RECOLLECTIONS OF STUDENT LIFE IN GERMANY.

X. "FEST UND TREU."

"Staunch and true," was the motto of the Nordalbingen, and the farwell "commemors" of each session was intended to keep us in mind of our obligations. I am describing it, is true, merely the outside appearance of a Verbinburg. The ceremonies in which what were once living realities, are now fossilized the songs in which sentiments, fortunately, no longer peculiar to students are so embalmed; and the fun and frolic which are so congenial to youthful spirits everywhere, but beneath the ceremonies of the farwell evening, there was felt to lie a profound sentiment, and around the festive board the shades of departed heroes seemed to gather, which the clash of freedom's sword had summoned to join in the song of Fatherland. All the nomenclatures which accompanied the initiation of new members have been abandoned by societies now, and few retain the "Fox-ride," in which the young "Foxes" came in riding on chairs, back to the front, or the beer fests, which involved either fearful gazing, or unpleasant personal consequences, but all retain and observe most scrupulously the solemn commemors, with its beautiful and impressive ritual.

With difficulty I tore myself away from the performance of the "Meistersinger" was but half over, and hastened to our Kloipe, to take part in the "Abschieds-Commers." Magnificent and weird as Wagner's music is, I felt sure that the glorious songs that I would soon hear were worth exchanging it for. I do not know whether it was imagination or not, but it did seem as if the greetings were heartier that evening, as each one shook out his special friend with whom to "make" the ceremony of the evening. The table was arranged in a T form, so that all might be accommodated, and at each of the three ends and in the centre of a cross-table sat a "president." The dress of these officials carried one back to the days of yore—while leather breeches, high boots, and "cut-away" coats, spoke of the days of their great grandfathers. Across their left shoulders hung the broad blue, gold, and black sash, and by their side the sword of office. When the hour had arrived, the presidents rose, and commanding "silence," uncovered their heads, drew their swords, and struck them three times in concert on the tables. Then the opening song was sung, and the glasses clashed while the first pledge was drunk in silence. All the songs of this evening were sung to freedom and fatherland; no baser theme was allowed to intrude.

On this evening the friends and patrons of the Verbinburg are expected to be present, and we were honored with the presence of Prof. Luthardt, who won the colors of the Uttenreuthia, at Erlangen, our parent Verbinburg, and one which he was a principal mover in establishing. A junior professor who had lately been initiated, and a wealthy merchant of Leipsic, completed the number of guests. The evening was spent in the usual way, but more quietly, for, as one of them said to me "we have earnest work in hand." Promptly at eleven o'clock "Sblorum" announced that the beefsteak was ready, and the special work of the evening commenced in a truly fraternal manner, by a brotherly meal together. The glasses, however, were left in the kneipe room, for no one will drink out of any glass but his own that evening. After due justice had been done to mine host's savoury viands, the signal is given, and the pairs already assorted form in line, and arm in arm march back to the kneipe room, singing the Verbindung march. Two presidents stand at the door and two at the opposite end of the room, and at each beat of the music the swords clash over our heads. When our respective places are reached the song ends, and at the "ad loco" of the presiding officer all take their seats.

After a slight pause the first president arose, and addressed the "Erudor." He spoke of the pleasant gatherings of the past session, and exhorted to a steadfast adherence to the principles which they had found so ennobling, not merely for the sake of the pleasure it afforded during the few years of student life, but because of its influences upon their character, which was being now moulded for better or for worse, and above all, because these principles could alone make a free, united, and glorious Fatherland. At the name of "Fatherland," every man sprang to his feet, and with three-thundering "Hoche," clashed their glasses and drank to its weal. Now began the singing of the "Landesvater." In the extracts that I give from it, I shall follow the translation of Bayard Taylor, as it retains the metre, as well as five of the original.

For a moment there is silence, and then the "praesides" standing two and two at each end of the long table, commence the lofty song. Each verse is sung first by the four presidents, and then by all in chorus.

Silent bonding, each one lending
To the solemn tones his ear.
Mark! the song of songs is sounding
Back from joyful choir resounding.
Hear it, German brothers, hear!

German proudly raise it loudly
Singing of your fatherland—
Fatherland! thou land of story.
To the altars of thy glory
Consecrate us sword in hand.

Take the boaker, pleasure seeker,
With thy country's drink brimmed o'er
In thy left the sword is blinking,
Pierce it through the cap while drinking,
To thy Fatherland once more!

At the first words of the last stanza, each president takes one of the huge boakers in his right hand, and at the third line the sword in his left, and at the conclusion of the stanza, they strike their glasses together and drink. Then all sing while the swords are clashed in unison:

In the left hand thou art bounding Sword from all dishonour free.
Pierce ye through the cap while swearing, Thou, a valiant Burocho wilt be.

And while the last words are sung each one takes off his cap, and piercing it through the crown with the sword, draws it down to the hilt and leaves it there. Taking the same swords and benches, the presidents stand behind each pair of students and the ceremony is repeated with each. This is going on simultaneously at each end of the table, so that the presidents are advancing gradually towards the middle of the company. As each couple have pierced their caps, and the presidents move on to the next, they lift their own glasses and pledge each other clapping hands, and then return to the end of the room, where all stand with their arms around each other's shoulders, and the ceremony is completed with every one.

All next resume seats at the table, and after a short pause the swords are passed around, while the music changes to a more solemn air.

Come thou bright sword, now lend a help,
Of thee men the weapon free,
Bring it solemnly and slowly,
Hoary with plumed caps to me!
From its burden now divest it.
Brothers be ye covered all,
And till our next festival,
Hallow'd and unspotted rest it.

Up, ye fast-companions ever,
Honor ye our holy band,
And with heart and soul endeavor
Hersoe high-sou'd men to stand!
Up so fast ye men united!
Worthy be your father's fame,
And the sword I may no one claim,
Who to honour is not pledged.

The sword opposite each one is now the one that has his cap on it, and the presidents resuming their position behind, remove a cap to the point of each sword, and resting the blades on the heads replace the caps while the whole sing to sprightly music.

So take it back, thy hand I low will cover,
And stretch the light sword over,
Live also thou this Burscho, hoch
Wherever we may meet him,
Will we, as brothers, greet him
Live also this, our brother, hoch

When all are again covered, the noble words of the concluding stanza are sung to a noble music.

Rest thee from the Burscho's feast rites,
Now, thou dedicated brand,
And to each one's high endeavor,
Freedom for his Fatherland
Hail to him who glory haunts, Follows still his fathers' host,
And the sword may no one hold
But the noble and undaunted

"Brothers the commers is ended," and I left the room, while those who remained struck up the grand old song.

Gaudeamus tigitur,
Iuvenis dum sumus

feeling that I had a slight glimpse of the spirit which inspired Germany to throw off the yoke of France, and compelled a Prussian despot to summon a free parliament of the empire.

The Hymn Book.

EDITOR BRITISH AMERICAN PRESBYTERIAN

DEAR SIR,—Are the Psalm-singers, East and West, all killed by your editorial and fatmination of the Rev. Robert Wilson, on Psalms vs. Hymns? If so, there is one in this locality not so much as wounded, who, with your permission, would like to say a few things on this important subject, promising only that, I am not the author of those questions which first appeared, and which now have the appearance of having been put forth to afford an opportunity for an onslaught on the Psalms of the "Sweet Psalmist of Israel," and on those who exclusively use them.

1. The design of the Book of Psalms, was it designed to be a manual of praise in public worship? You say, "it is more than doubtful whether that collection was made for the purposes of public worship. Though I have read a good deal on this question, it is the first time I have met with such a statement. On what is your doubt based? This you do not make known. I may just affirm the very opposite, and then the question would be to which statement, unsupported by any proof, is the greater weight to be given—to that of him who has devoted his life to the study of the Scriptures, or to that of the editor of a newspaper? Then we might let this point rest. But as we hear now-a-days of some newspapers being the Bible to some, and as it is to be feared, too many read them more than they do the Bible, it may be well to state the grounds on which it is believed that the Book of Psalms was designed to be a manual of praise in public worship. (1) The title of the book? It was not written as a book, but in detached pieces, which were afterwards compiled as is generally believed, by Divine authority, into one book, and entitled the Book of Psalms, or Book of Praises, or as it may be freely rendered, the Hymn Book. By this title it is referred to repeatedly by Christ, and his apostles (Luké xx. 42; Acta i. 26). The word Psalm, is of Greek derivation, and comes from a word which signifies to sing. Psalms, then are songs which are to be sung. And by giving this collection of sacred songs, the title of "The Book of Psalms," the Holy Spirit recognizes them as songs of praise, to be sung in the worship of God. This is further confirmed by the title of very many of the Psalms themselves. Many of them are addressed to the Chief Musician—that is the person who had charge of conducting the praise of God in the Temple. They are called also, "the songs of Zion," and the "songs of the Lord." (2) The matter of these divine hymns. Then matters is peculiar, and indicates the particular end for which they were intended, "there, the glory of Jehovah is celebrated in the sublimest strains of eastern poetry, as displayed in the works of creation and redemption, and the church is furnished with suitable matter for praising God, for his goodness, wisdom, power, love, and mercy, manifested in the salvation of man, the preservation of the church, and the government of the world. As then, the peculiar character of the contents of any composition, manifests the end for which it was intended; as from its matter we know that any composition is a political essay, another is a philosophical speculation; and a third is a biographical sketch of some distinguished individual. So from the matter of the Book of Psalms, we learn that its peculiar design is the celebration of God's praise, and that it was given to the church to be employed peculiarly for that purpose. "Praise ye the Lord, for it is good to sing praises to our God, for it is pleasant, and praise is comely." These divine songs abound with ascriptions of praise to God, and with urgent calls addressed not only to the church in her collected capacity, but to all classes of men, to engage in this delightful exercise. "Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem! Praise thy God, O Zion! Let everything that hath breath praise the Lord."

(3) The historical fact that they were used for the purpose, and so used with the approbation of God. This is as much a matter of record as that David was raised up high, the anointed of the God of Jacob, and the sweet Psalmist of Israel, by whom the spirit of the Lord spake. At the dedication of the temple, among others the 138th Psalm was sung. The Levites praised the Lord, saying, "For He is good, for His mercy endureth for ever." And in testimony of the divine approbation, "the house was filled with a cloud, even the house of the Lord, so that the priest could not minister by reason of the cloud; for the glory of the Lord had filled the house of God." (2 Chron. xv. 18, 14). And in the history of the great revival which took place in the reign of Hezekiah, "who did that which was right in the sight of the Lord, according to all that David his father had done," it is recorded that "Hezekiah, the king, and the princes commanded the Levites to sing praise unto the Lord, with the words of David and Asaph the seer." (2 Chron. xxix. 30). They continued to be sung—were sung by Christ and his apostles—have been sung in the church, either less or more ever since, and I believe will be sung "through all generations."

Since then, the Book of Psalms is a collection of songs given the church by her great head and king, through the ministration of his Holy Spirit. Since their matter indicates that their peculiar design is to set forth the praise of God, since the Holy Spirit has been pleased to designate this collection "The Book of Psalms," or "Book of Praises," or the "Hymn Book," and the "Songs of Zion," and the "Songs of the Lord." And since we learn from the sacred Scriptures, that these songs were used by the church with divine approbation, therefore, I conclude, that they were given to the church to be employed in singing God's praise.

You see then, on what grounds it is affirmed that the Book of Psalms was designed to be a manual of praise in public worship. Do you not think they are quite satisfactory? If not, give the reasons of your "more than doubtful," and they may be duly considered. Hoping to be able to look at another point or two in your editorial on this subject, yours, respectfully,
Jan. 27, 1875.

PSALMS.

Look at Jehovah in his infinite love, omnipotent power, unsearchable riches, universal dominion, ungenial holiness, eternal veracity and unspasable glory; and then you may say, "This is my God for ever and ever, and all that he has in mine; why then am I cast down?"

Church and State.

EDITOR BRITISH AMERICAN PRESBYTERIAN

As a reader of the PRESBYTERIAN may I ask if the substance of a letter under the above heading in your last issue is shared in and endorsed by Presbyterians gone in Canada. I mean, of course, of the sect known as the Kirk? As it is with a full knowledge of the "slaves struggling to be free" from the hands of their neck, heretics of the Kirk in Canada with their brother Presbyterian

As a lay Presbyterian, I have some knowledge of the history of the Kirk; yet conscientiously concur every sentence of the clear, plain, and equal paragraph so bitterly complained your correspondent; I should deem an extreme stretch of generosity to allow assertions and comments as those expressed in your correspondent's letter, to be without remark. In the interest of your readers who might be misled by freedom of application and assiduously by your correspondent, and in opposition to his self-acquired knowledge the effect that "the union of Church and State has invariably proved destructive of liberty," I beg most respectfully, to say that there is a Presbyterianism known as the Church of Scotland, rather, if I mistake not, of Presbyterians, acknowledging its connection with a history—I think I might say a glorious history—having named on her banners honored and throughout Christendom; having pursued goodly streets, I think even your correspondent will admit, with to-day's proportion of the people of Scotland, shipping within her courts, listening to the teachings of ministers who are no unworthy followers of those who have gone before, ministers, I may say advisedly, who have no superiors in any ecclesiastical body, who enjoy full liberty of conscience, and manifest that liberty by teaching and preaching the doctrines of the Church clearly and fearlessly, requiring no cloak of inconsistency or Pharisaism with which to cover themselves. Furthermore, it is the earnest prayer of the Christian and patriotic sons and daughters of the Church as coming to-day from many lands, that her adherents may be ready now as in the past, to rally round her standard; to maintain their position and connection, realizing their responsibility to the future of Scotland and the world, that they shall zealously guard their privileges and be prepared to hand them down all unmarred, strong, and true as they were at the hands of holy men bequeathed to them.

Having published "the bane and the antidote" whatever they may convey in your correspondent's outpouring, I request you will give a place to the opening question and statements following in this. I am, yours respectfully,

A SCOTCH PRESBYTERIAN.

The Inadequate Supply of Students.

EDITOR BRITISH AMERICAN PRESBYTERIAN

DEAR SIR,—In looking over past numbers of the "Record," for the purpose of refreshing my memory in reference to the schemes and progress of our Church, I find in the number for February, 1874, that in the annual statement of Knox College, Prof. Prudden regrets the inadequate supply of students to meet the growing wants of our Church in the fields already occupied, as well as to carry the "glad sound" into newly settled districts.

Having but little time to spare from pressing business, I may betray my ignorance in bringing a matter before you which may already have been discussed and settled. It appears strange, Mr. Editor, that seeing and feeling the urgent necessity for additional labors, our Church in its wisdom has not yet matured and put into practice a plan by which this state of things might at least be mitigated. I am thoroughly in accord with the principle that ministers of Christ should be men of learning as well as of piety; men acquainted with the languages in which the Scriptures were originally written; men who can show the harmony existing between science and religion, and thus rebuke the gasayers of science, falsely so-called; men who are able to direct their honors from nature to nature's God, and who, both by reason and revelation, can uphold the integrity and prove the divinity of the Bible. By all means let the ambassador of Christ be "thoroughly furnished." But, in view of the felt want of a sufficient number of such to go forth with the "lamp of life," the question arises, what is to be done? Is the Canada Presbyterian Church to remain in this unprogressive and lifeless condition? "Speak unto the children of Israel, THAT THEY GO FORWARD." Other Churches have realized this want and acted accordingly, and shall we as a church, ignore the Master's command, "occupy till I come?" We are required not only to call our friends and neighbors to the Gospel feast, but to go out into the highways and hedges—the backwoods—and compel them to come in, that the Lord's house may be filled.

