Turkeys and Prosperity

There is an interesting connection between prosperity and the high price of turkeys, according to a poultry dealer at Faneuil Hall, Boston. So well to do are the farmers of this part of the country that their wives are not compelled to raise turkeys for pin-money as formerly. We have heard much of the prosperity of the Western agriculturist, but less has been said about the satisfactory finances of the farmer in New England. It is true that he has been quietly making money the last few days and if so how does it happen that so many New England farming communities show a falling off in the census returns.

However, there is another reason for the high price of turkeys. "It must be taken into consideration," says the Faneuil Hall marketman, "that there is a greater demand for turkeys than formerly. Even the people in the most impecunious circumstances eat turkeys now and then." The story is told of a lady in a New England town who, appalled by the high cost of the fowls last month, determined to forego her usual Thanksgiving feast. The day before the festival, however, she made up a generous basket of provisions for a sick and poverty-stricken woman who had been a family servant for years. On reaching the house of this woman, the housefactor was amazed to see a fine plump turkey prepared for the oven. With a quick revision of sentiment she regretted her charitable expedition.

There is no question that the turkey has lately come into greater vogue than ever before. That fact would account in some measure for the increased cost of the bird; though it does not wholly explain it. If turkey raising were attended with less risk, it would be a highly profitable business in which to engage.

Stop cracks in walls with plaster of Paris, but mix it with vinegar and not with water, as water sets it too quickly, while vinegar renders it more pliable.

To clean paint, smear it over with whitening mixed to the consistency of common paste with warm water. Rub the surface to be cleaned briskly; then wash off with clean cold water. Grease and other dirt will be removed almost instantly, and the paint will look fresh and new.

Multiplex Telephone Discovery Announced

Washington, Jan. 25.—Gen. Allen, the chief signal officer of the army, today announced that as a result of recent experiments by the signal corps, multiplex telephony is now practicable, whereby several independent conversations may be carried on simultaneously over the same wire circuit.

Another important discovery, calculated to double at least the capacity of the existing telephone lines, is that it is no longer necessary to use two wires or what is known as the "return wire" for efficient telephony, but that a single wire with "silent earth" connections can be used for multiplex telephony. All the necessary instruments required in multiplex telephony are already developed and can be purchased from dealers in the open market.

It is a remarkable fact that the superposition of additional telephone conversations upon a wire circuit does not interfere in the slightest degree with the operation of the present telephone installations, which remain unchanged. That the new system is entirely practicable and that it has long passed the experimental stage is evidenced by the fact that a single wire circuit between the research laboratory is now daily being used for the independent transmission of two simultaneous telephonic conversations.—Ex.

Catarah Cannot Be Cured

with local applications, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarah is a blood or constitutional disease and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarah Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarah Cure is not a quick medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in the country for years and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing Catarah. Send for testimonials free.

Destruction of the Forests.

The Conservation Commission is in session at Quebec. There may be other important matters up for discussion, but the subject of supreme importance is the preservation of Canada's forests. Since the last annual session of the Commission great areas have been devastated. It will not be merely to pass resolutions directing the attention of Parliament to the fact that failure to provide proper spark arresters for the locomotives that run through the forests is the cause of this enormous fire waste. Ever-gathering of men interested in Canada's forests for years past has passed resolutions of that sort. The resolution since is past. The Commission must put every ounce of its energy into securing the passage of a bill through Parliament making the railways directly responsible for fire prevention along their lines. The measure will be vigorously resisted and the railway influence at Ottawa is by no means a negligible quantity, but unless the fire-venting locomotive can be rendered less dangerous there is little hope of saving the last great white pine forests of America.

It would be sound public policy for the members of the Conservation Commission to lay aside all other proposals and concentrate their labors upon the question of fire prevention in the forests until a fairly satisfactory settlement is reached. In no other way that we know of can twenty-five millions a year can so readily be saved for the people of Canada.—Tor. Globe.

If there is any bar to the investigation by the Ontario law courts of the alleged suspicious circumstances in connection with the formation on the Farmers Bank the Dominion Government should at once appoint a Commission of Judges to fully ventilate the case. There must be no cause for the assertion that anyone is being shielded by either the Provincial or Federal authorities. The looting of banks is becoming too frequent a pastime.—Tor. Globe.

The death occurred last week of Mrs. Samuel Erskim formerly a resident of Bocabec Cove at the residence of her daughter Mrs. Chas. Gibson of St. Stephen. The funeral was held at Bocabec on Saturday, services being conducted by the Rev. E. Thorpe.

St. Croix Paper Co. has Claim Against Todds.

Boston, Jan. 25.—The St. Croix Paper Co. of Maine, through its attorneys, has filed a bill in equity in the Suffolk Superior Court against Frank Todd of St. Stephen, N. B.; Francis E. Wadsworth, Winchester, Mass.; and Sarah A. Haycock of New York, partners in the firm of F. H. Todd & Sons, lumber dealers, asking for an accounting.

Mr. Todd was president of the St. Croix Paper Co., and the company claims that he acted in bad faith in selling woodland and in making contracts and purchases profited to the extent of $100,000.

An attachment of $100,000 has been placed on the property of the defendants. It is claimed that Mr. Todd sold 210,000 acres of woodland for $1,322,376 and made contracts and purchases amounting to $423,000.

Toronto, Jan. 25.—The big shops of the Massey Harris Company will commence running full blast tonight. This step has been made imperative because of the great pressure of orders. Two thousand men have been employed at the big works lately, but notwithstanding overtime work was resorted to, the staff was unable to bring the output to the place where it would satisfy the demand. The firm accordingly has taken on a large staff of men for a night shift, and the factories will be kept going day and night.

Below we publish a lengthy article from the Toronto Globe on a subject of interest to rural districts and one that is worthy of much careful consideration.

THE RURAL CHURCH

The need of a strong and active church life in rural communities is becoming daily more apparent. But it is not with the spiritual activity and welfare of the church that the student of rural economics is primarily concerned. He recognizes that the church may be a social factor of great influence, an intellectual leader of the first importance, and a strong agency in disseminating contentment and happiness, as well as knowledge, among agricultural communities. That the church, irrespective of denomination, is not in rural Canada performing these functions can scarcely be disputed. There are, it is true, here and there through the country a few churches that are active and intensely interested in the progress of their people, but as a rule there is the most hopeless kind of indifference to rural needs. Very often the clergymen themselves are more or less soured because they cannot find a wealthy town or city charge, and are often merely waiting in hopes that the opportunity may come to them and fortune may smile so they will be called to what they consider is a higher sphere. The reason for this state of affairs is undoubtedly the lack of personal interest and the absence of the right kind of education on the part of the country minister.

STRONG MEN REQUIRED

Everyone who studies rural life knows that the problems of the country are sufficiently intricate and comprehensive to demand for their solution the best effort and the strongest intellect available in this country. It is generally conceded that the industrial progress of the nation as a whole rests on the prosperity of the farming community. It is also conceded that the permanency and strength of our national institutions are conditioned on the intelligence and moral character of the people who till the soil. It is, therefore, of primary importance that the intellectual and social leaders of the farming community should be men of wide and sympathetic training and should be capable of dealing wisely with the intricate problems of rural life. The churches so far have neglected, and to a certain extent ignored, the claims of the farming community. Their local leaders, in the persons of their ministers, are out of touch with the people and are not active factors in promoting the social and intellectual life of the country in harmony with the country's greatest needs.

