting samples for purity test send at least one pound of the coarser grades, one ounce of alfalfa or red clover, and half an ounce of alsike or timothy. A full report on samples will be furnished. Samples of seed should be carefully packed and addressed with postage prepaid to the Botanical Department, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.—Prof. J. E. Howitt, O. A. College, Guelph.

Every Farmer Should Have Spray Calendar.

Before giving the reasons why every farmer should have a spray calendar let us state what a spray calendar is. It is the gathering together into a small space—usually just one sheet or page—of all the necessary knowledge for the control of the various insects and diseases that attack our fruit trees and bush fruits; so that instead of having to search half a dozen bulletins the farmer can obtain the required information almost at a glance. A spray calendar is therefore a handy reference sheet on the control of insect pests and plant diseases.

Every farmer should have a spray calendar for the following reasons:—

1. Because it will save him time in finding the necessary information on the control of insects and plant diseases.

2. Because the information given in the spray calendar is more reliable than he can obtain from his neighbors or any other source. It is the best information that can be obtained anywhere.

3. Because the spray calendar will prevent costly mistakes due to slips of memory.

4. Because the spray calendar states definitely when to treat the different pests. A week too early or a week too late would in the case of some of our worst insects and diseases mean utter failure. There is a good reason for each date of treatment given in the calendar. It is not guesswork.

5. Because the spray calendar states definitely the mixture or mixtures to use in each case and gives the proper strength. Too strong a mixture would mean loss of money and sometimes burning of the foliage or fruit; too weak a mixture failure to control the pest.

6. Because several spray mixtures, e.g., Bordeaux mixture, can be made at home. The spray calendar tells how to make these.

7. Because by following the directions given in the spray calendar, almost perfectly clean fruit and much more of it can be obtained. Always ask for the latest spray calendar, since they are revised from time to time, and new and better methods added in place of the old as soon as they have been sufficiently tested. How can spray calendars be obtained? Send a postcard to the Department of Agriculture, with a request for one. Write your name and address clearly.—L. Casser, B.S.A., O. A. College, Guelph.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Rev. P. E. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago. (Copyright, 1918, Western Newspaper Union.)

LESSON FOR MARCH 9

JOSHUA, PATRIOT AND LEADER.

LESSON TEXT—Joshua 1:1-9. GOLDEN TEXT—Be strong and of a good courage.—Joshua 1:9. ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—Joshua 1:10-2:17; 6:13-15. PRIMARY TOPIC—A story of a brave leader. Memory Verse—Joshua 1:9. JUNIOR TOPIC—Follow the right leader. Memory Verse—Deut. 1:7, 8. INTERMEDIATE TOPIC—When to be brave.

The book of Joshua is a history of the conquest of the promised land and its apportionment among the tribes of Israel. It takes its name from its principal character—Joshua. During the wilderness journey he was Moses' minister, and captain of his army. When Moses was denied the privilege of going over the Jordan, Joshua was appointed to the leadership of Israel. Being so long faithful as a servant, he is now qualified to rule. Only those who have themselves learned to obey are fit to rule. Moses, the representative of the law, brought Israel to the borders of Canaan. Joshua was the man chosen to lead the people into the place of rest. The name "Joshua" has the same derivation as the name "Jesus." The law (Moses) was our schoolmaster to bring us to Christ; but Christ (our Joshua) has given us victory and rest.

I. Joshua's Call (1:1-2).

Moses, God's servant, is dead, but God's work must go on. He continues his work by calling others to take it up, though he buries his workers. Joshua, no doubt, was sorrowful over the loss of his master, but there is no time for mourning. The best way to cure our griefs and sorrows is to take up courageously the burdens and responsibilities which our leaders have laid down.

II. God Renews His Promise of the Land to Israel (1:3-4).

The promise had been made to Abraham, and renewed to Isaac, Jacob and Moses. It is now renewed to Israel when they are about to enter upon its possession. The borders of the land were quite large (v. 4) "from the wilderness and this Lebanon, even unto the great river, the river Euphrates, all the land of the Hittites, and unto the great sea toward the going down of the sun, shall be your coast." The nearest it was ever possessed was during the reigns of David and Solomon, though not then fully realized. This country still belongs to the Jews, and in God's own time they shall possess it. Their getting possession of this land was due entirely to themselves. God promised them, that wherever their feet set upon the land it was theirs. If they failed to secure possession it was because they failed to claim it. We would all enjoy larger blessings if we would claim them.

