BRYANT STABBED

Tony Bogetta Uses a Knife on Well Known Actor at Orpheum Theatre

ALLEGED CAUSE OF THE TROUBLE

Being Jealous Over a Female Attache of House.

KNIFE WIELDER NOW IN JAIL

Will be Arranged for Hearing Tomorrow Afternoon Bryant's Wound Not Dangerous.

A stabbing affray took place last night at the Orpheum theater in which Larry Bryant, one of the stage actors was seriously cut in the left forearm by Tony Bogetta. As near as can be learned the particulars of the affair are that Bogetta was drinking wine in one of the upstairs boxes with Blanche Cametta, one of the female attaches of the house, and that Bryant went up and threw Bogetta out of the box and in the encounter that followed received the knife wound as above described. Corporal Piper was soon on the scene and Bogetta was arrested and taken to jail. The case was called by Magistrate Starnes in police court, Attorney Howden appearing for the defendant. As the prosecution was not ready to proceed with the hearing of the case this morning, it was continued until 2 o'clock tomorrow. Bogetta's attorney asked that his client be admitted to bail until tomorrow but the request was denied.

Bryant is a well-known local actor. His wound is not considered dangerous. Tony Bogetta is proprietor of the Donovan hotel on Second street and is also well-known around town.

Attempt to Steal $50,000,000.

San Diego, April 13.—Charges of conspiracy have been made in the superior court against the firm of Spencer, Trask & Co., of New York city, and against Wade Chance of the same place, by R. G. Douglass and Mrs. R. O. Rutherford, owners of two lepidolite mines at Paia. It is claimed that these are the only lepidolite mines in the United States which will produce lithium in paying quantities, and that there are at least 100,000 tons of the ore, valued at $50 a ton, making the total value of the mines $50,000,000. The New York firm secured an option to purchase the property for $185,000, and carried on development work for a time. The representatives of the company, it is claimed, ran tunnels and shafts into the mines and then covered them up with waste to conceal the value of the property. The firm was given a lien upon 1000 tons of the ore, to secure the payment of money advanced, so it is alleged, but now the firm claims that the lien was upon the whole property, and is seeking to foreclose it. The owners allege that the firm, after learning that the mine are of great worth, is conspiring to obtain them for a very small consideration.

The General Effect.

Like the election of McKinley and the return of the Liberals the going out of the ice has "restored confidence" and it is also hoped will serve in a very few days to reduce the price of antique eggs and also permit of mail being landed in Dawson. To the Dawsonite the going out of the ice is the most cheerful event of the entire year.

NIGHT MAN DISAPPEARS

From Gilt Edge Restaurant on Second Street.

A man for whom no other name than Charley is known, but who for some time past has been night man at the Gilt Edge restaurant on Second street at the corner of the alley in the rear of the Aurora, disappeared yesterday morning since which time Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Fenger, owners of the restaurant, have not seen him.

Tuesday morning when the Fengers came to their business the night man told a story of how the till had been robbed sometime the previous night, some thief having "touched" it while he was in the kitchen in the rear. His story seemed feasible and was believed by the Fengers.

In order to make the bluff stronger the night man insisted that a port hole be cut in the partition between the dining room and kitchen in order that he could see the till when working about the store. The hole was cut and the following night when Charley went to work he laid a big gun in the kitchen which he announced his intention of shooting the till thief full of holes in case he returned that night. The Fengers went home satisfied but when they returned yesterday morning the till had again been touched and the night man had left for parts unknown. He was heard yesterday as having been met heading up the creeks. The restaurant owners say they will not prosecute him as there is no hope of recovering the money, about $1000, stolen and the time spent in prosecuting the case would be lost to them.

POOL ROOMS RAIDED

Spasmodic Moral Wave Sweeping Over New York.

New York, April 21.—The committee of fifteen raided seven alleged pool rooms this afternoon. The raids were made on warrants issued by Justice Jerome, and upon evidence obtained by the staff of detectives working for the committee under the direction of Superintendent John McCallagh. The raids in each case were personally conducted by individual members of the committee, assisted by their own detectives and policemen of the regular force from the precinct in which the raid was made.

In only one place did the raiders fail to make any arrests, and C. C. Brewster, of the committee, openly says the inmates of this place received a tip from the police that the place was about to be raided.

Mr. Brewster said the police moved so slow that he urged them to hurry, but met with a rebuff. When Mr. Brewster reached the place ahead of the police his own agents told him some one had come to the place a few minutes after he went into the station, and given a tip to the 40 or 50 men within, and they had all left. They were still coming out when he got there. When the policemen arrived the place was empty. Six books of racing charts, a rubber speaking tube and some racing slips were seized. Mr. Brewster later entered a protest concerning the action of the policemen, to Capt. Moynahan, who is in command of the precinct but who was not present at the station when Mr. Brewster presented his warrants for service.