Allow me, Sir, through your columns, to ask our Professors, our Presbyteries, and our Home Mission Committees, if a scheme could not be devised whereby earnest members of our Church could not be induced and encouraged to give themselves heartily to evangelistic work, and act as pioneers in sparsely settled districts. It surely cannot be urged that there is less talent or self-denial amongst our laymen than that of other denominations. Shall our mission stations languish and suffer by allowing this talent to lie dormant? This is a matter vitally affecting the interests of our Zion, and loudly calls for serious consideration.

I can see little or no difficulty in the way of many such men being found within the bounds of each of our Presbyteries. Had they the advantage of attending the Divinity classes of Knox College for two or three sessions, (without the literary course) or of studying theology under the care of their respective Presbyteries, for such time as the exigencies of the case might demand, I believe a class of men could be raised up, who, under God, would be productive of much good in gathering congregations and preparing them for a settled minister. It would also be the means of keeping vacant congregations together in the absence of Sabbath supply. Silent Sabbaths are no rarity (at least as far as the Presbytery of Bruce is concerned.) Like the honoree in the desert, "they are very many and very dry."

Yours truly,
Feb. 1st, 1875. RIVERSDALE.

Questionableness of Employing Modern Evangelists.

EDITOR BRITISH AMERICAN PRESBYTERIAN

SIR,—I notice a communication in your issue of Jan. 30th, under the above heading.

It is not my intention to reply to all that "elder" has said on the subject, but to throw out a few thoughts on the other side. Let us first take an illustration. We have, say a town of six thousand inhabitants, eight hundred of whom are members of some Evangelical Church, (thus I think is the above the average, including men, women and children,) and say, about two thousand who regularly attend church. Now, let me ask, how are the other four thousand to be reached, how are they to be brought into the fold of Christ. The Bible will not do it, for they never read it; tracts will not do it, as they are generally thrown aside with scorn. Regular pastors will not do it, for they and this class of people are seldom brought together. How then is it to be done, unless some earnest, golly layman or minister, who says "I come not to preach Presbyterianism, but Christ, I am not come as an upholder of Methodism, but to lift up him who says 'I will be lifted up, I will draw all nations unto me.' One who comes to tell poor lost sinners the way of salvation, leaving denominations to squabble about man's matters.

"Elder" has two principal reasons why these evangelists should not be employed, the first of which is that the duty of the evangelist is to form a church, the pastor, or teacher, in those unoccupied areas, the responsibility of caring for the flock, and laboring for the edifying of the body of Christ rests. Very well. The evangelist has come, a church of 800 has been formed, the pastor established, and now what are we to do with the other five thousand two hundred souls, for whom the pastor is in no way "responsible," as they do not belong to the flock; are they to be deprived of the privilege of hearing the gospel of being saved, simply because a church has been formed?

His second remark, or reason for not employing them, i.e., that they are not needed, is simply—I had almost said nonsense. Do not let us talk about the inefficiency of our ministers. How I grieve under the present system, do you suppose it would take to evangelize the world? If after thirty years ministry only eight hundred out of six thousand stand united with the church, and half of these eight hundred hope, but don't know whether they are going to heaven or not, how long will it be until the millennium, to which many look forward so hopefully?

There is a great work to do for the Master, and let us not grumble about its being done in an undignified spirit; let us not "cry down" these modern evangelists, who are only modern because they live in modern times, and who do as the primitive evangelists did, preach to the unconverted, till the plan of the great plan of salvation, and of how they may be saved.

I do not wish to make any further remarks on the subject at present, but subscribe myself, Dundas, Feb. 4th. A. M. P.

The Jesuit's Oath.

EDITOR BRITISH AMERICAN PRESBYTERIAN

SIR,—I notice an article in your last issue, touching an oath said to be taken by Jesuits on their admission to the society. Allow me to state that in admitting the above article, your exchange editor has been grossly imposed upon. In the first place, such an oath was never given, never taken by any Jesuit, as such; secondly, such an oath if taken, would not bind on conscience. Resistance to lawfully constituted authority, so strongly set forward in the article referred to, has never formed any part of a Jesuit's duty or occupation. Many at present seem to think, however, that in the opinion of the Catholic Church, heresy annuls all right to civil allegiance. Hence, an heretical sovereign may, in the eye of the church, be lawfully resisted. This is not the case, unless it were the will of the people, expressed as a condition to the sovereign's receiving the crown, that he should always keep and defend the Catholic faith. If then he fall away from the church, he breaks his contract with his subjects, and ceases to be king. But if the crown were conferred without any such religious restriction, the change of faith will not alter his relations to his subjects; he remains King, and his rights are and have been respected and enforced by the church, just as those of any Catholic prince. Hence such an oath as the one given in your last issue would merely have the effect of placing him who took it, under the weightiest censures of the church. Allow me to say that Jesuits, as Jesuits, take no oath of any kind.

Your kind insertion of the above will expose the imposition practiced on your confidence by I suppose, one of your exchanges. Yours truly, ECCLERASTICS.

Sabbaths Abroad—The Scottish Church.

During the past season the British Parliament have abolished lay patronage in the Scottish Church. In 1712 an act known as Queen Anne's Act was passed, restoring lay patronage, which had been abolished before the Treaty of Union between England and Scotland.

Lay patronage frequently placed the appointment of a minister for a vacant parish in the hands of a patron who had no interest in the parish whatever, and still more frequently in the hands of one who was not in any way connected with the Scottish Church.

In the course of the agitation of the question before the disruption, the church courts were brought into collision with the civil courts in reference to certain cases of disputed settlement, and this has given rise to the claim of spiritual independence which the Free Churchmen of to day declare to be of much greater importance than the existence of patronage.

There still however remains the difficulty that the Established church is supported by certain national funds. Here probably many of our readers are not aware of another peculiarity in reference to the Established Church of Scotland, and that is that the endowment of the Church of Scotland does not consist of a tithe or church rate levied upon willing churchmen and indignant dissenters, but of what are called Tithes, which are in fact a part of the ancient church property preserved for religious uses.

in order to enrich them would be as unjust as it would be to give the property of Trinity church or the Reformed Dutch church of this city to the parties who now hold the leases. There may still exist some remnant of injustice in what is called the annuity tax, but if so it can easily be done away, and then the application of the Scottish tithes for the purpose of maintaining and extending the church would be simply equivalent to our use of the old endowments bequeathed by individuals to the church of New York, or the share which all the Presbyterian churches of Scotland now enjoy in the Ferguson bequest.

Dr. Newman on Mr. Gladstone's Expostulation.

Dr. John Henry Newman has at length issued his long-expected reply to Mr. Gladstone's now celebrated pamphlet. His observations fill 130 pages, and the small work containing these is, in point of size, the most important contribution to the literature yet printed in reference to the discussion raised by Mr. Gladstone.

Dr. Newman then says—"you consented with something of the reluctance which I had felt myself when called upon to write, for it was hard to be summoned at my age, early or late, from a peaceful course of life, and the duties of one's station, to a scene of war. Still you consented, and for myself it is the compensation for a very unpleasant task that I, who belong to a generation that is fast sitting away, am thus enabled, in what is likely to be my last publication (this expression is used by the writer more than once in these pages), to associate myself with one on many accounts so dear to me, so full of young promise, whose career is before him."

Dr. Newman is deeply grieved that Mr. Gladstone has felt it his duty to speak with such extraordinary severity "of our religion and ourselves." So much may be said of the decrees which have lately been promulgated, and of the faithful who have received them, that Mr. Gladstone's account of both of them and of us is neither trustworthy nor charitable. Dr. Newman is, however, of opinion that not a little may be said in explanation of a step which so many of his (Mr. Gladstone's) admirers and well-wishers deplore.

In an introductory chapter the writer intimates that he puts aside, unless it comes directly in his way, Mr. Gladstone's accusation against Catholics that they repudiate ancient history, reject modern thought, and renounce their mental freedom. He will confine himself, he says, for the most part to what Mr. Gladstone principally insists upon, that Catholics, if they act consistently with their principles, cannot be loyal subjects. Speaking for himself he observes that in accepting as dogma what he has ever held as truth he could not be doing violence to any theological view or conclusion of his own, nor has the acceptance of it any logical or practical effect whatever, as he considers in weakening his allegiance to Queen Victoria. He, however, makes here the following admission:—"There are few Catholics, I think, who will not deeply regret—though no one be in fault—that the English and Irish princes of 1826 did not foresee the possibility of the Synodal determination of 1870, nor will they wonder that statesmen should feel themselves aggrieved that that stipulation which they considered necessary for Catholic emancipation should have been, as they may think, rudely cast to the winds."

The answer which Dr. Newman makes to the ex Premier is ranged under the following headings:—The Ancient Catholic Church—The Papal Church—Divided Allegiance. In writing on this subject, Dr. Newman asks, "Could the case ever occur in which I should act with the civil power, and not with the Pope? I know the instances cannot occur. I know the Pope never can do what I am going to suppose, but, then, since it cannot possibly happen in fact, there is no harm in just saying what I should hypothetically do if it did happen. I say, then, that in certain (impossible) cases, I should side not with the Pope but with the civil power." The other headings are "Conscience," "The Encyclopaed of 1864," "The Syllabus," "The Vatican Council," and "The Vatican Definition." "The main point," Dr. Newman says in his conclusion, "of Mr. Gladstone's charge against us, is that in 1870, after a series of preparatory acts, a great and irrevocable change was effected in the political attitude of the Church by the third and fourth chapters of the Vatican Pastor Aeternus, a change which no state or statesman can afford to pass over. Of this cardinal assertion I consider he has given no proof at all, and my object throughout the foregoing pages has been to make this clear. The Pope's infallibility indeed, and his supreme authority have in the Vatican Capta been declared matters of faith, but his prerogative of infallibility lies in matters speculative, and his prerogative of authority is no infallibility in laws, commands, or measures. His infallibility bears upon the domain of thought, not directly of action; and while it may fairly exercise the theologian, the philosopher, or man of science, it scarcely concerns a politician. Of course, Prince Bismarck and other statesmen, such as Mr. Gladstone, rest their opposition to Pope Pius on the political ground, but the Old Catholic movement is based not upon politics but upon theology, and Dr. Dollinger has more than once, I believe, declared his disapprobation of the Prussian acts against the Pope, while Father Hyacinthe has quarrelled with the anti-Catholics of Geneva."

Father Newman, it would seem, is placed in difficulties by the indiscretion of too zealous Catholics who have taken the field in this great controversy. He remarks "It will be said that there are very considerable differences in argument and opinion between me and others who have replied to Mr. Gladstone, and I shall be taunted with evident breakdown thereby made manifest of the topic of glorification so commonly in the mouths of Catholics that they are all of one way of thinking, while Protestants are all at variance with each other, and by that very variation of opinion can have no ground of certainty severally in their own. This is a showy and servicable retort in controversy, but it is nothing more. If the differences which I have supposed are only in theological opinion, they do but show that, after all, private judgment is not so utterly unknown among Catholics and in Catholic schools as Protestants are desirous to establish."

The entire question he sums up as follows:—"I draw from these remarks two conclusions. First, as regards Protestants, Mr. Gladstone should not on the one hand, declaim against us as having no mental freedom, if the periodical press, on the other hand, is to wock us as admitting a liberty of private judgment purely Protestant. Secondly, for the benefit of some Catholics, I would observe that, while I acknowledge one Pope Pere Divino, I acknowledge no other, and that, I think, is a usurpation too wicked to be comfortably dwelt upon when individuals use their own private judgment in the discussion of religious questions not simply abundare in suo sensu, but for the purpose of anathematizing the private judgment of others. I say there is only one oracle of God, the Holy Catholic Church, and the Pope as her head. To her judgment I submit what I have now written.—Glasgow Daily Mail.

Messrs. Moody and Sankey's visit to Sheffield.

Messrs. Moody and Sankey have now commenced their meetings in Sheffield, and a few words regarding the sphere of their ensuing labours, which we shall from time to time briefly notice, may not be out of place. Sheffield, a great dingy-looking town in the south or Yorkshire, within the Parliamentary limits covers 19,651 statute acres. The population may be roundly estimated at a quarter of a million. The manufactures are all kinds of iron and steel goods, and also electro plated goods. The workmen in the heavier branches of the iron and steel trade earn high wages. These are constantly recruited from the rural districts. The lighter manufactures are more in the hands of the original inhabitants, and it is amongst these latter that ignorance and vice seem most rampant. Betting, profane swearing, Sabbath desecration, drinking, fighting, and wife-beating prevail among a large residuum or seen within a church or chapel door. There is, however, a large and steadily increasing number of highly intelligent, sober, industrious, and respectable workpeople such as would be creditable to any community. It is from this latter class that Messrs. Moody and Sankey will draw the majority of their auditors, but it is to be hoped that whatever is profitable in their preaching and teaching will permeate to the "lapsed masses" also. In the Denary of Sheffield there are thirty-three Churches of England or places of worship connected therewith. These are ministered to by 54 incumbents and curates. The dissenting chapels of all sects are nearly as follows:—Catholic Apostolic (1), Baptists (4), Plymouth Brethren (1), English Presbyterian (1), Independent (11), Jewish (1), Methodist, New Connection (29), Primitive Methodist (11), Roman Catholics (5), Society of Friends (1), Unitarians (2), United Methodist Free Churches (19), Wesleyan Methodists (15), Wesleyan Returned Methodists (9). It will be seen from these statistics that dissent is strong in Sheffield, but the ministers of all the Protestant denominations are nearly unanimous in aiding the present movement. At one time it seemed probable that the Church of England clergyman would retire from Messrs. Moody and Sankey's executive committee, in consequence of an ecclesiastical law which restricts the spiritual work of a clergyman to his own parish, but the difficulty has happily been got over, and clergyman of the Church of England and dissenting ministers are now working harmoniously together to promote the success of the movement.

Only one meeting was held on Saturday, namely, a service for the children, at noon, in the Temperance Hall. About one-third of the audience consisted of adult males; the others were women and children. Mr.

Moody and his committee were accompanied by the Vicar of Sheffield, the Vicar of St. Mark's, the Vicar of St. James', and other Church of England clergymen, who, though they have drawn from the Executive in consequence of an ecclesiastical difficulty, evidently wish to give their countenance and support to the movement. Mr. Sankey was absent on a visit to Manchester. Prayer, especially for the children, was offered up by Mr. Trotter, of the Parish Church; and Mr. Moody, in the course of his address, delected from the children many prompt and pertinent answers to questions on Scriptural teachings and truths. A call upon any one who felt inclined to address the meeting was responded to by a prayer and two brief addresses from the platform, and an address and two prayers from the body of the hall.

