Lord Cecil's Dilemma

—OR—
The Picnic
—in—
Woodall Forest

CHAPTER XLVII.

Sir Charles had whispered to Gladys who the stranger was, and sent her to tell Lady Marcia, while he introduced Edgar Emden to her father and burst the thralldom of horror and remorse that bound him. While this was being done, Gardner was alone with Lord Cecil, who looked at the barrister with questioning eyes.

"I did not reply," he said. "I was afraid; but it has to come to it now. I did not know that I knew the man I have personated. I hope I was kind to him. God knows I never was kind to anybody in the old days."

"He is here!" announced Gardner. "My God! Where? Who is he?"

"I am he!"

Cecil grasped his hand, and sobbed: "I believe it. You are like Lady Stanhope. I am glad it is over!"

He sat down and buried his face in his hands; then he stood up again and smiled brightly.

"I shall be a better man for it," he said. "I am sure of it, my boy. I am your friend forever."

Cecil told the barrister of the steward's letter, and a mounted messenger was sent for Collins with a note from Cecil.

"Come at once, and we will settle upon favorable terms."

Then the barrister—or Lord Herbert Stanhope—told Cecil all that was going on at the house.

"The earl is saved," he said, "and the steward will simply be told to quit. I have not been idle all this while. He is no connection of my lords—there are no ties of blood. His father was a gentleman in reduced circumstances, and the chance resemblance he bore to the earl suggested all sorts of possibilities to his scheming brain. He has always had notions of power and wealth, and hoped to obtain them through you at any cost."

"Then my only disgrace is my father's villainy," asked Cecil.

"It is. You are of good birth, and your mother died a few months after you were born. Since then Mr. Collins has lived the life of a rich prodigal with the earl's money."

The messenger returned with the information that the steward would be at the abbey at two o'clock, and in the meanwhile the whole party planned to meet him in the library. From a house of gloom it was transformed into one of joy, and Lady Marcia disappeared for nearly an hour with her old lover, who had been restored to her after so many weary years of waiting.

While this was going on, Sir Charles and Lady Gladys had vanished elsewhere, and Cecil, with Lord Herbert Stanhope, was unfolding to the earl another kind of story.

At two o'clock the entire party were seated in the library, and when Collins came he was ushered into their midst, surprise and rage distorting his face.

—or the—
Hero of 'Surata'

CHAPTER V.

"What do you think she is proud of?" he asked.

She was silent for a few moments; and then she answered slowly—

"Of her birth and name, John."

"I suppose," he said bitterly, "that in her eyes we are little better than nobodies. Gold does not gild us. Would to Heaven I had been born noble rather than rich!"

"How you grieve me when you speak so, John," cried Marie earnestly. "Every man may make himself noble by living nobly, and no man has it in his power to lead a higher life than you can."

"All the nobility I could win would not tempt her," he said. "When she marries, she will want a name as distinguished as her own."

"A good name is a grand name, and the patent comes from Heaven," said Marie, but he answered never a word.

"If that be county society, papa, let us hasten to town," said Lady Iris. "Yet do you know, I have a vague feeling of pity for them all. The millionaire himself is a vulgar, boasting man, but there is something in his good nature that redeems him. His wife is dreadful, but her loyal devoted daughter is such a shield that one cannot laugh at the mother. However vulgar or absurd she might be, I could not laugh at her, because her daughter loves her so."

"I admire Miss Bardon," said Lord Caledon, who has a loyal and truthful nature. What do you think of the heir of Hyne Court, Iris?"

"I like him the least of all," she replied; "and yet I think I am very sorry for him."

"That is a paradox, Iris."

"Is it, papa? I am not quite sure that I know what a paradox is. He seems to me like a man who is fighting with himself, discontented, and uncertain. He is in a transition state I suppose. Papa, I am beginning to think that it is fate or chance that gives wealth."

"My dear Iris, you must not say anything of that kind!" cried the earl.

"I cannot help it. Riches seem to reach such strange hands."

"You must not forget that we see only with human eyes, and can bring only human judgment to bear on matters. It is impossible for any one to tell whether wealth is wisely bestowed or not. I believe that it is for some wise purpose that one man is made rich and another man poor."

"Well, I will believe whatever you believe, papa," she answered, with reverence. "All the same, it does seem strange that people like the Bardons should hold such enormous wealth in their hands."

"They do not make a bad use of it, my dear," said the earl kindly; "and, as I have always told you, money is power."

"Power only when it is held with honor, papa," she rejoined; and he kissed her thoughtful face as he said—

"You are right, Iris—as you often are."

So it came to pass that before the young heiress of Chandos had been long at home two men were ready to die for her, ready to slay each other for love of her, hating each other with fierce mad hatred, yet trying to appear as indifferent about the whole matter as possible.

Sir Fulke Clifford had the best of the situation. He could call almost daily at Chandos; his mother, knowing such errands delighted him, was always finding some excuse of asking him to go thither. His chances of seeing Lady Iris were very frequent—and John Bardon knew it. Time after time he met his rival either riding, or driving or walking to Chandos; and, if looks could have slain, the handsome young baronet would never have seen Lady Iris again.

They met and passed each other with a sullen glare; each had discovered, as though by instinct, the secret of the other, although no words had ever been exchanged between them. Sir Fulke, in spite of his opportunities, did not make much progress in his wooing. His fine speeches and poetical raptures fell rather flat. They never made any lasting impression on Lady Iris. Sometimes she would laugh and say, "You are a little more high-down than usual to-day, Sir Fulke," or she would, by a graceful and imperious gesture, signify that she was tired.

Why, Violet Blackwell had said often, and often that she could listen to him, either reading or reciting, forever; and yet after a few minutes Lady Iris would repeatedly declare that she was tired!

"I wish," he said one day very humbly, "that I knew how to interest you. You seem quite fatigued when I have talked to you for a little while."

"Not always, Sir Fulke," she answered gently. "That is only when the conversation is of yourself. Talk to me of something else, and you will find me different!"

That was the first direct attack ever made on his self-love, and it bewildered him.

"Am I then the only subject about which you are indifferent?" he asked.

"Do you not think it possible to have too much even of a good thing?" she said. "I do. Talk to me now about some topic of general interest, and see if I tire."

He looked at her in such amazement that she laughed; and it was the prettiest laugh he had ever heard.

"Other ladies seem to like me best when I speak of myself," he said simply. "Miss Blackwell always says, 'Tell me something of yourself, Sir Fulke; nothing interests me one half so much as your own adventures.'"

"And do you believe I do. Why should I not, Lady Iris?"

"Do you think everything belonging to yourself is really of such great interest that people can enjoy listening hour after hour to you and not grow tired?"

"I should say that those who take an interest in me can," he answered, a little crestfallen.

"Miss Violet Blackwell should be grateful for the inference," said Lady Iris coldly.

"I do not mean that. I did not intend to flatter anything of the kind."

THE REAL TREASURES.

I fancy when the name is done and all the petty strife is through. The little prizes we have won, the deeds we tried so hard to do. Will seem but trivial, after all; and looking back across the way, The best of life that we'll recall will be some happy yesterday.

The goals we've reached will lose their glow, the things we've done will seem to fade. The richest treasures we shall know, will be the friendships we have made; Though now we strive for peace and gain, and find them difficult to win. When once those treasures we obtain, some other struggles we'll begin.

Not long will hold retain its glow, the silver cup is tarnished soon. We weary of the goals we know as children reaching for the moon. We seek the charm that lies afar, from what is done we turn away.

Thinking that most important are the selfish goals we hope to do.

And yet I fancy at the close, when memory turns the pages o'er, The brightest pictures will be those of pleasures right beside our door.

The old contentment which we knew, the children and the games we played. And, brightening all life's story through, will be the friends that we have made.

RETIRE.

A sad old man sat by the sea, and wept in trumpet tones, and every time he looked at me he heaved some bitter groan.

"I was a merchant, prince," quoth he; "my name is Jim Jones. I had the finest dry goods store that ever eyes beheld, and strangers, when they glanced at it, o'erthrew their hands and yelled; I was a happy man of yore, but all my joys are knelled. I will retire from active life," I said, though trade was flag; I'm of the toll and strife, at ease I would recline; I was encouraged by my wife, and by my daughters nine. In some nice grad beside the sea, I said I shall abide; a chair beneath the banyan tree, and I'll be satisfied; there with my pipe and slippers three, I'll let life's autumn slide. And oft I heard my wife declare that such a course was best; my daughters went up in the air and said I needed rest; and so I sold out every thing, and all that I possessed. All day I sit beside the wave and sigh and hear me rave, imagine I have bats; oh, I would thank some surly knave to shoot me with his gats. For when a man is used to trade, with all its rush and roar, he feels like something dead, decayed, when he's outside a store; he'd see things measured out and weighed, and rest's an awful bore. I see you with your wooden legs, you swat it once or twice, and while I sit here and perjure, I hand you this advice: Oh, never from your gifts retire, while you can put up ice."