In all 20 arrests were made. A feature of the raiding was the effort by at least two of the police officials to prove that the places raided were not pool rooms, but orderly and well conducted clubs.

Some Are Crawfishing.

There are reports of a number of unpaid ice bits around town, some who had put money on their belief that the ice would not go before dates later than the present refusing to pay on the ground that so long as ice is still running in the river it is not gone. This claim looks very much like a pretext to avoid paying the money, for when the ice is moving at all points the river is surely open. Much trouble and talk would be obviated if the conditions of wagers were stipulated in writing.

Notice.

Any person driving or riding on any bridges in Dawson or on the Ogilvie bridge faster than a walk will be prosecuted according to law.

ICE JAMS REPORTED

At Various Points Along the River From Selwyn to Eagle City.

STILL REMAINS SOLID AT FORTYMILE.

Pelly Broke This Morning and is Sweeping Everything.

NO MOVEMENT AT SELWYN.

Water Falls Five Feet at Ogilvie Owing to Jam Two Miles Above. Steamers Ready to Sail.

Reports from up the river received today at 1 o'clock, as well as those from below, show that the river is as yet only open in places. At Forty mile it is still solid, while at Eagle it broke and moved down 200 yards yesterday when it became solidly jammed. At Dawson the ice broke south of the mouth of the Klondike at about 1:30 this morning and for several hours much ice floated past the city, but there is evidently an unbroken tract or a jam a few miles up the river as but little ice has been running today. The following is this afternoon's report: Hootalinqua—River: all open at this place but the water is very low. The steamers Ora, Nora, Flora and Clifford Hilton are all here ready to start for Dawson but they will not probably get away before tomorrow.

Big Salmon.—The river is clear from Hootalinqua to Tantalus but the water is very low.

Selkirk.—The Pelly broke this morning and is sweeping everything before it.

Selwyn.—No ice is yet moving at this place but the open spaces along the shores are rapidly widening.

Ogilvie.—The big jam below here broke at 10 o'clock this morning and passed on Dawsonwards. The jam which broke away at Stewart yesterday came down to within two miles above here, jammed again and is still holding. The last jam has caused the water to fall five feet at this place.

Shortly after 2 o'clock this afternoon the ice began to come down afresh and in half an hour the river was full from shore shore of floating ice on its silent journey northward.

Decline in Old Meat.

The combine which was made a short time ago on the beef market was yesterday broken and beef which had been held at upwards of 50 cents per pound wholesale took a drop to 40 and it is expected to go still lower. This only includes the frozen beef or that which has been in Dawson all winter. The fresh beef which recently came in over the ice is still stiff at 60 cents. There is on the market a large amount of beef which must be disposed of before the boats get in as there is such a wholesale amount of it at the head of the river awaiting transportation. Mutton also took a drop to 45 cents per pound.

A Good Suggestion.

A First avenue merchant suggested to a Nugget representative yesterday evening that if the authorities would prohibit the sawing of wood on the streets during the winter it would not take them until the middle of the following summer to dry out and become passable. The point is well taken as anyone can see that where wood-sawing was carried on all winter on the streets there is now a mud hole, owing to the fact that the saw dust prevents the ground from thawing but very slowly and until the frost is all gone and the water runs away, last winter's scenes of activity will be scenes of mud and mire.

More Fleet Coming.

A telegram was received yesterday by Mr. M. N. Miles, agent for the Klondike Corporation, Co., Ltd., from Manager Calderhead to the effect that the steamers Ora, Nora and Flora would leave Hootalinqua this afternoon for Dawson.

COMPELLED TO PAY TOLL.

Toll Bridge Arouses the ire of Suburbanites.

It is not to be wondered at that the citizens of Klondike City are wrought up to a high pitch over what appears to be a scheme to prevent people from even making a two mile journey around in order to cross the free bridge and avoid paying toll, as, according to a petition presented to the council at its last meeting, the owners of the toll bridge were tearing up the 6th foot gangway across the slough on the south side of the river thereby making it impossible for pedestrians to get up along the south side of the Klondike to the free bridge. In fact, a policeman was sent to put a stop to the destruction of the footway across the slough. Evidently the toll bridge people are attempting to clinch a clinch, but people who have the time and inclination to cover the more than two miles walk in order that they may cross the river without contributing to the coffers of a monopoly have a perfect right to do so and it is no wonder that they object to having that right taken away from them.

Bad Marksmanship.

A policeman took two shots at a dog on Thir' street near the postoffice today between 12 and 1 o'clock but further than puncturing the atmosphere and causing the dog to accelerate his pace, no results were apparent. The dog was a small brindle devoid of both collar and muzzle. When common revolvers are used two men are required in killing a dog, one to hold him and the other to shoot.

TOO MUCH GAMBLING

And to Few Children are Evils of Present Day.