There was a service for Christian workers on Saturday in the Albert Hall at eight a.m. It was attended by about 800 persons. Mr. Moody addressed them very effectually upon the words, "To every man his work." One of his anecdotes moved nearly all to tears. A public service at 2:30 was crowded, and many hundreds failed to obtain admission. The stairs and passages were wedged full to the end of the service, and numbers had to force their way out because of the heat. Mr. Moody spoke for an hour from the words, "Therefore by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified." The evening meeting was announced to take place at eight o'clock, and by a quarter to seven four thousand persons were in front of the hall, so that when the doors were opened the crush for places was dreadful, and meetings had to be held in two other halls. Mr. Moody's address was very stirring, and Mr. Sankey's singing formed an immense attraction.

Three meetings were held in the Albert Hall on Monday—one at noon, one at three o'clock, and another at half past seven in the evening. Ministers of all denominations took part in the proceedings. The noon prayer meeting was briefly addressed by Mr. Moody. A long list of requests for prayer was read at the commencement. Much consolation was caused by a telegram handed in towards the close of the proceedings. It was to the following effect:—"Three men were executed this morning at eight o'clock at Liverpool. They all attributed the crimes for which they suffered to the evil influences of drink. Pray for the poor drunkards of Liverpool." Mr. Moody gave a "Bible lecture," at three o'clock on "Christ the Saviour, Deliverer, Redeemer, Teacher, and Shepherd." The hall was filled in every part. Many ladies and gentlemen of the wealthy classes were present, and a long line of private carriages and cabs was drawn up in front of the hall. The evening meeting was crowded, many from great distances being present. Mr. Moody spoke for an hour on "Christ the Remedy for Sin." Private meetings for inquirers were held after the public meetings.

Messrs. Moody and Sankey held three public meetings on Tuesday in Sheffield. The services were similar to those on Monday. There was no falling off in respect to the numbers attending, and at the afternoon and evening meetings the Albert Hall was packed. The public works are resuming operations after the Christmas holidays, and consequently fewer of the artisan class can be present at the meetings, but their places are filled up by the wealthy classes, old persons, and children, whom the weather, now beautifully mild, entice to come out. The Vicar of Sheffield, and many clergymen and dissenting ministers, attended in course of the day. Twenty requests for prayer were handed in at the noon meeting. Mr. Sankey was ably assisted by a choir of ladies on the platform. The numbers seeking interviews at the inquiry meetings after the public services, are on the increase. An additional mass meeting for men is to be held to-night, and if the anticipations of the managers be realized, the Albert Hall will not contain nearly all seeking admittance to this meeting. In connection with the movement the Young Men's Christian Association have announced early prayer meetings for those in business.

Messrs. Moody and Sankey have arranged to spend the whole of the month of February in Liverpool, and great preparations are already in progress for their reception. A temporary building, capable of accommodating 8000 persons, is being specially erected as a central hall for the occasion. It will be situated in Victoria Street, at the back of the new public offices of the Corporation, on a piece of ground recently purchased by the Government as a site for a new post office; and though only of a temporary character—it is entirely demolished within two months—it is to cost £3300, and the committee calculate that at least £4500 will be required to cover the whole expense of the visit. The invitation to Messrs. Moody and Sankey was forwarded to those gentlemen in September last, and was signed by nearly 100 clergymen and ministers of all denominations in the town. Mr. Moody was present, and the whole of the arrangements were completed. It is intended to have a service in the Central Hall every night during the month of February, with extra services on Sunday, both morning and evening, at such hours as will not interfere with the ordinary services at the numerous other places of worship in the town.

Sheffield is being greatly stirred by the revival services of Messrs. Moody and Sankey. They are at present the subject of conversation in families, offices, work-shops, and factories. The merits and demerits of the American evangelists are keenly discussed by excited groups at the corners of streets, and the opponents of the movement attribute its success to vulgar curiosity, sensational advertising, and press exaggeration. Meanwhile the meetings in connection with the movement are on the increase. The numbers seeking admission to them are beyond all precedent in Sheffield. The admission to the mass meeting last night was by ticket, and it was found necessary to engage an additional hall capable of accommodating 2000 persons. The average attendance at each of the four meetings held in the Albert Hall on Wednesday may be stated at 2500—total, 10,000. Thirty requests for prayers of the noon meeting were read. They were from persons in all stages of life and grades of society. Mr. Moody stated that many more had been received too late for arrangement, which would have to be deferred till next day. The Vicar of Sheffield made a touching appeal on behalf of a dying man from whose bedside he had just come. This man, he said, had never heard of Jesus till the previous day. Deeply impressive prayers were offered by Mr. Moody, Mr. Sankey, and others. Such a crowd of earnest listeners as attended Mr. Moody's Bible lecture on "Salvation by Blood," was perhaps never before witnessed in any assembly hall in Sheffield. Mr. Moody proposed, at the mass meeting for men, that similar meetings should be instituted, to be held every night in the temperance halls. He asked all approving the proposal to stand up, and nearly the whole assembly responded.

Surprise, Thursday—Three meetings have been held in the Albert Hall to-day. The demands for admission are so numerous that the committee are restricting the admission by ticket, and having the hall doors closed as soon as the hall is filled. A long list of requests for the prayers of the noon meeting was read previous to the commencement of the service, and it was again intimated that it had been found impossible to arrange nearly all sent in. A new feature was that many persons desired to return thanks for their conversion through these meetings. Mr. Moody, in a brief address from the words "Declare his doing among the people," referred to recent accounts of their work in Dublin, Glasgow, and Manchester. These were remarkable for their mention of so great a number of young men as had become converts and devoted themselves to Christian work. He affirmed that none of their public services had been followed by more gratifying assurances than last night's mass meeting for men. Half an hour before the Bible lecture the hall was filled, the doors shut, and many hundreds left standing round the entrances. It was reported that many of those at the noon meeting had remained in their seats. Mr. Moody illustrated the Bible lecture by some of his most thrilling anecdotes and appeals, but happily he has repressed the most distracting exclamations so frequent among his early audiences here. When he requested a few minutes' silent prayer, a stillness as of death fell on the vast assembly. Many hundreds had to be denied admission to the evening meeting, at which Mr. Moody gave a very impressive address from the words, "Sun, renumber." Two other meetings—one for men, another for women—were held elsewhere. The total attendance at the meetings to day was about 12,000.

COUNT yourself no Christian because you like thoughts and discourses about God. Be jealous of any gospel that merely pleases you, and puts your natural sentiments aglow. See God in the flowers, if you will; but ask no gospel made up of flowers. Look after a sinner's gospel, one that brings you God himself. Doubtless you are hungry; therefore you want bread, and not any more fooling after it. Understand the tragic perils of your sin, and think nothing strong enough for you but a tragic salvation. Require a transforming religion, not a pleasurable. Be enticed by no flattering sentimentalities, which the children of nature are everywhere taking for religion. Refuse to sail in the shallows of the sea; strike out into deep waters, where the surges roll heavily, as in God's majesty, and the gales of the Spirit blow. Man your piety as a great expedition against God's enemies and yours, and hope for no delicate salvation, not to be won by sacrifices and perils.—Bushnell.

God knows what keys in the human soul to touch, in order to draw out its sweetest and most perfect harmonies. They may be in the minor strains of sadness and sorrow; they may be in the loftier notes of joy and gladness. God knows where the melodies of nature are, and what discipline will call them forth. Some with plaintive songs must walk in lowly vales of life's weary way; others in loftier hymns shall sing of nothing but joy as they tread the mountain tops of life; but they all unite without a discord or a jar, as the ascending anthem of loving and believing hearts finds its way into the chorus of the redeemed in Heaven.

The happiness of our lives depends, in great part, on the character of our surroundings. We have friends, money, good position, prospering circumstances, and there is literally nothing to trouble us. The friends may be fickle and turn into enemies, the riches make themselves wings and fly away, and all that was fortunate may be driven off. What then shall we do? Where shall we find repose? Jesus tells the weary and heavy laden that in him they can find rest. This we know, if we reach it, must be superior to all the joys of life, and hence far more than a compensation for all its losses.

Dr. Hawes used to give Dr. Emmons the credit of having moulded his style of preaching by a single criticism. He had read him a composition which was exuberant with rhetoric. Dr. Emmons's comment was: "Joel, I kept school once. When I whipped the boys, I always stripped the leaves off the rod." And he drew an imaginary rod through his fingers by way of illustration. This hint is good for all sorts of writers. The rod of speech should be stripped of all redundant words to be effective.

The minister should preach as if he felt that, although the congregation own the church, and have bought the pews, they have not bought him. His soul is worth no more than any other man's, but it is all his, and he can not afford to sell it for a salary. The terms are by no means equal. If a parishioner does not like the preaching he can go elsewhere, and get another pew; but the preacher can not get another soul.—Chapin.

One may live as a conqueror, or a king, or a magistrate; but he must die a man. The bed of death brings every human being to his own end in individuality, to the intense contemplation of that deepest and most solemn of all relations, the relation between the creature and his creator.—Webster.

A Child's Evening Prayer.

Jesus, Saviour, bow thine ear,
Listen to my evening prayer,
Be thou present, be thou near,
Make thy little one thy care.

All the sins I've done this day -
And to sin I know I'm prone - Wash them in thy blood away,
Make me, keep me, all thine own.

I thy little lamb would be,
In thine own best footsteps tread;
Oh, my Saviour, look on me -
For whom thy blood was shed.

Do thou bless my parents dear,
My brothers, sisters, all I love;
Every blessing that can cheer,
Pour upon them from above.

Sleep will shortly close thy eyes,
Do thou watch around my bed,
In the morning when I rise,
By the hand may I be led.

Lod by thee thus every day,
Whatever comes I'll all be well,
And when thou callst my soul away,
With happy angels let me dwell.

A Mother's Words.

A youth of some eighteen or nineteen years of age sat at an open window, a look of painful perplexity on his face, caused apparently by a letter he held in his hand. After sitting thus for some minutes, he muttered to himself, "Yes; I must go. If I don't, Brown and Smith will be laughing at me, and calling me righteous overmuch; and, after all, there is no great harm in it; for I'll go to church in the morning, and it's only to be a sail down the river, and spend a day in the country." Still he pressed his hand on his forehead for an instant; then, rising hastily, he said, "There is no use hithering about it; I must go."

As he rose, his eye lighted on the setting sun; and as he did so, his whole expression changed; a sweet yet half-sad look played on his face; his thoughts were elsewhere; another scene was before his eyes. The dark street had disappeared, and in its stead a neat country cottage had risen. In thought, he was there; once more he saw the hills that rose near that cottage home, once more the blue waters of the distant lake glistened before him; once more he sat in the cottage garden with his widowed mother and watched the setting sun; once more that mother's words sounded in his ears: "John, don't forget God. Remember His Sabbath day. Though sinners entice thee to break it, consent thou not. May the God of the fatherless guide you, may the Lord Jesus be your Saviour!"

Yes; six months had passed since he heard these and other words, and yet they seemed to sound in his ears. Tears filled his eyes; and, rising, he folded his hands and knelt in prayer; then taking up his pen, he wrote thus:—"Thanks, Brown, for your invitation, but I cannot accept it. My duty to God is to obey his commands; and he has said, 'Remember the Sabbath-day, to keep it holy.' Spending the day in idle pleasure is not doing this; and I wish you would think of the subject, and not go yourself."

How great is the influence of a godly mother's words! How wonderful the answers to her earnest prayer!—Episcopalian.

Table Manners.

The table is the place at which the family meet, and where there should be the freest and most unrestrained social intercourse. We eat to live; but the more animal necessity is lifted up and glorified when the charms of pleasant conversation and of natural courtesy surround the custom. So far as the sustaining of life is concerned, that object might be reached if each took his bread and meat and retired to a closet to eat it alone. But there is a spiritual life that is to be fed and sustained, and it is starved where there is no grace, not only before, but during, a meal.

The table itself ought to have a festive look. Flowers have a special grace on the breakfast board. A dish of fruit nicely arranged, pleases the eye as well as the palate at dinner. Clean linen, even though coarse, and whole plates and cups, with bright glass and silver, help appetite along. A few well-cooked dishes, however plain, nicely served, will promote health and happiness better than a great variety dinned in the preparation.—Exchange.

LESSON VIII.

February 9th. CALEB'S INHERITANCE (Joshua xiv. 1-15)

COMMIT TO MEMORY, verses 9 and 10. PARALLEL PASSAGES.—Numb. xiii. 80, xiv. 24; with v. 6, read Numb. xiii. 6; with v. 7, Prov. xv. 25; with v. 9, Deut. i. 36; with vs. 10 and 11, Ps. xvi. 12-15; with v. 12, Ps. lvi. 11; with v. 13, Josh. xv. 13; with vs. 14 and 15, Gen. xxiii. 2.

GOLDEN TEXT.—If any man serve me, him will my Father honor.—John xii. 26.

CENTRAL TRUTH.—He is faithful who hath promised.

We must go far back to have this record in a clear and orderly way in our minds. As early as the time of Abraham, Kirjath-arba (seven hours south of Jerusalem) was a place of consequence. Manure was probably near it, the name, perhaps, of its sacred grove, and sometimes used for it. Its name is either from Arba, a leading man of the Anakims, or from its being a leading place (father-city, like "mother Church"). The Anakims in three divisions (Numb. xiii. 22) had taken possession of it. Ahiman, Sheshai, and Talmi, are, likely, familiar names, not individuals (see Josh. xv. 14). The place was extremely ancient (see Numb. xiii. 25), "built seven years before Zoan of Egypt," possibly by the same people and apparently with great strength. The place was called Kirjath-arba in the 14th century, and had then also a separate Jewish name. It is still a considerable country town. This place had been visited by the spies sent by Moses (Numb. x. 13); and its strength and the seeming force of the Anakims dismayed the majority of them (vs. 19, 20). Hence they reported most unfavorably on their return (vs. 32, 33), and a moan arose, with the most disastrous results, detailed in Numb. xiv. Two men only saw with the eyes of saints and courageous followers of the Lord, Caleb and Joshua. Caleb seems to have taken a firm, positive stand (Numb. xiii. 30). This the Lord noticed (xiv. 24), and communicated by Moses, his firm purpose ("I will give him an inheritance in the land.") Our Lesson is the continuation of this history, and would be unintelligible without it.

We have Caleb's friends moving in his behalf (v. 6). He was of Judah; hence "the children of Judah" support his claim. He may have been adopted in the tribe, as his father is called the Kenazite; but this is not certain. If he was an Edomite, in part, all the more noble was his fidelity. Joshua is judging or ruling at Gilgal, seven years after the land has been entered. Caleb is the spokesman, and makes his claim with simple, earnest directness, all the more confidently because he could say to Joshua, "Thou knowest." The two men are placed together in Numb. xiv. 38. He gives all the circumstances; two speakers, Moses, his character, man of God; the place, Kadesh-barnea; the occasion, when sent "to spy out the land" (v. 7).

The course of his "brethren" is mentioned no more than is needful (v. 8), in making "the heart of the people melt," and his own is simply stated (v. 8). "I wholly followed the Lord my God," or as it is in the verso before: "I brought him word again as it was in my heart," i. e., a true and sincere report.