AN ILLUSTRATION

It has been recognized that the rural public school has failed in its mission to educate rural children for a life of happiness, contentment and prosperity on the farm. The public school curriculum has been prepared and the educational policy has been dictated by people dwelling in cities who have known nothing of rural conditions or needs. The result has been that children have been educated so far as they have gone, to think slightly of the country as a place of future residence, to despise farm work, and to look with longing eyes toward the opportunities and possibilities which they think await them in the cities. The whole tendency of the public school education has been to swell the tide of population flowing cityward. In order to correct this condition an effort has been made to establish rural consolidated schools, with school gardens, graded classes, manual training, domestic science, nature study, etc., as part of the school course. The educational value of these agencies has proven beyond question the significance of the effort, but this is not all. The school courses have become to attract to rural children that the attendance has considerably increased and the intellectual progress of the pupils has been most marked. Owing to the expense involved it has not been possible so far to establish consolidated schools in large numbers throughout the country. Another effort, however, has been made to supply the needs of modern country communities, special courses for rural teachers have been established at the agricultural colleges, with most gratifying results. The children who are privileged to receive instruction from these teachers are not only taught the common branches according to the most approved pedagogical methods, but the whole curriculum is permeated with the spirit of enthusiasm for agriculture, nature study and rural life. The effort is rapidly developing rural school enthusiasm. The school gardens will follow. In the next few years we shall see a distinct change and a marked improvement in the rural schools where especially qualified teachers are employed.

Meanwhile the country minister remains uneducated and indifferent to the changed conditions in rural life. As he is not familiar with the basic principles of economics and sociology he is not aware of the excellent opportunities provided for him to vitalize rural social life awaken its intelligence and direct its activity and enthusiasm. The time has come when the conditions must be met, the facts faced, and if the results of the present policy are to be avoided agriculture and theology must be linked together and rural clergymen educated for their great mission as community and nation builders. The question is not yet settled as to the method of imparting the necessary special training and education that the circumstances demand.

In the United States an effort is being made to grapple with this problem, and five of the leading agricultural colleges are planning to educate country ministers. These institutions are: Massachusetts Agricultural College, Cornell University, Michigan Agricultural College, Iowa State College and Kansas State College of Agriculture. Some work of this kind has been attempted at the Agricultural College at Truro, Nova Scotia, the only one in Canada. The purpose is a serious endeavor to educate country ministers in the service required for the building up of the modern rural community.

UNCLE SAM IS ACTIVE

It is not necessary that the clergyman should understand all the intricacies of the various sciences embraced in agriculture and operative in farm management, but he should understand something of the principles of natural science; he should be sympathetic with agriculture and recognize the wisdom or otherwise of the trend of farm practice, he should be able to draw his illustrations while speaking on Biblical and other themes accurately and concisely from the operations of nature, and from the facts of experience familiar to his auditors, and he should know something of the elements of rural economics and sociology in order that he may take an active part in promoting rural welfare. It is true that many clergymen who are ministering to rural communities were born and raised in the country, but this fact does not qualify them for rural leadership. They have eyes, but they see not, and the pages of nature, except within very narrow limits, teach them nothing. The complaint is made that the salaries paid to rural clergymen are too small to permit of the additional expense incurred in securing the extra training necessary. For the present the arrangement holds, but some sacrifice must be made if conditions are to be improved. The ministers themselves will find that with better intellectual equipment their popularity and their influence will be greatly increased, and while the country minister is not called upon to do the farmers' purchase, he is called upon to do the farmers' will.

A CALL FOR SEMINARIES

The country minister in the United States are not all of the same work of education. The country minister should be done rural teachers have been established at the agricultural colleges, with most gratifying results. The children who are privileged to receive instruction from these teachers are not only taught the common branches according to the most approved pedagogical methods, but the whole curriculum is permeated with the spirit of enthusiasm for agriculture, nature study and rural life. The effort is rapidly developing rural school enthusiasm. The school gardens will follow. In the next few years we shall see a distinct change and a marked improvement in the rural schools where especially qualified teachers are employed.

The education needed by the clergyman who is to give his life to the service of his fellow-men in rural districts should, be for the most part the same as for service in any other constituency. But this education must be given, if rural problems are to be solved, and the church is to retain its influence among the people and do its part in the upbuilding of the nation a special trend in keeping with rural needs. There are graduates of the agricultural colleges now available to provide this instruction in the theological seminaries, and no doubt arrangements could be made so that at the end of each course the graduating classes could spend a few weeks at an agricultural college where they may have similar instruction to that now given to rural school teachers and would be brought into close personal touch with the new agriculture and with the new social enthusiasm operative in awakening rural communities.—V. THE GRANITE TOWN GREETINGS

Economy in Eggs

Eggs at this season are a luxury and should not be used too recklessly. For setting the coffee, for instance, egg shells are quite as efficacious as the egg itself, yet if the housewife does not keep watch the careless cook, who does not have to settle the bills, is more apt than not to plump a whole egg into the pot. Wash all eggs before breaking, and save the shells to dry, crush and add to the coffee. If the coffee be measured and put into the pot, add a little cold water, enough to mix well with a half egg shell crushed. Let stand for a moment, then pour on the boiling water, let come to a boil, take from the fire a second, let come to a boil again, remove and repeat a third time, then let stand where it will keep hot, but not boil, for five minutes. Just before serving pour in two tablespoonfuls cold water, let settle and the coffee when poured will be as clear as amber.

One of the most remarkable cases of restoration of missing property which has ever been chronicled in Belfast has just come to light. So long ago as August, 1876, a gold watch was lost on the street. The owner put the matter in the hands of Messrs. Gibson & Co., jewelers, and they inserted an advertisement offering a reward for the recovery of the watch, and also communicated with the detective office, but with no result. Years passed, but nothing was heard of the missing chronometer; until the other morning, when Messrs. Gibson, who in the meantime had forgotten all about the affair, received the watch along with an anonymous letter, which stated that the finder regretted now that he kept the watch so long. It had been broken, and was repaired, but had never been worn. The reason the finder gave for not returning the watch was that he was backward. The letter was signed "Unknown."

The Secret of Good Pies

PIE CRUST, more than any other delicacy of the oven, ought to be tempting and appealing to the taste. You do not eat pie as a nerve tonic or to strengthen your appetite. You eat it for pleasure mostly. You want it, of course, to taste good, at the same time you want the crust to be light, flaky, wholesome. Now, pie crust properly made from

is always good food, the absolute uniformity of this best of all flours eliminates failure entirely. You get the same delightful results every time and your pies are more healthful and nourishing than if made from ordinary flour. The reason is that "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" having a larger percentage of high quality gluten, assimilates more readily, is more satisfying than ordinary flour, comes out of the oven flakier, more tender and more digestible. Be sure to try "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" when next you make pies. It is the finest flour in the world not only for Pastry but for Bread and all family baking.

"Ogilvie Book For A Cook" containing 125 pages of tried and tested recipes will be sent free to any user of Royal Household Flour who asks for it.

CHARLOTTE COUNTY COUNCIL Meets in Thirty-Fifth Annual Session

The last annual session of the Charlotte County Council which closed on Friday last, was one of the quietest that the Council has ever had. The discussions were very few, not even the Scott Act furnishing a theme for debate. Several of the councillors went home on Thursday night, thus saving the county quite a respectable sum.

Coons, Hawkins, Matthews, Babcock and McCann were elected members of the July Committee; Coons, Everett and Dick being named as substitutes.

A resolution was adopted favoring legislation to provide for an assessment upon St. Stephen water works in St. Stephen parish at a valuation of 5,000.

A general order was passed calling on parish officers to pay any balances they had in their hands to the secretary-treasurer.

George Best and Robert Mawhinney were appointed members of Health District No. 28.

Dr. J. P. Macaulay and Grosvenor Cook were appointed members of Health District No. 14.

Resolutions with respect to the death of late Coons, Stevenson and Bryson were adopted.

The Finance Committee recommended that the Sheriff's salary be increased from $400 to $600 per year; that the committee on county property be instructed to increase the insurance on the court house from $4,000 to $6,000; that safe stores be procured for the court house, and that certain repairs to the record office building be made. Adopted.

A resolution was passed assenting to an agreement, in connection with commons and school lands, that may be entered into between the town and parish of St. Andrews and agreeing to support any legislation which may be required.

Warden McLeod and Court Johnston were chosen delegates to the Municipalities Union meeting.

Wharfage regulations were provided for Beaver Harbor wharf.

Coons, Everett, Greenlaw, Grimmer, Hawkins and Babcock were appointed a committee to enquire into the matter of indexing the books in the record office and furnishing more shelving for the office and to report at next session of Council.

The usual appointments and assessments were ordered.

Quebec Bridge Company.