What one of the Best Known Travellers in Canada Says:—

"Now I am going to give you an unsolicited testimonial as they say in the patent medicine advertisements. Heretofore I have had a profound contempt for patent medicines, particularly so-called liniments, perhaps this is due to the reason that I have been blessed with a sturdy constitution, and have never been ill a day in my life. One day last fall after a hard day's tramp in the slush of Montreal, I developed a severe pain in my legs and arms, and I was unable to move. I was in a bad way, and I was told to rub them with some liniment I have."

"Go ahead," I said, just to humor her. "Well, in she comes with a bottle of Milner's Liniment, and gets busy. Believe me the pain disappeared a few minutes after, and you can tell the world I said so."

THE REAL TREASURES.

I fancy when the name is done and all the petty strife is through. The little prizes we have won, the deeds we tried so hard to do. Will seem but trivial, after all; and looking back across the way, The best of life that we'll recall will be some happy yesterday.

The goals we've reached will lose their glow, the things we've done will seem to fade. The richest treasures we shall know, will be the friendships we have made; Though now we strive for peace and gain, and find them difficult to win. When once those treasures we obtain, some other struggles we'll begin.

Not long will hold retain its glow, the silver cup is tarnished soon. We weary of the goals we know as children reaching for the moon. We seek the charm that lies afar, from what is done we turn away.

Thinking that most important are the selfish goals we hope to do.

And yet I fancy at the close, when memory turns the pages o'er, The brightest pictures will be those of pleasures right beside our door.

The old contentment which we knew, the children and the games we played. And, brightening all life's story through, will be the friends that we have made.

GREEK OFFICERS OVERTHROW
CIVIL AUTHORITIES IN AD-
RIANOPLE.

LONDON, Sept. 15.
Renter's despatch from Constantinople says a seditious movement has broken out at Adrianople where several officers and a portion of the population has overthrown the Greek civil authorities. It is also reported that similar movements have developed on the islands of Mytilene and Chios, in the Aegean Sea.

FRANCE WITH ALLIES.

PARIS, Sept. 15.
The French Government in its reply forwarded yesterday to the British note on the Near East announces that France has decided to join the other Allies in requesting the Turkish Nationalist Government to respect the neutrality of the zone of the Dardanelles fixed by the Treaty of Sevres. Instructions to this effect have been sent to General Pelle, the French High Commissioner in Constantinople.

SMYRNA IS COMPLETELY WRECKED.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 15.
Smyrna has been completely wrecked by the conflagration raging there the past two days, according to information reaching here from authentic sources, and it is believed thousands perished. Only the Turkish quarter remains. The theory is advanced in Greek official circles here that the Kemalists deliberately set the city on fire, in order to evacuate the entire Christian population, thereby relieving the Turks of the problem of minorities in Anatolia. The Kemalists on the other hand assert that the conflagration resulted from an exchange of rifle shots between the invaders and the Greeks and Armenians, the latter directing a fire upon the Turks from Churches and houses.

DARDANELLES BARRED TO KEMALISTS.

LONDON, Sept. 15.
The British fleet have been instructed to allow no Turkish troops to cross from Asia to Europe, it was officially announced tonight.

CLEANING UP TRANSPORTATION PROBLEM.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.
The entire Pennsylvania system today, Friday, signed a new working contract with the big four running brotherhoods and the New York Central lines signed two of them, trainmen and conductors, this being declared to herald a complete clean-up of all the transportation problems troubling the United States.

RAILWAY SITUATION STILL UNCERTAIN.

CHICAGO, Sept. 15.
The refusal by a number of the biggest railway systems in the United States to enter into the plan for ending the shipmen's strike on the basis of separate agreements developed an element of considerable uncertainty to-day over the scope and effectiveness of the peace programme.

HUNGARY ADMITTED TO LEAGUE.

GENEVA, Sept. 15.
The political committee of the League of Nations voted unanimously, to-day to admit Hungary to membership in the League.

OFFERS TO CHANGE MAYFLOWER.

BOSTON, Sept. 15.
An offer to prove to the Nova Scotia trustees of the International Fishermen's trophy that the schooner Mayflower has greater useful load carrying capacity than any other two stickers in the United States fishing fleet, and to change any details of the rig that constitute a departure from previous fishermen, was made to-day in a telegram sent by Starling Burgess, designer of the schooner.

FORD CLOSES DETROIT PLANT.

DETROIT, Sept. 15.
Henry Ford to-day took steps to close the Detroit Automobile Plant beginning tonight, thereby throwing Ford's hundred thousand men out of employment for an indefinite period.

FOUR COURTS AGAIN ATTACKED.

DUBLIN, Sept. 15.
The Four Courts was subjected to an attack by Republican forces last night, but the latter were finally driven off after firing from the opposite side of the river.

ACADIA'S NEW PRESIDENT.

WOLFVILLE, N.S., Sept. 15.
Dr. F. W. Patterson, of Winnipeg, has accepted the Presidency of Acadia University in succession to Dr. George B. Cutten.

DONCASTER CUP.

LONDON, Sept. 15.
The winners of the Doncaster Cup Race were: first, Devizes; second, Double Hackle; third, Revival.

Cuticura Heals Itching Burning Pimples On Face

"My face was entirely covered with pimples which not only disfigured me but bothered me with itching and burning. They were large, hard and red, and after a while began to crust. They looked so that I had to scratch them which made the burning more intense."

"I used various salves and creams but they gave no relief. The trouble lasted for nearly three months until I heard of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I sent for a free sample. In about a week a decided improvement was made. No itching more, and two cakes of Soap with one box of Ointment healed me." (Signed) Edna V. Post, 7 Ocean View Ave., East Lynn, Mass.

What the Carmen Say.

The carmen who went on strike yesterday say it is impossible to keep a horse and man on four dollars per day. Shoeing for an ordinary sized horse costs $3.50 per set. The same price prevailed during the war. They say harness and vehicle repairs have not followed the downward tendency despite their protests and despite the fact that the Union had received two cuts in their cartage fares. It may be noticed that milk and laundry bills are still very high.

Queen of Sheba at Majestic Monday.

Memories of the beautiful women who have ruled the hearts of men throughout the ages fade into insignificance when one mentions the immortal Queen of Sheba, who through the centuries rises as visualization of the most beautiful woman the world has ever known. Queen of Sheba, of Araby the Blessed, Daughter of a Hundred Kings, (she ruled the hearts of men and was impervious to all appeals until she finally met the supreme love which dominated her life. Now in radiant splendor with the gorgeousness and glory of the ancient Orient as its background, has been screened this greatest of love stories—"Queen of Sheba," produced by William Fox and directed by the master genius of the screen, J. Gordon Edwards.

A Mistake Admitted.

If we may judge from the editorial article which he, himself, must have written in a recent issue of the Advocate, the Hon. W. F. Coaker has at last realized how mistaken was his policy for the regulation of the fishery, a policy which contributed more than anything else towards the existent trade depression. Even at the time that he consented to the removal from the Statute Book of the Codfish Exportation Act, Mr. Coaker stated in the House that he still believed in it, and it is small satisfaction now, when the country is paying the price of his ill-advised Fish Regulations, that he should admit that he was wrong and that Sir John Crosbie and the late Walter Baine Grieve, the two outstanding figures among the few who opposed the policy from the outset, were right. The only man who had the courage to openly declare himself hostile to the Fish Regulations, and the only member of the Assembly to vote against them, and incidentally, against his own party, was Sir John Crosbie, and when he later stated that they were conceived in sin, born in sin and died in sin, he could not have applied a more apt description to the most iniquitous and harmful Act that the Newfoundland Legislature has ever passed. A policy which made outright sales of fish compulsory would exercise only a beneficial influence, but to attempt to fix a price for a commodity which could be supplied by other countries was so enormous a blunder that it is difficult to believe that any man possessed of a modicum of common-sense could have been guilty of it. Mr. Coaker, intoxicated with his first taste of power, was too obstinate, too perverse, perhaps too confident in his own powers of judgment and in his own powers of the fishing industry, to take the good advice that was offered him by his political adversary with the result that he has almost ruined the country economically nor will it be due to him, in any part, when prosperity again takes us into its fold. He has admitted that he was mistaken, and late though this admission is, he deserves a certain amount of admiration for it, but how different would things have been, how much more worthy of esteem would he be, if he had followed the advice of men of better judgment, and not the dictates of his own ill-advised opinions?

Dr. Grenfell Again.

Scarcely a year passes without the accusation being levelled at Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell, that he is disseminating in the foreign press, reports of conditions in this country which not only damage the reputation of the colony, but are also harmful to our credit. The following item, which was captioned "Newfoundland Suffers," appeared in the Los Angeles Times of Aug. 25th:—

"Great poverty and suffering with an outlook more gloomy than in any period in its history is reported in Newfoundland in a letter from Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell, St. Anthony, Labrador (sic) to the headquarters of the National Child Welfare Association."