He calls Moses' solemn promise of "the land whereon thy feet have trodden," for an inheritance in his family, on the ground of his fidelity. He recalls God's goodness (v. 12). It was in the second year after the exodus he had been sent out. Thirty-eight years had passed in the wilderness, and seven in the "wars" (of v. 15). (See "long time" of Josh. xi. 18.) The promise of possessing the land implied continued life, "as he said." He was now "four-score and five years old."

His being "strong" (v. 11), and as fit "for war" as forty years before, is mentioned with gratitude, and as is natural with the old. We have adopted the phrase "to go out and come in," to describe the regular discharge of duties. Moses had employed it (Deut. xxxi. 2).

His faith appears now as before. He does not doubt his ability to drive out the Anakims (v. 12), "if so be the Lord shall be with me." He does not fear danger, or court ease, any more than when he was a spy.

His claim was cordially granted. Joshua "blessed him," and gave him that mountain, which continued to belong to his family (see v. 14), which became a city of refuge; see 1 Chron. vi. 57 in the time of David (1 Sam. xiv. 3, and xxx. 14). Now let us see the points to be remembered in this lesson.

I. Learn the value of truth-telling. Caleb was sincere and truthful. He was in a minority—two to ten, but he held to the truth. And he did this in the face of danger, for slaying was proposed (Numb. xiv. 10).

Men lie in politics, trade, in religion, even in courtesy. They go with the crowd; are insincere, running down, or exalting men, as it is the humor of the time to do. The ninth commandment forbids lying, either for or against our neighbor. A lie is an insult to God, a denial of his knowing all. Society is built on truth between man and man, and it falls to pieces as truth falls. "Lie not one to another" (Col. iii. 9).

II. The ground on which to stand up for truth: "Following the Lord fully." It is the same principle as in Joseph's case (Gen. xxxix. 9). See Psalm xvi. 8. He directs in the word. He is to be followed even through discomfort, danger and death. To think of the honor that cometh from men, hinders not only the doing, but the believing of the truth. (See John v. 44.) Following the Lord was the sign of discipleship in the New Testament. (See Hebrews vi. 3.) The way to learn is to follow (Eph. v. 1), "followers of God, as dear children," and Rev. xiv. 4.

23.) "The eyes of the Lord are on the righteous." Obey God in common things, and natural rewards come; in spiritual, and spiritual rewards are given.

IV THE REWARD MAY BE LONG DEFERRED. So faith is exercised (Heb. xi. 37) for patience is displayed (Heb. vi. 16). So God would have us "wait patiently for him" (Ps. xxxvii. 7). See also James i. 8. Faith rests on the word of God. Caleb pleads the promise of God. So do true supplicants to Him (Ps. cxix. 49). This faith does not prevent our using fitting means. Caleb claimed his right at Joshua's hands.

V. THE REWARD IS SURE. God cannot lie. So Caleb found it. So do all the faithful (1 Pet. i. 8-5). "God is not unrighteous" (Heb. vi. 10). Yet is it a reward not of debt, but of grace, for the Lord helps his people to serve, promises the reward, and gives it abundantly. See David, 1 Chron. xxix. 12-14, and John x. 10.

VI. "But," you think, "I can have no chance to be faithful like Caleb, there is no land to be reported upon now." There you mistake. Every Christian says in effect: "I have seen the Lord, I have become his, I am of his family;" and all men watch us to see what "report" we bring of it. If we are mean, selfish, intently anxious to get a portion in this life, caring little about God, his worship, house, service, if we be morose, gloomy, fractious, peevish, discontented grumblers, they will think meanly of our position, and treatment, and prospects, and so unworthy of our Lord. Let us not bring "an evil report." Let us have a hopeful, happy, bright, genial Christian life. Let us think little of what we give up for Christ, and a great deal of what he gives us; we shall not lose our reward. For aught we know it may be such fidelity that will make "one star differ from another" for the future glory.

SUGGESTIVE TOPICS.

The purpose of the spies—number—report—minority—the tribes Caleb and Joshua represented—the promise concerning Caleb—how certified (v. 9)—by what authority Moses swore (v. 6)—the supporters of Caleb's claim (v. 6)—on what ground—Caleb's age when sent as spy—when making this claim—how long in Canaan—the place claimed—ground of it (v. 12) compared with Numb. xiv. 24)—the history of Hebron before this—after it—other name—its antiquity—Caleb's gratitude—his confidence (v. 12)—his reception by Joshua—the grant—the former occupants of the place—the lessons we may learn—value of truth—the virtues Caleb displayed—nature of following the Lord—certainty of the reward, and ground of this certainty.

The Lord's Jewels.

We see in a jeweller's shop that as there are pearls and diamonds, and other precious stones, there are files, cutting instruments, and many sharp tools for their polishing; and while they are in the work-house, they are continual neighbors to them, and often come under them. The Church is God's jewel; His workhouse where His jewels are polishing for His palace and house; and those He especially esteems, and means to make most resplendent, He hath ordered His tools upon.—Leighton

The Use of Enemies.

When a man complains of his enemies, it not only shows that his heart is filled with bitterness, and that he would not hesitate to retaliate if opportunity should offer, but also that he lacks wisdom as well as charity, in not considering how useful an enemy could be to him. A wise and faithful friend once spoke to his acquaintance upon this subject, as follows:

"You are ever complaining of the wrong and annoyance you suffer from your enemy, but you forget that more than half your trouble and fears come from your own heart. Guard more against yourself, and you will have less reason to fear other enemies; for open enemies are far less dangerous than secret ones. The man is an enemy to himself who indulges in hatred to his fellow-man, and meditates revenge against those of whose hostility he complains; for by cherishing such a temper of mind he makes himself an enemy of the God who condemns all implacability and malevolence of disposition. Now consider the matter calmly, and you will soon see how much good you may derive from an enemy, and thank God that so much good can come of evil."

Prayer-Meeting Hints.

Sit near the front. Hold sacred the evenings of your prayer-meetings. "Boil it down." A great deal can be said in three minutes. Welcome strangers who drop into the meetings; a kind word to such has often done great good. Did you ever hear any one complain that the prayers were "too short" in a prayer-meeting?—Sowing and Reaping.

At a Sunday-school service the rector was illustrating the necessity of Christian profession in order properly to enjoy the blessings of Providence in this world; and, to make it apparent to the youthful mind, the rector said:—"For instance, I want to introduce water into my house; I have it pumped. The pipes and every convenience are in good order, but I get no water. Can any of you tell me why I do not get water? He expected the children to see that it was because he had not made a connection with the main in the street. The boys looked perplexed. They could not see why the water should refuse to run into his premises after all this. "Can no one tell me what I have neglected?" reiterated the good rector, looking over the flock of wondering faces, bowed down by the weight of the problem. "I know," squeaked out a little five-year-old. "You haven't paid the rate!"

Missionary Intelligence.

Mr. Bruen, of the Church Missionary Society, writes that he has fifty times as many opportunities for teaching the Gospel to Mohammedans in Persia as he had in India.

The new school of the Church Missionary Society at Akka, at the mouth of the River Kishon, in Palestine, has been closed by the Turkish authorities. This one of the many indications of reviving Mohammedan fanaticism, and of the prevalence of reactionary counsels at Constantinople.

AFTER a somewhat perilous voyage of upwards of five months, the little steamer of the London Society, the "Ellengowan," intended for the New Guinea Mission, has arrived at Cape York, Australia, where the mission has its headquarters. The "Ellengowan" is the seventh missionary vessel, and the first steamer connected with the London Missionary Society.

Sad news comes from the Karen missions around Toung, Burmah. Vast armies of rats have swept the fields of the standing rain. The government has only recently begun to assist the people, when their migration from the jungles into the plain forced the matter upon the attention of the officials. The whole northern country of the Karens is on the move for food. Many parish on the way, unable to reach Toung, where relief works have been established. Schools and churches have been broken up by the famine.

One of the most beautiful spots in India is Mongnapuram, in Tinnevely. Fifty years ago it was a sandy jungle. Now the mission promises, on which the fine Gothic church, the schools, and the parsonage stand, are fragrant with roses, rich with fruits, and shaded with noble trees. Mongnapuram is an entirely Christian village, and out of it and neighbouring villages a congregation of 1,000 persons is gathered on the Sabbath. The Missionary through whom God wrought all this rests beside the wall of his Church, and his widow and daughters still reside in the bungalow near by.

The news of the revolution which has placed young Alfonso on the Spanish throne has awakened fresh interest in the Gospel work now carried on in that country. Since the beginning of the year we have only had the meagre information conveyed through Cable dispatches. Two Protestant newspapers suppressed at Madrid gave an unfavorable impression of the new reign at the very outset. These papers must be La Luz, a semi-monthly, founded by Carrasco, and El Cristiano, a weekly, owned by the London Tract Society. Then it was reported that a Protestant church had been closed at Cadiz; and, lastly, we have the information that King Alfonso is favourable to religious liberty as it prevails in other countries. The most recent letters from Evangelical laborers in Spain date from the beginning of November. Then the Protestants of Madrid were in excellent spirits. A deeper unity had been evoked among the members of the various societies than heretofore, and a hand-bill pleading for the use of the Scriptures, signed by all the Evangelical pastors and ex-precis in Madrid, had been circulated before the churches and at the cemetery gates on All Souls' Day, to the amount of 20,000 copies. The event of the month, however, was the first appearance of the well-known Padre Tomas as an Evangelical preacher. His first sermon on the reading of the Scriptures was delivered in the enlarged United Presbyterian church, before an audience of 1,000 people, composed largely of the higher classes.

The Chinese Recorder gives an account of an interesting experiment which is being made at Hang-Chau, in the establishment of an Opium Refuge, under the general charge of the Church Missionary Society. Fifteen years ago an Indian civilian was constrained by conscience to give up his position as a collector of the opium tax and to devote the savings of his official income, amounting to upward of $15,000, to the relief of Chinese opium smokers. The Church Missionary Society, which had been made the custodian of this fund, endeavored on several occasions to carry out the purpose of the donor; but with only partial success. At last the services of Dr. Galt, of the Edinburgh Medical Missionary Society, were obtained, and towards the close of 1873 the hospital was established at Hang-Chau. About 160 opium patients have been received. After the Refuge became known opium smokers showed great eagerness to enter upon the course of cure. A fee of two dollars was required upon entrance, partly to pay the expense of board and partly to prevent the patient from running away before the course of treatment was finished. No patients are so unruly as the opium smokers. At first they are anxious to be cured; but when, after some days, the gradual diminution of opium becomes felt in nausea and lassitude they are apt to grow mutinous, often throwing their meals out of the windows and attacking the porter who prevents their escape. There have been exceptions, however, to this unruly behaviour, and in several instances it is hoped that an impression has been made for Christ. The course of cure occupies fifteen days, and is conducted by Dr. Galt with admirable patience. Recent advices from China bear testimony to the growing evil of the opium traffic. It is now legalized, and the opium dens are unblushingly opened in the largest streets. The use of this drug is promoting the consumption of spirituous liquors, so that drunkenness, which was formerly rare in China, is now common. The Chinese have determined to cultivate opium for themselves, and thus drive out the foreign traffic in this drug. It is therefore probable that ere long England's policy in regard to the opium trade will become as unprofitable as it is wicked.

Mr. Gladstone is said to have made £1,500 by his pamphlet on the Vatican Decrees, and it is stated he wrote it in two days. The sale continues immense; one house, that of Messrs. W. H. Smith & Son, of London, alone disposes of 1,000 copies a day. He has resigned the leadership of the Liberal party.

Miscellaneous.

The New York Christian Intelligencer says:—It is John Henry Newman, the well known English parrot to Romanism, who has elastic ideas of law. If parliament should pass a law which offended his conscience, and the Pope forbade him to obey it, he would obey the Pope and not the law. If on the other hand he held a lawful office under the government of his country, necessary for its defence and protection, and the Pope forbade him to hold it, he would temporarily disobey him. His precise language is, "I. Parliament should pass an act compelling Catholics to attend Protestant services once a week, and the Pope should forbid them, I would obey the Pope, not the law. If I were a soldier or sailor, and the Pope bid all Catholics leave the army or navy, I would disobey him in time of war. It will be observed that Mr. Newman does not found his proposed disobedience to the law upon the fact of its illegality or unconstitutionality, but upon the will of the Pope; and in like manner he does not found his contingent disobedience to the Pope upon the fact that the Pope had no right to command his obedience, but upon the stress of a particular and passing exigency—"in time of war."

Proper to whom Indiana divorce laws are too rigid had better go to Switzerland. The new regulations recently adopted by the Swiss National Council provide that divorce may be pronounced either for certain stated reasons or as the result of mutual consent. The council, however, rejected a proposal to permit the judge to issue a decree of divorce "as the result of his own opinion that facts proved in evidence showed it to be expedient for the happiness of the parties concerned." So that husbands and wives who live happily together, and don't want to be separated, are not to be parted against their will. Nevertheless, the laws would seem to be sufficiently liberal to suit the most advanced of our American free lovers, and we strongly hope that a large emigration of persons of this class to Switzerland will immediately set in.

The perils of reporting is shown in the following incident:—Mr. Disraeli, having informed a Scottish witness that it was not his wont to "swagger or utter unbecoming words in the streets," was reported in the local papers to have said that he did not "stagger or use big words in the street." Mr. Knatchbull-Hugessou's oratory has recently undergone a similar improvement in the hands of a journal in the West of England. He had referred to Mr. Disraeli as one who "towered above the rest of the Government as a giant among pigmies;" but he was made to say, "Mr. Disraeli, before whom the rest of the Government quailed like beaten hounds before their master!"

The Tablet (Roman paper) thus writes of acts of Parliament:—"The Queen will it, her Lords will it, her Commons will it. What does it want to complete the perfect fashion of the law? Nothing of solemnity, nothing of force, which the imperial sceptre of this kingdom ever gives it wanting to it. But the Pope snuffs disdainfully at it; an Italian priest will have none of it; it trenches upon his rights, and therefore Commons, Lords, Queen, wax parchment, and all, avail it very little. You may call it law if you please, you may note it on your roll, but before long you will have to repeal or alter it in order to secure the sanction of a foreign potentate, without which it has not in the end the value of a penny-mail."

A SLAVANT girl of no strong intellect, who lived with a lady in Scotland, surprised her mistress by giving her warning. The lady inquired the cause, and found it was a sweet-heart. "And who is the lad?" inquired the mistress. "Oh he's a nice lad—a lad that sits in the kirk just fornaet me." "Are you sure he intends to marry you?" "I dare say he does, mem." "Have you had much of each other's company, yet?" "Not yet." "When did you last converse with him?" "Deed we hae nae conversed ony yet." "Then how should you suppose that he is going to marry you?" "Oh," replied the simple girl, "he's been lang lokin' at me, and I think he'll soon be speakin'."