New York, April 23.—Too much gambling in society and too few children are the two evils that are attracting the attention of the pastors of fashionable New York congregations, says the Evening World today.

Many of the ministers are recent additions to the religious and fashionable life of New York, and they declare that the conditions that they have encountered here appall them. The ministers have been counselling with each other, exchanging confidences and experiences, and trying to devise means of correcting the conditions which they say prevail.

They have not decided what they will do, but they have declared that they will not begin by any public crusade, and they will not refer to the subjects in sermons. When a score of ministers, who care for flocks that live up and down Madison and Fifth avenue, West End and Amsterdam avenue, begin to talk over their troubles in confidence, they find that all had the same story to tell.

Gambling among the members of their flocks, they said, was entirely too common, and the play was often for extremely high stakes. Many instances were told, showing how young men had lost much larger sums than they could afford, and had often been compelled to borrow small sums for railroad fares or temporary expenses from their hosts.

One of the ministers says: "It is my personal opinion that a good deal of the money put on the plates in such liberal amounts on Easter Sunday came easy at the gambling table, or if it did not, these large gifts were made in many instances as bribes to suppress guilty consciences."

Double Funeral.

The remains of Thos. Donahue, a miner who died on the 12th, and Frank Langlom, a gambler who died on the 13th, were buried today at 11 o'clock by Undertaker Green, both funerals being held from St. Mary's church. Donahue was from San Francisco and Langlom from Los Angeles.

TO SEIZE PROPERTY

Tax Collector Will Open New Order of Campaign in Dawson Tomorrow

WHEN DELINQUENTS ON TAX ROLLS

Will Have Their Property Seized for Unpaid Tax.

TO BE ADVERTISED AND SOLD

Taxes Became Delinquent on January First—Only 50 Per Cent. of Assessment Yet Paid.

The tax collector will start to-morrow morning and seize all property on which taxes have not yet been paid and after advertising will sell same or such part thereof as will cover the delinquent tax account and cost of such seizure and sale. This statement was given to a Nugget representative this morning from the collector's office.

An idea seems to be incultated in the minds of the people that taxes do not become delinquent until the first of July, while as a matter of fact they become delinquent on the 1st of January. Owing to the numerous delays which have occurred in the collection of the taxes, caused principally by the appeal cases from the assessment and for which a court of revision was established, the collection of the taxes for last year did not commence until early in this year. As an inducement for prompt payment a discount of 10 per cent was allowed on all taxes paid before the 1st of May and the order states that all taxes paid before the 1st of July would be received at par while after that time an additional charge of five per cent will be made.

It is possibly owing to the fact that taxes will be received at par until the 1st of July, that the idea has gotten abroad that the delinquency does not occur until that date, but the collector said this morning that the delinquency began the first of the year, but owing to the delays that have been mentioned the enforcement of the delinquency order has not been put into effect.

It is considered that plenty of opportunity has been given for the voluntary payment of taxes due and now the payment is to be forced. No more than 50 per cent of the assessment for last year has been paid and it is the intention to collect it all in before the next assessment.

Death of Roy Agee.

Roy Agee, the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Agee, a respectable colored family, the father being proprietor of the Colorado Barber shop on Second avenue, died shortly after 1 o'clock this morning at the Sister's hospital, where he was taken by his father a week ago suffering from what later developed into typhoid pneumonia. The writer has known many colored boys but never a more manly or honorable one than was Roy Agee. He was a good barber and worked steadily in his father's shop. He had a good reputation as a pugilist, being always on the square and possessed of considerable scientific science. He was born in Fort Collins, Colorado, and was 19 years of age the 10th of last February. The funeral will be held from the family home on Second avenue at 2 o'clock to-morrow afternoon. Deceased had many friends who deeply sympathize with his family in its bereavement.

REVIVE THE LIEN ORDINANCE.

The assessor's question and the miners' lien law have both been left in a condition of innocuous desuetude—if we may be permitted to bring Grover Cleveland's famous expression to bear upon the situation.

Brushing aside the technicalities and quibbles involved the fact must be given recognition that numerous instances have occurred in this territory where laborers have been wilfully and wrongfully deprived of their earnings.

From present indications the lien law as originally presented before the council, has been assigned to perpetual oblivion.

The laborers relations to the employer are unchanged and the seeker for employment must take exactly the same chances of receiving his pay, that he did three years ago.

Until relief is given by the passage of an ordinance covering the necessities of the case the laborer should take care to satisfy himself when he engages to work for another, that his employer is able to compensate him.

The ordinance has been left over from time to time until it looks very much as though it is intended that it shall die a natural death.

We sincerely hope that such will not prove to be the case. We hope that when this ordinance is brought again before the council that it will be taken up with such careful consideration that a measure will be produced which will protect all interests concerned and stand all tests to which it may be subjected.