III. God's Presence Promised to Joshua (1:5).

Joshua was entering upon a perilous and difficult enterprise, but the Lord said as he was with Moses so would he be with him. The difficulties before him were: 1. The Jordan river (v. 2). It was now at its flood (3:15), making it impossible for armies to cross. 2. In the land the people were living in walled cities. Notwithstanding this, God's help insured success. "I will not fall thee nor forsake thee." (2) "There shall not any man be able to stand before thee." (3) "As I was with Moses, so I will be with thee."

IV. Conditions of Blessings in the Land (1:6-9).

1. "Be strong and of a good courage" (v. 6). His mission was to go in and divide the land among the tribes for an inheritance. God could not bless him if he should play the coward. 2. Unwavering obedience to the word of God (v. 7). In a land of idolatry it requires much courage to obey the true God. The prosperity and good success was conditioned upon unwavering obedience to God's commands. In all his work he must conform his life to the law of God. To pass from the path outlined there-in would bring disaster and ruin. In order to accomplish this the law of the Lord must constantly be in his mouth. He was to meditate therein day and night. If we are to prosper in our Christian experience there must be that regular and reverent study of God's Word. Joshua renders prompt obedience. He did not stop to cavil, but at once gave orders for the march. God made the plan and gave the directions. His responsibility was to go forward without doubting, taking possession of the inheritance.

What to Pray For.

Oh, do not pray for easy lives. Pray to be stronger men. Do not pray for tasks equal to your powers. Pray for tasks equal to your tasks. Then the doing of your work shall be no miracle. But you shall be a miracle. Every day you shall wonder at yourself, at the richness of life which has come to you by the grace of God.—Phillips Brooks.

TWO EX-PREMIERS IN CABINET

Situation in British Politics That Has Never Before Occurred Is Among the Possibilities.

Herbert H. Asquith, former premier, is often mentioned as a possible addition to the present cabinet. The Manchester Guardian points out that if this happens Lloyd George will have two former prime ministers among his subordinates. There is no former instance of this state of things in modern history, and it is a long time now since an English government contained in a secondary place even one former premier.

The classical case occurred about the middle of last century, and is furnished by the game of see-saw which was played by Lord John Russell and Lord Palmerston. In the government of 1846-52 Lord John Russell was prime minister and Lord Palmerston foreign secretary, and in the government of 1859-65 their two positions were exactly reversed.

It was Lord John Russell's exceptional fate to be prime minister from the age of fifty-four till that of sixty, to be in and out of subordinate office, under Lord Aberdeen and then under Lord Palmerston, from sixty to seventy-three, and at that age to be prime minister again.

If Lloyd George gets Mr. Asquith as well as Mr. Balfour he will have all the living former premiers except one, the exception being Lord Rosebery, whose period of office—15 months—was so short as to compare with the meteoric premiership of the age of Caning.

Germany's Latest Budget.

WEIMAR, Feb. 17.—In an address before the German National Assembly, Dr. Schieffer, Minister of Finance, said he saw the necessity for credits of 25,300,000,000 marks being requested. Of this amount, the Minister said, 300,000,000 marks would be used for building houses. He added that the total credits and loans aggregate more than 140,000,000 marks, not including 6,000,000,000 marks in treasury notes. The banks' bills in circulation, Dr. Schieffer said, amounted to 43,500,000,000 marks.

ZION'S GOLDEN JUBILEE

The 50th Anniversary Marked by Inspiring Sermons and Large Congregations

The members of Zion Church were favored with beautiful spring weather and good roads for their anniversary services this year, when they observed their golden jubilee—fifty years of congregational life. In 1868 the first steps were taken to organize the congregation and the first communion was observed in the fall of 1868. In 1869 the first church was built, and of those present on that occasion probably there were less than half a dozen present on Sunday. These were Messrs. Alex. McLean, Finlay McEwen, James Craun, Mrs. D. Findlay, sen., and Mrs. James Cavers. The first minister was Rev. James Carswell, the second Rev. A. A. Scott, the present minister is the third to preside over this congregation. During this time the church was three times enlarged, being destroyed by fire after the third enlargement, and the present edifice was opened in March, 1912. The people have had their trials and difficulties and their seasons of encouragement, and the present occasion was probably the most auspicious in the history of the congregation.