As a result of the Shah's visit to Europe, many changes have taken place in the customs of the upper and middle classes of Persia. In dress they are imitating the Europeans to a limited extent. Missionaries are reported to be enjoying greater liberty. The Shah intends to have a postal service organized, and hopes for modern means of travel, although Baron Reuter's railway project is at present at a standstill. There is great corruption in the army of the country, it being styled "a real plague spot."

The Edinburgh Weekly Review says:—There is some talk of a reunion among the different Wesleyan sects. The Methodist newspapers especially urge that this should be accomplished, and asks what might hinder the "New Connection," the "United," the "Primitives," and the "Bible Christians," from coming together. T. Presbyterians all these differences are well known as completely unintelligible as the divisions of Presbyterians no beyond the comprehension of the Methodists.

LONDON capitalists and philanthropists have formed a stock company with a capital of about $5,000,000, for the purpose of building a city to accommodate 16,000 working men on a plot of eighty acres they have purchased in the West End. It is to contain a park of four acres, streets and gardens tastefully laid out, and houses arranged for comfort, but with no beer or whiskey shops in the place.

A CORN piece, affecting to be of ten centuries, has got into a certain circulation in France, which is worthy of note. It bears the head of Napoleon III. in a Prussian helmet. Around the neck is a dog's collar with a ring. Upon it is inscribed "Jedon." The circular is dated "Napoleon III. le Misérable, 1,000 prisonniers." On the reverse, an owl perched on a cannon; around "Vampire Francaise, 2 Dec., 1851. September, 1870." THUNDERBOLT Europe the price of corn is falling. Prus has a better crop than for ten year's past.

NOTES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"ANSWERS" has considerable cause for complaint. We shall take care in it to allow our correspondent to expend himself quite so foolishly.

TO OUR READERS.

This is the first number of our fourth volume. For three years the PRESBYTERIAN has made its weekly visits to an ever increasing number of homes. It has been somewhat hard uphill work, but we have persevered, cheered by the sympathy and assistance, and approval of very many of the excellent of the earth.

MR. CARRUTHER'S CASE.

A Presbyterian Minister's wife sends us a dollar as the contribution of her son—a lad of about 18—who says he will be happy to send the same amount every year. We have handed the money over to the Rev. Mr. Reid, as we could scarcely engage to be the treasurer to such a fund.

A VERY GOOD REASON WHY.

It is often asked why religious Weeklies cannot be published at as low a rate as the weekly editions of the secular dailies. The New York Christian Advocate explains for the sake of some of its subscribers. We reproduce the explanation here because it may save us a great deal of trouble, and serve to remove a serious misapprehension under which a large number of our readers are at present labouring.

The Social Reunion held recently in the Daly Street Presbyterian Church was well attended, and was in all respects a great success. The pastor of the congregation, the Rev. Mr. Armstrong, presided, and the speakers were the Hon. Malcolm Cameron, Rev. Messrs. Stewart, Gordon, and Hall.

CONTROVERSY IN THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

Although not directly interested, we are not unsympathising witnesses in the struggle now going on in the Church of England. The last thirty years has seen many strange things in that community, and the present generation may not see the end of the revived energy that has shown itself by all parties.

While many have been so consistent as to go over to Rome, the Catholics who remain have been most energetic in re-introducing into the Church of England the impious, ritual, and half-heathen ceremonies and festivals of the Church of the middle ages. Thus, though nominally separate from the Romish communion, thousands in the Established Church approve of SACERDOTALISM, with its priests, its sacrifice, its altar, its robes, its absolution.

The controversy now raging in England is of absorbing interest. There can be little doubt that Monsignor Capel has proved that Romish doctrines are being taught by many in the Church of England, and it is significant that Jesuitical cunning judges the time to have arrived when, throwing off disguise, it may openly carry on its warfare both within and without the pale of the Established Church.

The exciting Broad Church controversy meanwhile experiences a lull. It has been decided that in the state Church a Broad Churchman of the essay and review or Colenso type, may deny every evangelical doctrine and yet be a clergyman, just as a Ritualist may practice almost every thing Popish, and yet evade episcopal inhibition.

In our own province the combat deepens. The complaint of the Churchwardens at Weston, Ont., have at length been so far regarded as to have secured official investigation. The incumbent shows the true Ritualistic spirit; he evades the inquiry, and by resorting to every subterfuge will try to prevent the real issue being arrived at.

For us these matters are fraught with deep interest. We cannot help sympathizing with the Protestant position and aspirations of the Church Association, and wish them success. The Anglican Church can accomplish much in our Dominion if it is true to evangelical religion. On the other hand, the consequences of High Church exclusiveness and assumption, and Ritualistic mummeries, must be to alienate from the Anglican Church all other denominations of Christians, and to prepare the way among our people for the superstitious ignorance and subservient spirit, if not the dominance of Roman Catholicism in our country.

PROTESTANTISM. WHAT IS IT?

"In answer to the question what I meant by telling English Churchmen that the Bishop's charge was 'a brave and clear protest against Protestantism,' I wished to convey this:—that the Bishop had spoken out boldly against modern false doctrines, heresies, and schismatical departures from the faith and practice of the primitive Church, down to the last new sect of the Communists.

We clip the above from a letter signed T. Bedford Jones, and dated Ottawa. We presume the writer is the Rev. Dr. Jones, Rector of St. Alban's Church, the advanced Ritualistic Church of the Metropolis. With the controversy to which it is a contribution we have nothing to do, but the view given of Protestantism is worthy of our consideration.

We cannot think that Dr. Jones has been led to adopt the above outrageous "definition through ignorance of history, but he betrays most lamentable ignorance of the sentiments of Christians other than those within the Church of England. We can understand however, how a mind that has shut itself out from all intercourse with dissenters of any type, and risen to the height of High Churchism from that lofty empyrean of ecclesiastical isolation can proudly look down and refuse even to think of or listen to men who dare to think for themselves without asking the church.

Dr. Jones position leads to Rome, all he says notwithstanding. The only true position is the Protestant one the right of private judgement in interpreting God's revealed will. Nor, we venture to say, would Dr. Jones object if the private judgment of any Protestant should lead him to accept the church's exposition of Scripture; it is only when private judgement is against the reverend gentleman that he is against the Protestant's right to exercise it.

On Friday evening the 6th February, a number of the Barton congregation visited the manse of their pastor at Ancaster. They provided for themselves and other guests a generous repast. After some time had been pleasantly spent by the party, Mr. Young read an address expressive of the esteem of the people of Barton for their pastor and his wife, and presented to the latter a very handsome sewing machine of the best description.

Ministers and Churches.

The 1st congregation of the C. P. Church in the Township of Chinguacousy, dedicated their new building to the service of God on Sabbath, the 24th ult. The Rev. W. T. McMullen, of Woodstock, officiated in the morning and in the evening. The Rev. J. M. King of Toronto, in the afternoon. The services were throughout in unison with the special occasion, and the sermons, in which prominence was given to the fundamental doctrines of our religion, and to the exhibition of Jesus Christ, as the Saviour of the fallen, and the head over all things to the Church, were alike from the subjects, and the freshness with which they were invested, calculated to rouse many to serious thought, and to comfort and cheer the Christian in his higher life.

PRESENTATION AT OAKVILLE.—One of those mutually pleasing little affairs which are not soon forgotten by any concerned, and which serve to encourage ministers in their work of faith and labor of love, transpired at the Presbyterian manse in this town last Wednesday evening, when Rev. Mr. Meikle and family, were unexpectedly visited by numerous self-invited guests from the congregation of the Presbyterian church, on the sixteenth. During the evening, which was very pleasantly spent, Mr. Meikle was presented with a purse containing a hundred dollars, as a token of love, esteem and gratitude, in recognition of the valuable services rendered their church in years past.

At a meeting of the members of the First Presbyterian Church, Brockville, held on Wednesday evening, the following gentlemen were elected Trustees for the year, 1876:—Messrs. J. A. Cameron, James Kyle, J. Lafayette, W. McCullough, and T. Tate. Mr. A. Stewart the retiring Treasurer, read the financial report for the past year, which was extremely encouraging. The church is free from debt, and there being a surplus over, a bonus of $100 was voted to the worthy pastor, Mr. Traver. During the year the congregation has also raised as much money as to pay off the mortgage on the manse, about $1,000. It is in contemplation to provide better accommodation for the Sabbath School, which is much wanted, the present basement, where the School is held, being altogether unfit for the purpose. All this has been done by the members and adherents of the church, a fact which speaks well for their liberality.

The Sabbath School Anniversary of the Presbyterian Church, Barrie, was held last evening. The basement was excessively crowded, many persons not being able to find standing room. The various Reading Recitations, &c., were excellent. A striking feature in the evening's entertainment was the tender age of some of the children who recited, many of them being mere infants. Addresses were delivered by the Rev. John Beattie, J. McL. Stevenson, Rector of Bradford. The appearance of the Sunday School is very much improved by the new illuminated texts and mottoes which now adorn the walls.

The Orillia Packet says: The annual Missionary Meeting in Esson Church, Ont., on the 27th of January, was well attended. The Rev. R. Fraser, B.A., gave an excellent address on the subject of Missions—particularly the Home Missions. Rev. R. Fairbairn, Pastor, occupied the chair. The choir, under the leadership of Mr. Richard Anderson, added to the interest of the proceedings by singing a selection of suitable hymns.

The four leading religious denominations of Philadelphia report churches and communicants as follows: Baptists, 31 churches, 16,507 communicants; Episcopalians, 79 churches, 18,125 communicants; Methodists, 75 churches, 19,770 communicants; Presbyterians, (not including the "United" and "Reformed" branches, which together number about 11,000 communicants,) 72 churches and 22,035 communicants.

The Church Herald, Toronto, says the Orillia Packet, has been amalgamated with the Church Journal, of New York, an arrangement which seems undesirable, and likely to be of short duration. The Episcopalians in Canada are quite able, and we believe would be willing to support a Church paper, representing the body, as the Guardian does the Methodists, and the British American Presbyterian the Presbyterians.

The sum of $9,000 has already been subscribed by the Rev. Mr. Middlemiss congregation, in Elora, to build a new church, for which a plan is now being selected. With this view, a deputation consisting of the Rev. Mr. Middlemiss, Messrs. J. M. Fraser, R. Cromer, A. Gordon, and Jas. Gladstone, arrived in Guelph to inspect the churches in that town.

The Woodstock Sentinel remarks: "The energy of the members of the C. P. Church, Ratho, is something wonderful. During last summer they almost wholly rebuilt their church, and during the last seven or eight years they have built their manse three times, it being destroyed by fire twice."

The Rev. J. McTaviah, of Woodstock, has been invited to hold a series of meetings under the auspices of the Orillia Young Men's Christian Association, and the Expositor is informed he has consented to do so. Particulars of the meetings will be given in due time.

An English rector, having a salary of $10,000 a year, having failed for $120,000, comprising with his sixty-four creditors at 25 per cent., has been requested by his bishop to resign. He has declined, and says that, having "great expectations," he will eventually pay up in full.

The congregation of St. Andrew's Church, Godorich, have paid off one half the debt on the manse—$300. The remaining portion will soon be paid off, as a good portion is already subscribed.

Rev. Joshua Fraser, B.A., now of Whitby, preached in the "Kirk" on Sabbath evening last. His sermon was eloquent and effective, and was highly spoken of.

The Rev. J. P. Baikie, has declined the call from the congregations of Hanover and West Bentick.

Rev. Jas. Bryant was ordained minister of the Canada Presbyterian Church, Glendon, on the 26th January.

The ladies of St. John's Church, Almonte, intend holding a series of soirees during the remainder of the winter.

The old Knox Church, Paisley, is to be sold and removed.

A sacred concert in Knox Church, Montreal, last week, realized $125.

The Presbyterians of Meaford have placed an organ in their church.

Presbytery of Montreal.

The Presbytery met again at three o'clock on Wednesday afternoon, 27th ult. The call from the congregation of Kenyon to the Rev. Adam McKay, of Middle River, N.S., signed by 93 members and 160 adherents, was received and directed to be transmitted to the Presbytery of Victoria and Richmond, for presentation to Mr. McKay. Dr. Hugh McLeod, of Sydney, was appointed to present the call in the interests of the congregation of Kenyon. The call from Fort Massey Church, Halifax, to Dr. Burns, of this city, was then considered. The call is signed by 133 members, and 63 adherents; the salary promised is $2,000 per annum. Rev. Mr. Smith, who appeared on behalf of the Fort Massey Church, stated that it was a new church organized two years ago, and located in the most wealthy quarter of Halifax, the people composing the congregation being in general wealthy, and some of them among the leading active Christian men in the Lower Provinces. The amount contributed for all religious purposes, last year, was $120 per family, and he doubted if there was another church in the Dominion that could show so large contributions. Mr. Smith dwelt on the great influence for good which the minister of Fort Massey church would exercise in the various questions of Home and Foreign Missions, also on common school education, as well as on Dalhousie College, and stated that owing to the peculiar circumstances of the people, it would be injurious to the church were they left for a long time without a pastor, and that a man from a distance would be more acceptable than from near home. Messrs. David Morrice, John Sterling, Archibald Ferguson, Mooney, Hugh Watson, and Dr. MacVicar, were heard on behalf of the Cote street congregation against the removal of their pastor, Dr. Burns. It was stated that there are now four vacant congregations in the city, which has lately become a market where people from a distance come to get their pastors, and it was time this sort of thing was stopped. The amount contributed for religious purposes by Cote street congregation was increasing; in 1870 it amounted altogether to $11,400; in 1873 it was $19,600. The membership was about 500. The speakers expressed their high esteem of Dr. Burns, and expressed the hope that he would not be removed from them, as there was danger of division in the congregation should he leave, it being probable that the portion of the congregation that wish to remove westward, would separate and organize a new church. The call being placed in Dr. Burns' hands, he asked until Thursday to decide what answer to make, which was granted. The call from Nazareth street church to Rev. E. F. Torrance was declined by the latter, and ordered to be set aside. A petition was received from the people of Lancaster congregation, asking for half of the services of Rev. Kenneth McDonald, of Alexandria, and promising to pay half of his salary, or $500 per annum. The petition was received and its consideration deferred until the call from Indian Lands congregation had been considered. The call from the congregation of Indian Lands to Rev. Kenneth McDonald, of Alexandria, signed by 127 members and 182 adherents of the congregation was then taken up. The salary promised is $800 per annum, with free manse and glebe of 27 acres. The call being sustained, Mr. Charles McDonald was heard on behalf of the congregation of Indian Lands, and Messrs. Robert Wilson and John Simpson on behalf of the people of Alexandria. The Presbytery was highly delighted with the natural eloquence exhibited by these old Highland Scotchmen from Glengary. Mr. C. McDonald urged on behalf of the proposed removal of Mr. McDonald that he would have the same opportunity of carrying on his mission work among the Scotch Roman Catholics of Glengary who he is residing in Indian Lands, as if he continued in Alexandria, and as it was difficult to secure a Gaelic speaking pastor for Indian Lands, it would be a serious loss to that congregation if they had failed in securing the minister they wanted, as they had already been disappointed four times, this being the fifth call that had been given unsuccessfully since the congregation became vacant. Messrs. Wilson and Simpson urged strongly on behalf of the Alexandria congregation, the great injury which the Scotch Roman Catholics in Glengary would sustain were Mr. McDonald removed. Reference was also made to the successful temperance work performed by Rev. Mr. McDonald. The call was put into Mr. McDonald's hands, and that gentleman stated that as he was a missionary appointed by the Presbytery, he would leave the matter to the decision of that body. It being six o'clock the Presbytery adjourned.