It cannot be denied that the present outlook is gloomy, but it is equally true, a fact which this item does not make clear, that conditions are not so bad that economic recovery is hopeless. That destitution has occurred in several settlements, that Government relief is still necessary, does not mean that there is "great poverty and suffering," and it is certainly most unwise of Dr. Grenfell to spread such reports among people who are not acquainted with the conditions which prevail here, and are consequently bound to place a wrong construction on his statements.

The Near East.

The situation in the Near East has taken on complications of a most serious nature, as was only to be expected when the original complexity of the question was considered. The Allies were perfectly justified in refusing to hand Constantinople to the Greeks, whose only claim to it is that it was once the capital of the Byzantine Empire, which might be equal justification for Great Britain to demand Normandy from the French, but the complete rout of the Greek forces by the Turks should have been a signal for the Great Powers to order an instant cessation of hostilities. Mad with the lust for blood and conquest, the victorious Turks, who might still be termed barbarians, are advancing on their former capital, leaving behind them unmistakable signs of their ferocity and savagery. Immediate action on the part of the Allies is necessary if the unspeakable Turk is to be prevented from re-entering Constantinople, for the forces defending that city are insufficient to withstand the army of Mustafa Kemal. The Turk has had his day in Europe which is better off without him, and the sooner he learns that, and we might add, the sooner the Balkan nations learn to abandon their too ambitious plans, the better for the peace of the continent.

Church Parade.

C.L.R. CADETS GO TO ST. MICHAEL'S.

The C.L.R. Cadets will hold their first Church Parade since Camp tomorrow morning. The Battalion will parade at the Armory at 10 a.m. and will attend Divine Service at St. Michael's. A large number of all ranks are expected to turn out, and the Old Comrades should also be present in goodly numbers.

Little River Coal.

COMPANY WILL DEVELOP PROPERTY.

To develop their property and place their coal on the local market is the avowed object of the Little River Coal Mining Company, Limited, which was recently formed and has its head office at St. George's. The company have on the ground at the present moment one of the leading mining experts of Great Britain, who is now engaged in boring on the outcropping in an endeavour to locate the main body of the ore. According to a Sydney mines expert there is ample evidence of the existence near Little River of a large area of true coal, covering an area of 10 square miles and wherein several seams have been found outcropping. The company claims that they can provide much of the enormous quantities of coal consumed in this country and that the commodity can be shipped from the mines to St. John's in 40 hours. Shares are now on the market and will probably be in great demand.

Aged Vagrant.

WILL BE SENT TO POOR HOUSE.

A vagrant, who said that he was 64 years old, and that for 20 years he had been living in Canada, was ordered by the Magistrate this morning to be sent to the Poor House if he could find no means of livelihood. Since returning here accused lived at the Seamen's Institute until his money gave out. He said that it was impossible for him to find work here.

SMUGGLERS FINED.—At Belleoram, on a charge brought by Inspector Dea, Ulrich Critchell was convicted of a breach of Section 803 of the Customs Act and fined $100. Goods to the value of $200 were confiscated. In a similar charge preferred against Silas Fudge the defendant was fined $110.

Our Local Papers.

HIS DIARY.

Sept. 15th.—Mr. Beck's de tell me how he is like to lose his $100 a year pension of the Government, which he looks for so long he rendered, and the reason that the Government would economize. So then he did begin to talk of the Cabal which he terms the most monstrous one the country did ever have, so I bid him to hold his peace and tell him. Much talk of the Humber Scheme and some to say it is finished with, but others would have it that all is right and to tell Sir R. Seiffert will return soon to tell us of it. Dispatches out of Turkey relate how the Turks do advance on Constantinople in all haste and are like to take it. They do seem to be barbarians and will, I hope, be sent home to and to play at bridge, which I do but moderately, and so home and to bed.

Boats Attacked.

FISHERMEN FEAR SEA MONSTERS.

Sea monsters which are reported to be from forty to sixty feet long have attacked boats engaged in fishing out of British Harbour, Trinity Bay, and fishermen are afraid to go out on the grounds. A large school of these monsters, of which no description has been received, appeared off the coast a few days ago and are still in the Bay. An organized expedition will be sent from the settlements off which the school lies, in an effort to capture or disperse the strange menace to the prosecution of the fishery. Several boats which went out recently narrowly escaped being swamped by these huge denizens of the deep. The appearance of the school has been reported to the Department of Marine and Fisheries by the telegraph operator at British Harbour.

McMurdo's Store News.

SATURDAY, Sept. 16.

If indigestion of dyspepsia be your trouble, you will probably find Gault's Digestive Syrup of great service. This is especially the case if you are troubled with constipation or biliousness, and in such cases we cannot recommend Gault's Syrup too highly. The results some of our customers have attained from Gault's Syrup is simply marvellous, and justified the high opinion we have of this remarkable remedy. In uncomplicated cases, there is no better remedy for its purpose to be found anywhere than Gault's Digestive Syrup. Price 50c. a bottle.

The Humber Proposition.

HAVE REIDS DEFAULTED.

To-day a prominent member of the Crown stated to the Telegram that the Humber negotiations are in the same stage as reached eight months ago. A rumour prevails that the Government have been advised by English authorities that the Reids have defaulted in their contractual obligations and their demand for 2½ million dollars for their interest in the Humber limits has brought the negotiations to a standstill.

Shipping Notes.

Schooners Ronald B. 500; Sir Douglas Haig 700, Virginia with 350 quintals codfish have arrived at Greenspond from Labrador.

S.S. Daghigh arrived at Limerille in ballast from Sydney yesterday. Schooner General Gough has sailed from Grand Bank for Oporto for orders with 5,000 qts codfish. Schooner Humorist has arrived at Little Bay Islands from Santa Pola with 250 tons salt.

Schooner Faustina has arrived at Ramsgate after a passage of 29 days from Oporto. Schooner Lady St. John with 3,500 qts codfish shipped by J. O'Rourke cleared from Labrador on August 31st. According to a message to the Marine and Fisheries Department there are five steamers loading on the coast.

S.S. Silvius sailed from New York to-day on schedule.

He'd Roost High.

Dick Jones was up again for poultry stealing. But as usual, nothing could be got from the witness in the way of evidence, until the half-baked prosecuting counsel asked in a tragic tone:

"Will you swear on your soul, Arthur Brown, that Richard Jones has never to your knowledge stolen chickens?"

The responsibility of this last lie was too much.

"Well, I don't know about that," said Arthur, "but I do know," he added, straightening himself, "that if I was a chicken, and Dick was about, I'd roost high."

HAS LARGE CARGO.—S. S. Rosa Lind was delayed a half hour in sailing to-day on account of a large cargo offering. The ship has about 5,000 barrels of cargo, mostly fish and oil.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

SEAMEN STRIKE.

MARSHFIELD, Sept. 16. A strike of seamen called in protest against the Government decree defying the eight hour law on French vessels was put into effect here this morning when crews went ashore leaving aboard only sufficient men to ensure the safety of their vessels. The seamen plan to be out twenty-three hours as a full day absence would subject them to disciplinary measures.

NORTHCLIFFE'S FORTUNE.

LONDON, Sept. 16. The Weekly Nation says it understands Lord Northcliffe left a fortune of nearly seven million pounds.

HAIKIN'S SUGGESTION.

LONDON, Sept. 16. Lord Haig speaking at Manchester yesterday pleaded the cause of one hundred and twenty thousand disabled ex-service men who are still unemployed and suggested they be distributed among employers who would pay them what they earn and that the Government should make up deficiency in wages.

DECISION POSTPONED.

BOSTON, Sept. 16. The American Race Committee has postponed action on the decision of the trustees barring the Mayflower pending the result of visit of starting Burgess, designer, now on way to Halifax.

Relieves S.S. Home.

S.S. Portia now on the way to Channel has been ordered on to Humbermouth to take up the Home's route. It is probable that the Portia will not be sent back to the West Coast Service as it is claimed that not sufficient freight is offering to warrant two steamers on the route.

Personal.

Worshipful Brother John R. Bennett, D.D.G.M. and Worshipful Brother W. J. Edgar, D.G.S. of English Freemasonry, leave for Botwood tomorrow morning and will preside on Monday evening at the installation of the master and officers of Botwood lodge.

Here and There.

LANDED STOWAWAY.—S.S. Canada Sapper, which left here yesterday afternoon, called at Bay Bulls and landed a stowaway named James Bussey.

Where to get Pound Tweeds. Special lot; just opened. Long lengths good quality; low price, at BISHOP'S.

NOT THE MAN.—The man who had the accident at Fox Trap is not Mr. Reg. Brown, who drives a taxi from the East End stand.

CORRECTION.—In the report of the weekly meeting of the Municipal Council it was stated that Mr. Hynes spoke on behalf of the Battery Road Committee. It should have read Mr. Morrissey.