There is something like bad management in the affairs of the Quebec Bridge Company, and, in a certain sense, that company is the government, for so far the government has about paid all its expenses. The Phoenix Iron Company was to provide the iron for the bridge, but it is said that company was formed another company composed of some of the members of the iron company. This inside company was called the Phoenix Bridge Company. A large guarantee company in the United States guaranteed the bridge company to the extent of $100,000 as to its work, etc. The bridge, as our readers are all too well aware, fell down. But there was failure on the part of some one to notify the guarantee company that the bridge had fallen. As the terms of the guarantee required any demand upon the guarantee company, for loss, to be made within a certain time, and as the demand in this case was not made within the time specified, the guarantee fails, and that amount is lost to the public treasury unless indeed the Phoenix Bridge Company will pay the amount over for the happiness so doing will give them.—St. J. Globe.

THE GRANITE TOWN GREETINGS

Baboons and Tiger

Evidence of the baboons' loyalty to a comrade and courage in the face of the tiger, the most dreaded animal of the South African veldt, is given by Sir Percy Fitzpatrick, the explorer, in his "Jock of the Bushveldt." As Sir Percy party was passing along a ridge, its attention was called to a troop of baboons in the ravine below.

The baboons have evidently been quite close to us, writes the explorer. On being warned by their sentry, they had stolen quietly away, and were then disappearing into the timbered depths of the ravine. We sat still to watch them come out on the opposite side a few minutes later and clamber up the rocky face, for they were always worth watching; but while we watched, the stillness was broken by an agonized scream,--horribly human in its expression of terror,--followed by roars, barks, bellows and screams from scores of voices in every key, and the crackle of breaking sticks and the rattle of stones added to the medley of sound as the baboons raced out of the wood and up the bare rocky slope.

The cries from below seemed to vibrate the whole mountain; great booming "Waahs!" came from the different places far apart and ever so high up the face of the berg; each big roar seemed to act like a trumpet call, bringing forth a multitude of others; the air rang with bewildering shouts and echoes volleying round the kloofs and faces of the berg. The strange thing is that the baboons did not continue their terrified scamper up the mountain but once in the brush, they turned and rallied. Forming an irregular semicircle they faced down the hill, thrashing their heads forward with sudden jerks as if to launch their cries with greater vehemence and fainting to charge, they showered loose earth, stones and debris of all sorts down with awkward underhand scrapes of their forepaws, and gradually but surely descended to within a dozen yards of the edge of the bush.

"Haas, Haas, the tiger! Look, the tiger, there, there on the rock below!" Jim shot the words out in vehement gusts, choked with excitement and true enough, there the tiger was. The long spotted body was crouched on a flat rock just below the baboons; he was broadside to us, with his forequarters slightly raised, and his face turned toward the baboons; his wide open mouth he snarled angrily at the advancing line, and with right paw raised made threatening claps in their direction. His left paw panned down the body of a baboon. The voices from mountain boomed nearer and nearer to us, clattering and scrambling down the face came more and more baboons. There must have been hundreds of them, the semicircle grew thicker and thicker, more and more a threatening roar by foot closer. The tiger raised himself a little more, and took swift looks from side to side across the advancing front, and then his nerve went, and with one spring he shot from the rock into the bush.

There was an instant forward rush of the baboons, and the rock was covered with roaring baboons, swarming over their rescued comrade, and a moment later the crowd scrambled up the slope again taking the tiger victim with them. In that seething rabble I could pick out nothing, but all the Kafrs maintained that they could see the mangled one straggled along by its arms by two others, much as a child might be helped up-hill. --The Youth's Companion.

Tax on Tiles

The Great Britain Inland Revenue authorities will receive something like £4,000 from those whose names figured in the New Year's Honours list.

The grant of Letters Patent to a baronet entails a payment of £100 to the Board of Inland Revenue. For a Privy Councilship or a knighthood the fee is £50. The recipients of all other honours have likewise to pay £50.

The expenses of the newly-honoured, however, do not end here. They will require new coats of arms, for which letters patent cost £10. Further the coats of arms have to be obtained from the College of Heralds, which means additional expenditure.

The expenses of the new baronet are something not far short of £150, while the other recipients of honours get off more lightly with a tax of £50.

There's no use getting scarce ink that, because nobody knows where Lee's creek she's located, but John and me, 'n' d'evils nobody 'n' knows to make a strike but us four."

"That's right," said Gale. "The only other way across is by Black Bear creek, and there ain't a half dozen more ever been up to the head of that stream, much less over the divide, so I don't allow there's any use to fret ourselves."

They went on their way, traveling leisurely until late evening, when they camped at the mouth of the valley up which the mine's cabin lay. Camp had been made early at Gale's suggestion instead of pushing on a few miles farther, as Lee had intended, and now when the cool evening fell and the draft quickened, it became possible to lay off gloves and handkerchiefs, so they set about the fire, talking, smoking and rubbing their tired feet.

It is at such hours and in the smoke of such fires that men look backward and bring forth the saddest, truest memories they have treasured to turn them over fondly by the glow of dying embers.

"No creek," Lee, the one-eyed miner who had made this lucky strike, told in simple words of his long and solitary quest, when he had risen with him at the dawn and mistfortune

"Your supper 'n' getting cold," she said to him. He took a seat beside her on a pile of logs where the smoke was least troublesome. He had chosen a spot that was sheltered by a lichen covered ledge, and this low wall behind, with the wickup joining it, formed an enclosure that lent them a certain air of privacy. They ate intently and drank deep cups of the undyed tea. By the time they were finished the night had fallen, and the air was just cool enough to make the fire agreeable. Burrell turned to more wood and stretched out beside her.

"This day has been so wonderful," said the girl, "that I shall never go to sleep. I can't bear to end it."

"But you must be weary, little maid," he said gently. "I am."

"Wait. Let me see. She stretched her hands and moved slightly to try her knees. "Yes, I am very tired, but not the kind of tired that makes you want to go to bed. I want to talk, talk, talk, and not about ourselves either, but about something. Tell me about your people--your sister."

He had expected her to ask this for the subject seemed to have a less questionable charm for her. She coughed and mumbled as best she could to talk of his sister, in not evasive, meditative eyes the sunbeam or a green involved longing. He had her of the father, the crocheted old soldier whose absurd sense of duty and whose elaborate southern courtesy had become a byword in the south. He told her household tales that were prized like the pieces of the Burrell plate, beautiful heirlooms of sentiment that mark the honor of high blooded houses, following which there was much to recount of the bleached, from the admiral who fought as a boy in the bay of Tripoli down to the combs who was at Annapolis, the while his father's name upon his words hungrily, her mind so quick in pursuit of his that it spurred him unconsciously, her great, dark eyes Lee, closed in silent laughter or side with wonder, and in them again ways the warmth of the leaping firelight, blended with the trust of a new born virgin love.

Then he began to laugh silently. "What is it?" she said curiously. "Oh, nothing. I was just wondering what my straitlaced ancestors would say if they could see me now."

"What do you mean?" the girl asked in open eyed wonderment.

"I don't care," he went on, unheeding her question. "They did worse things in their time, from what I hear, he leaned forward to draw her to him.

"Worse things! But we are doing nothing bad," said Nevia, holding him off. "There's no wrong in loving."

"Of course not," he assured her. "I am proud of it," she declared. "It is the best thing, the greatest thing, that has ever come into my life. Why, I should say I hold it. I want to know handed him the remaining one, which was not so long as that of the trader. Stark and Burrell qualified in the order they drew, the latter cursing his evil luck.

"Never mind the man," laughed Dale; "he has shot his de sire wad."

They took up their burdens again and filed toward the narrow valley.

CHAPTER VI

NOT until his dying day will Burrell lose the memory of that march with Nevia through the untroubled valley, and yet its incidents were never clear cut nor distinct when he looked back upon them, but blended into one dreamlike procession, as if he wandered through some kaleidoscope where every image was delightfully distorted and each not definitely unreal, yet all so deliciously unreal, yet all so deliciously real, that he could not tell from his drifting memory. They talked and laughed and sang with a rush of spirits as animated as the waves in the course they followed. They wandered hand in hand into a land of blue slugs, where there was nothing hot but love and nothing tangible but hope.

