

INTERMEDIATE OFFICIALS TO RESIGN AT ONCE

Lightning Does Damage In London and Middlesex

TALK OF CIVIC STRIKE AROUSES MAYOR WENGE TO DEMAND ACTION NOW

Mayor Invites Civic Employees Dissatisfied With Salaries To Resign at Once If That Is Their Desire—City Treasurer Recommends Increases.

ALDERMAN COLBERT SCORES "SURVEYS"

Now is the time for Assessment Commissioner H. J. Bennett or any member of his staff to tender their resignations if they feel that they are not being fairly dealt with in the matter of remuneration.

So declares Mayor George Wenge in a letter to the press today, in which he again defends his salary recommendations for 1923.

His worship insists that there is no justifiable cause for complaint and submits that no member of the city hall staff was overlooked in consideration at the recent salary caucus.

Mayor Wenge also takes occasion to point out that before the election he promised to undertake certain things if the people would elect councillors pledged to his platform.

"The people did fairly well," he says, "but they did make a few selections who have proved stumbling blocks in the advancement of the city. And at a later date I want them as I view them from the mayor's chair."

In the face of the pronouncement, Ald. John Colbert, Ward Three, demands an "equalization of wages at the city hall," charging today that "there are those employed there who are not getting sufficient to live on."

"I do not think that the heads of the departments are getting too much for their services," Ald. Colbert declared, "but I do say that when compared with the under-paid employees, they are getting too much. There should be an equalization, and the wages of the latter should be elevated in comparison."

Ald. Colbert states quite clearly that he is going to battle along this line at future meetings when the city hall wage issue is under consideration. "Every person at the city hall is a necessity," he declared, "the citizens need the services of the city. If they didn't they wouldn't have them. Then they should be willing to pay them a fair and decent wage."

Scores the Surveys.
Ald. Colbert said incidentally that each money as will have to be expended for the police and fire department surveys now in progress, characterizing the latter manoeuvres as non-essential—at least, in the manner in which they are being undertaken. He declares that the councillors do not have to import outside experts to tell them that a new fire hall or a new police station is required.

"We should never have gone into this venture," Ald. Colbert asserted, "and I condemned the move at the time. I can tell the people myself, without the aid of outsiders, that we need a new police station and a new central fire hall, and a good many other things. The council realized this long ago, but it was a question of where the funds were coming from, and whether the people were willing to stand the expenditure at the time."

It is the duty of the city councillors to gauge the wages and salaries, and not the department heads argues Ald. Drake, another Ward 3 representative, who states that he can't understand "what the different officials have to do with the wages paid them in other offices."

"Let each official send in a recommendation for his own employees," Ald. Drake urged today, adding that he also favored a "general equalization of the pay roll to favor the under-paid clerks."

"What right has the city treasurer to be saying what shall be paid in the assessment office?" he questions. "Or for the city clerk to say what shall be paid in the city treasurer's office, and so on. Let each of them look after their own office, and the council will do the rest."

"I think Mayor Wenge perpetrated a grave error when he called that salary caucus the other night. It was a big mistake in my opinion. This is 1923 all right, but if that salary caucus had been held, I don't want to see any more of it like that."

The Mayor's Letter.

BRING CITY SALARIES DOWN TO $2,600 LEVEL
Ald. Drake's Opinion on the Assessment Commissioner's Salary Dispute.

In a brief, snappy interview (unsigned) with The Advertiser late this afternoon, Ald. Drake gave as his opinion that "if the city officials wanted Assessment Commissioner Bennett to work for $2,600 a year, they should be willing to bring down their salaries in proportion."

Ald. Drake made it clear that he does not include the city engineer in this general statement.

RACING PAPERS ON SALE DESPITE PROVINCIAL LAW

Responsibility of Enforcement Rests With Crown Attorneys and Police.

NICKLE WON'T TALK

Daily Papers Will Contain the Results Without Prices Horses Pay.

Special to The Advertiser.

Toronto, July 16.—Racing papers and newspapers containing betting odds and racing information are today being sold on the streets and in news stands of Toronto seemingly in defiance of federal and provincial law.

It was said today at the Toronto branch of the Dominion Customs and Excise Department that as yet no instructions have been received with regard to racing papers, or journals containing racing news that come into Canada from the U. S. for the time being therefore such papers will be allowed entry in the Dominion, it is thought, however, that they will be subject to seizure and instructions are expected at any time, giving authority to confiscate all sheets with racing news in such instructions may come from Ottawa by wire at any time.

The postmaster of Toronto said that no instructions have been received in regard to the forwarding of racing papers through the mails and that therefore for the present such papers will be transmitted by post.

Should the Province of Ontario want to suppress the mailing of racing journals, and the Dominion not object to such matter going through the mails, an agreement would have to be reached between the province and the Dominion, he said.

The federal racing news bill was thrown out by the senate, by an amendment was retained which makes it illegal to import into Canada any paper "which is not a newspaper published in good faith mainly for the purpose of supplying news and comment," but, on the contrary, primarily and solely intended to facilitate betting.

Stand Made Clear.
It was made clear in the discussions in the senate that this aimed directly at such purely racing papers containing selections, odds and past performances.

The Advertiser has before it two of such papers purchased today at the corner of King and Yonge streets. They are very well known and have a wide circulation. Exhibit A, as it may be called, is a statistical compilation of a scientific or quasi-scientific nature. There

Thames Park Bathing Pool Only One Board Can Close

Children Used Birkett's Flats and Grosvenor Street Pools on Sunday, But Supervisors Were Absent.

"All we can do in the matter is to close the swimming pool at Thames Park playgrounds; we have no jurisdiction over the river, you know," said Jared Vining, chairman of the public utilities commission, to The Advertiser in discussing the present situation. Yesterday there was a gale on the gates into the Thames Park pool and a policeman in all the glory of his blue to keep the children out, while the other pools under the care of the commission in the river were not guarded in any way and the children were in swimming all alone, without any supervisor to look after them.

DAMAGE AND GAIN ABOUT OFFSET IN ELECTRIC STORM

Fire in R. M. Brisco's Store in Saturday Night's Lightning.

CROPS BLOWN DOWN

Damage in Country About Offset by the Value of Rain.

The violent thunderstorms which visited London during the week-end caused considerable damage both in the city and the surrounding countryside.

The storm which struck London Saturday night was responsible for a serious fire at the sporting goods store of R. M. Brisco, Dundas street, at 11:25.

The upper floor of the store, where the bulk of the stock is stored, was badly burned as a result of a flash of lightning, which entered an open window facing Dundas street. The bolt grounded through the rheostat of a battery-charging installation, bursting this and filling the upper rooms with flame, which burned the stock and equipment. That the fire department worked quickly and well can be seen in the fact that, although the entire stock on this floor is badly scorched, nothing but the woodwork where the bolt entered was completely burned.

Mr. Brisco said, in speaking of his loss: "When I arrived at the fire I was surprised that the firemen had things so well in hand, as I reached the store twenty minutes after the lightning struck the building. They had spread their tarpaulins over the stock, and even the display window was protected from smoke and water. I have nothing but praise for Chief Aitken and his men. Had it not been for their promptness and good sense my loss would have been at least 25 per cent greater."

The loss is not estimated as yet, but Mr. Brisco says it will run over $4,000 to stock and building. The entire loss is fully covered by insurance.

EXPECT RECOGNITION OF MEXICO BY AMERICA

Satisfactory Agreement Looked For as Result of Mexico City Conference.

Special to The Advertiser.
Mexico City, July 16.—The "Recognition of Mexico" conference began today what is believed to be its last week, with the end in sight.

Satisfactory agreement before Saturday is predicted, and the American delegates, Warren and Payne, plan to leave to report to Washington regarding their success.

Recognition of Mexico by the United States may follow—probably within a year. The conference has been under way nine full weeks, during which time the United States delegates have laid before the Mexican conferees the objectionable points from the American point of view. A particular bone of contention has been the retroactive aspect of article 27, which provides for ownership of the government of oils and minerals.

The results of the conversations, which have been for the most part very frank, are to be laid before Secretary of State Hughes.

URGENT FARMERS' STRIKE TO RAISE WHEAT PRICE

U. S. Producers Consider Action at Meeting Called in Wichita.

Wichita, Kan., July 16.—Concerted action by farmers to bolster up the price of wheat was sought here today at a conference of representatives of five hard wheat producing states.

REMOVE TRACK FROM RAILROAD NEAR SYDNEY MINE

Dastardly Deed by Unknown Persons Discovered as Express Comes Along.

TROOPS PATROL LINE

Police Arrest Young Lad For Putting Iron Into Rail Switch.

Canadian Press Despatch.
Sydney, N.S., July 16.—A rail was removed from the Sydney and Louisburg Railway near Dominion No. 1 during the night by persons unknown. The removal was discovered before the Sydney to Louisburg express, a passenger train, came along, and the train hands put it back into place. The line from Glace Bay to Sydney is being patrolled by troops.

As the coal company plans continuous movement of coal from the pile at No. 2 mine, interference with the railway is looked to as one of the most serious of possible developments in the strike situation.

Work commenced on the restoring of No. 5 blast furnace and four open hearth furnaces at the steel plant today.

Archie McInnes, a 16-year-old boy, was arrested by civil police officers near Dominion No. 1 while in the act, the police said, of putting iron into a switch of the Sydney and Louisburg Railway. He was turned over to the provincial police. The arrest was made near where a rail was removed during the night.

MAYOR RESENTS CHARGE THAT HE IS INTERFERING

Answers Suggestion From City Clergyman as to Thames Park Swimming Pool.

SUBMIT PETITION

Promises He Will Continue His Effort To Have the Pool Opened.

It is the Ministerial Alliance, rather than the mayor, who has been interfering, in the opinion of Mayor Wenge today, incidentally replying the suggestion from Rev. George T. Watts, pastor of the Wellington Street Methodist Church, that he "confine the activities of his high office to the commercial and financial duties of the city, leaving the Ministerial Alliance to conduct its work as it sees fit."

Mayor Wenge directs the attention of the members of the Ministerial Alliance that he is a member of the Public Utilities Commission and that an issue involving the use of the city's bathing pools on Sunday is a question in which he retains every right to interest himself in by virtue of his "high office," as the elected mayor of this city.

He calls attention of the Ministerial Alliance also to the fact that it was the members of that organization who first approached the members of the public utilities commission (excepting himself), and brought upon them sufficient pressure to again deny the use of the pools to the children of ratepayers of this city.

"It is my own opinion that the question will be brought to a 'show-down' at a special session of the public utilities commission within a day or two. He fixed a meeting for Saturday last, but Commissioner Pocock, Vining and Webster stated that they could not be in attendance. His worship will attend, and all the necessary legal requirements will be met—24 hours' notice, etc."

At this session, Mayor Wenge, as a member of the commission, will submit, at the request of representative ratepayers, a petition signed by several thousand of the city's citizens, asking that the pools remain open on Sunday.

Several petitions will be submitted in fact. One was handed to the mayor this morning and shown to The Advertiser, with more than 1,400 names of bona fide taxpayers affixed. No names of minors were attached, and the signatures were secured, the mayor explained, at the C. N. R. carshops and on the streets throughout Ward 3.

PRESS OF BRITAIN DECRIES POINCARE SPEECH AT SENLIS

French Premier Creates a Bad Impression by Address on Reparations.

SLAMS DOOR SHUT

Associated Press Despatch.
London, July 16.—A bad impression here was made by Premier Poincare of France in the address he delivered at Senlis yesterday, which is generally regarded as an indirect reply to the outline of Great Britain's reparations policy made by Prime Minister Baldwin in the commons last Thursday.