Deadly Snakes That Help Doctors.

In the reptile house in the London Zoological Gardens you can see a rather large and ugly looking lizard, with a blunt head and stumpy tail. The inscription on the cage tells you its name is "Heloderma," and its home Arizona.

This unpretentious creature is, in fact, the famous or infamous "Gila Monster," which is one of the only two poisonous lizards known to man. Until lately the best thing to be done with this deadly and uncouth inhabitant of Arizona's blazing wastes seemed to be to destroy it as soon as possible, yet now, the advance of science has invested the monster with a sudden value.

It has been found that the poison of the Gila monster is a useful remedy for that terrible form of paralysis known as "motor ataxia," a disease which prevents the proper use of the limbs, and was formerly thought incurable.

The poison is of such amazing strength that it has to be diluted down to the one-hundredth-thousandth part in other words, the solution used is one drop of the poison to something over a gallon of alcohol.

The poisons of many venomous snakes are now being used in medicine. Both the cobra and the rattlesnake are kept in numbers in captivity, so that their poison may be extracted for the manufacture of a serum for the cure of snakebite.

The work at the Pasteur Institute in this direction is well known, and quantities of their serum go to India. Near Rio, in Brazil, in a State Institute for the manufacture of sera for the cure of snakebite. Here are snakes of a score of different kinds, including the huge and terrible "bushmaster" and the deadly little "coral snake."

Brazil is full of poisonous snakes, and the Government sera are to be obtained in almost any village all over the huge country.

Mars, the Mysterious.

Is there life on Mars? Unfortunately, the answer must still be what it was fifty years ago—"We do not know," but it must not be thought from this that astronomers are in the least disappointed.

Mars is one of our nearest neighbors in space, and, although he is never less than thirty-five million miles from us, we obtain a better view of his surface than that of any other planet.

The general color of the surface is a cross between pale orange and salmon pink, and it is this that makes Mars look ruddy to the naked eye.

It is rather a puzzle to explain what surface of this color really represents, but most astronomers believe we are looking at vast deserts, formed from the crumbling of rocks similar to our red sandstone.

But this is not all that we see on Mars. There are darker patches here and there, and these can be so clearly seen that it has been possible to make a very fair map of the planet, and to recognise each patch or marking by its special shape and position.

At one time these dark markings were thought to be seas and oceans, but closer study has revealed at least three facts that do not support this idea.

First, some of the markings change their shape quite perceptibly from time to time (though their positions never vary); secondly, darker spots and streaks relieve the monotony of the general shade; and, thirdly, there is a regular change in the colour of the markings.

This last fact is, perhaps, the most important for the colour change with the seasons of the year, which are much the same as on earth, though each is twice as long.

Certain markings appear green in the Martian spring, becoming brown or grey as summer gives way to autumn and winter. And the best explanation of this is that this cycle of changes points to the growth and decay of vegetation.

Of course, vegetation requires water for its existence, so the next question is: Can we find any evidence of water on Mars?

The telescope gives us a pretty certain answer to this question, for, besides showing us a white area at each pole, which melts as the summer advances, it often reveals elsewhere white patches of what seems to be clouds or hoar-frost.

Through the telescope we can actually watch these gradually disappearing under the rays of the sun, uncovering the familiar markings that lie beneath them.

So much for the probability, almost the certainty, of vegetable life. And, if vegetable life, why not animal, and even human, life?

It is here, just at the interesting point, that difficulties begin to arise. Animal life, as we know it, requires abundance of air, and will not stand very low temperatures.

Now, we have evidence that there is far less air on Mars than on the earth, and this, together with his greater distance from the sun, must give rise to intense cold during the night, certainly much more severe than anything we experience on earth. And so we see that, far from being able to give an answer to the question with which we started out, we must go further back and ask: "Can there be life on Mars?"

From what we know, it seems highly improbable that we ourselves could exist there, with our bodies as they are now.

But it does not by any means follow that Nature has failed to people that beautiful planet with beings specially adapted to their surroundings.

THE CHAMPIONSHIP.

With the third great playoff ahead. And the lash of all fandom behind. To the tune of the cheers. Rolling by in their cars. They keep up with the nerve racking grind. With the knowledge that time will record.
And in letters undating, will etch. The cup winners' names on the tablet of fame.
They thunder along in the stretch. They battle and struggle to gain. Their bodies are tired and aching. And some of them tumble and swerve. But they know they can't stop in this spurt to the top.
For they have to keep going on nerve.

They have to keep going on nerve. The finish is not like the start. Your team may have won at the flash of the gun. But the bell-lap takes gameness and heart.
The Harps and Cadets are bunched near the wire. It's up to either to land. It's science and grit that makes them so fit.
But, best how they're panned on the Stand.

CADETS CHANGE LINEUP.

As the result of a pow-wow last night behind closed doors, to consider ways and means of annexing the all-weather, the Cadet team has been re-positioned. Clare will be in goal; Jimmy Christopher goes fullback with Kavanagh, while Galgay goes centre-half, with Morris and Madden. Jack Canning will play centre-forward with Flynn, Measney, and Carl. Madden who is out of the game through injuries, will be replaced, it is likely by either Fred O'Neill or Spurrell—one of whom will be chosen to-day.

The B.S. will have the same line-up as in their last appearance, although some of the positions will be altered somewhat to offset the manoeuvres of the Cadet changes.

The two scoreless play-offs have given the official staff of each an opportunity of locating weaknesses which can be rectified and holes that can be plugged up. There is no doubt about it but Monday night's game will be a regular humdinger.

and that the fate of the 1922 Championship will be decided once and for all. Should the Irish win the Cup (which now is more valuable sentimentally than intrinsically) it will find a final resting place in their Club rooms.

This is the twentieth year it has been competed for—having been presented originally in 1903. The previous Cup was won by the Stars who were then in the zenith of their power and glory. As a matter of fact it is interesting to note that the Stars claim the right of possession to this one; well, having won it in 1912 and 1913. The result of the 1914 series was declared between the Stars, C.E.I. and Collegians owing to a dispute. So that after all the Stars may justly claim that they won it three years in succession. Including the tie described above the Stars have their names inscribed on it seven times; the B.S. five; the Collegians three; the C.E.I. and Saints twice; and the Felidians and Terra Novas once each.

OFFICIAL LEAGUE NOTICES.

Players will be at their dressing rooms by 5.45.

Referee Hunt has been instructed to start the game promptly at six o'clock, and in no circumstance whatever will any delay be tolerated owing to danger of darkness setting in.

Holders of tickets only will be permitted to enter by the big gate; those paying admission must enter at the ordinary wickets.

All cars must enter by the special gate on Merrymount Road, at which admittance will be positively barred to pedestrians.

Poisons That Lurk in Food.

Whenever a tragedy occurs associated with poisoning by food, there is always talk of "ptomaine poisoning."

As a matter of fact no cases of ptomaine poisoning have anything to do with ptomaines. Ptomaines are chemical substances, resulting from the putrefaction of a meat, fish, and other protein substances. Their bad reputation appears to be due to an old tale to the effect that the Borgias prepared their most efficient poisons by allowing dead pigs to rot in the sun and collecting the liquid which dropped from them. Actually, ptomaines are far less potent than relatively harmless and seldom, if ever, cause death. If they did there would be a high mortality among those who like their game "high."

True food poisoning is always due to the activities of bacteria, but it falls into two classes, according to the nature of the bacteria concerned. In the first place, it may be due to bacteria actually living in the food at the time of its consumption. Secondly, it may result from poisons—toxins—left by bacteria which once lived in the food but are possibly since dead.

The first class of food poisoning results from the eating of food which has become contaminated by certain bacteria belonging to the same family as those which cause enteric fever. The presence of these bacteria may be due to disease of the food animal before it was slaughtered; more usually, however, they gain access to the food in course of its preparation.

In the second mode of contamination is the more common. In a recent epidemic the instrument of infection was a soiled knife used in cutting ham for sandwiches.

In this class of food poisoning the microbe actually lives and multiplies in the patient, giving rise to an acute infection characterized by fever, vomiting, and diarrhoea. Some epidemics are fatal; others may be mild, according to the type of microbe concerned.

Inspired by Their Wives.

HOW GREAT INVENTORS GOT THEIR IDEAS.

Some of the most useful inventions have been made by men who, for love of wife or mother, wished to spare them trouble.

The latest to come before the public notice is the case of the late Professor Bell and his telephone. His mother, who was deaf, was directly responsible for his original idea, which was destined to revolutionize the art of inter-communication.

Both Dr. Bell and his father were greatly interested in the study of speech, and it was the constant study of the ear and voice—and especially the structure of the human ear itself—which suggested the telephone.