For the services on Sunday, Rev. Robert B. Whyte, M.A., of Knox Church, Ottawa, was the preacher.

Mr. Whyte's morning discourse was on the subject, "The Motive of Service," and based on 1 King 8, 18, 19: "And the Lord said unto David whereas it was in thy heart to build an house unto my name, thou hast said well that it was in thy heart. Nevertheless thou shalt not build the house, but thy son he shall build the house unto my name." The preacher at the very beginning, set heart chords in vibration and stirred fond memories in the congregation in his reference to other days and other peoples, fifty years ago, who had founded Zion congregation. Only very few who were connected with the congregation then are alive today. Mr. Whyte said that it had been the great dream of David's life that he would one day build "a house for God" and "a temple for his name." The Shechiah presence that he had had been sheltered in the wilderness. David had wished to surpass God's demands of him in providing a tabernacle for the Ark of God. He wished to build an ornate and beautiful temple. The plan was in his mind, the purpose was in his heart, but it was not to be. David's cherished purpose received a check from an unexpected quarter. For it came to pass that night that the Lord signified to Nathan, that it was His will that the building of the temple should be postponed till after David's death, and should be executed by another. The thought of his heart was approved, but as David had been a man of war from his youth and had shed much blood upon the earth, he was told that it was the Divine will that the house should rather be built by his son Solomon.

Most men wish to leave behind them some lasting memorial. There is a universal craving for earthly immortality. The man of labor rears a building to live after he has passed away. So, too the painter the sculptor and the musician.

The unfulfilled purposes of life—how many they be. Yet how precious some of them are in the sight of God, even when in Providence they have been arrested, broken, uncompleted. The thing to be emphasized in this connection with this matter is, that what God most concerns Himself with is what is really in men's hearts towards Him.

By God, not only actions, but thoughts are weighed. He judges us by the things that come into the mind, not by mere manifestations and results. They are the true index of character and afford the reliable measure of moral worth. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." Thus, however brilliant or impressive in the eyes of the world a man's achievements may be, if they are poorly motivated and selfishly directed they are of small account with God. On the other hand, there may in the tangible outcome of a life be little to show which is fitted to attract the notice and applause of the world; and yet, if that life, so far as its powers and opportunities extended, has been lived on noble principles and devoted to the glory of God, and the good of men, it is of great value in the sight of God. Every man has an ideal. The world has a place and a need for the dreamer. The Temple in man's heart is the thing that matters with God, and not the Temple seen by men.

The preacher urged his hearers to do something to perpetuate one's name or personality.

The sermon concluded with a stirring appeal to our part, even if it be but a preparation for another's work and success. It was not David's temple but Solomon's that was known to fame. David's was Solomon's temple possible. The Old Testament prophets, and preachers prepared the way for Christ. The ancient chronicles made it possible for Shakespeare to delight the world with his tragedies, his dramas and his songs. Marconi at Dundee, gave tribute to whom tribute is due in singing the praises of the unknown scientist who had been a pioneer in the field of wireless telegraph. The masterful address concluded with a quotation of Tennyson's poem on "Work."

In the evening the sermon was based on Psalm 137: 5 and 6. "If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning; if I do not remember thee, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth; if I prefer not Jerusalem above my chief joy." At first sight, without reference to context, this looks like the ardor of local patriotism that burns on the lips of a Jerusalem Jew as he looks upon his beloved city of splendid towers and strong fortifications. But on second thought, and with reference to the experiences of men, such lofty utterance does not spring from those at ease, cradled in luxury and dwelling in security. It sounds rather like the noble utterance of the patriot in times succeeding periods of stress and strain. It is the language engendered in strife and in the mountains, rather than in peace and on the plains. On closer view, and with reference to the context, we find that these are the words of the Babylon Exile, who in the city of his captivity, with its wealth and its ease, has maintained through the years a passionate love and allegiance to the Jerusalem of his race.

And is it not true that with us some of our noblest thoughts and aspirations have been born in the captivity of our Babylon! Bunyan, from the Babylon of Bedford jail, wrote, "Pilgrim's Progress," of imperishable fame. Milton, from the Babylon of his blindness, gave to the world the masterpieces of Paradise Regained; Lincoln, from the Babylon of Civil War, evolved ideas, plans and laws which welded various warring states into a great nation, Livingstone, Stanley and Moffatt, from the Babylon of darkest Africa, laid foundations for the Africa of to-day. Helen Keller from the dual Babylon of deafness and blindness, gave to the world ideas in song and story which shall ever make us richer.