They held to the bed of the stream for its volume was low and enabled them to ford it from bar to bar.

The had because so intimate by now as to fall into a whimsical mode of speech, and Nevia reverted to a childish habit in her talk that brought many a smile to the youth's face. It had been her fancy as a little girl to speak in adjectives, ignoring many of her nouns, and her speechlessness had so amused her father that on rare occasions, when the humor was on him, he also took it up. She now addressed herself to Burrell in the same manner.

"I think we are very smart to come so far," she said.

"You travel like a deer," he declared admiringly. "Why you have toiled me down." Removing his pack, he stretched his arms and shook out the ache in his shoulders.

He built a fire, then fetched a bucket of water from a rill that trickled down among the rocks near by. He made as if to prepare their meal, but she would have none of it.

"Bigs should never cook," she declared. "That work belongs to Bibles," then forced him to venture her dominion and turn himself to the number duties of chopping wood and looting.

First, however, she showed him how to place the green ferns in the fire, which the toasting and the frying pan would sit without upsetting and how long she witheld the sticks of cooking wood. Then she handed him, as he it were, and he built a wickup of spruce tops, under the shelter of which he piled thick, fragrant billows of "Yukon feathers."

He filled his chest deeply and leaned on his ax, for he found himself shaking as if under the spell of some great expectancy.

"Your supper 'n' getting cold," she said to him.

He took a seat beside her on a pile of logs where the smoke was least troublesome. He had chosen a spot that was sheltered by a lichen covered ledge, and this low wall behind, with the wickup joining it, formed an enclosure that lent them a certain air of privacy. to the stars and cry it out to the whole world. Don't you?"

"I hardly think we'd better advertise," he said dryly.

"Why not?"

"Well, I shouldn't care to publish the tale of this excursion of ours. Would you?"

"I don't see any reason against it. I have often taken trips with Polon and been gone with him for days and days at a time."

"But you were not a woman then," he said softly.

"No, not until today, that's true. Dear, dear, how I did grow all of a sudden! And yet I'm just the same as I was yesterday, and I'll always be the same, just a wild little. Please don't ever let me be a big time. I don't want to be commonplace and ordinary. I want to be natural--and good."

"You couldn't be like other women," he declared, and there was more tenderness than hunger in his tone now as she looked up at him trusting as the shouter of his arms. "It would spoil you to grow up."

"It is so good to be alive and to love on like this," she continued dreamily, staring into the fire. "I seem to have come out of a gloomy house into the glory of a warm spring day, for my eyes are blinded, and I can't see half as beautifully as I want to, there are so many about me."

"Those are my arms," interjected the older lightly in an effort to ward off her growing seriousness.

"I've never been afraid of anything, and yet I feel so safe inside them. Sit queer?"

The young man became conscious of a vague discomfort and realized dimly that for hours now he had been smiling with words and caresses a something that had driven with him to the word, a something that instead of being grown stronger the more utterly his innocent maid yielded to him. It was as if he had ridden impudently upon certain roles and in the first mad gallop had lost them, but now far back heard them calling again more strongly every moment. A man's honor, if old may travel freely but its spirit is persistent. It was the talk about his people that had raised this consciousness and indecision, he thought.

"The marvelous part of it all," continued the girl, "is that it will never end. I know I shall love you always. Do you suppose I am really different from other girls?"

"Everything is different tonight--the whole world," he declared impatiently. "I've had a big handicap," she said. "But you must help me to overcome it. I want to be like your sister."

He rose and piled more wood upon the fire. What possessed the girl? It was as if she knew each cunning joint of his armor, as if she had realized her veil and had set about the awakening of his conscience deliberately and with a cautious wisdom beyond her years. Well, she had done it, and he swore to himself. Then he melted at the sight of her, crouched there against the shadows, following his every movement with her soul in her eyes, the tenderest trace of a smile upon her lips.

When she beheld him gazing at her she tilted her head sideways daintily, like a little bird.

"Oh, my! What a fierce you are all at once!"

Her smile flashed up as if illumined by the leaping blaze, and he crossed quickly, kneeling beside her.

He piled up a great sweet scented "ouch of springy bouquets and fashioned her a pillow out of a bundle of smaller ones, around which he wrapped his thick coat; then he removed her high faced boots and, taking her tiny feet, one in the palm of either hand, loved his head over them and kissed them with a sense of her gracious purity and his own unworthiness. He spread over the big grey blankets over her and tucked her in, while she sighed in delightful languor, looking up at him all the time.

"I'll sit here beside you for awhile," he said. "I want to smoke a bit."

At times a great desire to feel her in his arms, to have her on his breast, stirred over him, for he had lived long apart from women, and the solitude of the night seemed to mock him. He was a strong man, and in his veins ran the blood of warward forefathers who were wont to possess that which they conquered in the lists of love, mingled with which was the blood of spirited southern women who had on occasion loved not wisely, according to Kentucky rumor, but only too well. Nevertheless they were honest men, the women, if over-sentimental, and had transmitted to him a heritage of chivalry and a high sense of honor and courage. Her love had placed a barrier between them greater and more insurmountable than her blood.

He gently withdrew his fingers from her grasp and, seeing the other side of the wickup, covered himself over without disturbing her and fell asleep. It was early dawn when Nevia awoke to him.

"I dreamed you had gone away," she said, shivering violently and drawing close. "Oh, it was a terrible awakening."

"I was too tired to dream," he said. "So I had to come and see if you were really here."

He quickly rekindled the fire, and they made a hasty breakfast. Before the warmth of the rising sun had penetrated the cold air they had climbed the ridge and obtained a wondrous view of broken country, the hills alight with the morning rays, the valleys misty and mystical.

"I wish Stark was not one of Lee's party," he said once. "He may misunderstand our being together this way."

"But when he learns that we love each other that will explain every thing."

"I am not so sure. He doesn't know you as Lee and Polon and your father do. I think we had better say nothing at all about--you and me--to any one."

They clung to the divide for several hours, then descended into the bed of a stream, which they followed until it joined a larger one a couple of miles below, and there, sheltered in a grove of whispering firs, they found Lee's cabin nestling in a narrow, forked valley.

"There's no one here," said Nevia gleefully. "We've beat them in! We've beat them in!"

They had been walking rapidly since dawn, and, although Burrell's watch showed 2 o'clock, she refused to halt for lunch, declaring that the others might arrive at any moment, so down they went to the lower end of "No Creek." Lee's location, where Burrell blazed a smooth spot on the downstream side of a tree and wrote thereon at Nevia's dictation. When he had finished she signed her name, and he witnessed it, then paced off 440 steps, where he squared a spruce tree, which she marked:

Lower center end stake of No. 1 below discovery. NEVIA GALE, Locator.

"Now you stake the one below mine," she said. "It's just as good and maybe better. Nobody can tell." But he shook his head.

"I'm not going to stake anything," said he.

"You must!" she cried quickly, the sparkle dying from her eyes. "You said you would, or I never would have brought you."

"I merely said I would come with you," he corrected. "I did not promise to take up a claim, for I don't think I ought to do so. If I were a civilian it would be different, but this is government land, and I am a part of the government, as it were. Then, too, in addition to the question of my right to do it, there would be the certainty of making enemies of your people, old 'No Creek' and the rest, and I can't afford that now."

All arguments and pleading were in vain. He remained obdurate and insisted on her locating two other claims for herself, one on each of the smaller creeks where they came together above the house.

"But nobody ever stakes more than one claim on a gulch," objected the girl. "It's a custom of the miners."

"Then we'll call each one of these branches a different and separate creek," he said. "The gold was carried down one of those smaller streams, and we won't take any chances on which one it was."

CHAPTER VII
THE MAGIC OF BEN STARK
BEFORE the party came in sight the sound of their voices reached the cabin, and Burrell rose nervously and sauntered to the door. Uncertain how this affair might terminate, he chose to get first look at his enemies, if they should prove to be such, realizing the advantage that goes to a man who stands squarely on both feet. Then he heard Lee say:

"Well, I'll be d--d! Somebody's here ahead of us."

