HARTLAND, N. B., AUGUST 25, 1930

THE HOUSING PROBLEM

Without increased housing facilities Hartland's growth is at a stand still. The town not only has accommodation for no more families but a number already here will have to move away if houses are not available before winter—or sooner than that. Among those who have spoken to the Observer of the predicament they find themselves in is a physician, a dentist, a minister and a garage manager. Workmen's houses are in great demand—an absolute necessity, while the coming autumn a score or more farmers, grown rich and tired of the farm, will take a well earned rest for the remainder of their days and seek a home in the small town that looks best to them. Hartland looks good—but there are not houses enough for all who come.

Any kind of a new house with a decent lot will cost between $3000 and $4000. At least 10 per cent must be realized on this to pay 6 per cent interest, insurance and up-keep. Therefore any kind of half-good self-contained should bring in an annual rental of $300 or $400 a year—$25 to $35 a month. This would be a prohibitive price, but it cannot be figured otherwise—not for a self-contained house on its own lot.

An alternative is the apartment house, after the style of city apartments. It is a fact that a six-apartment house can be built and rented before snow flies. Two ground floor apartments at $20 each, two second floor at $18, and two third floor at $14. The plan in mind has five rooms and bath to each apartment. As in the cities, applicants would require certain qualifications to secure rent. The scheme offers an opportunity for some one to make a fair investment and at the same time do something for the up-building of the town.

Small cottages, with a garden spot, can be built near the town and sold outright for a profitable price before winter.

Housing facilities in Hartland's most pressing need.

VOCATIONAL SCHOOL NOTES

Half a century ago the educational needs of our rural people were almost negligible. We were then in the pioneer stage. To-day education is a prime requisite for success in agriculture, and it is equally important that if the success is to be fully attained, the young women, the builders and makers of our rural homes, must also equip themselves with a thorough knowledge of matters pertaining to the home and home making.

To secure large returns it is necessary that we learn how to farm properly; to acquire the fuller life in the country we must know our duties towards our fellow men. The growing and husbanding of crops is important, but a broad culture for every man, woman, and child is more so if life and labor in rural communities is to be remunerative and otherwise attractive.

To bring about the betterment of rural conditions necessitates the preparation of leaders who must conditions as they actually exist; and who are better able to grasp the situation than the sons and daughters of the farm? These young men and young women, when given the advantage of an education, will accomplish this purpose. But here is our difficulty; our colleges and universities are closed to these people who have not had the required preparatory education. This forms a huge barrier to a great many of the youth of the country. Some other scheme of training is required.

It is here that Vocational Education steps in, and it is here that the Carleton County Vocational School, your school, wishes to take its part and to assist those between the ages of 14 and 25 who are sincere and earnest in their desire to learn. Courses, free to the residents of Carleton county, are offered in Agriculture and Farm Mechanics, Home Making and domestic Science, and in Typewriting and Stenography. Those who are really interested are urged to write for the 1930-1931 calendar, addressing R. W. Maxwell, Director, Woodstock, N. B.

Mr. Caldwell Corrects Report

T. W. Caldwell, M. P., the President of the United Farmers of New Brunswick, called on the Standard on Saturday with reference to the report, which appears in our issue of that day, of his remarks at the meeting of the Kings County Farmers on the previous day. He is reported as having said that "the wholesaler, the distributor and the retailer must go. There were too many toll gates from the farm to the consumer." What Mr. Caldwell did say was that while there were many lines of business in which the wholesaler, etc., were necessary, there were altogether too many profit-takers intervening between the farmer and the consumer to be necessary, with the result that the cost of food was made needlessly high. All these "toll gates" should go.

YOU can never afford to let your home deteriorate for lack of paint. Lately property values have risen so high that the cost of a few cans of paint is a trifling expense for the safeguarding of the home. With this knowledge there is a more complete understanding of paint economy and a belief that it pays to use dependable paints, even if they cost a little more per can than the ordinary kind.

B-H "English" 70% Pure White Lead (Guaranteed Genuine B.H.) 30% Pure White Zinc 100% Pure Paint is guaranteed—every can of it—over the signature of the maker. There is also printed on it the basic formula which ensures permanence and "covering capacity." In spite of the rise in cost of materials, Brandram's B.H. White Lead and other similar quality ingredients are used in the same liberal quantities as in the very earliest days of B-H manufacture. B-H "English" Paint will never be allowed to deviate from its original standard of quality no matter how conditions may influence other manufacturers. There's too much at stake in the wonderful B-H reputation to risk its prestige by even a slight departure from the famous formula which gives it such "body" brilliance, durability and all-round satisfaction.