Story of the Sewing-Machine.
Another case is that of Elias Howe his marvellous invention of the sewing-machine. He was very poor and his wife had to eke out their joint living with "plain sewing." Every night of his life he was the silent witness of his wife's flying needle, and of the vast amount of toil that was required for a mere pittance.

He was a machinist by trade, and one day he heard someone say that a vast fortune awaited the man who could invent a machine that would sew.

He started on the task and in 1844 produced his rough model of a sewing-machine. Unfortunately, long before the machine became a success and made Howe a rich man, the hard-working woman who had inspired him was gone.

Then, of course, there is the story of the invention of the stocking loom, out of which the Germans, although it was a British device, made hundreds of millions.

The Rev. William Lee was educated at Cambridge. He married young, but was so poor that his wife had to contribute to the family expenses by knitting. The young clergyman watched the needles as they went under and over, and the idea of the knitting-frame came to him. He wove a pair of silk stockings for Queen Elizabeth.

A domestic kindness led to the invention of lithography. One day when Senefelder was polishing off a stone which he intended etching, his mother asked him to write out a list of the linen which the laundress was waiting to carry off. Not finding a slip of paper or a drop of ink, Senefelder wrote the list on the stone with some printing ink. A few days later, when he was about to wipe the writing from the stone, he thought he would try what would be the effect of writing with the prepared ink on the stone. If it should be bitten in with aquafortis.

He bit away to about one hundredth part of an inch, charged the lines with the ink, took several impressions of the writing, and found he had invented lithography, or stone writing.

14th LEAGUE MATCH — TERRA NOVA vs. B.L.S.—RESULT, B.L.S. 3 GOALS; TERRA NOVA, 1 GOAL. PLAYED ON LLEWELLYN GROUNDS, JULY 26th, 1898.

In beautiful weather and before a fair muster of spectators this match was pulled off last evening resulting in the first League victory for Irishmen this season. The following were the players who lined up at Maynard's signal.

B.L.S.—Goal, McLoughlan; backs, Halley and White; halves, Donnelly, Connolly and Crotty; forwards, Tobin, Jordan, O'Mara, Higgins and O'Driscoll.

Terra Nova.—Goal, Parsons; backs, Vincombe and McNeilly; halves, Marshall, Gemmell and Kent; forwards, Dowden, Easterbrook, Pike, Soper and Knight.

The B.L.S. played down hill the first half, game opening slow with the exchanges fairly even, continuing for about 20 minutes without even a corner. Then the Terra Nova's made a combined attack on the Irish Citadel, and Easterbrook getting a chance, landed the ball past McLoughlan and safely into the net. This roused the Celtic who now rushed for the other end, but the Terra Nova's backs were very effective and held them off for 5 minutes, when Donnelly got on the ball, and made a nice run down field, passing to Tobin who centered and O'Mara found the net, thus equalizing. The pace now got faster, the Terra's pressing hard, and having one or two tries.

Then the B.L.S. went for the other end and Parsons had to do some hustling. At half time the teams crossed with the score one goal each. Resuming the Terra Nova's, with a rush secured the first corner of the match. This was nicely played, but kicked over the touch line, and eventually went behind. Then the Irish came away again, but were driven right back to their own quarters, and a free kick for hands awarded the Terra's. This was badly taken, however, the ball being shot past B.L.S. now put in some nice combined play, and Connolly beat Parsons for the second time. This was followed by another run towards Parsons, and a try by O'Mara just went over. Then the Terra Nova's made tracks for the other end, and Knight missed an easy chance. B.L.S. again pressed, and an attempt by O'Driscoll just missed by inches. Right after, however, they had the satisfaction of netting the ball, Connolly again doing the needful. Some even play followed, and the Terra Nova's secured another corner. This was well placed, but cleared nicely, and another corner failed to materialize. Play continued fairly even until Maynard sounded time with an Irish victory by 3 goals to 1.

Referee—F. Maynard.
Linesmen—W. Soper, (T.N.C.); J. K.A.C. vs. St. Andrew's.

NOTES ON THE GAME.

The game was not brilliant, but interesting at various points. One noteworthy feature was that all the corners of the match were secured by the Terra Nova's, and all proved fruitless.

We were hopeful of a better showing at half time by the Terra Nova's, but playing up hill in the first half seemed to have taken all the "grit" out of them, and their opponents were very evidently the better "stayers." Easterbrook played a splendid game in the Terra Nova front-line—of the half backs, Marshall was the most effective. Gemmell was not in condition, although he played pluckily. Vincombe and McNeilly were not up to their usual and Parsons was disappointing in goal.

The B.L.S. forwards outclassed their opponents, and made a capital showing in the Terra Nova front-line—of the half backs, Marshall was the most effective. Gemmell was not in condition, although he played pluckily. Vincombe and McNeilly were not up to their usual and Parsons was disappointing in goal.

The half backs, Crotty and Donnelly—were in fine form, and Connolly was the most energetic man on the field. Jack White partnered Halley in the back line, going on at the last moment, as they were a man short, and between them they put in a capital defence. Well done Jack, last time you played was the occasion of your famous draw with St. Andrew's.

McLoughlan in goal, although in a new position made a good display, saving brilliantly on several occasions. Wednesday evening these old rivals K.A.C. vs. St. Andrew's.

THE OLD SCOTTISH BEADLE—HIS CHARACTER AND HUMOUR.

A great power at one time in the Church of Scotland, the Beadle, or bethral, frequently grave-digger, church officer, and minister's man all in one—bears largely in every representative collection of the Scottish national humour and character—next to the minister here, indeed as elsewhere—and furnishes the collector with his choicest specimens of Scotch wit and humour of the dry and caustic order. The type of beadle, of course, which fifty or a hundred years ago gave tone and character to the class, and has made them famous in story and anecdote, is now almost a defunct species. This being so, let us turn aside and review the "bodie" where he is preserved, in the manner as he lived, in the many stories and anecdotes which have survived him. See him there! He is a shrewd, canny, fond, cranky-looking individual. Fond of snuff, and susceptible to the allurements of a sly dram. He is proud of his office—the more solemn and conscientious duties of which he performs with a dignity of deportment and solemnity of countenance which casts the minister almost hopelessly into the shade. He is heard to speak of "Me and the Minister," and should there chance to come a young paragon to occupy the pulpit for a day, who appears hurried and nervous just before he is to ascend to the "place of execution," he (the beadle) will receive a kindly tap on the shoulder, and be warned not to let his feelings get the better of him. "I can never see a young chap like you gaun up into the poopit," he will continue, "without bein' reminded of the first Sabbath that I took up the Bible. I shook like the leaf o' a tree! I dinna shak' noo; an' ye'll get over yer nervousness, too, sir, wi' practice, just as I ha'e done. I fand it the best plan—an' fooldest see will ye, gin ye'll try it—never to think about what ye're doin', nor who's looking at ye, but just step up the stair and gang through wi' the business as if you dinna care a rap for a livin' sowl o' them."

His intimacy with the minister—the semi-private work he performs, about the manse and elsewhere, affording him an occasional peek behind the solemnity that doth hedge a clergyman—places him on easy conversation with his reverend master, and of this circumstance much of his humour is born and given to the world. The minister's condescendence towards him not infrequently have had the effect of giving him an exaggerated notion of his own importance. His knowledge of what is going on at the manse makes him a welcome visitor at the houses of the gossiping members of the congregation, many of whom should have their tongues clipped; and Dean Ramsay tells a story which admirably illustrates this interesting phase of his character. A certain country beadle that a dram o' whisky loosens his tongue had been sent round the parish to deliver notices at all the houses of the Catechising which was to precede the preparation for receiving the Communion. On his return it was evident that John had savoured rather freely of refreshments in the course of his expedition. The minister rebuked him for his improper conduct. The beadle pleaded the pressing hospitality of the parishioners. The preacher would not admit the plea, and added: "It is given to you to mak' ye're tongue wag." "Why, John, I go through the parish, and you do not see me return home fou, as you have done."

"Ay, minister," replied John, with an emphatic shake of the head, "but, then, ye're no sae popular in the parish as I am."

The self-complacency of the reply could scarcely be surpassed. It is told of another of the consequential breed of auld beades, that being asked by a member of the Kirk—one of the humbler order—if he knew whether or not the minister was to be preaching himself on the approaching Sabbath, he dryly replied: "It's ill for me to ken a' that the minister intends doin'. Come ye to the Kirk, an' whether the Minister's there or no, ye'll see me in the poopit as usual at any rate."

"Indeed, sir," said Robert Fairgrieve, the beadle of Ancrum, one day to the minister, "Hus (us) that are offish bearers (meaning the minister and himself) should be examples to the flock."

The self-same functionary when on his death-bed was visited by the minister, who was a little concerned to find him in a restless and discontented humour. On enquiring into the cause of his uneasiness, Robert replied: "Weel, sir, I was just mindin' that I have buried 538 fowk since I was made beadal o' Ancrum, and I was anxious, gin it were His will, wi' ye're influence that I might be spared to mak' the sax hundred."