Must Maintain Entente.
The only favorable comment in this morning's papers is made by the Morning Post, which favors maintenance of the entente at all costs. It declares that the only policy promising satisfactory results for Great Britain is whole-hearted co-operation with France to force Germany to pay. The Daily Mail, another pro-French paper, does not comment.

The Times thinks that M. Poincare's speech was unfortunate and protests his assumption that Great Britain no longer supports the treaty of Versailles, declaring that this government differs only from France in selecting the best method of settling the treaty.

The Daily News fears there is little hope that France will receive the British proposals favorably, but deprecates an attitude of despair. The Daily Express regards the speech as putting an end to "Great Britain's high hopes."

The Daily Chronicle treats the speech as finally slamming the door against Great Britain's ally. It charges that France is seeking nobody's interests but her own.

Withdraw All Support.
The Daily Herald, the Labor organ, demands that Great Britain withdraw all support from France, force Italy and Belgium to pay her debts, press France to pay hers, and urge the United States to join an international conference to decide the amount of Germany's payment, abandoning, however, any claim to the British share.

The Daily Telegraph's diplomatic correspondent advises against treating the speech as a definite and comprehensive answer to Premier Baldwin.

KING, QUEEN RECEIVE FAMOUS CLAN CHIEFS

Take Up Residence in Holyrood Palace in Edinburgh.

London, July 16.—King George and Queen Mary paid a royal visit to Scotland last week, taking up their residence in the famous Holyrood Palace in Edinburgh.

The leaders of Scotland's famous clans gathered in the city for the occasion and attended one of the courts to be received by the king and the queen.

The strictest etiquette is observed at these courts, the clan leaders insisting upon their rights of precedence. Out of respect to the Scottish lineage of the new Duchess of York, she and the duke accompanied the monarchs, appearing with their majesties on all occasions.

SEEKS ENLIGHTENMENT ON FUNNY KIND OF SNAKE
If you saw a snake with a gray-green top and a wonderful shade of the brightest orange on the belly, what would you call it? This is the question of an old resident of Harrogate, who came into the office this morning. He found the snake in the hay field, and, pursuing it with the proverbial hayfork, brought its earthly career to an abrupt termination.

He says the snake was about fifteen inches long. The belly was quite flat, and the back divided into little ridges. Though living in the district for nearly sixty years, he has never seen a snake like this one, and wants to know just what kind of reptile it was that came wandering on to his farm. Can any zoologist tell him?

Tire Explodes Crushing Skull

Special to The Advertiser.
Ingersoll, July 15.—Joseph Peters of Toronto, incurred a fractured skull yesterday about noon in the village of Thamesford when an automobile tire which he was picking up preparatory to placing in the rack at the rear of his car, exploded in some unaccountable manner.

Peters had a blowout on the road near the village and stopped at a garage to have the tire repaired. After the tire was again inflated he stopped to pick it up when a sudden report was heard and the rim and tire flew to pieces in his hands. A fragment of the metal rim struck him on the head, crushing a large section of the skull. He was rushed to the hospital here, and an operation performed at once to relieve the pressure. He is conscious today but his condition is regarded as extremely critical.

FINES M. GOOTSON $5 FOR ABUSIVE LANGUAGE
Alice Harris complains 'Accused Hit Her and Called Her Names.'

Once more Meyers Gootson made his appearance in police court, and pleaded not guilty, this time to a charge of using insulting and abusive language against a girl.

Alice Harris, who laid the complaint, told the court that Gootson had come into a store where she was working and had hit her and called her profane names. Her story was substantiated by Laura Harris, who was present at the time the offense occurred.

Gootson, in the box, denied the girl's story, and said that he did not either hit or swear at her. Deputy Magistrate Gladman fined him $5 and costs.

As police court adjourned, Gootson was waiting for the magistrate and told him he wished to lay an information against the girl for assaulting his daughter.

Mary Burbeck, charged with having liquor in a place other than a private dwelling, appeared this morning and was remanded until tomorrow, to give her a chance to refresh her memory and tell the court where she purchased the liquor. She said that she had bought a bottle on Friday from some man. A prescription which she claimed she had a month ago will also be investigated. An interpreter was used to tell the woman of the charge laid against her, she claiming that she could not speak English.

RACING PAPERS ON SALE DESPITE NEW RULING

Now then, I have made every effort, have certainly spent the most of my time, in civic matters, and can assure you that I consider the act to be a people, and not of special benefit to the few or selected (this is one of the reasons why the mayor has been condemned by some). That was my promise to you, and that is what I intend to carry out to the end of my term. I have no objection to the obstructionists in the council, which, thanks to the wisdom of the electors, they are in the minority. I have no objection to the obstructionists in the council, which, thanks to the wisdom of the electors, they are in the minority.

Much has been said in the last few days regarding the city hall salaries, and some of the obstructionists in the council are trying to use this as a lever on the mayor, but so far without success.

The situation is just this: When the estimates were struck, about $5,000 was included in them for information bill, which takes effect today. This declares it illegal to publish "tips, selections, choices, odds, winning money prices, prices paid to winners, pari-mutuel payments." As a result, Ontario daily papers today will contain entries and results without prices. It is said, however, to be legal to mention in a certain horse was favorite, or second choice, etc.

Rests With Police.
According to officials in the attorney-general's department, the act respecting the publication of betting information is beyond doubt in force today as proclaimed. The responsibility of enforcement, however, rests with the regular machinery of the province as represented by crown attorneys and police forces. If papers are coming into the province carrying information such as tips, odds, selections, winning money prices, etc., anyone who wishes to do so may lay a charge against the person who publishes the information, and it will be the duty of the crown officials of Toronto or any other municipality to prosecute in the regular way.

It was pointed out to officers of the attorney-general's department that the United States papers came into Toronto this morning carrying information which is prohibited under the act. The answer was that it was for the crown attorney and the police department of this city to say what action will be taken. The Advertiser sought an interview on the subject with Mr. W. F. Nickle, K.C., who along with other members of the new cabinet, will be sworn into office this afternoon. Mr. Nickle was found in the company of the attorney-general, who has been Mr. W. E. Roney.

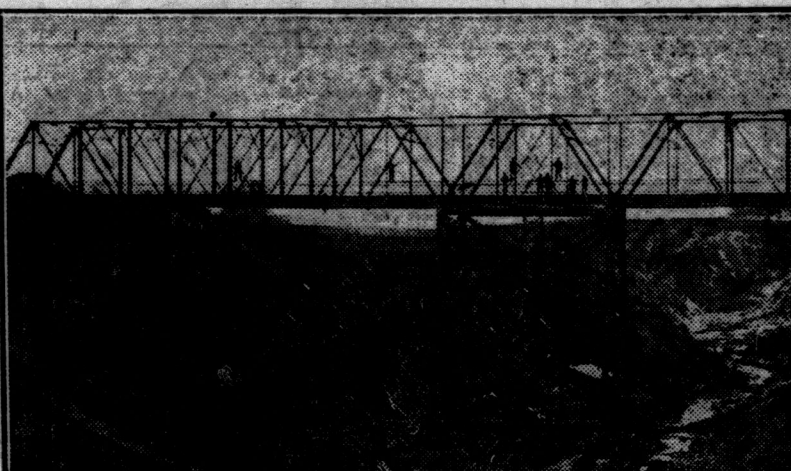

They were both coming out of the attorney-general's office and the best of good humor seemed to prevail between the two. The outgoing and incoming ministers. The Kingston member was being introduced to the crown attorney, and the former chief lieutenant in the U. F. O. government was doing the courtesies. Mr. Nickle smiled graciously, but gave serious and doubtful, according to "Why, you better ask the attorney-general," said Mr. Nickle, catching his breath.

"Well, you will be attorney-general in a few hours."

"But those few hours have not passed yet," Mr. Roney is here," he replied laughing.

"Yes, but this is the 16th, the day when the new act begins to operate, you will be attorney-general, and when?"

"I'm sorry," he answered, "but it is too soon for me to say."

TALK OF CIVIC STRIKE AROUSSES MAYOR VENICE TO DEMAND ACTION NOW

concerning the civic administration in which the mayor has been both praised and condemned, in the same issue, I think that, as mayor, it is only my duty to issue a statement over my signature.

First of all, the citizens of London elected me last December as the chief magistrate for the year 1923, and by the large majority that was given me I took it for granted that they wanted me to carry out my platform, which was printed in the daily press.

At the various meetings, and in my printed platform, I repeatedly stated that I would carry out this program, provided the citizens in the different wards would elect the aldermen who were in favor of this platform; and right here I want to say to the electors that they did fairly well, but made a few selections that have been, in my estimation as a businessman, stumbling blocks toward the advancement of our city, and not at all times working in the best interests of the city. But the majority of aldermen that you have selected are working for the best interests of the city as a whole.

Will Name Block.
Now then, I have made every effort, have certainly spent the most of my time, in civic matters, and can assure you that I consider the act to be a people, and not of special benefit to the few or selected (this is one of the reasons why the mayor has been condemned by some). That was my promise to you, and that is what I intend to carry out to the end of my term. I have no objection to the obstructionists in the council, which, thanks to the wisdom of the electors, they are in the minority. I have no objection to the obstructionists in the council, which, thanks to the wisdom of the electors, they are in the minority.

Much has been said in the last few days regarding the city hall salaries, and some of the obstructionists in the council are trying to use this as a lever on the mayor, but so far without success.

The situation is just this: When the estimates were struck, about $5,000 was included in them for information bill, which takes effect today. This declares it illegal to publish "tips, selections, choices, odds, winning money prices, prices paid to winners, pari-mutuel payments." As a result, Ontario daily papers today will contain entries and results without prices. It is said, however, to be legal to mention in a certain horse was favorite, or second choice, etc.

Rests With Police.
According to officials in the attorney-general's department, the act respecting the publication of betting information is beyond doubt in force today as proclaimed. The responsibility of enforcement, however, rests with the regular machinery of the province as represented by crown attorneys and police forces. If papers are coming into the province carrying information such as tips, odds, selections, winning money prices, etc., anyone who wishes to do so may lay a charge against the person who publishes the information, and it will be the duty of the crown officials of Toronto or any other municipality to prosecute in the regular way.

It was pointed out to officers of the attorney-general's department that the United States papers came into Toronto this morning carrying information which is prohibited under the act. The answer was that it was for the crown attorney and the police department of this city to say what action will be taken. The Advertiser sought an interview on the subject with Mr. W. F. Nickle, K.C., who along with other members of the new cabinet, will be sworn into office this afternoon. Mr. Nickle was found in the company of the attorney-general, who has been Mr. W. E. Roney.

They were both coming out of the attorney-general's office and the best of good humor seemed to prevail between the two. The outgoing and incoming ministers. The Kingston member was being introduced to the crown attorney, and the former chief lieutenant in the U. F. O. government was doing the courtesies. Mr. Nickle smiled graciously, but gave serious and doubtful, according to "Why, you better ask the attorney-general," said Mr. Nickle, catching his breath.

"Well, you will be attorney-general in a few hours."

"But those few hours have not passed yet," Mr. Roney is here," he replied laughing.

"Yes, but this is the 16th, the day when the new act begins to operate, you will be attorney-general, and when?"

"I'm sorry," he answered, "but it is too soon for me to say."

REPORT FOOD PRICES STILL ON DOWN GRADE
Retail Quotations Decline, While Wholesale One Remains Steady.

Canadian Press Despatch.
Ottawa, July 16.—The decline in average retail prices of food, which began in April continued, the figures for June being lower than for May, owing chiefly to a seasonal fall in the prices of dairy products. The average cost of a list of 23 staple foods in terms of the average prices in some 60 cities was $10.23 at the beginning of June, as compared with $11.16 for June 1921; $16.92 for June, 1920 (the peak); and $7.49 for June, 1914.

Wholesale prices, the general level was little changed, increases in some articles being offset by decreases in others, as indicated by index numbers calculated by various authorities.