PLAN TO BE PRESENT

BETSY'S STORY

tween door and panel to prevent it being shut in her face.

"I am not looking for a room, but, but—" she stammered as the unusualness of the situation presented itself. "One of your tenants seems to be in trouble. He's been here for a week and here he has failed. I—we can help."

Mrs. Slattery made unsympathetic interruption. "Oh, it's that singing man. Never pays his rent and he seems to live on air. He'll come round."

In a manner Mrs. Slattery advanced, brushed, Betsy brushed her aside and deliberately walked up the steps, intuition directing her to the proper room. There lay the man as she had seen him from above, head flat on the table, arms hanging limply at his side. With unconscious command she turned to Mrs. Slattery, who had followed in her wake.

"Help me lift him over to the bed," and hypocritically Mrs. Slattery obeyed, awkwardly assisting as they loosened his collar and undid his worn shoes. "Get some water," was the parting order, and Betsy flew out of the room, down the steps, out of the house into her own, and thence up the stairs to the room where mutely reposed the untouched food. Gathering the articles in her arms she rapidly retraced her steps, and as the young man came to consciousness he saw a not unbecoming girl standing on a chair holding a tiny pot above the gas jet. She smiled down at him a genuine, comforting smile.

"Hot milk in a minute. Toasted crackers and a mite of cheese. How does that sound?" Her voice sounded merrily in the room and the man answered the smile with a wan effort.

"It smells better," came the whisper from the bed.

And it tasted equally good as Betsy held his head and fed him the browned biscuit dipped in the warm milk. The man slept and Betsy tiptoed from the room. Mrs. Slattery mounted guard in the hall with a Dame Gundry vigilance.

"His room rent be behind." Evidently in Mrs. Slattery's makeup there was no trace of that impelling force which had governed Betsy's spontaneous act of loving kindness. She looked into her meager purse, wearing out at the corners.

"Will a dollar on account be satisfactory?" she asked. The bill was tendered and accepted in silence and Betsy returned to her room, supperless and happy. As she crept into bed she shifted the alarm clock. It registered awakening at half past five. The hour thus gained next morning was devoted to assisting her newly acquired ward. With a promise to the man who lay weak and inert to stop in on her way home from work in the evening, she turned to go.

"Why are you so good to me?" he questioned her.

"Why doubt the motive?" by interrogation she answered.

Preoccupied with her thoughts, Betsy failed to be annoyed as she was foisted about on street and car by throngs hastening to work. Morning duties were fulfilled in like subconscious fashion, for mind was helping the lad lying ill and helpless in the bed room. Noon was sounded by sirens over the westerling city as Betsy passed the music counter of Tilden's, Inc. on her way out of the store for luncheon. In raucous tones sang the song-booster through his brilliantly colored megaphone, which he turned alternately to right and left so that all might hear:

"When our Ship o' Dreams comes in, dear,

When its cargo comes to shore,

With gold so fine, it will all be thine,

You alone I adore."

Betsy smiled as she recalled the first occasion when she had heard the words and sacrificed the precious minutes of her luncheon period to hear the end of the lyric.

"When our vessel comes sailing back, dear,

Laden with wealth all for you,

Then we'll marry; no need to tarry,

When our Ship, our Ship o' Dreams comes true."

She caught up the lilting, catchy melody and the easy, rolling words, and ate her luncheon with the tune in her head. Anxious for six o'clock, the afternoon flew quickly by and closing time found her hurrying toward her boarding house with thousands of other souls, all crowded up in their own little worlds of personal interest. Mechanically she bought the evening paper and mechanically read the usual run of news, and equally mechanically turned toward the classified section in search for the always possible, but never probable, "better job." Her eye drifted to the adjoining column of "Per seals," attracted possibly by the words, "Ship o' Dreams." They seemed to pursue her this day. The man seated to her right hummed with heavy breath, "When our Ship o' Dreams comes sailing in, dear."

Betsy read:

Pains About the Heart

ANY derangement of the heart's action is alarming. Frequently pains about the heart are caused by the formation of gas arising from indigestion.

Relief from this condition is obtained by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Chronic indigestion results from sluggish liver action, constipation of the bowels and inactive kidneys.

Because Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills arouse these organs to activity they thoroughly cure indigestion and overcome the many annoying symptoms.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

"Royalties awaiting Leonard Sutcliffe. Information wanted as to present whereabouts of composer of 'Ship o' Dreams.' Phone Popular Music Co."