THIRD SEDERUNT.

The Presbytery met again on Thursday at 10 a. m. Rev. Mr. J. McEwen, of Pembroke, being present, was asked to sit as a corresponding member. The clerk was ordered to instruct the different Kirk Sessions to have the answers to questions on the state of religion filled up and returned to him by the last of March. Rev. Mr. Scrimger was authorized, in case the Rev. Mr. Baxter, of Dundee, refused to entertain the call from Stanley street church, to moderate in a second call from that church to a pastor. Rev. Dr. Burns in a lengthy speech gave his reasons for accepting the call from Fort Massey Church, Halifax. It was then resolved that he be relieved from his present charge in Cote street. Dr. MacVicar was appointed to preach in Cote street church on the last Sabbath of February, and declare the church vacant; he was also appointed moderator of the Session of Knox Church, instead of Dr. Burns. Rev. Messrs. Black, N. Paterson, D. Paterson, J. Watson, J. Wellwood, K. McDonald, and Dr. MacVicar expressed their high esteem of Dr. Burns, and their regret at his removal. Rev. Mr. Grant of Vankleok Hill wished to be relieved of the moderatorship of the Session of Kenyon, and Rev. Mr. Moss, of Lochiel, appointed in his stead.—Agreed. In reference to the call to Rev. K. McDonald, from the congregation of Indian Lands, Mr. R. Wilson moved, and Rev. Mr. McKenzie seconded, that Mr. K. McDonald be retained in his present mission. Rev. A. Young moved in amendment, seconded by Rev. J. Watson, that Mr. McDonald be removed from his present charge to that of Indian Lands. Mr. McDonald having left the question to the decision of the Presbytery a lively discussion followed, till the Presbytery adjourned to meet again at 8 o'clock p.m.

FOURTH SEDERUNT.

The Presbytery met again at 8 o'clock, p. m. The report of the Home Mission Committee was considered, and the present appointments continued. The Committee was further instructed to make arrangements for sending an ordained missionary who can speak the French language to the New Glasgow congregation. The Convener of the Committee submitted to the Presbytery the claim set up by Rev. Mr. Leishman for payment for services which he neglected to perform. It was moved, seconded, and carried, "that inasmuch as the Rev. Mr. Leishman has refused to do the work assigned to him, he has no claim to receive any payment from the Mission Fund." Rev. Mr. McLeod, of Hampton, was received as a minister of this church. Rev. John McKay gave an account of the visit of the deputation appointed to visit Leeds. The salary of the pastor, Rev. James McConcealy, has been increased by the addition of $100 per annum. Rev. J. S. Black gave in the report of the committee appointed to draft a resolution regarding the removal of Dr. Burns. It read as follows:—"Resolved that in releasing the Rev. Dr. Burns, D.D., from the pastorate of Cote street church, this Presbytery expresses its deep sense of the loss which it sustains, and desires to put upon record that nothing except Dr. Burns' expressed desire and intention could have moved it to consent to this translation. That during his five years' residence in Montreal, our brother has won the affection and esteem of his own people and of the general public, and also of this Court, by his social qualities, eminent abilities, and Christian graces. He has been the servant of God and the friend of man in much self-sacrificing and willingness. He carries with him the prayers and good wishes of every member of the Presbytery, and we heartily commend him to the God of all grace, wishing him length of days and increased usefulness."—"Resolved—Also that the foregoing be entered on the record of the Presbytery and the clerk be instructed to furnish Dr. Burns with a copy." The call from Indian Lands in favor of Rev. K. McDonald was ordered to be set aside. The petition from Lancaster for half of the services of Rev. K. McDonald, of Alexandria, was referred to a committee of Rev. Messrs. Black, Scrimger, Watson, and N. Paterson, who are to visit the localities and report to next meeting of Presbytery. The next meeting of Presbytery was ordered to be held in the College building on the first Wednesday in April, at 10 o'clock, forenoon. The Presbytery then adjourned.

Presbytery of Chatham.

This Presbytery met in Wellington Street Church, Chatham, on the 5th of January. Among other items of business were the following:—A report was received from Mr. C. Chumquy, who had been appointed to preach the Chicago pulpit vacant, to the effect that he was denied admission to the Church, and had preached in a public hall in the vicinity, where he read the edict of the Presbytery. Further action in the matter was postponed till next regular meeting. The committee appointed to audit the Treasurer's books presented a report which was adopted, and the thanks of the Presbytery were tendered to Mr. K. U. Gubart, the Treasurer, for the accurate manner in which the books were kept, and for his kindness in gratuitously discharging the duties of the office. Messrs. Decket and Stainforth were appointed a committee to secure the immediate payment of arrears due the Presbytery Fund, to report at next meeting. The Presbytery Fund for 1875 was allocated among the congregations within the bounds. Wallaceburg was separated from Dresden and united to the Sydneyham station of the Sombra group; this change, however, not to take effect till April next. Mr. D. McKerracher declined the call to Florence, and a new moderator was granted to this congregation. A moderation in call was also granted to Bothwell if required before next meeting of Presbytery. Missionary meetings were appointed to be held within the bounds, as follows:—

Messrs. Gray and Bartlett were appointed a committee to stimulate the managers of the St. Anne's Mission to support ordinances there.—R. H. WARDEN, Pres. Clerk.

Presbytery of Simcoe.

This Presbytery met at Barrie, on Tuesday, 2nd inst. Present twelve ministers and four elders. Among other transactions of the meeting were the following:—Various reports of the Mission and its meetings recently held were presented, and led to discussion. A committee, consisting of Messrs. Rogers, Gray and Cameron, was appointed to prepare a plan for the Missionary meetings to be held next winter. The committee was directed to present its report at a regular meeting not later than the end of September. An application was made by the stations of Tay and Medonte for regular services during the summer, and six dollars per Sabbath, promised for supply. The application was granted. A communication was read from Mr. Murples, Missionary in Muskoka, intimating his intention to leave the field on the expiration of his engagement, and setting forth a "scheme of church finance," to which he requested the attention of the Presbytery. The communication was laid on the table till next regular meeting, which Mr. Murples is invited to attend. Mr. Hugh Gray, licensed by the Presbytery of Belfast, of the Presbyterian Church in Ireland, on Aug. 6th, 1850, appeared, and put himself in the hands of the court for such duty as it might assign to him. He was empowered to conduct public worship within the bounds, whenever his services may be required. Arrangements were made for the induction of Mr. John McLean, late of the Presbytery of Montreal, into the pastoral charge of Knox Church, Oro, on Wednesday, 17th ult. Mr. Gray to preside and address the minister, Mr. Cameron to preach and address the people, in Gaelic, and Mr. Fairbairn to address the people in English. Intimation was made by a telegram that the Presbytery of Toronto had sustained a call from Charles street congregation to Mr. R. D. Fraser, M.A. Accordingly it was agreed that the Presbytery meet at Barrie, on Tuesday, 16th inst., at 11 a. m., to deal with the matter, and that the usual steps be taken to notify the congregations of Cookstown, Townline Essa and Joy to appear for their interest. The committee formed about two years ago for putting bibles with psalms and paraphrases at low prices, within easy reach of our people, was directed to close its operations as soon as possible, with a view to its being discharged. At the same time another committee was formed to consider whether the object aimed at, in the appointment of the former, may not be secured by means which will not involve the Presbytery in the work. It was unanimously agreed to transmit to F. W. Cumberland, Esq., General Manager of the Northern Railway, the thanks of the Presbytery for his kindness, and that of the Company, in issuing clergymen's certificates for the present year, and thus continuing a privilege which the members of Presbytery have enjoyed for some time past. Sessions were directed to send in replies to the Assembly's questions on State of Religion, at the next ordinary meeting, to be held on Monday, 5th of March, at Barrie. The proposed modification of the Constitution of the General Assembly was approved. It was remitted to Messrs. Rogers, Fairbairn, and Mr. Fraser to make arrangements for holding a Convention on Sabbath schools, as recommended by the Assembly. On motion of Mr. W. Fraser, it was unanimously agreed that Principal Cavan, of Knox College, Toronto, be nominated Moderator of next General Assembly.—ROBERT MOPDIE, Pres. Clerk.

The Late Mrs. Boyd, of Aberdeen.

Our obituary of to-day contains a notice of the death of an old lady, well known in the Free Church of Scotland, and also to many ministers of our own Church. Mrs. Boyd, daughter of Dr. James Tower, of Logie, of H. M. S., and sister-in-law of the late Rev. Dr. Duncan, of the Free College, Edinburgh, on her return from Ceylon, where she buried her husband within the Garrison Chapel at Point de Galle, took up her residence in Aberdeen, and her home was well known to all these friends of her Saviour. She took a deep interest in the Free Church at the disruption, and while spending the summer months at Ballater, one of the persecuted parishes at that time, might often have been seen sitting beneath a shepherd's plaid stretched on four poles, on the open moorland, defending the minister's head with her umbrella while he preached. Her chief work for the Master was as treasurer of Sheriff Watson's Industrial School; but to this she added treasurerships of missions to the Jews, to the remote highlands and islands, and several other schemes. Seated in the front gallery of the Free East Church, her every Sabbath pleasure was to watch and speak of the presence of members of poor families she had visited during the week. She was a true Deaconess of the Church, and a true doer, as many articles and bales of clothing, issuing from committees of ladies meeting in her house could testify. Two of her sons were also well known, George Hay, who intended to be a medical missionary to India, and the Rev. Robt. A. Boyd, both of whom, however, died in early life. Her latter end was peace. She rests from her labours, and her works certainly do follow her.

A ROMAN telegram says that a very important discovery has been made on the Esquiline Hill, consisting of seven statues in fine preservation. There is a remarkable bust of Commodus, several heads, and many fragments. All these have been found in one room not yet entirely excavated. There are indications of the presence of other objects.

Temperance Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Temperance Reformation Society was held last week in the Division Room, Temperance Hall. Mr. Luke Sharp, the President, occupied the chair. There was a good attendance, and quite a number of new names added to the roll of membership. The Secretary submitted the nineteenth annual report, which gave just cause for rejoicing in looking at the effects of the persistent efforts put forth to diminish the number of licensed houses for the sale of intoxicating liquors in this city. The conflict that has been going on during the past year has brought this question prominently before the public, and many have been convinced that temperance is the cause of right, liberty, and humanity. The report contained an outline of the year's work, embracing the many appeals made to the licensing authorities. It is a noteworthy fact that the late candidate for the mayoralty in the interests of the Temperance cause polled a larger vote than any previously elected mayor ever received. Extensive improvements have been made in the building. The following were elected office-bearers for the ensuing year:

- For President—Mr. L. Sharp was elected by acclamation. Mr. Thompson, 1st Vice-President by acclamation. Mr. Cameron, 2nd Vice President. Mr. Nasmith, Secretary, by acclamation. Mr. Beckett, as Treasurer, by acclamation. Mr. Innis, Corresponding Secretary. Board of Managers:—D. Miller, W. H. Riddon, James Forster, W. S. Finch, J. B. Marshall, Geo. Flint, C. W. Watch, J. S. Spence, Geo. Strathern, E. M. Morphy, L. Wood, and Jas. Colville.

It was moved and seconded that the Secretary be authorized to send a letter of condolence to the family of the late Rev. Mr. Trask, Pittsburg, Massachusetts. Mr. Thompson addressed the meeting, urging the members to united action, and giving suggestions, and instancing many measures of examples in other cities, showing the necessity of following in their footsteps. A unanimous vote of thanks was passed to the retiring officers, and the meeting came to a close.—The Liberal.

St. Paul's Church Hamilton.

On Friday evening last Rev. W. H. Remondson, M.A., Knox Church, conducted the usual service in this church preparatory to the holy communion, preaching on the occasion an admirable and suggestive discourse on the "Secret of Christian Sanctification." At the close of the service the pastor, the Rev. J. C. Smith, M.A., requested the congregation to remain a few minutes, when a handsome and costly communion service was uncovered and presented to the congregation, the gift of the Ladies' Association. The service consisted of eight pieces neatly encaused in a polished mahogany chest, for safe keeping, and was, we understand, imported direct from England, costing $237. The pastor invited those present to come up to the platform and examine the service.

In making the presentation Matthew Leggat, Esq., spoke on behalf of the Association as follows:

I have been requested by the Ladies' Association of this church to perform a very agreeable office this evening. Most of you are aware that on former occasions when the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper has been dispensed to us, we have been under the necessity of borrowing the Communion Plate from a sister church—and I embrace this opportunity to express to the Rev. Mr. McColl and his Session our grateful sense of their Christian courtesy and kindness in having accommodated us with the use of theirs whenever it has been asked. Now, through the liberality of the ladies, we have been placed in the possession of a service of Communion Plate of our own, and an inspection of the sacred vessels before me will satisfy you that they have dispensed their liberality with a most generous hand. The duty which has been assigned to me this evening is to present to you, sir, and to the Kirk Session and congregation of St. Paul's Church, in the name of the ladies, this elegant and beautiful service of Communion Plate, for the use of this congregation, accompanied with the prayer that when we

"Oft the sacred rite renew Which brings His wondrous love to view."
To whose dying love I hope we shall often be privileged to commemorate, may so sanctify this solemn ordinance to all of us, that in our pilgrimage through life we may ever strive to imitate His example, and to practice the precepts which He has taught. I have now great pleasure in committing this treasure into your hands.

THE PASTORS REPLY.

In accepting this elegant gift, permit me as the spokesman of your fellow-worshippers to assure you, sir, and those whom you represent, that they most heartily appreciate this kindly act. The want of a Communion Service has been increasingly felt on each successive sacramental occasion, and would have been more severely felt but for the Christian courtesy and friendliness of our Canadian Presbyterian brethren, who generously came to our aid. Upon the gift now presented, which is at once chaste and valuable, the congregation, I am sure, will ever look with feelings of the liveliest gratitude, and will deem themselves indebted to the characteristic thoughtfulness and liberality of the Ladies' Association. I cannot allow this opportunity to pass without expressing the very high value which I personally attach to the beneficial influence of a band of Christian women, associated with the pastor of a congregation in works of charity and labors of love. Suffer me, therefore, to bespeak a continuance of this helpful agency, and to urge a large increase in the enrolment of names from among the wives, mothers, and daughters of my flock, until each family shall have at least one representative in the active membership of the Association. May the Lord quicken us all to a deeper sense of the claims which pertain to our respective spheres, and endow us graciously to meet them to the honor of our common Redeemer. The members of the association will please to accept through me the thanks of the congregation, and I beg both donors and recipients to join with me in earnest prayer that each season when the vessels now presented shall be used in the dispensation of the supper, may mark among us a higher tide of consecrated life, and characterize a brighter testimony for Jesus "till He come."—Hamilton Evg. Times, Jan. 18th, 1875.