"Weel, Saunders," said a country clergyman to his beadle on Monday morning, "how did you like that minister who was preaching for me yesterday?"

"Oh, just middlin' ways, sir," replied Saunders, "just very middlin' ways. He was far owre plain and simple for me. I like a preacher that jummles the judgement and confounds the sense awes; and doo, sir, I never heard any o' them that could beat yersel at that."

Well, said Saunders, "there are many people about who estimate a preacher much in the same fashion—measure his eloquence by his success in 'jummlin' their judgement' and 'confoundin' their senses.' They desire sermons so 'deep' that they cannot see to the bottom of them, the more incomprehensible the preaching, the more profound the preacher is declared to be."

"Eh, he was grand the day!" said an old lady on her return from church.

"In what respect?" inquired her lord and master.

"Just terrible deep," said she. "I dinna understand a word o' it; but eh, it was grand!"

"That makes you laugh, James?" inquired a country minister of his beadle one Sabbath in the session-house between the preachings, as the humbler functionary stirred up the fire and "hotted an' lenth" in a semi-suppressed manner.

"It is unseemly, James," "what is there to amuse you?"

The minister it should be explained, had a reputation for giving his people what is well understood when described as "cauld kail het again."

"Eh, naething particular," said James, still laughing. "I was only thinking o' something that happened when the Kirk was skalin' a maumet syne."

"What was it? Tell me about it."

"Weel, minister, dinna be angry wi' me," said Jamie, "an' I'll tell ye. Whether ye ken it or no, sir, ye're blamed for preachin' an' auld sermon noo an' then, an' I think I rather got the better o' some o' them the day—some o' the Kirk-fouk, I mean."

"How so, James?"

"Deed, simply enough, an' I'll tell ye hoo. Just as soon as the himnost psalm was finished, ye see, I gaed off as usual an' opened first the west door, and syne ran round and opened the East door, and as I was comin' back round the Kirk again, who should I meet but Newmanna, an' twa or three ther o' the farmers, an' by the way they were lauchin' an' nudgin' an' another wi' their elbicks. I kent fine what they were ettlin' to say, so I tak' the first word wi' them, an' says I, 'Weel, lads,' says I 'ye canna say that yon was an auld ane ye got the day, for it's no ahune sax weeks since ye got it afore. An' I think I got the better o' them, sir. An' that's hoo I canna help lauchin'."

The beadle of a Northern city Kirk was a pavior to trade, and the minister with whom he was regularly "yokit" every Sabbath coming up one day to John was busily engaged laying cansey, was struck with a fine smile, as he thought, and said: "John, you and I toll daily with the same object in view, namely, to mend the ways of our fellow-men. But I am

Years ago I began to feel the effects of the first of my friends and neighbors who were always complaining and suffering without seeming to get any better. Both working and their wives frequently all tired in the evening, and great many were nervous and run-down. One had pain in the back and throat, and kidney trouble. Another had pain around heart, pulse was weak, and was all over heart disease. For years I made this condition a matter of physicians, but none of them could get these people to get the nourishment they needed. First Compounded This Newer Form of Iron For My Own Neighbors

Their Praise of This Remarkable Remedy Has Spread
So Rapidly That Now Over 4,000,000
People Use It Annually

Years ago I began to suffer at the great hands of my own blood and neighbors. I was always ailing, complaining and doing nothing without ever coming to any better. Both working men and their wives were frequently all tired out by the evening, and a great many were weak, nervous and run-down. The kidneys troubled, and the blood was thin, pale and watery. I suffered from the symptoms of a great number of diseases when the real and true cause of all your trouble is a lack of iron in the blood. In the old days people often took metallic iron, which some physicians claim is not absorbed at all. In compounding this newer form of iron which I call Nuxated Iron, I employed a special form of iron, which is like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples. Unlike the older forms of iron, it will not injure the teeth nor disturb the stomach, and it is ready for almost immediate absorption and assimilation by the blood. It is the people whose blood is rich in iron who possess great strength, force and energy. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two 5-grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times a day after meals for two weeks, then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. An astonishing number of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while, have greatly improved their health and increased their strength, energy and endurance simply by taking this newer form of iron. WHAT THE PEOPLE HAVE A RIGHT TO DEMAND.

Then, again, it must be remembered that all things which are lawful are not convenient and are not practicable, are not wise, are not kind. A sound and healthy discretion, therefore the moral coercion of irresistible circumstances, may fitly temper, and even wholly restrain, the exercise of the clearest power ever belonging to human government. Is not this the actual situation? Now, I think the people ought not to be made to wait for the relief they have a right to demand. They ought not to be made to suffer while we argue one another out of the recorded and inveterate opinions of our whole lives. I say, therefore, for myself, that, anxious to afford them all the relief which they require, regarding the state of opinion around us puts it out of our power to afford that relief in the form we might prefer, we accommodate ourselves to our position, and make haste to do all that we can by the shortest way that we can. Consider how much better it is to relieve the needy to some substantial extent by the means available at once, than not to relieve at all, than not to initiate a system or measure of relief at all, and then go home at the close of the Legislature, weak and weary, and spend the winter in trying to persuade them that it was the fault of our friends that nothing was done. How poor a compensation for wrongs the people will be the victories over our political rivals!

OUR EXPERIENCE OF HOME RULE

Although our experience of Responsible Government has not been as long and eventful as that of the Dominion of Canada, yet we have had enough of it to convince most of us that we are unequal to the duties and responsibilities it entails. In 1855, when our forbears obtained from the Mother Country "the invaluable blessing of Home Rule," as they were then pleased to term it, they appeared to be under the impression that it would prove a panacea for all the political ills from which the colony suffered; but what ever advantage they, in their time, reaped from the "experiment," certain it is that we, in our day, have been bitterly disappointed. They, however, had the good fortune to have, in both branches of the Legislature, a very superior class of representatives—men who had the courage of their convictions and could not be seduced from the path of rectitude by the "spoils of office" or anything else. And so the Home Rule machinery, when first started here, worked fairly well, and continued to do so till 1908, when a policy of extravagance and graft was introduced and persisted in, with the result that the colony has been morally and financially ruined thereby. Our Prime Ministers, up to that date, were men of honor and integrity, such as the people could look up to with pride. Their veracity and probity were never questioned. Let me name them in consecutive order: Let me refresh the memory of my readers: Philip Little (who inaugurated Responsible Government here), John Kent, Hugh W. Hovley, F. B. T. Carter, Charles Fox Bennett, W. V. Whiteway, Robert Thorburn, A. F. Goodridge, James S. Winter, D. J. Green, Robert Bond. These were all men of fine abilities, and, for the most part, pre-eminently fitted for the high position they occupied. Then we come down to 1908 and continue to the present moment, with the following gentlemen in command of the ship of State, one after the other, as their names appear:—E. P. Morris, W. F. Lloyd, M. P. Cashin and R. A. Squires. Conspicuous among the former list is Sir Robert Bond. He is one of the few surviving public men of our country, who, after a long and honorable career, will retain, in the maturity of years, the enthusiasm and faith of his early manhood in the splendid possibilities of Newfoundland under efficient and economical government. Of his home life at Whitbourne I have not here space to speak, even if I had his permission to do so. It is enough for my present purpose to briefly refer to him as "one of the old heroic breed" whose lives ennoble the generation in which they live.

THE CINCINNATOS OF TERRA NOVA.

Yes, one of the most outstanding personalities in the public life of the colony is Sir Robert Bond. As I remarked in a previous article, through most of the changing and eventful scenes here during the past forty years (Sir Robert Bond entered the political arena in 1883) he has been conspicuously in the van. How his voice has rung throughout the country, always brave, always hopeful, always true. How at times his speeches and messages in the press have been as those of one inspired; and he has risen beyond himself in the earnest and passionate longing that at length conditions of political privilege should take the place of existing conditions. Rough and madcapous traits, coarse invective, cold and bitter answers, with no pity in them, the petty horseplay of inexperienced legislators—all flew past him as things of naught. His superb courtesy, his knightly chivalry, his glibly acquired knowledge, his command of language

CONSOLIDATED PURE REGAL FREE RUNNING Table Salt THE CANADIAN SALT CO. LIMITED his play of countenance and propriety and variety of gesture, his grasp of principle, his power of exposition, his love of accuracy, his intense moral earnestness, his force of conviction in the truth and justice of his cause—how these stand out against the counterfitted pomp of his successors in the Premiership and his opponents generally! Sir Robert has travelled much and everywhere he gives the impression of a kindly, cultivated gentleman, with a quick smile and a shrewd eye. But few of the casual acquaintances he made while in Canada, the United States, England and elsewhere, as delegate from the colony on important business, have any idea of the perfect idiom in which he speaks beneath that impenetrable exterior, nor how stout and strong is the resolution within. His has truly been:—

"A life in public action warm,
A soul on highest mission sent,
A potent voice of Parliament,
A pillar steadfast in the storm."