Betsy gasped. Could it really be so wonderfully romantic? It was more than food she brought him.

"Are you Leonard Sutcliffe?" she asked as she entered the room and smiled to see him seated in the chair.

He nodded with surprise and looked at the newspaper she laid in his lap.

"Then your Ship o' Dreams has come to port, Captain Singing-Man," Betsy announced and picked out the steeper of the milk bottle with the tip of a fork.

A wonderful light danced in his eyes. "Good Samaritan, it's our Ship o' Dreams, isn't it?"

And over the toasted crackers Betsy nodded assent.

YOUNG WOMEN AVOID PAIN

This One Tells How She Was Benefited by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Regina, Sask.—"For two years I suffered from periodic pains and nausea so I was unable to get around. My mother had me take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I am much better and able to go about all the time, which I could not do before. I recommend Vegetable Compound to my friends if I know they suffer the same way, and you may publish my letter if it will help any one, as I hope it will."—Miss E. G. BLACKWELL, 2078 Osler Place, Regina, Sask.

If every girl who suffers as Miss Blackwell did, or from irregularities, painful periods, backache, sleeplessness, dragging down pains, inflammation or ulceration would only give this famous root and herb remedy a trial they would soon find relief from such suffering.

It hardly seems possible that there is a woman in this country who will continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial after all the evidence that is continually being published, proving beyond contradiction that this grand old medicine has relieved more suffering among women than any other medicine in the world.

For special advice women are asked to write the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of forty years experience is at your service.

SUICIDE IN VICTORIA COUNTY

Sad Ending to the Life of Benjamin Bull of Bairdville

The whole of Victoria county was shocked Friday to learn that Benjamin Bull of Bairdville had suffered death at his own hands at an early hour on Friday morning. Deceased had been suffering from illhealth for some months past and suffered greatly from despondency. While in this condition he ended his life by shooting himself with an old rifle. Mr. Bull was a young man some 46 years of age and this sad ending cast a gloom over all. He leaves to mourn, his wife and one daughter, and an aged mother. The sincere sympathy of all goes out to the stricken family.

Boswell's House on the Market

ACCORDING to the New York Times, the Mansion House of Auchinleck, of which James Boswell was once the Laird, in Ayrshire, Scotland, which he vainly sought to represent in Parliament, is on the market. Here is a chance for some fortunate Boswellian to settle himself congenially, if he be not afraid of income tax, and death duties, in Boswell's old home, which he so loved to be away from. It is Burns' country, too, and doubtless still rich in "whisky, soul of quips and cranks," whose unpermitted flow surely the devotees of Jenny Boswell, one of the most amiable of poets, may be forgiven for deploring. The new American Laird, rich in cash, can travel in them as Jenny in his youth described himself as travelling "in post-chaises, miles without number"; he can eat "of every good dish, especially apple pie"; he can drink "old hock," if any is left in the world. He should have "a very fine temper"; he "some what of a humorist."

"He was pleased to listen," writes Boswell of his Great Bear in 1763, "to a particular account I gave him of my family and its hereditary estate, as to the extent and population of which he asked questions and made calculations, recommending at the same time a liberal kindness to the tenant, as people over whom the proprietor was placed by Providence. He took delight in hearing my description of the romantic seat of my ancestry, 'I must be there, Sir,' said he, 'and we will live in the old castle; and if there is not room remaining there, we will build one.'"

Johnson went there, as we all know, and the place is described in the "Tour of the Hebrides." In his old age Mrs. Boswell asked him to come again. Poetic letters passed between them. Yet she cannot have forgotten that "his irregular hours and uncouth habits, such as turning the candles with their heads downward, when they did not burn bright enough, and letting the wax drop upon the carpet, could not but be disagreeable to a lady," and "I have seen many a bear led by a man, but I never before saw a man led by a bear."

Boswell loved to talk about the "woods and rocks," "the romantic groves of his ancestors. In the old days," the Laird of Auchinleck had an elegant house, in front of which he could ride ten miles upon his own territory, upon which he had upwards of six hundred people."

His own father, Lord Auchinleck, was a strong and disagreeable character, worthy of Stevenson. One loves to think of the cultivated old patrician, smiling, however, wronged at his own and his son's friends. "There's one hope for Jamie, mon. Jamie is a clean gyle (mad). Whose tail do you think he has pinned himself to now, mon? A dominie, mon, as said dominie; he's keeped a school and call'd it an academy." One respects unflinchingly all these ancient and beloved Boswellians and Johnsons.