Tribute to a Mother.

Children, look in those eyes, listen to that dear voice, notice the feeling of even a single touch that is bestowed upon you by that gentle hand! Make much of it while yet you have that most precious of all good gifts, a loving mother. Read the unfathomable love in those eyes; the kind anxiety of that tone and look, however slight your pain. In after life you may have friends, fond, dear, kind friends; but never will you have again the inexpressible love and gentleness lavished upon you which none but a mother bestows. Often do I sigh in my struggles with the hard, uncaring world, for the sweet, deep security I felt when, of an evening, nestling in her bosom, I listened to some quiet tale, suitable to my age, read in her untiring voice. Never can I forget her sweet glances cast upon me when I appeared asleep; never her kiss of peace at night! Years have passed away since we laid her beside my father in the old church yard; yet still her voice whispers from the grave, and her eye watches over me, as I visit spots long since hallowed to the memory of my mother.—Lord Macaulay.

Stick to Foundation.

Our lot is fallen in times when on the one hand the very foundations of the faith are shaken by those who ought to be its chief defenders; and, on the other, a superstructure of wood, hay, and stubble is raised upon that foundation, almost equally perilous to the safety of those who trust themselves upon it. And men are asking where is there any resting-place amidst this deluge of unbelief and false doctrine with which the earth is overspread? But why such a question? Is not the ark of God's Word floating high above it, offering a secure, a permanent resting place to every weary and heavy laden soul that seeks a refuge in it? Is not the ark of God's testimony spread open before you? Keep close to God's own Word. Let no man call himself what he will, move you from the foundation. And amidst all the varied interpretations of that Word, keep at that which a prayerful, earnest, and diligent perusal of it carries home to your conscience. When you stand before the bar of God hereafter, no dependence on human teaching will be your vindication of not having acted upon God's Word as He gave it to you. He who allows man to come between him and God's message to him, must take the consequence of preferring man's word to God's.—Dean Goode.

Miscellaneous.

It is perhaps not very widely known that the National Library of St. Petersburg, founded in 1714, is one of the three greatest of Europe. In 1849, however, it contained as yet no more than 600,000 volumes; this number had increased in 1859 to 840,353 (not including duplicates), 29,045 manuscripts, and over 66,000 maps, illustrations, &c.; in 1867 there were registered 1,044,465 printed books and 34,000 manuscripts. To-day the library contains 1,100,000 volumes at least; it has a "work-room" to sit 4,000 readers, and is open from 10 a. m. till 9 p. m. daily, with, of course the necessary days of closing.

MENRELY & KEMBERTY of Troy, N. Mount Tabor.

BY JOHN HAY.

On Tabor's height a glory came,
Aid, shined in clouds of lambent flame,
The awe-struck, pushed disciples saw Christ and the prophets of the law;

The Treatment of the Sick People.

Success in the treatment of sick people requires of a practitioner, as a first and pre-eminant qualification, no matter what his educational attainments are, that he shall recognize this first grand principle, viz., that all healing, as well as all preservative or constructive power, resides in the organism of the afflicted one, and in nothing that can be administered to him. Neither medicines, water, food, exercise, or anything else external to the organism, has any curative power in it whatever. It is nature alone that cures, no matter who takes the fees. The same power that brought a man into health keeps him in health, if anything will; and that power resides in the man, and nowhere else in nature.

Walking.

How few men or women of our country seem to find any pleasure in walking!
Look at our cars and omnibuses daily filled with those who prefer riding instead.

Shall a Newspaper be Frayed For?

The church which does not habitually pray for its minister, cannot expect any decided blessings upon his labors. It is true that such blessing may sometimes descend in answer to his own prayers and in spite of his church, but that church has no business to expect it, and ought to unguile its rejoicings for the blessings with repentance for its own indifference. It is a settled point that the ministry cannot perform its work unsustained by the prayers of God's people.

Spiritual Independence in New York.

A case of some interest to the Presbyterian Church has been before the Church courts, and is threatened to be carried to a civil court. Dr. Talmage's session found it necessary to excommunicate one of the members of the Church, which was confirmed by the Presbytery and Synod. The question involved has now assumed the form—Can the discipline of the Church be reviewed by the civil courts? The Supreme Court has decided a similar case, upon which Dr. Talmage and his session rely as a sufficient defence. The ruling was as follows:—“The law knows no heresy, and is committed to the support of no dogma, establishment of no sect. The right to organize voluntary religious associations, to assist in the expression and dissemination of any religious doctrine, and to create tribunals for the decision of controverted questions of faith within the association, and for the ecclesiastical government of all the individual members, congregations, and officers within the general association, is unquestioned. All who unite themselves to such a body do so with an implied consent to this Government, and are bound to submit to it. But it would be a vain consent, and would lead to the total subversion of such religious bodies, if any one, aggrieved by one of their decisions could appeal to the secular courts and have them reversed. It is of the essence of these religious unions, and of their right to establish tribunals for the decision of questions arising among themselves, that those decisions should be binding in all cases of ecclesiastical cognizance, subject only to such appeals as the organism itself provides for.”

Lost Property on Railways.

“The variety of goods that go astray on the railways through carelessness or misdirection was curiously illustrated in the last annual sale of the Midland Railway Company. The announcement of the sale was made in the following terms: ‘Annual sale of damaged and unclaimed property and salvage. A valuable assortment of miscellaneous goods, including about 150 tons of pig iron, several tons of steel and bar-iron, a large quantity of leather, paper, drapery, unclaimed passengers' luggage, purses, etc.’ But this advertisement would scarcely prepare the reader for the contents of the catalogue. The sale extended over nine days. There were in all about 1400 lots of truly miscellaneous goods. One of the first items which attracted our attention on glancing at the catalogue was lot 119—a lalloon and cau-tichin down the list was Lot 523, 131 magnets; Lot 578, 1400 fish-bones, 12 sun-glasses, and a parcel of locks. Examining the list a little more carefully, we found, among merchandise of almost every description, 6 sewing machines, 12 coal vases, 15 perambulators, 84 dozen galvanized buckets, 15 dozen paraffin lamps, 24 roasting-jacks, a large number of iron bestrads, crabs of oil, vinegar, beer, cider, paint, trawls, etc. In the passengers' lost luggage department there were 68 muffs, 11 bundles of coats and trousers, 6 dozen baskets, 11 children's hats, 121 hats, and boonies. Lot 71 included 104 articles of undone clothing, Umbrellas, which are apt to be lost, were represented by 456 made of alpaca, and a similar number made of silk, sold in lots of 1 dozen each. Of walking-sticks there were 13 dozen; 71 purses, 55 pairs of spectacles, 89 pipes, and 24 tobacco pouches. In the parcels department there were, among a number of articles too numerous to mention, two brass inlaid crockets, and an iron safe. In the drapery department an assortment of ready-made and otherwise, sufficiently numerous and valuable to provide a dozen shops with a good stock-in-trade. Not the least remarkable feature of the sale was the number of boots and shoes to be disposed of;
there were in all 413 pairs. Having arrived at the fifth day, the business concluded with the sale, among other things, of a case of still back, 1 case of mountain wine, several lots of whiskey, brandy, gin, and 16 boxes of cigars. That one railway company should have accumulated in twelve months such a vast quantity of property naturally suggests a variety of considerations as to the cause of such a state of things. It is difficult to come to any other conclusion than that there are weak points somewhere in connection with the conveyance of goods by railway. In the case of passengers' luggage the loss of so many articles, is to some extent, no doubt, attributable to want of care on the part of passengers themselves.”—Leisure Hour.

I Counsel Thee.

Who counsels me? I want to know who gives me advice before I take it. Christ says, “I counsel thee.” Ah! I know he is infinitely wise and good. What dost thou advise me to do? I counsel thee to buy of me gold. Buy gold of Christ? Dost thou sell gold? Yes. He advises me to buy gold of Him and I shall be rich. Ah, Lord how can I buy gold? What have I to buy with? Listen, soul of mine, to the spirit voice telling thee what to bring to buy this gold with,—thy poverty! The reason many do not buy this gold is, they are not poor enough. O, let us make haste to be poor, that we may buy, for this gold will pass current in another world. This is gold for eternity! And raiment is spoken of. Can I buy raiment of Christ? Yes.
White robes are waiting for me to wear now, and the terms are the same, poverty, miserableness, blindness, nakedness; truly He might well say, “Not as the world giveth, give I unto thee!” The world never gives on these terms. How often have we had occasion to say, “I would buy but I cannot afford it!” Spiritually, there is no reason why anyone should be poor. We may be rich; the shame of our nakedness needs not appear, for raiment is provided.
We may have good spiritual eyesight, for eye-salve is offered us. Now who will be rich? Who will be clothed? Who will be anointed?

“We walk not with the jewelled great,
Where love's dear name is sold;
Yet have we wealth we would not give
For all their world of gold!
We revel not in corn and wine,
Yet have we from above
Manna divine, and will not pine,
While we may live and love.”

Smith's Assyrian Discoveries.

Biblical students will remember with the liveliest interest the excitement caused a year or two ago by the publication of the translation of some inscriptions deciphered by Mr. George Smith of the British Museum, from Assyrian tablets in that institution. The tablets in question were found to bear inscriptions giving the Chaldean account of the Nonchean deluge. Such singular and unexpected confirmation of the accuracy of this part of the Biblical narrative at once attracted wide attention, and with the permission of the authorities in charge of the British Museum, Mr. George Smith was at once commissioned by the London Daily Telegraph to go to the East to make further researches, in the hope that the remarkable record might be completed. Mr.
Smith, during 1873 and 1874, accordingly made two journeys to Assyria, and his explorations on the eight of Ninevah were rewarded with notable success. Missing tablets bearing the record of the deluge were found, so that the account was reproduced as the Chaldeans had it, almost intact; and, besides this, numerous other extremely interesting inscriptions were brought to light, and for the first time translated in his remarkable volume entitled “Assyrian Discoveries,” just published by Scribner, Armstrong & Co. Wood-cuts exhibit the character of some of the relics which Mr. Smith unearthed, and maps show the route he travelled and the places he visited, and the most important tablets are reproduced by the infallible aid of photography. To scholars the volume is invaluable; to the student it is of deep interest; and the general reader will find much in it extremely curious and instructive.

A Handy Volume Bible.

The English publishers, Bradbury, Agnew & Company, have just done a public service to the people of England by the issue of the holy Scriptures in a beautiful and convenient “Handy Volume” form; and we trust the idea may be acted upon in this country also. Our excellent contemporary, the London Nonconformist, remarking upon the publication of the Bible in this form, says “it is astonishing we had so long to wait for it,” and describes it as it is represented to the public by the above named firm in this wise: “Here we have in a box a set of little volumes in lump cloth covers, and with red edges, extremely neat, clear in type, and beautiful. They are ten in number, seven containing the Old Testament and three the New. The principle has been to allow to each volume a proportionate number of books, each complete according to the space occupied. To each book there is an introduction, discussing shortly, but sensibly and moderately, its authorship, chronology, &c.; notes have been selected from the various accepted Bibles with great care and consideration; and on the whole we have here a complete Bible. Disputable matters are indicated, and a fair result given rather than discussed at any length, which, of course, was not possible or desirable; but the editor is fully alive to the tendencies of modern criticism, and shows that he has thought much on the points raised. It is a valuable work, which we are sure will be useful.”

Importance of Pastoral Work.

Good preaching will all go for nothing if there is not good parochial care. And while a minister—in some cases more than in others—is required to assist in this department of Church life, yet it depends much and legitimately on the people. Let the financial management be poor and preaching is vain. But let the care of collections, subscriptions, pew-rents, and other necessary business matters be conscientious and prompt, and there is no human defect short of crime that can prevent success. God will be sure to come with his blessing. And this is the reason why building a church or taking hold of some enterprise requiring financial skill and contributions of money often produces a revival of religion. It is a means of grace. Be strict in making collections, in paying debts, in paying the pastor, sexton, and all expenses fully, regularly and promptly, and you invite the blessing of heaven. Do otherwise, and your crazy accounts will interpose between you and the divine mercy.

The Great Problem: Can it be Solved.

“The objections to miracles may be summarised thus: First, universal experience is against them; next they contradict the well-known and established laws of nature. With respect to the former of these objections, we may observe that its force is rather imaginary than real, for in truth there is no such thing as universal experience. Each man's experience is his own exclusively; he cannot share it with another. The results of your experience, when offered to me, are testimony, and nothing more, and I accept them as such if I had confidence, not in your integrity only, but in your fitness to deal with the subject under consideration. Moreover, if your statements happen to agree with my own experience, I attach additional importance to them; but we may both of us be in error. The Indian Prince who pronounced the European traveller to be a liar because he said that water became at certain seasons solid in his own country, was justified by reference to his own experience. My father died before the electric telegraph came into play, my grandfather before steam was applied to purposes of locomotion. Had the one been told that it was possible to communicate with America in forty seconds, the other that they were between London and Edinburgh might be accomplished in twelve hours, would not both of them have pronounced their informant to be a mendacious idiot! And am I much more reasonable if I affirm dogmatically that because no real miracle has ever been performed within my experience, or the experience of any person with whom I am acquainted, therefore no real miracle has ever been performed since the world began?”—Blackwood's Magazine.

Presbytery of Cobourg.

This Presbytery met at Peterboro' on the 12th of January. The attendance was large. In accordance with notice of motion previously given, Mr. Bennett submitted a series of resolutions on the Presbyterial visitation of congregations, which were considered seriatim and unanimously adopted as follows:—1. That this Presbytery shall visit periodically, all the congregations and mission stations within the bounds, with the view of promoting their spiritual and material prosperity, or of removing impediments thereto. 2. That these meetings shall be held in each congregation and mission-station not less frequently than once in three years. 3. That the Presbytery shall appoint a minister to exchange with the minister of the congregation to be visited, at least ten days before the day of visitation, who shall require the congregation, the session, and the managers to choose two of their number respectively, to represent them before the Presbytery. 4.
That the minister making the exchange shall affectionately invite the members and adherents of the congregation to be visited to meet with the Presbytery on the day appointed. 5. That the list of questions to be used at times of visitation, shall be supplied to each congregation at the time of,
and by the minister making the exchange, and that a distinct record of the answers given thereto be preserved to be submitted to Presbytery at its next meeting, and to be used at subsequent visitations in noting progress, or otherwise, of the congregation.
It was further resolved in connection with this matter, to appoint a committee consisting of Messrs. Bennett, Douglas, McKay, Donald, ministers, and Messrs. James Crack and Walter Riddell, elders, to prepare a series of questions to be used at the Presbyterial visitations—the committee to report at next regular meeting. The Rev.
Principal Cayen was unanimously nominated Moderator of the next General Assembly. Arrangements were made for supply once a month being given to each of the mission stations during the winter.
Mr. MacWilliam reported that he had moderated in a call at Norwood on the 7th inst. The call, which was laid on the table, was in favor of the Rev. R. Mc-Kenzie of Morristown, in the State of New York, and was found to be signed by forty-one communicants and thirteen adherents. The conduct of Mr. MacWilliam in moderating in the call was approved of.
Commissioners appeared from the congregations of Norwood and Hastings, and addressed the court. It was thereupon unanimously resolved, that in view of the very small number of signatures attached to the call, and in view of the explanations given by the commissioners from the congregations, the call be not sustained. The call was accordingly set aside. It was unanimously agreed, in view of the great difficulty of getting supply during the winter months for our mission stations, that the Presbytery take steps to secure the services of an ordained missionary at as early a period as possible, and that the matter be committed to the Presbytery's Home Mission Committee. Mr. Roger brought under the notice of the Presbytery the necessity, in consequence of impaired health, of securing some assistance in the pastoral and other work in his congregation. He stated that the office-bearers of the congregation concurred with himself in the opinion that the service should be done—an assistant and successor—should be procured. Mr. Wm.
Hall was also heard, making a statement to the same effect. A resolution was then adopted unanimously, expressing the Pres-bytery's deep sympathy with Mr. Roger in his state of impaired health, and their great esteem and affection for himself personally as a minister of the Gospel and a copresbyter; also expressing approbation of the arrangements contemplated, and inviting the congregation to appear for their interests in the matter at an early meeting of Presbytery. The next regular meeting of Presbytery was appointed to be held at Port Hope, on Tuesday, the 30th of March, at 2 p.m. A conference on the state of religion was held in the evening. Addresses were delivered by Messrs. Douglas, McKay, and Donald. Messrs. Roger, Bennett, Sutherland, and McLennan of Peterboro' took part in the exercises.—W. DONALD,

Scientific and Useful.