CHARLOTTE COUNTY COUNCIL Meets in Thirty-Fifth Annual Session

The County Council met in annual session on Tuesday Jan. 17.

All the old councillors were present, excepting the councillors from St. Patrick and Clarendon (John W. Stevenson and John Bryson), who had died during the year. Mr. Arthur Popple was present in Mr. Bryson's place. Coun. Acheson, of St. Patrick, Mr. Stevenson's successor was kept home by his father's serious illness.

Warden McLeod, in his opening address, touched briefly upon the improved agricultural and lumber conditions and expressed regret that fishery conditions had not been more prosperous. He referred feelingly to the deaths of Couns. Stevenson and Bryson. The former had sat at his Board for almost thirty-four consecutive years and his record was one not to be ashamed of. He thanked the councillors and officials for consideration and courtesies.

R. E. Armstrong was re-elected official reporter.

M. N. Cockburn was re-elected auditor. Auditor Cockburn reported the County finances in a satisfactory condition. The collecting of taxes has been quite up to the average. Two collectors had failed to send in any returns. The disbursements from the county contingent fund amounted to $7938.59, of which $1150.98 were parish moneys. The repairs to the jail had cost $1303.43. The contingent fund shows a balance of $282.21. The auditor suggested that the time would be opportune for the council to put a tight roof on the court house and paint the interior.

The County School fund showed a balance of $5444.44 in the hands of the Secretary-treasurer Dec. 31, 1910.

County contingent account--receipts $7938.59; expenditure, $7657.38.

Scott Act fund--Receipts $532 including $224 transferred from contingent account; balance on hand, $100. Scott Act fines collected during the year amounted to $300. Against the above balance of $100 stood an expense account of $115.35.

Bonds of Health--District No. 14, balance on hand, $26.91; No. 15, balance on hand, $378.42; No. 28, balance on hand, $172.33.

St. Andrews School Trust Fund shows $656 on hand represented by securities. Road tax fund--Balance on hand, $50.01.

School fund tax balances due--Milltown, $834.70; parish St. George, $306.60.

The balance held for the poor account in the contingent account are as follows: Clarendon, $10.54; St. Croix, $7.54; Lepreaux, $44.80; St. Andrews, $44.32; Dufferin, $14.17; Pennfield, $27.19; St. Patrick, $14.03; Grand Manan, $35.32; St. Stephen, $133.48; St. David, $41.43; West Isles, $10.32.

Reports were also submitted from the chairman of health districts.

By permission Mr. Armstrong, at the request of the Secretary of the West Isles Weirmen's Union, brought up the matter of providing motor boats with silent mufflers.

The following resolution was moved by Coun. Ward, seconded by Coun. McNeill and adopted:--

Resolved, That this Council approve of the action of the Weirmen's Union of West Isles in asking for the passage of a regulation requiring that owners of motor boats shall use regulation mufflers upon their engines and that they employ every reasonable precaution to prevent gasoline oil from being thrown into waters used for fishing purposes, believing that such regulation and precaution would be in the interests of the herring fishing industry of this county.

The Finance Committee then took up consideration of accounts, passing a number of bills.

On the recommendation of the Finance Committee the Council appointed a committee composed of Couns. Everett, Cawley, McAllister, McLean and McNeill to bring in a report with respect to the repairs of the court house roof and the painting of the interior.

The request of the County Board of Trade for a grant of $50 for Board purposes was referred to the Finance Committee.

A report was received from the secretary of the Chipman Memorial hospital. The receipts of the hospital were $10,492.61. After paying expenses there was balance of $955.61. There have been 361 patients admitted during the year. The plans for the erection of a maternity ward this year cannot be carried out for want of funds.

The committee on court house repairs recommended that the gutters and valves on the roof be thoroughly repaired and that the exterior be painted. Adopted. The Finance Committee recommended a $5000 assessment for contingencies.

The committee authorized an appropriation of $50 for board of trade purposes.

Coun. Scott declared that the board should be compelled to spend this money in advertising for old-country farm immigrants.

A committee was appointed to draft a resolution with respect to decreased councillors.--Beacon.

Long Sault Power Scheme.

The promoters of this project do not appear to have made much progress in securing the consent of Congress to the damming of the St. Lawrence River. The matter has been argued out at some length before the River and Harbors Committee of the House of Representatives, which has relegated it to a sub-committee, possibly with a view to deferring it to a more convenient season. This is the short session of the present Congress and there will be more than enough to work to keep it busy till the fourth of March.

Pending the report of the sub-committee and the action of the full-committee thereon, no embarrassing action is likely to be taken at Ottawa during the present session, all the more so because no trustworthy assurances have yet been given that the navigability of the St. Lawrence will not be impaired by the construction of the proposed dam. The most absolute certainty on this point must be secured. Vessels six hundred feet long and drawing twenty feet of water must be able to pass through the Long Sault Canal on the Canadian side. It will always be a link in the chain of St. Lawrence navigation, and it must never pass into the hands or even under the control of foreigners. The people of Canada who built the Sault Ste. Marie Canal in order to be independent, will never condone any different attitude on this great question.

The Grand Trunk Fight to Reach Providence

Montreal, Jan. 11.—In addition to the many big undertakings which the Grand Trunk has on the tapis at the present time, the company finds itself in the midst of a fight in the New England States. It will be remembered that some months ago the Grand Trunk applied to the Rhode Island Legislature for permission to build a line through that State to the water at Providence. This natural desire on the part of the Grand Trunk to find a further outlet on the Atlantic seaboard was bitterly opposed by the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railway. However, the Grand Trunk secured its charter largely owing to the influence of the people of Providence, who were anxious for better railway facilities and welcomed the coming of the Grand Trunk. Once the charter was secured, the Grand Trunk went merrily to work to build its road and expected that everything would prove smooth sailing. It reckoned without its host, however, as Charles S. Mellen, President of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railway had another trump card up his sleeve, which he threw on the table when the Grand Trunk least expected it, and which has caused no little delay and annoyance to the officials of the Canadian road.

To get to the Atlantic ports south of Portland the Grand Trunk has always been compelled to use the Boston & Maine Railway. It had running rights over this road for a considerable distance through the State of Vermont, and by means of this device was able to reach different points along the Atlantic coast. Recently Mr. Mellen secured control of the Boston & Maine by means of the Boston Railroad Holding Co., and now that he is "boss" of the situation he absolutely refuses to give the Grand Trunk, or its subsidiary, the Central Vermont, running rights over the Boston & Maine Railway. This blocks the scheme of the Grand Trunk to get to Providence and the ports on the Atlantic.

However, Mr. Mellen and his officials are not easily discouraged. They have made up their minds to get there over other roads they will build their own "straight and narrow path" to that much desired haven. At any rate, the Grand Trunk has applied to the Vermont Legislature for permission to build a line fifty miles long in that state, paralleling the Boston & Maine Railway, and thereby freeing itself from all dependence upon the Boston & Maine Railway. The total cost of building this piece of road and other sections which must be built, the securing of terminals, etc., is said to be in the neighborhood of $15,000,000. This is a pretty tidy sum, but the Grand Trunk evidently considers that it is money well spent. It is not going to be blocked by the opposition of rival railways.

No Vested Tariff Interest

It was to be expected that the representatives of the Manufacturers' Association would vigorously oppose any movement for closer trade relations with the United States. Even the representatives of the farming interests who recently waited upon the Government did not suggest a wide measure of reciprocity in manufactured products. Rightly or wrongly, our people feel that they cannot as yet compete with the highly specialized industries of the Republic on a basis of market for market.

Had the manufacturers confined their protest to this feature of the tariff situation there would have been no serious objection on the part of the great mass of the people who do not benefit from protective duties, but on the contrary placed under considerable disadvantage by them. But Mr. Rowlev and his associates went a good deal farther.