Over the Babylon Jew of the captivity a rush of emotion sweeps, and he breaks into a passion of vowed loyalty to the mother city. He has Jerusalem written on his heart. It is noteworthy that her remembrance was the exile's crown of sorrow; it now becomes the apex of the singer's joy. N private occasion for gladness so moves the depths of a soul, written with the noble and ennobling love of the city of God, as does its prosperity. The so-called citizens of the true city of God should have so tepid an interest in its welfare!

Love for God's city and its welfare, is the real foundation to the noblest patriotism. The speaker enlarged upon this point and showed that the worthy patriotism of the British race for British customs and institutions was born of God. Love of the City of Jerusalem, the religion of God, saved one from a prejudiced social outlook, and a cynicism which dried up the sources of being. Finally, the love for God's Kingdom and God's Law made for personal salvation. It prevented the exile Jew from falling into the degradations of Babylon. So today it will make for personal salvation. This point was strikingly illustrated in the quotation of an hitherto unpublished poem of Lance-Corporal Joseph W. Lee, of the 4th Battalion, entitled "Neuve Chapelle."

On Monday evening the ladies of the congregation served tea from 6 to 8 o'clock in the school-room, which was handsomely decorated for the occasion, the prevailing color yellow, for the golden occasion. The attendance was quite large, and the menu fully sustained the good reputation of Zion's ladies in this regard. After the supper a programme was given in the church. There was music by the choir, interspersed with addresses by the local clergymen. Rev. Mr. Monds, in bringing the greetings of St. Andrew's, made a very happy speech, and emphasized his remarks by presenting Rev. Mr. Dobson, the pastor of Zion, with a handsome ebony cane around which was a band of gold neatly inscribed with the words "From the members of St. Andrew's Session," an earnest of the hearty goodwill existing between the two sessions and the pastors. It was a most graceful episode, and was feelingly acknowledged by the recipient, who referred in kindly terms to the friendly good feeling shown last summer when for five months there were united services between the two congregations. Rev. Mr. Forsythe brought the greetings of the Baptist people and Rev. Mr. Lawson those of the Methodist church. There were solos by Miss Queen Allen, Mr. Beresford and Miss Jessie Simpson, the latter being accompanied by a cello obligato. But the feature of the evening was an address by Rev. N. McEachern, of Smiths Falls, the new pastor of Westminster church, who for three years or more was a chaplain with the army in France. He described most vividly the experiences of the allied army during the last year of the war, telling of the retreat of the spring months and the discouragements of the soldiers, with the awful losses of life and material, until the British premier by his foresight and good judgment was the means of having the allied forces placed under one command, and Marshal Foch, who the speaker described as the world's greatest general, became chief, and this with the advent of the American army at the opportune moment turned the tables. The speaker paid the highest compliment to the Canadian forces, who really became the heroes of the war, and for their splendid valor they were selected by the generalissimo for the arrow-head of his advance, and never failed in their objective. The address was interesting and thrilling throughout, although told dispassionately and without any attempt at heroics and at the close the audience expressed their deep appreciation by prolonged applause.

The services throughout were as a season of refreshing and a great success in every respect.

The music on Sunday morning by the choir, under the leadership of Mr. J. W. Given was of a high order. The soloists of the day were Miss Simpson, Miss Queen Allen, Mr. Beresford and Dr. McEwen.

An effort was made to mark the occasion by a contribution of $2500 to the building fund. This was exceeded by $700, and on the plate in cash was contributed $1775. The ladies realized in addition by their tea $165.