The world's total wool production at the present time approximately 2,000,000,000 pounds annually.

SCENE OF THIS MORNING'S FIRE.
Damage estimated at $4,000 was done by fire in the fruit and ice cream store in the Majestic Theatre building early this morning. The blaze, which originated in the basement, was said to have started from spontaneous combustion.

ICE CREAM STORE WRECKED WHEN FIRE BREAKS OUT

Early Morning Blaze in the Majestic Building Gives Firemen Battle.

FOYER DISCOLORED

A fire which gutted the basement of the Majestic Ice Cream Parlor in the Majestic Theatre Building on Dundas street, and wrecked the premises occupied by the ice cream parlor, gave the fire department a work-out in the small hours of the morning.

The alarm was turned in at 2:55 this morning, and the crew and equipment from Central fire hall were on hand in less than two minutes.

Just before the firemen reached the scene of the fire, the flames and heat which had been pent up in the basement burst open a door at the rear of the store, and the store filled with smoke and gas, which blew out the large plate glass window in the front of the shop.

Smoke is Dense.
The fire, which started in the basement, burned fiercely, consuming a large quantity of orange crates and excelsior, which gave rise to the dense cloud of smoke and gas. The firemen had to work in the dark, and the flames were subdued in twenty minutes, and the danger to the theatre and surrounding buildings was removed.

The damage was confined largely to that caused by smoke and water. The only portion of the building destroyed being the wooden stairway to the basement, the main staircase at the rear of the store, and the broken plate glass window.

For the short time which the fire burned, the damage is unusually large. The whole interior of the store is covered in soot, and the fixtures and other equipment of the store are ruined, as well as the stock of candy and confectionery.

Found Small Blaze.
Fire Chief Aitken says: "For a small blaze, that was the means, we have had for a long time. The smoke and flames which kept bursting up from the cellar hindered us in getting to the root of the trouble. Once we got into the basement, there was nothing to it for the fire only included the boxes and refuse in the cellar and the stairway."

When questioned as to what he considered the cause of the fire, he said: "I can't say. Very likely it was caused by spontaneous combustion, as there seemed to be a lot of rubbish in the basement, and fire started up from the rubbish when rags and paper stand in corners, and heat up through dampness and fermentation."

The amount of damage cannot be estimated, until the stock is checked over, but a rough estimate by those who have the work in hand place it at between $2,000 and $3,000.

It is understood that both stock and buildings are insured. The Majestic Theatre trust, however, is not insured, and the discolored of the tiled foyer, from which a door leads into the candy shop.

The building is the property of the duffield estate.

WOULD HAVE CITY HALL ON THE MARKET SQUARE
Mel. Cater and Allan Towse Submit Scheme to the Mayor.

Another new city hall proposal has been submitted to Mayor Wenige. Mel Cater and Allan Towse unfolded a scheme to place the city hall in the mayor's office. The suggestion is that the new building be placed on the market square. The plan would be to build a second floor while the first floor would be open for market purposes.

From the mayor's report of the proposal, it would seem that the space would be available for traffic of all description. Wagons or cars could be driven in, he states, in which they conduct things, and it would have to be approved first by the people.

ATTORNEY HAS NO WORD OF RETURN OF MURRELL
J. C. Elliott Reports He Has as Yet Received No Word.

Crown Attorney J. C. Elliott is still in the dark as far as the return of Sidney Murrell to this city is concerned.

Elliott told The Advertiser that he had received no further information regarding the extradition of the man who is wanted here on a charge of murder and bank robbery, and who was arrested in California some weeks ago, although the warrant for his arrest and return here is in the hands of the British consul in San Francisco.

That Murrell's return is imminent is evidenced by the fact that Governor Eyrton Dawson of the county jail has returned from a week's holiday, although he was entitled to two days. The governor, however, stated that he would try to arrange to have them before Murrell was brought back in order that he might personally assume the responsibility for his safekeeping in the jail from which he escaped two years ago.

HELD AS ASSAILANT OF CONSTABLE MILES

William Poyle Remanded For Alleged Fight on Pegler Street.

William Poyle found a charge of disorderly conduct turn into one of assaulting an officer while in the execution of his duty, this morning, when evidence was given in police court that he had kicked and fought with P. C. Miles, who was endeavoring to arrest him on a charge of being disorderly in a house at 9 Pegler street, Saturday night. The information was ordered laid by Chief Birrell.

According to the evidence of Sergeant Middaugh, he, together with P. C. Miles and Williams, answered a call to the above address where they found a large crowd standing around the house. Asking what the trouble was, they were told it sounded like murder. Ordering the crowd to disperse, the officers entered the house by way of the kitchen and there found Poyle, John Lammpan, and Gordon Coulter, all talking very loudly and profanely. On entering the room, Poyle, who was armed with a knife, attacked Miles who was trying to handcuff him, kicking him on the knee and arm, and trying to throw him from performing his duty. Poyle and Lammpan were under the influence of liquor. Lammpan had on all his clothes off his mother in an attempt to lock her in another room and her screams were what aroused the crowd.

P. C. Miles told the court about Poyle's conduct and was then ordered by Chief Birrell to lay information against him. Williams told about having dispersed the crowd and then helped in the arrest of the three men.

Gordon Coulter, the only one of the trio who pleaded not guilty to the charge of disorderly conduct, stated that he had just entered the house a few minutes before the officers and was preparing to leave when he saw them come in. He had been handcuffed together with the others and brought to the station.

Coulter and Lammpan were each fined $15 and costs or days to be in the workhouse. No sentence was imposed on Poyle on this charge. Deputy Magistrate Gladman remanded him until tomorrow when he will answer the charge of assault.

Thomas H. Legg, 164 High street, was sentenced to seven days in jail and fined $300 and costs or three months, on two separate charges, driving a motor while intoxicated and having liquor in a place other than a private dwelling. He pleaded guilty to both charges and no evidence was introduced, other than two bottles of Gordon gin found in the car. This is the second time Legg has been found guilty on each offence, the other occurring more than three years ago.

Charles Prestwick, who was with Legg at the time, faced the same start when charged with claiming the liquor and admitting the driving of the car, he was fined $25 and costs for being intoxicated.

Selling the Farmers' Produce.

A farmer in Bruce County, talking to The Advertiser, said he hoped the Ontario government would go ahead with a system of co-operative marketing, and that it would have special consideration for the districts away from the city markets.

"Dairy farming is the most consistent performer we have," was his claim, "but the districts that are making a success of this are mostly those that are in a position to get to the markets quickly. There are parts of Bruce where the land is good, and it is good nearly all over, but we are handicapped because there are no cities up our way, and there is no quick market for a great deal of the produce we could produce. There are a number of towns not very far from here, but on account of their size and the fact that people in them grow a great deal of their own garden produce, they have nothing like the purchasing power of some of the smaller cities, and of course are not to be compared with the larger places in this regard. I have two brothers, one of them in Oxford and the other in London Township in Middlesex. They farm quite differently to what I do, and they make more money, and they seem to have something to sell that people close to them want nearly all the time. They seldom have to depend on the bank for ready money, whereas there are certain months in each year when I have to go to the bank to get working capital to carry me along until the regular farm crops can be taken in and sold or fed."

There are other farmers in the outlying portions of Ontario who have had exactly the same experience. They are coming to the point—perhaps slowly in some cases—where they realize that a co-operative effort, whereby they would have access to more and better markets, would enable them to branch out into other lines, this giving them a better chance of having some one or two crops or branches that would be good each and every year. The Ontario government has a good chance to handle this problem. There has been a lot of missionary work done, but the thing will be the carrying of all this effort and thought on to something tangible that will work into a real marketing force for all the farmers, and give those in the farther out districts the advantages now held by those closer to the home markets.

The Salary of Mr. Drury.

Some papers that never lost an opportunity for having a fling at Hon. Mr. Drury when he was premier have taken a parting shot at him for accepting the full amount of salary allowed him for his last year's work.

When he took office he voluntarily cut his allowance from $12,000 to $9,000, on the plea that it was enough.

Undoubtedly Mr. Drury has found that there were heavy demands on the premier of a province such as Ontario. His request for his full salary this year, which is legally his, is quite in order.

The miserable part is that we have heard more about the thousand or so that he has asked for in back pay for this year than the $9,000 he turned over to the province in the previous three years.

The Value of Self-Control.

A Toronto controller struck a Toronto alderman in the eye when they were discussing a municipal golf course. What a pity some men can't remember that their hands were made to cut grass and sift ashes.

A man with a fiery temper has a job on his hands, and that job is himself.

When a man loses his temper he slips back; he is almost certain to defeat the very purpose he has in mind.

Did you ever notice the man in operation who has control of himself even under the most trying circumstances? He sits and listens; he takes abuse if it comes; he may even wear a half smile through it all. He has his mind firmly fixed on a given point, and all the storming and raving of hot-heads is not going to fool him.

That man is generally the one who rises after a very stormy passage, and in a quiet, even way, says: "Now, gentlemen, we are all apt to get a little excited at times, and perhaps to let slip a few things we wouldn't say in our calmer moments, but here is a plan that looks to me to be the best way out." And so on. The thing has happened time and time again, and this cool, collected, thinking individual, who years ago learned perhaps by bitter experience the foolishness of losing control of himself, comes to the rescue in such a way as to save a lot of trouble and at the same time, probably gains his point.

Self-control is a big asset for any man to mark down in the list of his belongings.

Not a Time for Ridicule.

French papers are inclined to treat Premier Baldwin's statement about the Ruhr in everything from caustic comment to ridicule.

The premier's statement hardly permits of this treatment. It came as the culmination of weeks of serious effort to find a way out of the deplorable tangle in Germany and all Europe.

Britain is not proposing to let Germany out of anything in the way of war debts. This was made abundantly plain—so plain that the French cannot ignore it. Premier Baldwin has discussed the whole question on a high plane; he has paid full tribute to the ties that bound Britain to France during the war.

France should be prepared to discuss the case on exactly the same grounds and in precisely the same fair spirit.

They Should Try the Plan.

Discussion is getting down to a common-sense basis in the coal mine area of Nova Scotia, which is the scene of one of the most dangerous strikes Canada has experienced in some time.

Premier Armstrong and those working with him have recommended the Whitley plan, the main idea of which is to bring miners and mine owners together in one camp, instead of leaving them in two hostile groups as they have been for years, with only the connecting link of a wage document.

The extremists in the coal miners' camp will probably not favor the plan, and the pound-of-flesh men in the owners' party will not take kindly to it. Those two facts are about the best reasons that can be advanced as to why it should be proceeded with.

Some of the largest industrial firms in Ontario have tried something along this line, generally referred to as a works council, to which the company appoints representatives, and each department of the factory sends its representative, doing so by a closed ballot. The plan has not been a success in every sense of the word—in fact, no plan yet brought out is perfect; but it has done a very great deal to cut down labor trouble, and give every man in the shop a chance to have his case brought up for discussion. Wages, working conditions, safety devices, and all such matters are brought there and discussed in a frank and fair manner.

From this distance it looks as though the Nova Scotia miners and their employers should try this sort of reasonable discussion. They have been fighting each other long enough.

Seventeen Feet of Whiskers.

A convention in Chicago has brought out a man with whiskers 17 feet long. The convention had combed United States and had almost decided on a man in Eldo, Nevada, who has a set 11 feet 6 inches long. But when word came of the 17-foot whiskers the man with 11 feet was simply put back in the class of the man who shaves every morning.

The one remarkable thing about this man is the reason he gives for letting his whiskers grow. It is this: "To see how long they'd get."

Fortunately there are few people who care to mar their whole existence by entering any such whisker-growing contest.

A well-trimmed beard is an asset to many men of middle or advanced age, but 17 feet of whiskers is a self-inflicted deformity.