THE LAST DRAFT.

Every day's delay in arranging for the purchase of the toll bridge across the Klondike means just so much more money added to the ultimate cost of the structure.

The toll bridge is an eyesore, the disappearance of which will occasion general rejoicing. When that long looked for event takes place, it will be fitting that some Bulwer-Lytton arise in our midst and immortalize him through an historical treatise entitled, "The Last of the Drafts."

It is a time-honored saying that what is sauce for the goose is likewise sauce for the gander. It is also a proverbial utterance that the rain from heaven falls upon the just and unjust alike. In view of these facts it will readily be seen that no distinction should be made when it comes to a question of enforcing the dog ordinance.

There will be lively rivalry among steamboat captains as to who will have the honor of landing the first boat in Dawson from up the river. For the past two years that distinction has been won by the little steamer Flora.

The Future of Cuba. A subscriber asks what position the Democratic party takes in regard to the annexation of Cuba. The Democratic party has not had occasion to take a position on this question.

No matter whether annexation is desirable or undesirable, it is both right and expedient that the Cubans should be given their independence. If annexation is undesirable there can be no excuse for delaying independence; if, on the other hand, annexation is desirable the granting of independence will hasten it.

Slaves of Steam. In an illustrated interview with Mr. Frank T. Bullen, in the Young Man, we are told that the deepest depths of a great ship is a place unfit for human habitation.

THE GREAT FRENCH ARTIST

Madame Sarah Bernhardt Tells of Her Life.

Born a Jewess, She Embraced Catholic Religion at the Age of 12 Years—Her Star Still Bright.

In an interview with Hillary Bell Mme. Sarah Bernhardt said: "I was born in Paris, at No. 265 Rue Saint Honore, in the house where lived Mme. Guerard, who today at 76 is still active and in good health. She saw me come into the world. She was present at the birth of my son Maurice and of my granddaughter. She is indeed a faithful friend. My mother was a Dutch woman and a Jewess. She was a blonde, short and stout; long in waist and short limbed, but she had a pretty face and beautiful blue eyes.

She was a bad child, she says, alternately melancholy and misanthropic. This disposition she ascribes to the fact that her mother showed preference for the other thirteen children, including the two pair of twins. Sarah was neglected. In vacation time, when the other pupils went home, she was compelled to remain in the convent. On various occasions she escaped from its walls, but was always captured, brought back and severely punished.

"At last," she says, "I left the convent. What should I do? I had mystic inclinations. What was to be done with me? Although I was still very young, my hand was asked in marriage by a glover in the neighborhood, by a tanner and by the pharmacist from whom I bought my marshmallows. They were impossible. I entered the Conservatoire. I had hardly recited the two first stanzas of Pontaine's 'Deux Pigeons' when Auber motioned me to be silent. 'Approach,' said he, 'you are Sarah?' 'Yes, sir. 'You are a Jewess?' 'By birth, sir; but I have been baptized.' 'She has been baptized,' said the composer, addressing the jury. 'It is well. It would have been a pity if so pretty a child had not. You have spoken your verses very well, Sarah. You will be admitted.' Beauvallet said: 'She will be a tragedienne.' Regnier said: 'She will be a comedienne.' Provost said: 'She will be both.'"

The compliments did not comfort Sarah, who continued to look gloomy on the world. "I had no taste for the stage," she says, "it made me unhappy. I often wept. Moreover, I was terribly timid. I wanted to be a painter." Yet, consoled by Coquelin, her present partner in "L'Aiglon," and her fellow students at the Conservatoire, she continued her studies. She won second prize in tragedy and second prize in comedy. "Helas!" she cries, "I will never be able to win first prize!" At last she was considered proficient enough to make her debut at the Comedie Francaise. She appeared as Valerie in Scribes' comedy of that name. It was in the year 1862, and the debutante was 17. She knew no one of the company except Coquelin. She was distressed by stage fright and the premiere did not reassure her. "I remember," says she, "when I lifted my thin—oh, so thin—arms, the audience burst out laughing."

The ice was broken, confidence returned and Sarah prospered exceedingly, until her temper, always fiery, led the young actress into a row. She quarreled with another actress of the Francaise, slapped her face, called her "a fat goose" and wrathfully severed her connection with the house of Moliere. Then followed hard times. Sarah found it difficult to secure an engagement in another theater. She humbled her pride and obtained employment in a fairy play at the Porte Saint Martin, a cheap house. "My distaste for the stage did not leave me," she says emphatically. "I never loved the theater. But since it was to be, I resolved not to vegetate. I would be among the greatest."