"We have noted," they said, "the suggestion offered on behalf of the farmers that the British preference should be immediately increased to 50 per cent., with provision for such further reductions in the preferential rates of duty as would establish complete free trade between Canada and the mother land within ten years. The Association's position on this subject was defined at the Halifax convention in 1902. The resolution on this subject has been reaffirmed at every convention since 1902 and is as follows:—That while the tariff should primarily be framed for Canadian interests it should nevertheless give a substantial preference to the mother country, and also to any part of the British Empire with which reciprocal trade can be arranged, recognition always that under any conditions the minimum tariff must afford adequate protection to all Canadian producers." Having regard to present conditions in Canada we consider an increase in the existing preference is inadvisable and would imperil the existence of many Canadian industries."

The manufacturers' memorial seems to imply, as the Halifax resolution did, that protection in Canada has become a vested interest. That the minimum tariff must afford adequate protection to all Canadian producers is the cardinal interest article to the Halifax platform. There is no suggestion that even in the distant future the industries of the country that now benefit from protection must be able now to stand upright and compete in an open home market, as many of them already do compete in the world's open markets. If the Halifax resolution and the Ottawa memorial fairly represent the views of the Manufacturers' Association, the present tariff which averages 27 per cent. on all dutiable goods, is the minimum under which business can be carried on. The Imperial tie may be alright as a phrase, but adequate protection must be enforced against British goods no less than against those of the United States, even though Great Britain gives us a huge open market that absorbs the bulk of our exports.

The members of the Ottawa delegation may rest assured that the people of this country do not regard a 27 per cent. tariff as a permanent one. As Canadian industries become powerful they must learn to stand alone. The days of high tariff in America are coming to an end. The tendency is steadily toward reduction, and the Government of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, even were it composed of convinced protectionists, could not ignore that tendency and survive. The manufacturers should remember also that the most insistent demand for reduction in duties comes from western Conservative papers like the Winnipeg Telegram. The movement for reduction is not a party one. It is outside the lines of party politics, and therefore all the more formidable. In view of all this it was not good politics to flout the Halifax resolution in the face of the farming community and declare emphatically against an increase in the British preference. That attitude must inevitably lead to the alienation of many who believe that the British preference has had an excellent effect economically as well as on the political side, and who would like to see it increased and extended from time to time.—Tor. Strong Healthy Women

If a woman is strong and healthy in a womanly way, motherhood means to her but little suffering. The trouble lies in the fact that the many women suffer from weakness and disease of the distinctly feminine organism and are unable for motherhood. This can be remedied.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Cures the weaknesses and disorders of women. It sets directly on the delicate and important organs concerned in motherhood, making them healthy, strong, vigorous, virile and elastic.

Honest druggists do not offer substitutes, and give them only as "just as good." Accept no secret notions in place of this scientific remedy. It contains not a drop of alcohol and no injurious habit-forming or injurious drugs. It is a pure, hygienic extract of the most valuable American roots.

Montreal Millionaires

The year 1910 has increased the number of Montreal millionaires very considerably, and there are now at least 64 in this city, making Montreal for its size one of the richest cities in the world.

A list of millionaires follows: Sir W. Macdonald, Sir M. Allan, Hon. L. J. Forget, James Ross, C. R. Hosmer, Jeffrey Barland, J. R. Wilson, H. S. Holt, R. Reford, Shirley Ogilvie, A. Haig Sims, Hugh Paton, C. B. Gordon, A. Baumgarten, A. E. Ogilvie, R. Forget, M. P., Henry Birks, James Morgan, Mark Workman, N. Curry, G. E. Drummond, Wm. Yalje, H. Timmins, Col. Carson, H. Drummond, T. Trenholme, Hon. F. Beique, C. F. Smith, Sir Wm. Van Horne, Sir T. Slaughter, Hon. R. Mackay, R. B. Angus, Sir E. Clouston, D. Morrice, F. W. Thompson, R. McSpichen, D. L. McGibbon, G. A. Grier, J. V. Meredith, A. R. McDonald, J. T. Davis, G. Caverhill, J. P. Black, E. B. Greenshields, Milton Hersey, W. M. Atken, M. P., G. W. Stephens, J. J. Drummond, Peter Lyall, J. K. L. Ross, J. N. Greenshields, D. McMartin, E. T. Galt, J. B. Aldred, H. H. Lyman.

In addition Mrs. Hector Mackenzie, Mrs. Duncan McIntyre, Lady Drummond, Mrs. F. Orr Lewis and the Dow, Gault, Masson, Reid and Crathern estates are in the magic circle, so that it is pretty safe to say that there are at least 64 persons in this city who can lay claim to a fortune of over a million.

China Only a Bubble

According to the Daily Consular Reports, "the Army Advisory Board at Peking is taking steps towards the making of a complete survey of the Chinese Empire, both for military and general purposes. At present nothing of the kind exists." This is the first confession of the truth about the Chinese census in more than a century.

Ever since Marco Polo boomed the Flowery Kingdom it has been the ambition of the maritime states of Europe to plunder its imaginary riches and exploit its fancied resources. When Columbus stumbled on America he was bound for "Catay," the Portuguese followed by plundering Malacca and Macao and the Spaniards seized the Philippines. The Dutch doubted, and the English investigated the alleged populousness and wealth of the Celestial Empire.

But, as Sir George Staunton's humiliating recital freely confesses, they were defeated at every turn by the false hood and cunning of the Mongols. Lord Macartney came away in 1795 with a tamal account of China and a pretended census of 333,000,000, which subsequent wonder mongers have amplified into 438,000,000 (U. S. Cons. Rep., Sept., 1908). The Jesuit official census, taken but a few years before the arrival of Macartney's embassy, showed but 198,000,000, including China, Manchuria, Tibet, the Philippines, and the dependencies. This number, instead of increasing, appears to have actually diminished by loss of territories and frequent famines until quite recently, when it began to pick up again.

At the present time, as estimated by the rough but trustworthy guidance of its food consumption and similar indications, it is believed that the population can hardly exceed 130,000,000.

If the promised survey is ever made, a promise which some experience of Mongolian methods permits us to doubt, China and her supposedly boundless opportunities will fair to resolve themselves into the will o' the wisp which has already misled us in the Philippines, and may yet lead us into a worse mess.

Tolstoy's Intensity

(From the London Times.)

We quoted the other day an interesting description of the count by an eminent Russian writer. Everything in Tolstoy's character, he said, attains Titanic proportions. "As a drinker he absorbed fantastic quantities of liquor. As a gambler he terrified his partners by the boldness of his play. As a soldier he advanced gallantly to bastion four, the bastion of death at Sebastopol, and there he made dying men laugh, at his witty sayings. He surpassed every one by his prodigious activity in sport as well as in literature."

Women Riot as Judge Shuts them out of Court

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 13.—With loud outcries of indignation against an order excluding them from the trial of Mrs. Laura Farnsworth Schenk, charged with poisoning her wealthy husband, hundreds of women precipitated a riot in the Court House here today. Battering wild court attendants, they tried to force their way into the court room and continued their onslaughts until they were hustled bodily into the street. Many of them had been waiting in line for three hours and their wrath passed all bounds.

As screaming and excited women surged about the main entrance, a man who was escorting one of them fell in an epileptic fit, adding to the already intense excitement. The Sheriff with great difficulty made his way to the sufferer's side and held him until an ambulance came.

As the clanging ambulance dashed up a photographer let off a flashlight and cries of anger gave way to hysterical shrieks of terror, many women thinking a bomb had been hurled among them. Then they fled in all directions.

Judge Jordan, in issuing his order excluding the women, said it was on the ground of public morality. He also said they laughed frequently and that their levity disturbed the court.

Five Hundred Miles

Of new track

Montreal, Jan. 18.—It was stated this evening by Vice-President William Whyte of the C. P. R., that the company will build 500 miles of track in the west during the coming summer, including the completion of the double-tracking of the line between Winnipeg and Brandon. In addition to this there will be a good deal of double-tracking around Moose Jaw, which is becoming an important shipping centre.