Note and Comment.

Some of the road maps on the trip from London to Sarnia speak of passing through "the little village of Lobo." Little, perhaps, but, oh, my!

A Toronto report says three women from that city have left on a 1,500-mile talking tour. We thought it was a 1,500-mile walking tour at first, but confess that the former is much more likely.

The Listowel Banner tells of a picnic party from that town going to Kincardine and having the lunch stolen there. It may be that the little rascals in Kincardine had never tasted salmon sandwiches before.

The grand old customs are still with us. We saw a man rolling a barrel over his own patch to knock the tops down. That trick was hatched out in the same century as they started to turn a barrel of wood ashes into home-made soap.

A man hailing from Ottawa made the mistake of going to sleep on a bench in Thames Park, and the police got him. We thought there had been enough discussion about Thames Park in London to keep even a stranger awake at nights.

After looking over all the statements and conditions that caused the conference on the Near East at Lausanne, it is certain that the Turk has lost nothing by the world war, nor since the world war. Like the henhouse skunk, the nations seem to be afraid to put the boots to him.

Toronto complains that there is lobbying going on at the city hall there in connection with contracts. If the civic officials did not want to be lobbied it would end right there. The fact that lobbyists remain active is an indication that they have struck a claim that looks worth working.

British postal authorities state that of 120,000,000 parcels carried last year 30,000,000 were wrongly addressed or not addressed at all. Tons of letters were never delivered for the same reason. And no doubt there are many people there ready to discuss the stupidity of the postal employees.

Kincardine is welcoming the old boys and girls this week. Her streets are decorated most profusely, and all the might-be Christmas trees in Bruce are finding their way to Kincardine to make the place festive in appearance and attractive in its welcome. Flags, bunting, ensigns—Kincardine has made a real job of it.

Heirs of the Springer estate of Wilmington, Del., are reported to be quite numerous in Canada. We wish them luck, but hope they are not counting on too much. A few years ago the Baker estate heirs were all in shape to spring their claims to vast holdings in Philadelphia, but nothing ever came of it. In requires a mighty strong claim to break in on a big fortune.

Mr. W. L. Bragg in the July Yale Review says: "The atom is composed of electrons and nucleus; the nucleus is, we believe, composed of electrons and protons. Apparently all electrons are identical in their properties, and so are all protons, and it is their association in different numbers and different ways that builds up all the diverse forms of matter." That point has caused many of us a lot of worry, but now it's just as plain as mud.

THE POSITION OF FRANCE.

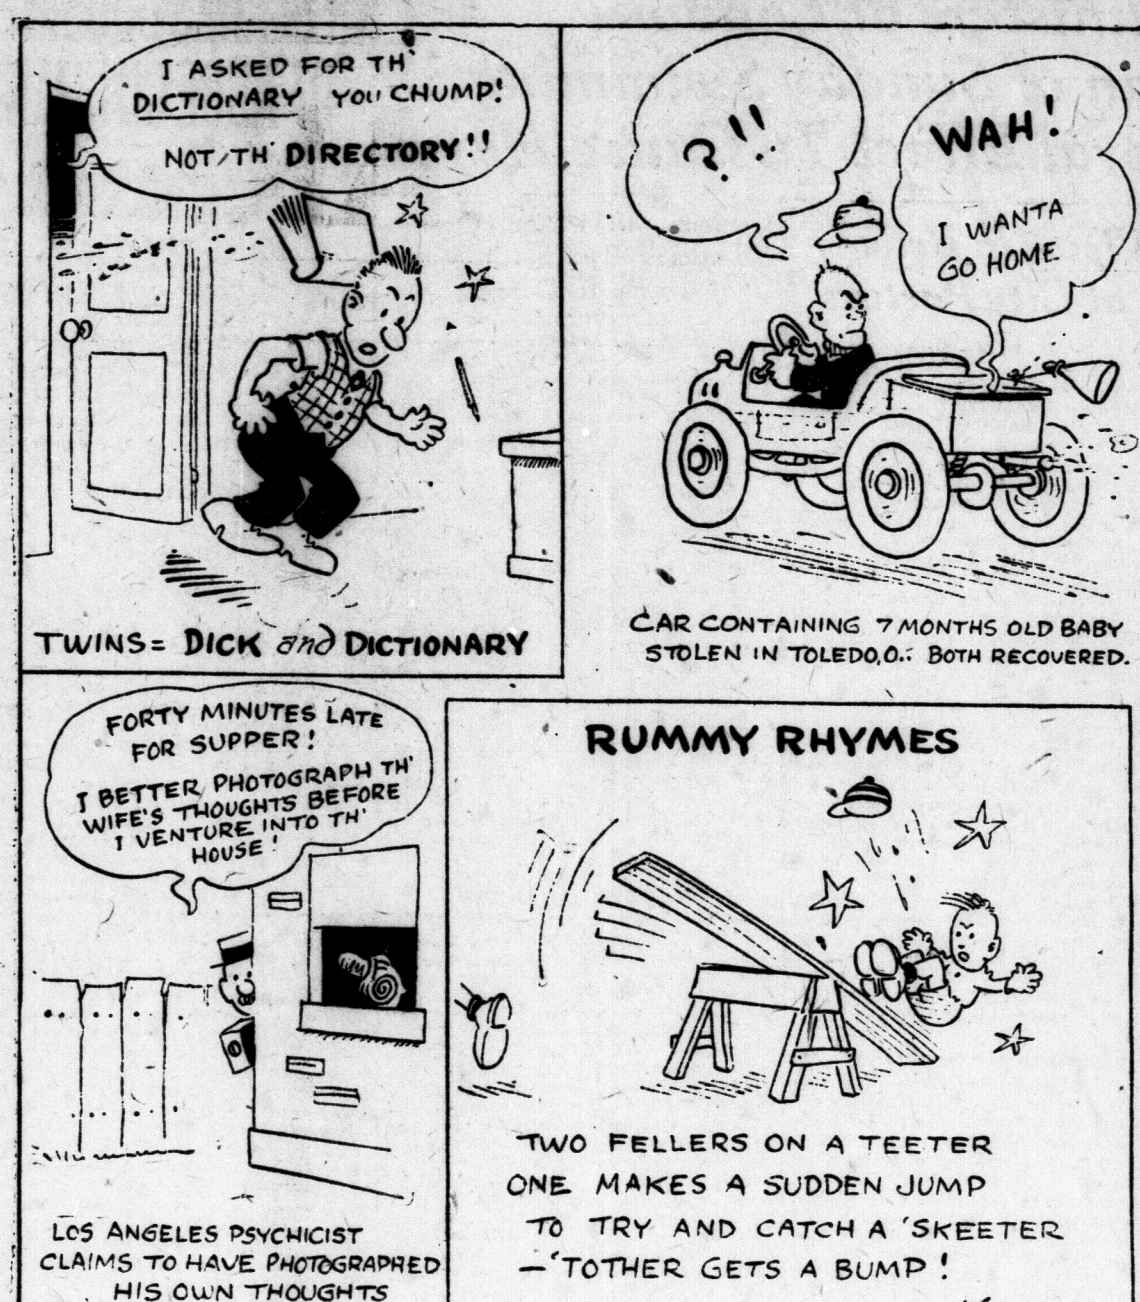

(From the Ottawa Journal.)

France was denied military frontiers which Foch told her were essential to her safety; she was denied the defensive alliance with England and the United States which she hoped to receive as a substitute. She sees that Britain has gained by the destruction of German naval power, and by the loss of German colonies. She sees that America has obtained a position of naval equality with England and of financial superiority over all. Can the world blame her for realizing that she is the greatest sufferer from the war, and that she cannot depend upon external security, she insists upon reparations and arms?

It may be that France is mistaken. It may be that with the anguish of suffering still deep in her heart, the human motive of revenge is a factor in her policy; but can we blame her? To answer yes is to blot out the memory of five years of unparalleled crime, to be oblivious to the instincts of nature.

WHY WATER HELPS IN HEALTH AND SICKNESS.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D., United States Senator from New York. Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

Some doctor friends of mine have written a fine little book about infectious diseases. It is intended to be a guide for mothers, and on this account it is filled with wise and useful suggestions which are bound to be gratefully received by every mother.

The authors write about the need of using a lot of water. Free use for bathing and the drinking of large quantities of water are urged upon the parents.

In all fevers poisons are formed in the body and there can be no restoration to health until these are carried away.

The body keeps up the fever and causes the symptoms of prostration which always accompany fever. The skin, kidneys and intestines are the chief organs of elimination. All these must function freely or else the poisons generated by the fever are dammed up in the tissues, to add to the misery of the sufferer. They cannot act unless there is abundance of fluid to dissolve the poisonous substances. Water is the universal solvent and its free drinking will aid the organs of elimination to do their work.

You know how thirsty you are when you have fever. There is no agony more than thirst. Poor little babies must suffer terribly and they are unable to ask for the water they need.

The authors I mentioned think water should be given as a matter of routine—just as medicine would be administered. They suggest that when a child under one year has any infectious fever the amount of water should be from one-half pint to one pint. The baby should have from two to four teaspoonfuls of water. When older, three or four times as much water should be given.

There is an old-fashioned notion that water will "drive in the rash" and, somehow or other, cause diarrhea. Every child who has been do no harm to anybody. Bathe the child, but be sure the bath is taken in a warm room, and dry thoroughly. No bad results can take place, no matter what the disease may be.

Frequent bathing keeps the skin clean and active. In this way the removal of the poisons is hastened. Drinking plenty of water helps to keep the bowel contents soft, and in this way promotes the free escape of poisons.

Everybody should drink water in quantities. Everybody should bathe frequently. Cleanliness inside and out is essential to health and vigor.

Answers to Health Questions.

A. F. R. Q.—Would a person be likely to contract consumption from inhaling the fumes from the clothing of a consumptive?

A.—No, there is no danger in this. S. S. Q.—I am a young man 23 years of age, suffering from nervousness and severe headaches. Will you suggest something to relieve these headaches?

A.—Headaches may be due to nasal catarrh, high blood-pressure, constipation, indigestion or eyestrain. If any of these conditions exists, correct it and I will sure your symptoms will disappear.

Wm. G. Q.—I have been suffering for the past eight years from a peculiar noise in my ears. What causes this?

A.—This is probably due to nasal catarrh. If you will send a self-addressed, stamped envelope, restating your question, full particulars on the treatment of nasal catarrh will be given.

M. G. F. Q.—I have been suffering for the last five years from falling stomach. I have been wearing a particular kind of surgical corset. Do you believe that I will ever be entirely cured of this condition?

A.—Yes, many persons have been entirely cured of this condition. Some

THE SUNRISE OF GOD.

Be thou exalted, O God, above the heavens; let thy glory be above all the earth.—Psalm 57:11.

I think David wrote this psalm in a cavern where he was hiding from the wrath of King Saul.

In the darkness the outlaw finds his refuge in the thought of God's loving kindness and truth.

Then, at dawn, we can see him rising from his rude couch, taking his harp from its resting place and sweeping his hand joyously over its strings as he comes down through the shadows of the cave.

He stands in the cavern's mouth. He looks out upon the trickling fountain, and the rich verdure which marks its course through the little oasis among the limestone cliffs.

He sees the last star fading in the sky, the faint glow creeping up the eastern horizon, the stir of life upon the face of the earth, the sun lifting himself beyond the Dead Sea and rejoicing as a strong man to run a race.

But he does more than this. He sees an image of something spiritual and transcendent. For here in the last verse of the psalm we find the last picture—the sunrise of God.

cases have been cured by means of surgical treatment and others have been cured by local treatment.

ANXIOUS. Q.—Will you kindly tell me what causes cysts and the treatment for this condition?

A.—The cause of cysts is unknown. These growths can be removed by means of a very simple operation.