A GOOD TOOTH-WASH.

The “Medical and Surgical Reporter” says: “Dr. D. H. L. Hogg of Texas, writes us that he has found liquor calcis (water of lime) very useful as a mouth-wash. It improves the gums and prevents tooth-ache.
He has used it in private practice and personally.

LEMONS.

A contemporary says that in most cases of fevers we have no doubt that an attack might have been prevented, and the patient well in a few days, without a particle of medicine, by rest, partial fasting, and free use of lemons and lemonade. The virtue of this article in bilious attacks and inappetent fevers has been tested with the best results, and we commend its use as a preventive of these diseases.

BRONCHITIS.

Dr. H. C. Wood, Jun., in speaking of it says: “In obstinate, acute bronchitis, after the first intense stage, in catarrhal pneumonia, both of children and adults, in bronchorrhoea and in ordinary chronic bronchitis, I have obtained more apparent good from the use of muciate of ammonia than any other remedy; of course other secondary means are to be vigorously used; counter-irritants, poultices, support or diminution of food supply, etc., as the case may call for.” He gives a formula for its administration: ten grain doses for an adult, and five to a child, every three hours.

CURE FOR DIPHTHERIA.

The ravages of diphtheria in Australia have been so extensive within the last few years that the Government offered a large reward for any certain method of cure; and among other responses to this was one by Mr. Greathead, who at first kept his method a secret, and afterward communicated it freely to the public. It is simply the use of sulphuric acid, of which four drops are diluted in three-fourths of a tumbler of water to be administered to a grown person and a smaller dose to children, at intervals not specified. The result is said to be a coagulation of the diphtheritic membrane and its removal by coughing. It is asserted that where the case thus treated has not advanced to a nearly fatal termination, the patient recovered in almost every instance.

LEATHER PAPER.

Professor Dawidowski, an Austrian, has succeeded in producing a paper that looks exactly like leather, and may in many instances be used as a substitute. Dawidowski uses for his purpose the so-called parchment paper, which by his process, he renders so pliable and supple, and so similar to leather in color and gloss, that it would even be capable of deceiving the most skillful in the trade. This leather paper may be used as a substitute in bookbinders' box, case, and etui work, and samples exhibited at Vienna prove that it can be well gilt, pressed, gummed, and rolled, like natural leather.
For bookbinding it is especially appropriate, as its surface withstands with great resistance the effects of wear and tear, does not get dirty, and is even impervious to wet.

IRISH OATMEAL CRISPS.

Make a gruel of any good oatmeal, taking about one half pint of meal to two quarts of water. Stir it until it sets, and then let it cook a long time—two or three hours, if convenient. Then take one quart of the coarsest oatmeal that comes into market, add two spoonful of sugar, and wet it with the gruel, using just as little of the latter as will be needed to make it stick together slightly. Then dip out, off hand and rough, level spoonful upon a pan slightly oiled. If flattened down, or too thick, they will be less brittle and harder. Bake in a moderate oven until dry and slightly brown.
Put away into a dry place, and serve as crackers, for lunch with sweet fruits.

INDIAN FRITTERS.

Put three teaspoonfuls of corn flour and one of wheat into a basin, and pour over it sufficient boiling water to make it into a stiff paste, taking care that it is perfectly smooth. Leave it a little time to cool and then break into it (without first beating them) the yolk of four eggs and the whites of two; stir and beat all together. Having ready some boiling lard, drop into it a desert-spoonful of batter at a time, and fry a light brown. They should rise so well as to look almost like balls. Serve with preserve or marmalade.

JULY CAKE.

Break two eggs in a tea-cup; then fill it with sweet cream; add one teaspoonful of cream of tartar, and half a one of soda;
one tea-cup of sugar; one cup and a half of flour.

ARRANGEMENT OF FLOWERS.

To arrange cut flowers artistically requires both taste and skill. Of all the various mistakes made by persons in their arrangement, the commonest is that of putting too many in a vase, and next to that, is the mistake of putting to great a variety of colors into one bouquet. Every flower in a group should be clearly distinguishable and determinable without pulling the nosegay to pieces. The calyx of a clove pink should never be hid by being plunged into the head of a white phlox, however well the colors may look. Sweet peas never look so well in the hands as they do in the bouquets over which they cumber, because they cannot be carried without crowding them; but put them lightly into a vase with the same number of magnonette, or rather ornament a vase half full of magnonette with a few blossoms of sweet peas, and you get a charming effect, because you follow the natural arrangement of avoiding crowding blooms, and putting them with the green foliage which they want to set them off.
Few people are aware, until they try it, how easy it is to spoil such a pleasing combination as this; a piece of calceolaria, scarlet geranium, or blue salvia would ruin it effectually. Such decided colors as these require to be grouped in another vase, and should not even be placed on the same table with sweet peas. They also require a much larger preponderance of foliage than is wanted by flowers of a more delicate color.
—Floral Cabinet.

FROM the report of the Inspector-General of Prisons in Ireland in 1873, we learn that every ten thousand Presbyterians gave thirty-three criminals, every ten thousand Episcopalians gave fifty-three, and every ten thousand Roman Catholics gave sixty-nine, or considerably more than twice as many as the Presbyterians.

THE Free Church Presbyteries are very unanimous in nominating the Rev. Robert Buchanan, Glasgow, for the vacant office of Principal, and the Rev. Dr. Marcus Dods for the vacant office of Professor in the Free Church College, Glasgow. Several have named the Rev. Mr. Bruce, Broughty Ferry for the Professorship.

FATHER CHINIQUI, the French convert from Romanism, has been preaching in Putnam, Conn., and twenty families have left the Catholic church. They have written to their priest that they have found Christ, the Great High Priest, and will, therefore, need his services no longer.

Special Notices.

ELECTRICITY! THOMAS' ELECTRIC OIL—WORTH TEN TIMES ITS WEIGHT IN GOLD.—Pain cannot stay where it is used. It is the cheapest medicine ever made. One dose cures common sore throat. One bottle has cured bronchitis, fifty cent's worth has cured an old standing cough. It positively cures catarrh, asthma, and croup. Fifty cents' worth has cured crick in the back, and the same quantity lame back of eight years' standing. The following are excerpts from a few of the many letters that have been received from different parts of Canada, which, we think, should be sufficient to satisfy the most skeptical: J. Collard of Sparta, Ontario, writes, "Send me 6 doz. Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, have sold all I had from you and want more now; its cures are truly wonderful." Wm. Maguire, of Franklin, writes, "I have sold all the agent left, it acts like a charm—it was slow at first, but takes splendidly now." H. Cole, of Iona, writes, "Please forward 6 doz. Thomas' Electric Oil, I am nearly out, it is highly recommended by those who have used it." J. Bedford, Thamesville, writes—"Send at once a further supply of Electric Oil, I have only 1 bottle left. I never saw anything sell so well and give such general satisfaction." J. Thompson, Woodward, writes—"Send me some more Electric Oil. I have sold entirely out. Nothing takes like it." Miller & Reed, Ulverton, P. Q., writes—"The Electric Oil is getting a great reputation here, and is daily called for. Send us a further supply without delay." Lemoyne, Gibb & Co., Buckingham, P. Q., writes—"Send us one gross Electric Oil. We find it to take well."

PRESBYTERIAN Year Book & Almanac (FOR THE YEAR 1875).
And to be continued Yearly.
Edited by
REV. JAMES CAMERON, CHEATSWORTH, ONT. NOW READY.

The YEAR BOOK is intended to be a handy book of reference on all important matters connected with the Presbyterian Churches of British North America; a means of further spreading information among the Presbyterian people, as to the history, interest, and prospects of Presbyterianism in this land and in other lands; as a beginning also in the work of collecting statistical, ecclesiastical and historical materials, that may be useful in after times as a contribution to the history of the Presbyterian Churches in this section of North America; and as an offering, lastly, from Canada to her sister Presbyterian Churches throughout the world, for their interest, and for the use of the historical and statistical branches of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, and for the use of the historical and statistical branches of the Presbyterian Church in North America.

Correspondence has been opened up with leading men in various countries for obtaining official documents and personal information, and our efforts have been prompt and cordial.

A REPRESENTATIVE & CHAMPION OF AMERICAN ART TASTE!
Prospectus for 1875—Eighth Year.

THE ALDINE.
THE ART JOURNAL of America.
ISSUED MONTHLY.
"A Magnificent Conception Wonderfully carried out."

The necessity of a popular medium for the representation of the productions of our great artists has always been recognized, and many attempts have been made, but few have succeeded. The failure of the magazine to establish an art journal, did not prove the indifference of the people of America to the claims of high art. So soon as a proper appreciation of the work was made, it was found that the public at once rallied with enthusiasm to its support, and the result was a great artistic and commercial triumph.

THE ALDINE, which issued with all the regularity of a newspaper, is a monthly of high artistic character, of pure, light and graceful literature; and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is found up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, as compared with rival art journals, THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possession of a complete volume can not duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other single number. It is for a time its cost; and then, there is the chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE cannot be taken in too narrow a sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is strictly American in its institutions, it is not confined entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the patrons of THE ALDINE a large and valuable series of pictures, the production of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

The artistic illustration of American scenery, original with THE ALDINE, is an important feature, and its magnificent plates are of a size more appropriate to the satisfactory treatment of details than can be afforded by any inferior process. The judicious incorporation of landscape, marine, figure, and animal subjects, sustain an unabated interest, impossible where the scope of the work confines the artist too closely to a single style of subject. The literature of THE ALDINE is a light and graceful, and charmingly written, and those features, with only such technical discussions as do not interfere with the popular interest of the work.

PREMIUM FOR 1875.
Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a beautiful portrait, in oil color, of the same noble dog whose picture in a former issue attracted so much attention.

NAN'S USEFUL FRIEND
will be welcome in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed so true to the life, that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. The artist who painted this noble dog, that his own Newfoundland dog (the best in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural, no one who sees this premium chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

Those who are not advanced subscribers to THE ALDINE for 1875 are constituted a number, and entitled to all the privileges of

THE ALDINE ART UNION.
The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5,000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at over $2,500 are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the awards of next success are made, and are published in the ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

TERMS.
One Subscription, entitling to THE ALDINE one year, the Chromo and the Art Union, $6.00 PER ANNUM IN ADVANCE. (No charge for postage.)
Specimen Copies of THE ALDINE, 35 Cents.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rates, cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local canvasser, without responsibility to the publishers, except in cases where the date is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of JAMES BURTON, President.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,
For all the purposes of a Laxative Medicinal.

Perhaps no one medicine is so universally required by everybody as a cathartic, nor was ever any before so universally adopted into use, in every country and among all classes, as this mild but efficient purgative Pill. The obvious reason is, that it is a more reliable and far more efficient remedy than any other. Those who have tried it, know that it cures them; those who have not, know that it cures their neighbors and friends, and all know that what it does once it does always, and that it does no harm can arise from its use. It is adapted to all ages, and conditions in all climates; containing neither calomel nor any deleterious drug, they may be taken with safety by anybody. Their sugar coating preserves them over fresh and makes them pleasant to take, while being purely vegetable, they operate by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action—remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, restore regular action to health, and by correcting whatever they exist, such derangements as are the first origin of disease.

Minute directions are given in the wrapper on the box, for the following complaints, which these Pills rapidly cure:—

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Heartburn, flatulence, and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach and restore its healthy tone and action.

For Cholera, Cholera Infantum, Bilious Headache, Stomachic Headache, Sick Headache, Jaundice or Green Sickness, Bilious Colic and Bilious Fevers, they should be judiciously taken for each case, to correct the diseased action or remove the obstructions which cause it.

For Dysentery or Diarrhoea, but one mild dose is generally required.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Pains of the Heart, Pain in the Side, Back and Loins, they should be taken, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With such change those complaints disappear.

For Bronchitis and Whooping Cough, they should be taken in large and frequent doses to produce the effect of a drastic purgative.

For Suppression a large dose should be taken as it produces the desired effect by sympathy.

As a Dinner Pill, take one or two Pills to promote digestion and relieve the stomach.

An occasional dose stimulates the stomach and bowels into healthy action, restores the appetite, and invigorates the system. Hence it is often advantageous where no serious derangement exists. One who feels solitary well, often finds that a dose of these Pills makes him feel decidedly better, from their cleansing and renovating effect on the digestive apparatus.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,
For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the gloss and freshness of youth.

This hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. It wanted merely for a

HAIR DRESSING,
nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

DR. C. MLANE'S
CELEBRATED
FOR THE CURE OF Biliousness or Liver Complaint, TO PREVENT AND REMOVE Symptoms of a Diseased Liver.

PAIN in the right side, under the edge of the ribs, increases on pressure; sometimes the pain is in the left side; the patient is rarely able to lie on the left side; sometimes the pain is felt under the shoulder-blade, and it frequently extends to the top of the shoulder, and is sometimes mistaken for rheumatism in the arm. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness; the bowels in general are costive, sometimes alternative with lax; the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of weight left undone something which ought to have been done. A slight, dry cough is sometimes an attendant. The patient complains of weariness and debility; he is easily startled, his feet are cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin; his spirits are low; and although he is satisfied that exercise would be beneficial to him, yet he can scarcely summon up fortitude enough to try it. In fact, he distrusts every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred where few of them existed, yet examination of the body, after death, has shown the LIVER to have been extensively deranged.

AGUE AND FEVER.
DR. C. MLANE'S LIVER PILLS, IN CASES OF AGUE AND FEVER, when taken with Quinine, are productive of the most happy results. No better cathartic can be used, preparatory to, or after taking Quinine. We would advise all who are afflicted with this disease to give them a FAIR TRIAL.