In order to make the road through the mountain section more secure, Mr. Whyte stated that it would be given a rock ballast, the ballast being made out of the mountains with two large crushers. In addition to this the western programme includes the strengthening of a number of bridges to keep up with the increasing weight of equipment, and a number of new steel bridges. The rest of the construction programme includes a number of short lines, from twenty to forty miles long, to connect newly-settled districts with the main lines.—Exchange.

BACK BAY

Rev. Mr. Mason left on Saturday for St. John, N. B., where he is to take charge of the church work there. We all feel sorry to lose such a good preacher. While here he proved faithful and did good work for our Sunday school.

Misses Estella and Addie Mitchell called on friends in St. George recently. Miss Blanche McGee is visiting friends in Maine.

A number of young folks enjoyed the dance Tuesday evening at Letete all reports a good time.

Mr. and Mrs. James Taylor and son are visiting Mrs. Emma Barrett.

A dance is to be held in the hall Tuesday evening.

Among those who enjoyed the skating on Letete or Back Bay, Blacks Harbor, Beaver Harbor, and Dipper Harbor, were Misses Smiler, Shea, Stella and Addie Mitchell, Mrs. Theodore Hickey, Messrs Thos. and Westey Mitchell, Cecil McGee, Oscar Kinney, Horace McLeese and Chester Johnson.

A good position can be had by ambitious young men and ladies in the field of "Wireless" or Railway telegraphy. Since the 8 hour law became effective, and since the wireless companies are establishing stations throughout the country there is a great shortage of telegraphers. Positions pay beginners from $70 to $90 per month, with good chance of advancement. The National Telegraph Institute operates six official institutes in America, under supervision of R. R. and wireless officials and places all graduates into positions. It will pay you to write them for full details at Cincinnati, Ohio, or Philadelphia.

ST. ANDREWS

Carlwallater Kelley of Welchpool has returned home after a brief visit here. Miss Sadie Douglas called on friends here recently.

Warren Simson visited relatives here Saturday.

George Grant who has been in Presque Isle, Me. for the past three months returned home Saturday.

F. O'Neil attended the Weirmen's Union at St. George Saturday.

The Basket Ball game between 'Shamrocks' of St. Andrews and 'Crescents' of Grand Mann which was played in Andrad's hall on the evening of Thursday last ended in favor of the St. Andrews boys. Well done Shamrocks!

The young folks are taking advantage of the skating at Katy's Cove.

Miss Lela Dick entertained a number of friends from St. Stephen on Monday last.

The members of the Ladies Circle of the Baptist Church met at Mrs. H. Rigby's on Friday last.

Charlotte Co. Board of Trade.

The County Board of Trade convened in the Court House on Tuesday evening with quite a large number in attendance.

R. E. Armstrong, president, occupied the chair. In his annual address Mr. Armstrong referred to the prosperity of Canada in which Charlotte Co. was sharing also to the progressive movement that was going on at St. Andrews, to the favorable agricultural conditions and the awakened interest that was being taken in horticulture and orchard rearing in rural conditions, mentioning especially the need for an extension of the telephone in rural districts. He instanced the case of Rolling Dam where the merchants doing business there were asked to contribute $400 and enter into a three year contract before a telephone system would be put in. This was nothing short of a hold up. President Armstrong thought the railway might be persuaded to put in telephones at some of their stations where there were no telegraph instruments. The question of telephoning the vacant farms had been taken up by the Board and a list of such farms was being made up.

The Secretary C. N. Vroom reported with respect to the market for potatoes and to some other matters that had been delegated to him.

He read correspondence with respect to vacant farms, to motor boat fishing and the building of the Georgian Bay canal.

A motion was passed calling the attention of the government to the fact that rural districts in this county were being denied telephone service.

A resolution was passed supporting the action of the West Isles Weirmen's Union.

It was moved by Bismark Dick to ask the fishery department that the opening season for lobster fishing commence Nov. 1st instead of Dec. 1st and that the law be made permanent.

After dealing with other county matters the Board adjourned.

It is now considered a settled fact that this year will see the starting of work on the Georgian Bay Canal, and three million dollars is the estimated amount to be spent during the year.

LOCALS

Go to the rink tonight and see some of the veterans round into form. They can be seen on the ice at any time of day getting down the difficult act of base sliding, but they may spring a surprise tonight so you had better go down anyway and see the fun.

After several days of disagreement a decision has been arrived at in regard to an Umpire and Chas. Lynott has been agreed upon. The game starts at 8 o'clock sharp.

St. Stephen goes it cheap.—Nominations for Mayor and Councillors closed at 6 p. m. Monday there being no opposition W. A. Dismore for Mayor, Geo. H. Buhl, J. R. McClure, J. R. Polley, J. G. Hamilton, E. Thornton, Elwell DeWolfe for councillors, and T. K. McGeech, H. L. Wall and J. F. Douglas as assessors were elected by acclamation.

The Base Ball Game at the rink tonight promises to furnish an evening of fun. The game is called for 8 o'clock and all the old warhorses have expressed a desire to get into the game. Two nines have been chosen and keen rivalry exists between them so it will surely be interesting. The line up will be:

On Sunday evening on the occasion of Rev. H. I. Lynds farewell sermon every seat in the spacious edifice was occupied, the rector preached a brief but feeling sermon dwelling on the severance of the ties between pastor and flock.

At the close of the sermon as the large congregation arose to retire Warden Nicholas Monting asked them to be seated for a few moments when Warden Toy stepped to the front and in a few remarks referring to the many friends the rector had made both in his own as well as in the other congregations of the town expressed his sorrow at his departure and asked him to accept as a parting remembrance of his friends a parse containing $52.

The departing rector replied at some length referring to the many pleasant episodes of his ten years' pastorate in the town and the many expressions of friendship he had received during the past few weeks, closing by wishing the members of the congregation and citizens of the town every measure of success.

The Rev. gentleman, wife and two children left on Tuesday afternoon's train enroute for their new home in Strathcona, Alta., which is situated on the opposite side of the river from Edmonton the two places being connected by bridge, they remained in St. John over Wednesday taking the evening train from that city for Toronto where they will visit with Mrs. Lynds sister as long as his time will permit as he has to be at his destination for the first Sunday in February when he will be inducted into his new pastorate by the Bishop of Calgary.

All wish him and family every success in his new field of labor and his many friends will long have kindly remembrances of his ten years' life in St. George.

On Tuesday evening a parish meeting of St. Mark's church was held to take into consideration the appointment of a rector for the parishes of St. George and Pennfield to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Rev. H. I. Lynds, between 30 and 40 of the members including two Lady members attended, on opening Ernest Harvey was chosen Chairman and read three letters from Bishop Richardson in which he mentioned 8 or 10 clergymen who might be available for the vacancy among them the Rev. H. G. Alder now rector of Woolstack. After some considerable discussion on motion it was decided unanimously to extend a call to the Rev. H. G. Alder, provided the parish of Pennfield were also willing, and the Wardens were empowered to complete all necessary transactions in the matter as quickly as possible so that the parish would not be vacant any longer than absolutely necessary.

On the same evening the parish of Pennfield also held a meeting at their church and Warden Meeting on Wednesday morning received word by telephone that they had also unanimously chosen Mr. Alder and were willing to increase their donations to the salary.

Mr. Meeting immediately telephoned the Bishop of their action and also notified Mr. Alder.

Mr. Alder is one of the finest pulpit orators in the province and is also noted as a hearty church worker and should St. George and Pennfield be able to obtain his services they will be fortunate indeed, and no doubt but a period of successful parish work will be inaugurated under the new Rector's guidance.

The Baptist congregation held a concert on Monday evening in their church which both from a financial and enjoyable point was very successful, all taking part acquitted themselves in a most satisfactory manner furnishing an evening entertainment of rare excellence to those attending; the following program was carried out:

Anthem, Choir; Reading, Miss Helen Clark; Anthem, Choir; Duet, The Misses Inez and Sarah McPhee; Anthem, Choir; Solo, Miss Carrie Gillmore; Taper Drill, by eight Young Ladies; Male Quartette, Messrs McPhee, Dow, Kent and Williamson; Anthem, Choir; Duet, The Misses Edna O'Brien and Carrie Gillmore; Reading, Rev. Mr. McPhee; Anthem, Choir; Trio, The Misses O'Brien and Gillmore and Mr. Kent; concluding with an Anthem by the Choir.