BROWN EYES. Q.—When I walk a few blocks I suffer from severe pains in my sides. Sometimes I find it difficult to breathe. Do you believe these symptoms are caused by heart trouble?

A.—The pains in your sides may be caused by lumbar constipation or floating kidney. However, an examination by a specialist in diseases of women will determine the true cause.

W. E. Q.—Will you please tell me what causes water blisters under my instep?

A.—This is some form of irritation, perhaps, by wearing shoes that are too large, thus allowing the foot to slip about in the shoe.

MRS. E. A. B. Q.—What can I do for burning and itching feet?

A.—Drink plenty of water between meals. See that your shoes are properly fitted, and change them frequently during the day. Bathe the feet in warm water twice a day, and change the hose daily.

J. McL. Q.—For the past year I have had sores in my mouth, mostly on my tongue. Sometimes they are in the throat and my tongue cracks and then the sores look like small ulcers. Will you kindly tell me what to do for this trouble?

A.—You should have an examination by a specialist in diseases of the mouth. He will determine the cause and then submit the report to your doctor, who will then advise the proper treatment for you.

In the meantime, wash your mouth several times during the day with a warm solution of boric acid.

Answers to Health Questions.

D. H. M. Q.—Will you kindly tell me what causes excessive perspiration of the hands?

A.—This is probably due to nervousness. You should have an examination to find the underlying cause and then suitable treatment can be outlined. Bathing the hands with a solution of alum, 2 drachms to a pint of water, will help you.

M. T. Q.—I am troubled with xanthoma and my skin is very scaly. Will you please tell me what causes this and what to do for it?

A.—The cause of xanthoma is not known, but age, sex, middle life, liver trouble and diabetes are factors in some cases. Treatment by electrolysis is usually efficacious.

Looking Abroad

By DOUGLAS McREYNOLDS.

To its already long list of record performances and curious incidents this year's race for the British Derby at Epsom Downs added another chapter. For the first time since this historic classic has been run a jockey has ridden three successive winners, thus performing what is known in English sporting circles as the "hat-trick."

Steve Donoghue, who rode the winner, Papyrus, owned by Mr. B. Irish, a tenant farmer, in this year's race, also rode in 1922 Captain Cattle, owned by Lord Woolavington, and in 1921 rode Humorist, owned by Mr. J. B. Joel.

Besides steering to victory these three successive winners, Donoghue had previously ridden two firsts in this classic. In 1915 he had the mount on Pommern, owned by Solly Joel, and in 1917 he rode Gray Crusader, Mr. Fulvie's winning horse.

Another interesting outcome of this year's race was that Lord Derby, descendant of the nobleman who instituted England's greatest horse race, as he watched from the Jockey Club balcony, saw Pharos, carrying his racing colors, finishing second, the best position achieved by the stables of the Earls of Derby since the colt Sir Peter Teazle won the crown of the British turf in the twelfth Earl of Derby's time—the latter part of the eighteenth century.

Perhaps no sporting event is so surrounded by tradition and superstition as is the Derby, and for weeks preceding the race every performance of the horses entered is followed with the keenest interest and any rumor as to an accident or a specially good performance in training changes the betting odds over night.

Up until a few weeks before this year's race was run, Lord Woolavington's Town Guard was the pick of the field to win, but less than a fortnight before the event a slight accident during a practice gallop started rumors, which later unfortunately were confirmed, that the colt had put himself out of the running. As it was, he finished in the very last division.

Town Guard, however, is not the first Derby favorite the victim of eleven-hour troubles. Ladas, Lord Rosebery's favorite, stood for many anxious hours prior to the race with his foot in a bucket before winning for himself and his owner a place in the Epsom immortals and giving to Lord Rosebery the third of his wishes, to be prime minister, to marry England's richest heiress, and to win the Derby.

Nothing succeeds like success, and having at last won the Derby, after repeated disappointments, Lord Rosebery took it again the following year with Sir Visto and still again with Cicero. Lord Rosebery is one of seven owners to achieve the unusual feat of winning two successive Derbies.

Now that Lord Chaplin is dead, Lord Rosebery is the only surviving "father" of living owners to win the Derby, as well as the only surviving owner of three Epsom winners. The record in this respect was held by Lord Egremont with five victories over the Duke of Grafton with four, but these noble horsemen flourished before Lord George's time.

Among the stories of the Derby of those Georgian days is a lurid example of the ruling passion strong in death. Shortly before the Derby in 1801, Cox, who was trainer for the famous Sir F. Bunbury, was taken mortally ill. His last words, painfully and faintly uttered, were: "Depend on it, Eleanor is a—of a mare" after saying which he immediately expired. Cox trained Eleanor and she justified his eulogy by winning both the Derby and the Oaks.

The Derby has several times been won by rank outsiders, among these being Jeddah and Sunbeam, each being a 100 to 1 shot. Aboyeur, who was awarded the race on the disqualification of Craganour for improper riding, was the favorite at this price. Black Tommy started at 200 to 1 when losing by a neck to Blink Bonny, and the same enormous odds were laid against Dangu, who finished fourth to Thornbury in 1860.

Dangu represented the first attempt by a French-bred horse to capture the great English race. In those days British sportsmen rather regarded foreign competition as an imperfection. A few years later, however, Count Lagrange avenged himself for the ridicule heaped on Dangu by means of the great Gladateur, who also was of French parentage, and who always trained at Newmarket.

In was the same Black Tommy who inspired probably the most fantastic bet recorded in the history of the Derby. In addition to wagers of $100,000 to $75 and $100,000 to $100, the owner of Black Tommy was bet $50,000 against a suit of clothes. It was only by a little more than a head that the layers of these impossible bets escaped payment. Drinkald, the owner of Black Tommy, was a selfish curmudgeon, and when his horse appeared to be winning he sat on the ground and rocked himself to and fro, chortling. Hundreds of thousands of pounds for me and not a friend had the tip."

No British sportsman, however, has by frequency of bitter disappointment better earned the sweets of victory than the owner of this year's unplaced favorite. His win with Captain Tuttle last year seemed to indicate a turn of the ill luck that had pursued him for many seasons on the turf, and for him to win this year with Town Guard would have been a popular victory.

Not many people know that when Lord Woolavington—then James Buchanan of whiskey fame—first took up racing he hid his identity under the pseudonym of "Mr. Kincaid." He employed Spanish-American trainers and jockeys and had a long time before he was able to see the colors in front.

Oddly enough, in view of their rivalry for this year's Derby, he made his first big victory with Epsom Lead, purchased from Lord Rosebery, whose Ellangowan was also heavily fancied for this year's classic.

Tipping the winner of the Derby is a popular pastime for months before the big race. One of the most original that came to the attention of the public this year was furnished by a clergyman who wrote to one of the London newspapers that the victor this year was clearly indicated in "Hymns Ancient and Modern," hymn 152, 8th verse, which was found to read as follows:

"Till Peter in the midst Rebukes their unbelief and wins Three thousand to the Lord."

According to the clerical tipster, this was a sure tip that J. B. Joel's horse My Lord would win.

Some 800,000 people saw the great race run on Epsom Downs, and it is a safe bet to say that more than half of them had money on the race, to say nothing of as many more in all parts of the empire who had wagers or had subscribed to the various sweepstakes usually drawn for the event. This year women were particularly lucky in these sweeps, for no less than three of the principal ones in England were won by them.

Mrs. A. Ford, who works at the loom in a Skipton mill, won the Oley Club sweep of $150,000; Mrs. Grace Farnham, a school teacher, won the third prize of $15,000 in the same drawing; Miss Jessie Buckley, a dressmaker, won the Crok Hospital sweep of $10,000, and Miss Anna Cawthorne shares with her brother the second prize of $50,000 in the Smithfield Market sweepstakes.

Travelers Picnic At Port One of Most Successful Outings Held This Season

Large Crowd Gathers To Watch Merry-Makers At Annual Fun-Fest—Other Organizations Journey to Lakeside For Outing.

Determined optimism on the part of the commercial travelers seemed to have a large share in warding off unfavorable weather conditions at Port Stanley Saturday, as pretty well the whole day long, rain-clouds backed up shamefacedly as they neared Invererie Heights where the merry sport which has always characterized the annual outing of the Travelers'
Association was in progress.
A downpour seemed imminent several times during the afternoon, and at one point a few drops fell, but the skies were azure. Their brand of "cousinism," practiced unconsciously, seemed successful, as the events of the day went off without a hitch.

Great Success.
The annual outing of the Commercial Travelers' Association is usually an important day in the Port Stanley picnic season. A novel program of sports is introduced which seemingly sets the style for a great many of the ensuing picnics. The 1923 outing was no exception. Throughout the day, the picnickers, together with a great many onlookers, banked the ropes inclosing the sports area, and gurgled with glee at the amusing scenes which characterized many of the races. A bun-eating contest for small boys was one of the most laughable events of all the races, but each number afforded something for the onlookers, as well as an exhibition of skill for those who took part.
Everything from prize-fights to a baby show was included in the day, and in some of the events. His Worship Mayor Wenig handled himself in fine style as official "pep-master."

Extra Attractions.
Water sports were this year omitted from the program, but there were the extra attractions of drawing contests, and special surprise prizes which kept the fun going until well into the evening. Nearly all the picnickers remained for the evening's amusements at Port Stanley. Attention sports were run off on the Heights, but immediately after the supper a ball game attracted many to the beach ball grounds.
The prize in the drawing contest was won by R. J. McEhen, 43
Becher street.

Afternoon Results.
In the afternoon sports the following were the results:

BECK EMPLOYEES PICNIC.
A similarly enjoyable affair was that held by the Beck Manufacturing Company, when the employees of London's new member to the Provincial Legislature enjoyed a day of pleasure with the hundreds of other merry-makers at Port Stanley. The sporting program for the day was carried out with considerable success and had some share of fun for every member of the party. Baseball and unique sporting events helped to pass the afternoon most agreeably.

A third picnic party noticed on the hill was that of a large party of colored folks from Chatham, who with baseball games and other sports, spent a very happy day.

RAIN HALTS SPORTS.
Rain put an abrupt ending to the outdoor sports of the Egerton Street Baptist Church Choir, who, about 100 in number, arrived Saturday to the riverside, near Dorchester, for their annual outing. Nothing daunted, however, the picnickers returned to the church, where they had a picnic adapted their program to the church basement, and there as many as the races as possible were run off.
Many of the events here to be eliminated, but many others were changed and adapted to the four walls of the basement in a manner which created much merriment. The picnic hampers were brought to the basement and supper served in the church dining-hall in very convenient fashion. In spite of the obstacles encountered by reason of the distressing weather the day was considered by no means a failure.
Seven cars and a truck were required to carry the large party.

Among those who formed the social committee were Mrs. Clancy and Mrs.
Barker and the sports committee were formed of Madeline Sherritt, Victor Tiffin, Albert Oltum and teams. The Commercial Travelers' team won from the Kiwanis Club by the score of 10-2, and the Smallman & Ingram Thistles defeated the McCormick Molly O's by 16 to 14.

CHOIR HOLDS OUTING.

Among the several successful picnics held Saturday afternoon on Invererie Heights, Port Stanley, was that of the Hamilton Road Presbyterian Church choir, who, with friends and relatives augmenting their number to 75, held the season's annual outing.

The picnic supper was marked by a particularly happy event, when Mr. A. B. Stiles, organist and choir leader, presented a Pyrex dish to Mrs. Jack Harrison, formerly Miss Ila Philamore, Mrs. Harrison, prior to her marriage was a valued member of the choir. Since her removal to Dorchester, however, her resignation has been regretfully accepted. In his address to Mrs. Harrison, Mr. Stiles also made pleasant reference to the harmony which has existed among choir members during the past year and the success which has attended their work.

Splendid Program.