Her performance in Theuriet's "Jean-Marie" at the Odeon came under the attention of Fraicisque Sarcey, who prized her extravagantly. The opinion of that eminent critic was accepted by Victor Hugo, who selected Madame Sarah to play the queen in his "Hernani." Next morning she was the talk of Paris. The newspapers demanded her immediate return to the Francaise, and she was re-engaged by the house of Moliere. Her subsequent career has been a series of extraordinary adventures, successes, failures. As the time when other actresses are retiring from the stage she is in her greatest glory. The most remarkable player that the drama of any country has shown remains undisturbed by the influences of theatrical, unaffected, sincere and natural, magnetic in private as in public life, still modest and always fascinating.

NO USE FOR COLLEGE GIRLS

But the Blond Twin Spoiled His Theory.

She Shattered His Hopes by Insisting That She Was Not His Ideal of a Woman.

"No, mother, no; it is useless; let me speak no more about it." My mother stretched her plump, small hands towards the fire, her fingers luxuriously ornamented with rings, the coquetry of ladies in the '60s. "James," said she, with her most dignified countenance, "you are as stubborn as your father. He, too, objected to marriage. He belonged to a club—the poor man—to the Bachelor's Club, and had seriously sworn to remain faithful to its principles. But you, too, you will come to it." "But, then, in my father's day, young girls were brought up more simply; they aspired no higher than to play the piano prettily, write correctly, and make a graceful courtesy. Then, on leaving school, young girls came into their families with enough instruction to understand the pages of a romance and follow a conversation, not enough to humiliate their parents, and often their husbands. They were then really 'home angels.'" "You exhaust my patience, and I can't bear such prejudices. 'Home angels,' indeed! As if one must be fool or a nonentity to be domestic. A bright woman could never be satisfied with the rôle you assign her. If you had not wasted your time at college, you would not be so afraid of comparisons."

end to this suspense, and soon found an opportunity.

There was a concert and ball at the Desjardins' beautiful country home. When bending over her mother's hand I saw but one being, and heaven entered my soul as I caught the light of her eyes. It seemed but an instant before we were outside, wandering about the grounds. The words were on my lips to speak, when some one called to us, "Come, La Mariani is going to sing!" What cared I for Mariani? But Rose hastened her steps, and I followed, hoping she would at least stay outside. As we neared the house, she led the way to a corner of the veranda, and there the words and voice of the wonderful singer reached our ears and entered our hearts.

"Those words are mine, Rose, do you understand? Don't you see how I love you? You are the woman I have dreamed of since I have known how to dream. You are the companion I have longed for, Rose; could you not love me?" In a low, sad voice, she murmured: "My friend, I am not the companion you have dreamed of. Too often you have described me, your ideal woman. You love me because you think me simple, as young girls should be—and you think because you have sometimes seen me attending to household duties that I would make a good domestic wife, but you will love me no more when you are undecieved. When you know—" Her voice had been firm until now, and though her words puzzled me and pained me I became aware of the sorrow in her voice—a sorrow which meant more than sympathy.

"Rose, in the name of heaven, what is it?" She mastered herself in a moment. "How often have you cruelly told me you would never marry a college graduate—a bluestocking, as you called her, and yet you ought to have known your mother knows—"

HIRED GIRL'S PROGRESS.

Fable Showing Wisdom of Silence Concerning Some Things. Once upon a time there came into the city from the country a girl. The girl wandered from her happy home to secure employment among the wealthy families of the city, and when she made known the fact that she was willing to work many persons sought her and implored her to engage with them in domestic pursuits. The girl was overwhelmed with offers, but finally made a selection and settled in a family that valued her services very highly. The girl was happy until one day her employer met a neighbor, a very dear friend, and told her of her good fortune in finding the country girl. And this neighbor met another very dear friend and told her of her other friend's good luck, and thus did it become generally known that there was a good "hired girl" in the neighborhood.

Died for Another's Crime.

In 1860, in Kankakee, Ill., Wiley J. Morris, a negro, was hanged for the alleged murder of a young white woman named Mary Murphy. Mary's parents lived five miles from Pontiac and she had visited them on a Saturday and was walking back along the railroad track on Sunday when she was murdered. Her body was found lying near the track. It was proved that Morris was walking along the track a mile behind Mary at a much faster gait, and must have overtaken her. He had been seen that night in Pontiac, and had then gone to Joliet and then to Michigan, but was sent after and brought back, and he had blood stains on his clothing. His story was that he had a fight in Bloomington, and had in that way got blood on his clothes. When he was tried one man hung the jury, and then his counsel took a change of venue to Kankakee county, where he was convicted. He was hanged exclaiming: "You murder me; you murder me; you murder me."

A Good Snake Story.