Fell 16,000 Feet in Aeroplane

Flight-Lieut. Clyde Malloch of Arrprior has had the miraculous experience of falling 16,000 feet and still living to tell the tale. On July 28th, 1917, Lieut. Malloch's machine and two others all carrying a pilot, an observer and two machine guns, set out to bomb the enemy lines near Courtrai, about 60 miles from their base near St. Omar. They each carried 12 twenty-pound bombs and used them effectively when at an altitude of 16,000 feet, were attacked by a swarm of enemy planes of the one-man two-gun type. Against such odds the fight meant, of course, disaster. A bullet smashed the tail of the machine in which Lieut. Malloch was observer; the rudder was broken and trailing, the machine at once began a nose dive to earth, turning round and round in spiral fashion with an enemy plane following and using its guns all the time. As the machine fell it developed terrific momentum, yet the pilot and observer remained conscious until within about 5,000 feet from earth the rest is a blank. Everyone of the men in the three machines were killed except Lieut. Malloch—his injuries consisting of a bullet hole in the right foot and a fractured skull: on his left temple is a scar that will last as long as life lasts. He fell behind the enemy lines and was at once picked up and given hospital treatment. When he regained consciousness he was on a German hospital train and travelled by Brussels, Aix la Chapelle and Cologne to Munster, one of the great prison camps of Germany: from there he was taken to a hospital prison for officers near Hanover where he remained until the close of hostilities. He received excellent medical attention and he has no complaint of treatment he received as a prisoner, but this he says was, unfortunately, not so of the treatment accorded the prisoners who were privates or non-coms.

Defalter Fined $300

A squad of Dominion policemen made a clever arrest near Inkerman, of Alexander Hurley, a young farmer charged with being a defaulter, under the Military Service Act. The story is Hurley evaded Military Service under one pretext and another, and in the eyes of the law has been a deserter for some time. It is said that he has done considerable talking about his refusal to serve and boasted that he could not be arrested. One or two attempts had been made to get him, but he evaded his would-be captors and up to last Wednesday went free. Sergeant Simpson of the Dominion Police went after him then and got him. About eleven o'clock in the forenoon a squad of Dominion Police surrounded Hurley's home and Sergeant Simpson rapped on the door and asked for his man. He was told by a woman in the house that Hurley was at a neighbor's home cutting wood, and directed the Sergeant's attention to the place. Meantime Hurley was climbing out of a window in the rear of the house, only to drop into the arms of a pair of sturdy policemen. He was brought to Smiths Falls and tried by Police Magistrate Sparham and fined $300.00 and costs.—Rideau Record.

STERN REMINDERS OF RHEUMATISM

Gold or Wet Weather May Start the Pains, But the Trouble is in the Blood

Every rheumatic sufferer should realize that rheumatism is rooted in the blood and can only be cured by a treatment that will cleanse the blood of the rheumatic poisons. The old time belief that rheumatism was caused by cold, damp weather, is now exploded. Such weather conditions may start the aches and pains, but is not the real cause. Liniments and outward applications may give temporary relief, but cannot cure the trouble, because they do not reach its source in the blood. The sufferer from rheumatism who experiments with outward applications is only wasting valuable time and good money in depending upon such treatment, the trouble still remains; and it is all the time becoming more firmly rooted—harder to cure when the proper treatment is applied. Treat this disease through the blood and you will soon be rid of the pains and tortures. As a cure for rheumatism Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are unequalled. They act directly on the impure, weak blood; they purify and strengthen it, and so root out the cause of rheumatism. Mr. D. Lewis, postmaster at Escumac, N.B., says: "I was attacked with rheumatism, which settled in my elbow, shoulder and knee joints, and at times caused me great suffering. The trouble was particularly severe last spring and I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. After taking the pills for some time the rheumatic pains and stiffness in the joints disappeared and I have not since had any return of the trouble."

If you are suffering from rheumatism, or any trouble due to poor blood and weak nerves, you will find a cure in a fair use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. You can procure these pills through any medicine dealer, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Defalter Fined $300

A squad of Dominion policemen made a clever arrest near Inkerman, of Alexander Hurley, a young farmer charged with being a defaulter, under the Military Service Act. The story is Hurley evaded Military Service under one pretext and another, and in the eyes of the law has been a deserter for some time. It is said that he has done considerable talking about his refusal to serve and boasted that he could not be arrested. One or two attempts had been made to get him, but he evaded his would-be captors and up to last Wednesday went free. Sergeant Simpson of the Dominion Police went after him then and got him. About eleven o'clock in the forenoon a squad of Dominion Police surrounded Hurley's home and Sergeant Simpson rapped on the door and asked for his man. He was told by a woman in the house that Hurley was at a neighbor's home cutting wood, and directed the Sergeant's attention to the place. Meantime Hurley was climbing out of a window in the rear of the house, only to drop into the arms of a pair of sturdy policemen. He was brought to Smiths Falls and tried by Police Magistrate Sparham and fined $300.00 and costs.—Rideau Record.