A splendid sports program was arranged for the afternoon. It was featured by a ball game between the Blondes, captained by A. B. Stein, and the Brunettes, captained by Angus Monroe. As rain seemed dangerously near, the game was called off at the third inning, with the Blues slightly in favor of the Brunettes.

The sports committee was composed of David Sibbald, Jean Clelland and A. B. Stein.

Other results were:

Girls' under 12—Art Lemery

Margaret Stein, Clara McDonald.

PLASTERERS MAKE MERRY.

In addition to one of the season's big events, the annual outing of the Commercial Travelers' Association, Port

Stanley, Saturday afternoon was the scene of several smaller but no less successful outings.

In a roped-off area, just next to that of the travelers, the London

Leath and Plasterers' Association held its annual picnic. A novel program of sporting events was run off with great gusto, all members, together with their wives, children and friends entering heartily into the fun.

Under capable committees arrangements for the sports ran smoothly, and with the rain keeping at a safe distance the day was enjoyed without a hitch.

LONDONER OFFERS BLOOD TO SAVE BOY IN N.Y.

CITY MAN OFFERS BLOOD
TO SAVE LIFE OF N. Y. BOY
ILL OF PECULIAR DISEASE

E. W. Flannery, Recently Afflicted With Sleeping Sickness, Hearing of Lad's Plight, Would Undergo Transfusion
To Relieve Young Sufferer of Disease of Opposite Symptoms.

VOLUNTEER MUST HAVE HAD DISEASE

An offer to allow his blood to be used in saving the life of a 12-year-old boy in New York City, who is suffering from encephalitis, was made this morning by E. W. Flannery, local traveler for Lawson & Jones, who has just recovered from an attack of encephalitis lethargica, or sleeping sickness.

Was Doomed to Die.
Reading in an American paper that Theodore Sugarman, Brooklyn, was doomed to die unless someone could be found who had recovered from an attack of the dread disease and was willing to allow a blood transfusion, Mr. Flannery made this offer. He has had a miraculous recovery from the illness, and as a means of showing his thankfulness and gratitude to the Divine Providence for this, he thought that the best way would be to aid some other sufferer in regaining his health.

The boy in New York, while suffering from the same general disease, known as encephalitis, has a different form, in which the patient is not overcome by lethargy and sleeps till death comes, but is kept continually awake, and in a condition similar to that caused by St. Vitus' dance. He is literally being shaken to death.

All known forms of treatment have been tried without success, and the frail body is failing rapidly. The only hope that is offered is the transfusion of blood from some recovered person. Even that is not a certainty, but the chance is in the introduction of blood which has already thrown off the disease successfully. Many offers have been received, but no investigation these have been proven to be from persons who have not had encephalitis.

Has Fought Disease.

As far as can be ascertained, Mr. Flannery is the first person who has fought the disease successfully to offer himself. He has been out of the hospital for a week, after having been laid up for some time past.

TEACHING A LOVE FOR MUSIC'S BEST
AS AGAINST JAZZ

Prof. Howard Gordon, Port
Stanley, Makes This His Lifework.

HAS HAD SUCCESS

His Pupils Already Have Been Acclaimed in Musical Circles.

Many a good musician would let the battle go by default, rather than attempt single-handed to wage war on the jazz craze.

In fact, thinkers tip a little salt into the palms of their hands when they hear all this talk about jazz being on the wane, and about to die a natural death.

They simply can't deaden their ears to the raucous cry of "Yes, we have no bananas."

To bring back the supremacy of Haydn, Mozart, Mendelssohn and the other masters and to give Western Ontario its first symphony orchestra is the almost Herculean task which Professor Gordon of Port Stanley has set himself.

Professor Gordon is determined that the first breach shall be torn in the defense of jazz music. And he reminds one steadily that a single drop of water, falling, will in time wear away the strongest stone.

The first step toward the fulfillment of Professor Gordon's ambition has already been taken. The orchestra, composed entirely of high-school amateurs, which he presented at the recent musical festival in Toronto, carried off premier honors. Untainted by any suggestion of jazz or "pop" music, the young musicians emerged from the contest with no criticism other than the highest praise from the eminent men who acted as judges. And success at Toronto was but a match to the flame of their young enthusiasm.

Countless enemy of jazz and popular music, Professor Gordon enters into what seem almost revolutionary ideas about the present musical tendencies of the day.

"The only soloists are virtuosos like Elman and Heifetz," he says. "Amateur soloists are good symphony players gone wrong."

This is something that the Joneses, who proudly exhibit their daughter Polly's prowess as a violinist, can't be expected entirely to agree with. But Professor Gordon maintains that it is so. In fact, he claims, that only genius gives one a claim to the self-satisfaction of being a soloist. Amateurs must develop the usefulness which is one of the prime assets of symphony orchestra players.

But in the small towns of Ontario, where lack of means in many cases hampers the progress of the musical education of the young, Professor Gordon seeks to find material for his symphony orchestra. Combining the towns and villages, he has unearthed a host of latent talent, and in one or two cases, even genius.

A few years ago, in Stratford, a little girl, bare-legged and tousle-headed, was one of the professor's most interesting pupils.

Today that tousle-headed little girl is Miss Ivy Warner, soprano soloist in St. Paul's Cathedral, Detroit.

It may be that a great many Londoners have already heard Miss Warner. A short time ago, she visited her former teacher and sang in Christ Church, Port Stanley. Radio fans may have heard her from Detroit, as she sang at the St. Paul's Cathedral. She is often listed in the radio program of WWJ, one of the Detroit radio stations.

But in the 13-year-old Port Stanley boy, who for some years has been regarded as something in the nature of an infant prodigy by reason of his accomplished violin technique, is the leader of Mr. Gordon's successful Stratford orchestra.

After a third possession of unusual talent, found in the small Western Ontario towns is Donald Wright, of Stratford. "Just a bit of a boy," as his teacher says, but talented enough to win second prize at Toronto as a violinist, in competition with many older than himself.

After ten years of struggle, in which jazz has sometimes been a victor, and carried a number of his best pupils off to commercial success as "jazz" musicians, Professor Gordon leaves his on a fair way toward actual accomplishment. His present high school orchestra is a symphony orchestra in embryo. There is no scarcity of brasses and reed instruments, but it is in the more "unselfish" instruments, the violas, cellos, and double basses where Mr. Gordon has had his difficulty. And his work is being done in the towns and villages where children have time to give their

AGED CYCLIST HOMEWARD BOUND KILLED BY AUTO

Ottawa, July 16.—Riding a bicycle, and homeward bound to the city after spending the day with a sister-in-law near Bell's Corners, August Martz, 61 years old, a former street foreman and for many years in the employ of the city, was hit by an automobile Saturday night. He sustained a fracture of the skull, from which he died in the hospital early Sunday.

Whole soul to music, where there are not the counter-attractions of jazz and amusement, and where quiet country life develops the imagination of a musician.

Little girls bring their violins to him to be taught. These instruments are promptly strung as violas. So another student is laid to the foundation of a symphony.

Mr. Gordon comes of a musical family. He was born in the little Scotch village of Laurence Kirk, near Balmoral, the country seat of Queen Victoria. In the time of the good Queen, the Gordons were known as musicians. On the visit of the Prince of Wales, Mr. Gordon conducted an orchestra, and his royal highness, with the friendly interest which characterized his visit, called out to him and asked "Are you of the Balmoral Gordons?"

As a boy, Mr. Gordon dreamed of becoming a singer, but that dream faded years ago in the interest he took in the ambition of his pupils. At 8, he was the boy soprano in a cathedral choir, from the organist, received his early musical training. Before reaching 12 years, he was singing in all the great oratorios. In his instrumental work, Professor Gordon reached the qualifications of the Royal Academy.

By next winter at least, Professor Gordon hopes to have made sufficient advancement with his orchestra to present his players in public with one of the simpler Haydn symphonies. In the meantime, the young artists who have taken on their shoulders much of the responsibility for the musical future of Western Ontario, are being having like the "live wires" which Granville Bantock at Toronto, ascertains they were. They are tuned up perfectly to their ambition.

"I've one little girl," Professor Gordon says, "who is such a keen youngster that when I told her about the masters who practiced day and night, set an alarm clock by her own bedside for 4 a.m., and now she's at her music before the sun rises."

The outposts of jazz ought to hear this old tremble.

MAKES PRAIRIE HOME
BLOSSOM LIKE ROSE

John Glambeck of Milo, Alberta, Succeeds in Interesting Experiment.

Despite criticisms from neighbors and being alluded to as a "nut," John Glambeck of Milo, Alberta, completed an experiment which will revive the spirit of optimism in the west and, if taken up by others of that country, will transform the houses on the bald prairie to real beautiful homes, says an article in a recent issue of the Grain Growers' Guide.

Twelve years ago Mr. Glambeck commenced his experiments. It was his intention to transform the ugly, barren huts of the prairie into beautiful dwellings in which the owners took a pride. In 1911 he planted over 1,500 trees, and they grew successfully from the start. Two years later 6,000 more trees were planted, and all have given satisfaction.

Mr. Glambeck next attempted to grow strawberries upon his prairie home, and although he had been told the C. P. R. had met with no success with this variety of fruit, he tried it out merely as an experiment. The strawberries grew, and along with this success other varieties of small fruit, such as currants, gooseberries and raspberries were grown. Mr. Glambeck's home was now veritably blossoming like the rose.

Having met with such extraordinary success with the smaller fruit, it was Mr. Glambeck's intention to try for the larger variety. Neighbors told him that such an attempt would only be a piece of foolishness, but this did not discourage him.

A few years passed and the dreams of making the prairie a place of beauty were realized. In the spring the plum and apple trees began to bloom. Real apple blossoms on the prairie. Like magic the bald prairie of a few years back had been transformed into a garden of Eden.

As a result of the successful experiments of Mr. Glambeck, the future of the prairie is assured. It is Mr. Glambeck's belief that the prairie lands are the greatest in the world. It will be some years before insect pests and weeds are conquered, but when the time comes when all other lands follow the example of Mr. Glambeck a new and more desirable condition in the west will exist.

Small-Town Results.

Scouring Western Ontario's small towns for musical talent would seem to be the above photographs to have been productive of excellent results.

Professor Howard Gordon of Port Stanley is here shown with three of his small-town pupils who at an early age have achieved success in their musical careers. In the center, at the top, is shown the professor, who at present is engaged in writing a "March Funerale" to be dedicated to "Jazz," and the death-knell movement of which is to be played by his pupils. At the top-right is shown Miss Ivy Warner, formerly of Stratford, and now soloist in St. Paul's Cathedral, Detroit. At the lower left is shown Donald Wright, the 14-year-old Stratford "celist."

Memphis, Tenn., July 16.—The coroner here today held an inquest over the bodies of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Nichols, a drug clerk, met his wife in the lobby of a downtown bank, and because she persisted in her refusal to live with him, drew a revolver and fired four shots into her body. Then he turned the gun on himself. Mrs. Nichols lived for a few hours. Nichols died immediately.

There is nothing unusual in Nichols' action except that the death of his wife brings the casualty list of homicides charged against Memphis and Shelby County to the grand total of 57 for but little more than the first half of the year, and unless some other city has a machine gun attack on its populace Memphis will again be assured the unenviable position of leading the homicide table of the country.

The homicides are all charged to Memphis, but only 32 were committed within the boundaries of the city, the remaining 25 were slain within the limits of the county.

No Death Penalty.

By far the greater part of the homicides have been solved. Many "justifiable homicide" verdicts have been returned. Some of the killings have been serious, but in no case has the death penalty been imposed; in fact, no man guilty of murder in Shelby County has paid the death penalty for several years. The last man who was hanged was a negro who was a storekeeper. In three cases so far this year sentences of twenty years have been imposed, but in the majority of cases where convictions were obtained, the sentences ran from one to ten years.