The latest authentic snake story is from North Glenwood Farm, near Easton, one of the country places in Talbot county, Md. The other day a big black snake was seen emerging from an ice pond. It was killed. A protuberance was noticed about the middle. The snake was chopped in two, and a porcelain turkey nest egg rolled out. Captain Noble Robinson was tenant on the farm last year. Mrs. Robinson raised turkeys, using china eggs in their nests. She says that 14 months ago she missed the nest egg from a nest near the ice pond. She supposed a boy who had the range of the meadow had taken it. When the egg from the snake was shown to Mrs. Robinson, she identified it as one she had lost by a certain incised mark upon it. The snake had carried the china egg 14 months in his vermiform appendix, apparently without appendicitis. But he must have thought very hard of it and that it was very singular that it could not be digested.

Countries That Teach Gardening.

School gardens were established in Belgium many years ago, and it is said that to them is due the prosperity of the rural population, the larger portion being engaged in truck gardening. After the introduction of agriculture into the public schools of France, by a law passed in 1885 school gardens increased in that country. Annual appropriations have been devoted to an extension of the system in Switzerland since 1886.

Odd Bill for Repairs.

One meets with curious things in the old church registers of England. The subjoined, in the Record office of Winchester Cathedral, dated 1182, is certainly unique. It is a bill for work done: To soldering and repairing St. Joseph 0 6 To cleaning and ornamenting the Holy Ghost 0 6 To repairing the Virgin Mary and cleaning the child 4 6 To screwing a nose on the devil, and putting in the hair on his head, and placing a new joint in his tail 5 0

DEPUTY MARSHAL FOR NOME

Ike Evans, Former Hunker Miner, Gets a Plum.

Marshal Richards Will Take Corps With Him From Below—Will Go Up on First Boat.

Frank H. Richards, recently appointed United States marshal at Nome, has announced his appointments. Mr. Richards has selected W. R. Forrest, of this city, to be his chief deputy, and Isaac Evans, of Tacoma, to be office deputy at Teller City, about 80 miles from Nome. The official headquarters of the marshal's office will be at St. Michael, but he will probably spend the greater part of his time at Nome, where court is almost continually in session.

The appointments mentioned are all that Mr. Richards will make at present. He said yesterday that until he had arrived at Nome and had familiarized himself with conditions there he would not undertake to fill and other positions.

"From what I understand of the work of the marshal's office at Nome," said Mr. Richards, "I believe that it will be found desirable to appoint deputies in the various camps from among the men who have regular business or other employment. I would not think of taking any men with me for these positions. You understand that a deputy marshal is to be appointed at every place where there is a United States court commissioner. In all of these cases the deputy marshals would have to rely on fees, there being no salary attached to his office. These deputies, therefore, should be men located in the country who are either in business or who, like the present constables here, have some other employment."

Chief Deputy Forrest is well known in this city. He served as state senator from King county in the first legislature after the territory became a state. Subsequently he served one term as county auditor. He has been prominent in newspaper work, being at one time connected with the Seattle Press-Times and afterward with the Post-Intelligencer in an editorial capacity.

Isaac Evans, who is to be office deputy at Teller City, is a resident of Tacoma. He was at one time deputy sheriff of Pierce county and was for number of years on the detective force of the Tacoma police department.

Marshal Richards expects to sail for Nome on the first steamer to leave this port for Bering sea. This will probably be some time during the latter part of May.—P.-L., April 15.

(The Isaac Evans referred to above came to Dawson in 1898 and for a year was engaged in mining on Hunker creek. His success was somewhat indifferent and he returned to Tacoma last fall.)

Who is the Owner?

Yesterday a policeman came across an untied, uncollared and unmuzzled dog on Third street and, according to the ordinance passed the previous night, would have been justified in shooting the animal and was preparing to do so when a workman nearby asked permission to tie the dog up, saying that he would take care for it. The policeman consented and the stranger at once took possession of the dog.

The question may now arise in case the original owner of the dog turns up as to who will be entitled to its possession, and if right is adhered to the decision would be favorable to the Good Samaritan who saved the dog from the policeman's bullet, the former owner having lost his right to ownership by carelessly allowing his dog to run at large contrary to law. The dog is an intelligent looking black shepherd, and the policeman's act in sparing it provided the stranger would care for it was generally commended by witnesses to the affair.

Martin Ritter Captured.

Nashville, Ill., April 17.—Martin Ritter, who killed Clara Cheek with a hammer because she refused to marry him, was captured today by Charles Luno, of Oakdale, who was induced to search for Ritter by the $800 reward offered for his capture. The posse of 50 armed farmers who scoured the country between this city and Pineknayville from Sunday night until this morning are yet determined to lynch Ritter, and threaten to do so as soon as he is brought to Rice, the scene of the crime, or taken to Pineknayville. Ritter has been placed in jail in an adjoining county for fear of mob violence, and will not be removed until the excitement of the farmers abates and the sheriff of Perry county arranges for a sufficient guard to protect him.

When the ice started this morning all the firemen with the hoses were stationed beside the engine in order to pull them up the bank in case they should be endangered by a rapid rise in the river. The ice went out smoothly so that it was unnecessary to remove them.