THE PRESENT POLITICAL OUTLOOK.

At present the typical political situation here in the city is about like this: The forces that stand for what is obviously good government in the old-fashioned sense, line up behind a candidate conspicuously honest and truthful, often highbrowed and sometimes even an "educated gentleman." All the well-conducted newspapers support him. All the organizations devoted to orderly processes of government get behind him. It becomes evident, as the campaign grows warm, that around his opponent are gathered the evil influences of the community; the grafters, the underworld, the devotees of special privileges in political grafting. During the campaign disclosures come thick and fast. They are convincing to the mind and heart of the old-fashioned Newfoundlander, who is pained and surprised to discover that thousands of his fellow-citizens are not even critical about it. Too many respectable people stay at home on election day and let the other fellows win out. Our churches and social welfare agencies should redouble their efforts to reform the city, and the country. Our schools should wake up to the folly of trying to do everything but teach the subjects that schools ought to teach.

THE FATE OF ONE WHO BETRAYED HIS TRUST.

If we want to improve things we can take a hint or two from Denmark's political experience. Maurice Francis Togan, I notice, has an article in the August number of the Geographic Magazine in which he assured that the Danes will brook no corruption in their government if they can possibly prevent it. "They are extremely jealous," he says, of the National honor; no political power or even prestige will save a man in office from punishment if he has betrayed his trust. The case of one of the cleverest men in Denmark—Albert—was an example of this. No man was more admired, no man was more trusted, in spite of what may be called his immoral ideas as to the conjugal relation. The time came, however, in 1908, (the date is suggestive) when he was accused of the misuse of public money. The case fell; he was imprisoned, and no mercy was shown him, although a month before his incarceration he had been covered with decorations, not only of the Danes, but of those European statesmen, who had come in contact with him.

THE 1919 COMMISSIONERS AND EXPERTS.

As I proceeded with these articles I shall cite instances in which public men in Newfoundland, time after time since 1908, have "betrayed their trust" and misappropriated large sums of the people's money without being prosecuted or even formally charged with the crime. I shall also have something to say about the work of the "Commissioners" appointed at the close of 1919, and the investigations of those experts who were imported about the same time to render special services in connection therewith: What they "unearthed" in some of the public departments, the compensation they received, and why the actual results of their inquiries and scrutinies have not been made public. Nor shall I omit to mention some of the more recent transactions of a misty nature which have come under my observation. The disclosures—besides being of vital interest to the public at this important juncture—will, I believe, have a wholesome effect on the future political life of the Colony and retard, in some measure at least, the tendency to extravagance and graft, so painfully evident here, during the past fourteen years.

THE DOCTOR: "Any real cure and relief. Give him a try. He will show you the way." STEEDMAN'S SOOTHING POWDER. Contains no Poison.

"You Are Invited."

During the first two years we were in business, our customers used to drive up to our Greenhouse—make their purchase and stop to chat a while before their return to the city. The telephone and the pressure of modern business have somewhat crowded the personal element to the background. But we "sure do like" the old idea of personal friendship, and wish that more of our Customers and friends would pay us a visit occasionally. Perhaps you will be visiting us during the next few days. If so—we may be of some service to you—information, delivering of special parcels—in deciding on a design for bouquets—in connection with any special Floral Decoration required. Curate's Good-Bye.

REV. A. CLAYTON PREACHES FAREWELL SERMON.

Rev. Arthur Clayton, C.P., who for the past ten years has been curate at St. Thomas', will preach his farewell sermon at the Parish Church tomorrow evening. Owing to the uncertainty as to the sailing date of the Sackham, there is some doubt as to whether he will be in St. John's another Sunday. Mr. Clayton is leaving Newfoundland to become Curate of St. Giles Parish Church in the Diocese of Litchfield, with every prospect of obtaining an English rectorate in the near future. He has served under three Rectors of St. Thomas'—Rev. George Ross Godden, M.A., Rev. Dr. Edgar Jones and Rev. E. C. Barr, B.A., and will leave his mark upon the Parish, particularly in connection with the Dunfield Boys Club which has been his special care. Mr. Clayton will also be held in grateful recollection by the men of the Newfoundland Regiment for the year he put in as Chaplain to the forces during the war. He has been an exemplary clergyman and a good citizen. It is not too much to say that Mr. and Mrs. Clayton will take with them to their new home in the Old Country the best wishes, not only of the people of St. Thomas' but of the whole city of St. John's. Mr. Clayton has a busy day tomorrow. He will preach in the morning at the C.L.B. Service at St. Michael's. In the afternoon, at the request of the people of Virginia and the Donor, he will dedicate the bell recently presented by Councillor Dowden to Virginia School Chapel; and at night he will hold his farewell service at the old Parish Church of St. Thomas'.

"The Poetry of Flowers"

Like the power of music is interpreted to fit a thousand moods or purposes. To the sick, to the sad, to the gay—to the friend we love or esteem, regardless of the particular occasion—flowers are always appropriate, always acceptable, and always understood. "Say it with Flowers"—beautifully and delicately. We have about thirty thousand blooms ready to say something.

When They Were Twenty.

THE PRIME MINISTER AS A SOLICITOR'S CLERK.

There is no doubt that if a census could be taken of the ages at which Fortune first smiled upon our most successful men and women, some interesting facts would be disclosed.

Among other things, it would tell us what many famous folk were doing when they were twenty, that fascinating age which sees us setting out to convert our youthful dreams into realities, after at last being emancipated from the tiresome restrictions of the teens.

How Statesmen Started.

At twenty, Mr. Lloyd George, for example, was securing a somewhat precarious living as a solicitor's clerk in a Carnarvonshire town, where a year or two later he became a lawyer on his own account.

As most people know, he had been brought up and educated by his shoe-maker uncle, old Richard Lloyd, to whom he has never forgotten to acknowledge his debt of gratitude.

But if the age of twenty opened up an entirely new horizon for David Lloyd George, it was not until many years later that he gave promise of being what he has since become—one of Britain's greatest Prime Ministers. The present Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Robert Horne, was at twenty years of age a student in Glasgow, where he studied law, after having educated himself by winning a series of scholarships.

At that time he had no idea of devoting his career to politics or, for that matter, to any form of State service, and it was not until a few years ago that he turned his attention to national affairs.

To-day he is one of our best-known and most popular statesmen.

Turning to the arts, we find that Miss Sybil Thordike, our greatest tragedienne, had at twenty little or no idea of becoming a famous actress. True, she had always been interested in the theatre, but when the time came for her to think about choosing a career, she decided to become a professional pianist.

But a happy chance brought her in contact with a producer of plays, and she was given a part in a Shakespearean production, since when she has had no ambition but to win her laurels as an actress; an ambition which has been fully justified by her long series of recent successes.

At twenty the famous dancer, Mme. Isadora Duncan, confessed that she starved while following her profession amid luxury surroundings. "When things were at their blackest," she said, discussing her early struggles, "I used to go and sit among the gravestones in an old Chelsea churchyard and wish I were underneath them. Once, I remember, my landlady seized my luggage because I couldn't pay my rent. That same day I had an engagement to dance at the house of a certain titled woman, and after it was over they showed me a bag of gold coins. 'Look what you've made for the blind girls,' they said, admiringly, not knowing, of course, how desperately hard up I was.

"One week I lived entirely on penny-worths of soup. I danced at a charity entertainment given in the home of a Society hostess, and at the end of my performance they applauded and offered me—strawberries!"

But the hard times passed, and the great dancer at length found fame and fortune, sometimes commanding as much as a thousand pounds for a single performance.

When he was twenty, Sir William Robertson, the famous field-marshal, was a trooper in the Lancs, in which he had enlisted after being brought up in a humble way in a Lincolnshire village.

He had received practically no education, and so, on finding that by improving himself he could improve his position in the Army, he studied in his spare time.

One of his methods of acquiring knowledge was to pay a comrade two-pence an hour to read the classics to him while he cleaned his kit. Our Army records can show few more thrilling romances than this.

One of London's super-women in business, Miss Harvey, of Selfridge's, was at twenty a stenographer in a copying office, earning only a few shillings a week. She had taken an inexpensive course in typing, shorthand, and book-keeping, and with this as a foundation she joined the great Oxford Street store when it opened thirteen years ago.

To-day (says a writer in "Home Notes"), Miss Harvey is staff controller of the women's section of the firm, a position which carries great responsibilities, and a salary which many a professional man would be only too glad to earn.

A lucky chance at the age of twenty turned the attention of Mr. Owen Nares, the actor, from a commercial career to one on the stage. He had just resolved to become a clerk in an engineering works at a salary of a pound a week, when his mother happened to meet Rosina Filippi, a well-known dramatic coach. Under her tuition Mr. Nares rapidly made headway, and in a few months he got his first part, though it was not until some years had elapsed that Burgling the Bank of England.