A series of roadside murders just outside the city last January shocked the nation and started Memphis off for a second time for the record. In five months the usual "hot-blooded" killings have run riot. Domestic difficulties then brought on a series of crimes and violent deaths. The Nichols slaying put Memphis far in the lead.

No Race Friction.

Thirty-five per cent of the population of Memphis is colored, yet deaths of negroes lead those of whites here. Mayor Riney, in searching for an explanation of the killing record, said that in nearly all the cases where a white person was slain, a white was the slayer, and that where a negro was murdered a negro usually was the murderer. Thus it is seen that none of this year's deaths has been caused by race friction. Just how the killing record for 1923 will fare is problematical. Dr. Frederick Hoffman's homicide column in an Indianapolis newspaper, gave Memphis a homicide rate of 67.4 per 100,000 population for 1922. And Memphis leads the nation. With the county's homicide rate of 67.4 per 100,000, it was undoubtedly well above last year's record, and it has five and a half months in which to better the 1922 mark.

Special Cable to The Advertiser.

Rome, July 16.—Premier Mussolini and the Fascist party won preliminary victory early today when the Chamber of Deputies gave the premier a vote of confidence in his new electoral law by a vote of 303 to 140. There were abstentions.

Applause from all parts of the chamber greeted Mussolini's success. Shortly afterwards the second part of an order of the day, favoring the Fascist party, introduced by Deputy Larussa, passed 235 to 133.

Recent party splits over the proposed electoral laws had led to the belief that the bill providing for them might fail and Mussolini, accordingly suffer a serious defeat.

STABILIZERS ON GERMAN
LINER PREVENT SICKNESS

New York, July 16.—The Albert Ballin, largest transatlantic vessel put into service by Germany since the war, arrived yesterday on her maiden voyage, a floating museum of maritime innovations and of modernistic new German art.

Stabilizers, consisting of anti-rolling tanks at the water line, claimed to prevent rolling of the ship and thus save passengers the pangs of seasickness, were said by ship's officers to head a long list of new passenger ship devices used, they say, for the first time on the new liner.

The stabilizers, it was said, were used successfully on German submarines during the war.

The Albert Ballin is 602 feet long and has a speed of 15 knots.

GOLF ON SUNDAY
WITHIN THE LAW,
SAY CLERGYMEN

Cannot Stop It So Long As
Confined to Privately Owned Links.

APPEAL TO HEART

If Civic Course Established
Here, Sunday Play Will Be Fought.

Until the time when a civic links might be established in London, local ministers will make their appeal to the hearts and consciences of their congregations toward the restriction of Sunday golf. But if at any time a civic course were established, the same opposition would confront it which has confronted the proposal, sponsored by Mayor Wenig, to open the Thames Park swimming pool on Sundays.

This is according to the statement made this morning by Rev. Dr. D. C. MacGregor of St. Andrew's Church, during an interview on the indictment made yesterday in Toronto on Sunday golf and motoring by Rev. W. M. Rochester, secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance.

"We are fully aware that golf is played in the city on Sundays, but the links are privately owned, so I hardly see that the alliance as a body or the ministers themselves can do anything further than make an appeal to the hearts and consciences of their people, as I did yesterday in my own sermon in St. Andrew's. People must be made to realize in matters like these that the responsibility does not end with themselves. We may make an appeal to the people themselves to observe the sanctity of the Lord's Day. Our action as an alliance was not to deliver a verdict of right or wrong in the case of Sunday swimming, but rather to oppose the principle of opening a municipal pool on Sunday. The pool is supported by public money, and every citizen has the right to an expression of opinion. In the matter of private golf links, however, no matter how opposed we may be to Sunday golf, I can hardly see any direct action open for us to take."

Dr. MacGregor also pointed out that he had no doubt that Sunday golf was quite within the limits of the law, as if it were prevented legally it is quite certain that before this the Lord's Day Alliance would have taken steps to have the law evoked.

Within the Law.

Similar views to that of Dr. MacGregor are entertained by a number of the clergy who made reference to Sunday golfing in their sermons yesterday. Rev. J. A. Agnew of Ridout Street Methodist Church, who is president of the local Methodist Ministerial Alliance, expects no official action from any of the clerical bodies, however, and says that he would have no direct action open for us to take.

"Sunday golfing on private links, I believe, has already been declared legal by the courts. It is within the law, as if it were prevented legally it is quite certain that before this the Lord's Day Alliance would have taken steps to have the law evoked."

What Mr. Rochester Said.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Toronto, July 16.—Sunday golfing and Sunday motoring were condemned by the Rev. W. M. Rochester, secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance, in a sermon "A National Heritage," in the Metropolitan Methodist Church Sunday morning.

Dr. Rochester alluded at length to the recent debate in Toronto city council regarding the playing of golf on the municipal links on Sunday, strongly deprecating the action of the council in giving its sanction to this.

It was one thing for an individual to play golf on Sunday, and an entirely different thing for a city to set its seal on this practice.

"How shall we distinguish between going for a motor ride, or for a row, or taking a walk on Sunday?" continued the preacher, "I should not like to attempt to draw the line, but I would draw your attention to this: Motoring as we now have it means roadside refreshment stations for idle people, roadside vegetable markets and gasoline stations. There is really no more need for gasoline on Sunday than for the articles with which the prudent housewife provides herself on Saturday."

They then drove off without making any attempt to rescue the victims of the accident.

CONSERVATIVE PARTY
TAKES OFFICE TODAY

Oaths Administered New Cabinet Ministers at Four o'Clock.

Canadian Press Despatch.

Toronto, July 16.—Shortly after 4 o'clock this afternoon, the time set for the swearing in of Ontario's new Conservative government, headed by Hon. Howard Ferguson, minister of education, was under the guiding hand of a new administration.

While the formality of swearing in the cabinet ministers is simple in the extreme, the nature of the oaths required from the ministers and the extreme length of the oath of the executive council will lengthen the ceremony.

The oaths that will have to be sworn before Clerk of the Legislative Council Fred Bulmer, number three, and are as follows:

The oath of office, the oath of allegiance and the oath of a member of the council.

All the oaths will be taken before his honor the lieutenant-governor at Government House. The oaths will be read by Clerk Bulmer, who will be assisted by Matthew Currie, his deputy.

Apart from the piping contest, which is a provincial championship affair, there are races, jumping competitions, the hop, skip and jump, a baby show, several of the usual picnic attractions and to crown the day a great tug-of-war between Elgin and Middlesex. Both teams declare they will pull the other fellows into the lake. This is a pull in cleat—it means sitting tight on the end of the rope and pulling like an amateur dentist. It's the last word in husky "he-man," caber-tossing, shot-putting muscles, and by all accounts it's going to be some pull. Putting the shot, both the 56 and 16 pound marbles, will be a real test, and though there may not be any caber to toss—it depends on the number of entrants that can be found—that will be the only thing wanting to give the day the real Heather flavor.

Londoners and Their Hobbies

A Book and Three-Quarters For Every Day of His Life

Dr. J. D. Barnett Has Collected Over 40,000 Volumes Since Boyhood.

Books as a hobby? Lying in Victoria Hospital, week in and week out, is a man who knows what that means. It is Dr. John Davis Barnett, who has collected books ever since he was a schoolboy, and recently presented his entire collection, 40,000 volumes, to the Western University.

Although he is unable to get about any more, he can still enjoy his hobby. And a large pile of favorites are always to be found at his bedside.

His visitors usually find him reading. For there is nothing in the world he likes better to do, unless it is to talk about his books. Then he talks slowly with a musical intonation to his speech, as he looks at his eyes, dark and magnetic, sparkle. "I don't remember the time when I didn't purchase books," is his story. "Except when I was short of money."

"Indeed, I don't remember the time when I didn't want books. When I came out to Canada from England, 17 years of age, to enter the Grand Trunk employ, I brought 16 or 17 books in my trunk with me. And that was the beginning of my collection."

The library. Since then his collection has grown until today it contains over 40,000 volumes and includes some of the most valuable books on the continent. The Shakespeare section is perhaps the most outstanding, and includes many rare first editions. The Canadian books also form a valuable portion of the library, which is now housed by the university on Cheapside street.

The story of how the library was gathered is intensely interesting. But let Dr. Barnett tell about it himself.

"My knocking about on the railway gave me an opportunity to pick up books, for most of them are second-hand. The fact that I was sent about to Canada from England gave me a wide field for collecting. I started buying books as soon as I had money enough to go to, and I kept on buying as chance offered, until when I came to the university, four years ago, I had purchased a book and three-quarters for every day of my life."

Rarest Book of All. Probably the most valuable book in the whole collection is a decretal, which once resided in the Curia Romana at the Vatican. It is a decretal issued by Pope Sixtus IV. in 1474, and is the only one of its kind in the world.

The book is one of those publications issued by the pope, which eventually became the source of canon law in the Roman Catholic Church. Although about four and a quarter centuries old, it is in perfect condition, beautifully bound with polished vellum of a rich creamy tint.

"One wonders what happened to a good book that it should be thrown out into the open world and at last come into my hands in such beautiful condition," says Dr. Barnett, describing it. "It hasn't got a dog-eared leaf in it. And when one comes to look up the history of the book, one finds that even the British Museum hasn't a copy, and the Bibliothèque in Paris has only a few leaves."

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE HEARS TALK ON EGYPT

G. W. Sulman Addresses the Thames River Members At Regular Meeting.

Special to The Advertiser. Chatham, July 15.—A most interesting meeting of the Thames River Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Milton Backus, River road, Raleigh, Friday afternoon. The day was an ideal one, and the attendance was exceptionally large, 86 ladies being in attendance. One of the enjoyable features was the address by G. W. Sulman on "Egypt." Mr. Sulman, who has traveled most extensively, delighted the organization with his personal experiences as well as most interesting facts about the country and its people.

Mrs. W. Meade, president of West Kent Institutes, made a short address, in which she thanked Mr. Sulman for his interesting talk. The business of the meeting was conducted in the usual manner, and the roll call was responded to by "Methods That Have Failed." Reports from the committee regarding the drifting fountains for the schools were heard, and a donation of $5 was made to the Francis Moore Shelter. Plans were made to join the other institutes in their picnic at the beach this month, and it was also decided to have a birthday party in September with the Misses Holmes and Mrs. Bellhouse as hostesses.

Enjoyable musical numbers were given by Miss Helen Langstaff, who sang "The Rose Tree." Mrs. Robbins, Miss Jeffrey and Miss Duffy, who favored with a trio. A happy social time followed, and the hostess was assisted in serving refreshments by Miss Dolson, Mrs. Bert Clements, Mrs. Fred Parry, Mrs. John Fleming, Mrs. Charles Willmore and Mrs. Cecil Hunt. Rev. Jones, pastor of St. Thomas Church, was the chairman and introduced the participants of the program.

DR. JOHN DAVIS BARNETT. not more than 25 pages. It was made by a missionary who went up into the St. Lawrence valley, and among the Indians in the early days. It is the translation of some of the hymns into the Indian language. The missionary set it up by hand and his family printed it for him and bound it.

Dr. Barnett could talk for hours about his interest in the book. And just at this point of his story the nurse came in with supper. And so the interview had to end.

The last glimpse saw him lying there with his snow-white beard over the coverlet just about to begin his supper.

"Come again!" he called. "Come again! I shall tell you more."

Fashions by Wire. Special to The Advertiser. Paris, July 14.—The women whose heads have the proper classic contours—and others whose heads have not—are dressing the hair low on the neck at present. This coiffure is sometimes enhanced by a half circle of satin flowers extending in back, and low down, from ear to ear.

Blossom Color. Paris, July 14.—Blossom color, which is a delicate shade of pink, has been combined strangely but beautifully today with the somewhat faded and muted tones of the past. The blossoms have deep bertha or flounces of string-tinted lace.