Street Cleaning.

A number of men are now at work raking up and hauling trash from the streets of the city in preparation for Victoria day which is now but one week off. There is no time to spare in the completion of arrangements and all low points on the streets should be speedily drained in order that they may become dry by that time.

ARMORED COFFINS.

They Were Once Used in a Churchyard in Scotland.

In the earlier half of the nineteenth century the practice of stealing bodies from the churchyards for the purpose of sale as subjects for dissection, which was known as "body snatching," was for a time very rife.

Various plans were made to defeat the nefarious and sacrilegious proceedings of the "body snatchers," or "resurrectionists," as they were sometimes called, a very common one being the erection of two or more small watch-houses whose windows commanded the whole burying ground, and in which the friends of the deceased mounted guard for a number of nights after the funeral.

A usual method of the grave robbers was to dig down to the head of the coffin and bore in it a large round hole by means of a specially constructed center bit. It was to counteract this maneuver that the two curious coffin-like relics now lying on either side of the door of the ruined church of Aberfoyle, in Perthshire, were constructed. They are solid masses of cast iron of enormous weight.

When an interment took place one of these massive slabs was lowered by suitable derricks, tackles and chains on to the top of the coffin, the grave was filled in, and there it was left for some considerable time. Later on the grave was opened and the iron armor plate was removed and laid aside ready for another funeral.

These contrivances still lie on the grass of the lonely little churchyard, objects of curiosity to the passing cyclist and tourist.—Scientific American.

The Explanation.

One morning the readers of a certain newspaper were perplexed to see in type the announcement that "the Scouts handed down an important decision yesterday." The afternoon paper of the town, with which the morning paper for years had held a bitter controversy, interesting none but themselves, laughed that day, as the poets say, "in ghoulish glee," and it was up to the morning paper the next day to explain that "the types" made them say that the Scouts did so and so when the telegraph editor should have known that that word was merely the abbreviation of the telegrapher for supreme court of the United States.

A Jail Case.

The late Sir John Bridge, the well known London magistrate, was fond of telling his friends of a curious letter he received not long before his retirement from Bow street. It ran: "Sir—I am sorry to occupy your time, but I feel I must write to thank you for having looked up my wife for six months. My wife had often come before the court for drunkenness, but after being fined she was worse. You were kind enough to give her six months, and she came back to me a reclaimed woman and is now the best wife in England."

This letter was all the more valued by Sir John Bridge because he was ordinarily a lenient judge.

His Candid Admission.

"I suppose your constituents will be prepared to kill the fatted calf when you get home?" said the amiable friend. "No," answered Senator Sorghum; "my constituents aren't violent people. Besides, they haven't got anything against the fatted calf. I'm the one they're after."—Washington Star.

Impressions of Zanzibar.

In writing of Zanzibar I am embarrassed by the knowledge that I am not an unprejudiced witness. I fell in love with Zanzibar at first sight, and the more I saw of it the more I wanted to take my luggage out of the ship's hold and cable to my friends to try and have me made vice consul to Zanzibar through all succeeding administrations.

Zanzibar runs back abruptly from a white beach in a succession of high white walls. It glistens and glares, and dazzles you with the sand at your feet is white, the city itself is white, the robes of the people are white. It has no public landing pier. Your rowboat is run ashore on a white shelving beach, and you face an impenetrable mass of white walls. The blue waters are behind you, and a strip of white sand is at your feet.

And while you are wondering where this hidden city may be, a kind friend takes you by the hand and pilots you through a narrow crack in the rampart, along a twisting fissure between white-washed walls where the sun can not reach, past great black doorways of carved oak, and out suddenly into the light and laughter, and roar of Zanzibar.

In the narrow streets are all the colors of the Orient, gorgeous, unshaded and violent; cobalt blue, greens and reds on framework, windows and doorways; red and yellow in the awnings and curtains of the bazaars, and orange and black, red and white, yellow, dark blue and purple, in the long shawls of the women. It is the busiest and the brightest and richest in color of all the ports along the East African coast. Were it not for its narrow streets and its towering walls it would be a place of perpetual sunshine. Everybody is either actively busy, or contentedly idle. It is all movement, noise and glitter, everyone is telling everyone else to make way before him; the Indian merchants beseech you from the open bazaars; their children, swathed in gorgeous silks and hung with jewels and bangles, stumble under your feet, the Sultan's troops assail you with life and drum, and the black women, wrapped below their bare shoulders in the colors of the butterfly, and with teeth and brows dyed purple, crowd you to the wall.—Richard Harding Davis, in Scribner's.

Destiny of Cuba.