MAN WHO ROBBED BRITAIN'S STOREHOUSE OF WEALTH.

A sensation was caused at the Bank of England recently when a sentry was found near one of the bullion rooms with a bullet wound in his head. Many people are unacquainted with the steps taken to ensure the safety of "the Old Lady's" tremendous wealth. Provision is made for every possible emergency, from fire and burglary to organized attack, while it may be hinted that water would play as important a part in the last-named contingency as it would in the first.

Armour plate, steel, and concrete combine to form an almost impenetrable bulwark against robbery, while the presence in every part of the building of the Bank's own detectives by day, and soldiers and watchmen by night, means that no unauthorized person can enter without the fact being discovered.

If you happen to be in the city at six o'clock any evening you may see a party of soldiers, with bayonets fixed, led by an officer with drawn sword, marching towards the Bank. This is the Bank guard going on duty for the night.

The custom originated about one hundred and fifty years ago, as an outcome of the Gordon Riots, and it has been kept up continuously ever since. For his services each soldier receives a shilling fresh from the Mint, while the officer gets a guinea, which he must give to a City charity, and a dinner, to which he may invite a friend.

The Man Who Did It

The soldiers are told off to guard various parts of the building, one being stationed in the Consols department, another in the Chinese Loan room, another in the Bonds department, and so on, the lights being kept on throughout the vigil.

Guarding the Bank is a privilege enjoyed only by troops belonging to the Brigade of Guards.

Although it is unlikely that anyone would attempt to force an entrance to the Bank to-day, the feat has been accomplished on at least one occasion.

This occurred some years ago, when the directors received an anonymous letter in which the writer claimed to be able to break into the vaults. He added that he would be pleased to meet the directors in this unconventional fashion if they would undertake not to bring with them police or military guards.

The officials scorned the idea; nevertheless, they turned up at the appointed place, accompanied by detectives. Nothing happened, and they retired, satisfied that the letter was a hoax.

A few days later they were astonished to receive a box taken from the vaults, together with a letter complaining of their lack of good faith, and suggesting another meeting.

The directors went alone this time, and almost as soon as they reached the vault, a large stone slab in the floor was moved, and a man appeared. He explained that he had gained entrance from a sewer.

Bad Cooking Means Baldness.

Bad cooking is responsible for a very large amount of baldness. Badly cooked food means a bad digestion; a bad digestion means a poor state of the blood. This in its turn tends to lower the vitality of the body, and as the hair depends to a large extent upon bodily fats for its growth the person who is rendered weak and anæmic through bad cooking soon begins to lose his hair.

This curious fact applies equally to women as to men, and though it is seldom that a woman becomes actually bald, her hair becomes thin and scanty and often comes out in large quantities.

Of course, there are often reasons for the appearance of so many hairless patches. One of them is the wearing of a tight-fitting hat or one that allows of little ventilation. Severe illness has been known to deprive many a man of his hair, but an enormous number of people become bald because of some bodily defect.

When the Kettle Sings.

The same thing that enables us all to sing makes the kettle sing—vibration.

Water exists in three states—solid, liquid, and gas. Solid is ice—liquid we all know. Water vapour is always being formed, but it forms most readily when the water is at a temperature of 212 deg. Fahrenheit—in other words, when it is boiling. In a kettle of boiling water, water vapour is being formed so quickly that it has to force its way out, and it "elbows its way" so unceremoniously that it makes the sides and top of the kettle vibrate. The air vibrates in sympathy, and the air waves pass to your ears. Then you say the kettle is singing.

Our Dumb Animals.

REPORT OF THE CHIEF AGENT
FOR WEEK ENDING SEPT. 10th.

Visited C. F. Lester's stables where some seventy horses are kept. At present 5 horses are laid aside for temporary treatment, three of these having picked up nails. All are well treated and properly cared for. All working horses are in splendid condition. I cautioned the drivers to be as kind as possible in handling them. Was called four miles in the country to destroy a horse owned by Mr. F. Callahan. The animal had been injured and incurable. I was also asked by Mr. Glasgow, Butcher of Brasils Square to locate some boys who had taken his horse out of the field at night and overdriven it around the country. I found the boy who did it, who came to Mr. Glasgow and acknowledged it. He forgave him, it being his first time. A stop should be put to this as the same thing has happened several times this summer. Received a phone message from the police to go near Beaver Pond, on the Blackhead Road, where a large dog owned by Peter Brown, which had been injured in some way was lying on the road. I went and found the dog, which seemed to be injured about the joints. I put the animal out of pain in the presence of two witnesses. I was asked by the Rev. Clayton to humanely destroy two cats for him, which I did, and he sent a subscription of membership. Also spoke to three men with lame horses and sent one horse in for treatment. Attended to the landing of 47 head of cattle, 7 horses and some sheep and pigs from the Canadian Sapper. All was done very satisfactorily, the horses being landed in stalls and bedding put on the wharf to land them without injury. Went to Burton's Pond to destroy a dog for Mr. Farrell, the animal having been run over accidentally by a motor car owned by a member of the S.P.A. Received complaint from several people of dogs being kept out at nights. They have been the cause of great annoyance in several neighbourhoods. I called on some of the owners and warned them to keep the dogs in at night and that they be properly fed so as not to be a public nuisance.

Burglar's Lucky Mascots

"I'll have a bit for luck," said the burglar, picking up a small piece of coal at a "crib" which he had picked with surprising ease. And, afterwards, that knob of coal accompanied him on his ventures. He would not attempt a burglary without it in his pocket.

Most burglars have their mascots; it may be a button, a rusty nail, or a pebble—always some little thing with associations.

The loss of one crackman's mascot proved his undoing. For long he had carried around his neck an ordinary brass button, suspended on a piece of string. One day, this mysteriously disappeared.

A little fearful, he made a rich haul at a tailors, bringing away, among the booty, two or three pairs of trousers, from one of which he cut a button to replace his lost mascot. With this slung round his neck he felt happy again.

But his luck had gone. The police got on his track, and arrested him on suspicion. When he was searched the button was found; and you may judge of the burglar's consternation when he was confronted with the evidence of his guilt. Stamped on the button were the name and address of the tailor he had robbed! Nothing could have been clearer.

FOUR DORIES MADE LAND.

Messages received yesterday accounted for all the crew of the ill-fated French banker, Pere Barnado. Last night the S.S. Cabot arrived in port with six of the shipwrecked men. They were taken in charge by Constable Cook and are now at the Seamen's Institute, where they are being well cared for until arrangements have been made to send them to St. Pierre. The crew of twenty-six which left their vessel in ten dories are accounted for as follows—Nine picked up by the S.S. Hinchey and transferred to schooner Jodie; three landed at Marytown by schooner; three landed at Bayne Harbour; three landed at Branch; eight landed in dories in Trepasser Bay. Six dories were picked up at sea and four made land.

A Salvage tug from Halifax has arrived at Miquelon and is at present engaged in recovering the movable gear from the French steam trawler, Andre Pierre which went ashore last month. EMANUEL PIKE, Port-aux-Basques.
SARAH BRUCE, Port-aux-Basques.
WALLACE McDONALD, Sydney.
S. BRUCE, Secretary-Treasurer, New Waterford, N.S.

The Little River Coal Mining Company, Ltd., has been formed for the purpose of developing the coal already known to exist at Little River. The Company have on the grounds at the present moment one of the leading experts of Great Britain, who is now engaged in boring on the outcropping in the endeavour to locate the main body of the ore.

"There is ample evidence of the existence of a large area of true coal, covering an area of ten (10) square miles and wherein several seams have been found outcropping. The deeper boring is to prove the continuity of these seams, which is a reasonable thing to do."—Signed, Robert Robinson, M.E., Sydney Mines.

The Little River Coal Mining Co. have decided to develop this property. They are determined that the investors shall have a square deal. They will not sell their rights to any individual, firm, company or corporation, no matter how flattering the offers they receive. Their intention is to develop the property and to place the coal on the market.

Are you a well-informed Newfoundlander? Then you know the extent of the Little River, Bay St. George and Central Coal Fields. You know that Newfoundland imports FOUR HUNDRED THOUSAND TONS OF COAL ANNUALLY. Have you ever asked yourself why our coal fields LIE IDLE? Ask yourself the question now.

Are you a patriotic Newfoundlander? Have you FAITH in YOUR COUNTRY? Do you believe in our coal fields? Do you wish to see Newfoundland coal placed on the Newfoundland market? If you ARE and HAVE and DO, then it will pay you to inform yourself about the Little River Coal Company's properties. It will pay you to learn that from our shipping point we can place coal on the wharves in St. John's in less than FORTY HOURS.

In Bay St. George, a few miles from our coal properties, are great deposits of Hematite and Titanic ores. Have you vision to see the industrial future that awaits the West Coast? Have you love of country enough to help us bring that future nearer?