White Earrings Best. London, July 14.—The really chic evening today is as long and as slender as a dagger blade, reaching out below the shoulder. In the past, the evening dress was a half circle of lace, and the evening dress was a half circle of lace, and the evening dress was a half circle of lace.

Navy and Cerise. Atlantic City, July 14.—Sports suits and beach frocks of line and color are especially striking here today, when made of navy and white. A second effective combination glimpsed here once or twice is navy and cerise.

Lace Matches Gowns. New York, July 14.—A lace cape cut in long slashes, and sewn down over the front of the shoulders, half way to the waistline, is the substitute for sleeves in several of the newest dance frocks shown here today. The lace is invariably dyed to match the gown.

Dandelions For Hats. New York, July 14.—Yellow dandelions are a novel hat trimming appearing in many of the hats which are being worn today. They are of a glorious yellow shade, which makes just one garland of them dramatically effective on a black straw hat.

The Beechwood Women's Institute is holding its next meeting at the home of Mrs. Alex. Fletcher, 171 street, Alisa Craig, Tuesday, July 17.

ON TORONTO MARKET

Heavy Steers in Export Section Find Few Buyers.

Special to The Advertiser.

Toronto, July 16.—With a heavy run of 6,500 cattle, mostly grassers, the market today opened in a slow and draggy trade. Outside of a few choice right-hand butchers there seemed to be little demand for anything else. In the export section the heavy steers were not wanted, buyers looking instead for a medium light class of export stuff. These were selling around $7.75 to $8.

In the butchered section prices were a good 25c to 50c lower than last week.

New Stories By O. HENRY

BOARD AND ANCESTORS.

The reporter was wending his way homeward last night when he was approached by a very stout, hungry-looking man with wild eyes and an emaciated face.

"Can you tell me, sir," he inquired, "where I can find in Houston a family of low-born scrubs?"

"I don't exactly understand," said the reporter.

"Let me tell you how it is," said the emaciated man. "I came to Houston a month ago, and I hunted up a boarding house, as I cannot afford to live at a hotel. I found a nice, aristocratic looking place that suited me and went inside. The landlady came in the parlor and she was a very fat lady with a Roman nose. I asked the price of board, and she said: 'Eighty dollars per month.' I'll against the door-jamb with a dull thud, and she said: '8'.

"You seem surprised, sah. You will please remember that I am the widow of Governor Riddle of Virginia. My family is very highly connected; give you board as a favor; I never consider money an equivalent to advantage of my society. Will you have a room with a door in it?"

"I'll call again," I said, and got out of the house, somehow, and went to another, fine, three-story house, with a sign 'Board and Rooms' on it.

"The next lady I saw had gray curls, and a soft gazelle-like eye. She was a cousin of General Mahone of Virginia and wanted $16 per week for a little back room with a pink motto and a picture of the battle of Chancellorsville in it.

"I went to some more boarding houses.

"The next lady said she was descended from Aaron Burr on one side and Captain Kidd on the other. She was using the Captain Kidd side in her business.

"I traveled around all over Houston and found nine widows of supreme court judges, twelve relics of governors and generals, and twenty-two ruins left by happy departed colonels, professors and majors, who put fancy figures on the benefits of their society, and carried victuals simply as a side line.

"I finally grew desperately hungry and engaged a week's board at a nice, stylish mansion in the third ward. The lady who kept it was tall and imposing. She said she was an aunt of Davy Crockett, and was still in mourning for him. Her family was one of the first in Texas. It was then supper time and I went in to supper. Supper was from 6:50 to 7, and consisted of baker's bread, prayer and cold slaw.

"Now, my dear sir," continued the stranger, "I am not wealthy, and I cannot afford to pay for high lineage and moidy ancestors with my board. Corned beef goes further with me than a coronet, and when I am cold a coat-of-arms does not warm me. I am desperate and hungry, and I hate everybody who can trace their ancestors further back than the late Confederate reunion. I want to find a boarding-house whose proprietress was left while an infant in a basket at a lively stable, whose father was an unmailed Dago and whose grandfather was never placed upon the map. I want to strike a low-down, scabby, plebeian, sans-culotte outfit that never heard of finger bowls or grace before meals, but who can get up a mess of hot corn bread and Irish stew at regular market quotations. Is there any such place in Houston?"

The reporter shook his head sadly. "I never heard of any," he said, "the boarding-houses here are run by ladies who do not take boarders to make a living; they are all trying to get a better rating in Bradstreet's than Betty Green."

"Then," said the emaciated man desperately, "I will shake you for a hot toddy."

The reporter felt in his vest pocket haughtily for a moment, and then refusing the proposition scornfully, he moved away down the dimly lighted street.

G. RIFKIN, TORONTO, HED J. HAMILTON FOR HAVING PISTOL

Police Found Man in Auto Near Scene of Attempted Burglary.

HAD "JIMMY" IN CAR

Canadian Press Despatch.
Hamilton, July 16.—George Rifkin, who gave Toronto as his address, was charged before Magistrate Joliffe today in police court with having in his possession a loaded revolver. The police asked for an adjournment until Wednesday.

M. J. O'Reilly, K.C., acting for Rifkin, asked bail and the Magistrate fixed it at $10,000. Mr. O'Reilly protested against such a large sum being asked on such a charge and Deputy Chief Couter stated that they might lay more serious charges against Rifkin. Mr. O'Reilly again protested and said it seemed that when the police wanted a man held there was no way of getting him liberated. The magistrate refused to reduce the bail.

Rifkin was in an automobile on Aberdeen avenue about 10 o'clock Sunday morning and Constable Gent saw him in the darkened car. He said he was looking for his hotel and the officer said he would direct him. He followed the officer, who was on a motorcycle, to Central Police Station. When they reached there, the officer was informed that some man had attempted to burglarize the home of H. H. Champ, secretary of the Steel Company of Canada, which is on Aberdeen avenue a short distance from where Rifkin was in the car.

The police state that a "Jimmy" was under the seat of the car. The men who attempted to burglarize the house have not been located.

A coat was found in the Champ yard. It is so small that the police believe the band was made up of mere boys.

SIR ADAM BECK SHINES AS BASEBALL PITCHER

Assists Chatham Colored Girls' Team To Win and Incidentally Swells Funds.

Sir Adam Beck has occupied many spectacular roles in his long career, but it is doubtful if any of these are as picturesque as when on Saturday he pitched for the Colored Girls' Elite baseball team at Port Stanley.

Sir Adam made the long end of a powerful battery, and for four innings pitched faultless ball.

As president of the Beck Manufacturing Company, Sir Adam accompanied his employees to the lakeside on their annual picnic. While watching the Kiwanians and Commercial Travelers battling on the beach for the supremacy of the diamond, he noticed the Colored Girls' Elite baseball team was in want of a pitcher. Sir Adam gallantly offered himself. Shedding his coat, he took up his position on the mound, to the satisfaction of the girls as well as several hundred spectators, who gathered as soon as they saw the power potentate in action.

After witnessing Sir Adam's exhibition, many expressed regret that the hydro chief had not taken up baseball instead of electricity. Possessing all the characteristics of a second Christy Mathewson, Sir Adam's career as a big league star, artist would no doubt have gained for him undying renown.

Sir Adam's team won by the score of 13 to 12, and in pulling off the left Carmen stunt, Sir Adam was instrumental in swelling the contribution to the girls' team from the spectators, $15.00 being raised. This collection was taken up for the girls' uniform fund.

ONE LONDON OLD BOY WRITES FROM HAWAII

E. St. C. DeLacey Can't Come For Old Home Week, But Sends Greetings.

The south sea islands, famous for moonlight passion flowers and movie settings, took on a new aspect this morning in the offices of Edwin Smith, general secretary of the London Old Boys' Association when from a thriving business concern in Hawaii, greetings were received from a former Londoner who is connected with it.

The Londoner who writes from this delightful country is E. St. C. DeLacey, who left the city many years ago, but has not forgotten the friends he formed here. Mr. DeLacey's firm, according to the letter head, is the "Lihue Store, Kauai, Hawaii."

Although unable to return to the Old Boys' Week, Mr. DeLacey has sent greetings to many friends here among whom he mentions John Friend, who is now a resident of Toronto, and a friend whom he believes to be in Guelph, and Alf Talbot and Walt Westie of London. To them, Mr. DeLacey sends his best wishes, or to quote the letter, "Aloha, as we say here."

Programs for the Old Boys' Week went to the printers this morning.

Associated Press Despatch.
London, England, July 16.—The tri-annual convocation of the Anglo-Catholic Congress in London during the past week brought into public notice an enormous increase in the use of incense and eucharistic vestments in the celebration of high mass in London's Anglican Churches. It was stated that about one-third of all incumbents in England are now attached to this advanced school, while there are no less than 20 Protestant churches in the center of London where confessions are heard.

The Anglo-Catholic, which has now assumed great importance, is an attempt to restore ceremonies of the Church of England without, however, losing the nationalism of the church or coming under the sway of the pope.

It is said to be supported by more than one-third of the Anglican priests and bishops headed by the Liberal Bishop of London.

Official reports on the increase of the use of incense in the Anglican churches of London, England, have caused little concern among Anglican clergy in Canada.

While in certain churches of the city a portion of the six points which go to make up the distinction between high and low services is used in the service, there are no clergyman who are officially connected with the high church party in Canada.

Facts relating to the increased usage of incense were brought out at a recent convocation of Anglo-Catholic Congress in London. The school, while considered of some importance in England, has so far but a small following in Canada.

YOUTHFUL POLE DECIDES TRUTH IS BETTER PLAN

Allows Imagination To Run Riot When Held as Thief.

COMPANIONS FREED

Officials at the juvenile court this morning felt in immediate need of a short course on "How to Learn a Language in One Lesson." The ante-room, prior to the opening of the court, sounded like a quiet corner of Ellis Island in miniature, when a small group of Poles appeared with a boy who was sent to the juvenile court from the police station on a charge of having stolen a tennis racket from a store in the South Wellington street shopping district. Fortunately for the court, it was discovered that an older brother spoke excellent English, so proceedings were greatly facilitated.

Two other boys, who appeared on the same charge, were dismissed, as it became evident that they had no connection with the case other than being in company with the third boy at the time the theft was discovered. While he admitted the theft, the boy, complicated affairs for himself to a great extent by allowing his imagination to run wild. On the two Protestant States remains in ignorance of the progress and opinions of its members in the Dominion of Canada. PUBLISH PAPER HERE FOR "DARKER RACES"

"The Dawn of Tomorrow" Aims To Present the Case of the Negro.

A new publication has entered the journalistic field in the city of London. "The Dawn of Tomorrow," which announces in its heading that it is "devoted to the interests of the darker races," is to be the official organ of the colored people of London, where it is published, and also of the race throughout the entire Dominion. J. F. Jenkins, 95 Glenwood avenue, London, is its editor, while Robert Paris Edwards of Toronto is the assistant editor.

In the opening article by the later, the policy of the publication is outlined. Beginning with a review of the fact that the colored people of Canada have until the present possessed no newspaper, and that the circulation of American colored papers in Canada, as well as the amount of Canadian news printed in them, is exceedingly small, the editorial concludes with the injunction that "this land and country may be better because of our having lived here and proved our loyalty to One Canada, One Flag and One Empire."

The capitalized words are also printed in large type.

It is pointed out that without a newspaper colored people in Canada remain ignorant of much information concerning events relative to them as a people, and that the race in the United States remains in ignorance of the progress and opinions of its members in the Dominion of Canada. It states further: "The policy of the Dawn of Tomorrow will ever be sympathetic to any person or group of persons whose aim and ideals are for the betterment of themselves and the communities in which they live."