No one doubts for a moment what the ultimate destiny of Cuba is to be. It is as sure to become a part of the United States as that Florida, Louisiana and Texas are parts of the United States, and there are but three ways of bringing this about—two of them dishonest and unjustifiable and proper. The first is the immediate and arbitrary annexation of the island, irrespective of our promises. The second is the shrinking of our present responsibilities, by which we shall abandon a people not yet ready for self-government to their own worst elements, with the certain knowledge that within a brief period they must come to us for succor, and in such a state of beggary that they must take the stone if we chose to give it them instead of bread. But there is the honest method—the third—by which we may keep our promise to all, and in the end achieve the result which I believe is desired by all who have the permanent interests of Cuba at heart, and that is, to remain in the island until these at present dazed and lame and halt people have been quickened, have been cured of the ills from which they are still suffering; until the vitalizing work of the United States has gathered such an impetus that it may be left without fear of reactionary influences in the hands of those for whose benefit it has been instituted; until, in short, the people of Cuba are strong enough to accept the burdens they seek to assume. They shall soon be found seeking statehood. Those who say they are not worthy ignore their virtues. Those who say they are ready and able to stand along at the present time, ignore the facts.—Harper's Weekly.

A Prompt Boy.

Small boy dashed breathless into a merchant's office.
"Is the gov' nor in?"
"Yes; what do you want?"
"Must see him myself; most particular."
"But you can't; he's engaged."
"Must see him himself; most particular."
The boy's impertunty got him in.
"Well, boy; what do you want?"
"D'yer want a office boy, sir?"
"You impudent young rascal! No! We've got one."
"No, you ain't, sir; he's just big run over in Cheapside."
Boy engaged.—Tid-Bits.

South African Bluebook.

London, April 17.—A South African bluebook, containing recent dispatches from Sir Alfred Milner and other official correspondence, was issued tonight.

Sir Alfred Milner wired under date of March 3 requesting permission to return home at an early date upon leave of absence, for the purpose of resting. Joseph Chamberlain, the colonial secretary, replied by granting this request, but expressing the government's regret that it should be necessary for Sir Alfred to leave South Africa at the present time, quite recognizing, however, his need for rest, and mentioning three months as a possible period of absence.

In a dispatch dated February 6, Sir Alfred reviews the situation in South Africa and says he had hoped some definite point would be reached, after which it would be impossible to sum up that chapter of history containing the ways and forecast of administrative reconstruction which must succeed it.

"But I am reluctantly forced to the conclusion that there will be no such dividing line," continues Sir Alfred, "and I have not the slightest doubt of the ultimate result, but I foresee that the work will be slower, more difficult, more harassing and more expensive than was at any time anticipated. At any rate, it is idle to wait longer in the hope of being able to discover a clear and clean-cut situation. In spite of the confused character of the present position, I think it better to attempt to discover, however roughly and inadequately, the state of things as they exist today. It is no use denying that the last half year has been one of retrogression. Seven months ago this colony was perfectly quiet, at least as far as the Orange river. The southern half of the Orange River Colony was rapidly settling down, and even a considerable portion of the Transvaal, notably the southwestern districts, seemed to have definitely accepted British authority and to rejoice at the opportunity to return to orderly government and the pursuits of peace. Today the scene is completely altered. It would be superfluous to dwell on the increased losses to the country caused by the prolongation of the struggle by the form which it has recently assumed. The enemy are now broken up into a great number of small forces raiding in every direction, and that our troops are similarly broken up in their pursuit makes the area of actual fighting, and consequently of destruction, much wider than would be the case in a conflict between equal numbers operating in large masses. Moreover, the fight is now mainly over supplies. The Boers live entirely on the country through which they pass, not only taking all the food they can lay their hands on, but looting the small village stores of clothes, boots, coffee and sugar, all of which they are in great need of. Our forces are compelled to denude the country of everything movable in order to frustrate the tactics of the enemy.

"The loss of crops and stock is more serious to the Boers than farm burning, of which so much has been heard. I say this not at all as an advocate of such destruction, and I am glad to think the measure is now seldom, if ever, resorted to."
The appearance of the blue book just at this moment is explained as a characteristic move on the part of Mr. Chamberlain, who, with a view of anticipating the inevitable criticism upon the temporary absence of Sir Alfred Milner from South Africa, published important communications, giving frankly the views of the men on the spot, and showing that Sir Alfred seized an occasion to secure well-earned rest while the military operations are still unfinished, so as to enable him to be back at his post again when the time arrives for inaugurating the civil administration.

B Wins This Bet.
Editor Nugget:
A bet B the Yukon river would be open by 6 o'clock p.m. of the 14th and claimed the money after the ice in front of a portion of the city moved at 4:12 of that same evening. B refused to pay, claiming that as there was solid ice both above and below the short open space the river was not open. Please decide as to who won and oblige.
A AND B.
(Strictly speaking, the river is not open so long as solid bodies of ice cover it at frequent intervals as was the case on the evening of the 14th, therefore, according to the stipulations of the above wager B is certainly the winner.)