Saturday afternoon the annual meeting of the Charlotte Co. Weir-owners and Weirfishermen's Union took place in the Forrester's hall, between 30 and 40 members assembled and considerable interest in the affairs of the Union was displayed.

The meeting was called to order at 1:30 President J. A. Belyea of St. John in the chair, in opening he made quite a lengthy address stating that it was sorry that he was unable to congratulate them on a successful season as at the beginning had been hoped for, but on the contrary the season had been in the herring fishing almost a total failure in our section the cause of which should be carefully looked into with a view of seeking and providing a remedy if possible, there had been fair catches in other places so that the fish had not left our shores altogether.

Some claimed that the almost general use of motor boats was causing a great part of the trouble, and he would ask all present as practical fishermen to give their views in finding a remedy as suggested by their observations while employed at their vocation so as to, as a union place the matter in a proper way and bring their weight as an influential body to bear in an intelligent way in any course they may undertake. In closing he hoped that the next season would prove an improvement and also hoped that the past season would go down on record as the worst that that county would ever see.

The Secy.-Treas., Geo. Frauley then read his report for the year which showed a small balance of $50.20 on hand with a comparatively large delinquent list of dues.

The fourth annual report of the Executive was then read by the Secy.-Treas., which dealt with several of the interests of the Union, among others that the prices obtained during the year by the Union from the packers had been $12. and $6. per Hogsd.

This season in view of the situation they had thought it best not to bind the members to any set price but leave it open to them as individual members to arrange their prices.

The report also referred to the motor boat question and also stated that they had moved in the matter of getting the Government to establish a Reduction Point in the County so as to encourage the catching of Silver Hake, Dogfish, etc., and thus partially at least nullify the effects of these pests and marauders.

The President then called on the members for a general discussion which was opened by Capt. Johnston who did not know much about the effects of the motor-boat and would like to hear from others who were in a position to judge of their effect on the fishing.

After a lengthy discussion taken part in by a large number of those present the general opinion could be summed up that the motor boat as now mostly used with open exhaust was very detrimental to the fishing especially weir fishing, a fitting illustration as given by several was that during a thunder storm fish were never caught also when a gun was fired in the vicinity of a shoal they invariably dispersed, the subject of Vibration was also discussed, one member claiming that it was more the cause than the noise of the exhaust, another member said he had frequently gone by shoals in his boat and they would take no notice of the boat but acknowledged that in the majority of cases as he would get up even with them they disappeared and he considered the motor boat injured the fishing, another member claimed that a shoal of Silver Hake in one night would do more damage than 100 motor boats would do in a year, another member stated an instance of being at his weir and seeing 2000 or more fish, and his nephew about 1000 yds away starting his boat the fish all disappeared, the general opinion summed up was that the less noise about a weir the better the fishing and that motor boats as used were detrimental to fishing.

A resolution asking that the government frame a law enforcing the motor boat owners to use mufflers of the best and most silent makes procurable, was passed unanimously with but one nay.

A resolution asking the government to establish a Reduction Plant at some central point in the County was also passed by a unanimous vote.

On motion J. A. Belyea was again elected President, Capt. Peter Cameron, Vice-President, Geo. Frauley, Secy.-Treas., and the old Executive as follows: A. B. O'Neill, W. A. Holt, Hugh McGregor, J. T. Catherine, A. McGee, Ira McConnell, E. C. Justason, G. W. McKay and Geo. Byron were continued in office, and on motion meeting then adjourned.

A Mighty Army of Clean Headed Canadians.

Thousands and thousands of heads that were dandruff filthy a year ago are scrupulously clean today.

This means that millions, yes billions, of dandruff germs have been annihilated, and cannot continue their pernicious work of hair destruction. But best of all it means that at last there is a cure, an absolute certain cure for dandruff, one so prompt in its action and so marvelous in its results, that many are skeptical when told of what it has done.

Parsian Sage is the name of the quick-acting hair restorer that is responsible for a mighty army of clean headed Canadians, and its action is so certain that J. Sutton Clark, the agent in St. George guarantees it to stop falling hair, itching scalp and cure dandruff in two weeks or money back.

Parsian Sage makes women's hair soft, lustrous and luxuriant in a few days.

The price of this delightful money-back hair dressing is only 50 cents a bottle at J. Sutton Clark's or direct, all charges prepaid, by Giroux Mfg. Co., Fort Erie, Ont.

Grease stains on leather may be removed by carefully applying benzine or perfectly pure turpentine. Wash the spots over afterward with the well-beaten white of an egg.

Benevolence of 1910.

The benevolence of the year 1910 in the United States as expressed by large donations and bequests for public purposes, reached the huge sum of $141,644,538. This is the total figured out by the Chicago Tribune, the donations amounting to $44,112,151. Of the grand total $91,573,082 has been given to universities, colleges and other educational institutions; $56,229,243 to charitable institutions of various kinds; $17,654,433 to churches and other religious associations; $9,536,680 to art museums, galleries, and municipal objects; and $1,911,000 to libraries. Mrs. Carnegie is driven to searching for other ways than library-building for ridding himself of his troublesome income. He keeps far in the lead as the largest donor of benevolence, John D. Rockefeller, J. Pierpont Morgan and Mrs. Russell Sage coming next, in the order named. Of the above named grand total the amount contributed by women was $20,782,762. In the regard of the women donors charity stood first, colleges second, art museums and municipal objects third, churches fourth and libraries fifth.

SUDDEN DEATH OF Mrs. JOHN MARCH

Stricken with Heart Disease While Attending Sunday School at Hampton, and died Almost Instantly.

Hampton, N. B., Jan 20-Special.—This community was shocked this afternoon to learn of the sudden illness of Mrs. John March from heart disease while attending a Sunday school convention in the Baptist church at Hampton village. Mrs. March had just given a report of the Hampton Station Baptist Sunday school, of which she was superintendent and teacher of the Bible class in which she had referred to the losses the school had sustained by death. A few minutes after taking her seat she was noticed to be breathing heavily. Dr. Warneford was immediately summoned but he pronounced life extinct.

Mrs. March was formerly Miss Mary S. Bucknam, of Pennfield, Charlotte county. All of her married life was spent in the city of St. John up to twelve years ago, when they removed to Hampton where they have since resided. Mrs. March was one of the organizers of the W. C. T. U. in St. John and for many years held the office of secretary. She was the first secretary of the Women's Baptist Missionary Union of the maritime provinces, an office she held more than twenty-five years, during which time she visited many parts of the provinces and was an able exponent of the missionary cause. She was always deeply interested in Sunday schools and was more than an ordinarily deep and careful student of Biblical Sunday school objects. She was always a constant visitor at the hospital and jail during her residence in St. John and deeply sympathized with all human suffering and woe.

She was married to her now sorrowing husband nearly fifty two years ago. She reared three sons—Cecil S. of St. John; Ralph A. of Hampton; and Ernest C. of West Somerville, Mass., two brothers, Lieut. S. Bucknam of Tennessee, U. S. and Alfred Bucknam of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., besides many grand children and great grand children survive. She had apparently been in robust health up to the time of her death. Mrs. March will be sincerely mourned by the entire community.

The Toronto street Railway is a good money maker. During 1910 the City received $596,297 from the Toronto Railway Company, besides mileage allowances and taxes, during the year just passed, an increase in percentage receipts alone of over $88,000 as compared with 1909. The significance of this fact is apparent when it is stated that the city now receives one-fifth of all increased receipts. On this basis it is easy to calculate that during 1910, the Toronto Railway Company got from the public over $1,220,000 more than in the previous year.

Synopsis of Canadian North-West Land Regulations.

Any person who is the sole head of a family or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district. Entry by proxy may be made at any agency, on certain conditions, by father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.

Duties—Six months residence and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres solely owned and occupied by him or by his father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section along side his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—must reside upon the homestead or pre-emption six months in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and cultivate fifty acres extra.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may enter for a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate fifty acres, erect a house worth $300.00.