They cannot be repeated too often, especially the old Laird's fine saying to Johnson, who had asked him to tell of what use Cromwell was: "God, Doctor, he gart (made) kings ken they had a lilt (joint) in their neck."

Some of us dote on Auchinleck because near it was the place of Miss Blair, that heiress whom Boswell's father wanted him to marry and to whom the volatile young man made love in person and by deputy. Boswell sighed and adored and quarrelled with his "dear infidel." He dressed in green and gold. He even played his part with "Spanish stateliness." He squeezed and kissed "her fine hand while she looked at me with those beautiful black eyes."

Does she have any particular liking for him? No. "I like many people as well as you. I like Jeany Maxwell better than you," says the frank lady, Sir Alexander Gilmour is the favorite. Boswell laughs off his disappointment and writes a letter:

She told me with a scornful look, I was as ugly as a lawyer; For she a better fish could hook. The rich and gallant knight, Sir Sawney.

Dear old Boswell, Boswell ever fresh and young! Most un-Scottish of Scotch gentlemen, one of the most mixed of men; unconventional conventionalist; a Tory prop of state and church, who loved to picnic on the coast of Bohemia; amoralist, scholar, buffoon; sentimentalist and cynic, generous and scold; affected and candid, vain and an analyzer of his own vanity; collector of celebrities, sycophant of genius! He wanted a high place at the bar and in politics, and he won immortality by his "quest for London" and his fragmentation of Johnson.

Most sociable of men, a good fellow, though not without traits of Rousseau. The Mansion House of Auchinleck ought to be a national monument, but money is scarce over on the other side.

Mrs. Crook.

Mrs. Will Crook, wife of the labor leader in the British House of Commons, is active in a propaganda for reducing the drudgery of housework. Apropos of this, she said recently: "In all the talk we hear about shorter hours of labor one might easily imagine that the world consisted of men only, or at least that women's hours are already so short that any relaxation for them was of no moment whatever. The facts are exactly the opposite. Not only does the number of women exceed that of men, but her hours are as indefinite as the number and character of her household duties. Tens of thousands of mothers have next to no leisure at all, and their work is exacting, worrying, trying, and exhausting."

Do not suffer from day with itching, burning, or protruding Piles. No matter how long they have been there, Dr. Chase's Ointment will relieve you. Get all dealers or Wilkinson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Sample free if you mention this paper and enclose 2c. stamp to pay postage.

TAKING PROPOSITION

Actor—What, back so soon? Didn't the play take?

Actress—Yes, the play took, the manager took the receipts, the theatre took the scenery, the landlord took the trunks and the author took a drink.

A Shudder.

She's able to see. But I always sigh. Whenever she speaks of "her and I."

Expert Advice.

"I paid $100 to a specialist just to have him tell me my heart isn't right," remarked the prosperous business man.

"Bank extravagance," responded his friend Titely; "I got the same information from a waiter and it didn't cost me a cent."

Home Sympathy.

"Does your husband tell you all about his business?"

"Yes," replied Mrs. Feathertop. "I'm a housewife of him when there are so many really interesting things to talk about."

Contrary Results.

"Did the doctor you went to after that accident in which you got so many bumps fix you up all right?"

"He did in a paradoxical way, for the more he reduced the swelling, the bigger grew his bill."

The Boon.

"I want a job where I can be my own boss," remarked the young man.

"You probably will be disappointed," answered Senator Sorghum. "No real boss ever succeeded in electing himself to any conspicuous distinction."

The Infallible One.

Great Editor—Yes, sir, we employ a man in our office just to get things into the paper that are absolutely correct.

"Have you ever tried to print any of his things?"—Judge.

At a Disadvantage.

"I fear that lady candidate is going to beat me."

"Why so?"

"She's giving reliable beauty hints to women voters. What chance have I got with my puffing talk on hog raising and wheat?"

Solved the Problem.

Maggins—I hear Hall's landlord raised his rent, but he got even.

Buggins—Let me in on it so I can do the same.

Maggins—Well, he rents from a widow and when the rent was raised he married the widow.

No Longer an Instructor.

"You haven't suggested a campaign of education recently."

"No," replied Senator Sorghum. "I don't dare. The folks out my way are getting to think they know more about politics than I do."

Punk Though Punctuated.

Would-be Contributor—I don't see why you reject my story. Isn't it punctuated properly?

Editor—Oh, yes, but as far as I can see there isn't any other point to it.

EVEN casual observers have commented this year on the great increase in the number of Gray-Dorts—an increase due solely to the heaping value represented by feature after feature unusual in a light car.
