("Robin Gray—a novel," by Charles

Gibbon, cannot be recommended to the admirers of the sensational school of fiction. Its scenes are laid in Scottand, and most of the dialogue is in the favorite dialect of Burns and Scott.

Many peculiarities of Scottish life and character are portrayed. The language is simple, the style pure, and the story good. Published by the Messrs. Harper, New York, and for sale at Mr. T. H. Hall's, St. John.

"Kenelm Chillingty—his Adventures and Opinions," from the fertile pen of that great man, the late Lord Lytton, is one of the works on which his fame will be happy to meet all of his old contomers and as many new ones as will favor that great man, the late Lord Lytton, is one of the works on which his fame will be happy to meet all of his old contomers and as many new ones as will favor that great man, the late Lord Lytton, is one of the works on which his fame will be happy to meet all of his old contomers and an interesting development of character. Mr. Hallock is a sportsman of great enthusiasm and experience, with personal knowledge of the places and things of which he treats, and he is also a writer of much excellence and versatility. The trouble with most books written for sportsmen is that their authors are sportsmen and nothing else, or literateurs and nothing else, or literateurs and nothing else. Mr. Hallock is both. His fishing experience gives him the facts, and his severe literary training enables him to curb his enthusiasm. The book is full of facts and the style is racy and interesting. "Middlemarch, a Study of Provincial THE NEW BRUNSWICK Life," is undoubtedly the greatest of Geo EDMUND E. KENNAY Eliot's works, and one of the greatest works of fiction ever written. It displays to a greater degree than any of her previous works that remarkable power of characterization that has made her famous. In the first three chapters of this book four remarkable characters are shown to the reader—not introduced to him—by a few slight touches that make them living characters with whom he is desirous of an intimate acquaintance. These personages are odd, but not exaggerated or unreal. The author who describes hasty conceptions of odd characters gives his readers caricature. George Eliot's character studies are so thorough that all the traces of caricature that might have attached to the original conceptions vanish before they are presented to the world. keep it on hand as a protection against the early and unperceived attack of Pulmonary Affections, which are easily met at first, but which become incurable, and too often fittal, if neglected. Tender lungs need this defence; and it is unwise to be without it. As a safeguard to children, amid the distressing diseases which beset the Throat and Chest of Childhood, Cherry Protoat is invaluable; for, by its timely use, multitudes are rescued from premature graves, and saved to the love and affection centred on them. It acts specifly and surely against ordinary colds, securing sound and health-restoring sleep. LAVA BEDS, April 27—5.30 A. M. A despatch received from Col. Green of the 1st Cavalry, who went out with re-enforcements yesterday morning, shows the surprise to have been more complete and more terribly fatal than was at first supposed. The despatch says that Capt. Thomas and Lieut. A. H. Howe of the 4th Artillery were killed. Lieut. Harris of the 4th Artillery is badly, and perhaps mortally wounded, and Lieut. Branston of the 4th Artillery is missing.

5 P.M. From a second despatch, sent by Col. Green, it appears that they are now collected and waiting conveyance to camp for

HOW THE MODOCS ARE ARMED. Sixty Modocs are armed with Spencer carbines and breech-loading muskets. In more than one instance a Modoc has been known to have two or more Spencer rifles, enabling him to keep up a rapid fire from his natural or artificial breast-

THE INDIAN INTRENCHMENT. THE INDIAN INTRENCHMENT.

The surface of the ground in many places is torn up by volcanic action, which form crevices, and these are adaptable to purposes of hiding or defence. In several instances the soldiers, knowing nothing of the topography, have come unawares on such fissures, and before they could escape were confronted by a wily Indian, with rifle leveled and finger on the trigger. Death or at least a dangerous wound is the result. Too often the cowardly red skins escape by many paths known only to themselves. As a sample of their

been seen so far. Justice to the memory of the Gallant Dead Compels the record of the following facts, which are well authenticated: When Capt. Thomas found himself and men surrounded by his vindictive foe, true to his nature as a soldier, he sought to cheer the soldiers on to the bitter end, and obtain, if possible, life for life, and to sell their lives dearly, saying, "Men, we are surrounded. We must fight and die like men and soldiers." In his noble efforts to sustain the courage of his small command he was ably secondefi by Lieut. Howe and Lieut. Wright. After receiving a mortal wound he buried his gold watch and chain among the rocks and emptied his revolver amongst the enemy before dying. Ifflying, he would also write in terms of well-deserved praise of the conduct of Lieut. Howe, who was similarly situated. Capt. Thomas, with a portion of Battery K, the Artillery, set an example of bravery.

The reinforcements sent out under Col. Green, together with the killed and wounded, are expected momentarily. A heavy rain is now falling, which is beneficial to the poor wounded men in alleviating their sufferings and relieving their feverish limbs. Their arrival is anxiously looked for by their more fortunate comrades in camp. Every preparation is made for their proper reception. When the news of the massacre reached camp, the soldiers who had grown old and gray in the service wept like babies at the fate of their officers and comrades.

PORTLAND, March 14th, 1860.

To Mrs. Waterspury.—Dear Madam,—I desire to add my testimony to your already Celebrated Dinner Pills. During my whole life time, until about six years ago, I was severely afflicted with Indigection, Biliousness and all their attendant evils. I had tried many medicines, and got but temporary relief. At the time above mentioned, I was advised to try your Pil s; I did so for three months, according to directions: since that time I have had no occasion to take any medicine, and have enjoyed good health.

I am yours, &c.,

THOS. DALE.
